I gave time a hear, and he make at me, with the fire of revenge and rage in the eye. I climbed up a small treet and while the racal make an ansuccessful attempt to follow me. I rebessed my gun and sent another charge directly into his mouth, which gave him a had cough, and in a short time he staggered a few passe from the tree and fell to the ground quite dead. I then went back to the cliff to secure my yellow flower, and, during that alternoon, with the aid of my nong-dengged the hear to my cabin. In that sish, with a passe broker from the edge, gentlemen, you have a mixture of moose tongue, moose lips, and moose, brains. I spent stearly a month moose husting last Wanter, in company with a cou le of indians, and though the watwe was deep, the crust hard, and our more shore in good order; our dogs brave and strong, and moose were numerous, we only killed about sixteen. I only brought home the heade, (while the fallians were assisted with the skine and haunches,) but I was more than paid for all my trouble in the way of hard travelling, and cold elepting for in one of the moose yards that we visited, I found a specimen of langtand would give a good deal of money if they could have it in their great gardens. As to that meet in the white dish, which you all seem to eat with such a relish, I think you will be surprised to learn that it is nothing but between that it meet for the tails as the for company paid him for the skins of the animals. I never trapped for beaver myself, but I have for every paid in the shore of Hudson's Ray, and though I bought it of an indian I had to pay hum as much for the tails as the for company paid him for the skins of the animals. I never trapped for beaver myself, but I have for every apped for beaver myself, but I have for every and made and the safinon upon which you have been feasting, gentlemen, you cutting down for his house, such beautiful trees as the birch, malberry, willow, and poples, before they are half grown. As to the salmon upon which you have been feasting, gentlemen, you know as much about that pirticular individual as I do, since you saw him while yet in his native element. The men who hire my fishing grounds pay, me so much for every fish they lake, and self them at a great profit in Quebec, and even in Moutreal. From the fisheries on this shore are the people of Canada exclusively supplied with the salmont, and when we have a good session our. and. As to taking them with these pretty fires, which you, gentlemen, always carry in your picket-books, I never could understand how you manage to deceive so sensible a fish as the salmon. Of one thing I am certain: if you expect to take any of the salmen in this region with those little lines and hould, you will be much mistaken. You will have to go down to the sayuenay where I am told the fish do not know any better than to deceive the country of the little deceived by worr comming arts. But if I was You will have to go down to support that to be deceived by your cunning arts. But if I was ever to follow fishing as you do, it seems to me, that instead of rod, yellow and blue feathers, I should cover my hook with the bright berries and bude which you may find upon some trees even during the fishing season. This last remark of our host, convinced us that he was indeed possessed with a ruling passion, and we, of course, gratified ourselves by humoring him to the length of our patience. He not only monopolized the conversation during supper, but he did most of the talking until bed-time. We spent the night under his roof, sleeping upon bear-saves, agreed on the floor; and, after an early breakfast, we hade him adieu, and pursued our course down the St. Lawrence. National Intelligencer.

The Working and in England, gives some contrasts, which show that within two centuries. English society has made great advances in the comforts of the lower classes, and the diminution of pauperism. A recent writer sets this matter in a strong light. He shows that the entire amount of incomes assessed to the property tax in 1812 was £21,225,000, that assessed in 1843 was nearly £57,000,000; being an increase during the thirty-six years, of nearly £35,775,000, or 168 per cent, or more than 41 per cent annually. And by tables, in which the incomes of the higher and lower classes are presented, he shows that the lowest classes have increased fifty per cent, more than the highest. Then as to deposits in Savings Banks in England. Water and Scotland, these entire Sopulation; in 1848 they were £1 to. 11d. for each individual. Again, the Friendly Societies in Great Britain are in number, about 44,000, and consist of one million six hundred thousand members, with a grose annual income of £2,500,000, and an accumulated capital of six million four hundred thousand pounds. Then there are the enrolled Bonefit Societies of Great Britain, with a capital of nine million pounds, belonging to 2,500,000 members. Thus while the Income Tax Returns prove that the number of the lower middle class has rapidly increased, since it possesses an increase. Income of £13,700,000 per annual, the condition of the Societies appeals, in a voice which cannot be misunderstood, in fivo of the improved habits and belared condition of the humbler working classes; since those classes have scen-mulated in these institutions, intended existingly for their use and advantage, no less a capital that £42,000,000 sterling, as a resource against sickness, accident and old age. Thisy the moral improvement indicated by such a state of things is a population of 10,000,000 in England and Wales, the amment raised by poor rates was £6,500,000. In 1819, with a population in England and Wales, the amment raised by poor rates was £6,500,000. THE WORKINGMAN IN ENGLAND .- Macaulay
