

CONCLUSION OF WRECK TRIAL— DECISION HELD FOR FEW DAYS

Bill Was Given the Young Men—Evidence Will Be Preferred to Attorney General Before Decision is Given.

The hearing into the attempted statement. Nor did Mr. Trenholm, train wreck at Derby Jet, was concluded on Saturday before Justice Malby.

Two witnesses gave evidence and the prosecution closed its case. The first witness was.

Adam Dickison, sworn, said he lived in Newcastle; his occupation was town marshal. Have known Warren Preston the past few days. I went to see him at his home, a short time before he was arrested. He was at Mr. Vye's house, Wilson's Point. I don't remember the date I went to see him. I remember hearing of the sleeper being put on the track at Jones' Crossing. It was within that week I went to see him; Mr. Trenholm went with me. It was between eleven and one o'clock at night I went to see him. I went to the door and knocked; Mr. Vye came down and opened the door and let us in; I saw Mr. Vye, and after a few minutes a woman came to an inside door leading to room I was in. We asked Mr. Vye if Preston was there and he told us he was not there. After this conversation with Vye the woman called me into where she was, and asked me if I was after him for Russell & Morrison for debt, told me a boy was there, and brought Preston in. The woman brought the boy into the room where Mr. Vye, and the rest of us were. He seemed to be a little excited when he came into the room. Mr. Trenholm told him we came to see if he knew anything about the sleeper that was placed on the track.

This part of the evidence was objected to by Mr. Tweedie and also by Mr. Whelan, who is defending Preston.

Question was allowed and witness said Preston broke down and cried and said yes he would tell the truth and hit his hand on the table.

Witness was asked what Preston told him, but question was objected to by Mr. Tweedie, and Mr. Whelan. Question allowed. He started to say something, witness said, when Mr. Tweedie asked the court to ask witness if a warrant had been sworn out for Preston's arrest, or what took him to the Vye house, or if Mr. Trenholm had a warrant for Preston's arrest. Mr. Lawlor objected to the question on the ground that Mr. Tweedie had no right to ask those questions. In defence of this Mr. Tweedie laid claim to the right that the officers did not warn Preston that the evidence would be used against him.

Court ruled against Mr. Tweedie. Mr. Vye then interfered and Preston turned around and said he did not know anything about it. We asked him if he had been across the bridge on the night of the 7th; he said he had been with the Collins boys. He said they came over through the day to Newcastle; they had been around the wireless towards the evening. They went up the road to Curtis' corner and stayed around there for some time. He and one of the Collins boys went up to the crossing on the road between the corner and Sinclair's mill. One of the boys left him there. Did not remember which one of the Collins boys it was, it was one or the other. He met James Howe at the crossing on the road. He did not see that Collins boy until later on that night. We asked him what time it was he saw him but he did not remember just what time it was. He said he met him somewhere near Derby Jet. I asked him if he knew the express had gone by. He said it had, he was sure it had; Mr. Young had told him so; Mr. Young was watchman at the end of the bridge, and told him the express had gone by. I asked him if Mr. Young knew him and he said yes. I told him Mr. Young had told us he had not seen him there that night at all. He said Young did not know him at the time, but after some transaction in connection with a pair of stilts yards he then knew him. Mr. Young had warned him about a train that was just due to come across bridge. The Collins boys went across the bridge with him. We left there then and went to see Young. I did not hold out any inducements to Preston but told him it was best for him to tell the truth and Preston said he would.

Mr. Whelan asked the court to have this part of evidence struck out because the officer held out an inducement to Preston by advising him to tell the truth.

Ruled against. I did not make any threat to Preston to induce him to make any statement. Nor did Mr. Trenholm, train wreck at Derby Jet, was concluded on Saturday before Justice Malby.

BRITISH COLUMBIA PREMIER SPEAKS STRONGLY ON NAVAL BILL

Sir Richard McBride, in a forcible speech before Ottawa Conservative Club, Scores Senators on Naval Bill

Bill

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, who was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon today, created rather a furor when he launched into the naval question in his speech. It is a cardinal rule of the club that nothing of a political or controversial nature shall be introduced in the speeches at the luncheons, but Sir Richard came out in no uncertain tone, or to use his own words, with all the emphasis he might command, to deplore the failure to pass $35,000,000 as Canada's contribution to the British navy.

It was quite a brilliant function, graced by the presence of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who was given the most enthusiastic of receptions. Among the other invited guests were Right Hon. R. L. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the various provincial premiers who are attending the conference, many cabinet ministers, and prominent citizens.

Aside from the utterances of the British Columbia premier, the feature of the luncheon was the kind words of welcome to His Royal Highness, and expressions of good will to Her Royal Highness, and the gracious reply. The other speaker was Hon. Walter Scott, premier of Saskatchewan.

Sir Richard expressed his appreciation at the outset of the opportunity of joining in the welcome to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. Without any offence to the other Governor Generals who had visited British Columbia, he would say that the visit paid by the Duke of Connaught, and his royal consort had left a marked impression on Canadian residents along the Pacific seaboard.

The Naval Question. He said it was customary for provincial premiers to tell of the part of the country from which they came but he was going to digress from the beaten path. Then he started right into the naval question.

"I am not going to say anything controversial," he said, "but in a few modest words, not to give a message—that were a dangerous thing to attempt—but to tell of western feeling on a certain question which was closely associated with that section of the Empire. First, I wish to speak of the navy and what Canada should do towards her share of Empire responsibility. If my voice from British Columbia be of value to this assembly I would like to say, with all the emphasis I may command, how deeply we regret and deplore the inability of Canada to do her share towards Canadians, towards Imperial defence, in falling to vote the $35,000,000 as was proposed a few months ago for the assistance of the programme of the British admiralty.

"I cannot believe it is impossible to discuss this matter on other than a controversial basis, one that will bring up political discord. The theme of national defence should occupy a plane higher than the political war, the hustings or even the national forum. If we have to introduce political differences into such a question we will drift and drift till we are so seriously involved that we cannot extricate ourselves without sacrificing our dignity and self-respect. We in British Columbia feel that we have come to the point when, in many fashion, we should do our share in the defence, not of only British Columbia, Canada, but of the Empire as well. (Applause.)

Time to Come up Now. "We have been for years glorying in the circumstances that have permitted us to proclaim ourselves part and parcel of the British Empire. We all have been proud of the Union Jack and feel, if we are to be consistent with the privileges, the best evidence is to come up at the time, and the time is now, to come up with at least the handsome contribution of $25,000,000 towards Canadians, toward Empire defence.

"We would not for a moment consider a policy of aggregation of Canada by which she could sail on in her 'fair way' without undertaking her responsibility. Canada has gone so far that it is the exacting duty of the Canadian people to come through with a vote, even if twice the amount was necessary.

"I am sure you will not accuse me of desiring to introduce discord by controversial discussion, but I want to tell the story that is the unanimous voice of the people of British Columbia. They look upon it as a matter which should be undertaken before all other programmes. There may be some discussion as to the question of emergency, but if the Empire has got to wait till there is an emergency before we respond, things have come to a pretty pass in Canada.

"We want in Empire matters to be prepared to take on Empire responsibilities, and it will not necessarily mean that with one stroke of the pen the whole scheme of Federation has to be adjusted to give us a proper place."

Premier Scott's View. After commenting on affairs of the province of Saskatchewan Premier Scott, who followed, said: "I am not going into any question which might be deemed of controversial character. But I will say this when the political leaders of Canada come to a conclusion as to what the right line is to follow with regard to our maintaining the naval and military strength and preserving the interests of the Empire, the people of Saskatchewan will not be lagging behind any province, or any part of the Empire."

The Duke of Connaught. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught expressed his pleasure at taking part in the reception to the provincial premiers, to whom he had always felt sympathy and regard.

The previous speaker had spoken so personally in regard to himself and the Duchess that it would be most ungracious of him not to thank them most cordially and warmly for the kind reception given him on his return. In the Duchess' name, he also wished to express his heartfelt thanks for the general sympathy extended to her in the time of suffering and anxiety.

"Everyone in England recognized," he continued, "the proud position held by Canada in the Dominion of the Empire. He was as deeply interested in everything relating to the welfare and progress of Canada on his return, as he was happy to think that the previous speakers had been at one on that point; that the inhabitants of both the great provinces were as keen and proud of their connection with the Empire as any other portion of the Dominion."

"I feel sure," he said, "that if called upon, they will be prepared to do their duty towards their Sovereign and the Empire the same as any other portion of the great Empire."

PREMIER MAKES MOTION FOR RIGHTS OF PROVINCE

Federal Representation Discussed by Conference at Ottawa—Arguments Fail to Get The Expected Support.

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—Representation from the Maritime Provinces in the Federal House was discussed by the Provincial Premiers in conference here to-day behind closed doors. No conclusion was reached in regard to the arguments put forward by the delegations from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Premier Flemming, of New Brunswick, moved, seconded by Premier Matheson, of Prince Edward Island, asking the adoption of the following resolution:

"That in the opinion of this conference the representation granted to the Maritime Provinces at the time of the Confederation be restored and made irreducible."

Arguments were advanced setting forth the facts in the case; that the Maritime Provinces had forty members at Confederation, while now they only have thirty-five. It was claimed that a hardship was being affected on the provinces affected which was not intended, whatever the constitutional clause governing the case might state.

It is understood that the arguments failed to get the support expected, although sympathy was expressed by other representatives.

John Williston, of Bay du Vin, Killed in Mysterious Manner. It has been learned here that John Williston, a former resident of Athol, Mass., also a former resident of Bay du Vin, N. B., was killed a few days ago at Salem, Mass. At the time of the man's death there was some mystery as to his manner and also as to identification. Chief of Police Murphy of Salem, telephoned to Athol and tried to locate the relatives of the dead man there. He says he has a brother in New Brunswick, and a sister in Athol, Mrs. Charles Foster, wife of a well known shoe merchant. The death is said to have been caused by a train. The police of Salem said the body would be sent to Bay Du Vin, N. B.

BOLD ESCAPE AT DORCHESTER. A Dorchester despatch of the 27th to the Moncton Transcript says: "Dorchester has been treated to one of the biggest sensations in its history during the past night. It consisted of a jail delivery on a most cunningly devised scale. It appears that during the night between the hours of two and daylight some person or persons approached the cell of the jail building, where the cells are located, raised the window, and passed on the end of a piece of spruce sheathing a hack saw to Fred Armstrong and F. J. Legere, two prisoners, who were waiting trial for a serious offence. These prisoners immediately got busy sawing the bars of their cells, while a party or parties from the outside sawed the heavy bars on the outside windows. Through these openings, quickly and easily made, Armstrong and Legere made their escape. Armstrong is an ex-convict of the penitentiary, having served a five year term. He weighs about 170 pounds, is smooth shaven and dark complexioned, has a scar on his nose and a tattoo mark on his arm. He is 5 ft. 10 1/2 inches in height, wears a blue suit and drab raincoat. He was waiting trial for the alleged beating and robbing of a man in a Moncton hotel.

F. J. Legere was sent up for trial for the alleged theft of money from a shoe shine parlor in Moncton. He has a tattoo mark of a hockey stick and puck on his arm, and the letters "F. J. L." plainly tattooed on the same arm.

"The whole countryside has been notified of the escape, as well as the towns and cities of both provinces. High Sheriff Willett is making every preliminary effort possible for rounding up these dangerous fellows. A generous reward should be offered by our County Council, making the man hunt worth while to the officers, who may engage in the roundup.

"Jailor J. Holland is feeling badly over the success of the rascals, and will leave no stone unturned in the search for the men. This is the fifth escape from our county prison this year. The other prisoners in the same corridor, who are Howe and Clark, a Scott Act offender, profess an entire ignorance of the escape, although the event was pulled off without a feather of their cells. It is believed that the rescuing party are well known, and can be easily located. The affair has aroused much indignation among our town's people."

CONFIRMATION AT CHATHAM

Sacrament was Conferred by His Lordship Bishop Barry, D. D.

One hundred and thirty three boys and girls were confirmed in the Cathedral Friday morning, by His Lordship R. Rev. Bishop Barry. Confirmation mass was said at 9 o'clock by Rev. Fr. Hartt, after which a very eloquent and forceful sermon was delivered by Rev. Fr. Finnigan of the College staff. Fr. Finnigan spoke of the effects of confirmation on the souls of those who received this sacrament and also dealt with the responsibilities and duties of those who partook.

His Lordship the Bishop then addressed the candidates and examined them, after which he conferred the sacrament of confirmation, being assisted by Revs. Fr. Finnigan, Fr. O'Leary and Fr. Hartt.

The class was composed of 65 boys and 68 girls.—Gazette.

WOMAN PATIENT HANGS HERSELF

Mary Foley, a Patient in Provincial Hospital Killed Herself by Strangulation

Early Saturday morning at the Provincial Hospital for Nervous Diseases, St. John, one of the patients named Mary Foley, killed herself by strangulation. She was a married woman, hailing from Restigouche County and had come to the hospital about three months ago. She was a troublesome patient and her mental disease was such that she was continually complaining and never slept well.

At one o'clock the attendant of Ward F, in which the tragedy occurred, saw the woman sitting on the side of her bed, but did not take any particular notice, owing to the disposition of the patient, which was very restless and insomniac. Shortly afterwards the unfortunate woman tore a strip from the sheet of her bed and, making a loop about her throat, and securing the strip to the side of the window somehow or other about six feet from the floor, committed suicide by hanging.

At 1.30 when the attendant returned she found the woman dead, having succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the guard just sufficiently to put in execution the suicidal plan.

FORTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Nov. 10th, 1869, was Thanksgiving Day throughout the province.

The receipts for the Dominion for September, were $1,468,062, and the expenditures $589,007. The receipts for the three months ending September were $4,056,242, and the expenditures $3,756,176.

In an account of a flood in the State of Illinois, speaking of those in this province who aided the sufferers, the Advocate says, "Mrs. W. Park, of Newcastle, is now engaged in the laudable work of collecting money for their relief. We wish her God speed and abundant success. Parties at a distance who wish to aid in this charitable work, can send subscriptions to this office, where they will be satisfactorily accounted for, and the amounts published."

I. C. R. POLICE DEPT. REORGANIZED

Positions of Chief Tingley and Three Inspectors Have Been Abolished

It is stated in railway circles, that after October 31st, the positions on the Intercolonial Railway now held by Mr. A. J. Tingley, Special Service Agent, and Inspectors Dunn of Halifax, Moore of Lewis, and Trenholm of Moncton will be abolished. Chief Tingley has been in the I. C. R. service for several years, Inspector Dunn for twenty years, and Inspector Moore for ten years. Inspector Trenholm has been in the service only about one year.

Rumor has it that the inspectors may remain in the I. C. R. service, being reduced to the rank of policemen with corresponding reductions in salary. In some quarters it is added that Mr. George Sheffington, who has been on the I. C. R. payroll for the past eighteen months, may be appointed to some definite public duties.

The change, so far as Chief Tingley is concerned, is one due to the introduction of a new system and officials say, not to any other cause.

William MacIntyre, formerly of New Brunswick bank and lately accountant of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Chicago, made a confession Friday in Toronto to the theft of $10,000 from the Bank of Nova Scotia, St. John, early in September last, on the eve of his departure for Chicago. A warrant has been sworn out for his arrest and he will be brought back to St. John for commitment.

OUR NEED TO ADVERTISE

"20th Century Impressions of Canada" Will Prove Valuable to Canada

It will no doubt be amusing to most people of the Maritime Provinces to learn that we are regarded as savages, hold-up men and in general a very wild people, but such is the case, as is learned from an interview with Mr. Geo. A. Lewis, of Sells, Limited, held by a Standard reporter in St. John the other day.

During the interview, on being asked what he thought of the Maritime Provinces, Mr. Lewis said: "Well, I believe it will come into its own, as soon as it becomes known what kind of a province you have. The trouble is the average Englishman knows nothing about the Maritime Provinces. Many people in the old country get their idea of Canada from the moving picture shows, with their Indian scenes, cowboys and hold-ups. When I left for this country I was solemnly advised by my friends to carry a gun, as I might be held up at any time. Not one percent of the people of the old country know anything about the Maritime Provinces; the general opinion is that Eastern Canada is a wild country. The west has done a good deal of advertising—perhaps not of an exactly judicious character—and it is much better known than the east. If you ask for information about the Maritime Provinces in the old country, you are handed a few booklets, dealing with special phases of life."

Thus it will be seen the necessity of steadily boosting the east, and especially our Maritime Provinces, and show those of the Mother Country that we are a civilized and prosperous people.

As a result of his luck he has received proposals of marriage from 78 girls. It is suspected that if he accepts one of the offers his wife will depart when the money is gone.

The militant suffragettes were, at least temporarily deprived of one of their most noted leaders, Miss Annie Kennedy, who was arrested on the platform of a London Music-Hall in the course of a meeting to inaugurate the commemoration of hostilities. The policemen had to use a flying wedge to get out of the hall with their prisoner.

TENEMENT HOUSES NEEDED

One of the problems confronting this town at the present time is the absence of tenement houses. We invite outside to come and locate here, and hold out inducements in an effort to bring in manufacturing industries, but nothing is done, or even thought of probably, in the way of furnishing house accommodation for people who might wish to live here.

The building of the new bridge and the wireless station brought many men here, and had there been suitable dwelling houses to rent, no doubt a number of families would have moved here, if only for the summer.

Even clear of these new-comers, suitable tenement houses are wanted. The majority too, are looking for houses with all modern improvements and are willing to pay a good rental fee for such a house. There are many excellent sites for dwellings, and now is the time to consider the matter for the time is not far distant when this need will be felt stronger than it is today.

Newcastle is on the eve of a big boom. We have been idle long enough, and now that the Board of Trade has taken hold of matters in earnest, and every effort is being put forth for future advancement, every citizen must do his share to make Newcastle the most important town on the North Shore.

If property owners of tenement lots do not wish to build, why not start a land sale boom. Stake off suitable lots and offer them for sale. Most any one of our young men holding good positions here would invest a few hundred dollars in a piece of land if reasonable terms could be agreed upon. In this way these idle lots would be taken up and the town made to grow. This would bring on a building boom and consequently prosperity to the town.

FROM OUR FILE OF '69

The following is taken from our file of October 28th, 1869: "The present season is evidently a sensational one. Hardly had the excitement of the great storm died away, when we were startled by an earthquake. The shock visited us on Friday morning, about five or ten minutes to six o'clock, and was the most severe ever felt here. As near as we could record it lasted about three-quarters of a minute. Concerning the point from whence it came there are so many accounts that it is hard to determine. To us it appeared to come from the South or Southeast. It was preceded by a mumbling noise like that of a heavy wagon on the road. In and around our town there was considerable shaking done—parties were attacked with a motion similar to that of the fever and ague—buildings were shaken to their very foundations, and swayed to and fro in such a manner as to cause the timbers to crack—and persons acutely sensitive were greatly shocked at the proceedings. There was not much damage done, but had the shock been of longer duration, it would have been otherwise. One chimney in town was partly thrown down. Dame Rumor (who is very fickle at times and not to be depended on) has it that in some cases parties were thrown from their beds—stoves capsize—and articles of furniture set to dancing right merrily. A report is going the rounds that at the time of the shock a man was travelling up river, and the earth rolled to such an extent that the horse could not proceed for stumbling, and he pulled up and waited till all was over. One of our settlers, with a very decided Highland accent, in describing the motions in his dwelling, said among other things "that the saw on the wall she dance," which was no doubt the case. One man, from up river, tells us that his building moved an inch from its former position. Some parties say that the river was also visibly disturbed, but we cannot vouch for mere rumor. These are only small matters, but it should be (and no doubt is) a source of thankfulness on the part of all that we were so providentially spared from any serious calamity. The moments of the earthquake were no doubt solemn ones to many—it was surely a time to feel solemn, when Nature was convulsed, and the earth beneath our feet heaving in convulsive throes. The man who could feel thoughtless and indifferent at such a time must be hardened indeed. The shock was felt through New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and P. E. Island; all through the New England States; but as far as we can learn, not in Quebec or Montreal. Some parties expressed themselves pleased at experiencing what an earthquake really is, but owned that their curiosity was fully, if not more than satisfied in the recent one. Such a visitor is certainly not a welcome one, and its appearance can only be hailed with feelings of awe, and by many perhaps with terror."

The above written forty-four years ago yesterday, may be remembered by some, but few of our citizens. The Advocate at that time was of a very different make-up to what it is today. It was half the size of the paper now, and the advertisements were set in very small old-fashioned type. Only two double column ads. are in this issue, the rest being small and single column.

CANADA'S POSTAGE BILL

An indication of the country's growth and the increasing extent to which the mails are used, is furnished by figures of the postage stamp issue for the first six months of the fiscal year.

The aggregate was $6,749,690, an increase of $501,164 over the corresponding period, and of $4,112,000, compared with ten years ago. The showing is regarded as remarkable. The September issue totalled $1,153,555, an increase of $128,105.—Mackintosh's Investment News.

The crazy actions of some American women are beyond description. The other day a wealthy leader of society went up in the air because a common sense physician would not prescribe for the illness of her pet dog, and so grieved and annoyed was she that another physician has taken his place and the canine peacefully reposes beneath the fresh earth in a $200 child's coffin. She may chase a crow a mile for that two hundred some day.

Twenty new branch banks were opened and twelve closed in Canada in September. Nine were opened and an equal number closed in the Western provinces. The total number of branches of Canadian banks in Canada on September 30, was 2,943, while the total, including those branches outside of Canada, was 3,927.—Mackintosh's Investment News.

TEUTONIC HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Got Warning Just in Time of Ice Ahead—Backed Away to Let Ice Pass

New York, Oct. 28.—A special cable to the American from Liverpool says: "The Teutonic narrowly escaped collision with an iceberg on her last voyage from Montreal."

"On October 18 she ran into a thick white fog, after passing Newfoundland and got wireless notice from steamers of floating ice. "Captain James, always on the bridge, got warning just in time from the look-out, who cried "Ice right ahead."

"The ship's engines were reversed, she backed away to let pass a mountain of ice.

"The passengers thanked the Captain in a resolution."

$90,000 WORTH OF BLACK FOXES

Sixteen From the Beetz Ranch Taken There to be Disposed of

The largest shipment of black foxes ever brought to Moncton were landed here early Monday morning and stored in Dr. L. S. Doyle's barn at the rear of the American Hotel. The foxes, numbering sixteen are owned by Mr. Beetz who conducts a fox ranch in Labrador, and he brought them to this city for the purpose of disposing of them, valuing the whole sixteen at ninety thousand dollars which some claim is a small figure to place on them as they are of the very best strain and no better could be found for breeding purposes. Shortly after the foxes were placed in the barn, Messrs. R. N. Wyse, Dr. J. A. McNaughton of this city, and Mr. Alex. Henderson, of Scotch Settlement, after looking over the consignment, picked out two pairs and purchased them at a figure said to be over $20,000 or $15,000 a pair.

Mr. Wyse in talking to The Times last evening said that he and his associates are acting for some Island parties and the foxes will be shipped to the Garden of the Gulf. He refused to divulge the figure paid for the reynards, but said that the two pairs compared favorably with Prince Edward Island foxes which would sell for $35,000.

Mr. Beetz is of French descent and can talk very little English which necessitated him bringing an interpreter with him from Quebec. In conversation with The Times the interpreter said that an option on the remaining twelve was held by parties whose names he refused to divulge. He said the option expired today at twelve o'clock and as soon as it expired and the foxes were not purchased, another option with other parties would commence. The Times learns from another source that the option which expires at noon today is held by St. John parties who are interested in foxes.

The Beetz foxes are celebrated all over Canada and they are considered to be of a very high standing. The foxes which are in Moncton at the present time were all raised on the Beetz ranch and some of them are of the thirteenth generation of ranch bred foxes.

They attracted considerable attention at Mr. Doyle's stable and hundreds viewed them. Despite their long journey they are particularly shy and did not seem to feel the effects of such a hard trip. Moncton has become of late quite a metropolis for those engaged in the fox business and outside of towns in P. E. Island more fox business is transacted each week in Moncton than in any other place in Canada. Hardly a week goes by without one or more fox companies being organized in this section.—Tuesday's Times.

TABUSINTAC STABBING CASE

Freeman Edmunds, charged with stabbing James E. Harding, was arraigned in the police court on Friday. Witnesses from Tabusintac were present, and hospital physicians said the wounded man would be able to attend court in a week. So the case was postponed till next Friday. Mr. Butler, Clerk of the Peace, was present on behalf of the Crown. The accused has not been arrested, but his counsel, H. C. L. Tweedie, has guaranteed his attendance in court at the trial. The friends of both parties are anxious to settle the matter, but neither the Magistrate nor Clerk of the Peace will permit anything of that kind.

HOME FOR FALLEN WOMEN

The Methodist Church Will Soon Establish Institution in St. John

A home for fallen women, under the supervision of the Methodist church will be established in St. John within the next year if the plans at present suggested are approved by the church throughout the province. The matter will be fully discussed and some action taken at a convention of the Methodists to be held in St. John early in February. G. A. Moore, of Toronto, will open a campaign in the city at that time and every effort will be made to interest people in the province in the work of social and temperance reform.

The idea of founding the home has also gained many followers in other denominations, and in Sydney a home is to be established by the Presbyterians, and in Halifax the Anglican church will conduct a similar institution. It is practically understood among the different denominations that when one church has started such a home the others will co-operate in the work.

It has been felt for some time that the Protestants of St. John should have such an institution for women who have gone astray and several people have interested themselves in the work of securing a place for them. Now it would appear that their efforts are to be rewarded and a proper institution established.

URGE INCREASE OF SUBSIDIES

Increase in Lieutenant Governors' Salaries Asked For

Ottawa, Ont. 28.—This morning's sitting of the Inter-Provincial Conference of Premiers was given over to a discussion of increased subsidies from the federal government, and it is understood the delegates are a unit in agreeing on the necessity for more money from the Dominion exchequer to carry on public works, erection and maintenance of public institutions and administrations of justice, in all of which the outlay has shown a heavy increase since the last readjustment. The provinces take the ground that since, under confederation, they surrendered to the central authorities their chief sources of revenue in return for an annual subsidy, that subsidies should be increased to meet their needs. They hold that the territory recently added to Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan belonged to all Canada and that these provinces whose boundaries cannot be extended are thus entitled to special consideration.

An increase in salaries of Lieutenant Governors will also be asked for.

JAPANESE COTTON

Its Bearing on the Cotton Trade of Canada and United States

By living on a scale which would starve an American or a European, and by constantly striving to perfect their manufacturing processes, the Japanese are taking considerable trade from the United States in spite of the high tariff of that country. Senator Smoot explained to the United States Senate the other day how Japan had already taken the cotton trade of Manchuria from the United States, and would soon control the entire demand of China. It would seem evident that as Japan takes away the trade in cottons from the United States that that country will try to redeem its losses by selling more cotton in Canada, especially if our duty is reduced.

The Canadian tariff on gray and white cotton fabrics is only 25 per cent, and on colored cotton fabrics 33 1/3 per cent. Japan is not one of our serious competitors, as yet, probably, because she is confining her efforts to taking away the Asiatic export trade of the United States. But during the year ending March 31st, 1913, she imported cotton manufactures worth $8,787,000 from Great Britain and $2,521,665 worth from the United States.

Those who advocate increasing the British Preference should consider the effect of such an increase on our cotton industry. A recent official report of the British Government states that 16 per cent of the men engaged in the cotton industry in England earn less than $5 per week, working full time, nearly 44 per cent. earn between $5 and $7.20, thirteen per cent. of the women working full time, earn less than $2.40 a week, while 39 per cent. earn between $2.40 and $3.60 a week. The average hours of labor in the English cotton industry are 55.5 a week. Do we want these wages for the men and women who are engaged in the Canadian cotton industry?

THE FARMER'S COLUMN

SOME HOG INFORMATION

Every farmer should endeavor to raise some hogs, they have lifted more mortgages on the farms than any other breed of live stock we know of.

In raising hogs two of the most necessary points to consider are first, seeing that they get plenty of exercise, and second that they are supplied at all times with mineral matter in some shape or form.

In the summer time the difficulty of getting over the exercise problem is easily overcome, the hog will rustle for itself; it is in winter, when the snow is deep on the ground that the animal shows little disposition to move far from home.

Some hog men, who are threshing in the fall, put four poles firmly in the ground, put a few slabs above them and blow the straw over this structure. This makes an excellent hog house for winter, and the hogs will keep warm and dry.

To give them exercise the breeder generally feeds them at some little distance from the stack, and this, in walking backward and forward to their food, they get the necessary exercise.

One well known breeder throws his sows an oat sheaf and lets the animal thrust it out for itself.

This keeps it busy generally for about half the day, and affords it sufficient exercise.

Want of exercise in breeding sows is responsible for more weak litters than any other cause we know of.

During the past couple of years there have been quite numerous complaints from hog men of hairless litters.

A well known breeder of Berkshires, who was among those who lost several litters, gives his experiences in the use of wood ashes, coal slack, etc.

To supply these ingredients and to keep the hogs in perfectly healthy condition, free from rickets and other like diseases, a supply of mineral matter is absolutely essential, and wood ashes in a very large degree supplies these requisite ingredients.

Ashes contain lime, carbon potassium, phosphorus, etc., and in every hog house there should be a box, always kept well supplied with this staple form of food.

It is not quite enough to throw the ashes inside the pen or in the run, as, in winter, snow covers them, and they freeze solid, or they are tramped into the bedding of the hogs and rendered useless.

A box to hold the ashes is the best method and they should be mixed with salt. It renders them more palatable and hogs fed in this manner are certain to put on flesh a great deal faster.

Lime should also be fed to hogs, about a handful twice a week. It adds greatly to the growth and strengthens their bones.

It is in the winter months that the hogs need mineral matter, as during the summer when they are put on pasture, or foraging about for themselves, they pick up enough mineral food from the vegetation or around the yard to keep them in good condition.

See to it that your hogs have wood ashes or mineral matter of some kind supplied to them during the winter months, and it is possible there will not be much complaint about "hairless litters."

THE POULTRY YARD POLICE

City folk visiting country neighbors where guinea fowls are kept have often wondered at the cry of those pretentious creatures. Probably no other member of the feathered tribes emit a cry as exasperating to human listeners as that of the guinea fowl. The average man rarely hears it without secretly longing to throttle the throat from which it came. Yet it has its uses. Guinea fowls are the policemen of the poultry yard. They serve as guards to give other fowls warning of the approach of danger, whether it be in the form of thieves, dogs, hawks, or crows. The cry of the guinea fowl is said to be terrifying to hawks and other predatory birds, and it has prevented many a raid upon tempting flocks of poultry.

ADVERTISING APPLES

The essentials of success in an apple advertising campaign are: First, quality; second, uniformity of pack; third, a conspicuous and attractive identification label; fourth, advertising which makes a special point of the quality and the label. If an association would move along those lines, it would do more to increase the consumption of apples, and at the same time educate orchardists in proper and necessary methods, than is possible by indiscriminate advertising.

Sugar Beets for Hogs

Sugar beets have been valued for many years as a good feed for cattle. They are also a splendid feed for hogs, says the American Agriculturist. One farmer recently stated that by feeding sugar beets alone he made his hogs gain 50 pounds in one month. Figuring this at the present price for hogs on foot, the sugar beet will be worth a great deal per ton if sold.

GET RID OF THEM

Male birds, both old and young should be got rid of as early as possible. Early in the summer, when the breeding pairs are broken up, all old males that are not intended to be used next year or that are not to be held for exhibition purposes, should be sold at once. If not sold, it is a good plan to put them in a separate house away from the females. The cockerels should be disposed of as soon as they reach broiler age. It is doubtful economy to keep cockerels until they are large enough for roasting.

Be Careful of Selection

"In the selection of ears of corn for seed," says Professor A. G. McCall of the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, "it is important that only such ears be selected as have acquired the habit of ripening on time. Also care should be taken not to select seed ears from plants of varieties that ripen a long time before hard frosts may be expected, for such plants and varieties will yield less corn than those which use the entire season to develop."

It isn't what we eat but what we digest that keeps up bodily strength. It isn't what we read but what we remember that constitutes an education. It isn't what we earn but what we save that makes one rich, and similarly in farming it isn't the quantity we produce that determines good farming, but at what profit it is produced.

Crops of potatoes yielding 400 bushels to the acre are common this year in the district about Sault Ste. Marie. One farmer has a field which yielded as high as 600 bushels, while many fields average 500 to 550 bushels. This statement was made by J. N. Ponthus, who has been investigating the potato growing possibilities of Northern Ontario.

CONVENTION POSTPONED

World's Christian Endeavor Convention will not meet as Planned Because of Dangerous Epidemic

Smallpox in Sydney, Australia, has caused the indefinite postponement of the World's Christian Endeavor Convention, which was to have been held in that city early in March, 1914, according to a cablegram given out by Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the organization.

Dr. Clark said: "The epidemic has been prevalent in Sydney for several months, and it seems difficult to stamp out. Large preparations had been made for this convention, both in Australia and in America, and a considerable company of Endeavorers from this continent had planned to attend, starting early in January. Among those were Dr. J. A. McDonald of Toronto, Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, of Kansas, Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Clarke and others. The place and time of the next world's convention have not yet been decided."

BOYS ON THE FARM

How to Attract the Lads to the Soil

Three years ago a farmer living in the county of Wellington, who had a couple of hundred acres clear and a satisfactory bank account, was told by his son that he was going into Guelph to team for a dollar and a half a day. He did not like the drudgery of farm work, and he had no cash. The father, who tells the story, said it nearly broke his heart to think his boy would leave such a farm as he had to team in the city for a dollar and a half a day. He thought it over, and finally he said to the boy that if he would remain on the farm he would buy him the best herd of shorthorn cattle in the country, and he could have them for himself to look after. The boy accepted his father's offer, and this is the third year since the experiment was tried. His father says it is difficult to get him to the city for things that are absolutely necessary. His whole interest is taken up in developing the herd. He says you could not drive the boy off the farm. He has learned the points of his herd and how to develop them, and to produce a better animal than anybody else. He has found an outlet for his abilities, tested to their full bent. A farmer up in Simcoe county introduced the writer to his son, a lad of fourteen years. The father was manifestly proud of him. He said that the boy's grandfather had presented him with a few pure-bred sheep. "Now," said he, "the boy has sheep on the brain. He reads every book and paper about sheep he gets his hands on. There is no mistake about it, he is going to be a farmer."

TERRIBLE MURDER AT ST. HILAIRE

Aged Lady Brutally Killed by Degenerate Who Made Good His Escape--Robbery the Motive

St. Hilaire, Que., Oct. 25--Lying in a pool of blood with her throat gashed and her skull crushed in from a blow behind the left ear, Mrs. Chevalier, a defenceless old lady who lived alone was found dead Saturday afternoon in the outskirts of St. Hilaire, in the parish of St. Jean Baptiste, Rouville. Not only the marks on the body, but the state of disorder in which the house was found when neighbors entered, pointed clearly to a brutal murder having been committed by some unidentified individual who made good his escape. Mrs. Chevalier had been dead at least twelve hours when her body was discovered.

Robbery is the supposed motive of the deed. The house was completely ransacked. Mrs. Chevalier's clothing was badly torn, showing that there was a struggle before she was felled to the floor, probably by a short piece of iron pipe which lay near the body. In the kitchen table a knife covered with blood was found, evidently the instrument used by the murderer in inflicting deep wounds in the throat and across the face. According to the medical evidence heard at the inquest Saturday evening, Mrs. Chevalier's death was due to the cerebral hemorrhage caused by the blow behind the ear.

IN MEMORIAM

The following lines were written to the memory of Lily G. McKenzie, the seven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McKenzie, who died last week.

Gene to yonder happy home, Sady round her bed we weep, Angels bade our darling come Little Lily's gone to sleep.

Lay her playthings all away, She will never need them more, Gene the sunlight of our day, Gene to yonder golden shore.

Clasp her hands upon her breast While we gently round her weep, Oh! the still and holy rest, Little Lily's gone to sleep.

Rosy cheeks have grown so pale, Ruby lips now speak no more, Breath as soft as summer gale, Voice as sweet as warbling birds.

Oh! the stillness all around, Oh! the silence lone and deep, Tender ears can hear no sound, Little Lily's gone to sleep.

Years will come and years will go But the form we loved so well, It has vanished from our home, How we miss her none can tell.

Angels to their starry home, Called the gem we could not keep, There she waits until we come, Little Lily's gone to sleep.

KEEP BABY HEALTHY

To keep the baby healthy his little stomach should be kept sweet at his bowels working regularly. Nine-tenths of the ailments which afflict little ones, are caused by some derangement of the stomach or bowels. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal medicine for little ones. They sweeten the stomach; regulate the bowels; break up colds; make teething easy; dispel worms and cure constipation and indigestion. Concerning them Mrs. S. Shannon, Urney, N. B., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my two little ones and think they are just what children need. I would not be without them." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Conditions affecting the marketing end of the dairy industry in Canada have undergone rapid changes during recent years. In the past it has been the custom to estimate the growth of the industry on the export trade. This, however, has become an entirely unreliable guide because Canada no longer has butter to spare, but on the other hand finds it necessary to import from other countries. Cheese exports too have greatly decreased.

The secretary reported that so far no society had been organized at Buctouche.

Mrs. A. B. Leard read a paper on the Mite Box. She suggested that Blessing Box might be a better name. Miss Stewart and Mrs. Fulton and Mrs. Clark also spoke on the importance of mite boxes and the advantage of having good mite box superintendents.

Miss Stewart led the Quiet Half Hour service.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison.

Afternoon session opened at 2.30. A paper on the same by a lady in Charlottetown was read by Miss Laura Willis-ton.

Mrs. Harrison read a paper, entitled "A plea for our Literature." It was suggested that members distribute such copies of Palm Branch and Outlook as they had read to remote districts in the hope that it might lead to organization of new societies there.

The only decreases of any sort in all Canada were in the circulation of the Palm Branch and Outlook.

Miss Stewart strongly recommended the missionary report as a means of keeping in touch with missionary work and expenditures, and the book "The Seventh from Adam" as a good book for the younger members.

Greetings from the Presbyterian Synod were extended by Mrs. E. C. Nicholson, Mrs. L. R. Hetherington, as a Baptist, also welcomed the members.

A society of Little Light Bearers was reported from Richibucto.

The president stated that it was the request of the Branch Treasurer that all sums sent in by auxiliaries, Bands and Circles end in 5 or 0, in order to facilitate the adding up of columns, which in a year aggregate over $12,000. Miss Stewart suggested that only even dollars be sent in.

Miss Stewart spoke very eloquently on the work done in the Kindergarten in Toronto in connection with the Italian Mission, also of the noble, self-sacrificing work done by our missionaries in the far west, where one-third of all the money raised by the Canadian W. M. S. is used.

The question of holding future District Conventions was held over. Adjourned sine die.

PLEASE PUBLISH MY TESTIMONIAL

So Other Sufferers Will Take "Fruit-a-lives" And Be Cured

Gratitude — heartfelt gratitude — prompted this letter. Madame Langlois was so thankful to "Fruit-a-lives" for restoring her to health and strength, that she gladly allowed her letter to be published.

MADAME VALERIE LANGLOIS

St. Romuald, Que., Sept. 23rd, 1912. "I have pleasure in stating that I have been cured of severe Dyspepsia and Chronic Constipation by using 'Fruit-a-lives.' I was a terrible sufferer from severe Constipation for many years, and I tried every remedy I heard of, and also was treated by physicians without any permanent benefit.

Then I tried 'Fruit-a-lives', and this fruit medicine has completely cured both the Constipation and Indigestion. I cannot praise 'Fruit-a-lives' enough."

BANDITS KILLED WRESTLING TURK

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25.—Yussif Mahmut, a Bulgarian wrestler, who met a number of American mat men, including Frank Gotch, of whom he was defeated, was killed by a band of Bulgarian bandits in the mountains near Silistria, his home, according to a story told by two Turkish wrestlers, who arrived here today. Mahmut was a petty officer in the Bulgarian army during the late war, and preceding to their story went to the town to draw some money to pay of the men in his command. Sixteen bandits, learning the purpose of his trip, waylaid him on his return, but because Mahmut had procured early orders instead of gold coin they killed him. The murder of Mahmut took place three weeks ago.

DREADED EPILEPSY

A Case That Should Bring Hope to Other Sufferers

There are many cases of epilepsy incurable so far as present medical knowledge extends and the sufferer is deemed to go through life a victim to a disease which has stricken him suddenly and without warning, and with each recurring affects his mental powers. Taken in time, however, many cases of epilepsy have been permanently cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in cases where the disease has not reached an acute form this remedy is worth giving a fair trial. Among the cures we give the following: Mrs. Robert Stringer, New Liskeard, Ont. says: "I have long felt that we should write you and let you know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for our grandson, who was attacked with epilepsy. The trouble seemed to come on following an attack of whooping cough. His parents seemed to notice that his eyes seemed to bug out, and that he would be unconscious for a few seconds, and would go about his play as usual. The child was five years old at this time. The trouble seemed to be growing more severe and the attacks to come oftener, and as the local doctors were not helping him they sent him to the Children's Hospital in Toronto. He remained there for a short time when the doctors said his trouble was epilepsy, and they could do nothing for him. Time went on and the attacks grew worse, and in the fall of 1908 my daughter wrote me that the little fellow was getting so bad that they wanted to send him back to the hospital. I asked her to send him to me for a time, and as one of his eyes had become crooked I took him to an oculist, who said this trouble could be cured, but it had nothing to do with bringing on his other trouble. As I knew that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were a splendid medicine I decided to give them to him, in the hope that they might benefit him. We were very careful as to diet, and as to keeping the child from excitement. In about a month we noticed that the trouble was lessening, and at this time the little fellow returned home and his mother kept up the treatment. In a few months he seemed fully cured, but during the holidays the trouble came back in a milder form and the Pink Pills were again resorted to, and again the trouble disappeared, and although more than a year has passed there has not since been any sign of it.

"SOUND BUSINESS ARRANGEMENT"

I. C. R. General Manager Gutelius Made Agreement With C. P. R.

St. John, Oct. 24.—"I made the agreement with the C. P. R. regarding hauling special trains to the Empire boats at Halifax without consulting anybody, and because it is a good business arrangement. I don't care how many experts examine the agreement they will pronounce it a good business arrangement. Any talk that there was political interference in the matter is all nonsense."

So said F. P. Gutelius, general manager of the I. C. R., yesterday afternoon after a lengthy conference with the council of the Board of Trade, during which the agreement was discussed from various points of view.

At the conclusion some of the members of the council of the Board said that the I. C. R. management had evidently entered into the agreement with the C. P. R. as a business proposition and without regard to political considerations, but added that they were somewhat at sea in respect to the business propositions involved. One of the steamship men present at the conference declared:

"About all I could make of it is this: The I. C. R. expects to get $5,000 from handling the traffic for each boat, and to make a clear profit of $2,500 out of each boat."

Mr. Gutelius told the council that under the agreement with the C. P. R. the Government road was getting the better terms of traffic from St. John to Halifax than it did on export traffic from Montreal to St. John, and declared that he would be glad to make the same arrangement with the Grand Trunk Pacific or any other road that might come to St. John. The advantage of the agreement, he said, lay in the fact that the I. C. R. would only have to do the hauling of the trains. The C. P. R. would have to make up solid trains at St. John, and would supply their own checkers and men to handle the freight at both ends.

Asked if the agreement could be overridden, Mr. Gutelius said he did not think it could be, as it had been signed by representatives of the contracting parties. The agreement was only a temporary one and would terminate on May 15th next. No other traffic arrangements would be affected by the agreement; it only applied to freight and passenger traffic for the four big mail boats.

VATICAN MOURNS

PRELATE'S DEATH

Rome, Oct. 25.—The death of Monsignor Montagnini, reported to the Pope today from Berlin, has caused great grief at the Vatican. He had been suffering recently from an affection of the throat and was operated on a few days ago.

Monsignor Montagnini was very popular at the Vatican and was much esteemed by Cardinal Merry Del Val, who took him to London when he went to attend King Edward's coronation. At the time of the rupture between France and the Vatican, Cardinal Merry Del Val instructed Monsignor Montagnini with the charge of the nunciature, after the Papal Nuncio, Monsignor Lorenzelli, left Paris. When former Premier Clemenceau later expelled Monsignor Montagnini, Cardinal Merry Del Val appointed the distinguished prelate to a post in the office of the papal secretary of state, where he remained until last winter, when he was nominated special envoy for the Vatican to Columbia.

Thomas Turner, aged nineteen years, forfeited his life two miles west of Brockville, Ont., as the result of a boyish prank of stealing a ride to Ganonogue Jet, and return. Turner fell from the fender, and the entire train of forty cars passed over his body, completely severing it below the shoulders.

The British government has adopted a waiting attitude in regard to the Mexican situation. It considers the matter thus far as an entirely internal affair of Mexico and does not contemplate any action, although it is watching events closely. The British foreign office has not received any information from the legation in Mexico City in respect to the reported conference of the members of the diplomatic peers there, and the fact that Germany is reported to have sent a warship to a Mexican port has not influenced British policy.

Ald. W. W. Boyce, of Fredericton, made a record shipment of potatoes to the United States and Cuba this month, shipping one hundred carloads.

We feel so deeply indebted for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for him that we hope this plain statement of our experience will benefit some other sufferer. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MRS. EATON TAKES STAND HERSELF

Accused Widow of Admiral Will Give Evidence in Own Behalf

Plymouth, Mass., Oct. 25.—The appearance of the defendant on the stand today brought to a climax the trial of Jennie May Eaton, charged with causing the death of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, by giving him poison. Counsel for the defence had led up to her testimony by calling during the past two days numerous witnesses, who described Rear Admiral Eaton as having been frequently under the influence of liquor or drugs.

Today counsel sought to draw from her own lips, Mrs. Eaton's story of her life with the Admiral. It is the contention of the defence that the man died from an overdose of a drug, which he had been accustomed to using, and Mrs. Eaton took the stand prepared to relate all that she knew of her husband's habits.

Mrs. Eaton was called after William M. Gammons, an insurance man of Springfield, had testified concerning the policies on the Admiral's life, and on which loans had been made. The approximate value of the policies was $3,700, and both were payable to the widow.

Our Job Printing Department

There is a difference between plain Job Printing and the kind of Printing that draws business. At one time any kind of a printed letter-head or envelope would do so long as the work was done by a printer. Good paper and high priced ink, the customer did not know enough about to be fussy. It is not so now. The customer to-day figures those items into his contract for printing the same as he does the quality of the goods he purchases to carry on his business.

This is the class of customers who have their printing done at The Advocate Job Dept. Only the best lines of writing paper are kept in stock and the highest grade of inks used for all work. There is not a CHEAP line in our office, for experience has taught us to carry only the best and the most serviceable.

People who leave their order for printing with this office, have that inward feeling of assurance that they are going to get just the kind of a job they want. They do not speculate—they know, and they are never disappointed. We spare no pains to give our customers just what they want, and that is one reason why this office has gained the reputation it has for turning out the highest class of Job Printing only.

If you are not yet a customer, join our list and have your letter heads and envelopes, or whatever nature your work may be, printed in an artistic manner. It does not cost any more for good printing than it does for the cheaper kind, and a small order is given as good care as a large one.

We are now in a position to handle all kinds of

and would be pleased to quote prices for this class of work at any time. We guarantee strict satisfaction in all cases.

Remember that this office is in better shape to handle your Printing than it has ever been before, due to the fact that only competent printers are employed and the most modern machinery used.

Kind and affectionate as Trefusis was to her, yet it seemed to her as if he did not display enough tenderness to smooth away the doubts and difficulties with which she was beset. She longed to ask him if she thought it was wrong that they should marry, yet feared to hear his answer, for if he thought it wrong, nothing on earth would make her marry him. To go against her own conscience would be nothing as compared with allowing him to go against his. How odd it seemed, she thought, that now that Doreen had disappeared nothing seemed clearer or easier, and Avril longed for the days gone by, when she had only been able to dream of him as a far-off possible joy, and that dreaming had sufficed. When they were together they never mentioned Doreen, yet the very avoidance of her name created a something between them that, if it was not reserve, was at least a dividing element. It seemed to both that if they married without a perfect understanding they would be miserable afterwards, yet neither dared ask the question for fear the answer should dash the cup of happiness from their lips. In these days Mr. Hardin came very rarely to the house. Things had never been the same between them since they had taken that ride together. Avril felt that he disapproved of her and that he was right. Yes, as she thought more and more, as she read more and more, she felt certain that it was contrary to the law of Christ.

"Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives, but from the beginning it was not so."

And there was another text that troubled her:

"For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? Or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?"

Could it be that God had intended Arthur Trefusis to suffer for his wife's infidelity and to try and rescue her from the position in which she had placed herself, from the temptations that surrounded her, instead of invoking the services of the law in order to push her further down into the mire. "For better or for worse." Did these words mean only the uncertain fluctuations of the money market, or did it mean the standing by each other in the day of temptation, of trial, of sin, even realizing that the "worse" drew them ever closer together in that eternal binding of heart and soul which God had decreed. Yes, something told her that there could be no happiness in the building of one's happiness on the bleeding battlefield of another's life, a battlefield that had seen defeat and where a disillusioned heart lay bleeding. She made up her mind to give up Arthur, something told her that this was what she ought to do, and somehow it seemed to Arthur Trefusis as if he had always expected her to do this. To her amazement, he did not do as she had expected, and insist on her keeping her promise.

"The same thought has come to me," he said. "It would be cruel, would it not, to Doreen, to marry immediately?"

Doreen, Doreen, was that name always to come between her and Arthur? To her it seemed as if Doreen hovered, wiped out, annulled, formed yet a more powerful barrier between her and Trefusis than she had done as his wife. A dull anger rose in her heart, which made it easier to say:

"It is not a question of immediately. I feel sure it is better to part altogether. It could not be right for us to marry at all while Doreen lived."

Her voice was cold. She had been ready to defy the world's opinion for him, why had he not raised himself to equal heights of sacrifice? He looked at her astonished.

"Do you think that?" he asked. She did not think it. She only knew that it was all the world thought or pretended to think, and that from the very unpleasantness of the step she was taking it must be a right one. It was wonderful how the thought of losing Avril roused Trefusis.

"Wrong or right," he went on, "I must marry you, I can't do without you."

She was thankful for his words. They were alone in the billiard-room at Redleigh. The household had gone to bed, and good creature Mrs. Chichester had left Avril to finish a game of billiards.

"Oh, I am glad you said that. I was beginning to think that you no longer cared for me."

What did Doreen, divorce, or anything else matter while Trefusis had his arms round her? While he realized that he had been made for domestic life and could not let Avril go. He also realized that Avril was hurt by his want of impulsiveness. He had been wrong to expect her to wait. It was mere hedonism with his conscience that made him demand delay. If it were wrong, what difference would six months, a year, two years, make? Was it, could it be that they wanted Doreen to die? The thought made him shiver. It was as if he had turned a dog from his door and not satisfied, but wished to see it run over in the street. And when she was dead, when the two without that shadow between them would be alone together with their love, could her disappearance destroy the thoughts that had been in her lifetime, the marriage of their souls and thoughts that had been consummated before Doreen was even divorced. Without knowing it, what Trefusis shrank most from was the marriage service, he dreaded the repetition of the words that had been said over Doreen, while Doreen still lived. She had broken her vow, but did that exonerate him? Because a wife steals, is a husband innocent because he steals too? Because a wife murders, can a husband stab the first comer and be guiltless? In those days Trefusis studied the Bible, and sought the society of serious Oxford men whose company he had not frequented for years and thrashed out the question, reserving for himself the power of acting according to the standard of his own world. There was only one person who understood the position between them, and that was George Hardin. He came sometimes to the house. He had the keen perception of the unerring discrimination of those who live quiet lives. He was one of the watchers of the world. He had grown to know and like Trefusis, who was constantly at the Chichesters' in the double capacity of father to Mouché and the fiancé of Avril. He saw clearly enough that an act of heroism on the part of Avril was all that was required. What that act would cost Avril he didn't know. He felt that if she did not complete that act she would not be what he thought her. But she never mentioned her engagement to Hardin, so he had no opportunity of speaking his thoughts. He smiled to himself as he thought of what the country would say if they knew that he longed to lecture Avril on moral and religious right.

WOMAN AND MOSES

As for Avril, she was simply passing from the period of girlish dreaming into the period of realistic facts. What all pass from the one period to the other, but the process is not pleasant. She realized that the happiest time of her life had been before Doreen's divorce, when all the uncertainty of the future gave scope to a hope that yet had a dream in it. Now the situation resolved itself into this. Was she doing a wrong act in marrying Arthur? Was Arthur in love with her or anxious to break off the marriage? There was something in his hesitancy that she could not understand, but it was not that his love was waning. What she could not grasp was that God only makes Himself manifest through mere perceptions of the brain and heart. It is the only way He speaks to us.

By common accord, or what both assumed to be so, they agreed to put off the wedding for another six months and London bet heavily that it would never take place.

CHAPTER XIV

What Doreen realised a few weeks after her divorce was how entirely moral England is. So moral, that it drives to despair all those that have been found out, especially if they belong to what is termed the upper classes. There are plenty of homes, kind friends and enthusiastic helpers for "fallen women," but none for "fallen ladies." For them, indeed, there is nothing really suitable but death, and if he refused the task of their purification, they can indeed reckon themselves as the cursed of destiny. Doreen had rejected all offers of financial help from Trefusis, and had driven away with her boxes and Rosalie, without the faintest idea of where she was going to. She had very little money, but she had jewels, and on these she felt she could depend for some months till—till what. "I wonder," she said to herself, as she woke from a restless sleep in the little lodgings at Eastbourne, which she had chosen as her first landing place on the new and desolate road that stretched before her.

"I was a fool to refuse George Farquharson," she said to herself, regretting for the moment her noble act, rather than the ignoble ones. "How can I go on like this? Alone, quite alone."

Doreen, the pretty careless Doreen, friendless and alone. She thought of herself as a little child, remembered her father and cried. "How funny it was. In her letter to Avril, for Avril still kept up a correspondence with her, in order to keep her in news of Mouché, she had almost signed herself "Trefusis." Could it be possible that she was no longer Mrs. Arthur Trefusis? How vividly everything came back to her. Her girlhood, her marriage, the birth of Mouché. What was everyone saying, she wondered? And underneath everything was the fierce longing for Mouché that was a most like madness. Why, why had she been such a fool? As yet, she was more angry than penitent. She knew so many women who were worse. Why had she been sought out by the fates for this ending?

Rosalie didn't like Eastbourne, nor could she understand how a lady so beautiful and now absolutely free should waste her time in weeping at Eastbourne. She suggested lovely haunts abroad—

"Où madame pourrait s'amuser." How could Doreen explain that she had no wish "de s'amuser," that England held Mouché and Arthur, and that the Channel between them would be to her like the irrevocable down-stream of the Styx? Hoy could she define the feeling strong upon her, that England had a healthy, clean smelling atmosphere, that seemed to safeguard her, that to go abroad and float aimlessly about from watering place to watering place, seemed to her to define too clearly the dark horizon that encompassed her new state, an horizon towards which, as yet, she did not dare life her eyes? She seemed like one listening, listening, to some call that would come sooner or later; she felt sure that it could not be in this big world there was no one, no one who thought of poor Doreen.

The season had begun, but she could not bear to read the papers, with the accounts of the small doings of the world, whereix she could no longer enter. Every morning she walked by the sea and wondered, wondered what would be the end of it all, for it could not go on like this. She would go mad, or kill herself. She knew not which was wariest, to go out from her little lodgings for the dreary walk, or to return to the loneliness of them. Could it be, she asked herself, that humanity had the right to punish its fellow-men like that? She read unweary the announcement of Trefusis's engagement to Avril.

"It seems absurd," she wrote to Avril, with that touch of flippancy and recklessness that made the world judge her heartless and unthinking. "It seems absurd to congratulate you on your engagement to my husband, yet I am really glad, dear, for your sake, his, and Mouché's." Then she put down her pen and laughed, hysterically till she cried. It was so funny.

The only bright thing that happened to her in those days was a letter from George Farquharson, addressed to Mrs. Trefusis, and which nearly got returned to the postman, only luckily Doreen was in the hall.

"That is for me, she said, stretching out her hand.

The landlady gave it her with that voluminous probing look peculiar to lodging-house keepers, a look to which the Röntgen Rays are but the smile of an infant. But she did not care for the look of her landlady. She carried the letter out to the esplanade and read it twice, contained each time of how little it contained and of how boyish it was. Why, she wondered, did she suddenly feel so old?

"I must write you one line," he said, and it is only to ask you how you are, and to say I do so hope you are not very down on your luck. But I suppose you have lots of friends at Eastbourne?" (Doreen smiled to herself. How little men realized what was the fate of a divorcee!) "I suppose you know that I have given up working for your husband—my chief. I feel I really couldn't go on after you left. I was very surprised to hear of his engagement to Miss Chichester." ("I wasn't," said Doreen to herself, "rather mean I call it.") Then, after a page devoted to trivial news, he ended by the words:

"If ever you change your mind, you know I shan't change mine, and you would make me so happy."

Had he been honest with himself, he could not have felt that his words were quite true. Indeed, he was rather glad she had refused him, for the name of a family which would indeed have been thought of as such an alliance, but while he wrote to her, he had worked himself up to an almost lachrymose state of sympathy over her wrongs, as he persisted in calling the troubles that she had brought upon herself, and while he wrote in the pure flush of boyish chivalry, he meant every word he said.

It was nice after all to feel that she had one friend; but how long would it last? she asked herself. Would he not soon be taken from her by scheming mothers and seductive husband-seeking maidens?

What, however, she realized very clearly, was that she must set about some means of earning her living. Here again the vigorous virtue of England smacked her face, so to speak. Who would employ a divorcee? The advantage of a good record struck her with a force it took her some time to grasp. How could she go and teach without diplomas, without a reference? How infinitely inferior she felt to that world of frumpy best-dressed women she saw often smilingly gazed at as she saw them splashing through the mud in their short skirts and thick boots, a racing from house to house with their parcels of books under their arms. To be sure, she had in her possession a letter from Arthur's solicitor, saying that at any time she required financial assistance, she had only to write to them.

"I suppose I shall have to do that when it comes to starting," she said to herself, with a bitter laugh, but for the moment the idea was revolting. "What was there that she could do?" she asked herself; absolutely nothing was the somewhat desolate and uncompromising answer. Nothing, she was not even well-educated enough to teach anything but music, and she had sense enough to know that her story would follow her wherever she tried to introduce herself, even if she ever succeeded in obtaining employment. It was not likely that even a shop would take her without a reference, and even in that capacity, how ignorant she was. She began to realize that knowledge of technique is a greater power than talent.

"I don't suppose I should even be able to turn a barrel organ properly at first."

Things were not so pleasant now. The money was ebbing out. Rosalie had already made a mysterious visit to London with a diamond ring, which returned not, and Doreen realized that Madame Jaqueline would see no more for gowns.

"I always thought there were compensations in all existences," she said to herself, "but mine has none," and when at last she was assailed by influenza and had to take to her bed, it seemed indeed as if there was nothing to live for, for Rosalie, although devoted, was getting intensely bored with the life at "Esther," and as the dim futurity of moneyless service which loomed in the distance. In these days she realized the full bitterness of her situation, and one cannot blame her if the dark thought of suicide crossed her brain now and then. Would she ever have the courage, she wondered, to take her own life? What she could not understand was how people could call it a cowardly act.

"Why, I don't believe I would ever have the pluck to do it," she wrote to George Farquharson, who was her chief, if not the only, correspondent in those days.

This letter terrified George Farquharson and brought him to Eastbourne, laden with fruit and flowers, bon-bons and cigarettes. Doreen's eyes filled with tears. These nothings filled her with emotions. It was like the old days. She held the lovely flowers to her face, almost kissing them as she inhaled their fragrance, long enough to hide her feelings, but they were very glistening eyes that turned to George Farquharson.

"How can I thank you?" she said, and the change in her voice, more than anything else, told George of the wave of trouble that had come over her and of the impress it had left.

"I shall not know this dreadful hole," she said, "with all this wealth of flowers. Oh, you don't know what good you have done me, and yet—"

Her voice broke. Involuntarily George looked round the poor little sitting room, and he thought of the turquoise boudoir in South Audley Street.

"Life was pretty down on women," he said, and a fierce feeling of resentment against Trefusis rose in his mind. It did him good to tell Doreen that Arthur's wedding was put off, and Doreen could not have been quite human if she had not felt a little glad.

"Why should they have it all their own way?" she asked herself. But it was unsatisfactory of George Farquharson not to be able to tell her why it was put off.

"No one quite knows," he said. "You know they haven't come to London this season?" (Doreen felt glad of this for Mouché's sake.) "I believe all the parsons have been at her and told her it's wrong. Their own vicar wouldn't do the service or he didn't. Which was it? And finally, after a long talk with Avril, it was decided that Mr. Chichester should write to Arthur Trefusis and break off the marriage. He had wanted to write and ask him what he intended to do, but Avril would not hear of this. Wearing as the long position was for some finality to the position, she would not have it that her mother forced his hand, nor let him think that she failed to enter into the different tangles of his perplexity. She wrote to him too.

"Do not, I beg of you, (I think that I am weary of waiting," she wrote. "I know quite well all you must feel, if you are content as it is, so am I, I only wonder whether you would be happier free, if, after all, it would not be more right of us to break off our engagement."

With what anxiety she awaited the answer to that letter, no one knew but herself. What would he do? Was he anxious to get out of his engagement? Would he think they were bringing pressure to bear? Would he marry her because he thought he must not delay any longer?

"My husband thinks it is not quite fair on Avril," Mrs. Chichester had written, and the letter was handed to him on a sun-flooded balcony at Nice. His first feeling was one of irritation that his peace should have been invaded. Why would nobody ever leave things as they were? It was all so comfortable as it was. The freedom, the peace, the liberty, and in the distance, Avril waiting to welcome him with Mouché, when a longing for domesticity came over him. Avril's letter was still more disturbing, because he could not read between the lines. Did she want to be free, he wondered, or did she feel really that it was wrong? What a help it would be if the Bible had been clearer, or if some one knew what people were meant to do. Why on earth had Doreen made such an ass of herself?

Newcastle Man's Experience

To have a horse run away with you is a common occurrence, but when a pair of young helpers take possession of your outfit, that is something that does not happen very often. This was the case of a popular Newcastle young man the other day. While driving along the Napin road, he encountered a pair of young helpers, with locked horns, in deadly combat, and as he approached, before he had time to say sewing machine, the helpers forced their way under the horse, almost completely taking him off his feet. The young man, seeing danger ahead prepared himself to jump when he found it unnecessary as the helpers started on the move, taking horse and all along with them. The horse, not liking this style of locomotion, began to buck, and after breaking a shaft in two, freed himself of the combatants. After repairs were made, the young man drove on his way and not a needle lost.

M. A. O'Keefe. The bride wore a becoming costume of cream serge with hat to match, and her sister, Miss Annie, gowned in blue silk with hat to match, was bridesmaid. Michael Lynch, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, and the young couple left at 10.20 for Halifax on a honeymoon trip, accompanied by the best wishes of a large circle of friends.
