TITANIC CLAIMS IN ENGLISH COURTS

American Ruling Permits
Them to Prosecute Damage Suits Abroad

NEW YORK, July 11.—In the federal court Judge Hand announced a ruling which permits claimants to withdraw claims growing out of the loss of the steamship Titanic from admiralty courts and prosecute suits in English courts. Under the English law, known as Lord Campbell's Liability Act, claimants may recover $3,000,000 for the account of salvage freight and passage money, while the American statute limits recovery to $97,000. Action was brought on claims aggregating $18,000,000. Judge Hand's order permits the claimants to proceed in English courts without prejudice to their rights of further action in this country.

River reute and might have happened under similar circumstances in any other river.

An interesting part of the report was the suggestions made for safe squarding life at sea in future. It was found that portholes were open and that the vessel sank so rapidly that watertight doors could not be closed, and it was proposed that in future all ports and as many waterlight doors as possible should be closed in a fog. The use of rafts that would float away when a vessel went down and a change in the system of taking on pilots at Father Point were also suggested.

The court room was again crowded by Quebec people and many Canadians and Americans now on a visit to the city. The dramatic touch lent to the enquiry when Capt. Kendall and the officers and men who had escaped from the vessel were present was lacking, as they had returned to England. Mr. Tufteness was also absent, but Capt. ULSTER MANIFEST ATIONS EXPECTED DURING WEEK

Unionist Leaders Said to Dec lare Exhibitions of Strength Are Necessary Complement to the House of Lords

Ulster in trust for the King and constitution, but reveals no plan of warlike operations. This has been a great disappointment to The Daily Mail, which had "keyed up" the expectations of its million readers to look this morning for some dramatic event, and, in proof of its faith, had mobilized its entire corps of war correspondents and photographers, together with cohorts of reporters, which it studded all over the Orange section of Ulster.

Tomorrow is the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, when Orange Ulster want to explede in demonstrations. It will be a remarkable thing thirsty threats of the past three years and the expenditure of nearly $2,000.000 in organizing quasi-military forces, there are no serious disorders before next week is over. Unionist leaders here desire some judicious manifestations of Orange revolt. It would be a necessary complement to the action of the house of lords in destroying the government's amendment of the home rule bill and replacing it with the Orange demand for the total exclusion of Ulster without a time limit. of Ulster without a time limit. Cleavage of Unionists.

Cleavage of Unionists.

There is understood to be a distinct cleavage of opinion between Unionist leaders and Carson on the question whether there should be immediate disorder or not. Carson shrinks from the responsibility of setting the ball rolling, but the Nnionist bodies here, whose object is to bring about dissolution at any cost, think if there is some good Orange rioting and the army declines Orange rioting and the army dec to act the ministers must appea

It is conceded that the ministers win again, but the Unionists re that with comparative indifference

NEW YORK, July 11.—The New York World has the following cable from London today:

The London Unionist papers promised a war in Ulster today, but so far there has only been a resolution. This resolution reaffirms the Orange determination to reject home rule and hold Ulster in trust for the King and conment majority on Tuesday to twentyanything may happen in three years.

Last week the Unionists professed peaceful sentiments but Lloyd George's difficulties over his supertax legislation and the reduction of the government majority on Tuesday to twentythree, instantly changed the whole Unionist attitude.

Therefore next week will be the most critical in the history of the home rule bill. When the amending bill, as transformed by the lords, is presented to the commons, The World hears that Asquith will open conversations with Bonar Law, offering as a compromise that the government will abandon the time limit for the exclusion if the Unionists will agree to limit the ex-clusion to the four Ulster counties where the Unionists are in a majority.

If Bonar Law rejects this overture the lords, the government will then propose the withdrawal of the amending bill altogether, leaving the Unionists face to face with a home rule bill without amendment. In this eventuality extreme Unionists think the King would refuse to sign the home rule bill or only do so on the understanding that there shall be dissolution in the fall.

Adams Purchases the Balance the Bedell Stock

The simple announcement told in the headlines conveys a message of money-saving possibilities seldom equalled. We bought the remainder of this stock, believing we could project a sale that would bring to our friends—the buying public-most extraordinary values in home-furnishings. The keen buying homekeeper will see in it an opportunity fraught with unmatched money-saving chances. No economical buyer of home things will care to miss it.

It will be a Truly Great Sale-Starting Monday

We count it a stroke of real good fortune to have secured the Bedell stock. This was the one stock of home-furnishings in Toronto that we have recognized as worthy of competition with our own-not of course in point of size, but in the quality and choice of goods carried. Although the late Bedell Furnishing Co. made herculean efforts to close out their big stock, there remained naturally an immense amount of it that could not be sold in the comparatively short time before their lease expired. This we bought at a mere fraction on the Dollar, which enables us in turn to sell it at prices so low as to stir home-providers to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Furniture forms the basis of the selling, but included are Rugs, Curtains, Electric Fixtures, Stoves, Chinaware and most every housekeeping requisite.

The Bedell purchase coupled with the July Carpet Sale---the Bedding Sale---the Drapery Special Features and other Department Sales will provide a Carnival of Bargains Unprecedented.

Owing to the fact that there are few duplicate pieces among the furniture, we have used no illustrations, but we present below a generous list taken at random from among the items in the Bedell Purchase, and a single glance is sufficient to show that prices are cut to a mighty fine point. Come Monday for first pick—

Easily Conquered

A well-known New Yorker of wide ex-perience has written a book telling how the tobacco or shuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit.

with delightful benefit.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth avenue, 548 R. Sore-footed, sun-burned, sweltering. over 12,000 Orangemen hobbled and imped thru the Dufferin memorial gates to Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon, and when they had all heat was the worst that has ever been experienced on Orange Day, and long before the huge procession reached the destination men and women were dropping out to enforced rests under the shade trees along the road. It was 85 in the shade and over 100 in

The largest majority, however, remembered their slogan of "no surrender" and stuck to the task to the end, altho they could hardly lift their feet and look pleasant. The procession was the longest in the history of the Orange movement in Toronto and took over two hours to pass a given point. It was well marshaled and took over two hours to pass a given were taken of the parade. W. large contingent of several hundred from Hamilton and the presence of many new uniforms were the features of the parade.

Practically all the notable orangemen in Toronto, marched and most of them refrained from riding in carriages or automobiles leaving their luxuries for the women. Even the little children from the Protestant Orphans Home braved the burning sun for the sake of celebrating the victory of King line for the first time including the Riverdale lodge, which had a turnout of nearly one hundred. Several of the lodges broke away from custom and instead of wearing the usual 'topper' turned out in straws and panamas while the others perspiringly envied while the others perspiringly envied

His friends agreed to pay for the expense of the tuning fork, with the understanding that if he did not succeed with the experiment he was to pay them. If he did succeed, he was to be at no expense and all the glory was to be his.

An immense tuning fork was constructed, one of the largest ever known to man. A tuning hammer was also constructed with which to strike loudly a correct musical note. Summer Sores _ Easily Cured

By Dr. L. K. Hirshberg .. B., M. A. M. D. (Johns Hopkins UMMER is here with its train of UMMER is here with its train of roughened skins and sores. Vaseline is so true and tried a friend to man that, with some, it is meeting the fate of all good friends. and being neglected for others of more flashy appearance and name, but not half the merit.

When you burn your hand severely and go to a doctor to have it dressed, doesn't he coat it gently with a thin smear of vaseline and wrap it in absorbent cotton? He will tell you he doesn't know of anything more healing than vaseline, and—he might add ing than vaseline, and—ne might add —nor anything which would cost him less money. If you look in his case of surgical instruments you will probably find he has them coated with the same vaseline to prevent their rusting—a tip you might make use of when you put away your carving set.

If the baby's head is inclined to be covered with scale or dandruff, he will tell you to rub in a little vaseline at night and gently wash it with pure soap in the morning, and the scale will be removed and in time heal up. If he isn't too busy, he will add that the vaseline will encourage growth of hair on the small head, for this is another use to which vaseline may be put. Vaseline mixed with crude oil is claimed to be a fine thing to stop the hair falling out and start a new lot growing.

In many homes vaseline is the standard remedy for every sort of skin and scalp trouble. Recently a new cure has been credited to it—that of canker sores in the mouth. A victim who had been troubled for a long time and tried all sorts of cures, in desperation one day, seized the vaseline jar and rubbed some on the irritating sores. Inside of 24 hours they were healed. Vaseline in metal capped bottles is the purest and best for family purposes.

NEW THEORY OF VENTILATION SAYS KEEP AIR MOVING

ROWTHER, the English scientist, attacks one of the most cherished of our hygienic notions with a logic that compels respectful attention. His contention is that efficient ventilation does not depend upon the chemical purity of the air. The attempt should be to secure motion, coolness and dryness rather than to displace one body of air by another. He denies that there is a toxic organic substance in the atmosphere as the result of human exhalations, and challenges those who disagree with him to their proofs. This reminds one that the existence of such pois-ons has never been scientifically demonstrated.

The lungs, according to him, are never filled with air, some of which has not been exhaled. Inhalation follows so closely upon exhalation in normal breathing that a portion of the air that has just left the lungs is invariably drawn back into them.

Exhaustive experiments show that the amount of air thus returned is from I to 2 per cent. in persons remaining quietly indoors. It is from 4 to 10 per cent. in those asleep in bed. There are certain sections of the respiratory apparatus, moreover, the nose and the larger bronchi, in which exhaled air always lingers. It thus appears that the air in the lungs is always heavily contaminated with their own excreting gases, even in outdoor life, and the dead spaces make it certain that this contamination will not decrease.

It is not worth while, so the doctor argues, to pay much attention to the small amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, therefore, and if the air is kept in motion and not permitted to become too moist or warm, the necessary ends of ventilation will

HAIL DOES GREAT DAMAGE IN EUROPE

France and Germany Expend Vast Sums Yearly to Ward Off Disaster

A great deal of time and money have been expended in France and Germany in the ef-forts to ward off the disaster of hail storms, which amounts to considerable in those countries, and also in parts of Spain, where the damage done to the vineyards at times is very great.

Such storms encountered after the grapes have commenced to ripeh cuts the fruit and foliage to such an extent the vintage amounts to nothing, and years are required before the vines have tully recovered.

The people of these sections some years ago were induced to believe that the visitation could be warded off by heavenly assaults from big guns which shot aloft rings of smoke, but the fallacy of this was soon demonstrated, and after that towering structures were erected, from which electric currents were poured into the atmosphere. Many of those erected were of gigantic proportions, and one was built on top of the Elifel tower, and since all of them have had the experience of being bombarded with hail, the natives are generally pretty well satisfied that these efforts are useless.

HINTS CONCERNING THE PICNIC BASKET

New Wrinkles that Will Contribute to the Comfort of the Participants in Your Outing.

In order to make the motor trip or I fresco affair a success the luncheon should not only consist of edibles suitable for the occasion, but should be put up so they will be in good condition when ready to serve. The shops are full of all sorts of handy inficies which are designed with this dea in view.

Among these is the ice hamper, one f the novelties of the season, which comes in various sizes, lined with zinc so partitioned that part of it is an ice chamber. Ice placed in one portion teeps food, sandwiches, etc., in the other portion cool for a considerable length of time. It comes in brown or green finish, and is not very expensive, forming a splendid adjunct for the cance or motor car.

vacuum idea has been applied o the jar as well as bottle, and there are on the market jars which hold from a pint to four quarts. Into these salads, ice cream or stewed fruits can e kept ice cold until time of serving hey have excellent covers and hanlies by which they can easily be lifted.

We have various kinds of alcohol amps especially for picnic use. These consist of a small burner over which is a rack for a small tea kettle, coffee pot or frying pan. Many have a quart cup and stewpan, all so compact that they fold together and take very little space in the basket and are invaluable for making hot drinks or food at the

for making hot drinks or food at the picnic spot.

Another clever help to the camper or picnicker is an individual knife, fork and cup in a case. The knife and fork are so made that they fold in half on their own handles, thus taking up only about three inches of space. The cup is of the folding variety also, so that the whole case may easily be slipped into one pocket. In some outfits there is a bottle instead of a cup and the little case finds many uses during the summer.

Still another space-saving idea has been developed in the "nest of glasses." which comes in sets of three to five which comes in sets of three to five different sizes, which fit into each other, and which are protected by a case of woven fibre. This makes it possible for a small party to have individual glasses without taking up much space in basket or hamper. As they are very attractive, indeed, they are sure to appeal to the housewife who likes dainty accessories.

burned out more or less completely. The history of great fires is a long one and the loss aggregates fabulous sums. The loss of $10,000,000 in the Toronto fire of ten years ago is comparatively small. It is interesting to recall that the great Chicago fire, altho it occurred 44 years ago, still holds the record in many respects. The San Francisco fire cannot be compared since much fire cannot be compared since much of the damage was done by earthquake shock.

In the Chicago fire practically one square mile was burned over in the very heart of the city. More than 250 lives were lost; some 18,000 buildings were destroyed; 100,000 people were rendered homeless, while the loss of property amounted to $194,000,000.

In the same year an almost equally disastrous fire occurred in Paris with a loss of $160,000,000. More than a century ago, in 1812, Moscow was burned with almost the same loss. The famous fire in Boston in 1872 caused a loss of $75,000,000. 1872 caused a loss of $75,000,000.

It is surprising to find that the City of Panama has had a fire which ranks with the world's greature to the conflagrations. The fire destroyed 2000 buildings and the loss of property totalled $72,000,000.

One of the most famous of fires, that in London in 1666, destroyed $53,000,000 worth of property. The stat in London in 1666, destroyed $53,000,000 worth of property. The greater part of the city was burned out and the inhabitants were obliged to take to boats on the Thames to escape. Altho many thousands of buildings were destroyed, property at that time was far less valuable than it would be today in modern London. The London fire destroyed many historic buildings but was a many historic buildings, but was a disguised blessing, since the new London was far more substantial and sanitary than the old.

Constantinople has had several conflagrations in recent times, the most disastrous causing a loss of New York has had no fires destroying a large area in more than half a century. In 1835 a fire which swept a considerable section of the city caused a $15,000,000 loss. There have since been fires confined to a single downtown block which have destroyed almost as much property. Among the other cities that have suffered are Baltimore, Portland, Me., Pittsburg, St. John, Val-paraiso and Troy. The greatest fire in history is commonly supposed to have been at Rome in 64 A. D., altho no records of its extent have been preserved.

HERE are at present upwards of 3,000 regularly licensed sky pilots, or aviators in active service thruout the world. France leads in the activity, with more than 1.000: Great Britain ranks next, with about 400; Germany, with about 350, and the United States, with about 200. These licenses are granted at present in 19 different countries. Canada has no military aeronauts.

The minister of militia, Col. Sam Hughes, says he does not believe in flying machines except for observa-tion work, altho their use as instrution work, altho their use as instruments of destruction in wartime is receiving great emphasis. This country has no government aeroplanes.

The governments of all the great world powers now support regularly aeronautical departments, and in some instances the outlay is surprisingly large. The leading nations are, at present, France and Germany, where the rivalry is very keen. In Germany $28,000,000 has been expended by the government for aeropended by the government for aero-nautical work in the last five years, and in France $23,000,000 has been spent in the same period.

HARVESTING MOTOR A SUCCESS IN KANSAS

Machinery Solves the Problem of Garnering the Crop From Reclaimed Marsh Land

McPHERSON, Kan., July 11.4 Threshing by motor is an accomplished success in McPherson County. The Bib Basin west of McPherson marsh or lake has been transformed into a rich farm, as is proved by the immense field of 1600 acres of the finest wheat grown in McPherson County this year.

The harvesting has been a problem, and by the ingenuity of the machine men, it has been accomplished by using a large traction engine, to which were attached three binders, each cutting eight feet, or a total swash of twenty-four feet. An average of about eighty acres a day has been made with this outfit, and on one day the machines cut ninety acres. The first binder is hitched to the engine by a cable attached to the main frame of the machine, and from the machine the cable is carried to the main frame of the next machine and then to the third in the same manner. The different machines are steered by The different machines are steered by connecting rods with the tongues, the first machine being guided by hand.

One man is required to take care of each machine and trip the bundle carrier, three men to run the engine and seven ment to do the shocking. In addition to this outfit they have a header at work, each header box being arranged to dump its load on arrival at the stack yard on to a hay stacker, and this elevates the entire load of wheat on to the top of the stack.

Rudolph, after the prince whom Mrs. Hayne claims as her father. At that time she told passengers on the ship that she had abandoned the title of "Princess Vetsera," and that she expected to leave Paris and London for many years, in order that her boy be educated in America.

She herself has had a rather romantic time of it. She was married in 1907, in Toronto, to a stock broker named George Osborne Hayne, but about three years later one Justin B. Macdougall, son of a Canadian Cobalt capitalist, was mentioned in a complaint Hayne filed with his wife's adjusted for Macdougall's father had his son arrested in Chicago in November, 1911, while Justin was hurrying east to marry Mrs Hayne. The third time I struck him, he pulled his tail out of the pouch, placed it in its mouth, and then tried to strike me with the spike. He had smeared prison on his tail and its odor was so strong I had to hold my nose.
"It was a fierce fight he put up.

When I finally held his head down with a green elm stick he struck with his tail and the spike was so hard it bored into the wood like a gimlet."

It was Mr. Strawdman who whipped up the mare and cantered off down the road to get the horse out of the danger zone. Consequently some of the earlier stags of the battle were not witnessed at first hand by Strawdman, but on the later stages of the capture he substantiates Townsend at every turn. Townsend has written Odell at San Antonio that he will sell the reptile for $1000.

Townsend breathlessly told of the marvelous antics of the hoop snake, how he shouted to Strawdman to whip up the old mare and flee to gave the life of the horses when the snake twisted into a hoop and set out pell mell, rolling down the road at express train speed. Compared with the speed of that reptile that old farm horse was an old pelter, a snail. It is his opera and his ballet, and he is most opera and his ballet, and he is most generous in this direction. It is a pity that the venerable ruler is ferred to go'to be early, and that he cannot visit the opera house, for this would make a great deal of difference. Many representative persons would then attend, and now they feel that there is no necessity to do so, leaving their seats to be occupied by persons of their suite, who, perhaps, love the music more, but it is not the same thing from the manager's point of view."

A few hours later I was talking to the German dramatic author, Dr. Ed.

LONDON, July 11.—The identity of a young couple who died in tragic circumstances a fortnight ago in a flat at Auteil, Paris, has just been made pouls. For Drink and Drug Habits

For Fourteen years Gatlin Institutes have been receiving for treatment cases of "nervous drinking". During this entire time no man has ever come to a Gatlin Institute with "alcoholic nerves" and craving for liquor who did not leave with nerves steady and without any craving or desire for liquor whatever.

Usually but a period of three days is required -no one has found it necessary to remain longer than five days for liquor treatment.

When the business or professional man has to drink for his "nerves" it is time to think-to THINK HARD.

The treatment is purely vegetable, guaranteed harmless quick in its action, certain and lasting in its results.

It is the only scientific treatment administered without the ise of hypodermic injections or any other strenuous method. Treatment may be had at any of the Gatlin Institutes established throughout the world, or special treatment will be furnished those who prefer remaining at home.

REAL ESTATE GETTING SPLENDID ADVERTISING

Way Toronto Property Has S tood Up During the Last Few Months Will Attract Lot of Favorable Attention, Says W. S. Dinnick—He Point's Out That Stocks Are Down and Realty Is Not.

"That little incident is a picture of the real estate situation in Toronto. the real estate situation in Toronto. Froperty in any city where real estate operations and investments are normal has a tendency to harden in time of stress. We are passing out of what to many people and corporations has been a time of stress. But there is nothing of phenomena in the fact that prices of Toronto real estate stand generally considerably ahead of where they did in the fall of 1912, the last date when everything financial was at a high pitch of buoyancy. The seller of stocks makes his own price when he sells. A dozen houses in stand generally considerably ahead of where they did in the fail of 1912, the last date when everything financial was at a high pitch of buoyancy. The seller of stocks makes his own price when he sells. A dozen houses may be sacrificed but the incident is unknown or forgotten.

"A great part of the property in Toronto has been in the hands of one set of owners for ten, twenty or thirty years. That is there of business property than of residential but there are tens o fthousands of house owners in this city who are wedded to their homes and who could not be induced to think more lightly of their value no matter what the conditions of the conditions of the care and factories will be erected on sites.

Carlton-College.

"Next; the city is ready to develop and the city is ready to develop another high-class residential district.—Rosedale and The Hill are practically built to the limit—and I think it will be carried out safely beyond industries and railway yards. The high lands at the extreme north and northeast fringe of the city limits seem to be the logical place for the next exclusive residential district.

Expansion in the East.

"Then what does the real estate further homes and who could not be induced to think more lightly of their value no matter what the conditions of the city is ready to develop and the limit was and safety to develop and the city is ready to develop and the limit was a past of the conditions of the city is ready to develop and the limit was a past of the conditions of the city is ready to develop and the city is ready to develop and the limit was a first to arrive on the limit. Carlinal district.

Expansion in the East.

LONDON, July 11.—In a first today from London to Paris and back, in which six aviators started carly this morning. Carlinal district is the first to arrive on the French side of the English Chap value no matter what the conditions of general trade. Business and residential property is a tangible thing, it has a certain revenue that fluctuates but little and cannot be destroyed unless a local calamity or a national business catastrophe happens. No one can say that there won't be as many proposed in hower a year from business catastrophe happens. No one can say that there won't be as many people living in homes a year from now as there are now. Real estate 18 far more of a necessity than a resting place for money and those to whom it a necessity set the values.

"It is gratifying to me to observe how well Toronto real estate has stood the shock of the last twelve months. Doubly so because the financial dark-ness that has clouded the country has been blamed on real estate, and the good. with the dishonest, have borne that blame. I know of very few value depreciations in this city, and I know of those only because of my close connection with property. The general public, I believe, cannot definitely say that real estate has suffered during a period that has caused all businesses to moderate. There have been no more foreclosures than in other years, and this truly point with pride."

The Mortgage Situation.
"A word about mortgages. Few appreciate that they are a fundamental of property. I cannot call to mind a single instance where a dollar has been lost on an honest, well-placed mortgage. From every part of Canada come reports of interest and principal payments being promptly met. I will admit that a year ago I did feel anxious on this score, for my companies have several millions in mortgages—my concern was needless. I can see now for mortgages a wonderful demand. Their stability will more than ever eppeal to insurance, trust and

Now what of the present in the Toronto real estate market? It can be succinctly sized up. The building figures for the year show no decline in total cost of erections and they in the state of the stat show a greater number of buildings than last year, meaning more people than ever are erecting homes. Each new home is a stabilizer of values, as well as a pretty clear intimation that the people have money to put into property. And of course every new house takes one lot off the market and brings another forward for pur-chase. The assessment now being chase. The assessment now made will show an increase of about sixty millions for the year, possibly more. The property owners of To-rento have cut a fine melon among them—sixty millions for the owners

Mr. W. S. Dinnick, asked by The Financial Post for an expression of opinion as to the real estate aituation in Toronto make sin response the very striking point is that real estate would be very marketable if owners would accept for it about twenty-five percent. of the price paid for it say a year or two ago. Stocks bought then have depreciated to that extent, but property has not. Mr. Dinnick is associated with some of the active and outstanding real estate and loan corporations in the city, including the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation, the Sterling Trust Co., and the Dovercourt Land. Building and Saving Co., and is in a very good position to ascertain the actual facts. He says:

"A man who needed ready money came into my office a week ago. He had sold all his stocks; he wanted next to sell some uptown business property, and he wanted it sold quickly. I told him I could dispose of it in ten minutes if he would accept the same decrease in valuation he had been glad to take on his stocks. He refused "Why should I knock twenty-five percent, of the price off the property; Every owner around me wants just as much as he did a year ago." And he left after. I had arranged a larger mortgage.

"That little incident is a picture of "That little incident is a picture o them. We will find that certain new sections will develop into exclusively retail sections; that the financial district will have a bounded territory for itself where land carrying three and four storey buildings will have to carry ten and twenty storey buildings. We can see, if the hands are not held too close to the face, that during the next five years a big cross town thorotare will develop off Carlton and College streets. During that period of five years Bloor street will be preparing to become the next great cross town street, and I believe it will be greater than King, Queen and Carlton-College.

"Next; the city is ready to develop growth will do for real estate and you cannot help but make a profitable ni-vestment. The keynote of real estate is transportation. We are on the doorstep of great things in transportation here. City people are indis-posed to activity so I would always advise buying near the lines of tran-sit, existing and to come."

AMERICAN AVIATOR FIRST TO FRANCE

Six Started in Race From London to Paris and Back -Two Descend.

LONDON, July 11.—In a flying race today from London to Paris and back, in which six aviators started early this morning, Walter L. Brock, an American aviator was the first to arrive on the French side of the English Channel. He landed at Hardelot near Boulogne, and after taking a fifteen minute rest continued his flight to Paris.

ON SALE WEDNESDAY

Same Number As Last Year Will Be Issued by Exhibition-Get 'Em Early.

The Canadian National Exhibition begins to loom up as an event of the near future—the six for a dollar tick-ets go an sale Wednesday morning. Al-tho the demand was greater than the supply last year, it has been decided not to increase the number issued, and it is expected there will be a rush for 2337 TONGE STREET, corner Sherwood. MONTREAL, July 11.—The total amount of recorded transfers of real estate during the first six months of the present year is $56,421.073; the hibition. closures than in other years, and this in the face of heavy commitments made by over-enthused people who took on more responsibility than they well could bear.

"Real estate, in passing thru the stress, had more to withstand from calumniation than from adverse inside influences. Out of it all. Toronto property is going to get the best advertising it has ever had. The holders of real estate, looking back, can truly point with pride."

the present year is $56,421.073; the simple with a space for exhibits has been applied for over and over again, the demand for concessions assures a new record in that department, and the bill of attractions has been prepared with a view to taking the tightness out of the money situation. The Grenadier Guards Band of England, and Creatore's Band will feature the music, while the spectacle, Babylon, will be on a more elaborate scale than anything ever before attempted. The International Peace Tattoo will be along entirely novel lines, while flying ships, balloon ascensions, motor polo, and practically everything the amusement balloon ascensions, motor pole, and practically everything the amusement world affords is included in the bill.

CANADIAN NOVELS EMIGRATION LITERATURE.

LONDON, July 11 .- "We have never known," said a London librarian to-day, "such a demand for books deal-ing with Canada. "This demand is so marked that in-stead of the usual two or three copies of a book which may find a fair numof a book which may lind a lair number of readers which we ordinarily obtain, we double the quantity in the case of books on Canadian life. The natural result is that authors are paying more attention to Canada as a literary field, and this means an increasing output of Canadian sub-certain in results. No starving necessary.

Words would fail to express their delight. Their address is 27 Griffith street, Welland, Ont.

128 Robert Street,
Hamilton, June 23, 1913.

This is to certify that my son was in poor health for some time. We did not know what was wrong with him. He doctored with several doctors without any success. I went to the druggist and got medicine for him several times without any benefit to him whatever, I was beginning to think there was no cure for him. I went into a grocery store one day, and I noticed part of a Toronto paper on the counter. I picked it up and looked at it. The first thing I saw was Prof.
Mulveney's wonderful Tape Worm Cure.

I told monsters, as it is easy to take and which he stood. Yet he will always be remembered for four things—he perfected, if he did not invent, the political caucus; he certainly invented the first real monopolistic trust; he destroyed in turn each of the two great political parties, and he gave the last years of his life to the advocacy of protection only to prove the unshakable faith of the people of England in the possible trust in the faith of the people of England in the possible trust.

Joseph Chamberlain was a Londoner by birth, but a Birmingham man thru and thru. His father was a wealthy who leaste leather merchant in London, who later in life became a metal merchant. He had given credit for very considerable sums to a firm of sorew manufacturers in Birmingham, and, being concerned as to the solvency of the manufacturers in Birmingham, who had just left and monopolistic trust; he destroyed in turn each of the two great
political parties, and he gave the him. I went into a grocery store one day, and I noticed part of a Toronto paper on the counter. I picked it up and looked at it. The first thing I saw was Prof. Mulveney's wonderful Tape Worm Cure. I told my son about it. That is how I found out about the Tape Worm Cure; so found out about the Tape Worm Cure; so we decided to try the remedy. I sent for the medicine: he took it according to directions, and one hour and thirty minutes after taking the medicine the tape worm was expelled from the system Words would fail to express our gratitude. It is my earnest prayer that Prof. Mulveney may long be spared for the sake of suffering humanity.

Mrs. May McKenzie.

TAPE WORM Tape worm is bred from a parasite auffer all the symptoms of disease imagto believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every per famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worm, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his howels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them an are not aware of the fact. The letter and testimonials the Professor has in h possession are enough to the more this alarming fact. When the time came he was a courtier of courtiers; and after he became chummy with the ar-istocracy he ejaculated: "Thank God that I am now, at least, associated in political life with the gentlemen of England.'

His rule was as arbitrary as martial law. Any sign of rebellion meant instant political extinction for the rebel, and so far as the line of his forces extended; and it was considerable, social and commercial extinction as well. He set about the recreation of Birmingham according to ideas of municipal government which are still fifty years ahead of the conditions of many which come away almost any time. They cities today. He acquired the tramways, the gas, the water, and, later, the electric light for the city ,and each of these undertakings is today prosperous and a large contributor to the city's revenue. Nothing was more comfortable for a politician in Birmingham than to be friend of Joseph Chamberlain's for he was as true as Worm Exterminator is safe. sure and steel to his friends; and nothing was danger, is more uncomfortable than to oppose Joseph Chamberlain, for he was the swiftest political snuffer that ever put out a pretentious little light.

Corporation Street. Chamberlain's chief monument Birmingham is Corporation street, a great, wide street beginning in the very heart of the city and extending for over a mile. To create that street it was necessary to destroy a vast amount of slum property. For some time Chamberlain had been advocat-ing the necessity for the acquisition of the property by the city the money was voted the city would be held to a ransom price for the property; therefore, he and his friends had acquired it, to hand it over to the city at the original purchase price to themselves, plus 3 per cent. interest. Collapse of his enemies, and Mr. Chamberlain went home rather dizzy with the plaudits of the crowd and the difficulty of balancing his halo.

At the age of thirty-seven Joseph Chamberlain retired finally from business, taking as his share $3.000,000, pesides the very considerable savings oesides the very considerable savings out of his income. Wishing to enter parliament, at thirty-eight, he contested a strongly Liberal division of Sheffield, but it rejected him on the ground that his radicalism was too rank. His real desire was to sit for a division of Birmingham. At that time Birmingham returned only three members, one of whom was John Bright and the others local manufacturers, Muntz and Dixon. To push John Bright out of the way was obviously impossible, so one of the other two must go if "Joe" Chamberlain, as the crowd now called him, was to be elected. He selected Dixon. Then on every occasion of a public address and in so doing instilled in the minds of the voters the conviction that Mr. Mr. Chamberlain, had the necessary leisure for full and proper attention to

A Revelation to Parliament.

Most of the members of parliament in those days represented the traditions of culture of Eton or Harrow, and Oxford or Cambridge. This Quick Success in Business.
Young Joseph Chamberlain quickly became the dominant personality in the firm and imbued it with a progressive spirit. One day a workingman came to see him about a patent. Up to that time all screws were made with a blunt end, and this man had a patent to make screws with a gimlet point. He had tried to interest the heads of other screw-making firms, but they were almost impossible of approach and quite incapable of being proach and quite incapable of being interested when seen. Joseph Chamberlain was not of that sort. The man wanted $500 for his patent and Chamberlain bought it at once at the mans own price and voluntarily added an annuity for life.

Then it was that Mr. Chamberlain gove the commercial world its first Birmingham was perhaps the most Birmingham was perhaps the most faultlessly dressed member of the house, wearing an eyeglass, which caused Disraeli to insert his own to stroyed every screw-making business in England, and today there is not a screw sold in Great Britain that is not manufactured by the Nettlefolds (the Chamberlain firm), altho the coatry have long since expired. Chamberlain and Gladstone. When Gladstone swept the country again in 1880, Chamberlain who had been but four years a member parliament, was invited into cabinet, not because Gladstone loved or trusted him but because fear made close quarters. As president of the board of trade, Chamberlain succeeded in placing some important commercial acts on the statute books, notably the Bankruptcy Act and the Patents Act. All the while Cham-berlain was getting hold of the mass of the people, and when Gladstone's name was cheered for two minutes Chamberlain's would be cheered fo

In 1886 Gladstone was overthrown, and Chamberlain sat aloof from him, with eighty followers in the house of representing what he the "Liberal-Unionist commons, christened Party," having dropped Radicalism in to incorporate Unionism. In 1892 Gladstone was returned to power and Chamberlain, with his followers, united with the Conservatives in lovert opposition to him. Apotheosis of His Career Those ten years of Conservative government marked the apotheosis of loseph Chamberlain's career as a statesman. During those ten years he landed his country in a war the grave conseuences of which he certainly did not foresee; he made three historic utterances upon foreign policy either of which might have involved his country abroad; he split with his party and smashed it as he had smashed the Liberal party before. He told France that she "had better mend her manners." He defiantly told the German chancellor, "I do not want to give lessons to a foreign want to give lessons to a foreign minister, and I will not accept any at his hands;" and he said to Russia, speaking of her historic duplicity, "Who sups with the devil needs a long spoon!" But also during those years he achieved great work, with great imperial results, in the unification of solidifications of the Details. tion and solidification of the British

By Gee, H. K. Mitford.

WO outstanding features present themselves when a resume is made of the past week, from a financial point of view. These are the success with which the French loan was met, and the excellent United States crop report. Financiers the world over were interested in both.

First came the news of the remark. world over were interested in both.

First came the news of the remarkable acceptance of the loan floated by the French Government. Such big amounts are not often absorbed as quickly. It was oversubscribed some forty times. This proves two things. First, that the money was there; second, that the people are confident. It proves again the statement which was made so many times that there was as much money in the world as ever, but made so many times that there was as much money in the world as ever, but that it was being withheld. The money strings were loosened. Old stockings were released of their treasure. Funds were put into the hands of the admin-istrators, which will. ensure a progressive period.

CONFIDENCE is more or less restored in one quarter of the globe at any rate. This is a good thing. Now then, with the settlement of the Ulster situation in England, the restoration of peace where discontent and carnage reigns in Mexico, the ravages of the Balkan war being mended, and the harvesting of the enormous crops of the whole American continent—will the tide turn? Will industry unimpeded turn sace more towards greater production? ence more towards greater production?
Will contemplated investments be the result? Perhaps not right away, but the wedge will have been started and this indicates only bigger things to folressive period.

What does the American crop report indicate? There are at least two kinds of wealth. There is that which is of weath. There is that which is accrued thru taking from the supply of others. That is, in the ordinary course of events, there are things which people must have. The man who can make that thing a little better than the other fellow and can make it cheaper gets the market. He becomes wealthy. Then there is cre-ated wealth, that is, wealth that is ated wealthy. Then there is created wealth, that is, wealth that is entirely new. Whereas wealth in the first case is money transferred from one ma nto another, in the second case it has come from a source of creative production.

Difficulty in financing the business of the city is being met now. The lavish way money was spent at the beginning of the new administration has had the inevitable result; the cash is gone. The big salaries, large stree works and the hordes of civic laborer have eaten up the money of the city. At present appropriations voted for other works earlier in the civic year are being changed to more urgent matters.

Mayor Mederic Martin has issued a statement that never again will he let an Englishman be mayor of Montreal. In a white heat of rage he summoned the press boys yesterday asd told them that the English papers were all "dirty," and that he would run against any English candidate who sought the mayoralty if no one else undertook the defeat of the Englishman. Since his election French is almost the language of the city hall.

FUNERAL OF E. W. COX TO BE STRICTLY PRIVATE

The remains of the late Mr. W. E. Cox, president of the Canada Life Assurance Company, arrived in the city at 11.30 Saturday by a special car on the New York Central Express from New York City, where it arrived Friday from Europe. The body was brought back by Dr. P. G. Goldsmith. who was with Mr. Cox when he died. The following accompanied the remains from New York: Mr. and sale.

THE STORY OF THE FILMS

THE APPEAL OF THE MOVIES

is felt by every one who has witnessed the mute triumph of the Story Teller, the faithful limning of the artist, the guiding hand of the educator and economist. The film tales amuse us with rollicking comedies, entertain us by reproduction of the world famous dramatic efforts portrayed by the greatest living artists, educate us by placing before our eyes secrets of science which would never have been revealed to the casual eye in the passing. The amount of good accomplished by the various uplift societies in teaching the unfortunate how to better conditions cannot be estimated.

Thus it will be seen the Movie is no longer a fad or a toy but a useful and important factor in our economic system, and of vital importance to every phase of society.

We all know how it "struck us at first—the younger members of the family tried to induce us to go to the picture show." Finally a grudging consent was given, and we went. Our mind was all made up, we'd go once and get it over with. If you have made that first trip you know the rest. You are a confirmed "Movie Fan." David Belasco, perhaps the most famous and brilliant playwright and producer in the world, said that after avoiding the moving picture for five years, "Within the past three months I have witnessed magnificent photoplay productions which not alone converted me into being a "Movie Fan," but practically demonstrated to me that motion pictures within a few short years will surpass in splendor and perfectness of production the stage productions at their best."

The story of the growth of the industry during the past few years reads like a fairy tale. Those who did the pioneer work made fortunes—but the newer demands have created a scope of usefulness such as the early comers never dreamed of. Most of the film producing companies are close corporations and it is impossible to secure accurate statistics as to earnings.

It is said the Vitagraph Company commenced business with three stockholders and only $10,000 in capital. The business is now worth many millions.

The Mutual Company has paid 7 per cent. on its preferred stock since organization in April, 1912, and six months later commenced paying 1 per cent. on the common stock which had been given away as bonus. The gross business of this company is stated to be $7,000,000 annually.

The New York Motion Picture Company pays 2 per cent. monthly, has an authorized capital of $1,000,000. The Biograph Company pays 1 per cent. monthly on $1,990,000 outstanding.

Mrs. Baker is the daughter of a widely known family of Pittsfield, and her sister is the wife of a state official. She was married to Baker against the wishes of her family and they refused to have anything to do with her so long as she remained with him. Baker was poor, and they resolved to go west and make a new start. They came to Kansas City three months ago. A few NEW YORK, July 11.—The total bill for food and drink for passengers carried by the North German Lloyd Steamship Company last year, according to Oelrichs & Co., the agents, was $1,394,000 more than for the fiscal year of 1913. A year ago the books showed that in the preceding twelve months $5,125,000 had been expended for food and drink, but for the year ending with June 30, 1914, $6,519,000 was expended for this purpose.

The appetites of the passengers were not as voracious as those of the ships themselves. Into their fiery maws below stokers shovelled 1,791,013 tons of coal, worth $7,768,868. Durweeks later a son was born to them.

The husband failed to find steady employment in Kansas City and two weeks ago went to the Kansas harvest fields, leaving his wife practically pen-niless with neighbors until he could make some money.

Her family heard of her plight. Immediately they telegraphed her a ticket to Pittsfield, but on condition that she give up both husband and baby. The family had struck the psychological property of the struck of the psychological property in the struck of the stru

> ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. July 11.-All of the passengers on the coastal steamer Invermore, which struck on the rocks near Brig Harbor Point and the Labrador coast last night, were landed safely today. Messages received here from the scene of the wreck said the steamer filled rapidly after striking, and was today resting on the rocks with only her top deck above water. The Invermore struck while trying to avoid the heavy ice north of the Straits of Belle Isle. She left here July 4 to go as far north as the ice would permit. She carried heavy freight and many passengers, most of them Labrador fishermen and planters who were bound north for the sum-

Mrs. Montgomery was a school teacher in New Orleans for fifty years. The school board being unaware of her age, she was not retired, but she resigned five years ago when she was eighty years of age. She is surprisingly agile and has bright, alert eyes.

When her husband returned from the civil war broken in health and fortune Mrs. Montgomery was obliged to seek a means of supporting her family of seven children. Being a delicately brought up woman, she showed great force of character in overcoming such obstacles. She strated a school with some of her neighbors' children and her own near her home in Mobile.

Mrs. Montgomery is very optimistic in regard to the modern woman. She is not at all alarmed at the present tendencies. But she is partial toward men. She thinks that the way they get together and carry out their plans She is taking a course in Spanish at Tulane Summer School.

Farmer Victim of Old Box Trick Would Like to Know How That Horse Was Cured.

ST. JOHN'S, Mich., July 11.-Sebastian Irer, a farmer near here, is truthful man; tonight he is $1,160 shy, the victim of psuedo farm buyers, who gave him a tin box filled with a perfectly good brick in exchange for his bank account and then said farewell to this town, perhaps forever.

Irer's farm has been on the market -it is yet. Two weeks ago a man who registered at the local hotel as "J. M Monroe, Grand Rapids," came here and met Irer, made some preliminary arrangements to look at his place and then went away. In a few days he came back, this time more interested in the purchase of the farm than before. A man who registered at the same hotel as "H. S. Hall of Flint," but who was not known to be acquainted with Monroe also came. He went away without telling his busi-ness. A day or so later he returned and according to facts turned up by the sheriff, had some conversation

The Monroe, under the name that he had not used at the hotel, hired a livery rig, drove around on the main livery rig, drove around on the main street and picked up Irer for a ride out to the farm to "clean up" the sale. On the way out they met Hall and picked him up. He was also looking for "a farm to buy." In the next few rods the horse was taken sick, so Monroe told Irer, and made him believe it.

Monroe suggested that Irer get an interpretation on the main street and picked went to the front in the College Two-Man League during the field closely following to the sixth team a red-hot race is promised for the balance of the season.

World.

NEW YORK, July 11.—(Special to the Sunday World). The Georges Carpentier-Gunboat Smith match is the puglistic feature for the coming week. London stages this battle also. Following so closely the big lightweight international championship contest it would not have been surprising had this match suffered from lack of interest, but advices from abroad state that the two big fellows are attracting considerable attention from English devotees of the sport.

ter boxer than some of his earlier exhibitions indicate.

ter boxer than some of his earner exhibitions indicate.

The Gunboat has a style pretty much this own—as nearly every great fighter has. Not that I am going to record that he is a great ring man; he hasn't all the stanty of method, which is something, and in his case a very effective method it has proven so far in his career.

I doubt if Carpentier has the staminate to weather twenty rounds with the hard hitting Gunner. No doubt he has a fair knowledge of boxing and can punch moderately hard, but past performances do not indicate that he is either the gamest or the stundiest of experts are not inclined to figure his comparatively poor exhibitions with Frank Klaus and Billy Papke at their face value on account of Georges' alleged youth and inexperience, it must be remembered that Carpentier has been boxing a number of years now. In fact, he is a veteran compared with the Gunboat. He started as a bantam-weight eight years ago, and has fought in all the divisions up to the heavy-weight class. When excuses were made for him in the battles refered to, lack of experience was given as the old aliphi. But Georges can't plead that any longer. A boxer who has been in the game professionally for eight years is far from a novice.

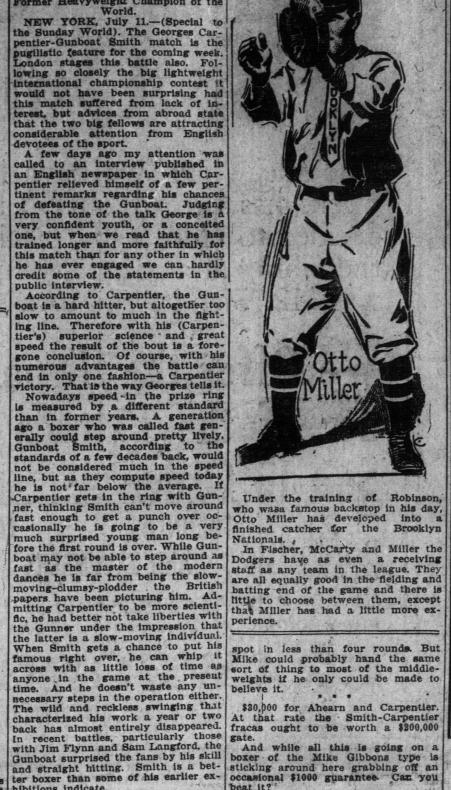

Unless Carpentier makes a running anxiety to interpret the rules as written and the middlekeight title was rule on the market, and the middlekeight title was rule on the market, and the middlekeight title was rule on the market, and the middlekeight title was rule on the market, and the middlekeight title was rule on the market, and the middle

And it is as much due to Ahearn's performances since he has been abroad that the offer was forthcoming as to Carpentier's reputation as a box office

With all this frenzied competition for bouts it begins to look as if those American boxers Snowy Baker induced to go to Australia will come back home via England. Eddie McGoorty, home via England. Eddle McGoorty, in particular, ought to command a respectable purse in London right now. Eddle is well and favorably known in England, and could command fat purs-es for his services if he were there while the going is good. Now that he has about played out the string in Australia I expect to hear any day that Edward has packed his kaisterand slipped for Merrie England.

But the Ahearn noise is what shocks But the Ahearn noise is what shocks me. However, the referees over there unless Carpentier makes a running are prone to exaggerate trifles in their Unless Carpentier makes a running match out of it I look for the Gunboat to come home the winner, and with a knock-out. About fifteen rounds is the limit, I would put on the fight. If Carpentier can outbox Smith for the full twenty rounds without getting in the way of a few of the latter's danger projectiles I will be ready to take my hat off and class him as one of the best heavies in the game. And, by the way, over in Paris that's what they way, over in Paris that's what they think he is right now. Can you imagine an offer of a $30,000 purse for a match between

They Made Sure Their Son Would Look After Them

Most Specific Deed of Gift Ever Registered in Canada Turns Up in Quebec Court-Every Item of Their Clothing and Food, Feed for Their Horse and Cow, Was Put Down in Black and White by Old Habitant and His Wife-Son to Get Farm that Proved Worthless Even Had to Agree to Tie Visitors' Horses.

variously eccentric dispositions have been many, but in Canada at least the palm must be given to one unearthed recently in St. Alexandre, Province

Jean Castonquay, a habitant in asking a few days ago for letters patent for lands that he had held for many years, but had failed to register, produced the deed of gift as evidence of his title. Before the death of his parents they had given him their land. but never trusting the parental devotion of them son they made specific conditions for their support in the deed of gift that guaranteed their earthly existence and comfort.

The land, several hundred acres, or exactly, "two arpents in front by about 80 arpents in depth," was given in clear title, but the care of the parents is guaranteed in the following determinate manner, with many clauses, conditions and reservations. What the son had to provide his parents with

After many years the heir declared After many years the heir declared that the fulfilment had not been carried out, and that any rate one-half of the estate was rocky, and the other half covered with boulders. There was a sugar camp on it, but that has been destroyed, and there is no more building timber on it, so after all the worry of living up to the letter of the most specific deed of gift ever made in Canada, Jean Castonoguay finds himself left with nothing but the title to a barren waste.

At the Dinner Party.

At a very fashionable dinner party the other night, while the guests were all seated around the table, I felt something slipping, and thinking it was my serviette grabbed at what I thought to be it, tucking it in the top of my trousers and pinned it there for additional safety. For the remainder of the meal I forgot quite about it, being very busy attending to a young lady next to me. When the guests rose to go it never occurred to me that I had not foided my serviette, and I rose with the rest. What was my astonishment and consternation to find my side of the tablecloth rising too, with glasses spilling all over the table, and crashes of breaking glass and china, while the as-embled visitors were nearly choking in their visitors were nearly choking in their efforts not to laugh. I stood there stupidly for a second or two, and then freed myself, looking as red as a ped on a banana skin I knocked over, and fell crashing to the floor. An obliging young man politely assisted me to rise, with difficulty refraining from laughing, tho could see he was just on verge of an explosion of the room, got my hat, and harried home. After that I vowed never to look any of those guests in the face

A LAND WHERE EVERYBODY, EVEN BABIES IN ARMS SMOKE

HE figures totalling the con-sumption of tobacco in Great Britain and the United States are likely to give the non-smoker the impression that these two countries are literally being soaked in nicotine to the detriment of health, happiness and general well-being. But what if it were told that there is a country where every one stocker continually.

and general well-being. But what if it were told that there is a country where every one shokes continually, even "children in arms"?

Given the same numbers in population and average wealth, if Great Britain and the United States were populated with the inhabitants of Northern Siam, the consumption of smoking tobacco would rise beyond the most fantastic dreams of the tobacco trust. Col. Mulberry Sellers's "There's millions in it!" would be but a puny attempt at estimating the magnitude of the profits.

One of these pictures, depicting the two ladies "firing up" for their incessant smoke, was taken 450 miles north of Bankok, and the man who snapped the camera, in telling of the prevalence of the habit and of the prevalence of the habit and of the prevalence infantine element, says that these "baccy babies" really "seem to be equipped with bigger

WORLD'S BIGGEST LOCOMOTIVE MUST BE PUT IN THE MIDDLE OF TRAIN -0-

The power that is depicted in the lines of this powerful steed of the steel rails will set most people thinking of the great strides which have been made since the first locomotive startled the people who lived along the line of the first railroad. Instead of having one driving wheel, this, the "Centipede" locomotive, has twenty-four. Eight of these wheels are under the tender. It has two low pressure cylinders and one high pressure cylinder. So powerful is this giant of all locol otives, that it cannot be used for pulling ordinary freight trains, because if this locomotive were coupled to one of the great freight trains it would pull apart the couplings and ruin the "draft gear" of the train. It is because of this fact that the giant to put in the middle of the train. With one-half of its power it pulls the cars behind it, and with the other half of its power it pushes the cars ahead of it. The total weight of the engine is $53,050 pounds. The tank has a water capacity of 16 tons. The tractive effort is 160,000 pounds. The engife is 105 feet long and is capable of hauling 640 tons,

The Dangers of Dust

Distributing the dust and dirt in the air so it settles until agitated again is a very faulty method.

Besides the dust that falls on the furniture is the dust that falls on the floor, or on the carpet, or on the hangings, or creeps into the crevices, or which is in large degree breathed into the lungs by the human

These things mean that we absorb the germs of dissease and weaken our constitutions until we get ripe for the ether cone, the surgeon and the undertaker.

The particles of dust and dirt, with their boon companions, bacteris, are brought into the house by every person who enters, by the breeze and even the flowers.

Then they go into partnership with minute particles of decaying food, and we get a "condition."

Measles, whooping cough, croup, chickenpox, are all avoidable diseases. Once we thought they were all "sent by Providence." Now we know that all disease has a cause, and if we can sidestep the cause we elude the pose of the school system—just that and nothing else. TO FIGHT the demon of ignorance we must not give the demon of disease an inning.

As a people we have abolished the roller towel. We have done away with the public drinking cup. And we must. do away with the germs of disease that lurk in the schoolhouse in the form of unseen parti-

The chalk used in the schoolhouses forms a medium of carrying disease into the air. The chalk mixed with human excreta is ground into dust particles and circulates, being breathed in thru the nose and the mouth, and disease follows as a natural result. Come with me to the schoolhouse. Sessions for the day are over and the janitor is cleaning up.

That is to say, he is busy plying a broom, and, by dint of much sweating and labor, distributing the dust all And he does this religiously and methodically every day. Often much of the janitor's work is done at night by the dim light of a lantern. And next morning the children come to school. The dust has settled during the night and is on the desks, seats and floor. So the children dust them off with their clothes, their hands get murky, they stir up the dust with every movement and inhale the particles at every breath. They get an atmosphere dust-laden and germ-packed.

Also, each little youngster brings his own contribution of the handset.

tion to the bouquet.

The children's spirits fall, their interest flags, they become indifferent and fall to respond to the teacher.

They are being slowly poisoned by dust.

But then, are not the windows open, and is not that good ventilation? Yes, there may be a current of air, but let a shaft of light strike it! It is full of particles—the particles the janitor shook out of his duster or inadvertently left under the desk, with the individual contributions brought from unsanitary homes. A broom can not get into every corner.

So the fresh air is not really fresh air after all. It is mixed with the dust of ages, left behind by imperfect sppliances.

It must ever be remembered that each child brings to school with him a special set of germs.

If he could be made to leave them outside—like Mary's lamb—while he was at school, all would be well. But he doesn't

Bacteriological tests have been made of the dirt that average class of school children track into a schoolroom.

This test shows almost every conceivable disease germ.
Farcy, therefore, the veritable culture bed of male volent bacteria a dusty classroom presents.

UST dangers cannot be overestimated. The seriousness of the dust problem in regard to school sanitation is of vital import.

Every school should be equipped with appliances that

The floors should be of polished maple without crack or crevice; the walls smooth, and the corners rounded to prevent dust deposits.

The broom should be put in the furnace. Its day as a hygienic means of cleaning is gone, so far as indoor work is concerned. The whisk-broom, the dust-cloth, the feather duster belong to pioneer times.

The only way to clean thoroly a school or public filding is by means of some form of suction cleaner. This wonderful invention sucks the air out of the school-room, and with it takes the germs of disease and death, which, left in the room, are inhaled to the frightful risk

In many instances sanitary cleaners have been installed and paid for by bond issues.

No better investment by a city, village, town or township could possibly be made. In fact the question is not can a school district afford a sanitary cleaner, but, can it afford to do without it?

Let us see to it that we give the children a fair chance in sound education, pure water, good food, sanitary homes, and a school free from the contamination that lurks where dust holds the seeds of disease and death.

Those who take cameras into Muskoka and other summer resorts, have a chance to make money out of their snapshots. The Sunday World will publish summer resort views, and the non-professional photographers are offered a prize of $2 for the best photo sent each week, and $1 for the next best. The privilege of using any photo submitted is reserved, and none will be returned.

The conditions are few. Prints must have lots of contrast; they must be of people in summer resort attitudes; they will be of no use if smaller than 3 by 5; on the back they must have the names and addresses of all those pictured; and they must also state when and where, and by whom token.

Send your prints to the Summer Resort Department, The Toronto Sunday World.

SPARROW LAKE, July 11.—Mr. Robert H. Robinson, 380 Roxton road, Toronto, was a visitor at the M. B. C. Massey Camp, Sparrow Lake, for a few days this week.

Mr. Fred B. Clayson, 85 Oakwood avenue, Toronto, was a visitor at the M. B. C. over Sunday.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeny, of Toronto, was a visitor to Fort Stanton, Sparrow Lake, on Saturday and Sunday last. He occupied the pulpit of the Church of the Good Samaritan Sunday morning, which was the first summer service of the season.

Rev. Capon B. Bryan, Church of the Bpiphany, Toronto, was a visitor to Port Stanton, Sparrow Lake, today, Saturday. He will occupy the pulpit in the Church of the Good Samaritan tomorow evening

The gang took Muskoka road, and passed thru the town, where they took on supplies, and then slept ground a fire on a point in Muskoka Lake. Alex Weiner, Toronto, was the first of the M.B.C., campers to land, a lunge in Sparrow Lake. It was of fairly good weight, but far from last year's record. Edward Thompson, of Toronto, was the first of the M.B.C., campers to land, a lunge in Sparrow Lake. He leapt in off the dock at Port Stanton, and pulled up at the M.B.C. wharf.

The water in Sparrow Lake is very low this season on account of the continued hot and dry weather. For the same reason the berries are scarce and the crop is poor.

The M.B.C. boys and the guests at Otto Roehl's summer resort clashed in a game of baseball on Monday morning at Roehl's landing, and after fighting all the way for ten innings the game was called. The score was 4-4.

The campers hiked to Roehl's from Port Stanton thru the bush, and back to meet the Severn River people.

The M.B.C. team walloped the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. aggregation on the former's grounds on Tuesday morning of this week, by the score of 5-4. The Y. boys held a canoe hike to the M.B.C. and before dinner galloped into the field for their beating.

Dr. Laker holds the record for still fishing, having caught some nice bass and small'lunge. But so far as luck goes, Mr. Buschlen, a greenhorn fisherman, takes the cake. On Friday, he caught a 'lunge weighing sixteen and a half pounds, and on Saturday, in company with Mr. Jacques, landed one weighing eleven pounds. The former fish is already digested.

Aitho the company is as yet small, the guests are, having a good time. A phonograph and a guitar are always within reach when other pleasures are wanting. A crowd is expected at the week-end.

affections of everyone with whom he comes in contact. Perhaps the strongest thing about this character is that tho the audience realizes that he is a thief, and the most dangerous thief conceivable, they nevertheless admire him, and desire to see him escape justice. The Bonstelle Players will present this interesting drama at the Alexandra Theatre this week with the following cast: "Raffles," E. H. Robins; Gwendoline Conron, Caherine Proctor; Captain Bedford, Robert Homans; Harry Manders, "Bunny," Fleming Ward; Crawshay, Robert Ames; Lord Amersteth, Gavin Harris; Lord Crowley, Cyril Raymond; Lady Ethel. Altho this piece is one of the few characteristically American plays which has been successful on both this side of the water and in England, Toronto has never yet seen a stock production of it. The part of Patricia O'Brien gives Miss Haswell an admirable opportunity as the slangy, big-hearted chorus girl, who saves her younger sister from the man who seeks to betray her. The usual matinees are given on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

Problem Drama At Shea's

'Raffles" - Bonstelle Com-One of the noticeable features in the modern problem dramas is that the woman with a past is the only one to suffer. Anna Steese Richardson and a modern problem drama in which Adele Blood will appear at Shea's next week. The dramatists have departed from the stereotyped fashion of making the woman suffer for the wrong and have meted out to the man brey, the well known dramatist in- his share of the punishment. The play troduced this nonchalant and clever tells the story of the man who is unable to stand alone; who needs the assistance of someone with more will power than himself. Because of his misbehavious he is cast off by his family and rapidly reaches that point where he loses the respect of his friends. At this point he meets the friends. At this point he meets the one woman that can place him once more on his feet. Encouraged by her faithfulness and animated by his love for her he rapidly forges to the front in the profession of law. When he has reached about the highest point possible he forgets this woman who has done so much for him. He returns to his family and becomes engaged to another woman. Taken gaged to another woman. Taken away from the influence of the woman who was responsible for his success he drifts again into dissipation How the first woman once more rescues him and makes him realize the depth to which he has fallen is worked out in an intensely gripping cli-

Broadway "Movies" Are Learning Things

Discover That One Feature Film an Evening Is Sometimes Not Enough Entertainme nt-Douglas Fairbanks Opens 1914-15 Season in "When He Comes Up Smiling."

NEW YORK, July 11.—At the presant moment there seems little doubt that the day of the feature film as a full evening's entertainment is losing its hold on Broadway. I do not mean, of course, the really great films, of which there are half a dozen examples playing today, but I do mean those very long features that have hardly anything to recommend them save their length. The newer picture policy most certainly is better and more satisfying.

Take, for example, the programs as

Take, for example, the programs as now made up at the Strand Theatre in New York. There is one five or gix-reel feature at the end of a program in which a humorous reel, a news feature and an educational film news leature and an educational film each has a place. Presented to the accompaniment of a musical program in perfect taste, with a lovely soprano singing in front of a crimson curtain and a marvelous organ to delight you, know of nothing more delightfuithan this new way of making the movies serve for an evening's enterminment.

is lesson before it began staging its pictures with a dramatic hand. It played to mighty poor business for some weeks, but now that the lesson has been learned the house is doing before these hot evenings than any of the legitimate theatres save "The Passing Show" and "The Follies."

"Cabiria" Best Film.

"Cabiria" d'Annunzio's film at the Knickerbocker Theatre is an example of the feature film that is well worth the full evening requirements. It is probablly the greatest motion picture of the day. From every point of view it commends itself to praise; the story is thrilling, the acting very good, the handling of its crowds remarkable and its settings, so big and awe inspiring are they, that words are impossible to describe it all adequately. It is presented with a competent orchestra and a large chorus of voices, "Cabiria" is a treat.

"The violin is ultramarine blue," said the first violin in the orchestra, and half a dozen of his fellow-players declared that it gave them the sense of royal purple.

All agreed that the clarinet is yellow, the horn tyrian purple, the trumpet bright scarlet, the flageolet violet, and the plano old gold. As to the drum, a violent argument raged, some holding that it sounded dark brown, while the director averred that to him

There is more life and more sympathy of treatment in this picture of marble. I than has been noticed before in Miss Kerr's portraiture. She has kept the harmony of costume, surroundings and figure complete, and there is no disturbing modern note to spoil the composition of the picture, It should meet with even more general com-mendation than did the portrait study of "Margaret Bell" which has been requested for exhibition at the ceming Canadian National Exhibition.

Of quite a different nature, yet causings, and perhaps the best picture which has yet come from Miss Kerr's brush, is a portrait study of a girl, gowned in the graceful costume of the early thirties. The coloring in the quaint delicate gown is enhanced by the tints of the flowered chintz curtain against which she has paused. Behind her a door is open, and old Frederickton Cathedral, the details being very beautifully and truthfully brought out. It is a picture worthy of being part of the Canadian collection, and may probably be later in-cluded in it. Canada, or abroad. Miss Estelle Kerr is choosing the Muskoka Lakes for her summer's sketching. She will not fellow the usual custom of making landscape the principal subject for her brush, but intends utilizing the unconscious grouping of summer holiday seekers to form summer pictures.

Before leaving for Muskoka, Miss Kerr has been following out this idea, by various jaunts on sketching bent, to delightful spots about the city—to the Island, where she has just been legiates and high schools.

Both the elemental course, and the art specialist's or art supervisor's course is being taken up, with the view, in the first case, of teaching the simpler branches of art in the public schools, and in the other case, where the teachers intend to take up the advanced teaching of art in the collegiates and high schools.

Frances Lovering and Miss Florence Wyle—perhaps the mest typical studio in town—will be left alone until late August, for by then the two energetic sculptors will have opened up their summer camp, in the heart of the Temagami district—a shack in the "real, true, wilderness," among the pine trees, it is, where, the no actual work may be accomplished—even if a supply of clay is actually kept on hand, in case of emergencies—inspiration is gained for the winter's work, which is all the better done for the play in the woods. the play in the woods.

the sculptor can only catch a phase of character—it is full of life. The work of both Miss Lovering and Miss Wyle is noteworthy for the absence of trivialities. Simplicity is the keynote, and truth follows as always in the and truth follows, as always, in its wake. They spend no unnecessary time on detail, and lose no opportunity of impressing the real self of the subject upon the sculptured faces. A great deal of relief work is included among the sculpture. Noteworthy is the head of a young musician, which is an example of the excellent effect produced by a few lines, and a re-straint in design. A relief head of Sir Robert Borden stands out boldly also, and is cast in the same material, a plaster which has all the color and effect of bronze. A study of an old woman, a toe dancer who served as model one afternoon, is also full of character. Just now a model for the Canadian National Exhibition Medal, after an official design, is being completed. This is the second year that the artists have cast these models.

Within the precincts of the ward that picturesque section of the city where individuals or colonies of people from every portion of the globe are gathered, you may turn on to a quiet street, a stone's throw from University Leon Sametini, the distinguished avenue, and you will notice on the side of one of the houses a simple sign. On the sign are inscribed only the words: "William Knaggs, Violin Maker." If you are interested to see what Canada can produce in the way of an inventor of a new model for one of the most princely of musical instruments, you will make your way around to the side of the house, where at the top of the winding stairway you come upon a work-shop, as simple and unpretentious as the little sign on the street. sesses several of his instruments, and there he was found, his eye and thought intent upon the fashioning of a thin sheet of maple into just the right curve, and correct degree of "thin-ness" for the back of a violin. To the uninitiated there was something subtly fascinating in the fashioning of pieces of wood into a sensitive violin, whch seems to have a living, breathing personality. It was impossible to resist asking the question: "How is it done? What is the real secret of the perfection of tone in the violin?" So many times it has been said that the varnish was the reason for the tone quality that it seemed strange to see so much care exercised over the mere selection and the carving out of the wood.

Every Detail Counts. "People forget," said the maker, "that it is everything that goes to a perfect violin. It isn't just the wood, or the shape, or the model, or the varnish or anything else. It is the perfection in every detail that makes the finished violin perfect. Even the quality of the wood makes a difference. he said, holding a piece Listen," of wood recently glued together to form the front of a violin, to the ear, and as he tapped it gently, the wood gave out a clear ringing sound. is good." Now listen to this," and repeating the action on another piece of wood apparently the exact duplicate of the first, he could only draw from it a dull empty tone. "The first piece is to be made into the sounding board or the face of the violin, and is of spruce or 'Swiss pine'."

As the violin maker was speaking lin, and pointed out the fine inlaying which followed the curves of the instrument, and which had to be put in with the utmost care to prevent slender ebony and white wood banding from spliting. "A breath almost, would blow away the point of that curve," he said. The Secret of Tone. "The real secret of tone in the viohe went on, "lies in the amount of air space which there must be between the upper and lower tables, to produce the harmony. Then the wide grained wood gives mellow richer tone than the fine grained harder wood."

It was like magic to learn that the harmony of the violin is all in it be-fore the front and back are actually put together, and that they are tuned by being carefully thinned down to the exact delicacy required. A finished instrument lay in a case near by, and with all the absorbtion of the inventor the violin maker took it up and looked it over carefully. He is a musician of both amateur and some professional attainment, and also unconsciously picked up the bow and drew it across the strings. He played several bars and then, explain-ing that the test for a violin was its richness and its volume from a distance, walked away to another part of the building, from where its strains floated back full and resonant.

It was a picture to dwell in the memory, the simple little workshop, with the light streaming in thru a bay window, over the nearby buildings in the city's centre, and filtering over the shavings on the floor, and the violins in various stages of development scattered about the room—on the work-bench, and standing against the wall, the tool cupboard, the glue-pot simmering on the little stove, and, on a table in the centre of the room, in a case, one of the beautifully finished instruments, a fellow to the violin whose throbbing voice flowed in and thru the room, played by the same hand which had planned and formed it.

But the violin did not have things all its own way, for when its voice had died away the deep tones of a 'cello could be heard, played by a has also made many cellos, and his son is as musical as he is himself, and a model just completed was hold-Antiquity Doesn't Count.

Mr. Knaggs has exhibited at many given to any of the 350 models on exof work were spent perfect its beauty and its harmony had won its laurels abroad. It had proved that age does not constitute the ex-cellence of the violin. It is an undisputed fact that hundreds of old instruments-just as ancient as the famous Amati, Stradivarius, and Guarneri-us, have never been given a second thought. They did not live because they lacked excellence, and no amount of antiquity could add to their value. Even if a violin grows old with the centuries it does not make it valuable if line and harmony are faulty.

SCENE FROM THE THIRD FEATURE OF THE ALICE JOYCE SERIES PRODUCED BY THE KALEM COMPANY.

A LAW UNTO HIMSELF

Had Giovanni been an American, it is possible he would have sued George Chester for alienation of his wife's affection, pocketed a few thousand dolists and forgotten that Marie had ever existed. The matter would have been settled in accordance with the law's decree and without violence. But Giovanni was only a poor Italian organ grinder, and instead of consulting a lawyer he lay awake nights tormented by memories and clutching a stilletto that he had brought with him from Italy along with a prayer-book, He searched the dead man's clothing a lawyer he lay awake nights tor-mented by memories and clutching a stiletto that he had brought with him from Italy along with a prayer-book, a change of linen and a picture of his that he had cherished was gone. Undoubtedly she had given it to Chester. He could not blame Marie; at heart she had been dazzled by the glitter and glare of the world into which the dashing young American had ushered ber. Yet Glovanni lay awake nights wondering whether by taking the law into his own hands he could still the grief that bruised hidden depths.

With the organ strapped to his back he limped from his room in the morning, kissed Rosa affectionately and went to work. At noon, while munching a sandwich and sipping a glass of red wine in a saloon, he ran his eyes mumbled Giovanni brokenly.

went to work. At noon, while munching a sandwich and sipping a glass of red wine in a saloon, he ran his eyes down the columns of an American newspaper. A name and an address in a minor item attracted his attendant of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. But if you have a county of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. But if you have a county of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. But if you have a county of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. But if you have a county of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. But if you have a county of the steely glint crept into his kind against Chester. tion. A steely glint crept into his eyes as he laboriously perused the item. George Chester had returned to the city! That afternoon he took his organ far from his old haunts on the East Side and when darkness fell he had become a velvet-footed spy in-tent upon obtaining one more glimpse of Marie.

"The dog!" he muttered, as he stole "The dog!" he muttered, as he stole out of the building where George Chester occupied an apartment. The fiery, treacherous blood in him pounded fiercly against his temples. He had learned something that had intensified his torment and his hate. Chester had grown tired of Marie—his Marie!—and he turned cruel toward her. Giovanni had witnessed the blow, the savage, cowardly blow that had drawn blood from her face, and only by a supreme effort had he been able to restrain himself from leaping at the villain's throat.

Over their frugal supper that evening Rosa chatted gally about her sweetheart, unaware that each word stabbed something vital in her father's heart. They were to be married soon, she told him, for Pietro had just obtained a good position, and they wanted her father to live with them. Giovanni mastered his grief and hate vanni mastered his grief and hate long enough to give her his blessing, and then slunk back into his own little

He tossed restlessly on his bed, and again his eyes sought the stiletto he had brought with him from Italy. In his fevered ravings he knew he loved his fevered ravings he knew he loved Marie as wildly, as passionately as ever. He could kill the brute who mistreated her. But that would brand Rosa as the daughter of a murderer, and the people would see nothing but lanother Black Hand crime in the deed. And Rosa was so happy, as deliriously happy as Marie had been in the first years of their married life.

When dawn crept over the roofs he

When dawn crept over the roofs he wandered into the streets again, scarwandered into the streets again, scar-cely knowing where he was going. He did not hear the hoarse notes he coaxed from the organ, for his senses were dominated by something were stronger.

"Here, Giovanni." A fruit peddler whom Giovanni had known stepped up to him and held a paper before his eyes. There was a suggestive gleam in the man's eyes as he pointed to an item on the page and watched slyly as Giovanni read. A woman had been found murdered, and her name

"Holy Mother!" The paper slipped from Giovanni's stiffening fingers and he stared with unseeing eyes at the fruit peddler. Their glances met and the fruit man smiled slyly as he read the resolve that hate flashed into Giovanni's eyes. Without a word Gio-

Marie was dead, slain by the man who had won her from her husband and then grown tired of her. Glovanri's jaws snapped grimly. He had forgotten Rosa and her happiness, forgotten Rosa and her happiness, forgotten Rosa and her happiness,

He searched the dead man's cloth-stiletto that he had brought with him from Italy along with a prayer-book, a change of linen and a picture of his mother.

He stared into the clammy darkness of the dingy two-room apartment and wondered whether he was going mad. He could not forget Marie, she of the flashing, laughing eyes, the long, sinuous tresses of black hair and the soft, careasing arms that once she had been in the habit of winding about his neck at night. He had sought to quiet the clamorous whisperings of the past by the stridulous notes of his organ, but always out of the din and jam of the sweltering East Side came Marie's merry laughter and lovelit eyes.

In the adjoining room his daughter, Rosa, slept peacefully. Rosa was sixteen and pretty—as bewilderingly beautiful as Marie had been at that age—but at sixteen one does not ungerstand the tragedy of a great love reduced to smouldering ashes. She was in love herself—and but for her Giovanni long ago would have ended the matter in the only way he knew.

The detective listened, lan-guidly at fits, but as the old man guidly at first, but as the old man poured out the story of his sorrow and his wrongs his features softened. The door opened and a young man stepped in, looked amazedly at the group, and then clutched Rosa to him. "Pietro," she cried, "You must"

Something moist glistened in the detective's eyes. He glanced slowly from father to daughter, and from daughter to sweetheart. Then he held out the locket

"Guess I understand," he murmured.

"Take this—it's the only evidence I have against you."

He pressed the locket into Giovanni's trembling fingers and hasteened from the room.

Full Elliptic Springs

Mean Tire Economy

For many years, Jackson engineers have recognized the fact that a saving in the wear of tires is the most substantial reduction that can be made in the running cost of a car. With this point in view, they have made extensive experiments with various systems of spring suspension. Their tests have proved beyond doubt that the full elliptic spring is the most flexible by from 33 1-3 to 100 per cent.

As a result of these experiments, every Jackson car has been fitted with four full elliptic springs—designed in correct proportion to the wheelbase and weight, and Jackson cars have always been known to give exceptional mileage from the tires. It is the resilience of the springs that relieves the tires from the shocks and strains of rough roads, and the experience of Jackson owners has shown that with full ellipitic springs, the tire mileage is far greater than with other types.

Comfort to the passengers is another feature of the Jackson spring system. With full elliptics, Jackson owners have found that they could drive, without the slightest discomfort, over roads and at speeds that were formerly considered impossible.

Let us show you how the Jackson takes the rough spots, and tell you the experience of Jackson owners with tire mileage.

"Here comes an Indian-the machine that evolved motorcycle electricity! "

Of all departures made by the Indian for motorcycle development, its 1914 electrical equipment has received the readiest and most extensive recognition both in America and abroad.

Behind this success is a story of more than twelve months' engineering endeavor—research—deliberation—selection—test—and costly experimentation, before the Engineering Department stamped its final O.K. on every minute mechanism and made this announcement:

Indian Motocycle

for 1914— all standard models equipped with electric head light, electric tail light, electric signal and two sets of high amperage storage batteries. The Indian electric lighting system, especially, qualifies as the most/advanced mode of illumination today for the motorcycle. It has been proven at all the cardinal points:

-economy
-accident resistance —wear Bach battery is ample for 750 miles of night riding—cost of recharging is very small. The total electrical mechanism is protected against vibration and shock by the Cradle Spring Frame and Fork-devices which play a large part in motorcycle electricity as evolved by the Indian.

There was little change in the posi-tion of the riders during the past week, of which there are thirty-two who have won prizes at the Motor-drome and elsewhere. Among the new ones to figure in the list are Herb. Mc-Donald and A. Nicholls, both of whom scored victories since the totals were published one week ago. Two of the new Canadian champions, Spencer and McMillan, are at the top, but Walter Andrews, the old warhorse, rests in seventh place. The veteran has not been doing much riding this season. Twenty-four bicycle races have been run off this season, and with the exception of the Waterloo meet, practically every contest has been held on the new saucer. Fourteen riders have divided the victories in the two dozen events. Including all races up to last Wednesday night, the prize winning list is as follows:

large discounts and loss because styles change.

Types of Rims.

While there are several types of rims requiring different types of tires, and also a demand for both plain tread and anti-skid tires, the tire dealer can estimate the demand quite accurately in advance, by taking an inventory of the cars which provide his available business, and make a record of the sizes and types of rims. Consequently, he does not need to carry such a heavy stock, neither does he have any goods left over which have to be sacrificed on account of any change in styles from season to season.

In other lines of business, take for example, the automobile business, it is difficult to find their prospects. As a result an automobile dealer demonstrates his cars to many people who Hamish MacKay Arousing Interest in the Possibilities and Future of the Music of Scotland.

Music played an important role in the celebration of the six-hundredth anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn at Carnegie Hall on June 24 Hamish MacKay, the clever Scottish actor and singer, who is well known in Toronto, gave an address on "The Possibilities and Future of Scottish Music," in which he referred to the movement in Edinburgh to found a national school of Scottish music, in order to give young composers the training necessary for the creation of music individually Scottish. The speaker asked the support of Scots in America for a project to further Scottish. tish creative work. He also stated that he wished to correct a rather general impression that Scottish music consisted of "common songs, com-monly sung by very common people. He said that Scotland possesses over five hundred songs, which were the finest of all folksongs. THE real origin of Longfellow's "Evangeline" has been traced back to another New England writer, Nathaniel Hawthorne, who had a habit of gathering notes for story material. Among his notes appears this one: "H. L. Conolly heard from French-Canadian (Mrs. Halibura French-Canadian (Mrs. Hallburton) the story of a young couple in Acadia. On their marriage day all the men of the province were summoned to assemble in the church to hear a proclamation. When they were assembled, they were all seized and shipped off, to be distributed thru New England, among them the new brides. among them the new briderroom. His bride set off in search of tim; wandered about New England all her lifetime; and at last, when she old, found her bridegroom on his death-bed. The shock was so great that it killed her likewise." When Longfellow heard that Conolly had been trying vainly to interest Hawborns in the story, he said: "If you fon't want this incident for a tale, let on't want this incident for a tale, let ne have it for a poem." Hawthorne nsented and Longfellow began the tual composition of "Evangeline" in 1845, completing and publishing it in Itual composition of 1847.

Longfellow sets his tale in the secluded Village of Grand Pre (now less melodiously known as Horton). The atmosphere is one of quiet happiness. Here is the view of the valley:

In the Arcadian land, on the shores of the Basin of Minas, Distant, secluded, still, the little vilage of Grant Pre
Lay in the fruitful valley, vast meadows stretched to the sastward, Gwing the village its name, and pasture to flocks without number Dikes, that the hands of the farmers had raised with labor incessant, Shut out the turbulant tides; but at stated seasons the flood gates Opened and welcomed the sea to wander at will over the meadows.

West and south, there were fields of flax, and orchards and cornfields
Spreading afar and unfenced over the plain; and away to the northward Blomedon rose, and the forests old, and aloft in the mountains
Seafogs pitched their tents, and mists
'from the mighty Atlantic Looked on the happy valley, but ne'er from their station descended.
There in the midst of its farms, reposed the Canadian village.

. . . A ND there dwelt Evangeline Bellefontaine and young Gabriel Lajeunesse, son Basil, the blacksmith. Their vows had been plighted and the day of their formal betrothal was at hand. Fair was she to behold, that maiden of Fair was she to behold, that maders seventeen summers, Black were her eyes as the berry that grows on the thorn by the wayside, Black, yet how softly they gleamed beneath the brown shade of her tresses!

In a setting of peace and beauty the poet describes the home of Evangeline and its surroundings, the blacksmith shop, the domestic life of the farm.

Into this peaceful community comes a feeling of disquietude. English vessels with their cannon pointed toward the village ride in the mouth of the Gaspereau. On the fourth day after arrival, the betrothal feast is elebrated, "under the open sky, in the odorous air of the orchard." In the evening the men were summoned to the church and there heard the proclamation that their lands had been confiscated on account of their disloyalty the English colonies.

On the fifth day after this the Acadian men were hurried on board the mips, and, after them, the women and children. In the hurry and confusion the families were separated, some embers being carried to one ship and me to another. Evangeline had time ly for a passing word with Gabriel. only for a passing word with Gabriel.

Her father, stricken with grief, died upon the shore there and was buried.

THE EFFECT THAT ENDURES.

The artist descends within himself, and is that ionely region of stress and strife, if he be deserving and fortunate, he finds the terms of his appeal. His appeal is made to our less obvious capacities: To that part of our nature, which, because of the warlike conditions of existence, is necessarily kept out of sight within the more resisting and hard qualities -like the vulnerable body within a steel armor. His appeal is less loud, more profound, less distinct, more stirring-and sooner forgotten. Yet its effect endures forever. The changing wisdom of successive generations discards idas, questions facts, demolishes theories. But the artist appeals to that part of our being which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in use which is a sift and not an is not dependent on wisdom; to that in use which is a gift and not an acquisition—and therefore, more permanently enduring. He speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives; to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain; to the leavest and pain; rounding our lives; to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain; to the latent feeling of fellowship with all creation—and to the subtle but invincible, conviction of solidarity that knits together the loneliness of innumerable hearts to the solidarity in dreams, in joy, in sorrow, in aspirations, in illusions, in hope, in fear, which binds men to each other, which binds together all humanity—the dead to the living and the living to the unborn.—Joseph Conrad. THE SECRET BOOK

A Fantasia of Literary Characters, Books and Librarians. HIS is a reader's book, I imagine

we might call it a "book-worm's book." It will not appeal to that large class we call the "average reader"; it will be apreciated only by book-lovers, those to whom books and the people in them are realities. These remarks are not intended to be disparaging but descriptive. From the way the author presents his story it would seem that he is suggesting it as something that might wander thru the brain of a librarian who was delirious with fev-Sometow or other before the er. At one session for example it is narrated how Sherlock Holmes solved the mystery of Edwin Drood; Upon another occasion a member gives a paper on the characters of Jules Verne. Other chapters deal with the trials of the librarian, sometimes it's the circulating de partment, sometimes the reference, sometimes the juvenile. The book is humorous, of course, it could not be forgiven otherwise. Perhaps the best bit of humor is the chapter on "immoral books." Horace, one of the boys in the children's department had hear discovered in the page. had been discovered in the possession of a dime novel—had been showing it to some of the other boys. So the shocked assistant went to the librarian, who after issuing a searchwarrant of Horace's pockets collect-ed the following: An image of a

Miss Larkin, the librarian, was still unsatisfied. Miss Hannay, the assistant, whispered, "He put it in his inside coat pocket." From thence Horace drew a white mouse. But why Horace's aunt was no bookworm; she was not even an "average readshe was not even an "average reader." She attacked the problem with the assistance of her friend, Mrs. Buntin. One book was "Treasure Island." Opening it at random she began; "One more step, Mr. Hands and I'll blow your brains out! Dead men don't bite, you know." ... and more like that. Horrors! that was surely the bad, horrid book; so they consigned it to the kitchen fire and tried the other. "Luck and Pluck. Uncle Sam's Sam or Working for the Government." It sounded nice; began "One bright afternoon in Sepember a handsome bright faced youth entered the building ... and made his way to the chief of the bureau," and more of this perfectly harmless stuff. changing later to what we call the "uplift style." Next fhorning Miss Larkin received a note from Horace's aunt informing her of the cremation of "Treasure Island" and thanking her for the other which seemed to be a truly moral story. HAT a long, fine thread the spinner can make from a very small bit of fluffy silk, cotton, or wool! What slivery lines the glass-blower draws from an almost negligible quantity of material! How infinitesimal in thickness is the sheet of gold-leaf hammered and re-hammered by the skilful metal worker! Similarly the experienced novelist can take a microscopic story-germ and spin it, draw it out, and hammer it flat until—lo! we have a whole three-hundred-and-odd page novel What Gilbert Parker has given us in "You Never Know Your Luck" (Bell & Cockburn), is a short story motive drawn to a delicate tenuity with the skill of the finished artisan. The scene is the Canadian Northwest, at least so says the stage drop-curtain— What silvery lines the glassleast so says the stage drop-curtain-a "proem" to the story in which we are a "proem" to the story in which we are given glimpses of billowing wheat-fields, and singing birds—but so far as the rest of the stage scenery is concerned the story might have been laid anywhere. It is really immaterial to the plot whether the setting be Canada. South Africa or Australia; all that is really needed is some out-of-the-way colony to which an Irishman of noble birth may go when he has gambled away everything on the horse-races. James Gathorne Kerry has been five years in Askatoon (by the way, why not Saskatoon at once—it's much more musical?) when we meet him. As witness in a murder case he is forced to give publicity to the fact is forced to give publicity to the fact that he is really Shiel Crozier, and that that he is really Shiel Crozier, and that he came to Canada under a cloud (only a little cloud, already described for the dramatic situations are never particularly tragic in the story), and that he left a wife behind. This brings in Kitty Tyndall, who is really the central figure of the story. Not knowing that Crozier (or Kerry) was a preempted claim she sort of staked him out as a homestead for her affections. The great point of the book is Kitty's sacrifice, and her part in mending the sacrifice, and her part in mending the matrimonial breach. Quite a first-rate "summer reading" tale.

THE SALAMANDER.

Study of a Peculiar Type of Modern American Girl. N A well-written foreword Owen Johnston, author of this book, explains the purpose of his work, and justified the need for enlightenment on the subject chosen. He refers to the great world revolu-ion gradually taking place in regard to women, that her economic dependence on man in the past had fettered her, that in thousands the great army of women had moved toward the cities and attained independence, that these naturally fell into two classes—"the great mass who must work, and the this a questionable book for young smaller who must live, who are de-girls, but the Bohemian life, pictured

To this latter class belong the Salamanders, and the "Salamander in the last analysis is a little class the salamander in the last analysis is a little class to the salamander in the last analysis is a little class to the salamander in the last analysis is a little class to the salamander in the last analysis is a little class to the salamander in the tle atom possessed of a brain, thrown against the great tragic luxury of New York, which has impelled her to it as the fiame the moth."

Johnston insists that the type of young girl described is not ephemeral so that this phase of society must be accepted as a part of our growing

He describes the adventures of Dore Baxter, a very beautiful girl of twenty-two, who is living a Bohemian sort of life in a New York boarding-house In her Salamander companions he pic-tures different types, and incidentally shows the various fortunes and mis-fortunes that await the wary and unwary feet of those who live this dang-erous life. In the adventures of Dore all types of men are introduced, from the grocer's clerk and press agent for a local theatre to millionaires and judges of the highest circle of society.

by a wrong move. HE problems of marriage are freely discussed, and the Salmander's desire for equal freedom with men is plainly declared. On this question such phrases are encountered as "Marriage is a reciprocal tyranny," "an institution for the assembling and transmission of property," "each sacrificing what he doesn't want to sacrifice, or one doing all the sacrificing," "marriage, a social umbreila."

Two truths in the book are noticeable—Judge Massingale says: "The great elemental forces of nature you are playing with are bigger than you they'll conquer you in the end—decide for you. Now you play at fooling men so much that you fool yourself,"

The flash of wit and repartee is excellent, the interest breathless. To the average reader the character of Dore appears greatly exaggerated, but that is necessary to impress the type. The dangers accruing to Salamander life are strongly emphasized—that the continued excitement becomes a dissipation, that there is no real living of life, but a rejection of it and that there is constant danger of losing all by a wrong move.

The World Window

Two Great Commoners

Mr. Chamberlain's death has again recalled the curious parallelism between his career and that of Mr. Gladstone, in whose cabinet of 1880 he entered official life. Each entered the house of commons as a fervid supporter of one party and finally transferred allegiance to the other. But, whereas Mr. Gladstone's transformation from the rising hope of the Tory party to the veteran apostle and preacher of advanced Liberalism was a gradual process, extending over his whole middle life, Mr. Chamberlain's reversion from Radicalism to Conservatism was accomplished in comparatively few years. In each case, however, compulsory retirement came, with their supreme tasks unfulfilled. The champion of tariff reform, however, was stricken down at an age when the elder statesman was only entering upon his last great fight. Both in their pathetic retirement and growing physical weakness, endured with a fortitude and heroism that called out the admiration even of their political foes.

London was impressed as never before by the recent international congress of the Salvation Army. It offered the most vivid illustration that could possibly be imagined of the universality of its appeal and of the living influence of its founder. The four thousand delegates who filled the temporary iron building erected in the Strand were drawn from thirty-five countries, and the testimonies were rendered in twenty-three different languages. Even more striking was the memorial service held in the Albert Hall for the Army victims of the Empress of Ireland catastrophe. What deeply impressed even the unregenerate spectator was the "extraordinary happiness" that distinguished these variously dressed, variously complexioned Salvationists, and the great fact that it sprang from the denial of self and devotion to a life of service. Tributes to the splendid work of the Army were given by the King and Queen, the prime minister, the highest dignitaries of the church, and many men of foremost place in the United Kingdom.

U. S. Parcel Post Growing

During 1913, the first year of the United States parcel post, 600,000,000 parcels were carried, upon which the average postage was ten cents. So successful was the service in its early stages that the postmaster-general at once proceeded to extend and improve the system. The weight limit was increased in the first two zones to fifty pounds and the rates decreased, and this led to further large accessions of business. It is interesting to be told also that the small city and village merchants have found the parcel post to be a valuable means of increasing their trade. Fear that the city mail-order houses would affect the small trader was adroitly used by the express companies against the movement for the introduction of the government service. But the local merchant finds that his area of business has been extended, and he has now outgrown his dread of the parcel post.

So accustomed are we in these days to inventions and discoveries undreamed of a hundred years ago that no one would be surprised if the Atlantic were crossed by airship during the current year. An attempt would have been made this month by Lieutenant John Cyril Porte, of the British Navy, in the new Wanamaker hydroplane America, had unexpected troubles not developed during the initial trials. The main difficulty arises from securing safety in water without too greatly diminishing speed in air. Mr. Curtis, the builder, had devised boards to take the place of pontoons, but so far they have failed to solve the problem of enabling the craft to rise out of the water, and it is possible that pontoons will have to be used after all. The attempt has meantime been postponed till the August full moon, in order that further experiments be made. The problem resolves itself into the question of securing more planing power.

Woman Suffrage Gains Ground

That the declaration made at the recent biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, held at Chicago, in favor of woman suffrage will greatly assist that movement, is admitted by many prominent newspapers in the United States. By what is described as a "vigorous and preponderant chorus of 'ayes'" the convention passed a resolution stating that "Whereas the question of political equality of men and women is today a vital problem under discussion thruout the civilized world; Resolved, that the General Federation of Women's Clubs give the cause of polifical equality its moral support by recording its earnest belief in the principle of political equality, regardless of sex." This "moral victory," as it is called, is regarded as likely to hasten the enfranchisement of women in the States that have not yet taken action in that direction. During the week of the convention the supreme court of Illinois held the recent amendment granting partial suffrage to be constitutional.

of much damage to fruit and field crops, is not yet dispelled, but it is being replaced by the knowledge that far more injury comes from insect pests, upon which birds mainly feed. Insects constitute sixty-five per cent. of the total yearly food of woodpeckers, ninety-six per cent. of that of flycatchers, and ninety-five per cent, of the yearly food of wrens. Upwards of 5000 insects have been found in a single bird's stomach. These figures are given by Mr. C. Gordon Hewitt, who adds that the value of the birds is increased by the fact that at the time when insects are most abundant birds are most active and Ontario has had for many years an act for the protection of insectivorous and other birds.

The New York Governorship

Colonel Roosevelt would like to be governor of New York, but he can only succeed by a fusion between the Progressive party and the Independent Democrats, who are opposed to Governor Glynn. Meanwhile District-Attorney Whitman will be the nominee of the Republican

Mr. Roosevelt will not support Whitman, and the Independent Democrats are not inclined to support Mr. Roosevelt. The former president has been vigorously attacking Woodrow Wilson, and is undoubtedly preparing to be a candidate against him, and, if possible, as the nominee of the Republican party.

The New York World, which has a longstanding feud with the Colonel, announces that it will support Whitman as against Glynn, but that under no circumstances will it support Roosevelt. For that matter, nearly all the New York newspapers are hostile to Mr. Roosevelt, altho they devote unlimited space to his sayings and doings from day to day. A remarkable man -of dynamic force-no one can ever be quite sure that Mr. Roosevelt will not get anything he

Direct Legislation

If the issue of direct legislation was subordinated in the Manitoba campaign, it may have been because of the way in which the people of Saskatchewan were tricked by the politicians after the province had declared in favor of the initiative and referendum. Premier Scott, in 1912, declared for "direct legislation" and Hon. Mr. Haultain, his opponent, did the same. But, when the Scott government was returned to power the party politicians of both sides were quite willing to have the pledge go unredeemed. A bill was passed establishing the initiative and referendum, but it was not to come into effect until it had been approved by a certain percentage of the voters in the province. Then a special election was held at which the requisite number of votes were not cast, and the whole reform was True, Judge Doherty, the minister of justice, is apparently of the opinion that all such legislation is ultra vires. But surely the matter ought to be decided and at an early date, for if the people of any province have not the right to govern themselves in their own way the sooner they know it the better.

We venture to predict that in all three prairie provinces before long, laws will be enacted giving the people a more direct voice in public affairs, and especially in the nomination of party candidates by the primary system.

Have We Too Many Elections?

Our neighbor, The News, never wearies of saying that we have too many elections in this country. Just what this means we do not know, unless it is that the terms of service are too short. Possibly our contemporary would like to see the mayor and city council elected say every three years, instead of annually, but we doubt if there would be much popular support for such a change were it to be advocated.

But, to be fair, we think The News is objecting to our frequent elections for the provincial and Dominion parliaments. At present we elect the house of commons for a five-year term, and our Ontario legislature is elected for four years. Surely it will not be seriously argued that we should only choose a new parliament say every ten years; or that it is not, on the contrary, a good thing to have parliament refreshed and invigororated by frequent appeals to the people.

True, we might arrange to have dominion, provincial, and municipal elections held on the same day; but we think the experience of the United States should influence us against this heroic method of reducing the number of our

The Pan Handle Gone

The State of West Virginia narrows to a mere tongue of land between the states of Ohio and Pennsylvania commonly known as "The Pan Handle." The Pensylvania, the B. and O. and other great railway systems between the seaboard and the Mississippi cross this portion of West Virginia, and the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg are known as "The Pan Handle System." For many years railway dining cars were not allowed to sell intoxicants either in Ohio or Pennsylvania but all such sales were supposed to be made during the few moments of the day or night occupied by the train in crossing the "Pan Handle."

But now comes the announcement that West Virginia has gone dry. The citizens of the State from Wheeling to Parkersburg who are not pleased with the reform may find solace across the river. But, what is to become of the great travelling public? Possibly the crack trains hereafter will be run over the "Pan Handle" at seventy miles an hour so as to forestall the efforts of the West Virginia constabulary. Possibly West Virginia won't bother with the trains but that is by no means certain. The man with a thirst has to keep moving around these days.

OR a long time I have cherished ONE would have been quicker than Madam Blavatsky herself to refuse credit for all the hanges that have occurred in the other agents thru other channels, and of the operations of the Salvat Army will readily illustrate this. Ye Booth and Madam Blavatsky. No less apparent is the common authority from which she and Robertson of Brighton derived their commission, the Rober the necessity for all the various me operations, but it is the same manifestation of the Spirit is given the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every MADAM BLAVATSKY has several of the gifts mentioned, the word of wisdom and the can youch: the gift of understanding of working miracles, of discerning of operation, that is all strictly according to the record. A recent writer, Rev. Holden E. Sampson, whose volumes on "Progressive Creation" umn, recognizes the cyclic character of the great changes that occur in the and he attributes it in an ingenious order and succession with which the earth comes in centact as the globe earth comes in centact as the globe swings around in the orbit marked out by solar attraction. "Each part of the cosmical body is a sphere," he says "belonging to one of the Plane-son Macdonald and others have set many notable way-marks. Frederick Denison Maurice, Dean Stanley, Charles Kingsley, Frederick W. Farrar brought the same impulse down in the English Church to a later day, but it was in Robertson that the new broad thought first formed articulate voice in the English pulpit.

ADAM Blavatsky was born in 1831. In August, 1851, a girl of twenty, at the time of the great exhibition in London, beside the great exhibition in London, beside the comes in centact as the globe swings around in the orbit marked out by solar attraction. "Each part of the cosmical body is a sphere," he says "belonging to one of the Plane-say, which traverse the line of the Zodiac, and enter each of the Twelve Houses of the Zodiac angually." His theory, which is based to some extent on the anoient ideas underlying astrology, accounts for the similarity of the leading types of any periods. "The Barth, moving in the central orbital Path around the Sun, is so placed that it receives and transfers the migrating microcosms, in strict regularity and order to the Solar Spheres, which transfer them, in due time to their Paradisal all Resting Places; and the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the committee of the same is performed on the Earth in the receives in the committee of the committee of the committee of th earth comes in contact as the globe

Its mineral springs rival the most famous in the world. The temperature is very even, and frost has never been known. It is seldom that the mercury goes above, 90 degrees, and it has never gone below 49 degrees, according to the records covering a period of years. Cases of rheumatism, asthma, stomach trouble and many other maladies are cured by the residence on the Island. No coughs, colds or fevers-no sunstrokes or heat prostrations.

Flowers, Fruit and Sunshine all year around in the Isle of Pines. Every month is harvest time. You can grow three crops a year. NO COLD, BARREN WINTER TO ENDURE WHILE THE GROUND LIES IDLE, BRINGING IN NO INCOME. The Isle of Pines is in every sense an American colony. You will feel at home there. Over 6,000 Americans are interested there, and over 99 per cent. of the land is owned by them. A large number of Canadian settlers are there to bid you welcome. The Isle of Pines is 90 miles south of Havana, Cuba—only four days from New York by steamer. It is an Island of eternal June, fanned by ocean breezes and protected by the warm waters of the Gulg Stream from the blighting frosts which devastate Florida's groves. Irrigation for fruit trees is unnecessary.

CONDUCTED BY MISS M.L.HART

An interesting item in the report of the Women's Sanitorium of London, Ontario, is that which tells that a collection of paper was undertaken by the children of the schools for the purpose of assisting the objects of the society. The greatest interest was taken by the boys and girls, and trucks, drays and all manner of vehicles were drawn into requisition to transport the gathered material. Nearly six hundred dollars was the result of the children's campaign of last year, and in addition to the financial return. a great deal of knowledge and interest, which otherwise would not have been given to the public, was distributed among parents and pu-

CLUBWOMEN WORK

RERE IS, IN Redlands, Cal., an organization of women known as the Contemporary Club, which has concentrated its efforts for fifteen years on the beautifying of the city and the raising of civic standards. The mem-bers of this club last year organized the Redlands Horticultural and Improvement Society, which already has some 400 members.

Whatever has to do with the beauty of the city, whatever has to do with the cleaning up of vacant lots and establishment of school gardens, whatever has to do with the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers—all these and many other allied movements for civic loveliness are the concern of the new

It is now engaged in planting trees, flowers and shrubbery along the railroad approaches into the city. Other trees, shrubs and flowers are being planted along a boulevard leading to the mountains. Semi-annual flower shows are held to stimulate an interest in floriculture and in the improvement of yards with flowers and vegetable gardens. Redlands, with its fourteen orange packing establishments, employs large number of women. The clubwomen established the Redlands Day Nursery for the assistance of mothers working in these plants. In this nursery thirty small child-ren are cared for from 6.30 a.m to 6:30 p.m. They are given two whole-some meals. The cottage in which the nursery was established has been bought by the club-women and an employment bureau and a clothes bureau have been opened there.

The club co-operates with the city council in civic improvement. It has been able to obtain the adoption of ordinances requiring that alleys be kept clean and that cans for waste paper be placed at convenient points over the city. The women also have secured the opening of well equipped playgrounds in two of the city's parks.

TORONTO IS BIG Beach's Progressive Club Has Energetic President Who Believes in Suffrage

Among the women who are working continually, and consistently, in many public activities is Mrs. Charles J. Campbell, of "Blenvenu." Balmy Beach. As president of the Beaches' Pregressive Club, Mrs. Campbell has done good work along several lines, all in keeping with the progressive spirit of the times. Pure food, votes for women, international disarmament, good roads, tree-planting, children's playgrounds—these are some of the many subjects which occupy the time and attention of this club, the popularity of whose president is testified to by the fact that at the last annual meeting she was at the last annual meeting she was unanimously re-elected to office. The keen interest taken by Mrs. Campbell in suffrage was recognized in her appointment to the vice-presidency of the lately formed Pro-vincial Suffrage Association. She has also been honored by being made representative of the National Counat the International meeting in Europe, and also of suffrage at the meeting at Budapest. "Woman's Parliament" the Latest Development in Training the Feminist HEN our Canadian women and activities which require public speaking as one of the essentials to cess, the plan lately adopted in London for the purpose of teaching women the processes of debate, legparliamentary procedure seems commendable.

The imperial metropolis has just established a "Woman's Parliament," under the leadership of a specialist, Mr. Harold E. Gorst, who has already done a good deal of work along these lines for the sterner portion of the community in Lon-don, the provinces and New York, don, the provinces and New York.

At the present stage of the world's existence, training in every department is necessary to best results.
Some, indeed many, of our women have already gained facility in speaking and fine grasp of constitution and procedure in public affairs thru continuous holding of office in the many societies with which the country today is honeyfice in the many societies with which the country today is honey-combed. On the other hand it happens not infrequently that women and girls are given office without any previous training, but on their ularity alone.

It is quite evident that appointees such as these are handicapped from the start and that if there were any means by which they might apply themselves to the task of preparathemselves to the task of prepara-tion and equipment for their new duties they could take up their work with much more confidence than many do at present. For these a "Woman's Parliament," or, in other words, a school, where something of the art and science of speaking in public together with a study of public, together with a study of the general laws by which organiza-tions are governed would be of de-women in the old lands have a much greater appreciation of public matters than we have here. point of course may be open to a difference of opinion, but this is the way it seems to us. In England perhaps, in proportion to numbers, the general interest is less, but those who work in any public cause, study that cause from a broad outloo and on a systematic basis. In politics, for example, English women have for generations been an important factor. Those in Toronto who have heard Mrs. Pankhurst, whether in sympathy with her mes-sage or opposed, could not but have been struck with the easy grasp which she had of any matter she discussed. Questions poured in upon her from the audience were answered with immediate and assured knowledge, and with the poise and courtesy that denotes the speaker accustomed to public debate. Others whom we have heard at the meetings of the International, women who hailed from Italy, France, Demark and other countries, as a rule showed an inherent and well-trained method of thought and expression method of thought and expression such as is only gained thru long practice or from considerable attention to systems and government along general lines.

'While acknowledging and feeling laudably enthusiastic over the fact that some of our women are considerably proficient along these lines there still remains the fact that many, club women especially, would be benefitted by the services of a school in which public speaking and things pertaining to the carrying on of the work of societies would be taught, on something the same lines as the one just launched upon the women of the big City of London.

A New Message From the First Suffragette

S APPHO, the magic of whose songs still holds the world, who has been elevated in the pantheon of fame as the Tenth Muse; Sappho, who has recently been acclaimed as the "first suffragette," sends us a new message from the ruin of antiquity. And the uncovering of the new but meagre treasure has brought to her appreciation and defence students established in painstaking fact, who seek to clear painstaking fact, who seek to clear away the myths, the misrepresenta-tions and the calumnies surrounding the personality of the woman who shares with Homer the Poetical throne of Greece.

The Egypt Exploration Fund reremnants of two rolls of Sappho, re-vealed along with two rolls of her contemporary and friend, Alcaeus. The 56 fragments were all that was left of her "Book 1 of the Odes: 1320 lines." They are written in an informal hand of medium size, dating from the Second Century, 800 years after the nostess had present a way. after the poetess had passed away. From these and other recent finds, it has become increasingly clear that the great lyricists were still freely read in the early centuries of the Christian era.

It is the ardent hope of several organized educational bodies in Europe that Sappho, like Bacchylides and Menander, may yet be resuscitated; and the regret that the thousand more lines of the Book of tated; and the regret that the thousand and more lines of the Book of Odes could not have been recovered entire is offset by the hope that some day from this side of the Atlantic will come the finding of perhaps the entire works of the brilliant Lesbian. Somewhere in the United States this treasure is supposed to be reposing, the delight of a venerable scholar who jealously guards the knowledge of its possession.

Sappho in America.

Efforts have been made to trace it without the slightest promise of success. The possessor of the yellow papyrus evidently knows he has a treasure that cannot be com-or it may be that, like the man of whom De Maupassant wrote, who evolved the personality of the com-plete woman from a lock of her hair he has found in the drawer of an old desk, this American, who the lyrical jewels of Sappho, takes a miserly delight in knowing that her witching voice speaks to him alone. This, indeed, is one of the possibilities advanced by Prof. A. S. Hunt, who is one of the discoverers of Sappho's new-old lyrics. Here is his literal translation of the best of the material brought to light:

Some say that the fairest thing on the black earth is a host of horsemen, others a host of foot, others of ships; but I say that is fairest which is the object of one's desire. And it is quite easy to make this clear to all; for Helen with the beauty of many men before her eyes judged him the best who destroyed the whole glory of Troy, nor bethought herself at all of child or parents

SAPPHO'S "FAIREST THING IN THE WORLD."

The Newly-Found Poem as Arranged in English Verse by MARK TELFAIR.

THE fairest thing in all the world, some say, A host of horsemen is, in brave array; Some say a host of foot, in glitt'ring panoply, And others yet, winged fleets upon the sea.
But fairest yet to me, of ice or fire.
Is but the object of the heart's desire.

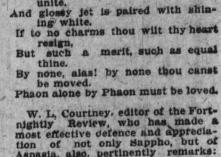

When, with the beauty of so many men
Of deeds heroic crowding in her ken,
Fair Helen judged him best, without alloy,
Who brought to wreck the dominance of Troy, No thought of child or parents was a bar To being led by Love astray and far; For woman's ever easy to be bent When light she thinks of home and its content.

And, now arises, glowing in my mind, Far Anactoria's presence, sweetly kind. For me the radiance of her happy face, The music of her footfall and her grace, Than all the brazen chariots that slay And Lydian men afoot, in mailed array.

Know, in this world, it is by fate so willed We cannot have our every wish fulfilled: To pray to share again the things that bless Is better far than gray forgetfulness.

fathers swore their paternity to this fathers swore their paternity to this famous woman. Her father, according to Ovid, was a person of whom not much seems to be known named Scamandronymus. Cleis was her mother and she named her daughter Cleis. Her husband was Cercolas, a rich gentleman of the Isle of Andros, and he left her a young widow. Richly endowed of mind as a child, she became the centre of a literary circle of women, her pupils in poetry and general literature. Some of the cold scrutiny of today fixes her as merely an exceptionally talented schoolma'am.

The Ionic Greeks kept their women in seclusion, but along the seaccasts of Asia Minor, among the Acolians and the Dorikus, women had a larger amount of liberty. They had place

"As if it were not enough that the comic dramatists should have a good deal to say on the subject of Sapping, we have the Latin licentious poet, Ovid, concocting imaginary epistles to Phaon." Libelling the Lyrioist F COURSE, she was reputed to have had many lovers. When we discover that among them are Archilechus, who lived quite a century before her, and Haponax and Anacreon, who were un-born when she died, there is suffi-cient reason for a good deal of skepticism. The personality of Phaon, supposed to be a lover of Sappho, comes to us from Ovid. But there is no mostion of such a name there is no mention of such a name in the fragments of Sappho's poetry and probably the name is an invented one, being similar to Phaethon, an-other name for Adonis, the lover of Aphredite. 'Alcaeus, who was also a citizen of Mitylene, and, together with Sappho, a great master of lyric poetry, must have spoken to the poetess in terms of love, for we have a frag-ment rebuking him:

"Violet-crowned, pure. sweetlysmiling Sappho, says Alcaeus, 'I in thine ear, but shame restrains my tongue.' And, according to Aris-totle in his Rhetoric, Sappho answered; 'If thy wishes were fair and noble and thy tongue designed not what is base, shame would not cloud thine eyes, but thou wouldst freely speak pho's verses are not fiery;

they are never ornate, but marked by a fine restraint and full of subdued but repressed brilliance. "They are the essence of refined and cultured simplicity—that kind of simplicity so difficult of attainment, that faultless simplicity which is the last word of Art."

A New-Old Utterance

A ND today, when five milfions of women have the franchise in the United States thru peaceful and educational campaigning, and the frenzied militants of England are threatening to resort to murder, and Ontario women are now strengthening their forces so that it will be a matter of months and not of years, as formerly, when they will be infranchised, the Lesbian, "the first suffragist" who, so early in the progress of civilization, typi-fied intellectual freedom and the broadened sphere of women, is finding an increasing utterance for her melodious numbers, long hushed in the dust and the silence of the cen-

Sappho, in other quarters, should be regarded as a strong-minded woman. Attic comic dramatists did not spare manhood to their shafts, so that, according to one defender of the Lesbian, "we view her thru a veil of prejudice and contumely."

Sappho probably means lapis-la-zuli, just as electra means amber. It might be that she assumed the name herself, or it was her pet appellation. just as one of her companions was called Gongyla, meaning round or a Describes Herself?

The club owns a $25,000 clubhouse. No Dissension Regarding Re-election of President of International Council

T IS matter most pleasing to the thousands of women in Canada who know of the great work of the Countess of Aberdeen in connection with the Council of Women the world over, but especially in Canada, to learn on the authority of Mrs. Cummings, the national secretary, in a letter to the editor of The Wo-men's Century, that the report, which was widely circulated at the time of the meeting of the International in Rome, to the effect that there was faction opposed to the re-election of Lady Aberdeen as president, is altogether without foundation, and must have been manufactured by someone gifted with a highly colored imagination.

There was no faction," writes Mrs. Cummings, "at the meetings in Rome, of which Mrs. Sewall was the head, opposed to the re-election of the Countess of Aberdeen to the presidency, as described in the article"—an article in The Century— "The sentiment therein expressed may be those of Mrs. May Wright Sewall, personally, and no one more heartily agreed with her as to the desirability of the president for the next Quinquennial period, being a woman of the Latin race, than did Lady Aberdeen, herself, but the fact remains that the nomination of Lady Aberdeen by all the national councils, and by the executive committeethe only bodies that under the constitution can nominate-was unanimous, and, therefore, her election was by acclamation."

It is expected that the president of the International will be in Toronto in October to take part in the big celebration of the attainment of their majority by the national and local councils. The Countess of Aberdeen is sure then, as always, of a Caed Mille Failthe awaiting her from the women of Canada.

A Weekly Letter Of Comment And Opinion

THE tragedies that have encompassed the life of the old emperor of Austria, Franz Josef, have been enogh to embitier the lives of many hundred men, yet the aged ruler of Austria has led a by no means unhappy life. This is in particular to the extraordinary buoyancy of character which he undoubtedly possesses. His has always been a blable,gentle, cheerful nature, touched with a happy commonplaceness which has been his saving. Franz losef is one of the sanest of men. He a lover of little things. It was never the cost or value of a gift that inchanted him; it was the sentiment which accompanied it that he cared bout. In tastes he is simple; he is indeed bourgeois. He never cared for the pomp of royalty or—tho he is ways observes them—the strict onventionalities of court life. He prefers bouillibaisse to an entree of the and or one who have the more to come and a comely have from the power of the pod lager to Burrefers bouillibaisse to an entree of this a la regime; good lager to Burandy, and a comely hausfrau to a ourt beauty. The man in the street dores him because he always stops othat with him. Were he a canditate for labor he would be elected the Studholme or John Burns. And think he might favor woman suf-trage. Anything to please the ladies. and now, the good, sensible and ven-seble emperor is fortunately depriv-d of too keen feeling by the anaes-hetic, old age. This last House of Lapsburg tragedy—shocking or de-locable as it is—cannot wound that old heart as did that of Meyerling or Geneva. Franz Josef and one old heart as did that of Meyerling of Geneva. Franz Josef and one other living person alone hold the folution of the mystery of Meyerling. And neither will reveal it. It has been said that only a year ago the old emperor destroyed the last document relating to the tragedy of his son. Rudolph. The other person in the secret is a woman—an did woman now. Not any of the many stories built about Rudolph and his love, the exquisite Baroness vetsera are true. The truth may never be revealed.

"What Time Have I to Be Vext" HEN one is nearing the bor-derland thru much journey-ing thru the years, one is not susceptible any more to the deep blows of the knife of fate. It seems so little worth while to be troubled. Like the grandmother in Tennyson, the beloved dead has but

"Gone for a minute, my son,
From this room into the next.
I. too, shall be gone in a minute
What time have I to be vext."
One should not wait to be old to acguire such philosophy, since, young or old we are here but for a minute, nd every day sees us nearer to that sext room" which every one of us must enter.

The shocking blows which have from time to time fallen on the heart of the aged emperor must have dulled it to sharp pain—the greatest the death blow was not as some aver the death of his only son-but that of the beautiful wayward and eccentric Hizabeth, his wife—the loveliest and oneliest woman of her time.

The Mystery of Fate
AS legend has it, the misfortunes which have overtaken Franz Josef of Austria are the outcome of a mother's curse, people ought to pause before giving utterance to wicked modanities. Curses do not always come home to roost, but it would be giving too much rein to the touch of superstition with which every human being appears o have been at birth endowed to believe for a moment that even an conizing mother's invocation would heard and granted by the Supreme Being who is so just, so calm, so allpitying and compassionate. ourse was put upon the emperor he was a very young man who had just become ruler over a resed to interfere with the sentence execution against a youth who condemned for participating in he Kossuth revolution, and the boy's her, on her knees before the oung emperor, cursed him root and

May death avoid you," she said until all you love and hold dearest shad nearest die by violence, or in shame and disgrace, or by their own hand. May sorrow live with you always. May those whom you leve be remembered only for the ob-loguy and shame that will lie for-loguy and shame that will lie forr on their names. May you die ne and lonely and unregretted. And may such mercy as you have shown my son be meted out to you

But the horoscope of Franz Josef ad predicted all this. At the time of his birth the sun was exercising an evil sway, and Jupiter was un-triendly. If one inclines to belief in these sort of things better believe science or art of astrology than the power of a curse. Man may not summon the spirits of evil at his passionate will. He is no Supreme Being to pour vials of wrath or call upon the thunders and lightnings to obey him. If every curse uttered fell where it was wished from the beginning of the world, this planet would long ago have been whirling

The audience is first told that it is about be regaled with an artistic emotion unlike anything else, then Hades is opened and all the noisy devils are let loose. There are twenty-five noise makers in the Futurist orchestra—buzzers, rattlers, exploders, whistlers—in fact it is a one-band man made up of the funny chap who clashes cymbals and does cat-calls in the corner of our own theatre. Think of a whole orchestra of him and you have the idea. It is like feeding time at the zoo when the animals have been kept waiting overtime. Most of the men went out to see a man about a dog, while the women stopped their ears. One "noise spiral" was entitled "A Meeting Motor Cars and Aeroplanes." A Motor Cars and Aeroplanes." A Militant Meeting" is to be the next Futurist composition. We now have the mad painters, mad writers, and mad musicians. And I know a mad politician or two this minute. HEN the Duke of Portland's son came of age the other day, his father said to the day, his father said to the 4000 guests who gathered to congratulate him on his heir's majority: "Let me suggest to my son that during his journey in life he should never forget the family motto, 'Craignez Honte' (Fear Disgrace). Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Your Memory Wanes With Illness or Old Age

BY DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG. A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins).

VOU are often amazed to find in converse with men eighty and ninety years old, that they recollect the events of fifty and sixty years previously with precision and in detail.

Yet a test of these "wonderful" memories will diclose the fact that recent events have left little or no impression upon them. In fine, the sensitive film of recollection, has failed to stow away for future reference, the things that are of fresh and virgin appeal.

One of the reasons that as years accumulate, mid-dle age and older persons say "things are different now from what they were, when I was a child," or "the winters were worse when I was a boy," and "things are not the same as they once were," is attributable to the fact that the sharpness of your senses, the emphasis of your paying attention, and the sensitiveness of your mental film is very great in youth and adolescence. It declines as your age advances. Briefly as you become set in your habits, as your eyes, ears, muscles and skin filter what reaches them into a well-beaten path, new impressions fall into old channels and take on either former shapes, or are relatively weak. That is to say, there is a dulling of the intellectual film, the edges are worn off; there are no newly ingrained records of the passing show indefibly stamped upon the living photographic plates.

Professor Herbert Spencer Jennings, the distinguished zoologist of Johns Hopkins University, has proved that animals of a very low order need never grow old or die. Theirs is the life perpetual. You may observe such animalculae as the paramecium—it looks like a heelless slipper—dart hither and thither under the microscope. If the liquid in which they grow is freshened up from time to time, none of them ever die.

Several thousand generations of paramecia are alive today in Professor Jennings' and Professor Woodruff's laboratories. Not only is their life seemingly eternal and without old age or senility, but the memory of what went on in the world round about is carried unto the thousandth and five thousandth generation.

The poet may not be so far from the savant when he says that the memory streams which overflow the soul may pass away in part, but a consciousness remains deposited upon the silent shore full of fond recollections and images as well as precious thoughts that shall not die and cannot be destroyed.

if you remain, like a paramecium, always young and impressionable, if your tissues hold firmly to an alert sensitiveness, if your muscles are not hemmed in by fat and avoirdupois, your power to remember recent events will be as quick as that of a boy. that of a boy. To overeat, to ride in lieu of walking, to worry instead of exercising, to keep late hours and not fully recuperate, to fall ill, to use tobacco or alcohol too often or for too long a period of years, spells disaster to youth no less than to the capacity to remember

The ability to recall what has happened once or more times is keen from infancy to adolescence. Then the health and adaptability of tissues is strongest. Memories are stowed away like fresh impressions upon the disc of a graphophone.

Recollections, fond or unplement, are variable and often impossible to summon back. Memory, after all, depends upon the perfection of your senses of strength, vision, touch, hearing, smell and the other human textiles, plus attention. Unless you pay close attention to the course of worldly events, all recollection of them may vanish.

At some future moment, in a dream, a reverle or some other confused or inappropriate moment, what occurred before your eyes and ears, unattended to, may return most unexpectedly. This does not occur often past middle life, but is a symbol of youthful sensations and thoughts.

The test of a good memory, is to recall at pleasure, perfectly and without bias, preference or mixed perceptions, exactly what has happened in the last few hours, days, weeks and months.

Use Care Choosing The Steamer Gift

As transatiantic steamers are already leaving their docks with crowded cabins, the question of what to give the friend who would a traveling go is a live one and it is better to consider it early in the game than be obliged to rush off at the last moment and buy something just for the sake of "delivering the goods."

Flowers and fruit will always the most popular steamer gifts and out of the present rage for baskets out of the present rage for baskets has sprung a rather pretty little idea for sending a corsage bouquet for each day of the trip gracefully arranged in one. Such a present should be turned over to the steward who may be depended upon to produce a fresh nosegay each morning. Let it be an inexpensive basket, however, for no woman has the heart to leave either this or a gift book on a steamer and lugging extra folderols over the continent is anything but a pleasure. Books have been sent to travelers so beautiful that they turned into bugaboos before very long, and as for baskets, Gott bewahre!

A good steamer provides fine fruit

A good steamer provides fine fruit enough to satisfy the most rabid fruit enthusiast but this seldom or never seems to occur to the person in search of a gift. Candy and beautiful assortments of wafers are attractively put up in metal boxes that insure crispness to the end of the voyage. A variety of sweets wrapped in small packages adds an element of surprise which sustains interest as long as the present lasts.

Somehow advisers always take it for granted that the traveler is going to be a girl, tho one of the surprises of continental travel is the number of unattached middle-aged and elderly Canadian women going about alone from place to place. Obviously they all got to the other side on steamers and one wonders sometimes what their gifts were like. As they all seem to have the bag habit in some form or other, perhaps a new one to hang on the steamer new one to hang on the steamer chair to catch the magazine, glasses, bit of fancy work, or deck of cards would be acceptable.

For more pretentious gifts from near friends or relatives, there are score of practical and attractive leather-covered articles. Flasks, for instance, for the brandy it is well to have on hand, or a pillow to fit into the little corners and make traveling easier, for even the most luxurious compartment de luxe was never built for a Canadian back. Then there are clocks in leather Then there are clocks in leather cases and slippers too, to say nothing of miniature medicine kits fitted out with court plaster, flaxseed and every-day family remedies for tooth and headaches, and other familiar but none the less trying ailments. Field glasses are sure to be welcomed by the conscientious traveler who is going to take an intelligent interest in tramp steamers, flags of other lines and everything else within their range, and a safety flags of other lines and everything else within their range, and a safety purse will not be duplicated.

As a victim of too much "bon voyaging" let me beg of you to avoid those two hackneyed words. In tired moments following an effort to do three galleries, a cathedral and a restaurant or two, at one and the safety of the the same time, there is a strong temptation to take one's spite out on the unoffending gift bearing such a message, with words to the effect that it is a bum voyage that only an ignorant idiot would ever have

PERFECT SITTING POSE

S LOUCHING is a habit which many of our women and girls have contracted. In some instances it is effected for the purpose of attaining a certain poise of the body—a poise which has been decreed by recent fashion authorities with little regard for hygic. YOUR GARDEN AND MINE

Care of the Garden During Hot Weather

By Katharine Moore Matlack. ARTICLE XVI.

PLANTS are living things, breathing thru numerous pores in leaves; they also transpire or give off moisture, in addition to ordinary evaporation. As soon as a plant gets dry at the root and there is no more moisture to take up, the leaves begin to wilt, other parts of the plant keep on losing moisture and there is not account.

There is a stage of dryness at which a plant will begin to suffer according to its kind.

During the dry. spells in summer all growing plants, should be kept moist at the roots. With plants growing in the open ground it is not always possible to supply water just when they need it, but much can be done to allevlate the suffering.

Watering, mulching and cull vating.
A fourth way is by shading, but this is usually only done in the case of transplanted things that have not

Watering. THE newest and most approved method of watering lawns and gardens is to divide them and gardens is to divide them into six parts, thoroly soaking one-sixth each day and giving the other five-sixths the usual sprinkling in the late afternoon or evening. That one-sixth should be so thoroly soaked that you should be able to find the soil quite wet for three or four inches on digging down. Always use a fine spray, like rain; don't wash out the soil.

There is a mistaken notion that plants should not be watered in the hot sunshine. While it is not safe to spray tender foliage in 'the hot sun of the day, it is always in order to supply water to the roots when they need it and even to the topsif thoroly done. The hose should be in constant use in hot weather. Use one of the many good sprinkling at-bush or tree.

A day's neglect will often sataly injure such a plant, and the results are frequently not noticed till the plant is thoroly wet. Then one wonders what could possibly have caused the trouble!

Mulching.

Mulching.

THE average small garden is seldom mulched, And it is so easy and pays so well! Cover the roots of your roses, rhododendrons and any shallow rooted plants or anything that looks "droopy" with the clippings from the lawn, with leaves from the woods, with trimmings from the bushes. This prevents evaporation of moisture from the soil.

Don't devote your entire attention from the soil.

Don't devote your entire attention to those things yet to bloom and neglect the faithful friends who have already filled your garden with their bloom—foxgloves and popies, sweet williams and roses, azalgas and paconies. They may be exhausted from excessive hearing, in which case give each a good handful of bone meal stirred in about the roots (not touching), keep the soil loose and moist about them and be sure to mulch in the driest weather.

Cultivating means "fining" the surface and is the life of any crop. It enables the upper roots to secure more rapidly their food and water. It also changes the arrangement of the particles of the soil so that the several ingredients are being continually brought together. It destroys and discourages weed growth and makes possible the formation of carbonic acid, which is generated by the decomposition of vegetable matter. So stir the soil vigorously and often, at least every five days. Besides the finely stirred soil forms a dust mulch which helps to retain moisture.

There are forks for weeding and stirring the soils some with short and some with long handles, which are a saving of the back. The short ones cost ten and twenty-five cents; the long ones, fifty to seventy-five

There are also long-handled weed-pullers at seventy-five cents, and a special dandelion extractor, which is very convenient. Weeds must be kept down as they exhaust the soil,

For spraying to prevent and cure insect pests, fungus and other diseases there is a small hand pump at one dollar, which is sufficiently necessary on large places.

Every gardener should have not

I would advise you to burn very little, keeping all clean garden litter for summer mulching and winter protection.

Wire and wooden trellises can be bought of nurserymen. They come in many shapes and styles for arches, porch vines, house trellises, ctc. These are sold by the running foot or square foot, in galvanized wire, ranging in price from twelve cents per running foot to twenty-five cents per square foot for arches. Wooden trellises painted white or green cost one dollar for six feet.

Keep your roses and vines tied up and trained in position before the shoots get too stiff to manipulate. Wire nails, called vine or wall nails, and bent at right angles, are a great aid in holding vines in place. Raffia is an excellent and sightly help in tying up—you know how strong and tough raffia is? It sells for twenty cents per pound. Use green as near leaf color as possible. Then there are wooden labels that should be used in the garden; a hanging tree label for marking trees and shrubs and roses, and a pointed kind that can be stuck in the ground to mark seed beds, new plants, etc., Labels cost but a few cents a dozen.

For the more ambitious garden there are iron markers with a holder that contains a card recording the variety of the plant, time of planting, etc. The card is either waterproof or covered with a celluloid face. These cost from fifty cents to one dollar and seventy-five cents per dozen.

Care of Tools.

TOOLHOUSE is a necessity in the large garden; in a small yard, one can do very well with a harge box. Some protection from the weather must be given. Hang long tools on the walls, lay short ones in orderly fashion on shelves, keep poisonous insecticides where small children cannot reach them. Remove dirt from your tools, especially from fine shears and other nickel tools. Oil the tools occasionally, never allowing rust to accumulate.

Spades, shears, edgers, lawn mowers, etc., should be sent to the hard-ally, never allowing table.

AN EXERCISE WHICH ACTS AS A TONIC TO WEAKENED MUSCLES

rounds out the chest and gives more character to one's carriage.

Another good exercise is to stand with one's back to the wall—allowing the whole body to rest against it; standing so, the arms are brought up at either side—touching the wall—to a horizontal position, they are then bent at the elbows and the fists brought over toward the head. By reversing the movements the hands are lowered to the side. Repeat this ten or twelve times.

This exercise when practiced with energy is very effective; it acts generally as a tonic to the various muscles which are called into action and has a tendency to life up and rectify depressed organs.

In addition to the benefits just mentioned, the pose serves as a guide in attaining the proper poise. It should be remembered that unless the shoulders are thrown back and the chest expanded, a graceful walk is impossible. This is necessary to distribute the weight properly to secure balance. The spine should be straight, yet with a slight lean forward; otherwise the abdomen is in-correctly placed. The lean should not be made from the shoulders or waist, but from the hips.

However, I think that the habit of slouching is more general in one's own home. There one does not feel the restraint of criticism, and often a general relaxation of the muscles is allowed, as a false means of securing more rest. This is a mistake; in-stead of resting, it makes one more fatigued. This is so because it places the various organs out of their natural position, and puts an unnatural strain upon the muscles.

NE often sees a sitting pose as shown in the illustration. It is a position both ungainly and far from conducive to perfect health. It has a tendency to make one shoul-der higher than the other, causes a twist of the spine and retards circulation. Many a woman will walk with the greatest amount of grace, but the minute she sits in a chair she loses all her charm.

There are but three correct modes of sitting-trunk perfectly straight, trunk leaned slightly forward fom the hips, or trunk reclined backward in a resting position.

The mistake is often made by women when seated of allowing a relaxation of the body to a forward-collapsed—position. This interferes with the position and work of heart, lungs, and digestive organs. Its effect can easily be proven by raising the trunk to the proper position (upright), and drawing in a long breath. one will readily realize that the system has not been imbibling enough air, and not to do so means loss of energy and health.

The reason one must be seated properly to obtain rest and relief is that the relief of sitting down comes thru releasing the strain of the mus-cles that hold the body upright,

THIS MOVEMENT LIFTS AND

also thru the decreased demand on the heart.

If one wishes to rest the muscles that hold the trunk erect in the sitting position, the entire trunk must be reclined backward against the be reclined backward against the

* * * REALIZING that slouching is de-trimental to health and one's good appearance, I would remind you that many a woman destroys her charm by wearing her clothes in a slouchy manner. The finishing touch to a beautiful picture is often its frame, and so it is with dross as regards a beautiful woman. dress as regards a beautiful woman. Yet, except for the few "the art of dressing well" seems an almost neglected one.

Dress should be carefully considered and adopted for the occasion.

Do not dress out of time and season. A variety of colors may be worn if in harmony. Dress with a careful and thoughtful regard for individual needs. You will then be well dressed if clothes are properly

I think that there is no more com-plete finish to dress than a good glove. Gloves should fit the hand perfectly, and should be fully long enough to cover the wrist, and should have two or three buttons—these should be kept fastened; otherwise the hand will look short and thick. An ill-fitting glove will, in fact, disfigure the most lovely hand and destroy the harmony of the entire costume.

CARING FOR OTHER PEOPLE'S GARDENS DURING VACATION.

at many unusual trades. There is a stay-at-home woman in the suburbs who has a number of her neighbors' gardens to take care of during their owners' absence from home. So successful has she been that she plans to take up houseto-house gardening as a profession, is not strong and has been advised to procure out-door employ-

Flowers are so intimately associated with women's work that both gardening and florists' shops seem peculiarly suitable as means of livelihood for women.

Gardening, if undertaken on a large scale, means the employment of one or more assistants, but a visiting gardener who takes care of the small terraces or back yards of the average suburban house, can readily do what is required in at least six or eight establishments.

A dibble is a round, sharp-pointed tool which makes a convenient hole in which to put your transplanted seedlings. A dibble costs but forty ditions. Even this plant will turn yellow and droop in summer. Do not utterly starve and neglect this good

What to Wear When Gardening.

As FOR one's gardening apparel, it should be as loose and comfortable as possible and the sensible wash dress be entirely covered with a pretty apron.

The members of an horticultural society at a recent show sold (and wore) charming aprons of gayly flowered chintzes and cretonnes that were very convenient and decidedly were very convenient and decidedly becoming as well. These were modelled after the "painters' aprons" and covered the fair gardeners from chin to toe. Across the front was a large oblong pocket. Wear a broad-brimmed Panama hat or one of white linen; both are light and cool. They can be made as charming with ribbons and flowers as desired or serve as merely utilitarian. Fortunately, the modern hat is big of crown and "stays put" without the aid of ning. There are without the aid of pins. There are advocates of the pink sun-bonnet. Personally I dislike all sun-bonnets. They are as hot as a tunnel or a train-shed on civic holiday!

But the sun will take its toll of freckles and tan, so wear some sort of covering large enough to shade the back of the neck and the throat, or you will repent in cold cream and blisters and vain regrets. If your skin is very delicate anticipate the regrets and wear the cold cream and a coat of talcum powder when you start out agardening.

By all means wear gloves. Even a garden is no excuse for tanned and freckled hands and arms and unkempt finger nails. They are unfeminine, therefore unlovely. I find the usual gloves sold for gardening entirely too clumsy, but old summer gloves of silk, liste and kid are comThe nar caught up constructed the bijou weds, and "Dutch he the real newspaper rent as s in building question tween the and the r But it been call for sale he are really actually understoo.

But it is only lately that we have been called upon to admire articles for sale in the "Dutch shops," which are really and truly Dutch and are actually imported from that little-understood land.

And please bear in mind that these are Holland Dutch articles. How the term "Dutch" came to be applied to things pertaining to the Father-land I do not know, but certainly the inhabitants of the Netherlands have reason to complain of our in-cluding the German nation among their number and classifying everything from the Kaiser's realm as

It is necessary, therefore, to explain that the articles here illustrated are of brass. They are decided novelties in the Dutch line, for heretofore we have been looking to Holland only for such things as quaint chinaware, with the inevitable windmill waving its arms in welcome from the top of a hill in the illustrations that are always in the illustrations that are always a feature of the Holland ware. But a feature of the Holland ware. But this new ware has no windmill or illustration of any kind, and it is not even chinaware. It is plain brass, of a cunningly-devised kind that retains its lustre indefinitely. I am assured that there is no necessity to clean this ware. No metal polish is required and there is no labor involved in keeping it ever bright and attractive.

And during the time that I had And during the time that I had the articles in my possession for the purpose of having them photographed I did my best to disprove this assertion of the salesgiri by using all the ordinary methods of tarnishing metal. But the metal refused to tarnish and finger marks, refused to tarnish and inger marks, refused to stay finger marks, vanishing as quickly as placed on the glittering surface of the metal. This quality of the new Dutch ware will recommend itself to us, for of all tipesome tobs that of cleaning all tiresome jobs that of cleaning tarnished brassware is one of the mired.

But I waited and presently the mystery was solved. From the interior of the teapot the young woman fished out a little crumpled slip of paper, which she handed to me without a word. On it was written in English: "This article is guaranteed by the Holland government to be perfectly non-corrosive and safe for domestic use." Those were not the exact words, but that was the effect of the legend on the little crumpled slip of paper. Beneath the words appeared that most impressive symbol to unaccustomed Canadian eyes, the seal and signature of the royal representative before whom the little teapot had appeared for his approval and indorsement us a safe receptable for the beverage of the Dutch housewife, or in this case, of the distant Canadian lover of the quaint and curious in inverted novelities. lover of the quaint and curious in imported novelties.

MMENSE is the variety of articles in the imported Dutch ware. Among them a handsome hot water holder, which in itself is an attractive ornament to the domestic table. As most women will be interested in the prices of these articles and as a good picture of this hot water holder is shown on this page it may be well to state here that the price of this hot water receptacle is three dollars. It can be used just as well for cold water. I call it a hot water holder because the salesgirl said that was the idea in the mind of the Dutch gentleman who designed this little pitcher.

There is a tea set, also illustrated on this page, which can be bought complete for $4.50, little brass teapot, little brass milk pitcher and R. & S

Flower holders of an infinite variety of designs may be seen at the Dutch shops and on the counters devoted to Dutch ware in the stores. Most of these are priced at two dollars each. Some are all brass, in quaint and clever workmanship, unlike anything seen on other counters in the stores, and some are a combination of brass and glass, usually in some other part of the body, altho the eyes are often at fault. Of course a nervous shock, a worry, a trouble may give cause for a headache, which, while painful, is not necessarily alarming.

But if a certain kind of headache recurs at frequent intervals, it is time to find not only the cure, but the cause. One should not try headache remedies promiscuously without a doctor's advice, unless one knows what is in the dose, because headaches which show a tendency to become chronic are not properly headaches at all and cannot be reached by headache medicines, or at least permanently cured, such a headache is a sympathetic message in the brain recording a disturbance somewhere else in the body. The trouble may, of course, be in the head, trouble may, or course, be in the head, the ear, the eyes, the nerves, or adenoidal growths—all cause headache, the first symptoms of an abcess in the inner ear is a severe headache. Kidney trouble is also indicated by a headache and we all know that most of the ordinary headaches are directly due to the stomach. most of the ordinary headaches are directly due to the stomach.

The woman who wakes early or attempts much work before break-fast is apt to get a headache until she learns to eat a small something or drink a glass of milk to satisfy her stomach until the family meal is prepared. A headsche from shop-ping or fatigue is often caused by the brain's protest at having to work on an empty stomach, or worse yet, with a stomach overloaded with indigestible food.

Malarial headaches come on towards afternoon or evening, as does the headache due to nasal troubles, the latter being more noticeable when lying down at night when the passages of the nose are not able to discharge the collected pus. When the diet is right and still the headaches continue, see a doctor at the first opportunity, for the longer the trouble goes on the more difficult it is to effect a cure and a woman with a permanent headache woman with a permanent headache is only half alive in her own estiTOMATO RECIPES

OMATOES are getting to be such an all-the-year-round vegetable that ways of preparing them are always of interest; paring them are always or interest; while there are no startling new or sensational recipes to other, it is sometimes good to be reminded of neglected or half-forgotten old ones, especially as gastronomic experts say that tomato cookery is the one culinary field in which Canadians

Tomato surprise and a mould of Tomato surprise and a mould of tomato jelly represent the two extremes in tomato salads. For the former sufficient pulp is scooped out to allow a portion of salad to be served inside the "love apple," and there is seemingly no end to the mixtures that may be used. Newer than the diced apple-essery-nut combination, finely chopped cold-salaw or crab salad, is a mixture of diced pineapple with nut meats or slaw or crab salad, is a mixture of diced pineapple with nut meats, or cream cheese combined with Roquefort chopped peppers and tomato pulp, or the pulp may be mixed with minced cucumbers, green peppers and a dash of onion juice or garlic. It is a sort of free-for-all salad, you see, the contestants to form their own combination from the odds and ends in their own ice boxes, seasoning them according to individual taste.

Either fresh or canned tomatoes may be used for tomato jelly. Let one quart of tomatoes simmer down to about half that quantity with a bay leaf and a small onion. Strain and season with salt and paprika or cayenne. Dissolve a third of a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water and stir it into the tomatoes. We a mold or bowl with cold water, pour in the jelly and set away in codel place to harden. Small ramekins or after dinner coffee cups may be used instead of one large mould. Turn out at the last minute on crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

Tomato Bisque

Tomato Bisque

Tomato bisque is always acceptable, being enjoyed even by those who usually do not care for soup. It is not a hit or miss potage by any means, and should be undertaken only when there is time to watch it carefully. Scald a quart of milk in a double boiler, meanwhile stewing one pint of peeled or canned tomatoes. Cream one tablespoonful of flour or cornstarch with a heaping table-spoonful of butter. Blend with a small quantity of cold milk, then with the hot, and stir until it thickens. Add one teaspoonful of sait, a little paprika or red pepper, and a tiny pinch of baking soda to counteract the acid of the tomatoes and keep the milk from curdling; stir in the hot tomatoes which have been rubbed thru a fine sieve. Serve at once preferably in cups, with a dessertspoonful of whipped cream on each. Make only the quantity of tomato bisque required for a single meal, as it cannot be warmed over without "breaking" the milk.

ID-SUMMER is a period of de-lightful transition in fashions. Nothing is settled, and every one is taking individual liberties with the novelties of early spring and summer. Variations of all the styles of the season are seen, and there are occasional hints of something different, which makes one wonder what the cutumn will bring forth.

White always reigns supreme Whatever gown one wears, for whatever occasion, so it be white spotless, crisp, becoming seems to be good style. This year white organdle is the newest material. It is made up in the quaint styles of 1830, ruffled, and draped, or it follows the simple lines of flounces and a wisp of lace trimming drawn into a deep girdle. I have seen some white organdles made with the accepted long tunic, banded with fine white pique, the same ma-terial being used for the warstcoat and flare collar, and appearing as cuffs on the organdie steeves.

Midsummer hats are larger. The transparent hat is the newest. It is usually of net or lace or tulle with cordings of satin, and is in the modined picture style familiar for many years. The trimming is simple, either one big rose in some unheard of color, such as bright blue or emerald green, perhaps resting upon silver leaves.

Summer roses, especially in the pale tones of pink, yellow and the niost popular white ones, are made of organdie. They seem exactly fitted to the season, and carry out the effect or coolness even when placed on the black velvet hats which top the thin-. nest and most elaborate white gowns. Other roses are of chiffon with the gleam of gold in their hearts.

At a recent lawn fete in Newport did not wear the tulle hats, through which the sunlight filtered, casting delightful shadows on their faces, Mid Summer Stockings.

Stockings for mid-summer show most gorgeous insertions of lacs with jeweled motifs. Skirts are so extremely short that shoes and stockings are of paramount importance. Likewise, they are as expensive as they are glittering. Again, it is not intended that they shall ever be washed. They visit the dry cleaners' instead of the laundny. Golden silk stockings with topaz and jet vines up the centre length are worn with Colonial pumps in which golden yellow kid and patent leather is combined.

Pale blue stockings with stiver wheat sheaves embroidered on instep and ankle rise above bronze and blue and silver brocade shoes Parasols are of all colors, all shapes, all sizes. Some of the handles are so tremendously long, that when the sunshade is carried open it soars so far above the head it shadows it seems floating on high with no part in the life below it.

Fur and swansdown is used to edge some of the new parasols. The latter is to be chosen above the former. Swansdown is always attractive and has a softening effect which is be-

The swansdown edged parasol shown here is carried with a gown which shows that the pannier still lives. In fact, in pompadour silk and worn with a net gown, it is one of the most attractive mid-summer styles. The foot edging of these net gowns is worthy attention. Does it forecast the revival of the pantalet? You know that garment has been persistently threatened.

Flower hats are always in good style. Pink roses, white violets, scarlet poppies or geraniums, all are used for these smart toques. Fluff, frill. lacy airiness, the froth of fashionsuch is the strongest mid-summer note. It is not a time to take anything seriously, not even dress.
