Will you please explain? asked The World.

"Well, you see the proprietors posted notices that after next Saturday our wages would be reduced 10 per cent. If we refused to accept that would be practically a lock-out. We therefore unahimously decided to quit work at once unless the notices were taken down, which the Globe and Mail people peremptorily refused to

"Is the Toronto typographical union strong at present?" was asked.
"It never was more so. Of the daily papers the Telegram is the only one real non-union office. All of the Globe compositors belong to the union except two, and these two are only old pensioners."

[The World will not undertake to explain what a pensioner around a newspaper office is].

"We do not think," continued the person addressed, "that we get too much pay considering the long hours that we put in each day. On the contrary, we think we are underpaid, and instead of a reduction we should get an increase." ers of the strikers who were seen spoke in a similar strain.

The strike will not be confined to the newspaper offices. Several of the leading job printing establishments have resolved to reduce the weekly scale of wages from $11 to $10 for fifty-four hours work per week. The Mail job department, the Christian Guardian, the Presbyterian and other offices will introduce the reduced scale next Saturdry, but the men will not go to work this morning. It will there fore be seen that the strike will be almost general. At this writing it is impossible to say what the result will be in the job offices or how many of them will insist on

At 2 o'clock this morning the Globe informed The World that they had 14 men at work and that they hoped to get out a good eight page paper. The Mail at the same hour had five men at work, one of them being Mr. Dyas, their advertising Pickets were stationed on each of the two offices and they patrolled the approaches to their various entrances. They eyed every one that came along and were ready to "note" any "rat" who might enter. The pickets en their beats this morning had no light job, as the air was quite mission in Africa.

At The World Office. The notice of the reduction was posted up in The World office Saturday noon, At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the proprietor met the men in the news-room. He quoted the following from the constitution of the printers' union:

Article xii, sec. 3—No strike shall be ordered by the union until all reasonable attempts at arbitration have failed.

In the matter of hours The World compositors have a pronounced advantage over the men on the twe big dailies. The World compositors do not have to set type in the afternoon, as but one edition is issued each morning. The men therefore have nothing to do during the afternoon but distribute the type they require for the night's work. They begin to set type at 7 o'clock in the evening, and have a straight stretch of work until 3/30 in the morning. Arrived at the Jarvis street lacrosse grounds the drill and calisthenic competition took place. The drill judges were Capt. Manley, Lieut. Hughes and Lieut. J. B. Maclean. The three schools which competed for the handsome banner presented by Mayor Boswell were the Wellesley, Ryerson and Dufferin schools. The competition between them was very keep, and Ryeseon and Dufferin schools. The competition between them was very keen, and it was hard to say which was the best drilled company. The Wellesley boys had the advantage of size and age and they carried off the banner. The Dufferin company took second honors. The most interesting part of the afternoon's proceedings was the girls' competition in calisthenics. It was a wonderfully pretty sight to see the rows of little girls (and some full blown blossoms, too) going through the graceful motions. The judges were Mr. Scott, Capt. Baker and Corp.-Major Donnelley, late of the lat Life Guards. The first prize, a handsome marble clock, presented by Robt. Hay, M.P., was won by the George street girls under the leadership of Miss Grey. The medals for third book classes were also won by George street. The medals for second book classes went to the Phase street school, under Miss Sturrock. The proceedings

A Preminent Independent.

It is well known that Quebec contains, and has for a long time contained a strong to the national policy—the only thing that independence element amongst its public he is talking about. Equally inconsistent was an ardent advocate of independence with himself is Mr. Blake, who, and so was once Mr. Lucius Seth Hunting he followed up his Aurora ton. It is not so generally remembered that Sir Alexander Galt, our late high would have declared for protection and commissioner in London, was about the dependent commercial policy for Canada, policy of British statesmen in promoting confederation. The St. John Telegraph quite equal to that of the American patriot has done the cause of independence good who said that he was in favor of the Maine service by republishing part of Sir Alexan law, but against its enforcement. We like der's speech on the subject in the house of to recall now and then a remark of the commons in 1870. Mr. Blake did one thing of some importance: he asked for and secured certain changes in the govern corgeneral's instructions. He 'ought to have seen that his Aurora convictions, it he has not lost them, should have compelled him to have gone much further.

Col. Denison's opposition to even the mention of independence appears to have its origin in an overflow of the military spirit, along with rather too vivid recollections of certain events of seventy or a hundred years ago. And the Globe is right in replying that our volunteers are citizens first and soldiers afterwards. Something may be allowed, however, for the fervor of his feelings on the subject. He sees some people advocating American democracy as the one quick and ready cure for all the ills that Canada suffers from. A prevailing belief is that to drop our own system and to adopt the American system would not elevate the standard of public morality very much; but still the attempt is made to cram it down our throats that if we want to devolope public honesty, and to become a highly moral and respectable community, all we have to do is to adopt the public morality very much; but still the attempt is made to cram it down our throats that if we want to devolope public honesty, and to become a highly moral and respectable community, all we have to do is to adopt the public morality very much; but still the attempt is made to cram it down our throats that if we want to devolope public honesty, and to become a highly moral and respectable community, all we have to do is to adopt the public morality very much; but still the attempt is made to cram it down our throats that if we want to devolope the first of th

NEW YORK, July 5 .- The stage at Wallack's theatre looked for a time this after oon as if a cyclone had struck it. Half s lozen men swinging to one chair went carousing against the spectators on the stage, upsetting furniture and plunging wildly through stacks of scenery. Lulu Hurst, the alleged "magnetic girl," was at the bottom of the storm. A score of solemnlooking men sat in a minstrel-like circle around the stage waiting for the phen around the stage waiting for the phenomenon. The girl is a fair type of the middl class young lady of the far South. Above the medium height, magnificently formed, apparently without an ounce of superfluous flesh about her, she would be taken for an athlete but for the soft, peachy complexion. Her hands are rather better of the soft, peachy complexion. Her hands are rather large and the wrist and forearm are beautifully molded and thoroughly developed. A close-fitting black silk dress made the girlish face look older than the sixteen years she pleads guilty to, but the fluffy bangs that strayed down over the fair forehead served as an offset to the too mature dress. Her manners are as simple as those of any farmer's daughter, and the high keyed tone has a plaintive cadence peculiar to country villages. Throughout the experiments she laughed in a good natured way as though the entire affair was a huge joke.

way as though the entire affair was a huge joke.

The "phenomenon's" manager announced that the force exerted by the girl was inexplicable, and then called for an umbrella. The owner of the umbrella raised it and stood under it with the young lady. Both had hold of the handle. The borrowed umbrella yanked itself downward, hit the owner under the ear, pounded about the head and finally as he struggled to hold it steady passed him over before a dozen grave looking editors and landed him in an ash heap just off the stage. To the onlookers it seemed as though the phenomenon was pushing the man around by force of muscular strength. Several muscular men pushing the man around by force of muscular strength. Several muscular men tried to hold a billiard cue, but the athletic maiden was too much for them. A 200-pound scientist sat down upon a chair; Miss Hurst placed the palms of her hands against its sides and lifted him off the floor. As the chair began to raise the observer could not fail to note how the fine muscles in the forearm grew rigid and stood out in little cords. Half a dozen men tried in vain to press to the ground a chair which she held aloft. Back and forward over the stage they struggled, but she was too strong for them and came out victorious.

The young lady up to eight months ago lived in the back woods in the most benighted part of Central Georgia. The girl is extremely pretty and seems honest in he ability to explain her power.

Wilkins and his Dinak.

From the Cornwall Freeholder.

To know how to swim affords a man any amount of pleasure, and at the same time puts him in a position to save himself under certain circumstances. There is a man in Cornwall who is glad that he knows so much about swimming. His name is Frank Wilkins. He invited a young lady to accompany him to the firemen's excursion on Saturday night. She accepted the to accompany him to the firemen's excurto accompany him to the firefield Sectors sion on Saturday night. She accepted the bid. They enjoyed themselves immensely on the boat. Everything was pleasant and enjoyable to them. They fed on oranges and peannts, swallowed lemonade, sipped sixtle angeleted si and peanuts, swallowed lemonade, styped cider, related little anecdotes and sung sweet lullabys until the steamer landed at the upper wharf, when Mr. Wilkins and his lady friend were about the first to disembark. When he reached the wharf he offered her his arm. She linked it with hers. They exchanged a few loving words and started. A splash followed. Then a howl and a scream and a rush of spectators to the water's edge. They had walked off the wharf into the calm waters of the St. Lawrence. The crowd peered into the water. There was Wilkins and his Dinah. His arm clutched her waist. He was try-

A HEART CAPTURED.

BY S. B. "But Guy," said Kate Arden, onthusiastically, "she is the sweetest girl you ever saw-exactly like a human daisy." Now, Miss Kate Arden herself was one of the prettiest and most coaxing of feminine elves-a dark-haired, hazel-eyed girl of seventeen, with a carnation glow on her cheeks, and lips so red and ripe that they suggested the idea of kissing almost as a

The flush on Georgie Claremont's cheek grew more vivid than before. She was a golden-haired, exquisite blonde, with deep blue eyes, large-and lustrous, and hair like eyeil of rippled gold.

"I see it all," interrupted Arden; "because I was foolish enough to conceive an antipathy against a girl I had never seen. So I have been making love, after all, to an heiress."

"Very well-but don't breathe a word of it, to any living soul. Now we must make haste and dress for the exhibition. Here are the white saskes and the fresh ity wreaths all ready. Oh, Katie! to shink that to-day we bid farewell forever to the joys and sorrow of our school life!" "By the way, Katie," said Guy Arden, when the varied scenes of the school ex-when the varied scenes of the school exhibition was over, and his sister joined him on the lawn beneath the feathery, drooping sprays of the old elms; "which of the girls was your Miss Claremont? The little dark one with the turned-up nose and the hair dressed in rolls a charge of the elementary classes here under Mademoiselle Delancey."

Mr. Arden raised his eyebrows.

"Of course it will be as you say, my dear," he said. "Are your things ready—packed for the carriage?"

several sulky allusions to "penniless up-starts" and "upper servants." Georgie's starts' and "upper servants." Georgie's color deepened, but she did not notice the rude expression otherwise.

Arden bit his lips and resolved to vouchsafe very little of his attention to a young lady who imagined that the world of society could only revolve on a golden axis.

Presently the heiress rose and swept across the floor, dropping her laced pockethandkerchief as she passed.

"My handkerchief, Millie Danvers," she said, contemptuously, as if addressing a mental.

The soi-disant Millie Danvers was abo meekly to stoop for the handkerchief, when Mr. Arden anticipated her action. "Thank you, Mr. Guy," the heires said, sharply; "but it's Millie Danver's busi ness to wait on people!"

Guy Arden purposely averted his gaze from Millie's face; he did not wish to be a witness to her mortified blushes.

So things went on for several days. So things went on for several days. The more the gentle governess seemed to shrink into herself, the more insolent became the pug-nosed little heiress. Even Katie seemed disposed to overlook the seldomized claims of Miss Danvers.

"You have made no arrangements for Miss Danvers in the disposition of the carriage for to-morrow's pic-nic, Kate," said her brother one evening as he sat listening to her plans.

o her plans.
"Oh, she won't want to go," said Kate

"Governesses don't expect to be taken out with the guests of the family," said Miss Claremont complacently eyeing her jeweled fingers.

Arden bit his lip.
"Very well; if she does not go I remain at home."
"Then we shall have to make room for er! How provoking!" exclaimed Katie.
"Of one thing you may be certain," said Guy Arden; "among all your guests there will not be one so refined and attractive as Millie Danvers."

Mille Danvers."

The heiress gave an audible sniff.
"I do believe the governess has bewitched him," said she.

But Guy condescended to take no notice of her remarks, and walked off toward the shrubberies, where Miss Danvers was ensured their elementary. gaged in giving her pupils their elementary lesson, in botany.

Before the month was over Guy Arden formally capitulated before the batteries of the governess's sapphire blue eyes.

"You are not in earnest, Mr. Arden?"
"Indeed, I am in earnest, Millie. I love you; I would fain make you my wife."

The azure eyes dropped, the cheeks became deep-dyed with scarlet.

"Tell me, Millie, do you love me?" persisted the young man, stealing his arn round the slender waist of the governess

"Yes," she murmured.
"Then that is enough!" "No, it is not enough, Guy; we have deceived you," faltered the girl, clinging close to him. "I am Georgie Claremont.

"But, Kasie, strely he doesn't know that—that—that—"

"That you fell so desperately in love with him the night that you and I sat on the back seats at the Cooper institute and heard him deliver that splendid political oration? No he does not know that!"

"And he must not know that it would die with shame if he would learn that I had given my heart unasked!"

"But Georgie, what are we to do?"

"I'll teil you what we are to do, in the due process of time, Katie. Will you grant me one favor?"

"One is amply sufficient," laughed Georgie. "Yerty, Cara mia, if you choose."

"One is amply sufficient," laughed Georgie. "The worst pile tumors cured in ten days, rupture in one month. Pamphlet two (3ct.) stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

When Guy Arden came into the drawing-room late that afternoon Katie was ready to present him with much pomp and oeremony to Miss Claremont.

Millie got up and courtesied stiffly.

"It's a 'orrid' o't day," said Millie.

"Yes," said Mr. Arden, eyeing her with a curious expression upon his countenance; it is rather warm: Kate, you have not presented me to your other friend."

"Jupiter Ammon!" thought Mr. Arden; "but she's a beauty."

And he sat resolutely down to talk to the governess, in spite of Katie'e very transparents devices to win his attention exclusively to the brown faced damsel of the rings and bracelets.

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid that causes the cheek toglow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles. Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Handis, Sere or Chapped Lips, Barbers' Etch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes, from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a dedicious softness; producing a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOYTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

An Answer to Ald. Brandon's Affidavit. Mayor Boswell has received the following communication from T. T. Flagler, president of the Holly engine company of Lockport, N.Y.:

Lockport, N.Y.:

To His Worship the Mayor and City Council of the city of Toronto-Gentlemen—At a meeting of the city council of Toronto, held on the evening of June 16, a resolution was adopted requesting the judge of the county court to inquire into the truth of certain allegations that offers had been made by or on behalf of the Holly Manufacturing company to certain aldermen to act dishonestly relative to the tenders for pumping machinery then and there pending before the council. It appears the judge declares himself unable to grant a hearing upon said charges until Sept. 2 next. In behalf of the Holly Manufacturing company, I desire to represent to yourself and the council that this postponement is a grievcompany, I desire to represent to yoursel and the council that this postponement is a grievous wrong to the company. I deny in the most emphatic terms the truth of these charges made by parties interested in the defeat of our tender for pumping engines, and adroitly designed to accomplish that object. I respectfully ask that your honorable body arrange for investigations as soon as practicable. I ask that it be full and searching, and include all the tenders for pumping machinery. In view, also, of the publication of these false and infamous charges by means of the press throughout Canada and the United States, I submit that this denial calling for an immediate investigation be given the same publicity. Awaiting the action of your honorable body in the premises, I am, respectfully yours,

T. T. Flagler arrived here from Lockport

T.T. FLAGLER, President.

- Mr. Flagler arrived here from Lockport Saturday for the purpose of endeavoring to have the investigation made by the county judge at the earliest possible moment. He called on the mayor, who informed him of the action already taken by the city council and the impossibility of having the investigation held earlier than September.

From the Detroit Free Press, Gaisel jumped away with a lead of half a length and increased the lead another half length at the one-half mile point. Then Ress and Plaisted put on a spurt and drew up level, but the "ponies" drew away again and led by a quarter of a length to the first turn. They squared away for home in advance of Ross and his mate, but the latter came with a rush opposite the boat house and sheved the stern tip of their shell in front. Plaisted was feathering very high and was rowing in such form that he tokened an early collapse, but he stuck gamely to his work and was by no means a passenger in the boat as yet. Gaisel and Plaisted, the latter being by this time in a deplorable condition and pulling solely on his gameness. Wallace was equal to the emergency, however, and he showed that he was prepared to row not only Ten Eyck and Gaisel but Plaisted as well, and every sweep of his powerful arms sent his shell farther in advance, and he led by two lengths to the third turn. Plaisted was now a passenger in his boat, and Ross carried him through in fine style, winning a great race by a length and a half in the fast time of 19.05.

Toronto, the metropolis of Ontario, and by all odds the most linglish and loyal city in Canada, has been celebrating the semi-entennial of her founding with great eclat the past week. Professor Godwin Smith, the eminent litterateur, has noted in his paper, the Week, that on gala days when flags are greatly used in decoration the Canadians are prone to mingle the Stars and Stripes with the Union Jack. The professor, of course, does net find fault with this. On the contrary. Mr. Smith's chief fault has been that his views are too broad and his spirit too cosmopolitan for the size of the country if we expressed our full mind in attempting to help the professor out; but one very plausible supposition would be that as a treat many Americans would go over to help the Torontonians eat peanuts, drink lemonade and shoot fire-orackers for a week, the commaingling of the fags were and Stripes with the British.
