CHAPTER XXXIX.
ABOVE SUSPICION.

OLIVE hurried on, unconscious of the shadow behind her, and at length reached Grafton Square. She found number fifty-one, and had scarcely pulled the bell than the door was opened by Hastley Derrick's valet.

With a low bow he ushered her up the stairs.

Almost before the door had closed, the woman who had followed her stood on the steps. She also was about to ring, but suddenly a hand was laid upon her arm. She turned and without a word descended the steps. Then, raising her veil, she said:

"Lord Heatherdene!"

"Yes, it is I," he said, his voice broken and hoarse. "What are you doing here? Do you know that—that she is here?"

"Yes," said Katrine, for it was she. "I know she is here. How do you know it?"

Lord Heatherdene held out a crumpled piece of paper.

"Read that," he said. "Florence found it in Grosvenor Square, and has just given it to me."

Katrine, pale and wan, but calm and composed, took it and read it.

She looked up at the white face with a glance of pity.

"Well," he said, "you see!"

"I see," she said. "Who gave it to you?"

"Florence," he replied hoarsely. "She found it at my house, and gave it to me at Lady Merrivale's, and I came here. What does it all mean?"

Katrine hesitated.

"I do not know," she said.

"You do not know," he said, with bitter incredulity. "At least you must have suspected something, or why are you here? How did you know where to come?"

Katrine thought for a moment.

"I do not know anything," she said; "but I suspect a great deal. I saw that note delivered. I saw that note placed in her hands by Hastley Derrick."

"Hastley Derrick—yes," said Lord Heatherdene between his teeth; "and she is here, keeping an appointment with him!"

"Hush!" said Katrine. "Do not judge her yet, or you may wrong her."

"Wrong her—how can I wrong her? Is she not here?"

"She is here," said Katrine; "but why?"

"Why?" he echoed wildly. "What is the meaning of it? I can't believe all that this—this conduct of hers would lead me to infer. Why are you here?"

Katrine smiled sadly.

"I scarcely know," she said, with a heavy sigh. "To-night, after I left you, I could not rest; something, some indefinable dream haunted me. I changed my dress and intended returning to your house; at the corner of the square I saw—I saw her coming out of the house, and I followed her."

He groaned.

"Why did you not stop her?" he asked.

"Why, indeed," said Katrine sadly; "because I knew it would be of little use. I know her better than you do, and know that one might as well try to turn the ocean back from its course as turn her."

He groaned.

"What does it mean?" he asked, in agony. "What is it she fears? You, who knew her before—before our marriage, can throw some light upon it."

Katrine shook her head.

"I cannot," she said.

He took two paces away from her, then strode back and laid his hand upon her arm.

"Katrine," he said, and it was pitiable to listen to the broken voice—the cheery voice made hoarse and discordant by his anguish—"Katrine, you know how I have loved her."

Katrine's eyes filled with tears.

"No man ever loved any woman better than I have loved her. We have been more like lovers than husband and wife, and I have trusted her as entirely as I have loved her." He stopped suddenly, started, and with an utterly changed voice, and with a look that was nobleness itself, he drew himself up. "Trust her!" he said; "yes, and I do trust her. What right have I—what right have you?" he demanded, almost fiercely, "to dog her footsteps? The man who could think of wrong, of shame, of faithlessness in connection with Adrienne must be a fool. She shall not know that I have watched or mistrusted her," and he turned away.

Katrine stood transfixed for a moment by his spectacle of knightly devotion, which, even in the face of such apparent cause, would cast no slur, even of suspicion, upon the woman he loved.

"Stop!" she cried. "You are right—oh, I love you, Lord Heatherdene, for your noble spirit—but you forget. You may not distrust Adrienne, but there are others—Hastley Derrick—"

He turned pale, and bit his lip.

"My friend from boyhood!" he said, struggling for composure.

"And yet another," said Katrine, almost inaudibly. "Lord Heatherdene, we have to protect her—"

He started.

"Do you mean to hint that she is in danger?" he said, striding up the steps.

Katrine followed him, with her hand upon his arm.

"Hush!" she said. "Lord Heatherdene, I am only a weak woman, and my love for her is not so great as yours, and leaves me greater composure. Let me use my woman's wits."

"Go on," he groaned impatiently. "I am half-distracted, and not fit to decide. What shall we do?"

"Let us see if we cannot solve this mystery. Where your wife is, there you have a right to be. She is in this house. Can we not get into it, and near her, without—"

He made an eager gesture of assent, and rang the bell.

Hastley Derrick's valet opened the door, and without waiting a moment, Lord Heatherdene, taking Katrine's arm within his, stepped in. The man turned suddenly pale, and fumbled at the handle.

"My master is out, my lord," he said.

"That is a lie!" said Lord Heatherdene sternly.

The man glanced up the stairs, but Charlie stepped in front of him.

"Stop where you are," he said, with an ominous look in his eyes. "Remain here until I call to you." Then he said, with a wild smile: "Your master expects me; Lady Heatherdene is here, waiting for me."

The man looked puzzled, and made a frightened bow.

"You will remain here," said Charlie; then, with Katrine still on his arm, he passed quickly but silently up the stairs.

On the landing he paused a moment then pushed open a door that led into the small anteroom which Hastley Derrick used as a library.

The room was dark, but a thin streak of light oozed through the curtain which divided it from the inner room, and by this streak the two made their way noiselessly, and stood, breathless and listening.

CHAPTER XL.
TRUTH WILL OUT.

FOR a moment Lord Heatherdene's emotion seemed to render him deaf, and the sound of a man's voice in the adjoining room smote on his ears without conveying sense or meaning; but presently he knew that it was Hastley Derrick who was speaking.

With a grip upon Katrine's arm he drew the curtains slightly apart, and after a moment's pause, as if to gain composure, looked through; then he drew back, and covered his face with his hands.

H.P. SAUCE

continues to arrive from England.

Has a new and delicious flavour, no sauce just like it.

Wouldn't it be worth your while to try a bottle now?

He had seen Olive—she was there! Up to the present he had hugged and cherished a faint hope that there might be some mistake, and that she would not be there; but that hope was smitten to the ground by the sight that met his eyes.

Olive was there, with her hand clasping the back of a chair, her eyes gleaming darkly from her white face upon some object at the other side of the room. Close by her side—not touching her, but yet seeming to support her—stood Hastley Derrick.

Seated, with his hands folded on the table, and leaning forward, with a weak, besotted face, was Stephen Rawdon; it was upon him that Olive's fascinated gaze was fixed.

"Lady Heatherdene is here," Hastley Derrick was saying, his measured tones lower than usual, and a little less certain and composed; "Lady Heatherdene is here, Rawdon—by my advice, and I may say, persuasion. She does not deny that she is to a certain extent in your power, and she is anxious to learn from your own lips the price you set upon her freedom. I have, in her interests, attempted to make terms with you some days ago; but you insisted upon seeing her ladyship herself, and—she is here."

Stephen Rawdon nodded once or twice, and put up his shabby hand to wipe his lips before he spoke.

"It's as well for her she is," he said in a thick, husky voice. "Do you know me?" he demanded.

Olive did not speak, but a shudder ran through her frame.

"Come," he said, with a sneer, "that's a good beginning. I've heard so much of my lady this and my lady that, that I thought you were going to deny me altogether."

Lord Heatherdene clenched his hands, and only by a strong effort restrained himself from bursting in and smiting the scoundrel on his insolent lips.

"I thought that you would endeavor to play the high-handed game. I'm glad you don't."

"Silence!" said Hastley Derrick sternly. "Lady Heatherdene is under my protection. Say what you have to say respectfully."

(Rev. CANON HEENEY, Winnipeg, Man.)

The following sermon was preached in St. Luke's Church, Winnipeg, on Sunday, December 16th, but is specially suited to the Easter Season.

"The Lord hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for His habitation."—Psalm 132:13.

As a military accomplishment the fall of Jerusalem has been variously estimated. The "New York Sun" says: "The strategic value of Jerusalem is not significant. With the control that it gives over the Judean hills, it places in the hands of the Allies the key to Galilee. It permits the penetration of the country to the north, the acquisition of Mt. Carmel, Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee."

Major General Maurice, director of military operations at the British War Office, views it in the larger light of the Egyptian-Sinai-Palestine campaign as a whole—and says, "The great achievement from a military point of view is not the defeat of the Turks, but the conquest of the Sinai Desert. The troops who fought at Gaza drank water pumped from Egypt through a pipe line extended as the army advanced across the arid waste, and the supplies were carried over a broad-gauge railway, laid for that purpose clear across the 150 miles of the Sinai desert, which has defeated almost everybody that tried to conquer Egypt for centuries."

Here ends, therefore, for the time being at least, and we hope for ever, the ambition of the Turks and the Huns, to cut the Suez Canal, the main artery of Britain's life between the homeland and her Indian Empire.

For this military victory alone, let us devoutly say, "God be praised."

Perhaps this is a fitting point in my address at which to mention a fact which should exalt the soul of every Briton, while yet it steadies him with a sense of added responsibility: the fall of Jerusalem brings the last of the Bible Lands under the protection and guidance of the British Empire.

Egypt, the land of Abraham's sojournings; of Joseph's exile, of his brothers' visit for corn, and reconciliation; of Israel's bondage for hundreds of years; Egypt, the birth-place of the infant Moses, the scene of his young manhood and education, the battlefield of his and God's historic fight with the powers of oppression and cruelty—Egypt—Egypt is British.

Sinai, the wilderness through which Moses led the liberated rabble by the help of God for forty years—is British.

Mesopotamia, where Babylon and Nineveh flourished; the land of the conquerors, Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar; the lands wherein the sons of Jerusalem wept in their captivity.

With the control that it gives over the Judean hills, it places in the hands of the Allies the key to Galilee. It permits the penetration of the country to the north, the acquisition of Mt. Carmel, Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee."

Major General Maurice, director of military operations at the British War Office, views it in the larger light of the Egyptian-Sinai-Palestine campaign as a whole—and says, "The great achievement from a military point of view is not the defeat of the Turks, but the conquest of the Sinai Desert. The troops who fought at Jaza drank water pumped from Egypt through a pipe line extended as the army advanced across the arid waste, and the supplies were carried over a broad-gauge railway, laid for that purpose clear across the 150 miles of the Sinai desert, which has defeated almost everybody that tried to conquer Egypt for centuries." Here, therefore, for the time being at least, and we hope for ever, the ambition of the Turks and the Huns, to cut the Suez Canal, the main artery of Britain's life between the homeland and her Indian Empire. For this military victory, let us devoutly say, "God be praised."

Perhaps this is a fitting point in my address at which to mention a fact which should exalt the soul of every Briton, while yet it steadies him with a sense of added responsibility: the fall of Jerusalem brings the last of the Bible Lands under the protection and guidance of the British Empire. Egypt, the land of Abraham's sojournings, of Joseph's exile, of his brothers' visit for corn and reconciliation, of Israel's bondage for hundreds of years; Egypt, the birth-place of the infant Moses, the scene of his young manhood and education, the battlefield of his and God's historic fight with the powers of oppression and cruelty—Egypt is British.

Sinai, the wilderness through which Moses led the liberated rabble by the help of God for forty years—is British.

Mesopotamia, where Babylon and Nineveh flourished; the land of the conquerors, Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar; the lands wherein the walls of Jerusalem wept in their captivity—

tivity and longed for their return to Zion—Mesopotamia is British. And now Palestine itself.

These are the countries in which the Bible was produced, and everyone of them has made its contribution of thought, feeling, colour, words and actions to the pages of the Old Testament or the New.

I do not know what Britons as a whole prize in the way of honour, but to me this is the most glorious, and at the same time, the most sobering fact in the annals of the British Empire. And not only so, but the distinction is peculiar to Britain in the history of the world. Perhaps it has a cause; I think it has. The people of the British Isles, more than those of any of the older nations, might be properly described as "the people of the Book." It was in an effort to give a worthy rendering of the Scriptures that England produced the chief monument of her own literature. More than any Church, ancient or modern, the established Church of England is the Church of the Book. And the British and Foreign Bible Society provides and sends forth the Scriptures in over four hundred languages to the nations of the earth. And was it not an honoured Queen of Britain who, when asked by an Indian chieftain, the secret of England's greatness, handed him a copy of the New Testament, saying as she did so, "Here is the secret of England's greatness?" To-day, with souls stirred to the depth, we celebrate the coming of the last of Bible lands under the control and direction of the British people. Here is a reward from the hands of God Himself, and at the same time, a trust more sacred than words can tell for the nations and races of the earth.

By way of contrast and warning may I not allude to the action, the ambition and the fate of Germany in this regard. Was it not her ambition to hold sway in Bible lands, Palestine, Mesopotamia and Egypt? All the world knows that it was; to wit, we have the Kaiser's visit to the East; and the Baghdad railway; and the alliance of Turkey; and the scheme for the conquest of Egypt. Yes, it was her ambition to hold sway over these ancient and fertile lands.

Is it not significant, therefore, that this honor has been denied a people who have shredded the Bible during the past fifty years and sapped it of its meaning; who have not only broken its law, but trampled its precepts under foot; who have done violence to and for Him, Who personified Divine love and truth and righteousness substituted in the minds and affections of the German people, men who call Christ a weakling, and preached the doctrine of blood and iron. Is it not significant, I say, that they have missed their goal in Baghdad, in Jerusalem, in Egypt, though they have sacrificed everything for its attainment, though they have said: "Might will carry us to the goal; right may be disregarded for the present"—though they have said, "We will first be enthroned by power, and then right may sit at our royal feet."

The people who have done violence to the Bible and its teaching are not to be entrusted with the guardianship of Bible lands.

Let me now touch upon another aspect of the matter—the effect of the fall of Jerusalem on the prestige of the nations concerned, namely, Turkey, Britain and Germany.

We need not spend much time over its effect on Turkey as a separate power; for our purpose, it and Germany may go together as they do in the war. All the world is now aware that the Empire of the Sultan is but the Empire of the Kaiser, masquerading as an independent ally. All the world knows that the harlot Empire of the Bosphorus has sold herself to her money masters and war lords of Berlin. Great Britain gave notice to Turkey that the day she entered the war on the side of the Central Powers, she would place the seal of fate on her own destiny. She made her choice; at the present hour she is paying the price—even the semblance of nationhood is fading from her dominions. Moreover, the leadership of the Moslem world has been wrested from her keeping. "In June, 1916, Turkish prestige was given a staggering blow by the successful revolt of the Sherief of Mecca, when the Moslem Holy of Holies was torn away from the Caliphate." Thus with Mecca looking to Britain for protection; with Jerusalem gone to Britain; with Baghdad gone, the prestige of Constantinople and of Berlin has suffered another shock through Asia Minor and the whole region between the Bosphorus and the Persian Gulf.

On the other hand, with Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia and India under the inspiration and control of Great Britain, she is the largest and most influential Moslem power in the world. British prestige is mightily enhanced with the Moslem world at her back.

But the wonderful event which we celebrate to-day before the Throne of God with another race and another ancient religion to the side and support of Britain and her Allies. For the Jew is concerned in the fall of Jerusalem. The Hebrew has been called "the race of the wandering foot." They have no homeland. It is two thousand five hundred years since there was a Jewish native land; yet they remain Hebrew, they remain Jewish. There is nothing like this in human records. Their history is a history of dispersions, captivities, and restorations. To-day they are more numerous than ever, more Jewish than ever, more widely scattered among all the other races of the world than ever.

What are they pondering over at this moment, those children of Abraham, spread abroad like the stars of heaven, numerous as the sand on the sea shore for multitude, yet indestructible in their characteristics and in their faith? Why, to-day they are like one awakening from a slumber, one to whom a dream has come true. Their hopes cherished through the centuries bid fair to take shape before their eyes. Jerusalem has been wrested from the Turk; Palestine is free. "Palestine, the land of your fathers' sepulchres, is within your grasp, O Israel. Awake, O Sons of Jacob of every land, the flag of freedom is once more on the battlements of Zion!" But what flag is it? "Look again, ye Jews, dispersed among the nations—it is the flag of Britain, whose statesmen said but the other day, 'His Majesty's Government views with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people.' Thus it comes to pass that the capture of Jerusalem is the winning of the whole Jewish race to the side of Britain. She becomes the hope of this scattered race, the object of Jewish prayers, and the recipient of Jewish support and influence."

But the winning of the Jews has a deeper meaning. Do you not suppose that Hebrew children, Hebrew women, yes, and hard-headed business men among them will look upon, and study, and scrutinize and ponder over that flag which now they love as none other? And will it not dawn upon thousands of these bright Jewish minds, that it is in reality a Jewish flag, that its distinctive symbol is the cross on which the greatest of the Hebrew prophets was put to death two thousand years ago, outside the very city on whose walls and towers it floats to-day in triumph?

Why, behold a wonderful thing, the two mightiest of the old religions are looking to Jesus Christ. Millions, hundreds of millions of Mohammedans crying, "Allah! Allah!" Millions, tens of millions of Jews calling on "Jehovah," find in Britain, the Empire of all its ideas of purity and kindness; the open Bible and the Cross, their friend and trusted companion, guarding their sacred place, acknowledging their rights, respecting their aspirations. Moslems who have trampled upon His cross, and Jews who once despised and rejected Him, whose dying upon it has made it famous and the symbol of love Divine and human, rejoice to-day in its protection and its freedom.

Is it not worth much thought on our part that the Holy City has come into our keeping just at this time? Britain is about to experience on her western front the supreme test of her will, strength and endurance. Jerusalem comes to us therefore as a kind of assurance from God that He is with us still, and at the same time as a definition, as a setting forth of our national and allied goal. But what does Jerusalem stand for, what is her special significance among the cities of the world? I answer: Jerusalem stands for spiritual empire—may, more, for the enduring character of spiritual empire.

This is something which the Jews as a people failed to see; it was clear, however, to the prophets, clearer still to Jesus. Jerusalem is alone in this distinction, in this standing for spiritual empire, and the permanence of it. Call up the names of the great cities of old—Babylon, Nineveh, Rome—they stood, each of them in turn, for world empire. Have they remained, these ancient centres of world dominion? They have not. Babylon and Nineveh are but grass-covered mounds in a land of devastation; Rome has clung to a show of her ancient greatness only through her association with the enduring Kingdom of Christ. Jerusalem was never the centre of world power; for a little time she was the capital city of a little nation, but that passed and the Jews brought destruction upon themselves and their city when they sought world empire like Babylon, Nineveh and Rome. It is Jerusalem's glory to be the spiritual capital of the world, and even after centuries of grinding under the heel of despotism, she is that spiritual capital to-day.

But why do I say that Jerusalem has that spiritual empire at the present time? Because I recall what happened yesterday (Saturday). Yesterday, throughout every land, the Jews were at worship; they read the law of Moses and the prophets, the law that came forth from Sinai and the prophets who spoke in Jerusalem. I say that she is the spiritual mistress of the world because of the spectacle which meets the eye of my imagination at this hour; this Sunday morning, throughout Canada and the Empire, and all the nations, I see men and women at prayer in the buildings which stand for the Christian Church; I see them reading from the law and the prophets and the gospels, all of which came forth from Zion to spiritualize the world. I say Jerusalem stands out for spiritual empire among the cities of all time, on this account also that Jesus taught in her Temple courts, and on the sides of the hills which stand round about her; Jesus was crucified outside her northern Gate; Jesus rose from the dead in the Garden beyond her confines—thus becoming the spiritual hope of all men for this life and that which is to come.

And so I conclude that Jerusalem comes to us standing for spiritual empire in this greatest moment of our own Empire's history to define, to set forth the real purpose of our own existence in world affairs. On the western front the real Armageddon is breaking. Britons at home, Britons abroad, the goal of your Empire is not only to possess the city of Jerusalem but to perpetuate her spiritual empire. To your knees, O sons of freedom, and pray—then to your trenches and fight.

Continuous and monotonous Work - most trying on the Nerves

DOING the same thing, in the same way, day after day and week after week, means destruction to the nerve cells and collapse of the nervous system of the human body.

Whether in the munition factory or in the home, in the store or in the office, it is monotony that kills. And it is because woman's work is more often monotonous than men's that so many women suffer from nervous exhaustion and prostration, nervous headaches, neuralgic pains and general run-down condition of the body.

It is easy for the doctor to say you must have change and rest, but the expense of living is so great at this time that few can afford to follow such advice.

But there is restoration and health awaiting you in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great restorative treatment cures by supplying the elements which Nature uses in the formation of new, rich blood and the creation of new nerve force.

If you are a regular reader of this paper you will find cures reported almost daily, and no matter where you live you will find people who will tell you with enthusiasm of the benefits obtained by using this great food cure.

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, - - - Proprietor
SATURDAY, April 6, 1918.

A Fabian Policy.

The appeal to His Excellency the Governor for recruits to reinforce the Regiment, which appears elsewhere in to-day's issue, is put in strong and convincing language, and its perusal is commended to every man, woman and child in the island. But one feature that it which is passing strange is that it is dated March 30th. If this appeal was prepared on that date, why in the name of common sense was it not read at Wednesday night's meeting. That was the time to have commenced the new, fresh, strong recruiting campaign of which this appeal is the beginning. During the next few weeks the new recruiting movement will be in full swing, and while the Telegram is not in favor of it, nevertheless, this paper is prepared to wait a reasonable time for the production of results. But we have no intention of taking back water. We have emphatically stated our position and shall continue to urge that Selective Conscription be tried out. The difficulties that are said to exist in other countries have no bearing on conditions in Newfoundland; neither can they be advanced as an excuse. All those have been given before or when conscription was first mooted, and no argument that Canada has met with obstacles is of any avail. When the application of some form of conscription is made in Newfoundland, we shall be in a better position to judge. To go further, we state that the Dominion has a National Government, there is too great a measure of party politics and political influence underlying the situation. In this country it is all politics, because our present legislators are politicians first and patriots afterwards. Their policy was from the time that they took over the conduct of recruiting from the Patriotic Association and placed it under the control of the Department of Militia has been one of delay, and apathy, if the spasmodic effort of last fall's recruiting be omitted. Since then nothing has been done, and it is only now, when the Imperial Government have been obliged to put it squarely up to us, that our patched up Government responds to the request, not unfortunately with any vigor, but as is characteristic of them, along the lines of least resistance, by asking for volunteers, instead of making military service compulsory with certain modifications. This Fabian delay may mean the life

Thanks.

We are very grateful to our Journalistic brother of the "Evening Herald" for endorsing the stand taken by this paper on the subject which is of the most paramount importance and which lies near our heart, viz.: the Regiment, and could wish that the learned Editor of the "Herald" would but join us in our advocacy for Selective Conscription. Such a union of forces would produce the desired effect and the identity of the Regiment would be preserved and the honour of Newfoundland saved.

Selective Conscription Feasible.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Permit me to again trespass on your space to make reference to an argument put forward by the Editor of the Herald yesterday against Selective Conscription. He said: "It is not feasible to take young men from fishing boats and replace them with women and children, or to put the latter in the mines or in the lumber woods." This argument is altogether vicious and misleading, and appeals only to the few unpatriotic fishermen there may be in the country. It may also be meant to mislead His Excellency the Governor, who has not yet been long enough in the country to understand the real conditions. If Newfoundland had twenty thousand men by voluntary enlistment, then Selective Conscription may injure the fisheries or other avenues of labor. There are many families in this country where there are three and four sons of military age who have not yet volunteered. One of these could at least be spared and it would in no way interfere with the fishery operations of the others. In such cases the fishing operations conducted by such a family is the cod trap fishery at home, and nowadays such crews have motor skiffs. The number of men to a crew is four, oftentimes three. But there are others beside fishermen and laborers who have not offered and whose proper place is at the front.

If there is anything in the Herald's argument why did it not use its influence a little while ago to prevent a large number of men from going to British Columbia to engage in whaling. The Government must have known about their going. If the men in England, Scotland, Canada and Australia had acted in the way the Herald editor suggests there would not be much need for us to catch fish or do anything else. Considering the seriousness of the present situation the Herald's argument is too trifling to be taken notice of except to attribute it to one who is willing to put party politics before the Empire's need.

In other respects there is a great deal of common sense in what the Herald says, but it is put forward now for the first time. It is long ago the Government should have considered this matter and not left it till the last moment. One can plainly see that they have not done anything the past winter but let matters relating to the Regiment drift. Brought face to face now with a demand for more men on the part of the British authorities and the voice of public opinion at home, they are in a panic. Unless one is much mistaken in the signs of the times they will not be allowed to let matters drift any longer. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Lieut. Murphy's Lecture

At the Casino Theatre on Wednesday Night.
Under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and of His Grace the Archbishop, Lieut. Leo Murphy, the official eye-witness of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, will deliver a lecture at the Casino Theatre on Wednesday evening, in aid of the C. C. C. Band.
The chief charm of the lecture will be the fact that it is all personal experiences from August, 1916, to April, 1917, and it contains human stories of officers and boys of "Ours" while in Belgium and France. There are many anecdotes of Major March and Capt. Rendell; Capt. Donnelly and Capt. Rowell—brave men who have distinguished themselves overseas. Humorous tales of Lieut. Power and Capt. Paterson—real stories of Mike Smith, Corp. Neville, and others will be a feature.
The C. C. C. Band, Prof. Chas. Hutton, Capt. Campbell and Miss Brown will contribute numbers in addition to the lecture, so it is evident that an evening of real entertainment as well as patriotic enthusiasm is promised all who attend.

An Illustrated Lecture on the "Eternal City" will be delivered by the Rev. Joseph Pippy on Monday night, 8th inst., in the Kilbride Hall, followed by a programme of Vocal and Instrumental Selections under management of Miss Theresa Power. Lecture commences at 8 o'clock. Proceeds in aid of New Church Fund.—apr6,11

Mr. Fred Hayward Back to Bowring's.

The numerous friends in the city and outports, of Mr. Fred W. Hayward, will be glad to hear that he is again back with the old reliable firm of Bowring Bros. Ltd. Mr. Hayward who for many years was the trusted cashier of the firm, resigned several years ago to enter the employ of the Reid Nfld. Co. Resigning his position with the latter, he next entered the employ of the Brehm Mfg. Co. Following the untimely passing of Mr. J. S. Mann, a victim of the Florisid disaster, one of the managing directors of the firm, Mr. Eric Bowring was left with the heavy task of solely attending to his firm's requirements, necessitating his continual presence at the office. In this connection Mr. Bowring was ably assisted by a capable and efficient staff. Mr. Hayward goes back as confidential clerk, and in future will be found with Mr. Eric Bowring in the private office of the grand old firm. The Telegram has much pleasure in congratulating Mr. Hayward on his new appointment.

Fox Valley, Sask., April 5th—(Special).—"I tell every one that suffers from kidney trouble to take Dodd's Kidney Pills." These are the words of Mr. Henry Burkhardt, of this place.
"I took Dodd's Kidney Pills for eight months" Mr. Burkhardt continued, "and now I feel as well as ever I did in my life. I also sent one box to a friend who lives in Dakota, and who I knew suffered from his kidneys. "My friend wrote me to get him some more of Dodd's Kidney Pills, as the doctors could do nothing to help him. He said Dodd's Kidney Pills were the best medicine he had ever taken."
"I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills."
In the sparsely settled parts of the West, where doctors are few, Dodd's Kidney Pills have long held an honored place in the family medicine chest. The conditions which are common to newly-settled prairie countries makes kidney trouble one of the most prevalent ills, and the settlers early discovered the splendid results to be obtained from Dodd's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbour about them.

AT THE CATHEDRAL.—Last evening at the Cathedral the Bishop preached from the words, "If Christ be not risen then is our teaching vain and your faith also is vain." His Lordship delivered a very forceful and instructive exposition of his text dwelling upon the importance and the necessity of having faith in the doctrine of the Resurrection.

Strong Attacks

Assaulting Parties Motor Machine Gallantry

10.30 A. M.

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY.
LONDON, To-Day.
Strong attacks by the German infantry between the Somme, and in the vicinity of Buequoy, were delivered today, but met with no success. According to a British official, heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans. This morning the activity of enemy artillery and trench mortars increased north of the Somme, and was followed by a series of strong infantry attacks along all that portion of the front which lies between the Somme and Buequoy. The latest reports show that these attacks met with violent resistance and resulted in very heavy losses to the Germans.

CROSSING THE JORDAN.

BERLIN, To-Day.
German and Turkish troops, north of Jericho, have driven back the British troops which had crossed the Jordan, according to an announcement issued to-day.

AN EPIC ON THE CANADIANS.

OTTAWA, To-Day.
The work of the Canadian motor machine corps during the great German drive is dealt with in the following article by Roland Hill, correspondent with the Canadian forces at the front, which was given out by the British Borden to-day: War Correspondent's Headquarters in France.—The dealing of the great German attack on the Somme, the Canadian machine gun corps did heroic work and have gained special mention from the commanding officer of the British forces, which bore the brunt of the drive. Several times these swift-armed cars found themselves fighting alongside tanks, and more than once they followed the track of the "lions' heavy tanks whose were the battleships of the great fight. Canadian armoured cars were hidden in broken buildings until sections of the men had rushed down the main road, then like juggernauts they drove down the cross roads on the St. Quentin road they delayed the Hun advance for hours, and gave the tired infantry time to dig some reasonable trenches. The Germans brought up light guns to try and catch some of them, but they shifted too quickly to ever become a target. One car only has lost in this sharp engagement; had run off the road into a ditch, and the Germans had come on so fast that it was impossible to get back on the road, and the last the crew remained alive. Another man was firing the remaining gun, a body of Germans who were trying to surround some British infantry, almost similar affair, but without the aid of any cars, happened at Bray. Three cars worked along the road which centred on the village and they topped little parties, with extra men in farm buildings on the outskirts and held back the Hun until such infantry battalions could come and take up the defence.

We just slaughtered them by the thousands, said one Derby blood staining officer, and more than once they broke back into their second wave, when we got all our guns spraying them at the same time, on a section about 100 yards wide. In hot corners where we were fighting, the Hun must have taken a toll of ten ones. They were magnificent; some of them who had been fighting steady for three days refused to be an end, if we would only give them. Our ammunition, for example, brought up plentiful supplies in less than an hour, and many of these fellows kept fighting until they fell deep from sheer exhaustion; by that time the reserves were up in plenty and the line at Bray was saved for a time. Any other good work the cars were bringing in wounded. Each one who returned for ammunition, carried scores of battered men, and a car rescued a badly wounded British Brigadier, the pluckiest officer I ever saw, exclaimed a Canadian sergeant, in charge of the cars. He stayed with a life's post of about a dozen men right to the last, and BERLIN, To-Day. German and Turkish troops, north-east of Jericho, have driven back the British troops which had crossed the Jordan, according to an announcement issued to-day.

AN EPIC ON THE CANADIANS.

OTTAWA, To-Day. The work of the Canadian motor machine corps during the great German drive is dealt with in the following article by Roland Hill, correspondent with the Canadian forces at the front, which was given out by Premier Borden to-day: War Correspondents' Headquarters in France.—In the dealing of the great German attack on the Somme, the Canadian machine gun corps did heroic work and have gained special mention from the commanding officer of the British forces, which bore the brunt of the drive. Several times these swift-armed cars found themselves fighting alongside tanks, and more than once they followed the track of their Allies' heavy tanks which were the battleships of the great fight. Canadian armoured cars were the light cruisers, and they remained hidden in broken buildings until sections of the Germans had rushed down the main road, then like juggernauts they drove down the enemy, sweeping clean paths for their batteries of machine guns. At the cross roads on the St. Quentin road they delayed the Hun advance for hours, and gave the tired infantry time to dig some resemblance of shelter. The Germans brought up light field guns to try and catch some of them, but they shifted too quickly to become a target. One car only was lost in this sharp engagement; it had run off the road into a ditch. The Germans had come on so fast that it was impossible to get back on the road, and the last the officers saw of it was when only two of the crew remained alive. Another man was firing the remaining gun at a body of Germans who were trying to surround some British infantry. It was almost similar affair, but without loss of any cars, happened at Bray. In hot corners where we were fighting, the British must have taken a toll of ten or one. They were mad, hitting step by step for three days refusing to be driven back, but declared they would fight to the end, if it would cost them their lives. Our ammunition, however, brought them up plentiful supplies in less than an hour, and many of those fell away from sheer exhaustion; by that time reserves were up in plenty and the line at Bray was saved for a time anyway. Another good work the cars did was bringing in wounded. Each time they returned for ammunition, they carried scores of battered men. They rescued a badly wounded British Brigadier; the pluckiest officer I ever saw, exclaimed a Canadian sergeant in charge of the cars. He was hit with a rifle post of about four feet down on the right, the last, and when his machine gun crew were laid out, fired the gun himself until badly wounded. He made us leave him with the Field Ambulance, and wouldn't let us take him to the clearing station, "Go back and give them blazes!" were his parting words to us.

QUITE IMPOSSIBLE.

LONDON, To-Day. THE SITUATION IN QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, To-Day. The closing of the shops here two hours earlier than usual, gave rise to rumors of a further outbreak of disorders to-night, but no trouble took place, or was expected. The military authorities announced that the closing was a precautionary measure, applying to civilians and military alike. This afternoon, the eleven men still retained from the sixty-two, arrested last Monday night, appeared in the police court, and eight of them were admitted to bail in one thousand dollars each. These men who had been caught with revolvers in their possession were refused bail.

GERMAN NEWS.

BERLIN, via London, To-Day. The Germans gained successes south of the Somme, and on both sides of Moreuil Thursday, and British and French reserves were repulsed in storming attacks.

NOON.

GOT AWAY WITH BOODLE.

MONTREAL, To-Day. Two heavy armed thugs entered the branch of the Royal Bank of Canada on the outskirts of Cote des Neiges, yesterday afternoon and ordered the teller J. A. Bertrand, to throw up his hands, and while one of them covered him with a revolver, the other entered the cage and secured what cash was easily available. The teller was then struck down with the butt of the revolver. The robbers got away with about five thousand dollars, in bills and forty dollars in silver. They tried to rifle the safe, where a locked box contained considerable money, but were unable to get it. A few minutes after the robbers had decamped, the teller telephoned the police.

CLEMENCEAU'S DENIAL.

PARIS, To-Day. In an official statement, issued by the Government yesterday, Premier Clemenceau's denial of the truth of the assertion of Foreign Minister Czerin, that a conversation concerning peace had been held between Austria and France, was given confirmation. The note follows: Premier Clemenceau upon assuming the duties of President of the Council found that conversations had been entered into, in Switzerland, upon Austria's peace initiative, between Count Revertea, a personal friend of Emperor Charles, and Commandant Armand of the second Bureau of the French General Staff, designated for that purpose by the French Minister at the time. M. Clemenceau did not wish to assume the responsibility of interrupting conferences which had yielded no results, but which might furnish useful sources of information. Commandant Armand thus was allowed to continue his journey into Switzerland upon the request of Count Revertea. Instructions were given M. Armand in the presence of his chief by M. Clemenceau as follows: "Listen and say nothing." Count Revertea becoming convinced that his attempt to bring about a German peace was doomed to failure, in order to fully characterize his mission, gave Commandant Armand a letter written in his own hand, dated February 25th, 1918, the first sentence of which reads: "During the months of August 1917, with a view to obtaining from the French Government a proposition to Austria which might lead to future peace, and be of such a nature as to be susceptible of being endorsed by Austria, and presented to the German Government, conferences have been entered upon."

Count Revertea, being himself the solicitor, acknowledges the following terms. The purpose was to obtain from the French Government propositions of peace under cover of Austria for transmission into Berlin. Such is the fact, established by an authenticated document which Count Czerin has to offer, in the following terms: "Clemenceau, shortly before the beginning of the offensive on the Western front, had asked me whether I was ready to enter upon negotiations and upon what basis."

How Much Time?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The question as to how much of a woman's time is running a home with and with out servants needs to be taken, has brought me a crop of some amusingly delightful letters, some interesting, some inspiring. The one to which I am going to give space today is certainly the latter: "I am sure," writes this letter friend, "if you received letters from all the people who intend to write you, you'd have a nervous breakdown trying to read them. I, for one, have been determining to write you for years and I've at last been pushed right into it by my desire to tell you how absurd is the contention of the woman who says running a house with two servants takes all one's time. "If that were true, that is, if it had to take all of any woman's time, how could I manage? An Eight Room House And A Family of Eight, Yet—

"I have an eight room house. The family consists of my husband, my four-year-old son and five sisters. All the girls work. I have a woman to do weekly cleaning and I do everything else except the dinner dishes; the girls do those each night. "Now these are the things I have time for, in addition: I am president of a Suffrage League; do Red Cross work; maintain a regular reading program; knit sweaters and socks; and have prepared myself, by study, in the last six months, to take my husband's place and liberate him for military service. Feeds Her Family For Eight Dollars Per Month Apiece.

"I have always studied something. Two hours a day I give to my boy's education. I have worked up a set of menus for my family, and feed them for eight dollars a month per person. I may add that I have all my evenings free for my husband, though we frequently read or study together and I allow myself two afternoons a week out.

"I have a sister who has three small children, a twelve room house, keeps two servants, has her house in the most perfect condition and runs beautifully, and she gives only her mornings to it, outside interests getting the rest of her time. Some Women Give All Their Time To Their Looks.

I suppose it all depends on the woman. We all know women who have nothing at all to do but take care of their appearance, and who give all their time to it. I often feel ashamed that I accomplish no more than I do. I know that I am an incorrigible dreamer and give lots of precious time to that, but dreams are important, too, we can only make them materialize or even try to bring them about.

However, to keep to the subject, I most emphatically do not agree with the woman who says she must give all her time to her housekeeping, no matter what the circumstances are. I have discovered that one can always find time to do what one wants to, if one wants it badly enough."

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT myself as well as prescribed it in my practice where a liniment was required and have never failed to get the desired effect. C. A. KING, M.D.

Your Boys and Girls.

There is no better exercise for young girls than skipping, and none, save perhaps dancing, which tends to greater grace of figure and of movement. When, however, childhood is merged into girlhood, the game should be discontinued. Skipping at any time must be properly done and should be suggested to the children who much enjoy excelling in this particular sport.

Two special points should be made, in the first place that the rope is held more or less at right angles to the body and in the second place that the child be particular to come down each time on her toes and with the knees held as loose as possible. She should be taught to stand for a moment with the rope behind her and her

WELL AND ILL.

WILL MASON

When I am well I criticize all sorts and kinds of human guys. I spring a clammy, cynic smile, and say the race is full of guile. And when I hear how Neighbor Reed performed a good and kindly deed, I say, "It's evident I shall shortly be a candidate for coroner or county clerk, and thus he's getting in his work. When'er a man plays that old game, when he assists the hawk and lame, or feeds the poor, or leads the blind, you bet he has an ax to grind." When I am sick the neighbors come with jam that's made of peace or plum; they feed the hens and milk the cow, and set and fan my fevered brow, and stew for me the dainty prune, and feed me nostrums with a spoon. They let their work and business slide, to sit through long hours by my side, to read the blues and dumps away, and shoot me tales by Bertha Clay. All through the long and weary night they keep my aching form in sight, and always, at the proper hour, they hand me pills and bitters sour. And I can see, through aches and smart, how good and kind are human hearts, and I regret the bilious jeers, the cheap and tinsorn cynic sneers.

Milady's Boudoir.

ILLS OF THE HANDS.

Misshapen, red, scrawny, fat, awkward, nervous, discolored, perspiring or chapped hands are ills which those members of the body are heir to, and not only the cause of old looking hands, but are often the means of destroying ones whole charm.

To correct any of these shortcomings one must study the hands and find out where the trouble lies. If they are prematurely aged, neglect is most likely the cause. Some claim that old looking hands are an inheritance but I do not believe this. We inherit certain tendencies rather than any unchangeable physical appearance, and most likely one may have inherited the mother's tendency to neglect her hands.

No doubt the hands have been kept clean and the nails properly attended to, but still, I think that premature aging is the result of neglect. The hands should be properly fed, just as should be the body, so that the tissues worn out by frequent and constant use, may be replenished with the rest of the tissues of the body. Hands suffer much from worry, from want of rest and sleep. You may find it hard to believe this but it is true. While you are travelling on the cars watch the hands of your fellow passengers. You will find most of them foggy, restless, ever moving. These are worrying hands and are usually thin and shapeless, the veins very prominent and the skin flabby. The quiet hand is fair to look upon. The veins are covered with firm flesh and the skin is free from wrinkles. Worry makes the hand old while serenity makes it slim and youthful.

When I am well I criticize all sorts and kinds of human guys. I spring a clammy, cynic smile, and say the race is full of guile. And when I hear how Neighbor Reed performed a good and kindly deed, I say, "It's evident I shall shortly be a candidate for coroner or county clerk, and thus he's getting in his work. When'er a man plays that old game, when he assists the hawk and lame, or feeds the poor, or leads the blind, you bet he has an ax to grind." When I am sick the neighbors come with jam that's made of peace or plum; they feed the hens and milk the cow, and set and fan my fevered brow, and stew for me the dainty prune, and feed me nostrums with a spoon. They let their work and business slide, to sit through long hours by my side, to read the blues and dumps away, and shoot me tales by Bertha Clay. All through the long and weary night they keep my aching form in sight, and always, at the proper hour, they hand me pills and bitters sour. And I can see, through aches and smart, how good and kind are human hearts, and I regret the bilious jeers, the cheap and tinsorn cynic sneers.

Simple Wash Cures Eczema.

A great skin specialist who has compounded for his patients a marvellously effective cure for Eczema, Bad Leg and all other forms of it, has recently given his valuable preparation to the world. It is known as D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, a simple external wash, easy to apply, a reliable home remedy. D. D. D. gives instant relief from skin distress the moment it is applied. It penetrates the pores and kills the germs which are the root of skin disease. Nauseating, stomach drugs are worthless, for the disease is in the skin, not in the blood. Greasy salves are dangerous for they clog the pores and aid the growth of germs. D. D. D. washes out disease, cleanses the pores, then soothes and heals the skin. Test this simple cure; get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Everywhere. Recommended by T. McMurdo & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Connors, Peter O'Mara.

WAR REVIEW.

As a battle which has lasted since Monday, and which probably is still continuing with unexhausted fury, the Germans have been hurling masses of their heavy artillery against the British and French lines from far north of Arras to a short distance north of Montdidier. Probably there has not been more sanguinary fighting since the beginning of the Teutonic offensive on March 21st, than this attack has for its objective the driving of a wedge between the British and French armies, the cutting of the Amiens railway south of Amiens, and the capture of that city; but the power of the attack is shown by the desperate fighting, Allied legions were stood firm over the most of their front. At only two points have they been forced to give ground, and these were on the map to be but minor successes when compared with the sacrifice of lives which they have cost. The British have withdrawn a short distance and the French have given up the village of Castle, west of Moreuil, which has been the storm-centre of German assaults for the past few days. At this point the Germans are about three miles of the Paris-Brussels road. The German officials claim that successes both north and south of the Somme have been won to apparent the Allies have abandoned their flanking tactics, and are prepared to give battle to the Germans. They have fixed lines about five miles east of the city of Amiens, and it is evident they have there dug in bay against the invaders. The contour of the country back of the Allied lines lends itself to defensive tactics. It is quite high, and is a character which compels the Germans to expose themselves to considerable fire from artillery and infantry. It is necessary for the Germans to break through the British and French lines in that region or to flank the Allies by a drive to the north and south of it. The fighting in the north and south of Montdidier is to have for its objects the turning of the Allied positions. That the British and Moreuil sectors are vital to the Allies is shown by the stern resistance maintained there in the past few days. In spite of terrific strains which they have been subjected to, the Allies have struck back at the Germans, and have regained some ground at one of these points and at Grivesnes, a short distance southwest of Montdidier, another point between Hebuterne and another between Montdidier and Noyon, near the village of Orville Sorel. It is in this region that the great Allied counter attack has been expected to be launched. So far as reported, the counter attacks have been made on the front by the enemy, but artillery has been very active as far east as Arras; the line on the north side of the Somme has also been bombarded.

WAR REVIEW.

A battle which has lasted since Thursday, and which probably is still continuing with unexampled fury, the Germans have been hurling massed divisions against the British and French lines from far north of Arras to a short distance north of Mont Meziul. Probably there has not been a more sanguinary battle fought since the beginning of the Teutonic offensive on March 21st, than this which has for its objective the driving of a wedge between the British and French armies, the cutting of the Paris-Amiens railway south of Amiens, and the capture of that city; but in spite of the power of the attack and desperate fighting, Allied legions have stood firm over the most of their front. At only two points have they been forced to give ground, and these on the map to be but minor successes when compared with the sacrifice of lives which they have cost. First to the southwest of Albert, the British have withdrawn a short distance and the French have given up the village of Castle, west of Moreuil, which has been the storm-centre of the German assaults for the past few days. At this point the Germans are within three miles of the Paris-Amiens road. The German official claims that successes both north and south of the Somme have been won. It is apparent the Allies have abandoned their Fabian tactics, and are prepared to give battle to the Germans. They have fixed lines about five miles east of the city of Amiens, and it is evident they have there lined up at bay against the invaders. The contour of the country back of the Allied lines lends itself to defensive tactics. It is quite high, and also of a character which compels the attackers to expose themselves to concentrations of fire from artillery and infantry. It is necessary for the Germans to break through the British and French lines in that region or to attempt an attack by a drive to the north and south of it. The fighting near Albert and north of Mont Meziul seems to have for its objects the turning of the Allied positions. That the Albert and Moreuil sectors are vital to the Allies is shown by the stern resistance maintained there in the past few days. In spite of terrific strains which they have been subjected to, the Allies have struck back at the Germans, and have regained some ground at one of these points and near Grivesnes, a short distance northwest of Mont Didier, another near Hebuterne and another between Mont Didier and Noyon, near the village of Orville Sorel. It is in this latter region that the great Allied counter attack has been expected to be launched. So far as reported no infantry attacks have been made on this front by the enemy, but artillery has been very active as far east as Noyon; the line on the north side of the salient has also been bombarded severely.

SUCCESSFUL BRITISH RAID.

LONDON, April 5. On the Somme front our troops have had a successful attack in the neighbourhood of Hebuterne. They took some 500 prisoners and a number of machine guns. South of the Somme there were no further attacks made on the British. It is confirmed that the fighting yesterday on this front was of the most severe and persistent nature, the enemy making repeated assaults on our positions.

GERMAN WAVE BROKEN.

LONDON, April 5. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Telegraphing from French headquarters to-night Reuter's correspondent says, General Foch addressing the Anglo-French correspondents, said, all goes well. The boche, to call him by his usual name, has been completely stopped. His advance has been arrested since March 30th. Turning to a map on which the successive lines of the German advance had been daily marked since the beginning of the battle, General Foch pointed out that the lines of progress shown here the successive dates of March 27, 28 and 29 after the last date no more progress is shown, because the German advance was then held. General Foch continued, we are now at April 4. It is therefore clear that the enemy rush is dammed, the wave has expired on the shore evidently because it broke up on an obstacle. What the result of our success will be cannot be said, the future will show.

ATTACK IN DENSE WAVES.

LONDON, April 5. After a heavy bombardment of our lines from a great concentration of his mobile artillery, the enemy infantry attacked our position about 7 o'clock yesterday a.m., says a Reuter despatch from the British headquarters in France. The usual principle of attacking in dense waves was followed by the Germans. The assault was over a wide front and appears to have had for its object a converging movement on the town of Carbie. Along the greater part of the front the enemy was held and lost heavily through machine gun and rifle fire, but in the neighbourhood of Hamel, a little salient in our line was straightened out under heavy pressure by the enemy. The first counter attack delivered by the British troops was not in sufficient weight to restore our positions.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, April 5. (Official via London.)—Ninety thousand prisoners and more than 1,300 guns have been captured by the Germans in their offensive on the west front up to the present, says the German official statement issued to-day.

CUT DOWN LIKE WHEAT.

PARIS, April 5. The accounts of carnage in the German ranks which has been wrought by the fire of the Allies, as given in the official communications, are more than confirmed by stories of the wounded in French hospitals. We cut down the Germans as a harvester cuts down wheat, said a wounded lieutenant from Lassigny. We went on cutting them down until we emptied our cartridge boxes. Then our Dra-goons on their mounts came right to the firing line and brought up more cartridges.

AN IDEA OF GERMAN LOSSES.

LONDON, April 5. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Telegraphing from British headquarters in France this evening Reuter's correspondent says, fuller details reveal that the enemy thrust between the Somme and the Avre was a formidable effort. It aimed at getting astride the Paris-Amiens railway and developing the thrust against Amiens. Thanks to the stubbornness of the resistance the enemy success was limited to the creation of a salient on a front of seven thousand yards to an extreme depth of two thousand yards. There is reason to believe that the enemy thrust in fourteen divisions of the fresh troops. The fifth German division, which bore a large share of the offensive and was withdrawn to rest and rest, was again fighting. It is estimated that practically a hundred German divisions have been used in the present fighting. Although the enemy yesterday concentrated all available artillery, the bombardment was not relatively heavy, and consequently he relied chiefly on preparing the state of the roads, due to our ceaseless shelling, as causing delays in the getting up of their heavy batteries and adequate munitions. Yesterday rifles and machine guns played the principal part in defence. The Germans came on in dense waves and suffered heavily. The enemy wastage will prove a dominant factor in deciding the present struggle, hence the following details are noteworthy. A prisoner of the 126th infantry regiment stated the average company strength in three battalions of his regiment was forty of all ranks when he was captured. A prisoner of the 64th infantry reserve regiment said that only eight men of his battalion reached Bapaume on March 25. When reinforcements arrived it was composed of men all over 85 years of age, but when the battalion was reorganized it remained so weak that it consisted on April 4th of only two companies, totalling one hundred and twenty of all ranks. The second battalion of the 77th infantry reserve regiment was a thousand strong at the beginning of the offensive and reached Bapaume only eighty strong, and during our attack of March 28 between fifty and sixty were killed.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 5. (Official.)—Between the Luce River and the Somme heavy fighting continued yesterday during the afternoon and evening till a late hour. The enemy employed strong forces and delivered repeated assaults on our positions. These attacks were beaten off with loss to the enemy, but our troops were pushed back a short distance to positions east of Villers Bretonneux, about nine miles from Amiens, which they now maintain. North of the Somme the enemy's artillery has been active during the night in the neighbourhood of Bucquoy and in the Scarpe Valley. Hostile concentration early this morning in the neighbourhood of Albert were engaged by our artillery.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 5. (Official.)—Since dawn this morning the Germans have delivered heavy attacks north and south of Dernancourt, southwest of Albert, and in the region of Moyenneville. At Dernancourt and southwest of Albert they succeeded in getting a footing in our defence. The situation at Albert was restored by a counter-attack. In the region of Moenil and Beaumont Hamel our line has been heavily shelled and some infantry fighting has taken place near Meenil, without advantage to the enemy. Enemy attacks on Moyenneville were repulsed. An attack carried out by our troops southeast of Gommecourt resulted in the capture of 120 prisoners. On the British front south of the Somme the situation has been quiet.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, April 5. (Official.)—Along the mountainous portions of the front the enemy carried out a persistent harassing fire against our lines. On the Asiago plateau we dispersed enemy parties on the west slopes of Mont Ostler, and our artillery engaged marching troops and transport movements in the rear of the lines from Sugana to Consigliano. Our patrols carried out reconnaissance work, capturing a few prisoners in the Larsa valley. We also put to flight the German of an outpost, and repulsed by rifle fire hostile patrols. In the Finer area along the Piave river the activity of the opposing armies reached remarkable intensity at intervals. The fire of our batteries caused a conflagration in the enemy positions and destroyed gangways built by the enemy opposite the Piave. British aviators brought down three enemy machines above Clemon, and a fourth was compelled to land near Strigano.

ANOTHER CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

GENEVA, April 5. Reports which find wide credence

LOOKING FOR NAVAL BATTLE.

LONDON, April 5. There is a growing feeling among naval men that the German high seas fleet will come out for action should military developments on the Western front in the near future turn further in the Germans favor. Nothing could better please the British fleet than this long-awaited occasion. The opinion was expressed in authoritative quarters that it probably is true that some of Germany's capital ships were in the fleet which recently was reported cruising off the Dutch coast, but the Germans were not then looking for trouble.

CUNARD GONE.

NEW YORK, April 5. The Cunard liner steamship Valeria, a vessel of 5,865 tons gross register, has been sunk in the Irish Sea, according to word received here by insurance interests. The Valeria left here March 4th with cargo for a British port. At the office of the Cunard line it was said instructions had been received recently that reports of the loss of steamers must not be confirmed or denied.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, April 5. The Germans this morning attacked the British forces on a wide front from Dernancourt, a few miles south of Albert, to Moyenneville, north of the Somme, according to a statement published by the Evening Standard. The chief points of attack, the newspaper says, were Dernancourt, Menin, Beaumont Hamel, Gregory and Moyenneville. The Germans were repulsed with heavy losses except at Dernancourt, where they made a slight gain. There has been no attack south of the Somme so far to-day.

'Florizel' Inquiry.
(Friday's Proceedings.)
Mr. McNelly wished to appear on behalf of N. W. Chown and Sarah McNell, in regard to property matters while not wishing to interfere with the regular course of the inquiry or necessitate the recall of witnesses. Mr. Blackwood pointed out that if relatives of the victims wished to be represented at the inquiry, one solicitor would have to be selected by them or one appointed by the Board, otherwise the inquiry would be seriously inconvenienced. Representation can only be granted on approval of the Attorney General. Mr. Dunfield stated the Crown favored all lawful investigation as to effects of passengers but at the same time it is undesirable that the captain and others of the ship should be delayed and the inquiry prolonged. He thought a subsidiary inquiry should deal with the matter of effects, condition of bodies, etc.
Mr. McNelly wished to obtain statements as to the first handling of bodies and of effects, the condition of the bodies and undertaking arrangements. Mr. Dunfield pointed out that this should have no bearing on the inquiry as to the loss of the ship. Capt. McDermott considered the matter one for the police. Mr. Gibbs objected to inquiry of this character as it tended to restrain the liberty of action of the ship's officers. Mr. Dunfield felt that there could be only one prosecution and that by the Crown. But matters as to baggage would be considered. He will consult the Attorney General further in the matter. Mr. McNelly can become a party to the enquiry only on approval of the Attorney General.

Phillip Jackman, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I am 32 years of age. I belong to Renewa. I was 3rd officer on the Florizel on her last voyage. I have a second mate's certificate. I have been on her since October. I have been in the Red Cross boats for eight years. I was on the Florizel before. I have been going to sea since I was 16. I have fished out of Renewa. I was on watch from 7.30 to 12 on the night I sailed. The captain was on the bridge pretty near all the time. The weather was fine when we left port. The wind was a nice fresh breeze, about S.W. in the bay and when we got to the Cape it was about south. There was not much swell. The swell was from the south. There was some sish not even slob. There was no ice till we got about a half mile outside the Narrows. It was not more than 3 inches thick. It was the same at midnight. You would not think there was anything in it. I did not get the course till I got to the Cape. The first course I got was S.W. by S.; Cape Spear bore N.W. then. I took charge at 5.46 when Cape Spear was abeam. I judged her speed about 8 knots. We did not have a log out, we just judged her speed at the time. After passing the Motion I thought she was sagging in but when I got further out I was sure she was not. I told the man at the wheel not to let her get any further to the westward. We passed Motion Head at 9.30. At 9.45 Motion Head was about 3 miles abeam. From the Cape to the Motion she was going about 8 knots as usual. The weather was fair all through my watch, about 10.30 it was snowing. I saw the last land some place near Bay Bulls. She was not on the four-point bearing when the thick snow came off from Bay Bulls light. We remained in sight of land till 10.20. Bay Bulls light then bore about W. by S. The light was about 3 points on the bow when we lost sight of it. About midnight the wind veered a little to the S.E. There was no alteration in the speed from 8 to 12. There was no trouble in the engine room. We had quite a lot of ashes to move on leaving port. We had the log ready but could not use it on account of ice. We sounded three times during our watch, at 10.30, at 11 and at 11.55. I was in charge of the sounding.
We got 160 fathoms of wire at the first sounding. I always give the tube to the Captain. We were not in sight of land then. On the first sounding we got sand. The second sounding we got 169 fathoms of wire. The Captain said we are all right here we are on the ordinary course. On the 2nd sounding we also got a sandy bottom.
The third sounding we got 170 fathoms and a rock and sandy bottom. The depth of water is usually about half the wire run out. The Captain always made it a rule to take soundings. If you are trying to make the land you sound oftener. When I was leaving the bridge I heard the captain say change the course to S.S.W. I heard the second tap to the S.W., telling the man at the wheel to keep her steady after she had been brought to S.S.W. Molloy and Gover were the quartermasters in my watch. I am not sure if it was Green or Bally came on watch at 12 o'clock.

My next watch was at 8 o'clock in the morning.
I got out of my bunk at 4.40 and sat down on my settee to study. I often do that.
The light was out of sight when the Captain came on the bridge at 10.30. He gave me a tube and told me to take a sounding. He said we cannot be too careful. I was sitting in my room at 4.50 when she struck. The butcher came to my door and asked me if it was ice. I said no, it is rocks now. I ran to the bridge. The Captain was saying about getting the boats out. It was madness to start about. We cut the cover off one and it was washed away. I went to go aft to my room and I saw a lot of passengers in the saloon and on the smoking room deck. Mr. Munn said it was you Jackman. He had no body with him. He asked me what did I think of. I said it is pretty bad. I thought it was very hard. Mr. Munn had no boots on. I offered him my boots, he said he did not want mine, go and get a pair for me. I asked him to go forward. He said no get me a pair of boots. When I went to go to the Captain I saw a crowd on the bridge. The Captain was standing on the lee side of his room with another crowd. Then a sea came and took the bridge and all on it and me to. I came to myself sometime after I don't know how long. I then got to the top of the fidley and later got to the Marconi room. I was talking to other passengers on the bridge and smoking room deck. The lady Mr. Munn was talking to looked young, she was about 20. He mentioned he lost his little daughter. Mr. Munn had a kind of a raglan on. Most of the second class passengers were dressed. There was quite a good many passengers washed off the smoking room when I left to go forward. There was no chance of doing anything that morning. I was washed off my legs several times. The rescuers did everything they could.

Soldiers, Take Notice!
At the Recruiting meeting held on Wednesday night, Dr. Lloyd stated that if we, the people who were at the meeting, were prepared to find out if the people of Newfoundland were ready for selective conscription, and that we could convince him that the outports were, also he would back us up.
We want strong men, men who are not afraid, men with backbone. Where are we going to get them? The answer is obvious—THE SOLDIERS. Have you thought about it, what are YOU going to do?
Therefore, I ask, are the SOLDIERS of NEWFOUNDLAND ready to take off their coats again, and fight as they have never fought before? This time for the very existence of the NEWFOUNDLAND REGIMENT and our PALS OVER THERE.
I have some suggestions; you have yours, then let us get together, let us co-operate, let us do things. If you approve, let us hold a SOLDIERS' meeting that will bring forth results. NEWFOUNDLAND has become stagnant and the stay-at-homes are too busy making money to show any interest in the REGIMENT.
Mr. Bennett stated in his speech that owing to the Florizel disaster recruiting meetings were not held earlier in the year. Our answer is, that it is a good thing British Tommies and the Canadian boys are prepared to do double duty while our Regiment is waiting for reinforcements, which will never come under the present system of recruiting.
Men, we are not going to let the REGIMENT go down. Now is the time to act and act quickly. We can arrange a meeting next week, but we all have to be of one mind. Let me know. The boys are calling COME OVER AND HELP.
HAROLD MITCHELL.

An Appeal
I am addressing this Appeal to all the people of Newfoundland, but especially to those of the Outports.
Your Government have decided to make another special attempt to obtain further recruits for the duties forced upon us by the War. I am anxious to explain to you in simple and strong words why those duties are yours.
In your sea-girl home you have, I know, your own dangers and anxieties to face. As I write this your mind is still full of the appalling disaster to the Florizel. But War you do not realise; you are beyond the sound of the guns which, in the South East corner of England, I have heard day after day breaking in upon the beauty and calmness of the summer air.
That awe-inspiring rumble of the guns which I ask you to imagine—that lurid light on the horizon which I ask you to picture are the signs of a terrible struggle for Right—a mighty effort to save from ruin, not only France, but every bit of free soil in the world, including this island of which you are so proud. The awful struggle seems to be approaching its climax now and your close kinsmen are in the middle of it.
Some may ask, What is the danger? and it is my purpose to endeavour to make it clear to you.
By some permission of Divine Providence, which we do not understand, a nation of criminals is now attacking all that is just and true in the whole world. Germany has set herself deliberately to violate every law of Right and every principle of Humanity.
Never before in History has a War been planned like this. Hitherto all wars have had some sort of pretext of right or impulse of passion. It has been reserved to the German military party to plot wilfully and wantonly a great crime against the peace of mankind.
And the hypocrisy with which Germany supports the crime makes it still more abominable. As Judas treated the Christ, Germany is treating Civilization. Under appeals to God, Germany masks the utmost malignities of the devil. The German nation to-day knows no Law except that of the pagan, the liar, the ravisher, the murderer. They are a curse let loose on the Earth. And the task demanded of all of us is to fight and conquer this curse just as in our moral life we are bound to fight and conquer Sin. The Cause is a far broader and holier Cause than that which impelled the Crusaders against the Saracens.
We may thank God that the greater nations of the World have realised the justice of the Cause; and I believe that every man in Newfoundland will one day be thankful that he was at least asked to face this question—"Is it not my higher duty to go out and save humanity from destruction?"
Remember that your wives, your children, your cottages, your boats, are in positive danger if the German breaks through France. As he is treating the foolish Russians, so he will treat every nation whom he touches—America, Canada, Newfoundland, are to him mere objectives for his greedy brutality. He is entirely evil, he has no sense of right and no feelings of Mercy.
This mass of incarnate selfishness is held back by the strong arm of the Allies in France. Will any man of British race decline to do all he can to defeat and crush it?
At this moment the need is specially great, for the Germans are now desperate. They begin to realise the truth of that dread decree "He that takes the sword, shall perish with the sword." At no horror will they hesitate if they can but escape the punishment that is their due.
Now on every man and woman among us lies the duty to bear a hand in administering that punishment a duty not only to ourselves but to posterity. If age or health prevent some of us from going they do not prevent us from following the greatest example ever set to mankind and making the sacrifice of that which is dearest to our hearts.
You young men I ask to listen carefully to the appeals which will once more be made to you in the next few weeks. Believe me that the voluntary act of a man, impelled by the high sense of duty, is far nobler than the mere obedience to the provisions of a public enactment.
One special word I say to women. Try to realise the sufferings of women and children wherever the Germans come: think of the little children starved in Belgium and slaughtered in cold blood in Armenia. Let your men folk stand out and protect you, for in helping to defeat the Germans they are protecting the honour and safety of all their dear ones at home.

THE WAR.
The past week has witnessed the phase of the great German offensive. More or less successful at present, not so much because the Allies by surprise as through their weight, it was held up by the effect by the heroism and lion of the foremost defenders their efficiency and resource which opposed an absolutely impenetrable barrier to a further advance. The messages have sufficed to show how far the utmost achievement enemy felt short of the mark at Amiens at the very least, had fallen long ago; whereas the condition precedent, is a British hands.
At the resumption on Thursday offensive, the German "confession" that they are committed to the course of adventure on which they had a fortnight ago. There will be attack of any importance on any part of the line, at least not by any. She has brought up her guns, allowing the Allies absolute priceless advantages by the device which makes no mistake at the situation to-day, at the same huge and intense character. But the Allies' line will not little this time. Indeed, their appears plainly now to be a defensive until the enemy has himself in repeated and fruitless attacks; then, at the proper moment we may look for a counter-attack which will make no mistake result. The situation to-day, at least, is one which should cause giving in our hearts. If the want encouragement, they have read Count Czermin's speech, which is hypocrisy and men's gathering fear is easily dispersed. The moment chosen for this announcement more distinctly anything else the consciousness Central Powers that their great has already failed.
