THE INTERCOLONIAL. The discussion which took place at Ottawa a few days ago rather indicates that the opposition in the new parliament are quite as jealous as were their predecessors of the success which has attended the management of the Intercolonial under the Liberal regime.

The improvement which has taken place on the Intercolonial does not depend on its demonstration upon mere figures. Everyone who is cognizant of what is going on knows very well that the government road shows the results of the new management in every branch of the service.

The trains are better, the road is kept in finer order, there is more business being done, and there are evidences in all directions of a higher tone and superior methods in the conduct of the line. These facts are too obvious to be questioned.

We are not among those, however, who hold that a surplus is the only safe test of good or bad management. It is quite possible for circumstances to arise which would create a deficit, though the business of the road were never so well conducted nor so much genuine economy exercised.

We have in our mind two items of cost in the carrying on of the railway to which the public are thoroughly well-informed, and need not wait for official data. We refer to coal and wages.

$200,000 upon the income of the Intercolonial greater than in the fiscal year 1900. What means, has the Minister of Railways been able to adopt to meet this enormous increase? Candidly speaking, we know of none.

The rates could not be increased. An ordinary railway corporation can do many things to augment its income which a government railway cannot do.

ANOTHER MARE'S NEST. The Conservatives have stumbled on another mare's nest in their hysterical attempts to discover a real live scandal, similar to the numerous episodes which disgraced the late administrations at Ottawa.

Our esteemed morning contemporary, which voices in this district the bitterness of Conservative malice, attempts to mislead the public by the statement that Mr. Blair had placed a contract last fall for 125,000 tons of rails for the I. C. R.

The Conservatives have stumbled into another blunder, but this is becoming such a common thing that the public has almost given up laughing at their frequent mistakes.

BREATH OF CONSUMPTIVES. Many persons entertain the opinion that the breath of consumptives contains the germ of tuberculosis and is therefore infectious and dangerous.

The Conservatives have stumbled into another blunder, but this is becoming such a common thing that the public has almost given up laughing at their frequent mistakes.

It is further alleged that the price of steel rails has since declined. This may be so. It is not, however, clear that it is so. Be that as it may, the fact remains that no one can possibly foresee market fluctuations, and all contracts are subject to just such chances.

There is great danger of the bacilli being projected from the mouth in coughing. In the ordinary low cough and where the lips are kept tightly closed in the operation

THE DANGER, is not great, but in the explosive force of the cough with which the germs are thrown about in all directions to distances even exceeding 40 inches. In all these cases minute particles of the infectious sputum are ejected into the air and persons with pathological tendencies are liable to inhale the infected material.

TO Avoid this possibility the consumptive should be supplied with a cotton cloth, old napkin or a tissue paper handkerchief so that when coughing it may be held before the lips to arrest the infectious particles.

THOSE STEEL RAILS. The traditions of the Tory party include what they always speak of as "the steel rails scandal" during the regime of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, and old timers still cling to the notion that the alleged exposure of that transaction had much to do with the return of Sir John Macdonald to power.

THE PATIENCE OF JOB.

Job Bartlett was a good average of a country boy, strong, healthy, honest, direct and sober-minded. He lived about half a mile from Thorp's Siding.

Thorp's Siding was not a great railroad centre. It had only three houses and an engine house. Job Bartlett worked there for a country store. But it happened to be at a point on a busy single track railway where some of the freights had to make long waits when the passenger traffic was congested, or when there was a rearrangement of the schedule.

The name, Thorp's Siding, came from John Thorp, whose daughter, Nellie Thorp, was easily the belle of that modest and rather uninteresting section of country.

Job Bartlett liked to go down to Thorp's Siding and watch the trains, and every spare hour he could get away from the farm he was examining cars, engines and their machinery.

On this special morning Nellie Thorp had been up the road to take a message, and on her way home Joe Bartlett overtook her. They talked a while and finally Job, in a matter of fact way, said:

"Nellie, I want to tell you some news, but you must not mention it. I am going to marry you—not today, but rich, so some time in the future when I get rich."

"Job Bartlett!" she exclaimed with anger. "You are crazy. If I wanted to get married to do you think I'd marry a thing like you?"

"I don't think it," replied Job, with a grin. "I just know it. Only don't get tired waiting. The wedding will come off all right, after a while."

Those wedding clothes ready. It won't be long now."

And again she passed him with splendid disdain. Time went on, and in a few weeks there were great things in the newspapers. Job Bartlett had made one of the most useful railroad inventions of the times. Nellie heard the news, and there came a thrill which she could not exactly understand. Job kept on in his quiet way.

Several weeks later the newspapers contained a despatch that Job Bartlett's invention had been purchased for $100,000, of which $50,000 was cash. He had gone to the city to sell it. The news preceded him, and when he reached Thorp's Siding everybody who could was around to give him a welcome. As usual he was calm and undisturbed.

That night he called on Nellie Thorp and told her briefly about his success. "I know you would win," she said. "Something in me told me so."

"It is not that which I came to tell you," he said, "nor it is not about that young fellow who was down here to steal that patent. I am here for the other thing. You know what it is. Now, Nellie, will you?"

She hung her head a bit and whispered: "Yes?"

And then—well, there is nothing to love about a country boy when it comes to love like you?"

"I don't think it," replied Job, with a grin. "I just know it. Only don't get tired waiting. The wedding will come off all right, after a while."

They had reached the railroad, and with a look of the head and refusing to mend dress another word to the young man, she stretched quickly ahead, while he turned and went on down the track to the point where the freight was waiting for the passenger train to pass. He received a greeting from his friend, the engineer, and again began his examinations.

Something for MOTHERS.

EVERY CHILD born into the world with inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most anxious solicitude, not only because of its suffering but because of the dreadful fear that the disfigurement is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available.

THE RACE PROBLEM. Discussed at American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Philadelphia, April 13.—The annual convention of the American Academy of Political and Social Science came to an end to-day. Today's sessions were devoted to consideration of the race problems of the south and our newly acquired West Indian possessions.

President Geo. T. Winston, of the North Carolina College of Agriculture, and President W. E. Burghardt Du Bois, of the Atlanta University, discussed the Negro question from opposite points of view at the afternoon session. Tonight Senator Platt, of Connecticut, and Chas. M. Pepper spoke on the Cuban and Porto Rican phases of the race question.

Chas. Herbert, former secretary of Navy, and Provost Chas. C. Harrison, of the University of Pennsylvania, presided at the sessions. Col. Herbert condemned the fifteenth amendment as the 19th century mistake. He said it was wrong to give the Negro a vote immediately after emancipation because it resulted in a "solid South" without any stimulating political rivalry and developed a feeling of racial animosity in the new generations that never existed between ex-slaves and masters.

Dr. Winston spoke on "The Relations of the Whites to the Negro, and Dr. Du Bois' topic was "The Relation of the Negroes to the Whites."

Mrs. H. R. Emmerson. Dorchester, April 14.—(Special)—Mrs. Emily R. Emmerson, the wife of the Hon. H. R. Emmerson, died at her home here at 8 o'clock this morning from hemorrhage of the brain, after a brief illness. Some weeks ago, while visiting her brother-in-law, Judge Emmerson, in Sackville, she was suddenly taken ill, but recovered in the course of a few days.

On Tuesday evening last she seemed in fairly good health, when she was again suddenly taken ill. Mrs. Mitchell and Doherty have been in constant attendance and Dr. Holden, of St. John, was called in consultation, but nothing could be done and Mrs. Emmerson, save for two or three brief periods of consciousness in which she recognized her husband and children, lay in a comatose state until her death this morning.

Mrs. Emmerson was in her forty-seventh year. She was the only daughter of the late Chas. H. Record, of Moncton, the founder and owner of the Record foundry and machine shop, one of the largest industries of its kind in the maritime provinces. Her mother, Mrs. Record, who since the death of Mr. Record in 1899, has made her home with Mrs. Emmerson, and her only brother, Mr. Edward A. Record, of Boston, Mass., manager of the Vacuum Oil Company for the New England States, survive her. Mrs. Emmerson was educated at Madam Carritte's boarding school in St. John.

In 1878 she married Henry R. Emmerson, then a young lawyer practicing here. Her married life has been most happy and her home an ideal one in every way. During the past 10 years her husband has taken a prominent place in public affairs and his success is, no doubt, in a considerable degree due to her sympathy and help. Mrs. Emmerson was the mother of six children, five of whom survive her—Ethel R., Henry H., Emily, Herman, and Marion.

Mrs. Emmerson's death is sincerely regretted, not only by her immediate friends and relatives but by the town people generally. She was a woman with a fine appreciation of the feelings of others, and a strong human sympathy and has always tried to help those less favorably situated than herself. Her kind and cheerful ways have made her many friends. She was a frequent visitor in the home of the late Asa member of the Dorchester Baptist church who has taken a great interest in all matters connected with its welfare. Her willingness to help her fellow church members and the kind words she has always shown to the younger members and children have won her the love and respect of all her dear friends. The funeral will take place from the Bannockburn residence on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at 11 o'clock, standard time. The remains will be taken to Moncton by the C. P. R. and interred in the rural cemetery beside the remains of her father and eldest child. Services, conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas, pastor of the Dorchester Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hutchinson, of Moncton, will be held at home.
