Privy Council Decides for Saunby After an Eight Years' Legal Battle

Judgment Given Against the City of London on Appeal by Plaintiff in the Celebrated Dam Case---Corporation Stands to Lose Heavily.

The case of J. D. Saunby vs. the Water Commisisoners and the Corporation of the City of London, which has been in the courts for the past eight years, was finally disposed of this morning, when the Privy Council gave judgment against the city on the appeal carried there some months ago by the plaintiff.

The action was of the utmost importance to the corporation, as the right of the city to maintain the Springbank dam was involved, and by losing the sity the city will have to do four things.

1. It will have to provide relief for Saunby, the operation of whose mill has been interfered with by the dam at Springbank.

2. It will have to remunerate Mr. Saunby for loss sustained by him by reason of this interference with the mill.

3. It will have to pay the entire costs of the action, which will amount to several thousands of dollars, as the case has been in every court in the land.

4. In the event that the city should not care to provide relief for Saunby, either by the removal of the Springbank dam or otherwise, it may purchase the Saunby mill, which is situated at Blackfriars street. Arbitration would be resorted to.

In any event, the city stands to be out a large amount by reason of the body blow it received at the hands of the Privy Council.

The writ in the case was issued on Aug. 19, 1897, and since that time the action has been going from stage to stage. In the first and second courts, the plaintiff won, in the third the city and water commissioners succeeded, and in the fourth—the highest in the empire—the plaintiff scored.

In his statement of claim Mr. Saunby set up the contention that in 1879 and 1880 and from then on, the commissioners had obstructed the flow of the river at Springbank by erecting the dam and flash-boards, and prevented the water flowing away from his mill property, as it should have, and otherwise would have done, and that by reason of the dam and flashboards the water remained at a greater height and in greater quantities on the lands of the plaintiff. Mr. Saunby based his claim both as a riparian owner and as an owner of a mill privilege, and he alleged that by reason of the obstruction of the river he could not obtain the same benefit and advantage in the working of his mill, as he should have got, and was obliged to shut down at times, and to use steam power. He claimed damages for the wrongs complained of, and asked for an injunction restraining the city and commissioners from continuing or repeating any of the wrongful acts, and a mandamus directing the defendants to remove the dam and boards.

The defense of the city was mainly based on the fact that the erection of the dam was authorized by the London waterworks act of 1873 and that the plaintiff therefore had no claim, and that in any event the matter should have been settled by arbitration under the act. It was claimed further that the time limit for making any claim had expired. To aid in the trial of the case, two hydraulic engineers were appointed to make a report as to whether or not the presence of the waterworks dam had caused any loss to Mr. Saunby, and their report was to the effect that it had.

The case was first tried in April, 1902, before Chief Justice Falconbridge, who gave judgment on Aug. 28, declaring the plaintiff entitled to damages, and directing a reference to the master to ascertain and assess the amount. An injunction was also granted restraining the defendants from obstructing the flow of the river by the dam. Costs were assessed to the city.

The case was carried to the court of appeal, consisting of five judges, at Toronto, and on Sept. 14, 1903, a unanimous verdict was rendered by the five judges upholding the decision of Chief Justice Falconbridge and placing the costs on the city.

Next the Supreme Court at Ottawa was resorted to, and it was there the city scored the first time. The case was heard on April 27, 1904, and judgment was given dismissing the action with costs to the city. The Supreme Court stood three for reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal and Chief Justice Falconbridge, and two for upholding it.

Then Mr. Saunby took the case to the Privy Council in July, 1904, with the result that he was successful, winning it is supposed on every point.

A cablegram announcing the decision of the Privy Council was received this morning by Mr. John O. Dromgole, from his partner, Mr. C. H. Ivey, who is in London in connection with the case. Mr. Hellmuth, Toronto, also appeared with Mr. Ivey, and Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., represented the city.

In assessing the damages for Mr. Saunby, the local master will only consider the loss sustained during the six years preceding the issue of the writ and the years that have since elapsed, the statute of limitations preventing a claim for a greater period.

Mayor Campbell was informed of the outcome of the case and he admitted that it was a bad blow to the city. If the Privy Council upheld the judgment of the trial judge, it would mean a huge bill of costs for the city to pay, and also mean that the cheapest thing for the corporation to do would be to purchase the mill property.

MRS. KYLE FACES MURDER CHARGE

Killer of McGee To Be Tried at Fall Assizes.

PRISONER COLLAPSES IN COURT

Whitman Girl Gives Her Account of Dead Man's Behavior and Death.

Ingersoll, July 24.—Mrs. Robert Kyle must stand trial in the fall on the charge of murdering David McGee on Tuesday last. The preliminary hearing today before Magistrate John Morrison was attended by an exceptionally curious crowd, who in twos and threes very audibly discussed novel evidence as it was obtained, much to the discomfiture of the court. There was, strange to say, a morbidly inquisitive knot of women present, and from elevations throughout the densely-packed room feminine necks were craned from time to time to note the effect of the proceedings upon the prisoner.

Mrs. Kyle, attired in black, and wearing a heavy black veil, was, of course, the center of interest. Her attitude throughout was quite unemotional and undemonstrative, as if she were stimulated by a sense of rectitude. The more astonishing was her collapse when at the conclusion of testimony bail was denied her. She leaned forward, her head buried in her hands, and sobbed audibly while the room was tardily cleared. Her husband and two brothers were not slow to extend their unfeigned sympathy and loving attention, but she has much to clear herself of, and must bide the course of justice in Woodstock jail.

Pleads Not Guilty.

To the charge of mortally killing and murdering David McGee by shooting, prisoner's counsel pleaded not guilty. The most important depositions of the hearing were furnished by Miss Annie Whitman, living with the Kyles when the shooting occurred. Miss Whitman, with a flushed, nervous face and tired eyes, was a difficult witness. Her replies were always guarded, sometimes at variance with each other, but by dint of an hour's deliberate cross-examination from Crown Attorney F. R. Ball, K.C., and Mr. J. C. Hegler, appearing for the prisoner, the succeeding story was elicited:

Miss Whitman's Testimony.

Miss Whitman had known David McGee since last February, she had first met him in Berlin, although she relegated their friendship to odd times, and altogether saw little of him. Two weeks ago last Wednesday she met him by chance in Ingersoll on the street. Together they went walking, and in passing the Kyles, McGee took advantage of a long acquaintance to drop in and introduce Miss Whitman to them. Next morning Miss Whitman visited Mrs. Kyle and stayed for lunch, and on the succeeding day became a member of the household on the proposition by McGee. Mrs. Kyle was not well, and in return for Miss Whitman's household help was to board her gratis. McGee's suggestions to stay himself were promptly rebuffed. He managed, nevertheless, to come when he liked, and averaged two meals a day at the house for about a week. Witness was not aware of the terms of deceased's erratic boarding, but had not heard any objections from either Mr. or Mrs. Kyle, with whom he seemed on friendly terms.

Finally McGee outstayed his welcome, and was told by Mrs. Kyle not to come any more. On the Monday and Tuesday before the fatality he had been noisily drunk, and on Wednesday, when he was denied further hospitality, burst into expletives, in which he undertook to tear the roof off the house, smash Mrs. Kyle's face, burn both women like rats, and bring a gang up and kick everyone out. McGee had also laid hands upon Mrs. Kyle before he left the house. On Saturday morning he had been seen prowling about in the wake of a newsboy, and had tried the locked doors of the house. In the afternoon of the same day he came to the door, but was ordered away by Rogers, a boarder at the Kyles', who only in this circumstance appears in the story. Mrs. Kyle was out, and Miss Whitman was sick in bed. The day before Miss Whitman had met McGee downtown and told him not to come to the house, because he was not wanted. McGee expressed emphatic indifference of the world in general, and said he would come when he liked, and would half kill Bob Kyle when he saw him again. Bob had evidently added his objections to those of his wife.

Borrowed a Pistol.

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle were informed of these threats, and then it was that Mrs. Kyle said she must have a pistol. Her husband said he could not afford to buy, but would borrow one. On Monday the pistol was provided for the purpose of "scaring" Magee, in

DEATH OF MAJOR WALSH

Former Commissioner of the Yukon Passes Away at Brockville.

Ottawa, July 25.—Major Walsh, one time Canadian commission in the Yukon, died at Brockville at noon today.

FAVOR THE CENTRAL ROUTE

The Govt. Not Likely to Adopt the St. John Valley Road.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, July 25.—The New Brunswick delegation, some 20 strong, with Mr. Carvell, M. P., and Senator Thompson in charge, and accompanied by Hon. John Costigan and Mr. Turgeon, M. P., waited on the Government today and asked for the adoption of the St. John Valley Road for the national transcontinental railway. The Premier, with the Ministers of Railways and Finance, received the delegation and promised consideration. It is not likely, however, that the request of the delegation will be granted, as the chief engineer of the commission reported in favor of the central route, although this report has not yet been made public.

BORN ON THE SIDEWALK

Was This Baby, But, With Mother, Is Doing Famously.

At 10 o'clock Sunday evening a child was born on the sidewalk on York street, near the rear of the Tecumseh House. Medical assistance was summoned and the mother taken to her home. The child is none the worse for the strangeness of its birthplace. The child and its mother were removed to Victoria Hospital in the ambulance and are getting along famously. The child is a fine healthy boy.

HAVE YOU SEEN THIS BOY?

Ran Away From His Home in Stratford and May Be Here.

A clergyman from Stratford is in the city looking for a lad who ran away from his home. The description given is as follows: Sixteen years of age, 5 feet 5 inches in height, fair complexion, wore a brown tweed suit with knee pants and peak cap, black shoes with rubber heels. He carried a morroco handsatchel and rode a Cleveland bicycle of 1896 make, the left side of saddle being ripped. The police will thankfully receive any information concerning the boy.

YOKOHAMA CHEERS TAFT

U. S. War Secretary and Miss Alice Roosevelt Receive a Welcome.

Yokohama, July 25. — United States Secretary of War Taft and party received a demonstrative welcome to Japan, the principal buildings, streets and wharves in the city and the shipping in the harbor being gaily decorated. A noisy display of daylight fireworks along the streets fronting the harbor, announced the arrival of the steamship Manchuria at the quarantine grounds at 1 o'clock this morning and continued until the vessel was docked. The American minister and the attaches of the legation, together with representatives of the Japanese imperial household, foreign officers, war department and the Asiatic Society then boarded the Manchuria and extene formal greetings to Secretary Taft and Miss Roosevelt, who held an informal reception upon the deck. The secretary's party was then driven to the railroad station, through the crowded streets, where a special train was boarded, and departed for Tokio at 10 a.m., amid the cheers of the assembled multitude.

Put In for Safety.

Toronto, July 25.—Steamer Argyle, which took an excursion of 800 employes of the Gooderham & Wort's distillery to Olcott, N. Y., yesterday, and which had to put into Port Dalhousie last night for shelter on account of the storm on the lake, landed her passengers safely in Toronto this morning.

Three Days for Mike.

New York, July 25.—President Pulliam of the National League today announced that Donlin, center fielder of the New York baseball team, has been suspended for three days and fined $30 for using abusive language toward Umpire Klem on July 19 during the New York-Pittsburg series.

Montague Married.

London, July 25.—George Charles Montague, Conservative, member of Parliament for the southern division of Huntingdonshire, and Miss Alberta Sturges were married today at St. Paul's Church, Knights Bridge. Her stepfather, Francis H. Leggett, of New York, gave away the bride.

Refunded All But Fine.

Walkerville, Ont., July 25. — The customs department at Ottawa have refunded $380 of the $400 which Captain Rull, of Detroit, deposited when the tug Lorman was seized here some time ago for alleged smuggling of the telegraph cable designed to be used in connection with the floating poolroom, which had been fitted up on the steamer Badger.

New Palace Car.

Toronto, Ont., July 25. — A new car of the American Palace Car Company arrived here today and was inspected by officials of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways. The new car is a combination drawing-room, dining and sleeping car, and has been adopted by several of the American railway systems.

George Ham Very Ill.

Montreal, July 25.—George H. Ham, special representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was operated on at the Royal Victoria Hospital this morning for appendicitis. The operation was a success, although the surgeons expressed grave hopes beforehand as to whether Mr. Ham would pull through. A statement has been given out which says that Mr. Ham is doing as well as can be expected and that there are hopes that he will recover. Mrs. Ham, who has been ill for some time, is in a very low condition, and her death is looked for at any time.

WHAT RUSS PRINCESS SAW OF TERRROR AT ODESSA

Thrilling Account of Her Flight Through the Streets in Disguise to Find Her Child.

Vienna, July 25.—There are at present in Vienna many fugitive families from Odessa. One of these refugees, a woman belonging to the highest sphere of Russian society, Princess Gagarin-Sturdza, furnished a correspondent of the Wiener Premdenblatt (Vienna Foreigners' Paper) with the following detailed and graphic account of her experiences during the days of terror at Odessa:

What I shall tell you is awful. I have witnessed terrible things, scenes that I shall never forget as long as I live. I spent only eight days at Odessa, but I never imagined that there could be eight such awful days. Since my husband's death, my residence has been in Paris, but my little daughter had been at Odessa for some time, visiting our relatives. Her furlough had expired, and so I left Paris for Odessa about two weeks ago to bring her home. On my arrival I noticed that Odessa presented an entirely different picture than in former years. A certain nervousness and excitement among the populace struck me, and I was not quite able to account for it. Soon enough I was to be enlightened as to the sad causes of this phenomenon. One morning when I awoke, bullets were flying through the city, corpses lay in the streets—shootingeand plundering were the order of the day. The victory-flushed mob stormed through the town. In the streets there was a tumult, a noise, a crowding, and a regular storm and stress period, as if the end of the world was at hand. I will describe to you what happened Thursday and Friday. The preceding days have already been portrayed by other eye-witnesses.

After a Night of Rioting.

Thursday morning I looked out of the window of the house in which I was stopping—a palace near the bay, belonging to an aristocratic family. A bloodcurdling scene presented itself. In the street the dead bodies lay piled one on top of the other. On all sides spiral pillars of fire, were stretching skyward. The stench of smouldering embers and carrion assailed me. An ague-like feeling overcame me. My first thought was for the little princess; for my daughter had not yet left the house of the relatives with whom she had been sojourning.

"What has happened to the child?" was the thought that ran with stupefying force through my head. "Oh, had I only taken the little one to me as soon as I arrived at Odessa, how much anguish would have been saved me!" And I hurried to the telephone to connect with the villa where the princess lived. I turned the crank with frenzy, but there was no response. The telephone was disconnected. I turned the electric light switch, for daylight had not yet quite dawned—but there was no electric light.

In mad haste I dressed myself and prepared to put on my hat to rush from the house, away, to my child. This was my only thought. At this moment the door was thrown open and my maid entered and pleaded in a scarcely audible voice:

"Only not the hat, your highness. It will mark you for death."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Only poorly clad persons can walk the streets unmolested," replied the terrified maid. "Anybody who looks as if he had ever so little money is cut to pieces without remorse. No consideration is shown. The higher the personage, the better. Your highness has but one way. Here is my shawl. Wrap this about your head. And now my apron. And here, my old umbrella. Pray, believe me, your highness, this is your only hope for escape. Ladies wearing hats and fine dresses are being dragged from the streets and taken to horrible places. Poorly dressed women are spared. Nothing is done to them; for they are comrades, friends, aiders, and abettors—they are in the swim."

Without deliberating long I cast the shawl about my head and put on the apron which had seen many a year's wear and grown dirty in honorable service. And so I appeared on the street, not recognizable.

I stood amid the tumult of war. The mob had burst all bonds. Whoever wore a good dress, a whole suit, was shot down.

"Hurrah, hurrah! Long live liberty! Brothers, we are free!" were the wild shouts which resounded through the squares.

I hurried along, unconcerned about everything transpiring before my eyes. Now and then some brawny fellow obstructed my way and gazed at me with an impudent stare. But, taking me for a working woman, going along quietly and fearlessly, he turned away and looked for better prey, more profitable business.

Oh, the things that I witnessed! I cannot reproduce them in my imagination. The pathetic and the horrible succeeded each other so rapidly and my inward excitement which I was forced to conceal was so great that I forgot everything almost immediately.

The Murder of an Aristocrat.

One scene, however, stands out vividly before my eyes. An acquaintance of our family was tearing rapidly along the street in a carriage. Apparently he was heading for the railroad station. He looked along the street with an

DIED FOR HIS KIN

Young New Yorker Plays the Hero in a Tenement Fire.

New York, July 25.—Nathan Newman, 20 years old, lost his life today in a heroic effort to save his mother and sister, who with a score of others, were for a time in great peril from fire in a Brooklyn tenement house. Half a dozen families, all Hebrews, were sleeping in the double deck three story building when the fire started. When the alarm was given the fire had reached practically every floor, and the occupants were forced to flee for their lives. Many were too late to get down the stairways before their escape was cut off by flames. These sought escape by the narrow ladder which leads to the roof. Newman got through in safety, but was unable to find his mother and sister. He went back into the burning building, found the women and assisted them through the opening. When he tried to follow them, however, the ladder was surrounded by flames. He made a rush through the fire, but was overcome just as he reached the top and fell back into the flames to his death. All the other occupants of the house escaped. The loss on the building was $10,000.

COLOR LINE AT WINDSOR

Postoffice Clerks Refuse to Work With Negro Appointee.

Windsor, Ont., July 25. — Owing to a shortage of clerks in the postoffice here Hon. R. F. Sutherland was asked to secure the appointment of assistants. He had no trouble in finding anyone, but finally secured the appointment of a highly-educated young colored man. This first became known to the other clerks yesterday. The clerks at once objected to the new clerk, and one of the number threatened to resign if the colored man came in. The latter, however, on learning of the small salary attached, $1 50 per day, promptly declined to accept the position.

DOCTOR WAS WITH THE WHITECAPPERS

Saw That Thrashers Did Not Go Too Far—Case May Be Dropped.

Chatham, July 24.—As a result of Provincial Detective Murray's investigation into the Dulmage whitecap affair at Wheatley, the crown is unlikely to take any action unless Dulmage lays information. This is easy for him to do as the names of the perpetrators are known. It would seem that the whitecappers were accompanied by a physician, and that a constable was there to keep the peace. Dulmage's wife was present throughout the proceedings and acquiesced. When the victim had been thrashed and ducked enough the doctor so declared and he was let go.

Detective Murray is in Blenheim today looking into the Broadbent child-drowning case.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW'S WARD

Is the Wife of Czaikowski, in Jail on Criminal Charge.

Paris, July 25.—M. Czaikowski, who married Senator Chauncey M. Depew's ward, and who pretends to be the son of the Viceroy of Liban, is now seeking a pardon, having been sent to jail on a criminal charge. He went to a banker in the Rue Vivienne a short time ago, and, stating that he was shortly to come into a large heritage in Boston and that he was a relative of the Vanderbilts, asked for a loan on his prospects, which he stated amounted to $20,000,000. He asked for a loan of $2,750. The bankers, probably upset at the sight of these figures, took the stranger in and handed him what he wanted. They have not seen tis "relative of the Vanderbilts" since. They went to the courts, who have condemned the man to five years' imprisonment, a large fine and a restitution of the borrowed money.

OSCAR'S CABINET HAS RESIGNED

Swedish Parliament Outlines Conditions to Follow Norwegian Sccession.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 25. — The cabinet has resigned.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 25. — A special committee appointed by the Riksdag to deal with the crisis, which created the revolution in Norway, today delivered its report. The committee declares unanimously that the Government bill cannot be adopted in the form in which it was presented to the Riksdag, and proposes that the Riksdag shall signify its willingness to negotiate with Norway for a dissolution of the union, if the newly-elected Storthing requests a repeal of the act of union, and a dissolution of the union, or, if such request is received from Norway after the Norwegian people by a plebiscite have declared in favor of a dissolution of the union.

The committee recommends that in the event of a dissolution of the union, Sweden should insist on the following terms:

1. The establishment of a zone on each side of the frontier separating the kingdoms, within which the existing fortifications shall be razed and new fortifications may not be erected.

2. The right of pasturing reindeer belonging to Swedish Laplanders in North Norway.

3. That the transit trade through both countries shall be secured against unjustifiable obstruction.

4. That the status of Sweden in respect to foreign powers, as established by the treaty, shall be clearly defined, so that Sweden shall be completely freed from responsibility for Norway to other states. The committee also regards an arbitration convention between Sweden and Norway as desirable, although it does not consider it an essential condition for the dissolution of the union.

The committee further proposes to authorize the Government to raise a loan of $25,000,000, which can by a resolution of the Riksdag be made available for such readjustments and arrangements as may be necessitated by the new conditions.

Whatever may be demanded for the welfare and dignity of Sweden as a condition of the repeal of the act of union on the part of Sweden, and of the recognition of Norway, must be claimed and adhered to with rigor and determination.

Took Paris Green.

Montreal, Que., July 24. — After having a quarrel with one of her boarders last night, Mrs. Lemay, 76 Workman street, took a dose of paris green, and died a few minutes afterwards. A coroner's jury this morning, after hearing the evidence, reached a verdict of suicide.

Society Woman Suicides.

New York, July 25.—Within five minutes from the time that Charles Marshall, a Wall street broker, left his wife apparently sleeping soundly in bed today, the woman wrote her husband a note, telling him not to let the world blame him for what was going to happen, and shot herself. She was unconscious before Mr. Marshall could reach her bedside from another room, and she died in a short time.

Mrs. Marshall was formerly Miss Grace Starr and is highly connected in New York social circles. No cause for her act has been discovered. The tragedy occurred in the Raleigh, a fashionable family apartment hotel overlooking Central Park.

AMERICAN TOWNS MAY BE CANADA'S

Remarkable Discovery Made by Surveyors Along Vermont Border.

Newport, Vt., July 24.—The surveyors representing the United States and Canada have completed the inspection of the boundary line between the Dominion and the United States, at Richford and North Troy.

It is stated that they have made startling discoveries. These are that Richford, East Richford, and Stevens Mills, which are a short distance within what has been considered the Vermont side of the border, rightfully belong to Canada, and steps will probably be taken to establish the boundaries so as to give Canada either a recompence or the territory stated.

The strip of land involved is several miles in length, and from one-half to a mile in width. It has a population of about 4,500.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

Widow Wooed, Won and Wedded While Husband Lay Dead.

Buffalo, July 25.—The police report that no serious disorder marred the wedding celebration last night and this morning of Frank Czymki and Mrs. Tomczak, although the latter was wooed, won and wedded while her first husband's funeral was in progress.

John Tomczak, 28 years old, died last Wednesday. Mrs. Tomczak was buxom, red-cheeked and 26 years old. Frank Czymki, a neighbor, is 28 years old. Just before the funeral Frank called on Mrs. Tomczak.

"I hear you're a widow now," said Czymki.

"Yes, I'm a widow," she sighed.

"A nice-looking woman like you should not be long without a husband," Czymki observed. Let us get married?"

"All right," said she in a flash, and yesterday the widow became a bride. She did not have time to don widow's weeds.

Czymki was one of the chief mourners at the funeral and a hearty participant in the jollities of the wedding.

LINSEED CORNERED BY ROCKEFELLER

Standard Oil King Controls the Market—Independent Mills Forced to Shut Down.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 25. — John D. Rockefeller, through the American Linseed Oil Company, has cornered the flaxseed market, and has compelled the three big independent mills here to close. The price of linseed oil will be advanced 40 cents a gallon.

This advance will seriously affect many industries, particularly those of oilcloth, linoleum, paints, oils, etc., and will undoubtedly cause large numbers of workmen to be thrown out of employment.

It is estimated that in getting control of the linseed oil industry, Mr. Rockefeller will make a profit of about $20,000,000 on an investment of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000.

By buying up the supply of flaxseed the oil king has increased the price of the seed to such an extent that the independent mills cannot crush it at a profit. The normal rate is $1 24 a bushel for the seed, but the present rate is $1 48 a bushel.

The new crop of flaxseed will not be harvested until September and October, and until then the Rockefeller interests will be absolutely in control of this oil. The failure of the crop in India and a shortage in the Argentine Republic aided in the controlling of the output.

Buffalo is the largest linseed crushing center in the country, having half a dozen mills, employing 500 men. The Mann Bros., the Haugenstein and the Spencer Kellogg, all independent mills, are closed, and the American Linseed Company's mill is the only one running.

Spencer Kellogg, owner of one of the largest independent mills, said, in discussing the matter today:

"The reason for the shutdown is that the price of flaxseed is too high. The cause of the increase? That may be inferred from the fact that the American Linseed Oil Company, backed by John D. Rockefller, has obtained control."

It is estimated that manufactories representing an invested capital of $500,000,000 and their workmen are placed within the power of the Standard Oil by the control of the linseed oil industry by Mr. Rockefeller.

MITCHELL PREPARES HIS MEN FOR NEW BATTLE WITH TRUST

Latter Said To Be Storing Away Vast Quantities of Coal.

Philadelphia, July 25.—Evidence accumulates that the anthracite operators intend to give battle to the miners, as represented by the United Mine Workers of America, at the expiration of the present three-year working agreement next April.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of coal are being stored with a view of resisting to the limit the demands of the union, which the miners are morally certain to make after the meeting of the tri-district convention in Shamokin this fall.

John Mitchell, in a speech a few days ago, warned the miners that the companies are preparing to resist demands.

Even now preparations for a struggle are being made. Hundreds of acres of space are being covered with coal, not only the smaller steam sizes, but the domestic grades as well.

The new yard of the Reading Company, at Abrams, above Norristown, which has a capacity of 500,000 tons, is daily increasing its stock, and before fall will be filled to its capacity. The storage yards at Mahanoy City are being crowded to such an extent that the overflow is being dumped on the bare ground at the end of the long row of bins.

The Pennsylvania interests are equally active. Not only is their McClellan yard, below Harrisburg, the site of a mountain of coal, but stores are being amassed at the collieries themselves. At the Pennsylvania colliery, near Mount Carmel, an operation owned by the Susquehanna Coal Company, a Pennsylvania concern, there are two immense stock piles, which at present contain about 20,000 tons, with more being added daily. Never before in the history of this mine has coal been allowed to accumulate in such quantities.

At the Cameron colliery, another Pennsylvania operation, near Shamokin, small coal is being rushed to the culm banks, whence it can easily be loaded into cars in time of stress.

At Weatherly, the Lehigh is constructing one of the largest storage yards in America.

In full possession of all these facts presaging the intent of the operators to declare war next April, John Mitchel has gone to the anthracite regions to marshal the coal diggers into cohorts ready to do battle for the cause of unionism. After their magnificent struggle in 1902, in which they won substatial victory, the miners became lax in their allegiance to the union. Not that they were traitors to the cause, but with three years of peace being assured they became careless and dropped out of the ranks merely through failure to attend meetings and the non-payment of dues.

Under the persuasive eloquence of the young labor chieftain, all this has been changed. The laggards are coming back into the fold by thousands, and everywhere there exists the determination to be prepared for a fight.

By the time Mitchell's speaking tour of the region ends—early in the fall—it is expected that the organization will comprise all but an inconsiderable fraction of the hard coal workers.

MINE DISASTER AT BANFF, N. W. T. ONE REPORT SAYS ALL KILLED

Dynamite Explosion Wrecks the Bank Head Pit in Rockies.

Banff, N. W. T., July 25.—While miners were at work in the Bank Head mine, three miles east of here, yesterday afternoon a fearful explosion of dynamite occurred, which wrought awful havoc to the mine and resulted in the death of Thomas Smiley, of Ireland; David Thomas, of Wales, and John Williams, of Wales, and injury to many others. The three men killed were literally blown to pieces. The cause of the explosion is not yet known, and at this writing no particulars of the tragedy can be ascertained. There is an uncertainty as to the number injured. It is feared, however, that it will be larger as it is known that quite a large force of men were at work in the mine. One report says that all who were at work in the mine were killed, but this cannot be confirmed. Of those known to be dead David Thomas was the only one married, and he leaves a widow and family of six children.

WHAT MAKES JOHNNY HUSTLE.

Every morning first of all
Mother comes and gives her call: —
"John-ne-e-e-e!"
Then I know that I can snore
For a half an hour more,
Till brother comes to bang my door.

For fifteen minutes more I lie,
Waiting for my sister's cry: —
"John-ne-e-e-e!"
Then dad barks out, but I keep still,
And on and on I snooze until
I can hear the coffee mill.

Oh, how good that coffee smells!
Talk about your breakfast bells,
For Johnny!
Quick I slip my panties on,
You can always look for John
'Fore that Chase & Sanborn's gone.

Guess I'm lazy! Pa says so.
Ma says, "So tormented slow
Is Johnny!"
But 'tis Johnny-on-the-spot,
Johnny for the coffee pot,
When that CHASE & SANBORN'S hot.

RICHARDSON WAS HEAVIEST WINNER

Crowe was 6th, winning £5, in the Association cup match, a competition with service rifle, 7 shots at 200 and 600-yard ranges. The other Canadians finished as follows: Mitchell, 16th, £2; Simpson, 24th, £3; Crowe, 41st, £2; Russell, 44th, £2; Phillips, 47th, £2; Bayles 50th, £2; Eastcott 54th, £2; Moore, 74th, £2; Pugh, 81st, £2.

"BOOMER" WEEKES MAY SEEK FIGHTING HONORS

San Francisco, July 24.—Another big man with championship fighting aspirations has come to light. His name is "Boomer" Weeks, and he is a fireman at Spokane, Wash.

Weeks' measurements are admirably balanced, there being no perceptible difference in right and left arm. On the other hand, Jefferies' right forearm is one inch larger than his left.

The all-round superiority of the "Boomer" over the former heavyweight champion of the world is amazing, as Jefferies has been described throughout the world as a man of perfect fighting build. Lacking experience Weeks is no more handicapped than was the California boilermaker when he first entered the fighting game some eight years ago.

"I am willing to try out with a good big man," said Weeks. "I am not green at the business by a long shot. I think I have got a good chance to be a top-notcher. I enjoy boxing—in fact, I have been boxing for the past six years or so, and the game is not a new one to me."

If Weeks can get a release from the fire-fighting service—which is very doubtful—he will be taken on the road to meet all-comers. They think so well of Weeks in Spokane that he would have no trouble at all to get all kinds of backing against either Gus Ruhlin or Marvin Hart.

Some French engineers are said to have applied to the Russian Government for a franchise to build a bridge across Bering Strait.

20-INNINGS RECORD STOOD FOR 13 YEARS

Although the longest baseball game on record, 25 innings, was played in North Dakota, the record for the major league is 20 innings, and it has stood for thirteen years, the duel between Waddell and Young at Boston on July 4 merely equaling the mark. The record game was played at Cincinnati on June 30, 1892, and lasted two hours and 20 minutes, and was called on account of darkness, with the score 7 to 7.

Chicago took a long lead of three runs in the second inning, but Cincinnati forged to the front in the same round by piling up four counts. Chicago regained the advantage in the third with three more tallies, and in that chapter Cincinnati tied with two. The fourth was fruitless to the lakeside lads, Cincinnati going in front again with one run to the good. Chicago balanced the entries in the fifth, and thenceforth there was nothing doing in the chalking line, 30 goose eggs being strung across the blackboard.

The infields had to hustle, as 50 of the 120 outs were made at first base and the teams carded a total of 63 assists. Only seven men struck out, six others either fouling to the catchers or being retired on plays to the plate. The second basemen divided the outs, the shortstops fourteen, twenty-four retirements, therefore, being recorded for the far turn, including flies. Twenty-six hits were made, all singles —twelve by Cincinnati, fourteen by Chicago. Each pitcher let three men walk. Only four bases were stolen, and there wasn't a double play. Twenty-eight chances went to the outfield, and all save two were accepted, the Cincinnati rangers disposing of twelve men, the Chicagoans of fourteen, with an error for the gardeners on each side. Mullane, twirling for Cincinnati, struck out five men; Gumbert, pitching for Chicago, two.

BASEBALL.

WOODSTOCK AGAIN BEATEN.

Woodstock has been beaten twice in as many days, and the race in the Western Ontario Baseball League is becoming more interesting. Yesterday Miller, of Ingersoll, was right again, and his work was good enough to beat the Woodstock willow wielders. Woodstock fielded fast and no errors were chalked up against them. Ingersoll's fielding was also magnificent. The score:

			R.	H.	E.

SARNIA'S FAST TEAM.

Sarnia has a fast ball team this year, and it is winning right along. Yesterday it defeated the Detroit Junior Tigers, a fast amateur organization, by 5 to 1. Sarnia scored 5 runs in the first inning, and was never headed.

WITH RUSS PRISONERS LIAO YANG TO DALNY

Correspondent Tells Story of Muscovite Shame Before Yellow Captors—Japs in New Light.

When I got up at half-past seven a.m. on Wednesday, March 15, I found that everybody had already breakfasted and gone out to work, that the kitchen fire was cold and had to be lighted again in order to prepare my breakfast, that the commandant of the gendarmerie had already been twice to see me. When I found this out and thought of the old Liao-Yang which regarded ten o'clock in the morning as scandalously early, I began to realize that there is something, after all, in that saying about the early bird.

The commandant was very polite. He said that it would have been a dreadful thing if an English or American correspondent on the Russian side had fallen by a Japanese bullet, that it was an honor for me to have been captured as I was, and that it was an honor for him to be my host. But on learning that I had been in Liao-Yang before and knew the lay of the ground perfectly his jaw fell, and immediately after my guards began watching me, evidently under the impression that I was a kind of Irish leprecaun that was liable to vanish into thin air the instant you took your eyes off it. I was also refused permission to visit the city, to take a walk, to send a note to my old friend, Dr. Westwater, of Liao-Yang, or to do anything save remain all day in my room. I was treated, however, with every courtesy, and supplied with enough food and drink for two men; but, needless to say, I am not, therefore, in a position to assert that the Japanese are absurdly lenient with their prisoners. In fact, I could not help thinking all this time that the unfortunate Chinese interpreters of the Russians who remained behind in Mukden and the luckless Yamen officials who were suspected of Russian proclivities were at that very moment having very different treatment meted out to them. I am told, indeed, that their heads were knocked off with the greatest expedition, and if this is true it will be a blot on the Japanese escutcheon. I knew very well some of the younger men in the Yamen and always considered them very kind and harmless. But they spoke Russian fluently, and in Japanese eyes that is an unpardonable sin.

Paternal Instinct.

Despite his suspicious nature the commandant of Liao-Yang pleased me by the paternal interest he seemed to take in his involuntary charges. He consulted with me anxiously as to what the Russians got to eat at home, and seemed surprised when I told him that even in their worst times in Manchuria they had got plenty of black bread, thick soup, meat, kasha (porridge) and tea. He had evidently imagined that in their own country they lived exclusively on dog biscuits. He was a minute, conscientious, scrupulous man, however, and begged anxiously to know if four pieces of a hard cabin biscuit kind of production per meal were not sufficient for each man. He was visibly disappointed and distressed when I told him that I hardly thought this sufficient. The Russian soldiers temselves were decidedly of the opinion that it was insufficient, and in conversation with me they contrasted the warm zeemlyankee, abundant borsh and huge chunks of fresh black bread supplied to the Japanese prisoners by the Russians with the treatment meted out to them by the Japs.

In the afternoon I was brought to the station, and on the way I saw a sight that moved me more than anything I had seen during the war. In front of the Liao-Yang Railway depot there is a large fenced in space, and this space I found to be crammed with Russian prisoners, who had passed the whole night there on the bare ground without any kind of covering. They were cold, hungry, dirty and miserable to such an extent that their worst enemy might weep for pity; and, all around, Japanese and Chinese pressed against the railings and grinned at the unhappy captives inside.

There were eight tents for officers. The unfortunate "Russkies" were exactly on the level of a collection of gorillas that had been captured, and this resemblance was increased by the way the people stared at them. Poor devils, they had hardly room to turn! They had not washed for weeks, and no soap or water was now given them!

Like Caged Gorillas.

No wonder that the neat little Japanese soldiers, spruce as if they had just stepped out of a bandbox, with shining cheeks and glistening teeth, sometimes held their noses, and that even the dirtiest Chinese coolies seemed to regard this nuisance as something too great to be borne in silence. It was a fall indeed, a fall so tremendous that words fail to convey a just idea of it. To be captured and driven into a cage by the yellow soldiers whom at the beginning of the war they had only one designation for—makaka (monkeys)—was a come-down in the world for the haughty Muscovite. To be driven into an inclosure like cattle and allowed to stand or lie there for thirty hours, including a night when a considerate man would scarcely like to let his horse or his dog sleep out in the open, was bad enough, but what made it worse was the fact that in the neat houses which the Russians had built years ago, all around the station, the Japanese were now very snug and comfortable.

Some of the Russians tried to converse with the Chinese whom they had formerly known in Liao-Yang, while others accepted cigarettes which good-natured Japanese soldiers passed to them through the bars of the mence, the same as you would pass biscuits to a caged monkey at the Zoo. It was pathetic to watch the vain attempts of one or two to light a fire with a handful of twigs and dried grass they had colelcted, in order to boil water in the few pails. Japanese soldiers occasionally imitated them, out of a spirit of fun, but the Russians did not take this unconscious irreverence in bad part. They only smiled and taught the Japs how to cross themselves properly.

I cannot say, however, that the Russians were dignified in their misfortune. They "bummed" around the limits of their cage, fraternizing quite affably with a few Japanese who allowed them to become familiar, and begged piteously for food, for tobacco, for anything their keepers would condescend to give them. It cannot be said that any of them stood gloomily apart with folded arms, like Napoleon in St. Helena, or like a Byronic hero in the hands of his enemies. On one occasion, however, when a Russian private began to tell me how his party had been surrounded, a comrade interrupted him with the angry exclamation, "What's the use of talking about these things now? Can't you wait till we get back to Russia?"

Late in the afternoon the Russians were led from their cage to the railway station, where they were driven like cattle into open trucks. This long line of tall, patriarchal-looking, bearded men marched between two grinning rows of Chinamen and Japanese. As they did not march fast enough to please their masters, the latter made them run and then laughed silently, the Asiatic laugh, at the bashleeks and the papakhas bobbing up and down as the big, docile men raced obediently toward the railway.

Fifty Men to a Car.

There were about twenty trucks in the train and fifty men in each truck. For every fifty prisoners there was one armed Japanese, who sat stiff and upright on the side of the vehicle, his black eyes shining brightly above the high fur-lined collar of his pepper-colored overcoat, his rifle between his knees, the sinking sun glinting red on his broad naked bayonet, whose point and edge was as sharp as a razor. The Russians were all littered in the bottom of the trucks, only their heads and shoulders projecting. Personally, I felt like one of the captives in a Roman triumph.

After having passed one night without covering in an open field, the Russians were now to pass the next night without covering in open trucks. The Japanese evidently meant to test the boasted ability of the Muscovite to withstand cold. There was a moderate sized crowd of Japanese and Chinese at the station, but they did not cheer or groan or make any demonstration whatsoever. The Japanese never cheers, even when the Tenno Haiku (whom foreigners call the Mikado), passes by, and now he looked on with a grave smile at the loud, undignified uproar of the Russians, among whom tins of hard biscuits were being divided. The Japanese guard in each truck had the task of distribution, and he threw the stuff among the prisoners as a man throws bread to a pack of dogs. Like dogs, too the Rusians scrambled for the food with shouts of Vozmee Syuda! and Dai Khleb! that were not unlike barks. The decorous station precincts echoed to the roar of one big fellow who had got nothing, but the sentinel's only reply was to gravely raise the empty tin to show that there was no more. Some wounded Japanese officers in white kimonos, with a red cross on the shoulder, stood on the platform and looked on in contempt; but for my own part I am not so sure that I would not be quite as undignified as the poor Russkies if I had been in their position.

To fully appreciate the significance of this historical scene, one should have lived a long time in the Far East and fully entered into the spirit with which the white settlers there regard the yellow inhabitants. When, five years ago, I first traveled from Tien-Tsin to Pekin, a Chinese attendant on the train ceremoniously ushered me into a car in which only white men were allowed to travel. Mandarins, coolies, Chinese princes and Chinese prostitutes were all piled together in dirty third-class carriages. They were all yellow—why make any distinctions between them? No Chinese guest ever desecrated the sacred precincts of the Shanghai Club, and no European, unless he were mad or drunk, would ever dream of asking a Chinese gentleman to dinner. The Japanese were tarred with the same brush, and the language anent "yellow monkeys" in which Port Arthur used to indulge was tame in comparison with what one used to hear in the barrooms of the Yokohama hotels, even after the outbreak of the present war.

I could hardly, therefore, realize that I was awake when I found myself at Liao-Yang station, surrounded by examples of Russian architecture, in a train drawn by an American engine, but, nevertheless, one of a crowd of broken white men whom the despised little slant-eye had compelled, by the keen edge of the bayonet point, to travel in trucks which might have been useful for carrying coal or ballast, but in which, at that season of the year, no cattle dealer would care to send cattle any considerable distance. Although the events of a year might have prepared my mind for it, this turning of the tables was so sudden and so complete that I looked on, dazed and thunderstruck. It was like going into a city in the Southern States and finding all the white men acting as street sweepers coachmen, shoeblacks and in other menial capacities, while the negroes lolled back in the best places on the trains and in the hotels. I do not mean of course, to compare the Japanese to the negroes. I only wish to give the reader an accurate idea of the impression made on the mind of one who has lived half his life among the conquering whites of Asia. Nor do I wish to accuse the Japanese of having deliberately selected open trucks for the Russians in order that all Liao-Yang and all the country between Liao-Yang and Dalney should see their shame, for perhaps they had not sufficient supply of closed carriages; but a more efficient way of destroying the prestige of the white race and dragging the renown of Russia in the dust could hardly be conceived.

Turned and Rent Thee.

The bell announcing the forthcoming departure of the train now rang, and this coolie perevodcheek made himself officious by driving the soldiers into the trucks with his cane, at the same time airing his knowledge of Russian expletives. Some poor devils, suffering, perhaps, from bowel trouble brought on by sleeping on the bare ground and in open rucks, were hardly in a position to re-enter their trucks just then, but the Russian-speaking Chinaman had no mercy on them, and the Chinese and Japanese, who had been watching their performances with the critical air of vulgar-minded children watching strange brutes, were delighted at the uncouth stampede of these gray-bearded animals, adjusting their tattered clothing as they ran. The men who had been making tea were driven off mercilessly just before the water had reached the boil. O Russky! Russky! Thy ill-trained perevodcheek has surely turned and rent thee!

It was an uninterupted yellow grin all the way to Dalny. I have never before had such an opportunity of observing the mirthless Asiatic smile. It was a kind of noiseless laugh and conveyed not only an appreciation of humor, but amazement, keen satisfaction and scorn sharp enough to pierce the hide of a rhinoceros. It was like the smile you might see on the faces of London street arabs gazing at the corpulent form of a pompous but unpopular police sergeant who had got beastly drunk and was being solemnly carried frog's march to the police station, only that the street arabs would dissipate a lot of their venom in jocular and abusive shouts, while the Chinese concentrated all theirs in that characteristic smile. There was no tribute to bravery, no pity for suffering, in that cruel grin. The Chinese can see nothing honorable in captivity; most of them were probably convinced that the Japanese would hereafter make slaves, draft cattle, of these white skinned prizes of war. Meanwhile, it seemed impossible to sate their curiosity. They drank in the tremendous significance of the scene with their eyes as thirsty men drink water, and their curiosity seemed unappeasable. Many Chinese, who had probably supposed the Great White Czar to be God in heaven, were suddenly petrified when they saw us, and remained in that condition until the train had passed. Chinese boys, in padded winter dress, that gave them the appearance of corpulent little elephants, ran wildly across fields to see the show, meanwhile intimating by the shouts and gestures that they had fully grasped the enormous significance of this great haul. Parents, with a historical prescience that did them credit, brought out their little children to gaze on the trainload of fallen white men passing by.

Meanwhile, the Russians talked of their capture just as if they had been captured by the Germans or English or any other race of kindred. They failed to grasp the fact that the Germans and the English are their brethren, while the Japanese are as mysterious and incomprehensible as the inhabitants of Mars. They failed to see the fact, clear as the sun in the heavens, that history had opened a new account, that the universe had entered on an entirely new phase. They were as little alive to the tremendous nature of the occasion as was Columbus' cabin boy, when the new world was first sighted.

No such disaster has befallen the white race since the days of the Golden Horde. Adowa was nothing in comparison with it. No such disaster has befallen the Russians in the present war. There were not many Chinese to see the shame of Port Arthur, while Ta-Shih-Chiao and Liao-Yang were practically barren of captives. But the publicity of this dishonor may be gauged by the fact that for two months —according to the jubilant Japanese calculation—it will take a train like this one running daily to convey all the Russian captives through Manchuria to Dalny. By that time the Manchurian peasant may well be excused for believing that the entire white race is tilling the soil of Japan under the whip of the Japanese slave driver.

The shame was so flagrant, so glaring, that one felt reluctant to regard the shame of a man dragged naked to prison in broad daylight, through howling streets. One longed to shut his eyes. One wished for the darkness to come and hide the horror, for some natural catastrophe to take place and distract the universal attention. One wished to be small and beardless like a Japanese. One felt ashamed of being white, inasmuch as his white skin exposed him to some of the unspeakable reproach.

If were nothing if the disgrace had been fictitious, temporary, but it was real and eternal. Some sixteen months ago Gen. Wogack had told the statesmen of Pekin that if Japan dared to attack Russia she would be crushed like a fly on the wheel of a war chariot. During their sullen retirement from Liao-Tung and the Yalu the Russians had declared that they were only enticing the Japanese to their doom, and that very soon they would roll down like a tidal wave, not only on Port Arthur, but on Tokio. Yes, the Russians were now rolling swiftly toward Port Arthur and Tokio, but not exactly in the manner of a tidal wave.

The man who had borne the white man's burden, to the easternmost limits of Asia, was now being borne along himself by some of the fluttered folk and wild whom he had come to civilize, while I, much to my astonishment, found myself guarded by Japanese soldiers and figuring prominently as one of the new-caught, sullen peoples.

Docile Captives.

We were an army of long-bearded patriarchs escorted by a handful of smiling, chubby-cheeked schoolboys. Truly, the Russians are a docile folk. If we had been all Anglo-Saxon captives I am inclined to think that we would have made short work of the handful of Japanese who were guarding us, and would have immediately afterwards made tracks westward for the Liao River, only a day's march distant. But what did these poor Russians know of the Liao River or of Chinese neutrality? As little as a sheep being led to the slaughter knows of the habeas corpus act.

We could see throughout this journey of what enormous value to Japan were her three lines of communication,—the line from the Yalu, which Kuroki had opened up and in which Kawamura had worthily trod; the line from Dalny, and the line from Yinkow. Over the two last lines came an enormous quantity of supplies, not only by train, but by road. This advantage alone would be almost enough to secure the victory for Japan.

It was war—or, at least, the memory of war and the preparations for war—all the way down to Dalny. Enormous stores of supplies at Liao-Yang, Ta-Shih-Chiao and elsewhere along the line. Japanese soldiers at every station; Japanese soldiers convoying transports, the Chinese seeming to exist only for the purpose of working on the railway or of driving wagons.

Utterly Humiliated.

At Kinchow the Russian barracks still stood, also some huge, damaged Russian guns. Many of the prisoners left the train, but not to weep over these reminders of their lost dominion; it was only to get, for the purpose of making tea, some of the hot water which a Chinese coolie was distributing. But the Chinese coolie ordered them away, with a threatening wave of a stick, and insisted on serving the Japanese first. The Japanese looked on, laughing in the good-natured, self-complacent way in which one laughs at an imbecile. They laughed, until their eyes looked like two oblique slits, at the big, uncouth, bearded babies waddling after them, meek, docile, dirty, utterly humiliated.

At some distance apart a well-groomed group of Japanese officers, station functionaries and doctors, had collected, and were smiling in an affable and patronizing way at the awful specimens of humanity that disfigured the landscape. Beside them orderlies held magnificent Russian horses, some of the wide-strewn spoils of Port Arthur.

Dalny! The name brought vividly to my mind the first visit which I paid to Liao-Tung in September, 1903, I recalled the profound impression of Russian might the place made on me then. I recalled my first sight of that fine European town, the easternmost limits of the empire of Europe; my first glimpse of the harbor, fit to shelter navies; of the enormous piers, built not for an age but for all time.

This monument of Russian might was now an eternal monument to Japanese bravery. This fine European town was Japanese. This frontier post of Europe had ceased to be European. This harbor sheltered only Japanese ships. These piers echoed only to the triumpaant clink of Japanese geta.

At Dairen I met three other correspondents who had been captured at other parts of the battlefield — M. Ludovic Naudeau, of the Journal, Paris; Mr. Richard Little, of the Chicago Daily News, and Baron Bilder von Kriegelstein, of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

Flags AND Bunting

Buy Them Now. Buy Them Right.

Everybody is going to decorate. We are selling Bunting this year at the price per piece we paid for it a year ago. Knew there would be a great demand and bought a large quantity—got it much lower in price. But you'll have to buy early—that's if you want to make sure of buying at the lowest price. We're afraid the supply will not hold out, for as we said—everybody is going to decorate.

The Cottage Will Look Gayer with a Flag or Two and a Piece of Bunting.

Show the visiting Old Boys how pretty a city they went away from. Show them the old home and the old streets in colors. Greet them with flying flags and festoons of bunting. You'll be surprised what even 25c will do in the way of decorating.

PICTURESQUE, BUT PUZZLES EUROPE

What Did Kaiser and Czar Discuss in Baltic?

IS IT GERMAN-RUSS ALLIANCE?

Diplomats Think Russia and Germany May Pool Interests to Strengthen Thrones.

Paris, July 24.—Who proposed the conference at sea between the Czar and the Kaiser, what was his motive and what is the significance of the secret sessions at which only the Russian and German rulers were present?

If official France could answer these questions, official France would sleep more soundly than it will tonight.

The most reasonable theory propounded here tonight is that the Kaiser wants something, that the Czar wants something, and that they propose to pool interests.

The Czar wants to retain his power, and what prestige he had left. The Kaiser wants to extend German influence in the far east.

How are they going to do it?

Europe would buy the answer.

Picturesque, But Puzzling.

St. Petersburg, July 24. — The picturesque meeting of the German and Russian emperors in the Finland Gulf, according to private sources, ended on board the German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, after which Emperor William's yacht steamed seaward, escorted for a short distance by the Russian imperial yacht Polar Star.

Then, imperial salutes were exchanged, and the Polar Star put about and returned to Peterhoff, where she arrived tonight.

A flotilla of torpedo boats, torpedo boat destroyers and small cruisers hovered about the imperial yacht from the time they met until they parted.

Beyond the additional fact that Emperor William paid a visit to the Polar Star last night, and that subsequently Emperor Nicholas went on board the Hohenzollern and remained until long after midnight in the German Emperor's cabin, no further details of the meeting are yet available.

The meeting of the two monarchs naturally created intense interest in diplomatic circles. In some quarters there is a disposition to attach the deepest political significance to it, and all sorts of theories are advanced. But they are largely speculation.

It is officially announced that the visit was only a "visit of courtesy," made by Emperor William to his brother-monarch before leaving the Gulf of Bothnia.

Under the circumstances, the diplomats cannot believe such a meeting was devoid of meaning to the world's political chessboard.

No matter what the ultimate result may be, all the diplomats agree its first effect would be for peace, as Emperor William is known to be strongly of the opinion that Emperor Nicholas should conclude peace and set his house in order.

In diplomatic quarters not exactly friendly to Germany, there is a disposition to suspect the German Emperor of trying to bring about an alliance between Germany and Russia, not only to block the attempt which it is believed to be making to isolate Germany through her understanding with France, and the latter, perhaps, through an understanding with Russia, but for the mutual protection of the monarchical system.

A German-Russ Alliance.

Emperor William is said to be fully alive to the fact that the revolution in Russia easily could be communicated to Germany, and it is reported he is anxious for that reason to see reform granted which will restore tranquility in the territory of his eastern neighbors.

An afternoon paper quotes a significant editorial of the Berliner-Post, hinting that France has become cold toward Russia; that the Russian-French alliance is on the eve of dissolution, and that there is an increasing feeling in Russia in favor of "concluding an alliance with Germany even at the cost of great sacrifices."

But the idea of a Russo-German alliance is distinctly rejected at the foreign office, where, however, it is admitted, the officials have no specific information on the subject of the emperors' meeting. Foreign Minister Lamsdorff not having been consulted and no representative of the foreign office having been present.

It is known that a representative of Chancellor Von Buelow was on board the Hohenzollern.

Count Lamsdorff's spokesman pointed out that the monarchs were personal friends, and probably discussed many subjects, but he expressed the opinion that the exchange of views would have a more important bearing on the internal affairs of the two empires than on their external relations.

"The Socialistic movement," the representative of Count Lamsdorff added, "has assumed big proportions in both countries, and is a matter for the serious attention of both monarchs."

In another quarter it was suggested that the German Emperor may have asked Emperor Nicholas to support a German prince for the throne of Norway, King Oscar having announced that he would not permit a member of the house of Bernadotte to assume the scepter, and the only other candidate being Prince Charles of Denmark, who is married to an English princess.

The marshal of the court, Count Benkendorff, has sent the following from the Island of Bjorkelao at 10 o'clock in the evening of July 13:

"The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern dropped anchor near the anchorage of the Russian imperial yacht Polar Star. Emperor William, accompanied by Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein and his suite, was rowed to the Polar Star.

"Emperor William was received at the head of the ladder by Emperor Nicholas and Grand Duke Michael, and cordial greetings were exchanged.

"The German Emperor reviewed the guard of honor and the yacht's crew, and two suites were presented, after which their majesties retired to the salon.

"At 1 p.m. Emperor Nicholas and Grand Duke Michael accompanied Emperor William to the Hohenzollern, where they remained until 1:30 in the morning."

AS FROM DEAD HUSBAND TURNS UP

A Detroit Man Wakes Up in Duluth After a Three Months' Wandering.

"Duluth, Minn., July 23. — Dear Susie, — I have waked up here. How did it happen? When did I leave? Are you well? I am waiting for an answer.—W. H. Butcher."

Like a message from the dead, the foregoing telegram came to Mrs. William H. Butcher at 9:30 o'clock last night, and solved the mystery which has surrounded the disappearance of Butcher over three months ago.

The uncertainty which has worked upon the woman during the months that she has wondered whether husband was dead or alive removed, Mrs. Butcher yielded to the impulses of nature, and as the tears fell in torrents, gave up to paroxysms of joy, which racked her body and left her prostrated.

Mrs. Butcher had almost given up all hope of ever hearing from her husband. For three months she has searched far and near for him, while the police of dozens of cities have been called upon to aid in the quest.

Butcher left his restaurant at 129 Michigan avenue, known as the Detroit lunch room, on the morning of April 17, last. He arose early, telling his wife that he had a hard day's work ahead and that he must hurry to the restaurant. That was the last Mrs. Butcher saw of her husband.

At the time of his disappearance Mr. Butcher had in his possession a large amount of money, variously estimated at from $300 to $600. He also had several diamonds upon his person.

Butcher's disappearance was as complete as though the earth had opened and swallowed him. He was completely lost to the sight of those who knew him well, and all efforts to find any traces of him ended in failure.

About three weeks ago Mrs. Butcher received information from Duluth, stating that a man who knew Butcher had seen him in that city. The report was investigated, but gave no result. Prior to that, it was thought that a man who was killed in Indiana was Butcher.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey, of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

The Game Commission.

Toronto, July 25. — The Ontario game commission held a session at the city hall this morning, at which it was expected a number of enthusiastic sportsmen would appear to suggest amendments to the game laws. Only one gentleman, A. C. Pratt, of Norfolk county, appeared. However, Mr. Pratt suggested that the use of automatic guns be declared illegal, and that the running of deer by dogs and the killing of deer in the water should be prohibited. Further meetings of the commission will be held at Windsor, Port Arthur, North Bay and Ottawa. The commissioners present this morning were H. S. Osler, Toronto, chairman, S. Buchanan, Windsor; J. E. Thompson, Arnprior, and W. H. Casement, Lakefield.

LONDON, TUESDAY, JULY 25.

The Lawn Bowlers.

Some four hundred lawn bowlers from the cities and towns of Western Ontario will be in London this week for the annual tournament. This has become a unique event in Canadian athletics. No other pastime has drawn together so many ardent and active votaries. The popularity of the game may be explained by the fact that it has no dead line. It has attractions for young and old, and is especially adapted to the middle-aged man who has lost the relish or capacity for severe physical exercise. Lawn bowling gives him recreation without undue exertion. It takes him into the open air where every person, in the summer months, should spend as much of his time as duty permits. It is likewise a game of skill, requiring a cool head and a steady hand. There is no unwholesome element of gambling or betting, no strain on the temper, or no incentive to trickery or boorish behavior. It is tranquil and unruffling and it is sport for sport's sake. It bears some resemblance to cricket and in late years has largely superseded the fine old English game in the affections of gentlemen of sportive inclinations who find themselves growing too large around the waist for the diversions of their teens and twenties.

This pure amateurism is a great gain when so many pastimes are being tainted by professionalism. The idea that the stake is everything is the root of the evil. The ethical value of sport, its influence upon the character in promoting habits of fair play, self-restraint and self-reliance are lost sight of. The abnormal athleticism, which has become a feature of student life in the great colleges and universities, presents also a grave problem. Sport is only helpful when it makes no break in a person's normal life. When it becomes his business or his chief interest it is mischievous. The Western Ontario Lawn Bowling Association is doing a good work for pure athletics and London is proud to extend its hospitality to such a body of men.

The Chinese Boycott.

The boycott of American goods by the Chinese merchant guilds is a serious thing for the United States cotton industry. American exports of cotton cloths to China reached their highest value in the fiscal year just closed, the figures for eleven months being over $24,000,000. This trade has been rapidly expanding, having quadrupled in the past ten years.

The American consul at Fuchan describes the meeting of the merchant guilds at Shanghai, at which the boycott movement was inaugurated. Resolutions were adopted declaring that no more American goods shall be ordered or consumed; native servants in the employ of Americans shall demand more wages; after a time, when it can be done without affecting the relations of the two Governments, Chinese are to be forbidden to employ Americans; finally, efforts are to be made to withdraw the privileges granted to Americans for railroad building.

The merchants present also signed an agreement by which they undertook to inspect American goods brought into China, to try to influence American writers and missionaries "in favor of justice," and to keep watch at the treaty ports for American vessels which seek to land American goods. The signers of the agreement are also to persuade Chinese laborers to demand higher pay for their services to Americans than they accept from others; to discover those "wicked native tradesmen who may in the future secretly deal in American goods"; they are, moreover, to "persuade people not to make acquaintance with or to marry their children to those dealers in American goods."

The immediate cause of the boycott was the harsh treatment of Chinese merchants, travelers and students, by the United States immigration authorities. The regulations have been relaxed in favor of this class, but there is the possibility that American goods will remain under the ban so long as the Chinese exclusion law is on the statute books of the United States. To be thus handicapped in the great market of China is a grave problem for American producers; but the alternative is the removal of the barriers against Chinese immigration, something which no political party in the United States could safely advocate.

Those Whitecaps.

The "whitecapping" of Thomas Dulmage, of Wheatley, was a very decorous affair. A physician was present to regulate the punishment. A constable was there to "keep the peace." The whitecappers were well-known citizens and made no effort to conceal their identity. The wife of Dulmage saw him flogged and ducked and made no protest. This is the report of the provincial detective who made an investigation. The castigation, he would have us believe, was administered more in sorrow than in anger. Those who thrust Dulmage into the well and wielded the strap were highly moral agents. It was like a father chastising his wayward son out of pure affection and vowing that it hurt him more than the boy.

This sounds very well, but before applauding the chivalry of the Wheatley whitecaps it may be asked whether their example is one to be encouraged. If a man's neighbors are to constitute themselves the judges of his manners and morals, and be allowed to carry out their own sentence on him, who will be safe? A vigilance committee springs from a rough sense of justice, but it is usually the product of a community on the frontiers of civilization. It is a symptom of lawlessness. In this law-abiding Province it has no excuse or justification. The Wheatley "vigilants" should be made to understand this.

Will those Chinese boycotters get after the Canadian poll tax?

The desire for a period of political peace is not confined to the Liberals of the city.

The Saunby mill case has been in the courts eight years. Talk about the mills of justice grinding slowly!

In all probability there will be no parliamentary contest in London for another four years. What a relief!

The Kaiser may not have the instincts of the statesman, but no one can deny him the instincts of the stageman.

A Vermont town is found to be on Canadian soil. But there is a lot of soil in Maine that should be on this side of the boundary line.

Mr. Hyman's election will not be protested. The only one who will protest against this is Mr. William Gray.

Several members of the British House of Commons made their first appearance of the session yesterday. Perhaps if tney were paid for their services their constituents would be more exacting.

A Vacation.

[Washington Star.]

They told him that he needed rest;
He hurried far away,
Where o'er the ocean's foamy crest
The wholesome breezes play.

He shot the chutes, he looped the loop;
He joined the mazy dance;
He saw the sideshow minstrel troupe,
And watched the ponies prance.

He ate hot sausages and things
He ne'er had seen before;
He won a cane by throwing rings
Until his arms were sore.

He walked the boardwalk all day long,
And heard the music play,
Where rival organs, big and strong,
In discord grind away.

He drank long mixtures filled with ice,
Ate lobsters and sardines;
He dallied with the cards and dice
And played the slot machines.

He tried to keep the pace in vain,
He did his level best.
He had to hurry home again,
Because he needed rest.

The Drunkard Bee.

[Kansas City Journal.]

"I have been hearing of the busy bee until I am tired of it," says Drake Watson. "A bee works during the summer and then rests all winter, like a plasterer. And a bee has bad habits. Go into a vineyard and you will find bee drunkards around bursted grapes. The drunkard bees sip the juice until they become full, and then fall to the ground and sleep off their debauch; a drunkard bee knows enough not to go home with a jag."

A Dishonest Stork.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

When the 6-year-old son was taken in to see the new baby he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, it hasn't any teeth! Oh, mamma, it hasn't any hair!"

Then clasping his hands in distress, he cried, "Somebody has cheated us! It's an old baby."

Still in Doubt.

[Chicago Record.]

"Ma, they ain't no doubt about it. Our William is either goin' to be a genius or a fool."

"Land sakes, pa, what makes you think so?"

"I just ketched him trying to drownd the cat in the well to see if the story was true about it havin' nine lives."

Summer Drownings.

[New York Sun.]

In nine out of every ten of the numerous cases of [illegible] den the summer season the fatal accident may be traced back either to ignorance of a few simple rules that should be known and observed by bathers, or else to a rash and reckless disregard of them when known. In the cases of the drowning of good swimmers, the fatal cramp is generally due to their having gone into the water too soon after eating or when overheated, and therefore with their strength, unconsciously to themselves, below its par value. Here are the cardinal rules for swimmers: Never go into the water when overheated or soon after eating. The careful physician would probably insist upon an interval of at least two hours between meal and bath; one hour is a fair compromise between zeal and prudence, and a half hour the absolute minimum for safety. Finally, don't enter the water timidly and by degrees, but boldly and with a plunge, wetting the whole body at once. If one is not able to dive in, he should wade in to knee depth, then wet his head thoroughly and plunge in bodily. These rules have been repeated often enough to be familiar to everybody, but they are continually disregarded.

Cholly's Pardon.

[New York Sun.]

Oh, Cholly's on the spwee again,
It's all about a maid.
Pooh devil! heah him ohdahing
Another lemonade.

Unfounded.

[Chicago Record.]

"They say," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "that she married him under a misapprehension."

"Oh, no, she didn't," replied her hostess. "I seen the whole thing myself. It was under a bell made out of some kind of red flowers."

Unostentatious.

[Washington Star.]

"Mr. Dustin Stax is inclined to make an ostentatious display of his wealth."

"You wouldn't think so," said the government employe, "if you worked in the assessor's office."

Cool Summer Reading.

[W. D. Nesbitt, in Chicago Tribune.]

The sun hides in a bank of gray, cold clouds
That loom as new-made mountains in the west;
The trees stand wraithlike in their snowy shrouds—
The world in wondrous stillness goes to rest.
The shadows fling themselves along the snow
Until the sun breaks through the clouds that bar,
Then hills and fields and white-clad forests glow
Until it seems that molten glass they are.

Now gently all the withered branches stir,
Tall weeds bow down and break their icy sheaths,
For now there comes a hasting messenger,
Whose feet fling up the snow in whirling wreaths—
The breeze runs down the hill and through the vale,
To whisper that the night is coming on;
Its whisper shivers up into a wail
For all the grace of summer that is gone.

The north wnid wakes, and roars and drives away
The clouds that spread their cloaks across the sky,
And now the mystic lights flash forth and play
Among the solemn stars that journey high.
The vagrant winds come romping, gust on gust,
To toss the drifted snow into the gloom—
As summer winds catch up the idle dust
And fling it laughingly on grass and bloom.

Now all is hushed; the world has gone to sleep;
Yet through the silence comes, all fine and faint,
The velvet echo of the sway and sweep
Of Frost's swift hands that mold and carve and paint.
The cold, cold moon now glides above the trees,
And silvers all about to sheerest white—
And, chatteringly cold, each little breeze
Taps at the window, warm with golden light.

Useless Wealth.

[Washington Star.]

"Mrs. Mungleswag looks as if she were the victim of some great sorrow."

"She is. Her daughters all got married to mere Americans before her husband struck it rich with his patent."

The Gray and the Green.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

The gray streets of London are grayer than the stone,
The gray streets of London where I must walk alone;
The gray city pavements are hard to tread, alas!
My heart and feet are aching for the Irish grass.

Far down the winding boreen the grass is soft as silk,
The wind is sweet as honey, the hedges white as milk;
Gray dust and grayer houses are here, and skies like brass,
The lark is singing, soaring, o'er the Irish grass.

The gray streets of London stretch out a thousand mile,
O dreary walls and windows, and never a song or smile;
Heavy with money-getting, the sad gray people pass—
There's gold in drifts and shallows in the Irish grass.

God built the pleasant mountains and blest the fertile plain,
But in this sad gray London, God knows I go in pain.
O, brown as any amber and clear as any glass,
The streams my heart hears calling from the Irish grass.

The gray streets of London they say are paved with gold;
I'd rather have the cowslips that two small hands could hold;
I'd give the yellow money the foolish folk amass
For the dew that's gray as silver on the Irish grass.

I think that I'll be going before I die of grief.
The wind from o'er the mountains will give my heart relief;
The cuckoo's calling sweetly, calling in dreams, alas!
Come home, come home, acushla, to the Irish grass.

Maudlin Sympathy.

[Hamilton Herald.]

Too much newspaper sympathy is being expressed for Mrs. Kyle, of Ingersoll. No doubt the woman had provocation for shooting Magee, but it is a mistake to make a heroine out of a woman who kills a man because he pesters her with his attentions.

Analysis of Mental Stages.

[Philadelphia Record.]

A specialist who had made a study of the mental attitude of the consumer toward the advertiser formulates what he calls the law of sale, as follows: "Attention, properly sustained, changes to interest; interest, properly augmented, changes to desire, and desire, properly intensified, changes to resolve to buy." Often the reader passes through all these mental stages in the perusal of a single advertisement; sometime the cumulative power of a [illegible] him to the final attitude. In either case, the best means of attracting attention, arousing interest and intensifying desire is the first-class daily newspaper, which covers a field no other medium can reach.

The Book of Life.

[S. E. Kiser.]

Life is an enchanting story, filled with laughter and with tears,
And its pages are the people and its covers are the years;
It has heroines and heroes, it has villains, too, alack!
And it also has some fly-leaves that are useless, at the back.

Life is an enchanting story, and the greatest do their best
Where they stand between the covers to increase the interest;
Does the All-Wise Author, proudly, as he turns the pages, look
To discover you, or are you but a fly-leaf to the book?

Provocation.

[Woodstock Sentinel-Review.]

When a leading Ontario newspaper makes the statement that hereafter no man from the Province of Quebec can be trusted in the premiership of the country, is it strange that some French-Canadians should come to believe that it was time they were breaking away from confederation?

FINISHED THE CARD GAME

Then French Assassin Coolly Went to the Guillotine.

Paris, July 24.—A murderer named Larguille was guillotined at Orleans this morning.

When the executioner and a magistrate entered the condemned cell at 5 o'clock Languille was playing at cards with two warders.

The magistrate told him that his last hour had come.

"Very well," said Languille. "I am sorry, but I have been expecting this for two or three days. Let me finish my 'hand'; I will not be a minute."

With astounding coolness the criminal continued the game, and when he had thrown down his last card he rose to his feet and walked steadily to the scaffold, which had been erected 100 yards from the cell. A crowd of persons who had gathered in the vicinity shouted "Death to the assassin," but the murderer, with a contemptuous smile, retorted, "You dirty peasants." A moment later the knife fell. The crime for which Languille was executed was the strangling of an old man.

Three Years for Annie.

London, July 25. — Annie M. Grant (or Annie Gleason), of Chicago, who was committed for trial, July 6, on the charge of stealing a necklace valued at $10,000 from Christie's, was found guilty in the Old Bailey and sentenced to three years' penal servitude.

Dan Lamont Dead.

New York, July 24.—Colonel Daniel S. Lamont, secretary of war under Mr. Cleveland, died at 9:15 o'clock Sunday evening at his country residence at Milbrook, Duchess County N. Y., after a brief illness.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1638 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Colo., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope.

"I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

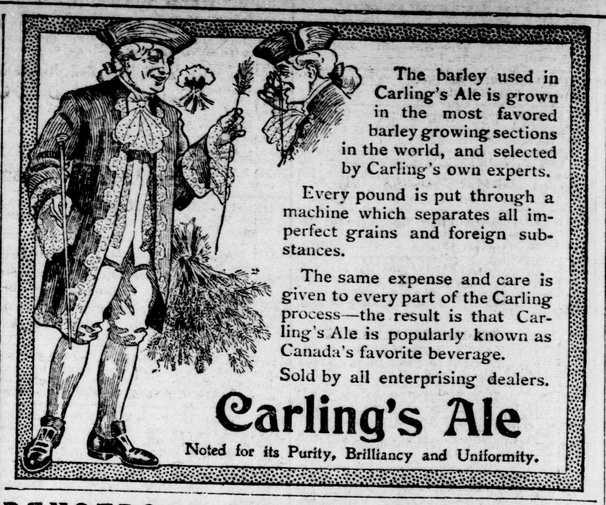

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such trouble.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Health is too valuable to risk in experiments with unknown and untried medicines or methods of treatment. Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

The barley used in Carling's Ale is grown in the most favored barley growing sections in the world, and selected by Carling's own experts.

Every pound is put through a machine which separates all imperfect grains and foreign substances.

The same expense and care is given to every part of the Carling process—the result is that Carling's Ale is popularly known as Canada's favorite beverage.

DANGEROUS GERMS IN SUMMER

Strengthen the Stomach With Mi-o-na and Keep Well.

A wealthy philanthropist in New York spends thousands of dollars every summer providing milk for the babies, with the result that the mortality is greatly decreased. He appreciates the fact that disease germs are common in the summer and that the stomach must be kept healthy to resist their attacks.

Older people do not live on a milk diet to insure health, but they can so strengthen the stomach and digestive organs by the use of Mi-o-na that they too, will be free from sickness in the summer season.

Take a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal, and it will soothe and heal any inflammation that may be present in the lining of the stomach, give tone and strength to the whole digestive system, and aid you in naturally and easily digesting the food. It is the only remedy known that cures indigestion and stomach troubles by strengthening the digestive system. It is guaranteed to make a complete and permanent cure in all diseases of the stomach excepting cancer.

Mi-o-na restores complete health to the whole system and cures headaches, backache, sleeplessness, pains and distress after eating, vertigo, heartburn, and the general debility which result from a weak stomach and imperfect digestion.

A guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na does not show help, is given with every 50-cent box. Ask W. T. Strong to show you the guarantee.

MRS. KYLE FACES MURDER CHARGE

the words of Mrs. Kyle. It was loaded, and Mrs. Kyle discharged a barrel on the lawn without reasons assigned.

On the fatal Tuesday morning Mrs. Kyle and Miss Whitman were seated at the breakfast table when Magee darkened the doorway. Miss Whitman instantly rushed from the house in fright, which she attributed to the fact that Magee had previously asked her to go and live with him in London. On her way to Mrs. Lester's, a neighbor, Miss Whitman heard a shot fired, but knew nothing more of what took place until Mr. Kyle called for her about fifteen minutes afterwards.

On returning to the Kyles, Miss Whitman immediately resumed work, seeing nothing of the tragedy. Mrs. Kyle was geting dressed to go downtown, and was uncommunicative, merely saying that she had put Magee out of doors. She said nothing about his being dead. It was Mr. Kyle who told about the shooting.

Prisoner's counsel particularized as to details of the fatal Tuesday. He asked Miss Whitman to verify his statements. When Magee came into the dining-room he stood between the table and the kitchen door. When Miss Whitman returned to the house after the shooting she saw the mark of a pistol shot in the top of the door frame between the kitchen and dining-room opposite the kitchen windows; so that the bullet had been fired from the dining-room. There was a step down between the dining-room and the kitchen. The kitchen window was, therefore, lower than the dining-room door. A person standing in the dining-room trying to shoot a man entering by the kitchen window would not be in line with the target. This exposition was to prove that Mrs. Kyle shot to frighten, not to kill.

There was a tense moment in court, when at the conclusion of her testimony and verification, Miss Whitman on question of prisoner's counsel, admitted that there had been improper relations between her and Magee at Ingersoll before she went to Mrs. Kyle's.

Dr. Tart's testimony revealed the details of the injury—a split bullet, which penetrated the victim's skull in a straight line, causing instant death. Mrs. Kyle, when questioned by the doctor after the affair, did not know where Magee had been hit, as she had fired at random.

All the testimony being delivered, the prisoner's counsel asked for bail, but Magistrate Morrison reminded him it was beyond his power, and could only be obtained by proper proceeding. For the present he comitted the prisoner for trial at Woodstock in October.

RATTRAY'S BODY FOUND

The Tragic End of Well-Known Lake Captain Near Sarnia.

Sarnia, July 24. — The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Capt. Rattray from the General Hospital here has been solved by the finding of Capt. Rattray's body in the St. Clair River, near Corunna. Capt. Rattray for some time had been suffering from a nervous disorder, which had affected him mentally.

Capt. Rattray was a lake captain, about 70 years of age, and well known in lake navigation circles.

His family live in Sombra, and Marine City, and he had numerous relatives in Sarnia.

An inquest will not be held.

Will Try Again.

London, July 25. — The All-England Lawn Tennis Club gave a dinner last night in honor of the international teams. The guests included all the Americans with the exception of Holcombe Ward. The president of the club, in proposing a toast to the visitors, complimented the Americans on their fine play.

Dr. Paul J. Dashiel, responding on behalf of the American team, expressed his appreciation of the courtesy and hospitality of the British players and the club, and announced that it was the intention of the Americans to come again and make an effort to secure the Davis Cup.

Kelliher for G. T. P.

Montreal, July 24.—Mr. B. B. Kelliher has been appointed chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific, with headquarters at Montreal.

Mr. Kelliher has been with the Grand Trunk Pacific since 1904 as division engineer at Winnipeg, which office he held until his recent appointment to the chief engineership. He is an Irishman, but from 1886 to 1901 had wide railway experience in the States. He, however, never took out naturalization papers or dropped his British allegiance.

ENTERTAINING THE OLD BOYS

Committee Makes Arrangements for Big Task—The Band Concert.

The entertainment committee of the Old Boys' Association met last night and further arrangements for their work during the week beginning Aug. 7. The reception to the visiting ladies was fixed for the evening of Tuesday, the 8th at Springbank, where dancing will be indulged in and supper served. A REMARKABLE ORGANIZATION

How New York Times Speaks of the London Old Boys' Association.

"One of the most remarkable social organizations in the world" is what the New York Times declares the London Old Boys' Association to be. A recent article in the Times was accompanied by a half tone engraving of the officers of New York's association, and also a reproduction of the invitations sent out by the home guard. It said:

Though thousands and hundreds of thousands of Canadians have left the Dominion to pursue that will-o'-the-wisp fortune, in the more strenuous "States," none of these sturdy Canucks ever forgets that there is no place like home.

Some genius for the promotion of social intercourse suggested that all of the "old boys" who had left the beautiful Forest City of Ontario be invited to come home for a spell, so that they might see how the old town had grown, how Billy McBride's dinky little drygoods store had become an emporium at which man, woman or child could be attired in the latest fashion; how nicely-paved streets had taken the place of the cobblestone affairs over which the exiles had jolted, and all of those wonderful improvements in which the citizens took such pride.

There would be marvelous stories to relate—tales of how Sam Smith, the blacksmith, made a fortune by inventing a nailless horseshoe; how McArthur had reformed and become an alderman; of how Lizzie Miller, the milliner, had eloped with a youth of tender age. Best of all, the old boys would be able to see each other and tell of their experience in the land of their adoption. Invitations were sent out broadcast. In nearly every civilized country the reunion was advertised, and from all parts of the world men and women who had lived in London flocked to the home town.

For three days there was feasting and playing and chattering, salutations and congratulations, voicing of cherished memories, tender-spoken or silent tributes to those who had passed from earth, or upon whom misfortune had fallen. So joyous had been the occasion that it was decided that there should be a reunion of the Old Boys each year. A central organization was formed, and in every large city, as well as in smaller ones, branches of the London Old Boys' Association were formed. Interest in the reunion has grown steadily, and other Canadian cities and American towns have followed the lead of London in forming such an organization.

Last year Old Boys from Detroit, Mich., to Australia attended this home gathering, and with their wives and children the army that marched upon the Canadian town was not less than 5,000 strong. This year it is intended to make the jubilee the most elaborate affair of the kind ever held in the Forest City. The date of the reunion, Aug. 7 to 12, is also the semi-centennial jubilee of the City of London, so with the double event a larger attendance than ever is expected.

Another fact that lends additional interest to this year's reunion is that Nicholas Wilson has just completed his sixtieth year as a teacher in the London schools. Thousands of the men and women who will attend the reunion were instructed in the "Three R's" by this estimable old gentleman, who, despite his great age, is hale and hearty, and expects to be there to grasp the hands of boys of fifty or so—the same hands upon which his ferule often fell with resounding smack.

B. C. McCann, a London barrister, prepared the unique invitation, which outlines the programme briefly but collectively in the phraseology of the ancient Britons.

Robert N. Graves is president of the Greater New York Association of London Old Boys, and he will take with him to the home town about 200 of the members residing in this city.

PARKER MUST FACE A JURY

Committed for Trial by Squire Edwards on a Serious Charge.

After a lengthy examination by Squire Edwards yesterday afternoon, William Parker, aged 33 years of age, was committed for trial on the charge of attempted indecent assault upon the person of Mrs. Isabella Sigsworth, aged 63 years.

Evidence taken was to the effect that when Parker turned off the Wellington road into the unfrequented lane known as the Thompson road and attempted the assault, Mrs. Sigsworth screamed vigorously. Two farmers who lived nearby, namely, William Fletcher and Charles Parker, went to the woman's assistance, being guided by the sounds, for it was by this time about 10 o'clock at night.

Arriving first, Fletcher found Parker and the woman in the buggy, which was standing at the roadside. Parker whipped the horse and attempted to escape, but Charles Parker came up at this moment and seized the animal's head. The horse plunged into the ditch, carrying Charles Parker with him and almost upsetting the buggy. The prisoner was thrown out, and took advantage of the circumstance to escape. The woman's rescuers drove her home, and returned the horse and rig to the livery to which they belonged.

FIGHTER DE CRESPIGNY

This Time He Is Off With a British Punitive Expedition.

London, July 24. — Sir Claude de Crespigny has joined the force sent out in East Africa to punish the raiding Sotiks.

He has written home to Maldon, Essex, that the enemy are estimated at from 3,000 to 6,000 strong. One-third are armed with bows and arrows and the rest with spears.

Sir Claude de Crespigny, who, at the age of 58, is about to add more adventures to his already crowded career, comes of one of the few genuine Norman families left in England.

He has been sailor, soldier, war correspondent, balloonist, unsuccessful channel swimmer, big game hunter, steeplechase rider and many other things. He has sampled all kinds of sport, and broken an extraordinary number of bones.

In fighting where self-help is essential, Sir Claude has little to learn. He has fought in many fashions, even with an infuriated monkey. This last was one of the queer pets with which he has surrounded his home at Champion Lodge, Maldon.

It was announced early in June that he would superintend the laying out of a steeplechase course at Nairobi, in British East Africa. After he has finished with the rebels he may ride the winner of an East African Grand National.

Sir Claude de Crespigny took up John Burns' election challenge to box, or row, or skate, or swim, or fence, any man in England. The contest, however, came to nothing, not, however, through any fault of Sir Claude's.

WELSH SCHOOL REVOLT

Nonconformist Children Withdrawn From the National School.

Cardiff, Wales, July 24. — The first Welsh revolt has been opened at Llandeowyn, a secluded spot in the most mountainous part of Merionethshire.

Teaching was commenced in the Wesleyan Chapel, which is opposite the national schools.

The Nonconformist children have been withdrawn from the latter in protest against the Government's educational policy.

Special movable desks were fitted into the pews of the chapel and instruction was given to seventeen pupils under capital punishment.

The rector, the Rev. O. T. Hughes, who has been acting as village schoolmaster, expressed himself in no way disconcerted by the condition of affairs.

"I shall keep on so long as I have one child left. I may say I have a well-bred Welsh terrier, known as Jack, safeguarding the premises. I shall hold out until I am left alone with the dog."

WHAT RUSSIAN PRINCESS SAW

alarmed gaze. His eyes rested upon me.

I trembled and quaked with fear. If he stopped, if he addressed me, I was lost. I was about to motion to him to pass on, but at that moment my strength forsook me, my eyes were blurred. A mob of youths leaped with a dancing sort of movement about the carriage, brought it to a stop, and, ere another second passed, my acquaintance—an aristocrat whose name I withhold out of consideration for his family—was thrown out of the carriage, and killed.

With jubilant shouts the fellows took seats in the carriage and exclaimed to the passers-by:

"Now let the rich lie groveling on the ground on their bellies; let them walk now, if they can—the workingman's reign has come; those who have been exploited, now ride in equipages, Hopla, coachman, just drive along; you've got a new master now!"

With great difficulty I dragged myself along. At last I saw the house where the child was. Soon she rested in my arms. The relatives upon whom I dropped so suddenly in disguise were dumbfounded. But there was not much time for explanations. Already in our neighborhood a bomb exploded. We had a feeling as if the whole world were about to go to wreck. Only one who has experienced an earthquake can form an idea of the effect of this hellish invention. Suddenly a voice exclaimed, "Let us hide in the cellar — that will be the safest place."

The domestics carried victuals below. It was Thursday noon when we descended; and we remained in the cellar until Friday afternoon. Full 24 hours! Twenty-four hours of agonizing uncertainty as to what was in store for us. We could no longer support it.

On the roof of the house was a garden. Our resolve was quickly taken, and within a few minutes we were on the roof, unobserved and unmolested, scanning poor, oppressed Odessa through telescopes.

An awful picture presented itself. There, directly in front of us, was the bay, literally covered with ships. What has the Potemkine multiplied itself? Or do our eyes, weakened by the cellar's darkness, deceive us? At length we solve the problem: Ships have come to subdue the mutinous Potemkine.

But what is this? Every one of the ships hoists the red flag. Why, that is the symbol of riot, of mutiny! How is that? It cannot be. Soon we learn the explanation. The Potemkine mutinies. The other ships, sent to mete out vengeance, have joined her.

In Fear of Mutineers.

For two hours we remained on the roof, rooted, and unable to take our eyes from this drama. What was going to happen? Already the people throughout the city knew that all the ships flew the red flag. An awful panic prevailed. Despair was written on every face. Everybody was running in one direction. "Railroad station," was the one password of salvation.

A thought occurred to me. "At least provide betimes," I said to myself, and begged a male servant to run to the station and engage at any cost a stateroom for Vienna for Saturday. The servant hurried away and I returned to the roof. There a new surprise was in store. All the ships except the Potemkine and another ship near it — the Pobjedonossez, as I learned later — withdrew the red flag and steamed away. But the Potemkine did not stir. What had occurred in the interim, we did not know.

We retired with somewhat more composure. Our sleep was of short duration. At 4 o'clock in the morning somebody knocked at our window.

"Fly, fly, escape as fast as you can," a voice said. I have no idea who it was that kept ward over us at that early morning hour.

When we reached the street, carrying a few small packages, we realized why we had been warned. In front of the house cannon had been planted and cartridges slid into place.

An ambulance passing, we pretended to be sick, and were taken up and conveyed to a hospital. Until evening I remained in a ward with my daughter and her governess.

We were on the station platform two hours before the departure of the train for Vienna. Despite the comparatively early hour the platform was crowded and we had great trouble in reaching our car.

Only after we had left Odessa far behind us were we able to breathe freely again. Nearly all the aristocratic families of Odessa will follow our example. I received telegrams today from that city announcing that most of the aristocrats are leaving and are going in various directions. True, quiet has been restored there; but nobody feels at ease, and therefore all are running away.

PRINCESS IN BATHTUB

Interviewed Would-Be Housemaid and Latter Was Shocked.

London, July 25.—Princess Henry of Pless, the tall and divinely fair daughter of that famous professional beauty, Mrs. Cornwallis West, and the sister of the Duchess of Westminster, is a very unconventional young woman in ordinary daily life.

The other day the princess advertised for a housemaid. Housemaids galore answered the advertisement, and the usual weeding out process took place. Finally an extremely respectable young person presented herself at the Pless mansion.

She was shown upstairs and told that the princess would see her at once. To the respectable young person's astonishment she was shown into a bathroom.

In the bath was her serene highness who asked the usual questions from the depths of perfumed waters.

The respectable young person immediately made up her mind that she would not "take a situation" where the mistress interviewed servants in a state of nature and the bath.

The "respectable young person" fled from the house to find a situation elsewhere.

DIAMOND DYES

Each year thousands of letters come in from all parts of this vast Dominion telling of victories and successes with Diamond Dyes in the home.

The marvelous and immense sales of Diamond Dyes in Canada have induced adventurers and speculators (who know nothing about the chemistry of colors) to go into the putting up of Package dyes. Such dyes are adulterated and crude; the colors are muddy and blotchy, bringing ruin to the materials you try to dye.

Diamond Dyes, the choice of wise women, are the kind used when bright, full, fast and brilliant colors are wanted. No disappointments possible when you use Diamond Dyes.

Diamond Dyes are sold by all leading druggists and dealers. Refuse to accept substitutes when you ask for

TODAY'S MARKETS

LOCAL MARKET.

Tuesday, July 25.

For a Tuesday there was quite a large attendance at the market today. The most of the stuff offered was brought in by the farmers wives and daughters, as the men are so busy on the farm. Sales were brisk and prices were inclined to be firmer. A peculiar situation has developed in the wheat trade; recently a large consignment of Manitoba wheat that had been shipped to Kingston, Ont., was re-shipped to Fort William, Ont. This is the first time on record that a shipment of this kind has been made and was the first load of wheat that has come past West through the Soo canal.

Grain — Oats sold well at the market today, and prices were higher than those paid on Saturday. Most of the sales were made from $1 36 to $1 38 per cwt; a couple of loads of black oats sold at $1 40 per cwt. One load of barley sold at $1 05 per cwt.

Hay and Straw—Ten loads of hay were offered. Sales were brisk at $7 and $7 50 per ton Straw was scarce, as there was but one load offered, which sold at $4.

Butter and Eggs—Butter was in good demand at 17c to 18c for crock, and 19c to 20c for choice pound rolls. Eggs were firm at 17c per dozen wholesale.

Fruits—This line was the feature of the market; red raspberries predominated; eight large loads, representing several hundred crates, were shipped in by rail, and they sold mostly to grocers at 9c per box; those brought in by the farmers sold mostly at 10c per box by the crate; retail, 11c to 12c per box was asked by the hucksters; black currants were very scarce today; large shipments are expected this week; there will not be many more offered by the farmers; prices ruled today at 11c to 12½c per box; gooseberries were dull, at 5c to 7c per box; cherries were in demand, at 1 to $1 10 per 10-quart pail; not many offered, and the samples were inferior.

Poultry—There was not sufficient offered to meet the demand; there were, however, no changes in price.

Dressed Hogs—About half a dozen carcases were offered by the wholesale butchers; prices ruled at $8 50 to $9 per cwt.

Vegetables and Roots—Potatoes were dull, at 80c per bu; peas were scarce, at 10c per quart; beans dull, at 15c per peck.

Butchers' Meats—Sales were fairly brisk and prices firm, as quoted.

STOCK MARKETS.

H. C. Becher, stock broker, next Free Press building, received the following by private wire from Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington today:

New York, July 25. — Noon. — Whether there is still some anxiety in regard to the conditions of the crops, or whether speculators are waiting for the Steel earnings for the last quarter, which should be published after 3 p.m., today, or whether prices for the time being have gotten to a dead center, the fact remains that business is being reduced to a minimum, and what little is being done on the floor represents the operations of the professional element, and of certain western gamblers, who are seldom entirely out of the market. The further decline in the price of futures of wheat caused a rally in U. P., which, however, was not maintained. There was good buying in U. S. S., the belief on the floor being that the company would show between thirty and thirty-two millions earned for the second quarter of the year. In conservatiev quarters it is estimated that the figures will be nearer $28,000,000. After the rally referred to the market sunk into a state of supreme dullness. Sales to noon, 167,300.

KITCHEN ECONOMY

There is triple economy in using Strong's Baking Powder:

1. It costs less than other good powders.
2. It goes about twice as far.
3. It gives uniformly good results.

The amount of money lost in one "spoiled" baking, through the use of impure powder, would pay the entire cost of Strong's Baking Powder for several months. This powder is always pure, fresh and full of strength, hence you can always depend upon it producing uniform results. Price, 25c a pound.

BERLIN AS A SEAPORT

Canal To Be Dug to Atlantic at a Cost of $10,000,000.

Berlin, July 25.—The city of Berlin, though far from any coast, is soon to become an important seaport. A large canal, deep and wide enough to allow the passage of very large vessels, is to be dug between Berlin and Stettin.

It is even now possible for small vessels to reach Berlin from the Baltic through existing canals, but these are to be made very much deeper and wider at an expense of $10,000,000.

It is estimated that the tolls during the first year after the opening of the enlarged canal will amount to about $350,000, or about 3½ per cent of the cost.

An aged millionaire, the 72-year-old Architect Frederick, from Leipsic, has just died in the penitentiary at Waldheim.

He was sentenced to four years' imprisonment in November, 1903, for perjury. He left no heirs, and, according to Saxon law, his body was turned over to the dissecting room at a Dresden hospital, while his fortune, which is said to amount to about $5,000,000, will go to the state.

For stealing a golden spoon and fork and a table knife with a handle of solid gold from the Kaiser's kitchen a non-commissioned officer of the guard has been sentenced to the penitentiary for four months.

He did not deny having stolen the golden articles, which were found in his possession, but claimed that he had only taken them to keep them as souvenirs of the Kaiser.

The court martial, however, did not appreciate this proof of loyalty, and the sentence followed.

Prof. Rider and Dr. Joseph Rosenthal, of Munich, have been collaborating in the work, and declare they have succeeded in obtaining in less than a second of time X-ray photographs of the human chest, the patient ceasing to breathe meanwhile.

Having proceeded thus far they sought to take pictures of the human heart between its beats, as it was found that the beating of that organ impaired the exactness of the photographs. Having first of all accurately gauged the time elapsing by a process they are prepared to describe at length, by the use of the most sensitive films procurable and the strongest possible X-rays good photographs were secured in one tenth of a second.

The outlines of the heart and a large portion of the lungs were photographed with much greater success and clearness than had been hitherto found possible.

AIRED TROUBLES IN THE COURT

Neighbors Have Differences Over Dog—Some Drunks and Unmuzzled Pups.

A couple of neighbors aired their troubles this morning at the police court, and us usual they would have been settled much easier at home. A little boy and little girl, two women and a dog were the chief actors. The little boy was bitten by an alleged vicious dog, and it was proven that the dog merely had a lapse of virtue, so his destruction was not ordered. He was properly muzzled, and the wonder was that he could have inflicted any injury with his teeth. The owner of the dog pays half the doctor's bill.

James Ward is a playful chap when booze-burdened, and in jovial good fellowship Sunday hit his wife. Just to emphasize his goodness of heart he also flourished a knife. He was found guilty and was bailed a week for sentence.

Joseph Adair, just in from Stratford, undertook to demonstrate the fresh air cure for that tired feeling. He slumbered soulfully under a spreading chestnut tree near the breakwater until aroused by a rude policeman. He was attired in a sweater that made Joseph's celebrated coat of many hues look like mourning. He was allowed to go, on promising to labor.

Richard Scott was ringing wet, and contributed $3 extra for his jag.

All dogs in this city are being fed bountifully, judging from the number of citizens who take off the dog's muzzles just to feed the brute. One man was original, and was taking his pups for a swim. As an imigination developer this dog bylaw takes all the money.

A couple of warrants were issued for those who failed to answer summonses. Robert Turner, accused by a lady of stealing her purse, was bailed for another week, the crown-attorney not being ready.

PERSONAL MENTION

Miss Mabel Ferguson, of Dufferin avenue, city, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Marjorie Poynter, at her summer home in Bothwell.

CYCLIST'S NARROW ESCAPE

In Hurry for Dinner Rides Across In Front of Locomotive.

A great hurry for his dinner nearly cost a young men named Alteman his life at noon today. He was riding a bicycle down Wellington street, and seeing the gates at the G. T. R. tracks half-way down, he rode under them. When part way across the railway an engine bore down on him. He had the presence of mind to put on speed. He cleared, and escaped without a scratch. His wheel was smashed all to pieces.

MAY MEAN TROLLEY LINE

Engineer Jennings Going Over Route From London East.

Engineer Jennings, of Toronto, was in the city today for a short time, and called on Mayor Campbell and Engineer Graydon.

Mr. Jennings came to London with his auto, and will go from here to Hamilton over a route which an electrical development company proposes to follow in the stringing of power wires from the Falls to London. If it is found that the power can be transmitted to London and sold at a lower figure than it is at present being sold at, the line will be hurried through at the earliest possible date. The trip of the engineer may also mean that a trolley line will be constructed, to be operated by power generated at the falls.

WHAT ARE PILES OR HEMORRHOIDS

From Which So Many People Suffer and Know Not How to Obtain Relief and Cure.

Piles or hemorrhoids are small tumors which form in and about the oriface of the rectum, and because of the itching, stinging sensations produced they cause the keenest suffering imaginable.

Piles are spoken of as itching, bleeding or protruding, according to which symptom is most noticeable, but every form of piles is accompanied by feelings of misery and uneasiness, which can scarcely be described.

As a cure for piles Dr. Chase's Ointment stands alone. It is positively guaranteed to give satisfactory results, and is backed by thousands of the most reliable people in the land as the only actual cure for this distressing disease.

Do not think of submitting to the suffering, expense and risk of a surgical operation or wasting time in experimenting with untried remedies, when this tried and proven ointment is at hand to relieve and cure you. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto.

BIG TOURNEY BEGAN TODAY

Bowlers, Four Hundred Strong, Are Playing on Rowing Club Grounds.

The big annual tourney of the Western Ontario Bowling Association opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the lovely lawns of the London Rowing Club, under the very best auspices.

First of all, the attendance is a record one. Bowlers, big and little, stout and thin, old and young, made their way from all parts of the country to London on this morning's trains —some even as early as last evening, not being able to make connections this morning, and being determined to be in at the start.

Practically all those who are to take part were on the grounds this afternoon. Ninety-one rinks were there. Just think of that! Last year there were 71 rinks at play, and last year was the biggest yet.

The grounds presented a beautiful appearance, with flags flying, awnings flapping and scores of white-hatted, flannel-dressed bowlers wandering over the green, which, by the way, are in perfect shape.

The bowlers were welcomed by Mayor Campbell, who gave them the "freedom of the city." President Jackson, of the W. O. B. A., also gave a short speech in happy vein, and President Thomas Alexander, of the local association, spoke in his well-known bright manner. The harpers dispensed sweet strains of music from one corner of the grounds.

"This is the greatest event ever held in the western hemisphere," remarked Secretary "Jim" Tytler, and every one of the lovers of the game who are now playing by the riverside agree with him.

MATINEE POSTPONED.

The weekly matinee of the Road Drivers' Association will not be held tomorrow afternoon, many of the members being absent from the city.

A UNION PICNIC.

A union picnic of Colbourne Street Sabbath school and Epworth League will be held to Springbank on Wednesday, July 26. A good time is anticipated.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

The regular meeting of the board of works will be held on Thursday evening. A number of important matters are to be considered. The question of repairing the asphalt pavement will come up, and also the letting of the contract for the vitrified brick pavement on Talbot street. There may be also something doing in reference to the breakwater.

JOHNSON COULD NOT PAY.

Toronto Globe: Two colored men named Frederick Johnson and Samuel Jackson were charged at the police court yesterday with disorderly behavior. "I was just wrestling in a yard with my brother-in-law (Jackson) to see who could throw the other. I came in by excursion from London, and have my return ticket to go back there," pleaded Johnson. A constable said that the disorderly behavior took place in the street. Johnson asked for a chance to go home. "You will have a chance after you have paid a fine of $1 and costs or 30 days." Johnson went below weeping. Jackson, who was also ordered to pay $1 and costs, had sufficient to pay the fine and was released.

M. KOMURA NOT SURE OF PEACE

Mikado's Peace Agent Says Japan Desires It But Is Not Over-Sanguine.

Chicago, July 24. — "The so-called 'Yellow Peril' is wholly a creation on the part of some interested people in Europe. Not only Japan and China, but the entire civilized world will gain by our conflict with Russia.

"At New York we shall meet Mr. Takahira, when we expect to have word from President Roosevelt inviting us to call either at Oyster Bay or Washington.

"We desire peace, yet are not over-anxious nor are we over-sanguine that the negotiations will be productive. A Japanese protectorate over Korea will open the way for Japanese immigration there and divert it from this country."

So declared Baron Komura, Japan's minister of foreign affairs and the Mikado's plenipotentiary to discuss terms of peace at Portsmouth, N. H., with M. de Witte, the envoy of the Czar.

Baron Komura, with his suite, arrived in Chicago at 9 o'clock this morning, and plans to remain but a few hours, proceeding on the Pennsylvania's eighteen-hour train directly to New York, thence going to Oyster Bay, where he will call on the President.

The baron spent Sunday in St. Paul, declining a dinner arranged in his honor, on the plea of fatigue. He remained quietly at the Hotel Aberdeen during the day, only leaving once to take an automobile ride around the city.

New York, July 25.—Baron Komura, senior Japanese peace plenipotentiary, arrived from Chicago this morning. At the Jersey City station to greet him were about 40 Japanese merchants. There was no demonstration at Jersey City, but when the ferry boat reached the foot of Twenty-Third street 100 or more Japanese in the city greeted the baron and his suite with cheers, while a brass band played the Japanese national air. The baron, with Consul-General Uchida and two of his suite, entered a carriage and were driven to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

Mr. Sato, who is the chief of staff, said to an Associated Press representative that he would not know what the programme would be until he had met Minister Takahira. He said it would not be necessary for any of the party to go to Washington, since the President is at Oyster Bay, and that they would await the President's pleasure as to their plans.

"The baron will rest a few days," said Mr. Sato, "his journey having been quite an extended one. He is in good health, but needs a little rest."

CURSED TREE SHUNNED

Planted by a Child of the Devil, it is Death-Dealing.

City of Mexico, July 25.—Because of the many fatal accidents that have occurred under a huge tree that grows in the Haciendita ranch, in the Zamora district, Michoacan, peasants of the region are growing more and more superstitious about its supposed fatal omen and they begin to call it "arbol maldito" (cursed tree).

The tree is supposed to be over 75 years old, and is said to have been planted by a man who, because of his enormous crimes and his forgetfulness of the divine law, was swallowed up by the earth. The man never went to mass, never confessed, did not have the image of a saint in his house, did not carry a rosary around his neck, and never made the sign of the cross. There was not a beggar in the town who had ever received a "tlaco chiquito" (old coins equivalent to 1½ cents) from him. He never gave anything for the church, and never took off his hat when he met a "padrecito" on the street.

It was rumored that he was responsible for many murders and other atrocious crimes, but he was never in jail, neither could he be incarcerated because he had a compact with the devil, and whenever he invoked his Satanic Majesty the latter rendered him either invisible to human eyes or smaller than an ant, so that he could easily escape danger. He had no friends nor relatives, because he was shunned by all.

Two things he loved, birds and trees. He planted numerous trees and fed big flocks of birds that knew him and came to his home every morning to pick the crumbs of bread which he threw in the patio.

Many years ago, and this is well remembered by the peasants, it was Good Friday. Everybody in town had attended the religious services of the morning and they were going to their homes, when a terrific noise was heard. They rushed to the street where it came from, to find out what it was, and saw how the earth had opened under the cursed man's feet. He was enveloped in thick flames and smoke, and disappeared beneath the surface of the earth. This was considered a most deserving punishment.

While the faithful were in the church the cursed man was loafing around, and having seen a big crucifix upon an altar erected on the street, as was done in those days, he placed a burning cigarette in the lips of the image. Scarcely had he made eight or ten steps when he was engulfed by the inferno.

That day all the trees he planted, except the cursed one, dried up, and all the birds he had fed died.

An attempt was made to cut down the tree that had not dried up, but the man who made the attempt dropped dead upon stepping upon the shadow of its foliage. The man's body had to be left there to be eaten up by crows, because nobody had the courage to approach and remove it.

Since that day numerous persons have met a tragic death under that tree. A pedestrian who went under it for shade on a hot summer day was bitten by a snake and died in two hours. Three men, on different occasions, sought shelter from rain under its branches, and were struck by lightning. A woman who was hanging some clothes to dry from the trunk of the tree was attacked and killed by a billy goat that came from nobody knows where and that was never seen again. Two years ago a little boy who was riding a burro innocently led his animal to the tree. The burro threw him off and kicked him to death. The last victim of this fatal tree was a man named Melquiades Arevalo, who, three or four days ago, during a heavy rainstorm, ran under the tree for shelter; like his predecessors on such occasions, he was struck by lightning.

The horror that peasants have for this tree is so great that peons refuse to work on the fields half a mile around it. Propero Garcia, the owner of the ranch where that tree grows, is said to have made up his mind to have it blown up with dynamite, but he has been unable to find a man who is willing to do the work, so it seems probable that he will have to do it himself.

TRANCE LASTED 31 YEARS

Spanish Woman Has Awakened After Long Sleep.

Madrid, July 25.—Leonora Romaldo, the wife of a farm hand at Villaciense, near Burgos, has awakened from a trance which has lasted 31 years.

The case has been under the close observation of medical experts during the whole of that time, and by their instructions liquid food was regularly administered by a tube in the mouth of the sleeping woman.

At times it was believed that the woman was waking, and vigorous means were employed to restore her to consciousness, but they failed.

She has now regained her senses, but cannot be persuaded that she has slept for years. A curious feature of the case is that she remembers the incidents of her girlhood up to the time that she fell into the trance, but her hair has turned white. On being shown a mirror the woman shrieked with horror and declared that the image it reflected was not her own.

Her body is fairly well-nourished.

Among the interesting facts about the new Pennsylvania railroad tunnel and terminal in New York are these: Total cost, $60,000,000; in addition to the $10,000,000 for the station site, on which were about 300 dwellings; daily train capacity, 900; passenger accommodation daily, 201,000; men at work, about 10,000; time required for trip, under the Hudson, two minutes.

A Shining Mark

"No, no! I meant you must excuse a scratch affair. You wait a minute and I'll see what there is. Meanwhile, help yourself, my dear boy," and he put some wine on the table before he left the room.

The young fellow did not help himself, but stood thoughtfully surveying the room.

Ten minutes elapsed and the major reappeared with a butler's tray.

"There's some cold beef and a game pie, Des. I wish it was something better—"

"Thanks, it will do," he said; and with a smile he watched the major as he spread out the things with a still rather shaky hand.

"Quite like old-times, isn't it, major?" he remarked.

"Quite, quite!" assented the major, with ghastly cheerfulness. "There you are. What is your drink. Beer, whisky, champagne?"

The young fellow nodded, his eyes fixed on the pie.

"Anything: champagne."

Then he sat down and coolly and deliberately attacked the pie; coolly and deliberately, though he had not had anything, saving a roll, since morning.

"Don't mind my smoking?" said the major, lighting a cigar.

"Don't mind your doing anything, except eating," was the reply; and the young fellow worked away at the pie steadily.

The major watched him curiously, fearfully, with his small, cunning eyes half closed.

"More wine, Des?" he said.

The young man looked up for the first time since the meal had commenced, and with a smile shook his head; then he took a cigar from the major's case, and, drawing his armchair up to the fire, sank back into it and stretched out his legs to the warmth.

"And now let's have all the news, Des," said the major, pouring out some brandy and water, and taking a chair with an assumption of comfortable geniality. "How long have you been in England? what are you doing? where are you going?"

Desmond did not reply for some time, but sat smoking and looking at the fire; then he raised his eyes and looked the major full in the face.

"How long have you been in England? what are you doing? and where are you going, major?" he inquired, with a smile.

The question seemed to discompose the major considerably.

"I—I've been in England for some years, dear boy, some—some years; settled down on my pension; you know—"

The young fellow glanced at the richly-furnished room significantly.

"And I've had a—er—a slice of luck in the way of a legacy; not much, not much, Des—a mere trifle; but it has been a help."

The young fellow smiled.

"I see. A legacy. You always were lucky weren't you, major?"

The major shook his head, his face a trifle paler.

"Always lucky. And I was always the reverse, excepting on one occasion. But you want to know how long I've been in England. Just five weeks. What am I doing?—nothing. Where am I going? At present—nowhere," and he stretched out his legs to the blaze and smiled again.

The perspiration showed up on the major's forehead again, and he eyed his companion with mingled fear and hate.

"If you remember, major, you and I made a bargain some years ago. We entered into partnership, if I recollect rightly. It was over at Nevada in the year—what was the year?"

"I—I don't remember," faltered the major: "my memory isn't what it was, Des."

"No?" said the young fellow, with a smile. "I daresay not. As you seem to have forgotten the interesting epoch, perhaps I'd better recall it—"

"Er—er—don't trouble, Des," faltered the major, hurriedly.

"It is no trouble," said the young man, coolly. "I'm very comfortable, and feel like talking. Get another cigar, which the major, in his nervousness, had permitted to die out.

"Rather more than ten years ago, major, a young man found himself at a place called Trotter's Flat, in Nevada. Having made a general mess of it here in England, he had, at the earnest entreaty and persuasion of his friends, gone out to make his fortune in the land of silver, and he found himself at Trotter's Flat. The Flat is not the most charming spot in the world, and the people who dwelt there were anything but the most charming, either; and the young fellow soon discovered that silver mining was an occupation which appeared to possess especial fascination for the card-sharper, the run-away embezzler, and the scum of the earth generally. It was a very nice collection of scamps and scoundrels in Trotter's Flat, major."

"My dear Desmond, why go over all—all this?" murmured the major, rather huskily.

The young fellow smiled and sipped his champagne reflectively.

"Our hero—a pretty sort of hero!—would have shaken off the dust of Trotter's Flat pretty quickly, but there happened to be a man there with whom he struck up a sort of acquaintance, and this acquaintance kept him on. He had been in the army, this man, and was called 'the Major'; a dapper swell—even in his ragged, old, mining suit—played a good hand at cards, talked like a clock or a fellow on the stage, and acted the part of a good fellow; he made up to our young friend, and proposed a partnership. They were to work together, and share profits—"

"My dear Desmond," faltered the major, "is—is this necessary?"

"Find the story rather dull, up to the present? It will be more amusing presently, major! They did work together, and they worked hard; at least the young fellow did, and the major assisted by looking on with all his might. They hadn't much luck; but if they only made enough to keep the pot boiling they didn't complain. Take it altogether, they were not unhappy! The major, as I have remarked, was a pleasant sort of fellow, and full of good stories, and he and his partner used to spend their evenings in their but in the diggers' camp, and were not bored to death. Of course they talked of what they should do when they had 'made their pile'—every digger does! The major talked about going back to England to his little girl—his wife died before he came out—and his partner talked about going to England too; not that he had any little girl to go to, or any friends, for the matter of that! His family had cut up rough with him and shunted him. He told the major all about his people, and the major bade him cheer up, and assured him that when he went back to England a millionaire—diggers are never satisfied with looking forward to anything less than a million!—the young fellow would find his great people quite ready to forget the past, and awfully pleased to see him! Getting tired, major?"

The major raised his head from his hand, on which he had been supporting it, his elbow on the table; then resumed his attitude of anxious, impatient resignation.

"Sha'n't be long now. Well, strange to say, the firm, 'Major & Co.,' did strike luck. It was the junior partner who did it, of course. The major happened to be playing cards in the saloon at the time. The youngster struck luck, and struck it deep. Those dreams had come true; he and the major were rich men, not quite millionaires, but rich men. The major could go home to his little girl as soon as he liked, the young fellow could return to England and take his place among respectable people. They sat up the night of his luck, talking it all over, making plans, and reveling in the golden future. Perhaps they reveled too much, or perhaps the junior partner had been working too hard, for that night he fell ill—camp fever, and he'd got it bad. He was ill for weeks, off his head most of the time, and, of course, his friend and partner, the major, nursed him through it. I say, of course: his friend, whom he had made rich, stuck to the lad in his trouble, and nursed him like a mother!"

He stopped and looked straight into the white face opposite him; and the major, as if unable to bear the stern gaze, got up from his chair, moved to and fro uneasily, then sank down again.

"You'd think so," resumed Desmond, musingly, and with bitter cynicism. "They had been close friends; the youngster was the one who had really earned the money, and not only that, he had nursed his partner when he was down with camp fever some months before. But if you think so, you do the major injustice. When the young fellow came to, to find all the hair off his head and the flesh off his bones, he found also that his dear friend and partner had taken his departure. He had disappeared two days after the younster's attack, and had thoughtfully taken their joint fortune with him. In a word"—and he flung the end of his cigar in the fire and crossed his arms—"the major, this officer in her majesty's service, this man who always prided himself on being a gentleman, was a heartless, ungrateful scamp, and an unmitigated scoundrel."

The major looked from right to left, his face livid, his lips trembling. He tried to speak, but the words, whatever they may have been, dropped inaudibly from his dry, hot mouth.

"The name of this polished and amusing gentleman was Meddon, and the young fellow's was Desmond Carr-Lyon," resumed the other, after a moment's silence. "When he got well enough he made up his mind, of course, that he would go for his friend the major if he had to track him round the globe. The major had not left any address, but he had, strange to say, left a note. It was strange! It was a piece of weakness which was singularly inconsistent; but I suppose at the last moment the major felt that he really could not leave his friend and partner without a word of farewell. It is an interesting little note. I'll read it to you."

As he spoke he put his hand in the pocket of his worn coat and drew out a pocket-book. From this he took a yellow and soiled sheet of paper.

"Here it is:

"'Dear Desmond,—I am going back to my little girl. Don't think too badly of me. I'll pay you back some day. You will have another slice of luck, please Heaven.

"'ERNEST MEDDON.'

"Nice, pious kind of gentleman, don't you think, this major? The young fellow get better, and he started off in pursuit. But the major was really a clever man, and he had managed to leave false clues here and there, and this swindled party got tired of hunting for him. Besides, what would have been the use? The major, amongst his other charming vices, was a confirmed gambler; long before the avenger could reach him the money would be gone. So he went on from year to year until at last he got the homesickness, which is as bad as a camp fever, and he managed to make his way to England. He had forgotten all about the major; it is scarcely necessary to say that he didn't believe in the 'little girl;' she was a creation of the major's fertile imagination, no doubt. He had no idea of finding that gentleman, no particular wish, and it was quite by accident that he came across the major outside his own gate."

The young fellow reached forward and got another cigar and lit it leisurely, keeping his eyes fixed on the major's face; then he resumed slowly, puffing between his sentences with calm enjoyment.

"He found the major—in clover. Beautifully dressed—he had been dining out!—with a diamond stud in his shirt front; he lived in a nice house, well furnished, with a fifty guinea sideboard"—looking round the room—"handsome plate, nice pictures—oh, evidently in clover; while the young man himself was seedy and out at elbows, with nothing—no! a shilling in his pocket, and a penny roll in his stomach. Truly, vice is always punished, and virtue is triumphant; and honesty is always the best policy."

The major wiped the sweat from his face and stretched out a hand imploringly.

"And now you want to know what the injured man is going to do?"

The major broke in with a groan:

"Desmond, I swear to you, I—give you my word of honor, I—for Heaven's sake, don't be too hard upon me! It—it was a strong temptation! I—I did it in a moment. It wasn't for myself, but for—for my little girl—"

The young fellow laughed incredulously.

"Your little girl! Major, you are incorrigable. I might have believed in the little girl once—like a fool; I did; but not now. No, major; accomplished liar as you are, that plea will not deceive me. Shall I tell you what I am going to do?"

He rose as he spoke, and leaning against the mantel-shelf, looked down on the shrinking, groveling man.

"What ought I to do? Think of it! To leave the man who had made a fortune for him; to leave him to die out in the wilds of Trotter's Flat, and to seize the opportunity, when he was helpless on his back, to rob him of every penny of his share of the money he had risked his life to get! What should such a man deserve? Think of the time that the young fellow had to spend after his loss; think of the months and years of hard life, of semi-starvation, of ceaseless, toil, of hope deferred, and grim despair! What atonement can that scoundrel make? Give me an answer, major!"

The wretched man rose and leant against the table, clinging to it for support.

$5,000 Stakes to Walter Direct; Opening at Detroit

Geary, a London Horse, Takes Second Money in the 2:08 Pace.

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—Walter Direct, entered and driven by Ed F. Geers, of Memphis, Tenn., today at Grosse Pointe track won the $5,000 Chamber of Commerce stake for 2:24 class pacers, and lowered the record for the stake from 2:06¼ to 2:05¾.

The stake was the feature event of the opening day of the Twenty-Second Blue Ribbon meeting of the Detroit Driving Club, which inaugurates the Grand Circuit of 1905. Walter Direct was a heavy favorite, bringing $50 in the pools, with the field at $15. Hal C. had the pole for the first heat of the Chamber of Commerce stake, with Bonnie Wilkes and Walter Direct next in alignment. The horses scored several times before the word was given. At the first turn the Contractor took the lead and held it to the turn into the home stretch. Geers then made one of his famous drives and won the heat in record time, 2:05¾. Bonanza in the last 100 yards of the first heat took second place from the Contractor by a fine burst of speed.

In the next two heats Walter Direct was in front from the start.

Harwood was favorite for the first event on the day's programme, the 2:20 trot, at $50, with the field bringing $50 at first and then $35. The gelding took the first and second heats handily, but in the third heat broke at the first quarter and was last by yards before Driver Saunders got him in his stride. Minter won the heat by half a length from Pat T.

In the 2:08 pace the favorite, Don Carr, was defeated, Geary (owned by J. Johnston, of London, and driven by Havers James), took the lead at the quarter in the first heat and kept in front to the wire. In the second heat Geary led to the home stretch, where Don Carr shot into the lead and led for 75 yards. Then Miss Willimont came with a tremendous rush and 75 yards from the wire took the lead from Don Carr, winning the heat by half a length. Miss Willimont repeated her burst of speed in the stretch in the third heat, in which Geary led to the last eighth of a mile. The track was in excellent condition and about 5,000 saw the day's races. SEAWANHAKA CUP GOES BACK TO THE UNITED STATES AGAIN

American Challenger Manchester Takes the Third Race of Series.

Montreal, July 24.—The Seawanhaka cup for small yachts, which has been in the possession of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club since 1896, when G. H. Duggan captured it from the Seawanhaka Club at Oyster Bay, returns to the United States.

The American challenger, Manchester, owned by the Manchester, Mass., Yacht Club, today defeated the Canadian defender, Alexandra, of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, in the third race of the series, and by winning three straight races receives the cup once more for the United States.

Today's race, which was a beat to windward and return, was sailed in a strong breeze. The start was delayed until 3:55 by a big storm, which raged on Lake St. Louis, and although the storm died down a strong breeze prevailed throughout the race.

While the defender got across the line first, she did not keep the lead long, the Manchester sailing better and being a considerable distance when at the end of the first round the challenger continued to gain. When towards the end of the race an accident befell the rigging of the Alexandra, it was seen that all was up for the defender.

The Manchester finished 9 minutes and 37 seconds ahead of the Alexandra.

TEMERAIRE MAY BE CHALLENGER

Wins Third of the Canada Cup Trial Races—Mishaps at Rochester.

Toronto, July 24.—Temeraire, the Fife boat owned by Rear Commodore Nicholls, of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, made the third straight race of the Canada cup trials to her credit today.

The race was sailed south of the island in an 18-mile southwest breeze with a lumpy sea. The course was four knots to windward and return. She was sailed by Mr. Wedd; Zoraya by Fearnside, of Hamilton, and Naniwa, the Hamilton boat, by E. A. Burnside.

Temeraire proved to be much the better boat in the wind, and at the weather buoy was leading by six minutes. Zoraya was second, and Naniwa was badly beaten. On the spinnaker run home Temeraire increased her lead slightly.

The time: Temeraire—Start, 11:30; finished, 12:51:15, Zoraya—Start, 11:30; finished, 12:57:45. Naniwa—Start, 11:30; finished, 1:07:15.

Rochester, N. Y., July 24.—The third trial yacht race for the defender of the Canada cup took place off Summerville today, the Rochester winning over a nine-mile course by over thirty minutes.

The Iroquois cracked her boom and the Rochester split her mainsail. The Rochester would have won, however, if these mishaps had not occurred.

Another race was to have been sailed this afternoon, but was called off.

BOATING.

LONG DISTANCE MOTOR BOAT RACE.

Marblehead, Mass., July 24. — The motor boat Talisman, owned by William Saville, of Boston, today won a long distance ocean race from New York to Marblehead.

The Talisman crossed the finish line of the Eastern Yacht Club course here at 9:24:56, having completed the run of 280 miles from New York in 45 hours, 24 minutes and 56 seconds, according to official announcement.

When the Talisman finished none of the other eleven boats which started in the race at the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, New York, was in sight.

THE TURF.

YESTERDAY'S WINNERS.

At Brighton Beach—King Cole, 10 to 1; Walter Cleary, 5 to 1; Phidias, 13 to 5; Schulamite, even; Bad News, 5 to 2; Progress, 50 to 1.

At Fort Erie—Mus, 3 to 5; Heman Johnson, 2 to 1; Gay Lizzette, 9 to 5; Away, even; Conjuress, 7 to 5; Ruby Ring, 8 to 1.

At Latonia—The Laurel, 2 to 1; Red Leaf II., 11 to 10; Lilac, 13 to 5; Martin Brady, 7 to 1; Eldonose, 4 to 1; Orbicular, 6 to 5.

THE FINAL MATCHES FOR DAVIS TROPHY

London, July 24.—The final matches for the Dwight F. Davis international lawn tennis cup drew a good crowd to Wimbledon today. As was expected, Wm. A. Larned gave Hugh L. Doherty a good game.

Althoug beaten, Larned played the best tennis he has shown in this country, and it was necessary to play fifty games before Doherty was able to settle matters.

In the second match Holcombe Ward was to have played S. H. Smith, but as he had suffered a family bereavement, William J. Clothier was substituted. He gave Smith a hard game, but the Englishman was too steady for him. Clothier tried several new services, but nothing he did could overcome Smith.

In the play at Wimbledon, which lasted three days, the Englishmen won 15 sets to the Americans' 8, and 132 games to the Americans' 101. Summaries:

Hugh L. Doherty, England, beat William A. Larned, America, 6—4, 3—6, 6—8, 6—4, 6—2.

S. H. Smith, England, beat Wm. J. Clothier, America, 3—6, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3.

Mortimore Captures The Rechnitzer Cup.

The handsome silver cup offered by Mr. Ejnar Rechnitzer for competition among the seniors of the London Rowing Club was last evening won by Mr. Arthur Mortimore, who defeated Mr. Gordon Ingram by half a length.

At the tournament held recently under the auspices of the Rowing Club, Mortimore and Ingram competed for the prize, the former winning, but the race was not allowed, owing to a foul by Mortimore. Last night it was rowed again on the course just west of the Cove bridge, the distance being three-quarters of a mile without a turn. Ingram got away in front of Mortimore, and maintained a slight lead until he was within a short distance of the finishing line, when Mortimore made a spurt and came home in front by half a length. Both Mortimore and Ingram did their utmost to win, and both were pretty well done out when they finished.

Mr. A. Tillmann was the starter, and Mr. Rechnitzer was judge. The cup was subsequently presented to the winner by Rev. Canon Dann.

THINK THE GIANTS ARE BEING SOAKED

New York Fans Believe McGraw's Team Is Not Getting a Fair Show.

New York, July 22.—For the first time in the history of the polo grounds beer glasses were thrown at an umpire in evidence of the crowd's condemnation of the official's decisions. Klem was the umpire at whom the glasses were hurled and it will no doubt be accepted as additional proof that McGraw and his players are rowdies for fair.

It cannot be denied that the throwing of missiles at an umpire is very reprehensible, but there are always two sides to a story. The fellows who shot glasses at the autocrat of the diamond should have been trotted out of the field, but it cannot be denied that they had reason to feel very indignant at the judge of play. From the time the game started till it was practically completed Johnstone permitted the Pirates to argue with him over any decision that did not please them. At one time Clarke, Wagner, Brain, Flaherty and Peitz were in a cluster about Johnstone, all swinging their arms and talking in bunches. Not a man of them was disciplined. But when McGann and Donlin questioned a decision by Klem, off the field for them.

But, say the upholders of the umpire system, Klem showed that he would enforce the rules, while Johnstone proved that he was too lax. Very good, retort the champions, but why should there be a lax and a severe system of umpiring and both in the same game? Why should the New Yorks be deprived of two of their heaviest hitters in a close game, and their chances of winning practically killed, while the Pittsburgs, who were more guilty than the Giants, are permitted to retain all their strong players to the end of the game? What would have been the effect on the Pittsburg team had Clarke and Wagner been put out of the game for kicking in the second inning? And why should one man be put out of the game for kicking in the fifth inning and another one who kicks in the second inning be permitted to remain in the game to the finish?

In the game on the preceding day Johnstone put four members of the New York team off the coaching line for trival offenses, and there seems to be a singular unanimity on the part of the umpires in disciplining the Giants and allowing the other fellows to do as they please and escape without punishment.

There is a strong belief in this neck of woods that the umpires are acting under instructions from Pulliam to see to it that the Giants are held in check. Of course, Mr. Pulliam veiled his order with a plea for the elimination of rowdyism on the ball field, and the result is that the Giants are a target for all sorts of idiotic decisions and unfair discrimination.

McGraw was told at the time he won his case from Pulliam in court at Boston that he would regret having made the president of the league look so small and incompetent in the eyes of the baseball public, and the prophecy is apparently being fulfilled.

PROTEST WAS NOT ENTERED

Conservatives Will Not Attempt to Unseat New Works Minister.

Although there had been considerable talk for some time of a protest against the re-election of Mr. Hyman as the member for London, it has come to nothing.

Yesterday was the last day on which the Conservatives could make the step, and nothing was done.

Mr. Gray, the twice-defeated candidate of the party, was very keen to have a protest lodged against Mr. Hyman. In fact, he had stated openly that an attempt would be made to unseat the new Minister of Public Works, but the cooler heads of the party prevailed, and it was decided to allow Mr. Hyman to enjoy his well-earned honors unmolested.

FOURTH LARGEST CIRCUS

Immense Growth of the Norris & Rowe Greater Circus.

For the season of 1905 Messrs. Norris & Rowe have decided to step into their proper place in the ranks of the big circus owners of the world. By earnest endeavor they have now laid secure the foundation for the perpetuating of an honorable name to their succeeding generation, a name they hope will live forever as synonymous for all that is good and worthy in the realm of the white tents. For the past seventeen years they have been very successful in building up their fortunes, until at present they have established an institution that ranks fourth in size with the greatest amusement enterprises in the world. The profits accumulated in all these years have been taken from the banks and expended for complete new equipment for their "Greater Circus," and the latter will be found to be all that the name implies. Mammoth new tents have been purchased; a parade of all new special features will be given. Sensational riding acts by male and female expert equestrians. A group of Japanese swordsmen will be shown. Marvelous and daring are the flights through the air of the aerial gymnasts, the feats of cleverness of the equilibrists, posturers, jugglers, leapers, vaulters, the skill of the wild animal trainers, and the interest bound to be aroused by the new double menageries. Exhibitions will be given at London Monday, July 31.

CANADA IS A GREAT COUNTRY SAY MEN OF THE GRIDIRON CLUB

Cy Warman Tells of Washington Correspondents' Trip Through West.

Canada has looked with interest upon the trip, just concluded, of the Gridiron Club, or, in other words, the Washington press correspondents, from the Province of Quebec to British Columbia and back. The excursion was the project of the Western Canada Immigration Association, an institution representative of prominent business men of the Northwest, and actively supported by the railroads, and was conducted by Mr. T. M. Knappen, the efficient secretary of the association. Mr. Cy Warman, author and journalist, of this city, who accompanied the scribes of his native land on the journey, was seen by The Advertiser last evening and spoke of the trip in warmest terms of appreciation.

The Gridiron Club is composed of representatives of the leading journals of the United States, whose professional duty is to "do" the news of the Capitol. If Western Canada, or "The Last West," as it has been aptly called by Mr. Knappen, had invited Uncle Sam to send over a committee of men most capable of summing up for him the value of the Canadian West, he could not have done better than have sent the Washington correspondents. Therefore, from the Canadian standpoint also the excursion was of inestimable value, and will take a prominent place in the history of the settlement of "The Last West."

Entering Canada by way of Niagara, the correspondents were taken over the Grand Trunk to Toronto and Montreal, on a special train, which covered 74 miles an hour. They then spent an evening in Ottawa before going on board the special C. P. R. train which was waiting to take them through the west. Reaching Winnipeg the excursion proceeded over the Canadian Northern to Battleford. Taking the C. P. R. again at Warman — a town, by the way, which was named after the well-known Canadian author —the correspondents went west through Regina.

"Returning via the Crow's Nest Pass from the coast," said Mr. Warman, "the correspondents saw the great coal fields and the awful desolation wrought by the mountain-slide at Frank. They also saw the irrigated wheat fields, and after an outdoor strawberry festival at Lethbridge, they went over the border to Minneapolis. Thence proceeding to Sault Ste. Marie by the Soo Line, they passed on to North Bay, where they took the G. T. R. for the south."

Accounts of this magnificent excursion are now appearing in journals all over the United States. Here is what Mr. Warman told The Advertiser, and, as can well be understood, Mr. Warman's opinion is worth more than a little:

"I was invited to join the Washington correspondents on their trip. I presume, because I have traveled so much in Canada during the seven years that I have lived on this side of the border. For four years past I have devoted much of my time to writing of Canada, and, between facts and fiction, have had a good deal to say about this country in the magazines and newspapers of the United States. It was my good fortune therefore to receive an invitation for the trip. I counted it good fortune, because the Washington correspondents are the finest lot of newspaper men I ever met. One learns a great deal from observing, at work or at play, those who do everything in their own and always in an original way.

"It seems almost a sacrilege to refer constantly to benefits derived from their writings. Yet I presume that in this commercial age we may be pardoned for dwelling on that. To my mind, the best thing about the excursion was the fact that this score of American journalists have come to know Canada, to appreciate the value and the vastness of this waking empire of the north. For the rest of their natural lives, whenever a question or matter is up that in any way affects Canada, these molders of public opinion will be prepared, ready, willing, aye, eager, to say: 'There is a great country, and the people are just like our own folks.' This latter fact, indeed, seemed to impress the correspondents all the while, and they kept constantly remarking that they were unable to regard Canadians as foreigners, as strangers. This was especially true of the west, where their welcome was always warm. I do not say this at the expense of Eastern Canada, for the whole Dominion made good with the Washington boys, but somehow up there in the open, in the wake of the warm chinook, the people attain a greater speed than they do farther east.

"The correspondents saw the Canadian Pacific Railway. And we who knew tried to tell them what a wilderness was there before the advent of this railway. They saw the Canadian Northern, and wild lands selling as high as $20 an acre along this new line. They saw the vast unscarred fields that will shortly be traversed by the Grand Trunk Pacific, and they understood why the people of Canada stand back of the Dominion Government in its efforts to throw still another bridge across the continent.

"Just here I may say that I am unable to understand the argument advanced by some Canadian newspapers that the development of the territory to be traversed by the Lake Superior section of the Grand Trunk Pacific will be retarded by reason of the land grant to the company. The experience is that wherever a railway gets hold of land, self-interest prompts it to exploit and develop that land, which is absolutely worthless without the railway. The railway immediately gives value to all the land, public and private, in the district which is served by the road, so that the Grand Trunk Pacific will create an asset for the Province of Ontario which could not be created in any other way.

"Of all they saw they wrote, and I am now following the suggestion of a Toronto business man in trying to arrange to have their letters published in pamphlet form. It seems to me that almost every live Canadian business man would like to have a book containing these estimates of their great country by men who wrote as they pleased and painted it as they saw it.

"In connection with this tour of the Washington correspondents, it will interest you to know that the idea originated in the fertile mind of Mr. T. M. Knappen, a newspaper man, but now secretary of the Western Canada Immigration Association. He not only organized, but conducted the tour, from the private Pullmans to the force of five colored boys, each an expert in his own line. From start to finish there was scarcely a hitch in the whole programme. All the Canadian railways and railway officials did what railway men invariably do on such occasions—they did their level best.

"The last whirl, from Toronto to the Falls, on a G. T. R. splendid special train, on which the railway served up an elaborate luncheon, with flowers and three glasses, lakes and fields and flag stations gliding backward below the window at the rate of a mile a minute, put them over the border, feeling that Canada, her people, and her railways, are all right."

Mr. Warman showed the reporter the badge worn by the correspondents during the trip. On a button was shown a setting sun, underneath which the words, "The Last West," were written. Pendant from the button were tiny Canadian and American flags entwined. Mr. Warman also showed the button presented to the travelers by the city of Winnipeg. It bore a picture of the Winnipeg city hall and the motto, "Winnipeg Welcomes the Washington Correspondents."

14-YEAR-OLD ELOPES

Port Bruce Girl Said to Have Eloped With Port Stanley Man.

St. Thomas, July 25. — Mrs. Mowers, of Port Bruce, was in the city Saturday evening, and interviewed the police with regard to the whereabouts of her 14-year-old daughter, Florence Mowers, who, it is claimed, left her mother's home in Port Bruce on Saturday morning with a man named Walter Weir, who belongs to Port Stanley. Mrs. Mowers says her daughter left a note, which read: "Good-bye, mother. Think of me as dead. We are going to the other side to get married. There's no use to follow."

The couple went from Port Bruce to Port Stanley, in a buggy driven by a farmer's boy, hired for the purpose, and took the train for St. Thomas, reaching here about 6 o'clock. From here it is supposed they took a train to Detroit.

Weir is about 35 years of age, and is said to have a divorced wife living. The girl is said to be rather good-looking.

A PUBLIC TOOTH BRUSH

A noted dermatologist says: "The time is coming when an unsterilized public hair brush will be as rare as a public tooth brush." The reason is that dirty hair brushes spread dandruff, and true dandruff is now known to be a contagious disease that will, sooner or later, cause baldness. A writer in Medical Review of Reviews says: "School children should know that it is dirty to use another's hair brush." Newbro's Herpicide renders public hair brushes harmless by destroying the dandruff microbe. A delightful hair dressing. Gives wonderful results.

OLD BOYS WILL "THROW ON AIRS"

Toledoans Coming in Special Vestibuled Train, With Band and Badges.

The London Old Boys of Toledo are not going to be behind the associations from other places at the big reunion next month. They are coming in a special Grand Trunk vestibule train, are bringing a band, and will "throw on airs" in other ways. A Toledo exchange says:

"The London Old Boys are going to give Toledo a whole lot of advertising in Canada when they go to London to attend the annual homegoing event. London, Ont., is a city of about 60,000, and it is expected that the number of visitors will almost equal the population. The Toledo contingent is going to take the Newsboys' Band as the representative of the Toledo Newsboys' Association, and they purpose among other things to let the Canadians know all about the splendid work being done here and elsewhere in the United States by Commodore John E. Gunckel. Then the Old Boys will all wear badges bearing the Toleo stamp, and a number of novelties in the way of decorations have been suggested, including colored umbrellas, surmounted by toy balloons, suggestive of Roy Knabenshue's wonderful airship, Toledo No. 1.

"The Grand Trunk Railroad will put on a special train to accommodate the Toledo crowd. The train will be made up of some of the Grand Trunk's best vestibuled equipment. It will leave the terminal station at 8:30 on the morning of Aug. 6, and will be run through to London with as few stops as possible. It will be the first through Grand Trunk train ever run out of Toledo, and of itself will be quite an event for this city.

"It is expected that fully 200 Toledoans alone will join in the excursion, and judging from the number of letters the committee has received from surrounding towns, there will be an additional hundred from various points in Northern Ohio. This means a well filled train.

"Special invitations are extended to former residents of London now residing in Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, and Lima, and no doubt there will be quite a representation from each of these cities.

"Besides being the annual homegoing of the London Old Boys it will be the 50th anniversary of the incorporation of London as a city. It is going to be the greatest event in the history of the Canadian city, and the name of Toledo will be made more prominent than ever before on foreign soil."
