For Love of a Woman;

OR,
New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER XII.
TO WED AN ACTRESS.

The ring was nowhere to be seen! Full of pain and remorse, Lord Cecil was obliged to admit to himself that it was gone beyond recovery; he might search for a week, a month, and not find it, for it might have dropped off his finger and fallen at any spot between the tree and the brook.

"My darling's ring!" he murmured aloud, so that the two listeners could hear him where they stood concealed. "My darling's ring! I would give all the Stoyles jewels to get it back."

Then he mounted slowly, and with many a backward glance, as if he hoped that even at the last moment he might get a glimpse of it shining amongst the grass, he rode on.

Then the thought of his happiness rose as a tide and swept away his distress; he had lost the ring, but Doris—beautiful, sweet Doris—was still his! It seemed too wonderful too good to be true, and he recalled every word she had spoken, every glance of her lovely eyes, that he might impress them on his memory.

The air seemed full of her; the birds seemed to sing her name, "Doris, Doris, Marlowe;" all the earth, clad in its bright spring colours, was smiling a reflection of the delicious joy that burnt like a flame in his heart.

She was so beautiful. He tried to think of some of the girls he had known, that he might compare them with her; but they all seemed infatigable and colourless beside the intense then; but I am simply a useless, worthless being, who happens, unfortunately, to be the next-of-kin to the Marquis of Stoyles!"

And the Worst is Yet to Come

What should he do if the marquis turned him adrift? His allowance would cease; his creditors would become pressing; he would be ruined; and he would have to wait until the marquis died before he could make Doris his wife.

The thought was gall and wormwood. Much as he disliked his uncle, Cecil Neville was not the man to wish for his death. The marquis might live forever, if only Cecil could marry his darling.

"If he only had a heart in his bosom instead of a flint, and could see her!" he thought, as he rode on; "or if I were only a barrister or an artist or anything that earns money enough to make my darling my wife!"

He was in no hurry to reach the Towers. It was far pleasanter to be alone, to think over his happiness, and he made a wide circuit, bringing Polly into the stable-yard just before the dressing-bell rang.

And, after all his thinking, this was the result; that he must try somehow to win the marquis's consent to the marriage.

He had intended going to the theatre, to feast his eyes and ears upon his beautiful love; but—with a pang—he resolved to dine and spend the evening at the Towers, and after dinner he would tell the marquis. Perhaps the old port would soften the old man's heart. Anyhow, he would tell him.

As he passed through the hall he almost ran against Spenser Churchill, who was coming out of the marquis's apartments.

"Ah, my dear Cecil!" he murmured, with a benevolent smile, "just got back? What a lovely evening! Have you enjoyed the ride? Did you notice the sunset? Quite a Leader! You know those beautiful pictures: Leader paints, all crimson and mauve?"

Lord Cecil nodded and strode up the stairs to his rooms.

When he came down into the drawing-room Lady Grace was seated at the piano, playing softly, and she glanced up at him with a smile.

"What have you been doing with yourself all day, Lord Neville?" she asked.

"Oh, I've just been loafing about," he said, carelessly; "and you?"

"I am ashamed to say that I haven't been outside the grounds," she replied. "Mr. Churchill and I have been botanising in the gardens. I told him that we really ought to do something in the way of exploring the neighbourhood, but I could not induce him to go outside the gates. Are you going to the theatre to-night?" she asked, innocently.

He started and bent over the music. "Not to-night," he said.

"I didn't know," she said. "I myself should like to go and see that girl play Juliet again. It was wonderful."

"Yes," he said in his curt way.

"Yes, she played it so remarkably well. But I'm afraid a second night would spoil the impression, wouldn't it?"

"I daresay," he said.

Then the bell rang, and he gave her his arm and took her in to dinner.

All through the elaborate meal she seemed in the best and brightest of spirits, and her sallies of well-bred merriment caused a smile even to the face of the marquis.

Lord Cecil noticed that he was less bitter than usual, and that he refrained from making the sneering and contemptuous remarks with which he usually adorned the conversation.

Spenser Churchill, too, appeared in his most benevolent and amiable mood, and grew quite pathetic as he talked of his pet charity for distressed chimney-sweepers.

The dessert came, and then Lady Grace took up her fan and left the room; and Spenser Churchill, after a single glass of claret, rose and saying, "Don't let me disturb you two. I am going to ask Lady Grace for some music," glided out of the room.

The moment had arrived for Lord Cecil's announcement, and as he filled his glass his face grew set and grave.

The marquis instead of rising, seemed to linger over his wine, and leaned back in his chair with a thoughtful air. Once he glanced at Lord Cecil curiously.

"Have you heard the news from Ireland, Cecil?" he said.

Lord Cecil started, and set down his glass.

"No, sir. I have not seen the papers. I was not alluding to the papers."

said the marquis, with a trace of his cold sneer. "I rarely read them. There is plenty of fiction in the library. But I have heard from my agent in Connemara. The country is very unsettled."

"Yes?" said Lord Cecil, absently. He had his own ideas about Ireland, and they would probably have much astonished the marquis, who was a Tory of the old and thorough-going sort. But Lord Cecil was not thinking of Ireland, but of Doris Marlowe.

"Imagine you know that I—I ought say we—have a great deal of property there?"

Lord Cecil nodded.

"I suppose so, sir."

"Yes," said the marquis, glancing at him from the corners of his cold, keen face. "You don't take much interest in the matter—at present. But you will be marquis very soon, and then—" he laughed. "I don't envy you your Irish property."

"I am in no hurry to possess it, sir," said Lord Cecil.

"I daresay not."

"But I think the people have some reason for what they are doing."

"No doubt," assented the marquis, drily. "You view the business from the patriotic side."

"I sympathise with the people," said Lord Neville, firmly.

The marquis poured out a glass of wine and smiled coldly.

"Yes—you are young," he said. "But I'll admit the thing wants looking into, and I'm too old to undertake the inspection."

Lord Neville raised his head. He did not want to talk about Ireland, but about Doris Marlowe. And now, he thought, was the time. The old port stood beside them, the door was closed. Lady Grace and Spenser Churchill were in the drawing-room.

He looked at the cold, haughty face and plunged at his task.

"I'm afraid I can't go into the Irish question to-night, sir," he said.

"Indeed?" said the marquis, leaning back.

"No," said Lord Cecil, quietly; "I have a personal matter I wish to speak to you about."

The marquis eyed him calmly and patiently.

"Personal matters claim first attention. What is it? Is it money?"

"I want your consent to my marriage," said Lord Cecil.

If he had expected the marquis to express surprise by word or gesture he was disappointed.

"Your marriage?" he said, quietly.

"You intend taking my advice, I see. You are wise. Lady Grace is desirable in every way. I'd marry her if I were young."

Lord Cecil coloured, but did not flinch.

"I am sorry, sir," he said.

"That I am not younger?" put in the marquis, with a sardonic smile.

"Well, yes, I'm sorry for that, if youth would make you any happier, my lord," said Lord Neville, and he spoke sincerely. The marquis eyed him keenly. "But it is not Lady Grace, sir. I think her a most beautiful and charming lady, of whom I am quite and entirely unworthy."

"For once I agree with you," was the caustic comment.

Lord Neville inclined his head.

"But there is another reason why I cannot venture to ask Lady Grace to be my wife. I do not love her."

The marquis smiled.

Austria Must Reply Within 15 Days.

A Blow at Sheffield Industries --- New York Marine Strike Reaches Acute Stage---Yorkshire Coal Strike Threatens Disaster---Japan and China Cannot Agree.

FIFTEEN DAYS GRACE.

PARIS, July 21. Austria's delegates to the Peace Conference to-day had on their hands the study of the complete peace conditions of the Allies' second peace conditions which were presented on June 21, having been handed to the Austrian plenipotentiaries yesterday without ceremony. Austria is given fifteen days in which to make reply. New clauses were dealing with reparations, military provisions, and few minor items. Chief provisions of military terms is that Austria must not have a larger army than thirty thousand men voluntarily enlisted, conscription being abolished. As to reparations, the treaty provides that Austria shall accept responsibility with her allies for losses which the Allies powers and their nationals suffered through the war. Because of Austria's limited resources, however, they are only asked to undertake compensation to civilians and their property, requirements being similar to those of the Germany treaty. No specific amount of damages is named. This will be determined by the operations commission set up by the German treaty, special section of which will take the Austrian situation in hand. Notification of the amount is to be given Austria before May 1, 1921, and a period of thirty days is allowed for payments in installments, although a "reasonable sum" must be paid next year and the first four months of nineteen twenty one. Remaining payments are to be taken care of by a bond issue. Provision is made for the restoration by Austria of areas she invaded and replacement in kind of materials taken or destroyed.

A STAGGERING BLOW.

LONDON, July 21. A staggering blow has been struck at the Sheffield industries by the strike in Yorkshire coal fields says a despatch to the Evening News from Sheffield to-day. Thousands of hands were thrown out of work this morning by the stoppage of the engineering works in Sheffield which announced that because of the shortage of coal, will remain closed until the end of the strike. Before the end of the week it is feared that all large works will be shut down, advices add.

STRIKE SITUATION MORE ACUTE.

NEW YORK, July 21. With no sign in sight of a settlement of the marine workers' strike which has crippled coastwise trade, the situation became more acute to-day when the marine engineers definitely broke off negotiations with the U.S. Shipping Board and the American Steamship Association. They aligned themselves with the firemen, oilers, cooks, water tenders and others who have been on strike now for more than two weeks and besides reiterated their determination not to yield. The possibility of the railroads appeared to-day, when an extension of the strike to involve the firemen, oilers and tenders on two tugs of the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad walked out.

THE MINERS' STRIKE.

LONDON, July 21. Speaking on the strike in the Yorkshire Coal Field, Lloyd George said these mines produced 35,000,000 tons of coal a year and were the second largest in the United Kingdom. The Government, he said, had sent messages to the miners' Federation asking what action it is prepared to take and stating that the Government was prepared to withdraw the men it had sent to replace strikers on the mine pumps as soon as the strikers returned to work. Until this happened he added the Government would take every means at its disposal to save the mines and to afford protection to those willing to work. He said the special commissioner sent there, Sir Eric Geddes, would seek to co-ordinate efforts to overcome the serious menace threatening Yorkshire. The action of the miners in striking, the Premier stated, not only jeopardized their own means of livelihood, but threatened disaster to everyone in the district.

A STRIKE VOTE ORDERED.

PITTSBURGH, July 21. The American Federation of Labor national committee for organizing iron and steel workers in session here, has ordered the taking of a strike vote of one hundred and sixty organized employees of United States Corporation and other iron and steel allied industries throughout the country. Taking of vote will start at once and be completed in thirty days.

ATTITUDE OF CHINA AND JAPAN.

NEW YORK, July 21. Members of both Japanese and Chinese delegations to the Peace Conference reached here yesterday on the Aquitania and issued statements regarding the Shantung award. Quo Tai Chi, Chinese technical delegate to the conference said the convention involves a glaring injustice to China. Yami Kawa, accompanied by K. Adachi leader of the Japanese House of Commons, technical advisers for Japan in conference said Japan was entirely satisfied with peace terms and that her delegates cannot understand why China does not take similar attitude.

STRIKE OFF.

CHICAGO, July 21. Two strikes ended Sunday when ten thousand men who went out at stock yards about a week ago voted to go back to work to-day after the city fire department engineers had resumed their position after agreeing to arbitration.

ORDERED TO BED.

WASHINGTON, July 21. President Wilson returned to Washington early to-day from a week-end cruise to Hampton Roads and was immediately ordered to bed by his physician. Read Admiral Grauson who announced that the President was suffering from dysentery, said the President's condition was not serious.

A GRAVE INCIDENT.

WASHINGTON, July 21. Although neither State or Navy Departments had received any further information over Sunday regarding an attack and robbery on July sixth of a boat load of American sailors from U. S. S. Cheyenne in Temesli River near Tampico, Mexico, incident continued to eclipse of all else in official circles. There was no attempt to minimize the gravity of the situation.

REFUSED TO WORK.

LONDON, July 21. As a protest against the increase of six shillings in the price of coal which came into effect to-day following refusal of Miners' Federation to accept compromise on wage and other questions, thousands of miners in the Mansfield district of Nottinghamshire refused to go down into the pits this morning. Men in other districts are expected to do likewise despite recommendation by federations in all districts that all work be continued.

A GOOD TRIP.—The schr. Eme May, Capt. Skinner, arrived from the Grand Banks to St. Jacques yesterday, and hauls for 1,200 qts. of fish. Capt. Skinner reports fish plentiful and weather favorable on the fishing grounds.

This morning, at 1.15, Mr. J. P. Cash reported to the police that there was a fire smouldering in the store of the St. John's Meat Co. adjoining his tobacco store, Sergt. The only goal was scored by Maddigan shortly after the start of the second round. Mr. F. Brien was referee and the players were:
Cadets—Goal, Clare; backs, Duggan, Galgaly; halves, Christopher, Spurrell, Callahan; forwards, Maddigan, Caul, Evans, McGrath and Callahan.

Massatta Talcum was out against all other Talcums, it seems to us in King's Cove. Its combination of absolute purity, impalpable smoothness, soothing and absorbent powers, pleasant perfume, and moderate price. When a lady or a man says, "I don't mind which sort," we always hand out Massatta. There are other favorites among the Lazoli line, of course, Field Violets Talcum has many friends and admirers, so have Japanese Honeysuckle and Sweet Pea, but in our experience Massatta has the most votes. If you have not yet used Massatta, try a tin next time. Price 30c.—all this line are the same price.

Smothered in Cellar.

A man named William Thomas, of Carbonear, was found dead in a cellar in which he smoked caplin, on Friday last. It appears he had a large quantity of caplin undergoing the smoking process in the cellar since the previous night, and went to see how the work was progressing. When he did not return after an hour or so, a friend of his named Parsons, went to the cellar to learn the cause of his absence. As soon as Parsons entered the place he was overcome by the fumes, and fell unconscious. Other parties came to the rescue a few minutes later and managed to get him from the cellar, still unconscious but alive. When Thomas was taken out he was dead.

Withdraws His Candidature.

A telegram received after our last issue had gone to press states that Mr. J. D. Henry has informed political friends by letter that, as July has arrived and Sir Robert Bond's leadership remains bewilderingly doubtful, he has reluctantly decided to withdraw his name as a possible candidate for St. Barbe. He regrets there is not likely to be a revival of the great years of Bond's leadership. In thanking friends at Bonne Bay and other parts of the district for favoring his proposed nomination, he says he will now limit his election activities to working hard for the candidate most willing and able to secure substantial benefits for the shamefully neglected part of the coast from Sally's Cove to Port Saunders, and will explain his full views on strictly local, political and business questions at meetings in different north-west settlements, where interest in the election is daily increasing.—Western Star, July 16.

Garden Party Arrangements.

A joint meeting of the Women's and Men's Committee of the Church of England Orphanage Garden Party was held in Canon Wood Hall last night, when arrangements for the coming affair were discussed at length. Judging by the programme outlined, it will be the most successful ever held in aid of that institution.

Salamanca and the Connaught Rangers.

It was a French officer who said of Salamanca that it was "the battle in which 40,000 men had been beaten in forty minutes." In this, the first decisive victory gained by the Allies in the Peninsula the French were driven headlong, as it were, before a mighty wind, without help or stay; and no British regiment emerged from this great fight with better-won laurels than the Connaught Rangers, who struck the first and decisive blow before which the Frenchmen reeled to defeat. "Do you see those fellows on the hill?" said Wellington to his brother-in-law, Pakenham, on July 22, 1812: "move on with your Division and drive them to the devil!" "I will, my lord," was Pakenham's enthusiastic reply; and a few minutes later his columns, with bent heads and levelled bayonets, were advancing in the face of a fierce gale of bullets and grape-shot. Without a moment's halt, filling up the gaps as fast as they were made, they swept on with the grim inevitableness of a machine of destruction, pouring volley after volley into the enemy. In vain did the French officers try to rally their men and to shame them by their own acts of mad bravery. One colonel, for example, snatched a musket from a grenadier, and running back a few yards, shot Major Murphy, who was leading the Connaught Rangers. A second later he dropped dead, his heart pierced by an Irishman's bullet, while Murphy's horse galloped wildly across the front of the regiment, dragging his dead rider with him. "This sight," we are told, "kindled the Rangers to madness. The line began to sway forward with the fury of the men, and Pakenham, who rode near, shouted to Wallace the brigade commander, to "let them loose." At the word the infuriated Irishmen leaped forward as one man, and, with levelled bayonets, flung themselves against the French columns, crushing them as if struck by a legion of thunderbolts, and driving before them in panic flight all whom they did not slay. In vain the French cavalry charged and stormed at their flanks; for a few terrible moments horsemen and footmen were mingled in a maelstrom of carnage, the cavalry were hurled back, and continuing their triumphant charge, the Connaughts smote their way through the second line of the enemy. Not content with such an amazing feat of prowess, when the British cavalry swept down on the shattered Frenchmen in a furious charge, Capt. MacKie of the Rangers flung himself into the turmoil and rapture of this man's ride, from which he returned half an hour later, covered with dust and blood, triumphantly waving the hilt of his broken sword.

Hung Hats on Kitchener's Peg.

"Hang your hat on Kitchener's peg" was the word that went down the line when a group of United States fighting men passed through the peer's lobby in the House of Lords, London. And every American took off his hat and hung it for a second on the peg that bore the name of Lord Kitchener. It was a breach of regulations, but a showing of regard for the dead field marshal, that the British appreciated.

Beautiful Postage Stamps.

Those who collect artistic postage stamps cannot afford to miss the new issue of the Dominion or Newfoundland. These are the most beautiful yet issued by that country with the exception of the old time seal and codfish stamps which were so highly prized by collectors about fifteen years ago. The present issue shows a picture of a caribou, the dominion's emblem, with the legend "the trail of the caribou." The stamps were issued to commemorate the extraordinary part which Newfoundland has played in the war. Her soldiers have fought in Gallipoli, Egypt, Flanders and have won the reputation of being the finest body of troops under the British flag. Their deeds of heroism were such that they called forth the praise of the highest commanders. The present issue will make a very valuable addition to a philatelist's collection.—Charleston American.

Lenine as Anti-Christ.

The Soviet Government in Russia is combatting a religious movement mystic in character, which has spread through the provinces of Moscow, Novgorod and Vladimir. One of the features of the movement, which is said to be strong among the peasants, according to advices received in Paris, is that Premier Lenine is called the Anti-Christ foretold in the Scriptures. The Bolsheviks, it is said, are opposing the movement by means of an active propaganda.

COMMITTEE REPORT.

The final report of the Cost of Living Committee is an interesting and instructive document. The Committee, which held forty-eight sessions and examined witnesses relative to a wide range of commodities, including such necessities as meat and meat products, butter, eggs, flour, groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, and fuel, came among others, to the following important conclusions:—

1. That so far as your Committee are able to discern no material reduction in the most of such commodities as above indicated can be expected, except by increasing the volume at a lower cost of production or by lowering the cost of distribution.
2. Your Committee do not presume to say that there are no cases of undue inflation in prices, or of profiteering, but in the main it was their opinion that, having in mind the service which the consuming public demand, the margin between the actual cost of production and what the consumer pays for such commodities is reasonably narrow.

The report of the Committee should have the widest possible circulation, not only because of the sound economic reasons which determined the Committee's conclusions, but because of the equally sane remedy advised for correcting present conditions. The Committee says:—

"Get our men back into productive industry as rapidly as possible. Every war in the past has resulted in greatly increased prices of commodities and the only way in which nations have been able to rehabilitate themselves in the post-war periods has been by intensive application to productive industry. Having said this, your Committee do not feel that they should leave the subject without strongly urging what they consider to be the paramount necessity at the present time, namely: the need of getting our people to see the situation as it is. Canada must get more men into productive activity if our people are going to cope with the conditions now confronting them. Your Committee desire to emphasize the need of united effort in order to restore the waste of the last five years so that Canada may be brought back to normal conditions. In the final analysis the solution of the whole problem rests in a willingness on the part of all the Canadian people to seize and make use of the splendid opportunities before them."—Press Service, C.R.A.

The Chinese Way.

Chinese wag their clenched fists instead of shaking hands.
 A caged singing-bird takes the place of a dog in China.
 A Chinese bride and bridegroom wait upon their guests.
 The needle of a Chinese compass points to the south.
 Photographs of women are very rarely taken in China.
 A Chinese day is divided into twelve parts of two hours each.
 When riding, they hold the bridle in the right hand, the opposite to our custom.
 Paper-making from fibrous matter was first discovered by the Chinese two thousand years ago.
 A teacher in a private school in China is paid at the rate of about one halfpenny a day for each pupil.
 A church organ made of bamboo has been built at Shanghai. The notes are said to be sweeter than those of metallic pipes.
 The oldest firearms were used in China, and the Chinese were fighting with guns at a time when Europeans used bows and arrows.
 Paper money, called "flying money" was first used by the Chinese in 2697 B.C. These banknotes were also called "convenient money," and forgeries were known in these days.
 Whereas we have our hair cut, a Chinaman artificially lengthens his long plait. (The long plait and shaven forehead was imposed on the nation by the Manchu Conqueror three hundred years ago).
 Three separate invitations are usually sent to guests in China. The first is dispatched two days before the banquet, the second on the day itself, as a reminder, and the third about an hour before the sitting down to the table—the way of showing how anxiously the visitors are awaited.
 Advancing years are the glory of Chinese, and it is said to be polite to suppose your Chinese guests to be much older than his or her stated age.
 Actors and bankers are excluded from competitors at literary examinations. Every other man in China can compete, and the successful candidates are often probable mandarins.

NATURE OF ISSUE

Although comparatively new to this territory, coupon notes represent a form of short term financing in very general use and favor in the large financial centres. The public is thereby offered an opportunity to profit by the present high rate for capital, and thus obtain a more favorable interest yield than is usually available on an investment of this high character. On the other hand, the Company can arrange its permanent finances on better terms when normal times return.

AS AN INVESTMENT

In view of the nature and permanency of the Company's business, operating as a Public Utility in a City enjoying rapid though conservative growth, we consider that these Coupon Gold Notes form a most attractive short term investment.

We make this offering subject in all cases to previous sale and change in price. Mail the application form to us or orders may be wired at our expense and Coupon Gold Notes or Registered 7-term Receipts will be delivered free of charge at any Bank or Trust Company.

The foregoing statements and figures are based upon information obtained from reliable sources, and which, while in no way guaranteed, are correct to the best of our knowledge, and furnish the basis upon which we have purchased the above issue.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHO IS THE TRUE DEMOCRAT?

There is a certain woman whom I admire very deeply but whom I sometimes hear criticized as undemocratic and snobbish because she makes a few friends of comparatively few people.

She lives in a small hotel and many of the guests call her standoffish and snobbish and disagreeable because they never reach any intimacy with her.

I call that unjustifiable. And yet it is a rather common attitude. Indeed, I think there was a time in my life when, meeting this woman casually, I would have made similar criticisms.

Economical in Casual Friendships.

But I think now that I would have been wrong. For as I grow older and find out how little time one has to call one's own, I come to realize that one must claim the right to spend it carefully. No one blames the person who is careful about spending money on little things and saves for bigger pleasures. Why, then, should anyone blame the person who prefers to be time-economical in his casual friendships and save for the bigger ones?

One cannot be friends with everyone one meets. One must pick and choose those who interest one the most, appeal the most to one's personality. And one should grant others the same privilege without calling them standoffish or undemocratic.

Why Should He Take Them?

When a man who lived at this hotel started out in his machine on a trip one day, I heard some of the guests saying to each other some such a pity he wouldn't invite some one to go on that trip with him (meaning some of themselves). Well, why should he? None of those people appealed to him. Why should he endure two or three hours of their companionship? Of course, if they had been people who never had a chance to ride in machines, that would have

THE WHEAT FIELD.

I had a little field of wheat, five acres and a third; through winter storms and springtime heat my vigils were absurd. I thought the climate should be run with my small field in view, with just enough of wind and sun, and timely rain and dew. In other fields of great extent the wheat of neighbors waved; I didn't worry worth a cent if they were lost or saved. The only wheat in all the land for which I cared a whoop was that by idle zephyrs fanned, before my humble coop. I trembled when the sky was bright, for fear a drought would come; and clouds would fill me with fright, lest wild tornadoes hum. I kicked if there was too much rain, and jawed the brooding sky; and I would grumble and complain if days were hot and dry. I ragged the wind in heated terms when it came from the west; I dreamed of bugs and army worms and every other pest. My wheat is harvested at last, it lived through rust and blight, survived the current and the blast, and filled my bin all right. And I'd have had as big a crop if I had let things slide, if I had raised no yelping yawn, and had not wept or sighed. I worried o'er that field so much I aged a hundred years, and now I hobble on a crutch, and see how vain were fears, that I'd rroDn.(u medN

TRUE WORTH.

You don't have to be rich to be kind, you needn't be rich to be true, you needn't be rich to be honest in all that you say and you do. If it's friendship you're seeking, go make it! the old world is eager for friends.

It's on hearts that are golden not money that all that's worth having depends.

You don't have to be rich to be worthy, you needn't own silver and gold.

To have men rejoice in your presence, for manhood by money's not sold; And he who is honest and helpful, who lives to the truth that he knows And gives his full measure of service is welcome wherever he goes.

You don't have to be rich to be noble, you needn't be rich to be great. Not always the men who have fortunes can weather the tempests of fate.

If you will be true to your loved ones, your God and the Flag of the Free The sum of your gold doesn't matter. You are all that a rich man can be.

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Road Board Control.

The Advocate recently, attempted to create distrust amongst the electorate, and incidentally to gain some political kudos for itself, by strongly asserting that it was the intention of the Government to take the expenditure of the special grant of five hundred thousand dollars out of the hands of the various District Road Boards, and apportion it out to friends and supporters. The purpose of this cry was obvious. That it was inspired was also obvious. In places where the Road Boards were elected by popular vote, such Boards are the proper and legal controllers of all district monies for Public Services. They are the chosen representatives of the people, to whom the custody of monies for various works must be given, and by whom a correct and detailed statement of expenditure must be made to the Department, as well as placing a copy of the same in some conspicuous public place for the examination of the electors.

When such Boards are elected without restriction of organizations they become the legal centre to which all district grants must be sent. The people's confidence in the honesty and ability to control these grants is shown by the trust placed in the members who are elected; and it is due to such election that every cent of money granted pass through their hands, and no person denies their legitimate right to the control of the grants for the necessary maintenance of public utilities, be these grants regular or special. To do otherwise would be to flout and trample upon the will of the people. Most of the Road Boards elected in November, 1917, were the direct choice of all the people. Others were not, but through certain influences their election was brought about, and it is questionable if in many instances, their election did not contravene the Local Affairs Act.

In proof of this we submit two extracts from instructions to Councils of the Fishermen's

Protective Union, issued in 1917, concerning the election of Road Boards. The first one was promulgated in October of that year, and reads:

"Remember the Road Board elections will come off on Thursday, 15th November. Let every Council set out and elect Union Boards, for if this is not done it will be a blow to elections in the Spring. I want Union Boards elected everywhere to handle monies, as we want everything fixed up—especially wharves—as the Councils wish. It will be easy to elect Union Boards if you hold meetings, and select (Union) men for Boards, and every Union member turns out and votes."

The second order, issued early in November, 1917, copperfastens the above:

"Remember the Road Board elections on the 15th. See that all Councils select a Board and elect the men so selected. We want Union Road Boards entirely—NO OUTSIDERS. We have lots of trouble in carrying out our plans for improvement when we have to deal with non-Union men on Boards. I will consider the Union pretty dead in places where non-Union Boards are elected."

This then is the fair play which non-Unionists might expect to receive did the Union dominate and control affairs. The order of the President was an instruction to boycott men who were not members of the F.P.U., and keep them off Road Boards. No outsiders. There is nothing ambiguous about this, and it can only be supposed that in many places where Union influence was great, only Union members received votes for a position as members of the Board. Thus the spirit of the Act was broken, and the Road Boards so elected were not the free choice of the people.

Padre Lectures.

REV. (CAPT.) T. NANGLE AT CASINO.

Introduced by the Governor, Rev. (Capt.) T. Nangle continued his lecture, the first part of which was delivered some two years ago. "The trail of the Caribou," in the Casino Theatre last evening, when a representative audience had gathered to listen. Selections from the C. C. C. Band, and Solos from Miss Mary Ryan, and Messrs Trappell and Hutton, and an interpretation of Tommy Atkins with the Bugle by Capt. Bulley, preceded the lecture. Taking up the threads from where he had last laid them down, the Padre told the story of the Regiment from April 1917 to Memorial Day, July, 1919 taking two hours to deal with a subject that must have been interesting to everyone of his audience. When the lecturer had finished the Chief Justice, Sir W. Horwood, thanked him for the excellent discourse, and reminded the audience of the part taken by Capt. Nangle himself in the great war. After Hon. John Anderson had spoken, a solo by Miss Mary Ryan, with Prof. Hutton and Mr. P. F. Moore assisting brought the occasion to a conclusion.

AT THE BALSAM.—The following guests have registered at the Balsam Place: S. Guy, Carbonear; Miss Nellie Brown, Curly; J. C. Galtman, Rochester, N.Y.; F. J. Conaughton, Montreal; Geo. Brocklehurst, Carbonear; G. P. Clarke, Montreal.

Newfoundland Henley.

After four years of suspense and doubt when the whole world was plunged into the vortex of the most dreadful and devastating war that history has ever recorded, we are thankful that at last the respite has come. In what more fitting manner, after expressing our gratitude to Almighty God, could we celebrate the event of our delivery from Autocracy and tyranny than by going back to our normal ways of social enjoyment, the most fitting and memorable of which is our Annual Regatta on historic Quidi Vidi Lake. The Regatta is one of the amusements that Newfoundlanders are accustomed to, which is absolutely devoid of sectional or class differences. The day of the Races is the day in which Demos rules. We are all Democrat on that day—the clergy and the lawyer, the doctor and the merchant—the blacksmith and the architect—the fisherman and the laborer, all are alike upon that day. It has been ever memorable as the fete of our social equality. Let us then endeavor to make it worthy of the great epoch in which we live. Every young man in St. John's and outports (and old men too) should throw a whole-souled enthusiasm into this event and make the Regatta of 1919 the banner year in the annals of aquatic sport. The Prince of Wales, our future King, will honor the event by his presence, and this should make every loyal Newfoundland throw all the enthusiasm he is capable of into the event. There are thousands of Newfoundlanders far away from the home of their childhood, many of whom rowed in the Regattas of former years, who are watching with anxious eyes for the Evening Telegram and other papers containing a history of the event. Let us throw into our present effort and revive, if it be only for once, some of the scenes of fifty years ago. True we cannot have the familiar calibogus and the penn'orth of puddin', but the Dancing Stand still remains to us as the accordion and fiddle still remain, and the performers of this generation are equally as agile at tripping the light fantastic as their grand-parents in the days of yore. The female torpedo-boat will have one advantage over her instructors of sixty years ago. She will be relieved of the physical efforts of holding up her skirts in order to display her slender ankle, as the mode of today has relieved her of that tiresome necessity. To be very serious, we as a people, should never permit the Regatta to die out. No matter what may be said to the contrary, we are essentially a maritime people, and it is therefore right and proper that aquatic exercises should appeal to us more so than any other form of amusement. Oxford and Cambridge in England, Harvard and Yale in the United States keep up with magnificent spirit the dignity of their Universities in this particular pastime. It is a sport which appeals to all, the gentle and the simple—the high and the low—the educated and the ignorant. Let us therefore make one supreme effort to make this Regatta Day worthy of the presence of the future King and Emperor of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen.

His Excellency's Tour.

His Excellency the Governor accompanied by Lady Harris, Miss Harris, Captain Hamilton, Private Secretary and Captain Baird, A. D. C. left Placentia on the 14th inst. with a view to visiting the ports on the South Coast on the SS. "Susa" which had been placed at His Excellency's disposal for a few days, prior to her taking up her regular itinerary. The Governor's intention was to visit certain ports on the West side of Placentia Bay, work round to Grand Bank and then take the chief ports to the westward as far as La Poile, returning within the fortnight. This would have been barely possible if favourable weather had prevailed. Unfortunately, however, incidental delays began at the very start, and thick fog afterwards made it practically impossible to proceed. On the 18th the appointment at Burin was kept fairly up to time and the original programme for the reception of the Governor was pretty thoroughly carried out. Here His Excellency heard of the preparations which had been made for the previous day at Marytown and telegraphed that he would endeavour to get there that evening. This was not ever proved impossible and it was not until the morning of the 17th inst. that he was able to make Marytown where he was most cordially received on all sides although all hope of his visit had been given up. Leaving Marytown on the evening of the 17th inst. the steamer again ran into thick fog and towards sunset it was realized that it would be unsafe in such thick weather to make the effort to get round Point May for Grand Bank. The Governor therefore put into Great St. Lawrence for that night hoping he could get back to St. John's by the 18th inst. This hope however was again doomed to disappointment for the weather on Friday was still so thick that it seemed very doubtful whether it would be possible to proceed with any satisfaction. After waiting till the early afternoon to see whether the weather cleared His Excellency came to the conclusion even if he did get round in time to keep the revised appointments at Grand Bank, Belleoram and Hr. Breton, it was doubtful whether he could get back to St. John's within the time to which he was limited by other considerations. He therefore reluctantly abandoned any further attempt and returned to St. John's with the object of being there at the Thanksgiving Service on the 20th inst. instead of at Hr. Breton as he had intended.

Mr. John Kenna, at one time a well known citizen and athlete of this city, has been making good in the United States, as the following item taken from a New York paper testifies:

"John Kenna, who until yesterday was dock superintendent of the Kerr Steamship Company pier at the foot of Fifty-seventh street, was given a testimonial dinner at Stanch's, Coney Island, by his fellow employees in recognition of his promotion to the position of general manager of the stevedore department of the steamship company. The affair was informal.

Today's Messages.

THE PRINCE'S ITINERARY.
LONDON, July 21. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reveries that the following are the details of the Prince of Wales forthcoming visit to Canada. Times and places are excluded, as some of the dates are tentative, and subject to possible alteration. America is not mentioned in the programme, but it does not mean that the United States are not to be visited. There is no doubt certain to be a visit to the Dominion, but the details are not yet settled, and it may be strictly limited. The general plan is a visit to the Maritime provinces, proceeding up at Quebec; an overland trip through most of the Great Lakes system, through the silver mining region and the great grain growing districts, away to the west, and beyond the Rockies to British Columbia, and then back eastward across the Dominion to Montreal. This programme, excluding possible American calls, will occupy the Prince of Wales until October, and according to indications he will be back in London in November. Leaving on August 5th, the Prince crosses the Atlantic to St. John's, Nfld., and from there goes to St. John, N.B. Visits to Halifax, N.S., Charlottetown, P.E.I., and up the St. Lawrence to Quebec follow. The Prince will leave the Dominion at Cobalt, where he will visit the silver mines, and to Timmins, where he will inspect a gold mine.

ULSTER WILL NOT BE FORCED.
LONDON, July 21. The Commons to-night passed the second and third readings of the Peace Treaty, which reached a committee of the whole without amendment. When the third reading was moved, Joseph Devlin, Nationalist, demanded its rejection as a protest against the Premier's reference to Ireland. Lloyd George replying, ridiculed the question that his attitude toward Ireland had changed, and said that he stood by his position as announced in the general election, and was prepared to carry it into effect. Home Rulers, he added, could have Home Rule for themselves if they wished, but they could not force it on Ulster. The House then rejected Mr. Devlin's motion by a vote of one hundred and sixty three to four, and the bill passed the third reading.

CHEERED THE NURSES.
MELBOURNE, Australia, July 21.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The troops in the Peace procession enthusiastically cheered the Nurses, who were visibly affected when they received the Peace medals. At Sydney the Peace celebration was marked by unprecedented enthusiasm. Buildings, warships and harbor craft were gaily illuminated.

AFGHANS STILL ACTIVE.

ADDRESS BY MR. JONES.
To-morrow we will publish a full report of the luncheon given Mr. Francis R. Jones, F.R.G.S., by the Board of Trade at Wood's Restaurant to-day, and also a summary of the address delivered by that gentleman. So far as we can ascertain, this afternoon, a well attended and representative assemblage met the lecturer whose address was attentively heard and heartily applauded.

Give to the Living.

If we gave unto the living as we lavish on the dead.
Kindly thoughts and gentle phrases, tender words and friendly praises.
Bidding out all imperfections, holding virtues up to light;
If we let no daily token of our love and care unspoken—
Then would life be well worth living in a world all glad and bright.

If we offered to the living, as we heap upon the dead,
Fragrant flowers of affection, blossoms of sweet recollection,
Waiting not till hands are folded on the quiet pulseless breast,
Then the passion of our pleading would not fall on ears unheeding.
Nor our tears fall, unavailing on the weary form at rest.

If we gave unto the living as we lavish on the dead,
All our heart's long hidden treasure, all our love's full, unstinted measure.
Adding, day by day, new jewels to the crown of human bliss,
Then life's burden would weigh lightly, and the sun would shine more brightly.
And not heaven itself were fairer than a world as glad as this.
—Ida Goldsmith Morris in New York Times.

Church of England Educational Campaign.

With the approach of the day set for the opening of the drive and the completion of the work of organization, evidence is being shown on every hand of the enthusiasm, which is being aroused by the Campaign, and put to bed. In spite of the holiday season and inevitable absences from town, the team captains have been so far successful in filling their ranks that the Committee hope to be able to publish the full personnel of the organization to-morrow. No more striking proof could be wanted that the appeal is being met almost before it is made.

The drive proper will be opened by the initial supper in the Methodist College Hall on Thursday night, July 24th. The Commanders-in-chief are confident that at this first assembly of the forces under them, a spirit of zeal and enthusiasm will be engendered which will carry the drive over the top and up to and beyond the ambitious objective set.

A feature of the work that is being done which is most gratifying to those directing it is the co-operation and active assistance in small and large ways which is being freely offered and given by a steadily increasing number of persons who belong to other denominations. Due and, it is hoped, detailed acknowledgment will be made at the proper time and place of this generosity, but general and warm expressions of appreciation have already frequently been made at various committee meetings. While the campaign is of necessity being conducted by members, and under the auspices, of the Church of England, this sympathy from outside shows how widely it is recognized that the appeal is made for no narrow purpose but for the cause of education first and last. Those who work for, those who give to, the fund, do so in the interest of that great cause, than which none better could enlist any man's aid.

Are You a Plodder?—Or a Plugger?

Plugging denotes energy, driving force, determination, and a will to conquer. Plodding is aimless, aimlessness and often hopeless.

A Plugger is a man who pushes ahead—a Plodder is a man who trudges ahead. A Plugger is a man who gets what he wants by going after it. A Plodder is a man who never gets what he wants because he doesn't travel fast enough to catch up to it.

To the Plodder each morning begins another day. To the Plugger each morning begins a new day. See the difference? To the one each day is another eight or nine hours of grinding out work—of performing monotonous duties all filling in time. To the other each day opens a new vista of possibilities—chances to make good—of new ideas to put into practice—of more knowledge to be gained—of new opportunities for self-advancement and self-development.

It's the man of energy—the go-ahead fellow who strikes out and works his way up the hillside, brushing aside the obstacles and clambering over the rocks, that the world delights to honor.—"The Packer," Toronto.

July Joins.

July's stone is the ruby—signifying "true friendship."

Children born in July are, according to ancient astrologists, sulky.

July is the central summer month, yet it has the heaviest rainfall of any month in the year.

July 1st is "Dominion Day" in Canada; July 4th "Independence Day" in America.

July 14th is France's "Independence Day"; it commemorates the burning of the Bastille.

July had originally but 26 days. Julius Caesar, after whom the month is named, increased the number to thirty-one.

An old belief is that if you eat an oyster on St. James's Day, July 25th, you will never want money for the rest of the year!

St. Swifth's Day is on July 15th. "St. Swifth's Day, if thou dost rain, For forty days it will remain; St. Swifth's Day, if thou be fair, For forty days till rain no more."

Three Tragic Queens.

When the Empress Marie of Russia lands in England we shall have in this island three of the saddest queens of history—the Empress Eugenie, whose sorrows have been lightened in these last years by the triumph of France, the Queen Mother of Portugal, and the Empress Marie.

كتاب متنوع للاسنان New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

The New Style Mustache

There may have been some persons who doubted the greatness of Napoleon III, but the fact that millions of men supposedly sane wore grotesque fashions on the Napoleon the Lesser model was evidence that he was some "punkins."

The German male person showed his idolatry of the Kaiser by pointing the ends of his mustache due north.

What the Irish intended when they brought forth those whisker fringes known to fame as Galwas, history does not recount. Neither is there any light shed by the encyclopedia on the "mutton chop" or "side burns" so popular with our British cousins. The ladies always have been a law unto themselves in the matter of hairdressing. They cook, fry, boil, singe and dye what is declared to be their crowning beauty. That is their business and it is not for mere man to ask the reason why.

But what about this Charlie Chaplin mustache of which we see so much these days being sported by young men? Why, if they wish to show reverence to the star of the east and west side of the upper lip and leave only a dab of mustache under the nostrils?

The real devotees at the shrine of the great go the limit in their adoration. The Charlie Chaplin mustache is weak unless its wearer has the Chaplin hat and feet and bears in his right hand a custard pie.—Vancouver Daily Sun.

With running water and screens any home, however distant from close communities, can be comfortable.

Fishing Craft Missing.

Four men belonging to Channel, forming the crew of the small power schooner Willie Roy, left that port on June 24th for a fishing trip around Cape Ray. They are George Currie, Master, his son William, aged 14 years, John Farrell and his son John aged 12 years. Nothing has been heard of either vessel or men since that time, and grave fears are entertained for their safety. Supplies for a lengthy voyage had not been taken, as it is unusual at this time of year for small schooners to go further north than Port au Port, a trip which can be made in a fortnight. The matter has been reported to the Marine and Fisheries Department and enquiries are being instituted at every telegraph station in the hope of getting information.

A wire to Channel this forenoon is without reply up to press hour, but we have hope that nothing serious has occurred to the boat, which is a staunch little craft, well built and found and practically new. Both the master, Currie and his boatmate Farrell are good seamen and have a thorough knowledge of the coast, and it is therefore unlikely that any disaster has overtaken them by striking a sunken. We hope to have news of the safety of the vessel and crew ere long.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

The market for Newfoundland Scotch cured herring remains featureless and the demand dull. Whereas the outlook was considered bright a fortnight ago, the arrival of stocks of winter and spring herring in the market since, and the report that something like 20,000 barrels were yet to be shipped, altered the situation materially. Holders of fancy stocks of Newfoundland herring are not in the least alarmed about the prospects of the coming season. It is not considered as likely that there will be any great supply of herring from Scotland, and the turn of events in the past week (two cargoes of herring were shipped to Norway) is considered a happy augury for the future disposition of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring. It is understood that several New York importers have already quoted Newfoundland herring to Germany and the prospects of this business are considered as good. According to the trade, stocks in the hands of merchants here have been moving only in a hand-to-mouth way, and there are no immediate prospects of an improvement. Some locally held stocks have been sold at low prices during the week, but fancy quality is fairly held still. Indeed some of the largest holders are asking from $18 to $22 per barrel for their goods. Other stocks have been sold all the way from $12 to $16 per barrel. There is no indication when the remainder of the 20,000 barrels held in St. John's will come forward.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, July 12.

Vanity Bags vs. Vest.

A writer in the New York Sun, speaking no doubt largely from experience, delivers himself sagely as follows upon this important subject: The male biped does not shed his waistcoat because he dislikes it of itself. It is a useful thing, handier than a pocket in a shirt. He takes it because of the heat, and not without regret. The waistcoat holds so many things. The upper lefthand pocket was made for pencils and fountain pens and cigars. Since the top of an ear was discarded as a pencil-holder there has been nothing half so good as that pocket. The opposite upper pocket is just the place for the memorandum-book. The watch sleeps alone in one of the lower pockets, across from the home of the man's knife or match-box. The inside pocket of the waistcoat is peculiarly adapted to carrying money. A thief cannot get it without cutting.

When the waistcoat is hung up for the summer its working contents must be put elsewhere. The coat, already overloaded with handkerchiefs, wallets, letters, cigarette-cases, and computation-tickets, is asked to take up what the turf reporters call a staggering impost. The trousers, with their standard burden of money and keys, can make little room for the articles evicted from the waistcoat. So every June the man wonders whether he shall tether his watch to the lap of his coat and let it joggle around in his breast-pocket, or whether he'll try it once more in the waistband-pocket of his trousers and look upon its face only after an exhibition of gymnastics. Shall the fountain pen be attached to the coat pocket or laid away until autumn?

Man suffers for a while. He finds himself without matches when he has a cigar, or without a pen when he has a check-book. His watch spoils the fit of his coat. His memorandum book gets lost in the bottom of his pocket. He is all at sea, and merely because he is not the efficient creature that woman is. She puts all her junk and all her worries in the faithful hand-bag. Fashions change in clothing and in bags, but the mess of small belongings is always carried in the same way. If man would ape woman in this respect he would be more comfortable. He need not carry a silken reticule; a canvas sack would do, with a strap to go over the shoulder. Perhaps some of the fellows who carry brief-cases are secretly taking a leaf from woman's book. Al Smith once said that if you held up a reformer and looked in his brief-case you would find sandwiches in it, not great public documents. A brief-case would hold cigars, pencils, and handkerchiefs. Maybe in time all men will carry these leather cases just as all women carry bags.

Regatta Doings.

Interest in the coming regatta is increasing daily and each evening large numbers assemble at the lakeside to watch the crews at practice. Some of the crews are out both morning and evening and are rapidly getting into form. The Shannanditti was placed in the water yesterday and with three boats out, the work of practice will be greatly facilitated. The Truckmen, Laborers, Juveniles, Amateur and football crews were out last evening, and also the Telegram six, who had their first spin. With the latter competing there will be five crews in the Press race.

Solving the Investment Problem

Some men gamble on prospects; others plunge blindly and trust to luck, while others invest-gate their broker first, and then his proposition. Before investing, there are certain facts to be considered.

First—Are the men behind your company honorable, capable business gentlemen?
Second—Have they a proposition that will stand the acid test of close investigation?
Third—Is there room for Growth besides the Safety of your principal?

When you have satisfied yourself on the above points, it is time to use your JUDGMENT to help you DECIDE and then ACT.

Let us show you a two year investment that nets you 18 per cent. a year WITHOUT risk.

Sea-Lions That Hunted U-Boats.

A REMARKABLE NAVAL EXPERIMENT.

In the summer of 1917 the Admiralty hit on a novel way of hunting submarines. It was simply to employ some sea-lions (Otaria Gillespie) to track them down—the idea being that the sea-lion could be taught to distinguish the noise of the submarine's propeller and to follow in the hope of getting food. A buoy would be attached to the animal, and a trawler would follow the buoy and drop a depth-charge when the lion appeared to have found the submarine. The sea-lion would be released when a U-boat was suspected to be in the vicinity. To do this, two of the animals were purchased, and experiments were first carried out in a lake. Noises were made under water on one side, and the animal, on jumping in, heard the noise and swam towards it, being rewarded when he found it by a feed of fish. The noise was made by an electric buzzer under water. After a large amount of this practice, the animal was able to locate the sound each time. The animals were then taken down to Portsmouth, and practice was carried out with a real submarine. The first experiments were carried out with the submarine in harbour with the buzzer. This was successful. The animal was thrown overboard some distance off, swam to the submarine, and jumped on board for his accustomed feed of fish—which he got. This was done several times to accustom him to the submarine.

The next development was, while still in harbour, to do a few revolutions with the propeller, sounding the buzzer at the same time—this was to accustom the animal to the propeller. This also was successful, although the motors had to be stopped when he was near. A small, light cigar-shaped float painted red was tied round the animal's neck by a long piece of gut. In this manner the animal's whereabouts was ascertained as he towed it along with him on top of the water. A portable cage was then made on the top of a steam-boat, and the animals were taken outside. The same practice was carried out with the buzzer and propellers, only at increased distances.

The animals were fitted with small wire muzzles to prevent them going on a fishing expedition of their own. The practice was then carried out without the buzzer, the submarine using her motors only. After about a week of this, the animal would discover the sound and jump on board. Great difficulty was experienced owing to passing steamers, which the animal would hear and chase after. The final stage of practice was with the submarine diving. This was rather taking a risk with the submarine's propeller. The men in the steam-boat, as soon as the float was observed near the periscope, would signal the fact to the captain of the submarine, who was watching through the periscope. The submarine would then stop motors and come to the surface. On several occasions the animal was on the deck "barking" for food even before the captain could open the conning-tower hatch. This ended the experiments.

The chief objections to this method of hunting submarines were that the animal would swim after any passing noise—such as other ship's propellers—and that the floats were very unsatisfactory. It was impossible to have a bigger float owing to the strain on the animal's neck, and the small float was very difficult to see at a distance. The line, too, was continually breaking; and for the same reasons it was impossible to have a heavier and stronger line. Thin wire was tried, but that was also unsatisfactory. Also, when the weather was warm the animals did not behave so well.

The two animals were Californian sea-lions (Otaria Gillespie), one male and the other female. The male was found to be much more intelligent and teachable than the female. Perhaps the fact that he had been a bit longer in captivity and was a bit older had something to do with it. We "lost" the animals several times, but they always eventually returned home on noises being made under water.—Illustrated London Times.

Mistress of the Air.

(From the Boston Transcript.)
The R-34's safe return to England has safely clinched in England's hands the right to claim the lion's share of the honours thus far established in transatlantic aviation. Working with craft of the type heavier than air, she had already taken first place in this class. Despite the differences of construction which set the seaplane off from the airplane and make the flights of the N. C. 4 and the Vickers-Vimy almost incapable of strict comparison the fact remains that the first great conquest of the Atlantic by air, accomplished by the United States, proceeded at a very slow pace and by numerous small stages, whereas Alcock and Brown in their twin-engine land plane, shot across the ocean in immeasurably the shortest time ever known for a transatlantic voyage, and with a minimum amount of assistance. The R-34 has now made an equally brilliant record in the class of ships lighter than air. Not only has the dirigible R-34 completed the first round trip by air across the Atlantic, with all which that means of stability and endurance, but also on her return journey she has added to the merits of her westward trip a very satisfactory record for speed. The trip to the United States was covered in 103 hours, or only a little faster than the fastest transatlantic liners. Her trip back to England was accomplished in 75 hours, so cutting nearly in half the best time ever made by the fastest steamships. The most significant thing, however, about the voyaging of the R-34 has not been the ship's speed, but rather its apparent certainty in navigation. At will, as it seemed she sailed across the Atlantic; and at will she has returned. Even the depletion of her fuel supply on the westward trip did not give her more than passing embarrassment. In any emergency of wind or weather she was still able to put on extra speed, and so to fly beyond or above special sources of danger. Indeed, this manoeuvring power has almost seemed, at times, to make the airship more safe than the steamer, limited as the water craft is to the necessity of taking weather conditions just as they come. One knows of course, that if ballooning across the Atlantic is to be taken up as a regular thing, circumstances must sometimes arise which will put the dirigible at a grave disadvantage, but for the present the safety of the balloon will seem, at least to some who are poor sailors, the point most worth of emphasis. Has it not been reported that while the crew of the R-34 looked down upon the sea and saw it madly tossed by a 40-mile gale, the great airship itself was riding along on an even, steady keel, with not a sick man aboard? This is comfort indeed. The exploits of the R-34 restore, and more than restore, whatever prestige the dirigible balloon had lost as a result of the war. For all the damage done by the Zeppelins during the hostilities, it was still true that the long-developed German confidence in their airships as engines of war was more or less dashed by the actual course of events. The fate of the last great fleet, which, when returning from London, was blown far out of its course and brought to destruction by gunfire, by weather, and by exhaustion of fuel over the fields of France, put a heavy and almost a final check upon Zeppelin operations in the late fighting. The peace-time accomplishment of the great R-34 has put the airship back where it belongs.

Not only the power of its flight, its endurance and comparative safety, but also its ability alone among craft of the air to carry cargo-weights of any considerable size, have shown forth the place which the dirigible balloon will take in any future development of long-distance aviation. The probabilities are that in transatlantic flight and other voyages of commensurate length it will lead the whole field, with seaplanes and airplanes acting only as auxiliaries or for very special services of their own.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE ROYAL ARABS.

The two thoroughbred Arab horses which the King and the Prince of Wales are, I am told by an expert, who has seen them, quite an acquisition to the Royal stables, for they have pedigree "as long as your arm," to use a horse term, and, moreover, pedigree worth talking about. Their descent on paper shows them to have the bluest Arab blood in their veins, and a Court official who is acknowledged judge of horses summed them up as "regular beauties." At the present moment the new arrivals are now at Windsor—enjoy in the stables the nickname of "Hodges I" and "Hodges II," but their real names are Soman and Soman-el-Saghir, the latter name meaning Soman the Little. It is not inappropriate that this one should be intended for the Prince of Wales. For a time the Arabs will be allowed to graze themselves in the park at Windsor, but eventually they will have some serious training to undergo at the hands of Green, the King's stud-groom, before they will be ridden on ceremonial occasions by their royal masters.

ADMIRALTY CHANGES.

The appointment of Rear-Admiral Sir William Nicholson as Third Sea Lord is the fourth change among the naval members of the Admiralty Board since the beginning of the year. Moreover, the appointment of Sir Alexander Duff as Commander-in-Chief in China as from July 24th will cause another vacancy, and the only remaining naval officers of the board, as existed at the time of the armistice, will be Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, First Sea Lord, and Rear-Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, Deputy First Sea Lord. The resignation of Rear-Admiral Nicholson, a torpedo expert, helps to restore the balance as between the gunnery and torpedo branches, for his predecessor, Rear-Admiral de Bartolomeo, was from the gunnery branch. There are now three gunners, two torpedo specialists, and two who did not specialise—Sir Rosslyn Wemyss and Rear-Admiral Ferguson. The absence of a representative of either the aviation or submarine branch is noticeable.

THE R-39.

Correspondent who has just returned from a visit to the Armstrong-Whitworth works at Barlow, near Selby, gives me an interesting note about the construction of the R-39, the world's largest airship. The R-39 will carry forty tons of cargo at a speed of 70 miles an hour. She has a capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet, whereas the R-33 and R-34 only reached 2,000,000 cubic feet. She has six engines, each of 350 horse-power. The length is 658 feet and the maximum diameter 85 feet. The total life is 30 tons. It is interesting to learn that nearly all the constructional work has been done by women and many branches of this work, being highly dangerous on account of the proximity of great quantities of hydrogen, could only be carried out by volunteers. There is no luxury and not much comfort in the hanging cabins of the R-39, and the sleeping arrangements for the crew consists of hammocks hung in the rigging very much like on board a ship. But in this case there is no friendly deck to fall upon in the case of very dirty weather.

CELEBRITIES IN OBSCURITIES.

The popular enthusiasm about the doings of the Atlantic aviators has by no means subsided. But people here miss much of the excitement they might otherwise derive in their shopping excursions owing to their habit of forgetting a face. It is a fortnight since the world was thrilled with the magnificent navigation of the Vimy bomber across two thousand miles of ocean. During that time hundreds of thousands of Londoners on various occasions must have seen the man responsible for this wonderful feat. Yet he wanders about our crowded streets and enters shops quite unrecognised. One afternoon I saw Lieutenant A. Whitten Brown twice, but on neither occasion was he generally recognised. I met him walking down the Haymarket, and later discovered him sitting down in the tailoring department of a large West End store with half a dozen other people, waiting probably to buy his wedding kit. The shop had large photographs of the Vimy machine and the aviators prominently displayed in the windows, but neither the staff nor the waiting customers seemed to have any idea who the officer in the blue Royal Air Force uniform was. My first impulse was to proclaim to the salesman who came up to me, "That's Brown, the Atlantic navigator," but remembering his modesty I left him to the merciful obscurity which he seemed to be enjoying.

THE "DEBOBBERS."

The typists, girl clerks, and shop girls of London mostly have an unduly lock just now. They are in the process of "debobbing" their hair, and that is about as bad as the masculine ordeal of growing a beard, an ordeal which practically no modern Englishwoman has the courage to endure. "Bobbing" went out of fashion with the armistice, and now the young ladies of Suburbia, Whitehall, the chorus, the counter, and Whitechapel, are alike trying to keep their coiffures slightly while their hair grows long again. The locks that were chopped to hang short before the ears like a Spaniard's whiskers are now growing straggly, and hair which was chopped at the nape of the neck and curled has to be left lank and uncurled to persuade it to grow again. So far the only result in most cases is a few pitiful wisps tied into a wretched knot, unless a young woman has kept her old tresses and succeeds in working them up with the growing hair, which, by the way, again impedes growth.

THE PLAINT OF THE GIRL CLERK.

There is, I hear, considerable heart-burning among the temporary women clerks who have swarmed in Government offices in Whitehall and elsewhere during the war at the official attitude regarding their future. They point out that the posts which they hold are for the most part new ones which have arisen out of the special conditions of the past four years or so, and that in no sense can they be said to occupy jobs which were formerly held by men who have been on service with the Forces during that time. The news that their fate is to hang on their success or otherwise in examinations which are to be held in the autumn, similar in character to the usual tests for Civil Service candidates, fills them with consternation and indignation. Such of them as survive these tests will, it is understood, be given permanent employment on the temporary staffs of Government Departments, which really means that they will have regular work found for them, but they will not be eligible for pensions and other advantages which attach to the members of the permanent Civil Service. This scheme is regarded by the women affected as tantamount to a roundabout way of getting rid of the great majority of their number. The general view is that an infinitesimal minority would survive such tests, especially as they are to get three months' notice of the subjects which they must study for the examination.

RESTAURANT DANCING.

Though there were never more dances than during this season, the restaurants are catering for as much additional dancing as can be put into a long day. This has given rise to the dance-cum-meal fashion. If you tea or dine in a restaurant you may also afterwards go and dance there. So far London restaurants have not been Americanised to the extent of dancing in the dining rooms between the courses, but no doubt they will come to it. At present dining room and dance room are separate. But the new habit is solving the after-dinner problem in a manner much appreciated by a large number of would-be dancers.

A SWIMMING BOOM.

Swimming in these hot days is making a big appeal to even the most unpractised in the art. The attendant at one of the public baths here tells me that more people seem to be swimming this year than ever before, and that a tremendous increase has taken place in the number of girls who go in for the sport. Hitherto at most of the London swimming places one day a week has been allotted for ladies, but to meet the new demand it is believed that it will soon be necessary to give an extra day or two to extend the facilities for mixed bathing. Mixed bathing is becoming popular. Ten years ago it was unknown except in one public swimming bath in London, whereas to-day there is hardly a district where it is not permitted. Local councils are discovering a potent argument in its favor, and the experience of the Chiswick Open Air Swimming Bath, where mixed bathing is said to be responsible for average weekly takings of £80, might be pointed to as an example of a means of converting a municipal undertaking often non-revenue-producing into a paying concern.

Tea in the Clouds.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Every afternoon at four o'clock they had their tea. There was nothing in the mere matter of being the first man to cross the Atlantic in a lighter-than-air ship to discourage the fixed habits of those thirty sturdy young Englishmen. It would have been a real discomfort had they been compelled to forego their tea. They also had phonographs to give them the inspiration of jazz tunes. It was quite like Piccadilly or Oxford street. It is characteristic of the Englishman, especially the young and venturesome Englishman, that whatever he does is to do more than a part of the day's work. It is also a British characteristic to abide by fixed habits whenever it is possible. Under severest stress the Englishman can depart from routine, but he is far less readily adaptable than his American cousin. Americans may laugh at the four o'clock tea aboard the R-34, but this will in no measure lessen their admiration for the tea drinkers and for their splendid achievement. A young officer jumped overboard when the R-34 was 2,000 feet above the landing place at Roosevelt field. He did it quite as a matter of course. It was no exploit of bravado. He was detailed to "go ashore" and superintend the landing of the ship, and was quite annoyed that anyone should assume that he had done anything thrilling or unusual. How different from Hawker's "jump-off" over the black Atlantic! Hawker was an Englishman, too; and he went about his work with phlegmatic British matter-of-factness. So did Alcock, who got across. But Hawker and Alcock both knew they were taking desperate chances. And they knew that they would have to forego tea almost vital necessity of four o'clock tea! Now Major Scott and his men make the air voyage with most of the comforts of home, and neither they nor their friends give serious thought to the danger of the undertaking. Aruly the summer of 1919 is special in the history of aviation. Already the transatlantic flight, thrice achieved in three widely varying types of air craft has become an old story. Four o'clock tea above the storm clouds of the mid-Atlantic bids fair to become an everyday festivity. And the really ambitious air navigators have begun to study the map of the Pacific.

Irish Peace.

Must Ireland continue to be the exception that proves the rule of British statesmanship? An important series of articles in The Times, in effect, propounds this question and will seek its answer. We have made peace for all peoples abroad and proclaimed it far and wide. But at home—for Ireland is part of home—there is no peace. Ireland has too long been everybody else's business. Let us make it our business. No question perturbs the loyal Dominions more than this miserable trouble in Ireland. Everywhere over-seas the Irishman is a success socially and politically. It is a puzzling contrast for the Dominions—this eternal jarring strife between England and Ireland as against the fullness of their own constitutional emancipation and opportunity. Why cannot the great abilities of Irishmen be turned from a barren, embittering agitation and enlisted fruitfully in the constructive task of administering a free Government of Ireland within the Empire? Each Dominion is a milestone on the road to Irish Peace. —London Daily Mail.

With careful investors, safety of income and principal is the first requirement.

For institutions, partnerships, business men and investors generally, investments should be readily marketable, and also readily acceptable as collateral.

One of the types of issues which best fulfills these requirements is usually the short term bond or note. Early maturity adds stability to its market course and the issue is paid at par, and in some instances at a premium, within a few years or less. Among business men and institutional investors who may desire to sell these investments at almost any time, there is a strong preference for short term issues. Let us furnish our proposals. We will do so on request.
