MASONRY FOR RAILWAY BRIDGES.

No hammering will be allowed on any stone after it is set. Each stone must be set upon a full bed of fresh mortar, the broadest bed down, and brought to a firm and level bearing without spalls or spinners.

BACKING.—The backing shall consist of large-size, well-shaped stones laid in full mortar beds, and breaking joints so as to thoroughly bond the work together. The spaces between the larger stones shall not be more than 6 inches in width, and shall be thoroughly filled with small stones and spalls laid flat, and all spaces flushed full with mortar or good cement grout. The courses shall correspond with the face stone, but may be made up in part by two thicknesses, providing no stone less than 8 inches thick be used. In cases approved by the engineer, satisfactory Portland cement concrete with large stones embedded in the concrete may be used for backing.

SECOND-CLASS MASONRY.—Second-class masonry shall be laid in cement mortar. The face stones shall be rock facial; no projections over 3 inches, edges pitched to a straight line, shall have parallel beds and rectangular joints. The beds and joints for 8 inches back from face shall be dressed to lay not over ¼-inch joint. The stones need not be laid up in regular course, but shall be laid level on their natural beds, shall be well bonded, having at least one header 3 feet 6 inches long to every three stretchers with joints well broken; no stone shall be less than 8 inches thick, and no stone shall measure in its least horizontal dimensions less than 12 inches, nor less than its thickness.

BACKING.—The backing shall consist of well-shaped stones not less than 6 inches thick, and of which at least one-half shall measure 3 cubic feet, to be laid in full mortar beds, with joints well broken, well bonded together and with the face stone. All spaces to be thoroughly filled with small stones and cement mortar.

THIRD-CLASS MASONRY.—Third-class masonry shall be laid dry or in mortar according to the direction of the engineer. It shall consist of good quarry stone laid upon the natural beds and roughly squared on joints, beds and faces, the stones breaking joints at least 6 inches; the walls shall be bound together by headers, occupying one-fifth of the area of the face of the wall front and rear, and extending through walls 3 feet or less in thickness; no stone shall be used in the face of the wall less than 6 inches thick or less than 12 inches on the least horizontal dimensions.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT

SEWER CONSTRUCTION.*

By W. R. Gorr.

Of all public work, sewer construction presents the most difficult and varied problems, always more or less complicated, thus making the estimated cost largely a matter of speculation, unless a complete record of every detail of similar work is available.

In many cases estimates are based upon insufficient data, which may do where a margin of 35 to 40 per cent. is considered close enough, but where an estimate is required which is safely within a range of from 2 to 5 per cent. other methods must be pursued.

The finest calculations and most complete data, however, will not compensate for mismanagement, and the finest calculations without a liberal addition of good judgment and experience will produce equally poor results.

The specifications which govern a certain case control the cost to a great extent, but not so completely as is generally supposed. There is probably an interpretation and enforcement in this class of work that is an indeterminate quantity. In different locations the same specifications, though simple enough, are treated in a widely different manner.

The requirements in specifications for excavations usually define the shape of the bottom of the trench, the side slopes, bracing and refilling. The latter is the source of most of the initial trouble and later expense in keeping up the street surface, and it is next to impossible to compel the workmen to put sufficient pressure on the tamper to entirely eliminate the future possibility of settlement.

In making estimates for the cost of sewer construction certain elements invariably come in which must have due attention or losses will ensue. The necessity for insurance covering accident to employees is imperative, and the careful contractor invariably protects himself by it. The variation of the price of material and labor frequently causes serious losses to contractors who do not provide margin enough to cover such changes. Close figures should carefully be made and the actual cost of all materials and labor entering the construction, after which a liberal percentage should be added to provide for profits and possible variation in price.
