A.H.S. FIELD DAY

Students of Athens High School awaited with bright anticipations the arrival of Friday last, when their annual field day sports were to take place. Friday came and brought cloudy weather, threatening rain, a threat that was amply filled in the afternoon, forcing the postponement of part of the programme. The competition was keen in the different events and all honors were fully earned.

The girls did particularly well in their contests and demonstrated that their physical culture had not been neglected.

Following is the result of the different events, names appearing in order of position won:—

In the evening there was consolation for losers and added pleasure to victors in the concert held in the assembly room of the school. The programme had a distinctly student flavor and was filled with lightness, brightness, good music and scintillating wit.

Principal Sexton opened the programme with a brief address, followed by the chairman, Mr W. G. Parish, who presided in a pleasing way over the exercises of the evening. The programme included recitations by Miss Ethel Mansell and Miss Ruby Webster, songs by Miss Jessie Percival and Miss Nellie Kelly, a quartette by Misses Helen Brown, Nellie Kelly, Mabel Henderson and Frances Clow, a piano duet by Miss Lulu McLean and Miss Nellie Earl, a violin solo by Miss Frances Moore, a cornet trio by the Misses Gainford and Mr Cecil Leggett, a chorus by the school, a recitation by Miss Bertina Green, and the mock parliament.

The parliament, from the dignified Speaker Billie Booth down through the orators, all of high degree, to Hansard Reporter Coon, the event was exceedingly well put on. Ambrose McGhie led the Government while Cecil Leggett marshalled the Opposition forces. When the forensic oratory transcended the bounds of order, stalwart John Dillon, as Sergeant at Arms, renoyed recalcitrant members.

The concert was a most enjoyable affair and served to show that the students, without assistance, could present a very creditable Commencement programme.

Mrs A. A. Davis and Mrs R. H. Fields of Ottawa, were last week guests of Mr and Mrs J. H. Ackland.

Died—At the home of Mr William Hause, Plum Hollow, on Wednesday, October 11th, Mrs Chauncy Bellamy, aged 89 years. The funeral service will be conducted at Mr Hause's residence at 2 p.m. on Thursday by the Rev. Mr Snell. Interment at Glen Elbe.

BAD DREAMS CURED

A Winnipeg Man Tells of a Simple Remedy That Cured.

ESCAPE FROM INDIGESTION

"Though I am an active hard working man, somehow I fell into a condition of poor digestion and disordered stomach," writes Mr. E. P. Whimney. "In the morning I had a very unpleasant taste in the mouth. My tongue was whitish and nothing tasted good. An hour or so after eating I experienced pain in my right side, gas formed in the stomach and caused great distress. Even in warm weather my hands felt clammy, and still worse my system felt clammy, regular, brooding and despondency would now and then get hold of me and completely unman me. When unfit for work I tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In my case their wonderful curative power was like magic. So mildly did they work upon my system I at first thought they wouldn't benefit. But a few doses proved how much they helped the stomach, how quickly they braced up digestion. Food tasted natural, my appetite improved, my face looked clear and bright, and day by day as I gained in health, so I gained in spirits. To-day I am as sound, healthy, vigorous and well as any man could be. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Beware of the dealer that may try to sell you an inferior pill to Dr. Hamilton's, which are sure to help and cure. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box. All dealers, or The Catarrhose Co., Kingston, Ont.

A READY RECKONER.

There are no cul-de-sacs for Irish wit. A "jarvey" drove Mr. Phil May, the wonderful English artist in black and white, new dead, round Dublin on his first visit to that city, and in showing him the sights stopped in front of the Bank of Ireland.

"On the roof of the building are six decorative figures, and Mr. May inquired of the man who represented."

"Begorra, sorr, they're th' twelve apostles."

"But," said Mr. May, "there are only six."

"Sure, I know that, returned the jarvey. 'th' other was are lurchin' wid th' Lord Liffintan.'" Youth's Companion.

LODGE NIGHT.

"Going out this evening, dear?" asked Mrs. Kerlessa of her husband, when she saw him getting into his rain coat in the front hall after dinner.

"Yes."

"Where are you going to-night, love?"

"Lodge."

"Don't you go to your lodge oftener than you used to, hubby?"

"None. Why?"

"Oh, nothing, only I get so lonely night after night sitting here all alone. I don't mind it so much while the children are awake and around the house, but they have to go to bed at 8 every night now since they've started to school, and after they get to sleep the house gets so quiet the ticking of the clock frightens me with its noise. I was thinking, as I sat alone here last night, how different it was in the dear dead days of our courtship, when you were my lover instead of my husband. Remember how unhappy you were if you could not be with me every evening. I don't blame you for having changed. No man runs after a street car after he has caught it. Still, honey, I would like to go out with you once in a while in the evening.—Buffalo Express.

3 Ways to Cook Cucumbers

STUFFED CUCUMBERS.—Take 6 nice cucumbers, about five inches in length; pare carefully and remove seeds, leaving the outer shell of cucumbers with both ends open. Prepare a nice croquette of minced meat of chicken and stuff the hollowed cucumbers with it. Have three or four potatoes mashed to close the ends of the cucumbers after stuffing. Roll the cucumbers in plenty of cracker dust, seasoned with salt and pepper and put in a well heated oven on a deep plate and bake for twenty minutes without turning. Serve hot on the same plate.

CUCUMBER FRICASSE.—Take short cucumbers, peel, cut lengthwise in slices one-quarter to one-third inch thick. Boil in water with one teaspoon salt until moderately tender. Drain off water. Have ready yolks of two eggs slightly beaten and a dish of rolled cracker crumbs. Dip slices of cucumbers into cracker crumbs, then into egg batter, then into crumbs again. Fry in butter until delicately brown. Serve hot.

CUCUMBER PICKLES.—Into a stone jar put one gallon of good vinegar and one cup each of salt, sugar and mustard; stir well, and add cucumbers, well sliced with a dry cloth, keeping a plate over them so they will be well under the liquor. No scum should form. If scum does, take out the pickles and prepare a fresh mixture. These are ready for the table in a fortnight.

CUCUMBER SALAD.—Cucumbers sliced thin, cover with water, in which has been placed one teaspoonful salt and one half soda. Stand one hour and drain. Mix with onion thin, mix with cucumbers. Dressing: One cup thick, sour cream, one-fourth cup vinegar, dash of pepper, pour over salad; sprinkle with minced parsley. Serve on lettuce heart.

"OLD MORTALITY."

Through the genius of Sir Walter Scott, the name of "Old Mortality" is known far beyond the bounds of Scotland, and everyone who has heard of the persecuted Covenanters are familiar with his real name. There are few churchyards in Galloway, especially in the county of Wigton, where his handwriting may not still be seen.

A native of Dumfries, James Patterson, was by trade a stone mason, but for the greater part of his life he exercised his craft without fee or payment.

His absorbing passion for the Covenanters led him to give up home and friends and to wander for forty years over the wild moors, in the lonely glens, and from churchyard to churchyard, to erect a stone wherever a martyr of the Covenant lay.

A sincere devotion led this venerable renovator of tombs to dedicate so many years of his existence to perform this tribute to the memory of these suffering people. Wherever a grave existed "Old Mortality" was sure to be seen busily at work, bent on his pious task, with his chisel and mallet, and his old white pony grazing by his side.

His last peregrination was in the neighborhood of Rankend, eight miles from Dumfries, when he was suddenly taken ill and was found on the roadside in a dying state. Kind hands removed the old pilgrim to a friendly house, where he passed to his rest in a few days.

He was born in 1712 and died in 1801. The memorial of "Old Mortality" is in keeping with the simple tastes of him it was designed to commemorate; it stands near Garpel Glen, one mile away from the village, known as St. John's town Folly of Vairy. This spot was chosen as the place of his final resting place.

The statue represents him in his favorite attitude when at rest, but his chisel is useless in his hand and his mallet is broken. His old pony, the sole companion of his wanderings, stands beside him, a mute witness of the patient toil of the aged Scottish pilgrim.—Miss C. Mason in The Animals' Guardian.

IN A FRIENDLY SORT O' WAY.

When a man ain't got a cent, and he's feeling kind of blue,

An' the clouds hang dark an' heavy, an' don't let the sunshine through,

It's a great thing, O my brethren, for a fellow just to lay

His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort of way!

It makes a man feel queerish; it makes the teardrops start,

An' you sort o' feel a flutter in the region of the heart;

You can't look up and meet his eyes; you don't know what to say

When his hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort of way!

O, the world's a curious compound, with its honey and its gall,

With its care and bitter crosses, but a good word' after all;

An' a good God must have made it—least ways, that is what I say.

When a hand is on my shoulder in a friendly sort of way.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

SLAUGHTER HOUSE.

(Montreal Star.)

Dr. Rutherford insists that all our slaughter houses should be inspected, and he is right. Wherever meat is killed for sale, the government or the local authorities should see that nothing is done to endanger the health of the buyers. One of the first functions of all civilized governments should be to make it safe for honest people to purchase food in public markets and shops without worrying about the sanitary conditions which may have surrounded its production.

A POST-ELECTION ISSUE.

Well worth keeping as a souvenir of the great fight over reciprocity is a double page in the current issue of the Canadian Courier, showing pictures of prominent victors at the polls on Sept. 21st. Another feature suitable to the week after the elections is an illustrated page dealing with political orators and their methods.

A WOUND-RFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or sore, such injury is insured against blood poisoning! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill.

Then again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again, as soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface, so stimulated that new, healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh, healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures all permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Mars, of 101 Delorimier avenue, Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box, if you send this advertisement and a letter, stamped and paid for, to the company. Address of any return of the eczema!

AT THE END OF THE WAY.

Well, they have gone out a bit. Lonely and gloomy, and they fill the years of one's youth, and they fill the years of one's old age.

And you like a blood-cleansing breeze that passes to kiss your face.

Oh, how they feel good on your knees. Then tossed red petals and goes.

And, tossed red petals and goes!

And tosses white dust on your hair! And then never minding the rose.

It flies and it leaves you all alone.

And old and the dear ones all flow;

The silver hair shines and the gold.

It is night, and you sit all alone.

And, childhood's a minute, and then Youth's manhood's a minute or two;

They are flown and come not back.

The middle age years are for you.

And they are a minute as well.

And old age keeps step with your pace.

And there is so little to tell.

And all of that's to tell.

And then as foretold it is you.

There's little for old hands to do.

When all that they love are far away;

Hands follow the path of the old.

Unseeing they climb up the stair.

To a little white bed in a room.

But the baby so loved is not there.

It is only a short little way

From childhood's a minute, and then Youth's manhood's a minute or two;

They are flown and come not back.

The shadows are starting to blend.

And dark brown eyes that never quail.

While the morning in glory is dressed;

Life's a non-stop day and good-bye.

But the end of the journey's rest.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

(New York Press.)

Reverend, solemn, it's comfortable and beautiful. It's in a style.

A woman is happy with a new hat, bunched with two and happiest with three.

The happiest homes are the ones planned by engaged couples before they have a chance to try it.

Everybody knows it's risky to gamble, but he knows it will be riskier for the fellow who has staked up the stairs.

A man who is to come home awful late at night, not to try to prove the clock in his wife's room is three hours fast.

SPANKED THE HIRED GIRL.

(Belleville Ontario.)

A farmer who'd been having considerable difficulty arousing his son every morning, careful to take up the stairs to the darkened to none morning and administered a good sound spanking. Returning to the kitchen he informed his wife of the circumstance. "Well, that settles it," she said, "we'll have to get another hired girl. While she's out come home last night and I had the hired girl occupy the room."

BANKS AND BONDS

1 Bonds have the preference as safe and profitable investments.

2 Formerly Banks, Insurance Companies and other financial concerns invested their cash surpluses largely in Real Estate Mortgages, today they are purchasing the Bond issues of established and prosperous corporations considering that they offer the greatest security and best interest returns.

3 There is no reasonable argument to offset the fact that what is the best investment for the Bank surplus is the best investment for the individual investor.

VACCINATION FOR WHOOPING COUGH.

(European Edition of N. Y. Herald.) The favorable influence exerted by simple vaccine inoculation during the course of whooping cough is so well known that numbers of doctors recommend that it should always be practised in such cases. The operation is quite harmless and the results may be very beneficial.

This has been proved by communications made in recent years to the Paris Societe de Therapeutique following upon conclusive observations described by Dr. Ch. Amat. He had noticed that when whooping cough patients had been successfully vaccinated, owing probably to the slight febrile eruption which accompanies it, the paroxysms of coughing ceased to number more than four or five during the twenty-four hours. Many doctors have since confirmed these statements. Success cannot constantly be counted upon to follow vaccination, but it is obtained so frequently that this method cannot be ignored.

Dr. Mehnert, practising at Jamestown, in Cape Colony, has recently pointed out the benefits which may be derived from vaccination by infants suffering from whooping cough at ages varying from three to nine months.

As soon as the diagnosis of whooping cough is determined from the first appearance of the paroxysms, or even sooner, during the course of the catarrhal stage, vaccination is practised in the usual manner. Of course this mode of treatment presupposes that the infant has not been vaccinated. As the pustules develop the paroxysms of coughing begin to diminish and then disappear completely at the end of fifteen days at the maximum. Care must then be taken to avoid any reinfection.

If it is an advanced case, where a little generalized congestion already exists, Dr. Mehnert considers it advisable to practice bleeding in addition to vaccination. Blood letting is to be recommended as a general rule when ever the dangerous condition of the patient calls for urgent aid, and the doctor is obliged to abandon medicamentous treatment either on account of the troublesome symptoms which may entail in the long run or on account of a real individual predisposition.

METERS ON ELECTRIC CARS.

The use of meters on electric cars, states Electrical Industries, has now become the rule rather than the exception, and within the next year or two the meterless car will be almost a curiosity. Testimony to the value of the watt-hour meter continues to accumulate at a most gratifying rate, for three out of every four cars are fitted with meters on the watt-hour principle. The long controversies between the two types of meters may therefore be regarded as practically settled by an overwhelming majority.

MY DOG.

I have no dog, but it must be somewhere there's one belongs to me—

A little chap with wagging tail,

And dark brown eyes that never quail,

But look you through and through, and through,

With love unspeakable, but true,

Somewhere it must be, I opine,

There is a little dog of mine

With cold black nose that sniffs around

In search of what things may be found

In pocket or some nook hard by,

Where I have left it from his eye,

Somewhere in foggish pulls and tugs

The fringes of relations tugs,

Or with the mischievous of the pup

Chews all my shoes and slippers up,

And when he's done it to the core,

With eyes all eager, pelts for more.

Somewhere, upon his hinder legs,

My little doggie sits and begs,

And in a wistful minor tone

Prays for the pleasure of the bone—

I pray it be his owner's whim—

To yield and grant the same to him!

Somewhere a little dog both wait

For me by some earnest care,

With eyes all alert, and tail all bent,

Who knows the kind of tail that meant—

With a wag of coils of glad delight

To bid me welcome home at night.

CHINESE SOLDIERS.

To the west the toughness of the Chinese physique may have a sinister military significance. Nobody fears lost in a stand-up fight Chinese troops could whip an equal number of well-conditioned white troops. But few battles are fought by men fresh from rest and mess. In the course of a prolonged campaign involving irregular provisioning, and drinking water, lying out, loss of sleep, exhausting marches, exposure, excitement and anxiety, it may be that the white soldiers would be worn down more than the yellow soldiers. In that case the harder men with less of the martial spirit might in the closing grapple beat the better fighters with less endurance.—Professor Edward T. Ross in The Popular Science Monthly.

THOUGHT IT FUN.

Three Owen Sound Boys Almost Blind Another.

Owen Sound, Ont., despatch: Three 14-year-old boys, Roy Cross, Thos. Shiers and N. McNab, influenced by moving pictures they had seen at the Avenue Theatre last Saturday evening, went out and purchased a quantity of cayenne pepper, and meeting Wilfrid Brown, who was going home, one of the boys caught him by the arm while another threw the pepper in his face.

The result was that the victim's eyes were almost burned out, and it was with difficulty that he reached his home, where his face was bathed and his eyesight saved. The culprits were apprehended, and appeared before Magistrate Crozier to-day. They had no excuse to offer beyond saying that they had done the act merely for fun, and thought that the only result would be that Brown would sneeze.

After warning them that he could make the sentence several years' imprisonment, the magistrate allowed the boys to go with the payment of a fine. Meanwhile the crown is taking action against the playhouse for allowing boys under 16 years to enter.

ITALIAN FLAG OVER TRIPOLI

Italy Preparing an Army of Occupation.

Italian Cruiser Sinks Turkish Gunboat.

London, Oct. 9.—A telegram from Tripoli to the Daily Mail says: "It is officially announced that Italian sailors landed at Tripoli to-day (Thursday), hoisted the Italian colors, and occupied the forts, where many dead were discovered. The Italians are now masters of Tripoli."

The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: After the shelling of Tripoli on Tuesday the operations were resumed yesterday (Wednesday) morning. The Italian warships again directed their fire only against the outer forts. It was feared that if the inner forts were shelled damage would be done to the town.

"The shore batteries in the Siatme and Hamidie forts were dismantled. Then the cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi entered the harbor and two officers with a detachment of marines disembarked and made their way to the Hamidie fort. They found that it had been evacuated and the Turks had carried away with them the sights of the guns. The bodies of three Turkish artillerymen lay in the fort."

"Up to the present, despite the bombardment, and despite the Italian exhortation ashore, there is no sign of surrender on the part of the Turks. The bombardment will, therefore, continue until the town capitulates or until all the Turkish troops have left Tripoli for the interior."

"Even if Tripoli capitulates to-day or tomorrow there will be an interval of several days more before the arrival and disembarkation of the army of occupation."

"When the army has been landed an offer of mediation by Germany or some other power is expected to follow immediately."

"The Tripoli lighthouse, having been destroyed by some of the first shots fired, Admiral Faravilla has given orders for its immediate reconstruction, as it is of the greatest utility to the Italian fleet."

In the present case the navy has proved its thorough fitness and the army has shown wonderful rapidity of mobilization, while the armaments respond to the most modern requirements. The only thing lacking is an experiment."

Altogether the experiment of Italy has proved most successful, showing, as she desired, that notwithstanding her colonial disaster in Abyssinia in 1896, she is a first-class military power, with which Europe must reckon."

It is reported to be the ambition of King Victor Emmanuel to extend his African possessions and attract the Italian emigration so as to make a vast Italian empire and resurrect for his house the title of the ancient Roman emperors.

ITALIANS IN TRIPOLI. Tripoli, Oct. 9.—The Italians have established a new government for Tripoli. Rear-Admiral Borelino has been appointed Governor. Captain Calmi was made commander of the forces disembarked by the Italian fleet.

After Italian seamen had been landed and occupied the Sultanie, the chiefs of the Arab tribes adjacent to Tripoli went aboard the Italian flagship and gave their submission. They begged the Italians not to resume the bombardment.

The German consul, as the senior member of the consular corps, also visited the flagship, and requested Vice-Admiral Faravilla to assume responsibility for the preserving of public order and the protection of foreign residents in Tripoli, which had been abandoned by the Turkish troops.

The admiral landed other detachments of sailors, with guns, including quick-firing pieces, and occupied Tripoli in a military sense.

This was accomplished without incident, and the appointment of a Governor followed.

The German consul informed Vice-Admiral Faravilla that during the shelling of the town no harm had been done to any European or damage to the property of Europeans.

ANXIOUS FOR MEDIATION. Berlin, Oct. 9.—Although the Italians landed marines at Tripoli, it is understood here that mediation will not be acceptable before the city has been occupied by the expedition from Italy, the first ship of which is due to sail for Tripoli to-morrow.

Germany in the meantime is endeavoring to restrain Turkey from taking any measures that might lessen the hope of a successful mediation, and has induced Turkey to withdraw the prohibition against the furnishing of coal for private steamers. This had seriously inconvenienced international shipping.

KILLED IN BOMBARDMENT. Berlin, Oct. 9.—A correspondent of the Wolff Bureau telegraphing from Dehliat on the Tunisian frontier, under yesterday's date, says: "Six soldiers and six Jews were killed and five soldiers and one Jew wounded during the bombardment of Tripoli."

The Europeans, of whom there are still 4,000 in Tripoli, were unharmcd. The house of the interpreter of the German consul was badly damaged, but the shells from the Italian fleet did comparatively slight damage in the city.

"The Moslems remained passive during the bombardment."

SANK TURKISH GUNBOAT. Rome, Oct. 9.—Provoked because she had been fired upon by the Turkish fort at Hodeidah, the Italian mining cruiser, Aretusa, attacked a Turkish gunboat and sank her.

Turkey having taken the offensive in the Red Sea where Italy had intended to remain on the defensive, the Aretusa and the dispatch boat Staffetta, and repair ship Volcano, all of which are armed and the smaller war craft available have been ordered to chase the gunboats that Turkey has in the Red Sea, and to attack the Ports of Yemen, if necessary.

PRIZE OF WAR. Saloniki, European Turkey, Oct. 9.—The Turkish battleship Feth-i-Bullend, held up and searched the British steamer Orchis, and finding forty barrels of powder on board, brought the vessel here as a prize of war.

London, Oct. 9.—The steamer Archis, seized by the Turks, was bound from Smyrna for Constantinople, and her owners here cannot understand why she was taken so long as she was only going to a Turkish port.

BURIED TURKISH DEAD. Rome, Oct. 9.—A wireless message from Tripoli says that the Italian sailors buried the Turkish dead, rendering military honors to those who chose death rather than to surrender. Twenty wounded Turkish were placed in the hospital wards of the Italian warships. The wounds of those were very serious. Others, who were slightly wounded, were carried away by their comrades.

Those of the injured Turks who were able to talk stated that further resistance on their part was impossible on account of the inferiority of their number and of their fighting equipment.

KILLED BY AUTO IN TORONTO

Oshawa Woman Run Down on Yonge Street.

Machine Climbed on Sidewalk and Struck Her.

Toronto report: Mrs. Elizabeth Salter, of 552 Simco street, South Oshawa, was run down yesterday by an automobile at Louisa and Young streets, sustaining injuries from which she died a few hours later at the General Hospital. The remains were removed to the morgue, where an autopsy was performed by Dr. George W. Graham.

In addition to terrible injuries, Mrs. Salter suffered greatly from shock, which hastened the end.

The chief coroner was notified, and Coroner J. W. Cotton, who was assigned to investigate the case, ordered an inquest.

Roy L. Brintnell, an automobile salesman in the employ of his father, President of the Brintnell Motor Car Company, Limited, 419 Queen street west, who was in charge of the auto, was placed under arrest on a charge of manslaughter.

The young man remained in the cells at the Wilton avenue police station until nearly midnight. Assistant Crown Attorney Garvey made an order for bail in $8,000, two sureties of $2,000 furnished by George Fletcher, Carlton street, and $1,000 by George S. Brintnell, the father.

The fatality occurred shortly before 5 o'clock directly in front of the store at Louisa and Yonge streets. Mrs. Salter and her husband, who were on their way down town to do some shopping after visiting a son on Givens street, just stepped from the doorway of the store, when Mrs. Salter was run down by the automobile. Before Mr. Salter could pull his wife out of danger she was knocked down, one of the wheels passing over her right leg. Dr. John Noble, of Carlton street, who was passing, dashed to the assistance of the injured woman, who was rendered unconscious, and after temporarily dressing her injuries and her removal in the police ambulance to the General Hospital.

When Brintnell found that the woman was receiving medical assistance, he says, he offered to convey her to the hospital, but upon learning that the ambulance had been sent for he took his machine to his father's garage. He then jumped in another machine and went to the hospital, where he was placed under arrest. Brintnell said that when he attempted to get clear of a rig in front of him the steering rod dropped and he lost control of the machine, which, taking a sudden swerve, jumped over a bicycle standing against the curbstone and knocked down the woman so quickly that he scarcely had time to shut off the power.

Mr. George S. Brintnell, father of the prisoner, stated last night that he made an examination of the automobile after it had been brought to the garage and found a defect in the steering gear, which, he believed, was responsible for the accident.

DAM BURST.

Lacrosse, Wis., Oct. 9.—Telephone advice just received at the offices of the Lacrosse Water Power Co. say that the west end of the main dam at Hatfield went out at 1:30. The dam is a solid concrete structure, 60 feet high and 100 feet deep at base. It was considered strong enough to hold any flood of water which might be turned against it. It is admitted that the situation is desperate, and relief parties are being hurriedly organized to go to the scene by automobile.

SPIRITUALITY THE THING NEEDED

Spiritual Awakening Within the Church Required.

More Important Than Increase of Members.

Toronto despatch: Continuing its review of the accomplishments of Methodism during the past ten years and the discussion of the unique problems which now confront the Church, the fourth Ecumenical Conference of the denominations to-day turned its attention to foreign missions. For this branch of its work, as well as in those considered in the first two days of the decennial meeting, it appeared that the need from the viewpoint of veteran workers, was as much for "a great spiritual awakening" within the church itself, as for further perfection of the mechanism of the organizations whose membership total many millions. Even in the case of the revelations through reports submitted yesterday that the Church is one of its great divisions had suffered startling losses in net membership gains the past five years while in the other division there had been actual loss of total membership, to-day's speakers emphasized, as vitally important, the necessity of making the spirituality of the present members more intensive instead of seeking primarily the lengthening of membership rolls.

Church union or "denominational synthesis" was dwelt upon by the delegates again to-day, it being said that in no other department of the church work would its economy of service be more felt than in that of foreign missions. It would mean vast savings of money, in men and women, and therefore the work in that mission field could be enormously increased.

That the church universal is not near at hand, however, despite the unions effected by Methodists and some other denominations in Australia and elsewhere, was the assertion of Rev. W. H. Fitchett, of the Methodist Church of Australia.

"The universal church," said Mr. Fitchett, "has not yet been built on earthly soil. It stands in the realm of the faith, but not in the realm of history, and I doubt if this gathering realizes how distant it is."

Rev. Simpson Johnson, of London, secretary of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, however, noted encouraging signs.

"The people everywhere are seeking opportunities of working together," he said, and finding in this a reflection of the mammoth combinations in business enterprise, he expressed the hope that the heart of the church would never cease to beat in sympathy with even the frailest human being, either in or out of organized Christianity. He noted a great revival of interest in foreign missions.

The scheduled speakers and their topics for to-day's opening session were: Rev. T. H. Lewis, president of the Methodist Protestant General Conference—"Responsibility of Methodism in Worldwide Evangelism."

Rev. David Brook, Southport, Eng., minister of the United Methodist Church—"Mission to the Non-Christian Races."

Bishop William Burt, of Zurich, Switzerland—"Mission of Methodism to the Latin Races."

Rev. Thomas S. Hocart, of the French Methodist Church—"Methodism and France."

To-night missionary mass meetings will be held.

TAFT ELOQUENT

Defends Supreme Court Decisions Regarding Trusts

Pocatello, Idaho, Oct. 9.—In a speech before the Chamber of Commerce to-day President Taft bitterly assailed the critics of the United States Supreme Court, and asserted anew his views as to the relations of Government business.

"I love progress and I love courts," said the President. "They are my ideals on the one hand, and they typify what we shall meet afterward in heaven under a just God. And when a court is doing its duty when it is trying to interpret the law as it ought to be, and it is condemned and attacked, and its motive questioned for mere political purposes, without any solid ground for attack, it goes to my heart, and I resent it with deep indignation."

Mr. Taft referred to the Supreme Court's disposal of the Standard Oil and Tobacco Company cases as "two great decisions."

TRAIN WRECK

Twelve Cars Derailed and Destroyed Near Brampton.

Brampton, Ont., despatch: At an early hour this morning a Grand Trunk freight train entering Brampton from the west ran off the track just above the station. About twelve cars were derailed, but no person was hurt. It is not yet definitely known how the train left the rails. Flour, lime, cement, stone and other commodities are strewn about the track in inextricable confusion, and the cars are reduced to matchwood. The auxiliary was at once called for, and the engine replaced on the track and the line cleared for traffic, which was resumed about 10 o'clock.

The accident happened just above the diamond, and it will take many hours to clear up the wrecking, which is strewn in all directions.

THAT ABDUCTION

School Teacher Tells of Her Treatment.

Western Desperado Committed on Two Charges.

Morden, Man., Oct. 9.—The postponed preliminary hearing of the case against George Brown, held at the provincial jail here charged with assaulting Mrs. Frank Patterson, formerly Miss Gladys Price, the Riverdale school teacher, whom he kept for 30 hours in the bush, and also the attempted murder of William Adams, the Snowflake hotel proprietor, came up before Police Magistrate Lake at three o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Patterson gave a clear and vivid description of her connection with the case, never faltering throughout her evidence.

Charles McMillan, who followed Mrs. Patterson on the stand, and to whom it was at first reported the prisoner had confessed when arrested at Hannah, N. D., stated that the prisoner had told him, practically corroborating the evidence given by Miss Price, Magistrate Lake, after summing up the evidence of the abduction case, committed the prisoner to stand trial at the fall assizes, which are to be held here on the 24th of October.

The case of attempted murder was then dealt with. William Adams, the first witness, in giving his evidence, stated that he could not identify the prisoner as the party who shot him during the time of the man hunt in the Snowflake district, but he gave a description of what occurred during the night of the shooting. McMillan, who followed Adams, stated that the prisoner told him that he had shot Adams, and that he was sorry he had done so. He had not meant to kill him, but only wished to stop him in trying to catch him.

The Magistrate, after hearing the evidence in the shooting case, directed that the prisoner be also sent up on the shooting charge. The prisoner throughout the proceedings showed his usual indifference.

SUTHERLAND

Will Send 5,000 Scotch People to Canada.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 9.—For the purpose of inaugurating a big colonization project, the Duke of Sutherland has acquired a substantial interest in 12,000 acres of land near White's Landing, on the west side of the Fraser River, 20 miles below Fort George, British Columbia.

He intends to sell 100-acre farms on easy terms to any of his Scottish tenants who desire to emigrate to Canada. The first colony will be established next spring.

The Duke has also in view the acquisition of larger tracts in the same district, and will not restrict settlement to his own tenants, but intends to offer liberal inducements for emigration from Scotland. His agents are now examining various land propositions.

Before leaving British Columbia the Duke expressed his belief that he would be the means of sending 5,000 people to British Columbia next year. He has also acquired 50,000 acres of prairie land along the line of the Canadian Northern Railway in Saskatchewan and will colonize this in the same manner. He owns farm lands in Okanagan Valley, as well as real estate in Edmonton, Battleford, Lloydminster and Prince Albert.

The Duke of Portland has an agent in British Columbia investigating land propositions.

FROM AWAY UP

Mr Roy Knowlton came down to Athens last week from up near the top of the earth. After testing the commercial verities of Winnipeg and other points in the West, he left about two years ago for Athabaska Landing, situated on an elbow of Athabaska River, a little over 100 miles north of Edmonton, where he has made his home, conducting a jewelry store in the town and having a homestead five miles out.

Mr Knowlton was in at the beginning of things in that town and says its growth and the development of the surrounding country promise to be rapid. Wheat has not yet been grown extensively, as there was no market for it on account of lack of transportation facilities, but it ripens in good time. Last season fall wheat was sown for the first time and an abundant yield was harvested this summer. Oats have been the chief crop and the harvest has been immense. All vegetables were grown.

During the "longest" days of the summer, darkness prevails for only three hours out of the twenty-four. Of course, in winter, the period of daylight is correspondingly short. Then the cold is intense, but the air is so dry that the temperature is not considered a hardship even by new arrivals from Ontario. Wood costing $1.50 per single cord is used for fuel. The Athabaska forms a part of the great system of waterways that traverse the northern wilds and there is a splendid steamboat service, the boats being electric-lighted and fitted with eastern luxuries.

Athabaska Landing with a population of about 500, has already been "boomed" and the land around the village has all been subdivided and is being sold at good figures. An idea of what is being done on this line may be formed from the fact that a quarter section, two miles from the town, recently sold for $27,000. The Canada Northern line will reach the town this fall and next season another line of railway is expected.

The adventurous pioneer spent that possesses the hearts of young Canadians will soon people the remotest parts of the "Last Great West," and in this movement the railways are following closely and in some cases leading the way. The great expansion and development that will take place in the next ten years can be only faintly conjectured.

MRS BULLIS DEAD

On Monday last Mrs John Bullis died at the home of her daughter, Mrs Burton Alquire, after a brief illness, aged 60 years.

Mrs Bullis, who resided with her daughter, Mrs Landon of Lansdowne, came here for a visit about two weeks ago and on Monday of last week suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which though remaining fully conscious, she never rallied. Following the death of her husband, about twenty-five years ago, deceased moved with her family to Athens, where she gained and retained the highest esteem of the people of the village. Her life was one of loving devotion to the interests of her children, and with them in their homes she was a welcome guest during the latter years of her life.

She is survived by six children: Charles in Syracuse, George in Michigan, Stella (Mrs ) in Minnesota, Lucy (Miss Girvan) in Moose Jaw, Hattie (Mrs Landon) in Lansdowne, Sadie (Mrs Alquire) in Athens. The funeral service is being conducted today in the Methodist church by the Rev. Wm. Westell.

AN AFTER—THOUGHT

(Saturday Night)

After all, you know, the flag-waver is generally the man with the coin or the man with the axe to grind. It was ever so. The kings and the princes through all the centuries have waved their flags and banners and called upon their loyal supporters to fight the enemy. And the loyal supporters were just good enough or foolish enough to do it. Therefore then the kings and the princes continued to rule over them—and so they should. The financial kings and princes now wave. The voter comes manfully forward and with eyes blinded with patriotic tears, marks his little cross on the ballot for the "interests."

Therefore, the interest continue to rule over—and so they should.

LIKELY GO BACK IN HOUSE

(Toronto Star)

"I think I shall re-enter public life and go back to the House," said the Hon. George P. Graham to a Star reporter. "But remember, I am not saying positively that I shall, for as a matter of fact I have not fully made up my mind.

"The friends have been very kind, and apparently want me to go back. I have been offered three seats in the West, two in Ontario, and several in Quebec. On the other hand, I have received some flattering offers to go into business and leave politics alone. So far I have accepted none of these and I hardly expect to take any of them. As I say, the situation is that I have not fully made up my mind, but I rather expect I shall decide to re-enter the fight.

"Of course, if I had been elected in my own constituency, I should never have thought of retiring, because we happen to be in Opposition now, but having been beaten it makes a difference.

"Perhaps I will make a compromise by spending the first short session in the press gallery. Don't be very much surprised if you find me there among the boys."

"We ought," says the late Professor Bruce, "to expect God to do greater things in the future than He has done in any past age, greater things than are recorded in the pages of history, or than it enters into the mind of the average Christian to ask or even imagine. . . . The Christian theory of the universe is inherently and invincibly optimistic. . . . Its eyes are open to the evil that is everywhere in the world, it does not expect these evils to be cured in a day or a generation, or a even a millennium. Nevertheless, its fixed faith is that cured they shall be in the long run."

A high-spirited girl recently played a cruel joke on her mother and this is how it happened. She actually found a love-letter that her father had written to her mother in the halcyon days of their courtship. She read the letter to her mother, substituting her own name and that of her lover. The mother raved with anger and stamped her foot in disgust, forbidding her daughter to have anything to do with a man who would write such nonsensical stuff to a girl. The girl then gave the letter to her mother to read and the house became so suddenly quiet that she could hear the cat winking in the back yard.

ENGLAND'S LABOR WAR

Although of Brief Duration, It Was Revolutionary in Character.

To David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, is due in large measure the settlement of the railroad strike which caused much bloodshed and suffering in Great Britain. The strike for a time amounted almost to a revolution. The transportation systems of the United Kingdom were paralyzed and cities and communities were reduced almost to famine conditions. Serious collisions between the populace and police occurred and several persons were killed in Liverpool, while in the rioting in one Welsh city a dozen persons lost their lives.

The troubles originated with a strike among the dock laborers of London, which spread rapidly to Liverpool and other ports. When these troubles were adjusted or were in a fair way for adjustment the employees on the railroads struck for higher wages and for recognition of their union—the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. A total of 200,000 persons walked out and for several days Great Britain was almost in a condition as serious as though a foreign fleet was blockading its ports. It set trade was interrupted, the transportation system was demoralized and food stuffs could not be distributed. As a consequence prices soared and the poor, as usual, were the chief sufferers.

The offer of Premier Asquith to refer the whole railroad situation to a royal commission was refused by the strikers, while it was accepted by the railway managers; and the situation became so serious that troops, supplied with ball cartridges, were mobilized at London, Liverpool, Manchester and other great centres.

When others abandoned hope of a peaceful settlement Lloyd-George only worked the harder and in the end he won. The railway officials consented to recognize the union's representatives and the men agreed to submit their grievances to a joint committee, meantime returning to work, without prejudice, to their places.

The efforts on behalf of peace of Lloyd-George, who wrote to the Chancellor, complimenting him very warmly for averting a most disastrous calamity. The dock strike at Liverpool has also been compromised and peace again reigns in industrial England. The strike, however, has shown to Great Britain her utter dependence upon transportation for her daily food. Two weeks' complete tie-up would bring Great Britain to the verge of famine.

World's Cleverest Brain Surgeon.

This distinction belongs to Sir Victor Horsley, who was recently adopted as prospective Liberal and Radical candidate for North Islington. Some twenty years ago Sir Victor astounded the medical world by removing a tumor from the brain of a patient, an operation which had hitherto been regarded as impossible, and since then he has performed more difficult operations in regard to the brain than probably any other man living. Another of Sir Victor's favorite studies is the subject of alcohol and its effect on the human body. Some years back he pointed out the little less than extraordinary way in which milk was taking the place of alcohol in the treatment of disease at London hospitals. In 1862, Sir Victor said, seven of the great London hospitals spent $15,000 on milk and over $40,000 on alcohol, while now the amount spent on milk reaches the sum which was recently expended on liquor.

England's "Gospel Oaks."

At Poolestead, Suffolk, there still exists a "gospel oak" which is over 2,000 years old. The oak has a girth of thirty feet and although the "gospel oaks" generally stood on the boundaries of parishes, this tree stands in the centre of the village. "Gospel oaks" at one time studded the country, taking their names from the fact that they served as stations from which the Christian missionaries preached to the Angles and Saxons 1,300 years ago. Very few of the trees now remain, but in some cases it is possible to tell vaguely where they stood from the names given to places such as Gospel Oak.—Fall Mail Gazette.

An Elephant Story.

An elephant train was on its way from Lucknow to Seetapore, and one elephant, becoming lame, knelt down and refused to go on. The elephant next in the column stopped of its own accord and when driven on turned back and began without instructions to remove some part of the load from the back of its crippled companion. Instances of aid rendered by birds to others in distress may also be found, showing that the instinct of sympathy exists and takes form in action when the causes of the sufferings are such that the fellow bird can understand and see its way to remedy.—London Spectator.

Origin of the Census.

The census probably had its origin in Rome. The term comes from the high officer called censor, whose duty it was, among other things, to enumerate the people. The Roman census must have been minute and full, since it indicated not only the number of the people, but their respective classes, domestic positions, wealth, etc. It seems that the Roman census was taken about every fifth year. The first effort to take a census in Great Britain was made in 1801, but it did not extend to Ireland.

Two Noble Brewers.

"Lord Iveagh and Lord Burton," said an English diplomat, "are not so popular with the present King as they were with his father. "These two men are the heads of two huge breweries. Lord Iveagh is credited with the joke: "Oh, yes; you'll find my name in the beverage." "And Lord Burton once said to a very aristocratic old duchess: "You, duchess, are of the caste of Vere de Vere, while I belong to the Beer de Beer family."

TWO ROWING CELEBRITIES.

E. B. Butler and Jeff Taylor Promise to Do Big Things.

The present season has seen the Argonaut Rowing Club make the greatest clean-up ever accomplished by one organization in the history of local rowing, and possibly of local sport. The boys who wear the light and dark blue have carried off all the chief national and international championships of the continent, winning with equal ease at both St. Catharines and Saratoga, where the chief regatta took place. When it is all narrowed down, the two youths who stand most in the limelight are E. B. Butler, the sculler, and Jeff Taylor, the stroke of the senior crews.

It was said a few years ago that Ned Hanlan was Canada's best advertisement, and it now remains to be seen whether Butler will take his place. The sculler is a big, boyish fellow, who likes to discuss his contests in a characteristically youthful manner. He came to the front as a sculler rather slowly, but always impressed those who saw him row with the fact that he was the makings of a man who could try for the Diamond Sculls. That will be his next venture. He outclasses all the scullers who have met him this year, as one fact indicates. It is one of the amateur rules of this sport that no contestant can be coached during a race, but at Saratoga an enthusiast in the judge's box forgot himself and started to talk one of Butler's opponents what to do. The Canadian stopped his craft and protested against such "unsportsmanlike" conduct. Then dipped his oars in again and won the race.

Jeff Taylor is a finer all-round sport than Butler as he also shines in Rugby, and it might be legitimately added that he sings in the National Chorus. He made his appearance on the horizon several seasons ago, when the Argonauts happened to be particularly weak in seniors, and Taylor saved the day for them at the Canadian Henley by winning the junior, intermediate and senior fours with a crew of unknowns. At that time, Tom Longboat was the athletic idol of the hour, and as the newly discovered stroke was tall, angular and the color of bronze from the effects of sunburn, the sporting public promptly called him "Longboat" Taylor. Although the name was also appropriate for the winner of the eight-oared races, it did not stick to him, possibly because he never liked it particularly. Indeed on one occasion, a local sporting editor received a card with the phrase cut from a paper and pasted on it with the request written beneath: "Mr. Jeff Taylor, if you please." Anyway, the once popular nickname has been forgotten, though the oarsman continues to win races.—Saturday Night.

A Landmark in New Brunswick.

"The First European Settlement in New Brunswick was established in 1611 by Captain Marvelle and others from St. Malo, France." This is the inscription on a cairn which the New Brunswick Historical Society erected a few days ago, to commemorate the beginning of civilization in the province by the sea. Cato's Island is several miles up the St. John River. The society made this trip quietly by a brand new steamboat. Three hundred years ago, weary St. Malo voyageurs crept up the river after weeks on the Atlantic and faced a tribe of redskins, whose feelings they hurt somewhat by appropriating their island.

This is the inscription on a cairn which the New Brunswick Historical Society in honoring this landmark in the story of New Brunswick, is but a commencement of a campaign in the province to evoke public interest in the past. Both in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick a historical movement at present seems to have a hold on the minds of the people. Very recently in this department mention was made of work done by the Nova Scotia Society in Halifax.

The Shattering of a Romance.

The tragic death of the well-known novelist, Myrtle Reed, author of "Lavender and Old Lace," and numerous other romances, recalls a rather interesting story of which a Toronto man was the hero.

Years ago, James Sidney McCullough was a high school pupil in Toronto. He was editor of the school paper which exchanged with some other college publications, including some across the line. One day the editor of the latter was immensely struck by the editorial comment in a high school paper called "The Voice," from Chicago. He communicated with the writer. The Voice editor turned out to be a girl.

In Chicago the other day Myrtle Reed suicided. She left a fortune of $200,000. Some Canadian editors are trying to prove that she was far happier as Myrtle Reed, the high school writer in The Voice, than as one of the mostly widely read novelists in America.

An Odd Character.

James Cook, janitor of the Medical Faculty, McGill University, Montreal, who was known to hundreds of doctors and students throughout the Dominion, died recently. He was 85. The Montreal Star, in a glowing tribute to the departed janitor, relates a peculiar yarn:

"He had one hobby—a gruesome hobby over which he chuckled, and over which deans and professors shivered. He collected the professional plates of deceased doctors, and he looked on every doctor who became connected with the institution as a coming contributor to his collection.

One of the first things he would do when a new professor was appointed was to ask him to bestow his dooplate on him when he died—for he had lived so long and through so many evolutions of McGill that he had come to look on himself as being the only indispensable part of the institution."

TAKEN THOUSAND ZUTOO TABLETS Cured 500 Headaches. Mrs. (Dr.) Shurtleff, of Coaticook, says "Zutoo Tablets must have cured 500 of my headaches, for I have taken 1000 tablets. After trying every remedy within reach, I discarded them all four years ago. Zutoo, which I have taken ever since, I find the tablets a harmless and efficient cure for all kinds of headache."

Sweet Miss Margery

"Hope was almost dead forever when I visited you at Crosbie; and then suddenly by one of those strange, unexpected chances that come to us at times, it burst into a living, glowing flame once more. All through the past years I had prayed that, should Gladys go, my child might be spared, and, Stuart, my prayer was granted. At Crosbie one morning I came face to face with a girl at sight of whom I seemed to have stepped back into the past. I was startled by the image of my sweet wife. I spoke to the girl, learned her name, Margery Daw—and, until the heart had gone did hope wake in my breast, bringing once more the feeling of eager gladness that I thought dead forever."

"I waited a day or two, but quietly made inquiries, and obtained all the information I wanted; then, having first ascertained the truth and honesty of your nature, I determined to confide all to you, and claim my child; for that she is my child there is no doubt. But happiness was not to be grasped at once; again late was unkind. When I made my way to the cottage where Margery lived it was to find her gone—gone across the sea to Australia. The sudden pain and disappointment aside, I was myself again. Australia was nothing to me; I would start at once, and cheaply, my child yet in my arms before I died."

"So, Stuart, I leave this in your hands. If I succumb, seek out my Margery and give her my rights. To you I leave all, for I know you will do as I wish; and remember she is your cousin and your equal. Guard her, Stuart, from harm, if it be in your power, and may Heaven bless and reward you for all you may do. It will be necessary to explain how I discovered Margery to be my child. As I told you, I made most minute inquiries, learning all particulars from people both in Chesterham and Hurstley. I sought for Dr. Scott, the medical man who had attended during the railway accident; he had been called many years before, but he remembered the incident well, and his description of the poor dead woman only confirmed my hopes and fears. Acting upon his advice, I went to Newton, and by dint of money and able men traced my darling's life during two long years of misery. The story of her sufferings, of her daily tortures, of her broken life, I cannot dwell on. Heaven grant you may never know the terrible agony of hopeless remorse and longing that I am now enduring! Despair seizes me when I remember my madness, her wrong—my mad wife! Bring the joy of finding my child can bring me peace. The happiness I experienced in the knowledge of her existence has mingled with everlasting bitterness and sorrow, for she recalls her mother."

"But I weary you with my moans, Stuart; let me get on with my story. Gladys then, without a friend in the world, for her aunt would have nothing to say to her, being especially bitter against her because she was separated—doubted and wronged, had, in addition to her other troubles, the hardship of poverty to face. She struggled to get employment, with little success, however; from time to time she managed to make money by teaching, but this never longed. Still, through all her trials, her courage never forsook her; she lived for her child. I have spoken with some who knew her in those days, they dwell on her sadness, her sweetness, her innate refinement, little knowing how their words hurt my heart. It would be needless to describe the hopelessness, the misery of her life; she allured with her jewelry, and at last in desperation accepted an advertisement for a situation as maid."

"Beyond this I cannot write positively, but my heart tells me the truth. The situation that Gladys had obtained meant separation from her child. She had heard me speak of my cousin the Countess, and I am convinced she was drawn to her. She went to her mother and shelter for the baby before taking on her new duties, when death claimed her and ended her sorrows."

"I close with this letter the earliest of our marriage and of Margery's birth. My lawyers have in their possession a small box, which after my death they will hand to you. In it you will find the jewelry that belonged to my wife. Give it to Margery. And now, Stuart, I have finished. Pray, before I die, guard my child as far as lies in your power. My heart is full of gratitude when I think of the good kind woman who took her, a weak, helpless baby, and reared her so well. I have written to Lady Cunningham words of gratitude that sound enough compared with the feelings that prompted them; would that I could have done so to the others—Mrs. Graham and Mary Morris. But death has gathered them, and the power is taken from me. One thing more, Stuart, lay me beside Gladys in the little country church yard where kind stranger hands laid her, though in life we were separated so ruthlessly, as in death be together."

"Stuart had sat long after he had read the letter, his heart aching with pity for his dead cousin. The tale of sorrow was so heavy that for a time it banished his own grief; but as he rose and paced the room, the memory of the girl brought all back clearly, and he saw the bitterness of the task before him. A faint wave of gladness for her sake was checked by the reflection that they were parted forever. Still he would be firm; he was pledged to the dead, and, even were the pain deadly, he would keep his word, look out Margery, and give her right as his cousin and heiress to Becham Park."

"The news that caused Mrs. Crosbie such wrath and annoyance brought alarm and fear unspeakable to Vane Charteris' breast. This unexpected blow following on her unexpected success almost crushed her by its suddenness. Stuart would meet Margery, learn the truth, and she would be humiliated and disgraced. Moved by her anxiety, she added her voice to his mother's, and endeavored to shake his determination to sail for Australia. She did not cease herself by word or look; she only spoke prettily of her loneliness, and of how it would be a wiser course to send out an agent to the antipodes in search of his new cousin, and not to go himself. She stored her speech with references to Margery's faithlessness, hoping they would take effect; but it was all to no purpose. Stuart was firm, and refused to be turned from his determination. Had his father added his voice to the others, he might have yielded; but the squire was eager that Stuart should fulfill his promise, and declared truthfully that his health was so much stronger that his son might leave him without any hesitation. So, instead of the clear sky which Vane had pictured to herself clouds were gathering on all sides, and fear planted thorns at every step in her path, making her faint with apprehension and dread of exposure and disgrace."

CHAPTER XXV.
Margery was strangely affected when she learned that Sir Douglas Gerard had been her mother's lover. She could not banish from her mind the thought that in some way her presence had caused him distress. The earl saw her pained face, and immediately determined to put all business affairs aside and take his wife down to Court Manor. So, on the afternoon following her visit to the late baronet, Margery was carried away from London to her new home.

When she arrived it was too dark for her to see her surroundings; but the pure freshness of the country, and the silence after the bustle and noise of the London streets, the faint sighing of the kind in the trees, brought a thrill of peace and gladness to her, and as she stood at the low, wide door and gazed around her, the quaint, rambling hall she looked so pleased and comforted that the earl's heart rejoiced. It was a delightful, old-world place. The rooms were light and airy, the furniture of no modern date, the smell of the flowers, the glow of the fire-light—all seemed to speak of home. It was a haven of rest and quiet after the storm of the past few months. And if at night this feeling came, it was even stronger in the morning. As she drew her curtains aside and looked out over the wide vista of country Margery gave a little sigh of relief. Here she had nothing to fear, nothing to remind her of the past; here it would be easy to forget and grow content.

The pain that contracted Nugent's heart as he stood once more in his old home ceased when he saw the glow of hope, love and happiness on his wife's delicate, lovely face, and he pictured himself a future all brightness and gladness. In both their hearts, as they entered the house, the same memory lived—the memory of Lady Emily. Margery set up a little prayer to Heaven that she might prove grateful to the man whose heart was so tender and true, whose sufferings had been so great, and he mutely thanked his angel-sister that she would she bestowed so great a treasure to him as Margery.

His whole being was so impregnated with his great love that he had failed to discover the true cause of Margery's passive gentleness. It was true he did not think her heart held so deep a love as his own; but she was young, the marriage was hurried, love must have time to grow. In time his great devotion must reap its reward. The liking she now had would change to love. He must be patient and wait. So he reasoned in his happiness, dwelling with a thrill of joy on the memory that Margery had the star of his life, and a love that would find her, none but him to love him could turn. The pleasure that Margery showed in her new home struck the final chord of happiness in his heart.

The girl found much to occupy her in her new position, and her lively face beamed, already disposed to love her for her gracious influence over her master. Margery learned accidentally from her husband that he had neglected his business in town on purpose to bring her away, and, without a moment's hesitation, she begged him to remain and consult with her. The earl demurred, but at last, as she would not be easily, he acquiesced, and she would have many tender intimations, with her to take great care of herself in his absence.

The young wife felt a pang of remorse at the relief and pleasure she experienced when quite alone. She struggled hard with herself day and night; member so easy, so hard, and to be surrounded by all that the world holds dear, she found no satisfaction in her death; her mind was lost to the present; it would perpetually wander to the past; that past which, despite its pain and humiliation, was so sweet. The return to the country had brought back so much that was linked with her brief sojourn there that the struggle seemed to grow greater day by day.

Pauline noticed her mistress' grave face, but attributed it to his long absence, and, to cheer her, would repeat the servants' tales and anecdotes of his goodness, little thinking that every word went to Margery's heart like a sword thrust. She regretted with a deep, unspeakable grief that she had spoken of Stuart and her unhappiness; all would have been different, and she would not have pledged her vows to this man, the depth of whose generosity, tenderness and devotion touched her with a new pain. If she could but give him in return one-half the love he bestowed on her, she would be happy; but her love was dead, buried in a vast summer dream, and she had nothing left for him. The loves and hours of the life of a man,

They are swift and sad, being born of the sea—
Hours that rejoice and regret for a span.
Born with a man's breath mortal as he—
Loves that are lost ere they come to birth.
Woods of the wave without fruit upon earth.

I lose what I long for, save what I can— My love, my love, and no love for me!

"It is not much that a man can save
On the sands of life, in the straits of time,
Who swims in sight of the great third wave,
That never a swimmer shall cross or climb—
Some waif washed up with the strays and spars
That ebb-tide shows to the shore and the stars,
Weed from the water, grass from the grave,
A broken blossom, a ruined rhyme."

Yes, that was all that remained now, "a broken blossom, a ruined rhyme." Her life might be sweet again, but it would never be as it was on that evening in Weald Wood, when her young heart was first touched by love.

Court was absent two days; then he crossed, and announced his intended return. Margery was wandering in the garden and the pleasure when Pauline brought the telegram to her. With a vague sense of apprehension, Margery tore it open.

"Your master returns to-night, and brings a guest. Tell Mrs. Perry to see that the rooms are prepared, Pauline."

Pauline nodded her head in a self-satisfied manner.

"I am glad. Milord will be welcome; it is so gloomy here for miladi alone. Ah, and miladi will make a grand toilet to-night."

"I leave myself in your hands, Pauline," returned Lady Court, with a faint smile, which vanished when she was left alone.

Her husband was returning again. Once more she would suffer the agony of pain and remorse in his presence; but she must be strong, and remember only her duty and how much she owed him.

The afternoon wore away, and evening was drawing on. It was dark and gloomy, one of those unpleasant days that come in November. Margery walked to and fro, till she was weary, and then turned into a small room that she had chosen for her boudoir. She gave the order for the carriage to be sent before the fire, resting her head on a low velvet chair. She wore a heavy mourning robe, simple yet costly, and her delicate face and throat gleamed with so dark a setting. She was altered from the Margery of the summer, yet her face was only a child's face.

"Her youth, the purity of her countenance, her deep sapphire eyes, her curly silken masses of red-gold curls, were gone. In their place, the pale, weary face of Pauline. She brought her mistress some tea, served in fragile Sevres china, and then stood for an instant and looked down on the face that was so fair in the fire glow.

"Miladi is tired," she said, sympathetically; "she walks so much."

"I am very weary," Margery answered, waking from her thoughts; "but that is ended now, I hope."

She spoke to herself more than to her maid; her mind was on the one subject that had engrossed her all the afternoon. Pauline smiled; she thought she understood the meaning of her words.

"Ah, milord is to return?" she decided, and went away to her room.

Margery sat on before the fire. The tea had revived her, yet she seemed strangely agitated as the time drew near of her husband's arrival. A vague sense of approaching trouble had come over her, and she put her hand to her heart to try to stay its quick, hurried beat. She had been thinking so deeply that her nerves were unstrung. The solitude had tried her, she told herself; yet, even as she whispered this, her heart began to flutter again. It was a strange, incomprehensible feeling, a feeling she had never experienced before, and she longed for, yet dreaded, her husband's return.

At last the sound of wheels caught her ear, and she rose from her seat.

"I will be firm—I must forget!" she whispered. "My love, good-bye, good-bye."

Then she heard the sound of voices in the hall and knew that her husband was close at hand. She turned to greet him as the door opened, and in the dim light she saw two men enter.

"Margery, my wife!" said Nugent's grave, tender voice; and his lips touched hers.

His companion not coming forward, she still holding Margery's hand, looked around.

"I have brought a friend home, darling. It is only a flying visit, as he is off to Australia; but I persuaded him to come for a few days. There will be a bond of friendship between you through poor Gerard. Crosbie, let me introduce you to the contents of my bag."

The stranger moved forward mechanically into the light. Margery's hand grasped her husband's. She raised her eyes, and, with a sudden agony of pain, saw her lover, Stuart, before her.

Greatest Invention of age For Hoarseness, Weak Throat

Nothing So Far Discovered Is So Beneficial to Public Speakers, Ministers, Singers and Teachers as Catarrhzone.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhzone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhzone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety—unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhzone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

Singer Recommends Catarrhzone.
"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH."

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill."

"One year ago I read in the 'Progress' a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhzone."

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhzone, I tried it."

"Catarrhzone cured me and has been the means of my success."

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhzone is the best evidence of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhzone is to those suffering with throat weakness or catarrh.

Complete outfit, consisting of a beautifully polished hard rubber inhaler, and sufficient liquid for recharging to last six months, costs one dollar. Sold by all druggists, or sent safely to your address by mail if price is forwarded to the Catarrhzone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., or Kingston, Ont.

departure. So Stuart had assented readily, heeding whither he went, his mind occupied with the task before him to find his cousin Margery; and in the twilight, with the fire light revealing her levelness, he had, with a shock that stunned him, come suddenly face to face with the girl he sought the girl he loved.

It was so strange, so incomprehensible. A feeling of acute pain came to him. At the sight of Margery his love rose up again in all its vigor, full of bitterness and despair, however, for she was a stranger. He sat on in the night, his brain full of disturbing thoughts. The mystery, the suddenness of the whole thing seemed to stun him, to crush his very being. During the whole evening he had sat listening to his host's voice. He did not appear, of that he was only too distinctly conscious. The cost was a blank. And now he was alone, bewildered, tormented by pain, despair, love. His journey was ended before it had commenced, for he had found Sir Douglas Gerard's daughter, found the mystery of Becham Park. In the morning he must unfold his tale and then—go for her forever.

He rose, and approaching the window, opened it. How came Margery hither? he asked himself. What strange fate had brought him to her at that very moment? What story would it be on the morrow? Had he wronged, doubted his love? A cold shudder seized him at the very thought. With an effort he put it from him. What could Margery say in self defence? She had deceived, cruelly deceived him. Whatever the cause he could not forget that.

CONSTIPATED CHILDREN

Constipation in children is the surest sign of danger—the most convincing signal that baby is going to be ill. Constipation leads to and actually causes more suffering in little ones than any other trouble. To keep baby well, his little stomach must be kept sweet and his bowels regular. Baby's Own Tablets will do that—they will do it safely, surely and without pain or gripping. Concerning them Mrs. S. O. Brazier, Bergland, Ont., says: "My baby was bothered almost continually with his stomach and bowels and was greatly constipated. Baby's Own Tablets quickly relieved him and I would not now use any other medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE BUCKING HORSE.

A touch of the spur or a flick of the quiet signals the start. His knowledge of what to do must be a heritage from his ancestors, for all horses do it, and all American wild horses are sprung from horses that once carried men. He pops down his head and levitates straight heavenward. While he and you are high in the air he arches his back and stiffens his body to iron rigidity. Thus he comes back to earth. The sensation to the rider is as if his spinal column had been struck by a pile driver. The impression is not analyzed at the time; for the horse goes into the air again immediately. He swings to right or left, or he "changes ends" completely while in the air, and you come down facing southward, whereas you were facing northward when you ascended.—American Magazine.

POPPES WHO HAVE RULED THE CHURCH.

Pope Pius X. is counted the 263rd prelate to occupy that highest ecclesiastical office.

While there have been 263 Popes, there are only seventy-eight different names in the list. Twenty-three bore the name of Joannes, sixteen that of Gregory, fourteen Clemens, fourteen Benedict, thirteen Leo, thirteen Innocent, ten Pius; ten Stephen, nine Boniface, eight Alexander and eight Urban.

There have been six Popes named Hadrian, while each of the names Paul Sixtus, Nicholas, Martin and Caelestine has been borne by five Popes. There were four Eugenues, four Honorius and four named Anastasius. Four others were named Sergius and four more Felix.

The names that appear three times in the list are Julius, Calixtus, Lucius and Victor. The names that appear only twice are Marcellus, Gelasius, Paschalis, Theobaldus, Constantine and Pelagius.

Pius I. became Pope in 142. More than thirteen centuries passed before there was another Pope of that name, but only four and a half centuries between Pius II. and Pius X.

Although there have been ten Stephens, there has been none since 1057. All the twenty-three Popes who were named Joannes ruled the Church between 523 and 1340, an average of nearly three to a century.

Pope Clemens I. appeared in 91. The last Pope of that name, Clement XIV., appeared in 1769. There were more than fourteen centuries between Leo I. and Leo XIII.

There were only four Popes in the first century. The lowest number in any one century since then was in the nineteenth—six. There were twenty-five in the tenth and twenty each in the seventh and ninth. The eleventh century had nineteen and the thirteenth and sixteenth had seventeen each.

The Popes of the twelfth century numbered sixteen; third, fifteen; eighth, tenth, thirteen each; fifth and fourth, twelve each; seventeenth, eleventh, second and fourth, ten each, while the eighteenth had eight.

Pope Pius IX. was in power thirty-one years, the longest of all, while some of his predecessors held the reins only a few days.

RELIEF IS QUICK; BUT CURE IS SURE

Napoleon Vaillancourt speaks of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

They Soon Cured His Kidney Troubles, and in Six Months There Is No Sign of Their Coming Back.

St. Anne des Monts, Gaspé Co., Que., Oct. 3.—(Special)—"It is six months since I was cured, and I have had no return of my trouble," in these words, Napoleon Vaillancourt, a well known resident of this place, gives evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills not only give quick relief to sufferers from Kidney Disease, but clear that disease out, root and branch, and cure it permanently.

That Mr. Vaillancourt had Kidney Disease everyone here knows. That he cured is also established beyond a doubt. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. "My back bothered me, also my heart and my kidneys, and my limbs would cramp," Mr. Vaillancourt states in giving his experience. Now all that is gone and he is a sound healthy man. Do you wonder that he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills?

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure quickly and permanently because they go right to the root of the trouble. They act directly on the kidneys. They never fail to cure.

A TEST.

Lincoln Beachey, after his flight over Niagara Falls in a biplane, was congratulated on his daring by a reporter. "But I wasn't daring," the aviator said. "I put my machine only to such ordeals as I knew it would withstand. In flying as in love we must run no risks." He laughed softly. "I know," he said, "a young woman about to wed who decided at the last moment to test her sweetheart. So, selecting the prettiest girl she knew, she said to her, though she knew it was a dangerous risk: 'I'll arrange for Jack to take you out to-night—a walk on the beach in the moonlight—a lobster supper, and all that sort of thing; and I want you in order to put his fidelity to the proof. I'll kiss you for a kiss.' The other girl laughed, blushed, and assented. The dangerous plot was carried out. Then, the next day, the girl in love visited the pretty one and said, anxiously: 'Well, did you ask him?' 'No, dear.' 'No? Why not?' 'I didn't get a chance. He asked me first.'"

A SURE WAY

To prevent oil lamps from smoking is to take any quantity of snobs, bruise them, put all into retort and distill; pour a little of this liquor into the bottom of the lamp, and it will not smoke. Keep the wicks properly trimmed.

To brighten colors in wash clothes, use soda in the rinsing water of almost any blue or purple, and vinegar in the rinsing water for pink and greens. To ask him to remove the stains from your hands received while picking or handling acid fruits, wash them in clear water, wipe lightly and while they are yet moist strike a sulphur match and hold your hands around it so as to catch the smoke, and the stains will disappear.

To clean jars, buckets, tubs or barrels to hold a small quantity of lime on the bottom and then slake it with hot water in which as much salt has been dissolved as it will take up. This purifies like a charm. Cover the article to keep the steam in.

MAMMA CRYING THEM.

"What are you crying for, children?" "We're just eaten a pot of mamma's raspberry jam."

"Ah, so you've all got stomach aches, I suppose?"

"No, on the contrary!"

AFTER EFFECTS OF FEVER

How to Build Up Health and Strength After Wasting Diseases.

When the system is run down, following attacks of fever, la grippe, or other wasting diseases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are of special value. They make new, rich blood, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, and in this way restore the patient to active health. Ask, who says: "I feel that if there is anyone who ought to testify to the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills it is myself. About four years ago I was taken down with typhoid fever, which left me in a very weak state and my stomach so impaired that even a drink of milk would cause me pain. To make matters worse the change of life followed, and although I was under the care of one of the best doctors, I was steadily growing worse. Before I was sick I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but thought no more about them. But now when I was sick and helpless and almost hopeless, and with no benefit coming from medical treatment, I kept thinking of the Pills and finally decided to try them. I did so and I am thankful to be able to say that they restored me to health and strength, and enabled me to pass through that trying period, which so many poor women emerge with shattered health. I hope that many other poor sufferers may read this statement and take fresh courage from it, as I am sure that what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me they will do for others. I may add that I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home, and feel that they are better than a doctor."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box of six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FIXING UP FURNITURE.

Revarnishing and Renovating in Order at This Season.

To remove old varnish use alcohol, and in stubborn places fine sharp emery or sand paper.

To remove ink from furniture wipe the spots with oxalic acid; let it stand a few minutes and then rub well with a cloth wet in warm water.

To remove whitish marks resulting from placing hot dishes on the table, pour kerosene on the spot and rub it hard with a soft cloth. Then pour a little spirits of wine or cologne water on it and rub dry with another cloth.

When stain is desired on an article always apply it before the first coat of varnish. Never attempt to mix the stain with the varnish itself.

To get best results apply three coats of varnish to plain surfaces, wearing the first two coats down smoothly (this means very lightly) with the finest sandpaper, the third coat being allowed to set in its lustre.

To take out bruises wet the parts with warm water; double a piece of brown paper several times and lay it over the bruise, and on this apply a warm but not hot flatiron till the moisture is evaporated. Sometimes it is necessary to repeat the process before the rent is raised to the surface.

THE STREET A STAGE.

(Bruce, in Vancouver Sunnet.)

The streets are a stage, set sometimes to melodrama, or to a pageant; more often to a comedy. As in some Elizabethan piece, we who witness it may be both spectators and players. In Vancouver the play is never dull, the scenery is often striking in color, and the players often picturesque in interest. In larger cities the play is more spectacular, with less of human interest, perhaps, and more emphasis on the "topperies." The play is always improvised, and the street sends up accompaniment to the piece that is always playing; the comedy of the human life. It is difficult to render the quick shifting movement of the street types and scenes, and he could be a clever artist who could in his book catch the essence of the eternal comedy. It is the humanness of it all that has such interest and charm. The street has movement, not mere motion; the people you use are of the streets, not merely in it. In Vancouver's little squalor, little slum life, little crime, little to be seen that is unpleasant or suggestive.

Valuable Advice to Mothers.

If your child comes in from play, coughing or showing evidence of grippe, Sore Throat, or sickness of any kind, get out your bottle of Nervine. Rub the chest and neck with Nervine, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nervine in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Folsom's Nervine, which has been the great family remedy in Canada for the past fifty years. Try a 25c bottle of Nervine.

LIFE'S THREE QUESTIONS.

A frater in Harper's Bazaar tells us that the three great questions in life are: "Is it right or wrong? Is it true or false? Is it beautiful or ugly?" These our education should help us to answer, and in so much as it falls it will lack in reaching a proper physical or moral standard. When the college girl returns to her home, whether it be her parents' or her own, her college training should have fitted her to answer these questions in relation to the fundamental needs of life, in food, clothing, and shelter. This education I believe the teachings of home economics to give. General culture not alone means the capacity to understand and appreciate, but to react on the resources and problems of modern civilization, and solve problems in the large mean the preservation of health, the prompting of physical vigor and the material well being of the race.

IT NEEDED A DIAGRAM.

Dealer—Yes, quite good, only I can't quite see what it's all about.

Artist—Why, it's as clear as mud. The farmyard at sunrise.

Dealer—Of course, of course. But, say, would you have any objection to making an affidavit to go with it?

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Who pays the enormous expense of those show-rooms in our towns and cities? Is it not the people who buy pianos there?

Why buy from them when you can get just as good, and in many cases better, from me, delivered free from the factory to your door? This is one of the reasons I can sell you a piano for less money than you pay at any show-room.

All kinds of instruments taken in exchange. We defy competition for the money in all grades. Get my prices before purchasing, for they are certainly very low for strictly high grade pianos.

Also agent for Raymond, New Will iams, and New Home Sewing Machines.
P. S.—Pianos sold on instalment plan when wished.
