Harding Elected President United States.

Republican Candidate Sweeps the Union--Bolshevik Soldiers Mutiny--Schr Nordica Towed Into Boston--Distinguished French Delegates for Geneva Assembly.

DEMOCRATS CONCEDE HARDING'S ELECTION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2. George White, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, conceded the election of Senator Harding at eleven o'clock to-night. White also conceded the election of a Republican Congress, both House and Senate.

UNPRECEDENTED MAJORITIES FOR HARDING.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2. At midnight eastern time, with the West and Middle West scarcely heard from, the Harding landslide in the east was continuing with gathering momentum. At the rate the Harding column was growing at that hour the Republican plurality in the State of New York would be around the unprecedented figure of more than seven million.

New York City, formerly Democratic was going for Harding by at least half a million. The Governorship fight continued close, with Republican managers claiming the defeat of Governor Smith.

Pennsylvania returns at that hour showed Harding leading Cox three to one and Senator Penrose elected.

Massachusetts was promising Harding the greatest plurality ever given a Presidential candidate in that State. Boston had gone for the Republicans for the second time in its history, and had given Harding a greater lead over Cox than it gave McKinley over Bryan in 1896.

Returns from half of Vermont gave Harding three to one lead over Cox. In the home district of Chas. F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, Harding beat Cox two to one.

Maine reported Harding leading Cox by the largest plurality ever given a Presidential candidate.

Ohio, one-fifth complete, showed a growing vote for Harding.

Harding carried two wards in the city of Atlanta, Ga., and two parishes in the Louisiana Sugar Belt, both Democratic territories.

NEWSPAPERS CLAIM HARDING ELECTED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2. With tooting horns and the crackle of rattlers New York city poured out into the street late to-day for its time honored night celebration. New York always celebrated, whoever the winner and whoever the loser, but hardly had the streets been filled than they were emptied again or almost emptied, for the skies opened and the rain descended by far more than the proverbial bucketful. The crowds who had gathered in front of bulletin boards, broke and ran swept along by the furious wind that whipped the rain drops under umbrellas with merciless force. A few scores, however, that stood their ground on Park Row saw the tower of the New York World building suddenly illuminated with red lights, a signal that that newspaper, a staunch supporter of Governor Cox, had conceded the election of his rival. About the same time the New York Sun, which has championed the Republican banner and which claimed a landslide for Senator Harding, admitted that Governor Smith of New York, Democrat, probably had been re-elected. Presidential nominee at nine-thirty o'clock had not accepted the returns as indicating his defeat. The New York Tribune, Republican, claimed the election of Senator Harding at eight o'clock. The Brooklyn Eagle, another strong Democratic organ, in its latest extra carried the headline, "Harding sweeps New York State," but does not yet admit the defeat of Cox throughout the country. The Eagle reports Harding had a majority of about a hundred thousand in Brooklyn. The New York American went to press at nine o'clock proclaiming Harding elected.

MUTINY AT MOSCOW.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 2. A serious mutiny occurred in Moscow a few days ago, according to travellers who have arrived in Riga, Latvia, says the Politiken to-day. The trouble commenced, the travellers report, among the Bolshevik soldiers in the suburbs of Khodynka, who refused to proceed to the front unless supplied with new equipment. Civilians sided with the troops and there was considerable disorder in the barracks and adjoining streets. Machine guns were brought into use, according to the travellers, and large numbers of troops were dispatched from the surrounding districts. Howitzers were placed in commanding positions and between six and seven thousand persons were arrested. Of these, the travellers assert, from two to three hundred were executed. The ring-leaders of the mutiny were not discovered.

NORDICA TOWED TO BOSTON.

BOSTON, Nov. 2. The steamer Western Comet brought the abandoned Newfoundland fishing schooner Nordica to port here to-day, after towing her four hundred miles. The Nordica, the crew of which was taken off by a trawler on October 18, was apparently in good condition, except for a loose rudder. The Western Comet was bound from Glasgow for Baltimore.

MOTOR TRUCK STRUCK BY TRAIN—WOMAN KILLED.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 2. One woman was killed and seven other persons were injured to-day when a motor truck in which they were riding was struck by a construction train, where the Hydro Construction tracks cross Lundy's Lane, south of this city.

FRANCE'S REPRESENTATIVES.

PARIS, Nov. 2. The Cabinet to-day nominated Louis Bourgeois, President of the Council of the League of Nations, former Premier Rene Viviani and former Minister of Foreign Affairs Hanotaux as France's delegates to the League of Nations Assembly in Geneva, beginning November 15th.

Career of President-Elect Harding.

1865—Born at Corsica, Ohio.
1881—Graduated from Iberia College.
1884—Bought Marion Weekly Star.
1891—Married to Miss Florence King, Marion, Ohio.
1899—Elected State Senator.
1901—Re-elected State Senator.
1902—Elected Lieutenant-Governor.
1910—Defeated for Governor of Ohio.
1912—Nominated Taft for President.
1914—Elected United States Senator.
1916—Temporary chairman, Republican national convention.
1920—Nominated by the Republican party for the Presidency of the United States.

Warren G. Harding has always been a resident of Ohio, which State he has represented as United States Senator since 1914. In private business life he is publisher of the Marion, Ohio, Star. He was born on a farm, near the village of Blooming Grove, Morrow County, Ohio, November 2, 1865, the eldest of eight children. His father George T. Harding, was a country doctor whose forbears came from Scotland. Before going to Ohio, the Hardings were residents of Pennsylvania, where some of them were massacred by Indians. Others fought in the revolutionary war. The mother of Warren, Mrs. Phoebe Dickerson, was descended from an old-time Holland Dutch family, the Van Kirks.

In his youth Warren Harding lived the life of a farmer boy attending the village school until fourteen years of age, when he entered Ohio Central College of Iberia, from which he was graduated. As editor of the college paper he first displayed a talent for journalism. He was obliged to stop school now and then and earn the money with which to pursue his college course. At one time he cut corn,

Was Hardly Able to Walk Across Room, She States

Mrs. Bergeron's Health Was Dreadfully Run Down—Tanlac Restores Her.

"It seems almost too good to be true that I am at last free of my awful suffering," said Mrs. Hector Bergeron, 200 Grant St., Quebec, while relating her experience with Tanlac recently.

"For two years I had indigestion, and just before I started taking Tanlac I was so badly run down and weak I could hardly walk across the room. My stomach was so out of order that I had to live on liquid foods for several months, and even with these my stomach pained me so much it seemed that I would go distracted, and nothing tasted good.

"My nerves were so shattered that I would lie for hours at night without closing my eyes, never getting to sleep before early in the morning, almost time to get up, and always felt tired and worn out mornings.

"Nothing I tried helped me and I seemed to get worse every day until I started taking Tanlac; but it wasn't long then before I noticed a big improvement. I took eight bottles in all, and now my appetite is so big and my food tastes so good I can scarcely eat enough and my stomach doesn't give me a bit of trouble.

"My nerves are quiet and steady, and I sleep like a child nights and get up mornings feeling fine. Tanlac has built me up ten pounds in weight and I am now doing all my housework without feeling as tired and worn out as I used to feel after walking only a few steps. I feel that I just can't praise Tanlac highly enough to pay the debt of gratitude I owe."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gush, in Milltown by Ex-plants Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake—adv.

at another painted barn and at still another drove a team and helped to grade the roadbed of a new railway. At seventeen he taught a district school and played a horn in the village brass band.

At odd times he worked in the village printing office, in time becoming an expert typesetter and later a linotype operator. He is a practical pressman and a job printer, and as a "make-up man" is said to have few equals. The luck piece he has carried as a Senator is the old printer's rule he used when he was sticking type.

In 1884 Dr. Harding moved his family to Marion. A short time afterward the father purchased for Warren Harding, The Star, then a small paper.

On the paper Warren Harding performed every function from devil to managing editor. In all the years the Senator has owned it there has never been a strike or a threatened one.

Senator Harding is closely identified with many other large business enterprises in Marion and other parts of the State of Ohio. He is a director of a bank and several large manufacturing plants and is a trustee of the Trinity Baptist Church.

Mr. Harding has twice represented the thirteenth senatorial district of Ohio in the State Legislature and served one term as Lieutenant-Governor. At the 1914 election Harding was elected United States Senator by a majority of more than 100,000, running 73,000 ahead of the next highest on the ticket. In the Senate he is a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations. Senator Harding married Miss Florence King in 1891.

Harding is tall, handsome, impressive in appearance and a figure sure of attracting attention in or out of a distinguished gathering. He is clean-shaven, his face is clear cut, topped off by a high, broad forehead. His hair gray and closely cropped.—Daily News.

Men of St. John's, men of the Outports, are you going to sit idly by and see politicians of the lowest type wallowing in wealth and luxury, while you and your children starve? Remember the fault is not yours. If you are out of employment or cannot provide the necessities of life for your families who is the cause of it? Is it not because the channels of free trade have been interfered with by ignorant and inexperienced politicians to benefit themselves and their few followers?

People Should Act.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir, Your correspondents "Democrat" and "Another Democrat" have struck the right chord in calling upon the public to awaken from their lethargy and make an attempt before it is too late, to hurl from office the demagogue who is strangling the life out of poor old Newfoundland. A monster meeting should be convened at once and his Excellency the Governor requested to cancel the Fish Regulations and abolish the Sugar Control Board. If he refuses to act, firmer measures should be adopted by the people themselves and without delay. The winter is approaching and never was Newfoundland nearer hard times than now. From all over the country, North, South, East and West, protests are pouring in and are being unheeded. Warnings have also been sent here by clergymen and those in authority that flour and other necessities of life are needed in the most isolated outports, and that if not rushed forward before navigation closes, the consequences will be serious, but they fall upon deaf ears.

Here in St. John's, in what should be the busiest season of the year, there are hundreds of industrious men out of employment, and their families in want. What will it be like by and by in the middle of the winter, if conditions are such as I describe now.

A Golden Jubilee.

On Monday last the men of Rt. Rev. Monsignor Donnelly's parish, Conception Harbor, held a meeting to consider what part they would take in the arrangements for fittingly celebrating the Golden Jubilee of their Pastor which event takes place on Dec. 1st. A Chairman and Committee were selected and considerable enthusiasm was evinced by the large gathering present as the event is unique, being the first of its kind in Newfoundland. It is expected that His Grace the Archbishop, the Bishop of Hr. Grace and the Bishop-Elect of St. George's, with Monsignori and Priests, will attend and High Mass will be celebrated in honor of the event. Although Monsignor Donnelly has been but a short time in Conception, he has already endeared himself to his people and they are determined that their part will not be wanting.

If you are law-abiding citizens and are willing to work, the country which bred you should sustain you. This is your right. Whose fault is it then that you cannot earn your livelihood in this your native country? Is it not the fault of those in authority?

You have heard a lot of a "free country." Is yours a free country to-day? Is it? You owe it to your children to hand on to them the same freedom that was won for you by your forefathers. Then be men and awake to your responsibilities before it is too late.

Banish from power the tyrants and demagogues who would take from you the right to live in this your native land. Better, far better, you had no government than one that would starve you and your children, or drive you to some foreign country to earn your bread.

Yours truly,
A DETERMINED DEMOCRAT.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Having read the letters in the Daily News and Telegram regarding the Argentina Terminus—the former is so very uninteresting that it is hardly worth noticing—as the poor fellow don't seem to know what he is driving at. Mr. Freeman is quite right, in his remarks about the Argentina Terminus, this terminus should have been built three years ago—which would have been of great importance to the fishermen all over Placentia Bay. Mr. Freeman seems to forget that Placentia never had a Railway Terminus. A Railway Station on the hill top overlooking Jersey Side cannot be called a Placentia terminus.

But why spend $100,000.00 on a motor road for the city motor car owners. What about the Clerks, Mill, Factory Employees and Laborers. They cannot afford "a Ford" to go joy riding like the big city sports.

Why not build a railway branch from the head of the north east track out to McDonald's Cove, over the Little Gut right down to the Court House on Placentia Beach, a distance of about 4 miles—without a rockcut or a big fill in the way. If $100,000.00 will build the Argentina Branch, $50,000 would build a Placentia Branch, then you could say all aboard for Placentia. This with a motor road to Branch would give the people of Cape Shore, South East, Point Verde and Placentia what is their just rights. They have been most shamefully treated by all representatives, and now let our present members be up and doing and demand that Placentia South East, Point Verde get fair play. This Placentia railway branch and Cape Shore motor road would open up one of the finest agricultural sections in Newfoundland, also most likely open up some promising mining claims.

Thanking you for space.

Yours truly,

Requiem Mass at Renew's.

RENEW'S, Nov. 2.

Requiem Mass was sung this morning in the Church of the Apostles, Renew's, for the repose of the souls of Terence MacSweeney, Lord Mayor of Cork, and his colleagues, who died for the glorious cause of the liberty of their native land. An immense congregation attended. The Sinn Fein flag is flying half-mast. The Rev. Pastor preached a powerful sermon based on the words of the sermon on the mount, "Blessed are they that suffer persecution for Justice sake for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven." Many a fervent and sympathetic prayer was offered for the eternal repose of the illustrious and noble dead. May they rest in peace.

with the Irish question as a statesman should, but in the tricky manner of an opportunist politician. Every move he has made has helped the Sinn Fein movement. Outrage has followed outrage in Ireland under the Lloyd George administration. The murderers of policemen and soldiers by Sinn Fein sympathizers are to be condemned, and one of the most disgraceful chapters in British mis-government of Ireland, is the series of outrages—murders, arson and destruction of property—by soldiers and the "Black and Tans." Attempts of government apologists to palliate or defend these outrages won't hold water, for it is indefensible that the sworn and paid upholders of law and order should themselves be allowed to enter upon organized and open breaches of law and crimes of the worst kind.

The Irish question is the most important before the people of the British Empire now. Comparatively the coal miners' strike and the unsettled questions of world politics are only passing phases. If the British government will not deal with the Irish question in a statesmanlike manner, the self-governing dominions of the empire should demand and require that they do so.

Customs Dept. Ends Exchange Annoyance

Montreal—(Canadian Press)—Initial steps have been taken by the customs department at Ottawa to clear up the difficulties in connection with the basis on which duty is payable on goods imported from Great Britain. In future duty will be payable on the exchange value of British paper money, as is the case with other countries, while it is understood that those who have paid duty on the war value of the British pound in the past will be able to secure refunds of the amounts overpaid.

Obituary.

CAPT. WM. JOHN COOK.

There passed away, this morning, at the home of his father, South Side Road, one of the most promising of our young master mariners, in the person of Capt. William John Cook, familiarly known as Jack. The deceased seaman had many commands during his short life, and it was in one of them, the Marie Louise, that he contracted a chill which has proved fatal. The story of the grounding of this vessel at Pictou, Nova Scotia, last year has already been told, but it was because of this marine accident that "Jack" Cook lies a corpse to-day. His last command was the Government steamer Daisy, which vessel he brought from England in August, since when he has been confined to his bed, death ending his earthly career to-day. Left to mourn are a wife, (nee Miss Coaker, daughter of Mr. John Coaker), father, mother and two brothers, to all of whom the Telegram extends sympathy. Deceased was a member of the Society of United Fishermen, and the members of St. John's Lodge No. 5 will attend the funeral, which takes place from his late residence to-morrow afternoon.

News Summary.

(British Wireless Service.)

HORSEA, Nov. 2.—In the majority of coalfields voting continues to-day, upon the peace terms arranged between Government and Miners' executive. Results, so far received, show substantial majorities in favor of acceptance in Northumberland, Derbyshire and Durham. In Nottingham, Yorkshire and Midland counties, where there were large majorities in the ballot held three weeks ago against offer then made by Government, men have been recommended by their leaders to accept present terms, and have been expected to vote accordingly. South Wales, Lancashire and Cheshire are the only districts where the miners have been advised to vote against terms, and adverse majorities are possible in these districts. In regard to South Wales, while more or less large majorities have so far been cast against acceptance, at some collieries, it is satisfactory to note that other pits have voted for acceptance by small majorities. A doubtful and possible factor is Scotland, from which no results are yet available.

Bonar Law stated in the House of Commons there was no further cause for serious anxiety regarding Mesopotamia. For some time past the committee has been occupied in framing electoral laws and a draft would be ready shortly. Council of state for the administration of the country had been set up, representative of all parts of the country. It is understood that Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has been definitely appointed to become Viceroy of India, in succession to Lord Chelmsford.

The newest member of the corps diplomatique in London is Prince Nofallah, who has been established here in the Legation of the King of the Dedjas.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, announced in the House of Commons that there was no Government policy of reprisals in Ireland. Reprisals are frequently legitimate acts of self protection by police and soldiers in searching houses, shops and other premises for criminals, ammunition and explosives.

Asked in the House of Commons on Monday if he could state the number of police who have been murdered during the preceding week end, Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, gave the following list. First, patrol of Sergeant and three Constables ambushed at Killybegs, County Donegal, Sunday night: One Constable wounded. Second, District Inspector Killeghar shot dead in Kiermans Hotel, Grandard, County Longford, Sunday night. Third, Sergeant Henry Cronin of Tullamore, Kings County, fired at and wounded Sunday night. Died Monday morning. Fourth, Police County Tyrone, Sunday night: One Constable wounded. Fifth, Constable Kearney and Evans of Killergan, County Kerry, shot dead Sunday night. Sixth, Sunday night attempt to assassinate a military officer at Killenaulo, County Tipperary: Military Sergeant wounded. Seventh, Police patrol fired on Sunday night at Ballyduff, County Tipperary: One man killed, one wounded. Eighth, patrol fired upon at Dungannon. Police patrol Abbeydorney, County Kerry, attacked Sunday night: Constable Madden shot dead; another seriously wounded. Ninth, Police patrol in Trales fired upon: One Constable wounded. Tenth, Police patrol in Listeval fired upon: No casualties. Eleventh, Two Constables wounded at Cahway, County Kerry, Sunday night. Twelfth, Naval wireless operator seriously wounded in Trales Sunday night. Thirteenth, Constable Doyle, of Clouagk, seriously wounded at Keltly Sunday night. Fourteenth, Two Constables fired on at Thomastown, County Kilkenny, Sunday night: No casualties. Fifteenth, at Castledaly, County Galway, police ambushed: One Constable killed, two wounded.

Disgusted Fisherman.

A fisherman from Trinity Bay, with a raffle of White Nape Labrador, called as a last resort on the Minister of Marine and Fisheries this morning, and after waiting a couple of hours failed to get admittance to the sanatorium. The disgusted fisherman left the place not knowing what next to do. He has quite a lot of this fish some 300 qts. and cannot find a purchaser. Another fisherman from the same district called shortly afterward and after a long wait his sample of fish was brought before the All Highest, the poor fisherman himself failing to gain admittance. After some consultation the Private Secretary came back with nothing doing, but he advised the man to try at the premises of a member of the Advisory Board, in the East End. Needless to say the fisherman still has his fish. Interviewed, both fisherman said, "What does he want anyway. He says it is not salted heavy enough. By—"

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

IS IT FAIR?

"He's not the sort of man who will drive a hard bargain," I heard one day. "He's one of the nicest men to deal with that I ever had anything to do with."

The "he" in question is a very conscientious workman who restores old furniture. I happened to know his wife and children, and I couldn't help wondering what they would have said to the above pronouncement.

To put it more accurately, I did not need to wonder. I could almost see his wife's lip curl.

"Nice?" I am sure she would say. Yes, nice as far as you are concerned, but what about my end of it? What about me and the children?"

Easy On His Customers, But Hard On His Wife.

"Henry does wonderful work," I have heard her say over and over again, "and he could get the money for it like the rest, but he simply won't ask for it. He says he hates to stick people. I ask him how he feels about sticking me and the children, but he can't seem to see that people think it's fine of him. I know why shouldn't they when they prosper—but I think it's downright unfair."

There is a hard ring in her voice when she makes this complaint, but I can't say that I blame her. Softness in one partner is pretty sure to develop hardness in the other, and I don't see why one should get all the credit and the other all the blame.

I think we all know people like this who in their desire to be fair and on pleasant terms with outsiders, sacrifice the interests of those whom they should love best.

They Gave Away Part of Their Stock In Trade.

I have in mind a woman who was so anxious to do her duty in community work of various sorts and so easily put upon by lazier members of the various committees on which she was always the most conscientious worker, that she allowed herself to be worked into a nervous breakdown. Her husband has had to bear the brunt of her condition and it is bearing very heavily on him. I have heard people praise that woman for her sacrifice, but it seems to me that she really gave away more of herself than she had any right to. Her health was part of the stock in trade of herself and her husband in their matrimonial partnership. Had she a right to give it away like that?

He is Called Generous, His Wife Does the Giving Up.

Again, I know a man who, in spite of the fact that his taxes, his mortgage interest and the cost of repairs have gone up, does not raise his tenants' rent. He is one of those people who loves to be thought well of, and hates to do disagreeable things. The rent has always been low for the property and he is practically making the tenants a present of $50 a year. His wife, an elderly woman and not strong, has been obliged to give up the services of a washing-woman and do her own washing to make ends meet. How he can reconcile this kindness to the tenant with unkindness to her, I, for one, cannot see.

I realize, of course, that this tendency is not a common one. The opposite is far more common. Nevertheless there do exist people who are so generous so easy in their relations with outsiders, as to inflict hardship not only on themselves but on those whose lives are tied up with theirs. Is it fair?

Our Royal Poet.

Prince's Cheery Little Ditty to Neptune.

The Central News has obtained the following original poem by the Prince of Wales. It was written and recited by the Prince on the occasion of the ceremony on the Renown attending his first crossing of "the Line" on his trip to Australia. Though they do not qualify the Prince for succession to the Poet Laureateship, the verses reflect the breezy, happy temperament which has endeared him to the whole British race.

Apostrophe to Neptune.
King Neptune, I am proud to wear
This honourable and handsome collar;
Although, from all reports I hear,
There's still a great deal more to follow.

I'm glad to meet your charming wife
And all the members of your court;
From all I've seen I'll bet my life
That Amphitrite's quite a sport.

I hear you're handing out some dope
To each expectant frightened lad,
Made up of pills and shaving soap.
Why, is not that just too bad?

I hear your bears say, "What a noise!"
They're hungry to begin the baiting;
I know I'm "in" for it, so, boys,
Don't let me keep the party waiting.

THE IDOL.

Once I was a public idol, for a fortnight and a day; like a bridegroom to the bride I went on my gorgeous way, and fair maidens went before me, strewing flowers along the road, and a halo hovered o'er me when I sat in my abode. But the idols always stumble, being fixed with feet of clay, and forgetting to be humble, I threw public love away. On the ninth day of October roses hit me, in my walks on the tenth the people, sober, handed me a bunch of rocks. For the wealth of adulation made me feel I was a king, made me think in all the nation I was sure the biggest thing. And in every place I landed I was swollen up with pride, and my dome of thought expanded till my hat split up the side. And the people got the willies, poor erratic, changeful hicks, and they passed me no more lilies, but bombarded me with bricks. If again I am no idol I'll be wiser, I allow; and no cheap, inflated pride'll strip the laurels from my brow. For the idols wouldn't tumble, they'd be cherished to the end, if they'd just be meek and humble as adown the world they wend.

Death Hovers Over Child at Play.

Death hovers over a tiny three-year old girl, at play on the Victoria Avenue railway tracks at Lindsay on October 18.

She and some of her little companions had been gathering autumn leaves and piling them upon the tracks, taking turns at burying one another. She was "it" and had curled up in her little nest between the rails, completely hidden from sight, when Engineer Hutchinson entered the town with a long string of freight cars. Leaning from his cab window he saw the heaps of leaves covering the tracks and the children playing alongside. Proceeding slowly, the pilot of his engine had almost reached the leafy heap when the towed curls and laughing face of the tiny girl popped up from their hiding place. With screaming brake shoes and a grinding shudder the heavy train came to a stop within inches of the little one.

Prince Charlie's Claymore.

A sword which was worn by Bonnie Prince Charlie has come to the United States as a gift from Lord Garloch to Mrs. Colboun, of Washington, a descendant of the House of Mar. It was delivered through the British Embassy. The words of presentation accompanying the historic claymore declare that it was sent in view of the fact that it was for their adherence and loyalty to the cause of the Stuarts that the Earls of Mar suffered so greatly in their estates and fortunes, and that some of the family who had been exiled sought refuge in America.

LIKE TO SEE 'EM GETTING ON. Like to see 'em gettin' on, the one young men who used to be the children playin' round the street, the youngsters climbin' on my knees;

I'll tell you what, it does me good to hear about a boy I know who is fulfillin' in the world his promise of the long-ago.

I've watched 'em year by year, I guess. I've seen 'em grow an' start away. While other little boys have come to romp around my door an' play.

An' then I've heard some splendid news—the sort o' news that thrills me through. That one of those I used to know was winnin' fame an' fortune too.

It's good to see young men succeed, it's fine to know they're doin' well. I like the days when they come back with all the tales they have to tell.

There's nothin' better on this earth than seein' young men with records clear. Doin' the service of the world an' prosperin' from year to year.

I like to watch 'em climbin' up, an' think about the days when they were little barefoot boys round here, spendin' the summer days in play.

I like to meet 'em comin' back, because I knew 'em every one. An' tell myself a thousand times, it's good to see 'em gettin' on.

The Government View.

The Government has every reason to welcome Mr. Aquith's announcement, which will do far more to strengthen the Coalition than even the most cogent arguments of the Premier and his supporters.

The Government's position, as stated by Mr. Lloyd George at Cardiff a week ago, is—with one exception—clear and unassailable. We must, he said, restore order with a firm hand, and proceed at the same time with measures for the self-government of Ireland. But he protested against the view that we should go further and give more simply because crime has been more successful.

"Give it," he said, "because it is right. Give it because it is just. Give it because it is good for Ireland, and good for the United Kingdom. Give it because it brings peace and goodwill. But don't give it because you are bullied by assassins."

That position is unanswerable. So, we think, is the Premier's objection to an independent Ireland. Though little has been said about it, Ireland was the Government's worry during the war. Indeed, our escape from the results of Irish treachery was miraculous.

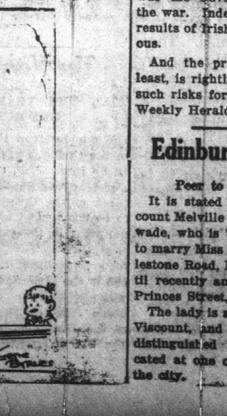

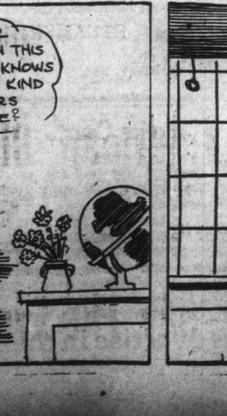

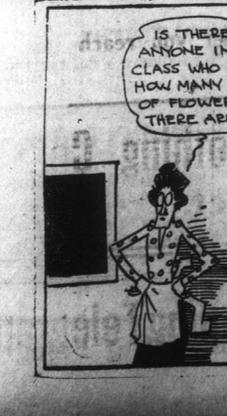

And the present Government, at least, is rightly determined to take no such risks for the future.—Glasgow Weekly Herald, Oct. 16.

Fishermen Must Declare a New Independence.

It must be apparent even to the least observant fishermen in Newfoundland that the hour has now struck when they should make a new Declaration of Independence, in order to obtain their free and inalienable rights. There was a time when it was thought by the toilers that they had arrived at a point in their lives, when those rights were being preserved, and for a brief period it did indeed look as though at last they were coming into their own. But the unfortunate part of it was that they were misled and duped. No longer is their own true Moses leading them out of mercantile bondage. On the contrary they are being driven further and further into it. Where is now the modern Joshua, who was to direct them into the riches and fertility of the Promised Land. Alas for the misplaced confidence of human nature the great one has gone over to the enemy and the view of the land flowing with milk and honey was all that the fishermen received. They were brought near enough to witness its beauties, and crave its boundless resources, but on the very borderland they were abandoned and left without the guiding genius of him to whom they gave all their allegiance, and in whom they had implicit trust. To-day fishermen are wandering in the wilderness of Fish Regulations and losing themselves in the maze of proclamations. Their former vision has been dissipated, their high hopes dashed to the ground and they flounder in the Slough of Despond, hopelessly and helplessly. Their immediate future has been darkened by the imposition of iniquitous and damnable legislation, and of redress, financially, they have none.

A famous Declaration of Independence subscribed to almost a hundred and fifty years ago, contained in its premises "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed with certain inalienable rights, among which are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to ensure these rights, Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new Government." All Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. That is an axiom of political economy, accepted in its most complete form in Anglo-Saxondom,—with one exception. The Government of Newfoundland, as it is administered to-day, does not derive the powers of which it is making use to the detriment and retrogression of the dominion, from the consent of the governed. The people—the majority of whom—voted the Liberal-Reform Party into power last fall, did not give their consent to the autocratic and extremist measures which the Government passed and are enforcing. Moreover they have not consented to the operation of injurious and calamitous enactments. Such of these as have been made law in respect of the selling and marketing of fish, have brought down the just condemnation of the people—not of one class alone, but of all classes, because these laws in affecting and hampering the trade in fish, antagonising our best customers and creating chaos at home, strike at the roots of the domestic prosperity of the great bulk of the people in Newfoundland, from the merchant in his counting house to the humblest laborer who works on his premises. A blow struck at the fishing industry of Newfoundland cripples all trade, brings to a standstill all advance, places the toilers in straitened circumstances, stops labor, and halts the wheels of the chariot of progress. Why then must the fishermen any longer be subservient to the wishes and desires of one man? They have seen by now the inevitable result of his policy. His administration of affairs has become destructive of the rights of the fishermen, yes, of the people as a whole. Let them then exercise their God-given right and declare a new independence.

Notes and Comments.

Advocate publishes the weekly testimonial to our abilities in yesterday's issue.

The thought is occurring to many habitual strikers that if they run out of jobs they won't be able to strike.

"Charlie James" still continues to be the bete noir of Hon. W. F. Coaker and his henchmen. Wonder if the honourable gent has ever read Burns' poem "The Twa Dogs?"

Angry Diner: "Confound it, waiter, there's a trouser button in my soup!"

Grateful Waiter: "Oh, thank you, sir! I could not think what had become of it!"

The Advocate pays another glowing tribute to the verve of our leading articles and the effect they are having on the fishermen, by suggesting that they emanate from other pens. Thank you, brother. Even Theobald could not do any better.

This raving about the price of fish as per regulations, indulged in by the Coaker organ, is more than amusing, considering that fishermen are hawking about town yaffles of Labrador as samples, and cannot get any buyers. Could conditions be worse?

A seven-months-old American baby, says Searchlight in the Glasgow Weekly Herald, is reported to have grown a gold tooth, but I am frankly sceptical. I know a proud father who got a mouthful of gold teeth in America well over 25 years ago, and his wife's molars were also well studded with gold long before marriage. Yet of their nine children not even the luckiest has developed 'so much as a speck of gold dust among his ivories.

There are certain delicacies that the British Indian troops particularly enjoy. The principal things are ghee, areca nut, betel, and Indian tobacco. To English readers ghee will be the most mysterious of these commodities. It is a kind of clarified butter, made from curdled milk—in India usually from buffalo milk. The curdled milk is churned into butter; then the butter stands for a few days until it begins to turn rancid. Then it is boiled and seasoned with dye—whatever that is—salt, or the leaf of the betel, which is a kind of pepper plant.

The Very Latest.

WILL THE TRADE STAND FOR THIS OUTRAGE?

We understand that some changes in the Civil Service have been ordered by Hon. W. F. Coaker, and that Mr. Warwick Smith, Asst. Statistical Clerk of the Customs Department is to be transferred to the Fisheries Department in the capacity of Statistical Clerk. The books of the Customs Department are to be transferred to the Fisheries, and the Minister will now be in a position to "scrutinize fully the whole export trade of the Dominion. The President of the Union Trading Company will be thus enabled to discuss with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the various problems arising in regard to exports, and keep the Prime Minister fully informed on all matters pertaining to trade exports. We wonder what the Board of Trade will have to say to the new "innovation." Will they pass further resolutions against the press for publishing this information to the department of trade, or protest as a body against the head of a corporate concern, doing business in competition with the trade, being possessed of information which should be the confidential business of the customs department.

Nfld. Motor Association Meeting.

The Newfoundland Motor Association held a general meeting in the Board of Trade Rooms yesterday afternoon. Quite a number of members attended and general business was discussed. The President, Mr. White, informed the meeting that all arrangements in connection with the dinner to be held at Donovan's on Nov. 10th had been completed. This is the Association's first reunion but it is hoped to make it an annual affair. It is to be an informal dress affair, and all members who can be expected to attend. Already 100 members have signified their intention of attending and it is expected that about 150 will take part. Arrangements have been made in connection with the parking of the cars on the night of the dinner and a man has been appointed to look after this matter so that there will be no confusion and members will have easy access to and from Donovan's. Special invitations have been sent the Acting Prime Minister Hon. W. F. Coaker, Mayor Gosling, the Acting Secy.-Treasurer of the Municipal Council and all members of the Road Commission as well as the press representatives. Mr. F. V. Coaker is in charge of the musical arrangements and an enjoyable evening is anticipated. The matter of the congestion along Water Street was discussed by the meeting and a committee was appointed who will take this matter up and arrange for a better system of parking cars and motors so as to remedy the present condition of affairs. Some other matters of minor importance were discussed after which the meeting adjourned.

Baseball Players Dined.

Enjoyable Evening at Donovan's. Donovan's hostelry was the scene of a very pleasant gathering last evening when the League Baseball representatives met at a dinner given in honor of the Inter-town Champions 1920. Covers had been laid for about sixty guests, most of whom went in by special car, attached to the 6 o'clock shore train, the managers, umpires and other officials arriving by motor car. After the menu had been discussed the Chairman, Mr. John B. Orr, proposed the toast of The King, which was responded to by singing the National Anthem. Next came that of the manager of the winning team Mr. J. B. Orr, proposed by Mr. P. J. Grace, with his usual felicity of expression, the Chairman making appropriate reply. The speechmaking then became informal and was participated in by Messrs. Jack Canning, Chris DeMers, T. V. Hartnett, Frank Donnelly, Robertson, Reg Dowden and the press representatives, J. Coffey (News), J. McGrath (Herald), C. T. James (Telegram). The closing toasts were (1) The Umpires, proposed by Mr. J. B. Orr and responded to by Messrs. Chessman and Hartnett, and The Chairman, proposed by Mr. James, and replied to by Mr. Orr. Songs by Messrs. Williams and Irvine were rapturously applauded and endorsed.

The catering was done in that style for which Donovan's is noted. At 11.30 the proceedings terminated, return to the city being made by special train. The Dinner was given by the Trustees of the League, to mark the close of the Baseball season.

Mortgages the Cow.

A cattle buyer, who had been on the Southern Shore, reports that at St. Mary's he visited the premises of one fisherman planter, hearing that he had a cow to sell. On enquiry the butcher learned that the cow had been mortgaged to a shopkeeper in exchange for a barrel of flour and some provisions. A piece of the fact that the fisherman planter had some hundreds of dollars worth of fish in his stage for which he could not sell.

Civic Authorities Will Remove House.

Some time ago a resident of the city named Robins, who with his family were unable to obtain a suitable dwelling, decided to secure a site and build a home. He was not long in selecting a piece of land, which was situated on Battery Road, and forthwith started building operations. He, however, failed to get permission from the City Council, and his house was being erected, when the city officials discovered that the building regulations had been violated and he was brought before the court to answer for his act. The court decided that the laws of the city had been broken, and the owner was ordered to remove the building. This, however, has not been done, and to-day the Civic authorities are moving to have the judgment of the court carried out.

Rats Steal Jewels.

A strange story of the abstraction of a parcel of diamond rings from a safe on the premises of Messrs. H. and A. Schultz, jewellery manufacturers, comes from Melbourne. The mysterious loss of the parcel of rings, valued at eighty-five pounds was duly reported to the C.I.D., and the equally mysterious disappearance of a new apron from the office a few days previously led to a search of a rat hole, from which not only the missing apron (in a gnawed condition), but also several brooch pins were recovered. On the suggestion of a detective the floor boards were raised and the ground beneath dragged with a piece of hoop iron. Pins and other pieces of jewellery were thus brought to light and finally the missing parcel of rings. The rats had apparently removed the package from the open safe and dragged it into their hole.

LONDON GOSSIP.

STILL SHY.
LONDON, Oct. 18th, 1920.
My readers will be interested to hear that the Prince is still shy. He looked as though he had been afraid of the public welcome in London, and he blushed as noticeably as ever when he had to step from his train at Victoria before the privileged crowd. His eyes look a trifle heavy, but that is the only sign of strenuous work "down under," and despite the suns of Australia and the Antilles his cheeks keep their girlish pink and white. In the streets he seemed doubtful whether to acknowledge the cheers by a salute or by waving his hand in the easy Australian manner. Actually he did each in turn. The crowds were as big as those which watched the Victory March last year, and the cheering such as London seldom hears. The Prince, I am told, was delighted at the welcome, despite his nervousness, and London is delighted with the Prince.

AN ITALIAN ROOF GARDEN.
Since the war the managements of several theatres have talked of building roof gardens on American lines. A big scheme was evolved for the early construction of such a garden above the Empire, Leicester Square, but it has not yet materialised. Meanwhile an elaborate Italian roof garden has been built on the top of the Criterion theatre and restaurant in Piccadilly Circus. This will be open to the public in a fortnight. The scene represents Lake Como capped by a realistic blue sky, and the design is apparently founded on the description of the Villa Desti in the work "Famous Villas in Italy." Horseshoe-shaped pergolas surround the dancing floor, each being named after some town in Italy. In the decorative scheme realistic artificial grapes figure largely. There is a small electric light in each grape, and the effect is very pretty. The decorations cost $28,000 to complete.

PUKKA POO.
In East End of London omnibuses strangers are sometimes surprised to see a fellow-passenger studying a curious looking little square of paper with hieroglyphics in green and red spots all over the paper. "Bolshevik banknotes" is the usual guess of the stranger, but the bus conductor will set him right. They are the coupons of the most popular Chinese gambling game in the East End, known as "Pukka poo," whose chief clients consists of dockers and their wives and young people of both sexes in all sorts of trades. In the last three or four months this game has spread rapidly and is not now confined to the East End. The system of the competition is a slip of paper with printed Chinese characters representing numbers, and the task of the gambler is to cross out certain of the figures, and if these tally with the coupon held by the Chinaman who is getting up the competition the successful competitor secures the first prize of $200. There are other prizes for the nearest solutions. Drawings at the pukka poo shop take place every hour, like races over a limited period. Every district in the East End has its rumors of a resident winning the $200 prize, but these lucky people are never run to earth. Meantime the police, long quite supine in the matter, have been very active in stopping the gamble. A large Chinese laundry was recently raided and has been compelled to close its doors. This caused an alarm among the Chinese and coupons have become more difficult to obtain, but they are still a fairly common sight in the East End.

THE MAGIC GLAND.
The London Medical Exhibition appears to the layman to be little more than an elaborate chemist's shop, with surgical instruments and dental appliances also on view. There are, however, interesting facts to be learned in a tour of the stands, with their rows and rows of bottles and jars containing mysterious compounds. If one is to believe half of what the valuable attendants say there is assembled in the Central Hall, Westminster, a collection of specifics for every known and unknown ill. Glandular preparations are prominent, and their properties, as described by the salesmen, open up tremendous possibilities. For instance, one particular kind of tabloid, if judiciously administered, may revolutionise fowl-pocking and banish for ever the scraggy Christmas turkey. It is claimed for this particular preparation that it is capable of causing tows to grow to double their normal size. In these days of high cost of living giant tows raised at little extra cost might go some distance towards bringing down prices, for the well-known economic law which says that greater output means cheaper commodities would operate.

X-RAYS IN INDUSTRY.
Much may also be learned at the exhibition of the wonderful advances made in the use of X-rays. A powerful instrument—entirely English made, and the only one in the country—is capable of taking an X-ray photograph of the thickest trunk in a three-hundredth part of a second. It takes the heart absolutely still. But the X-ray has been brought into use for purposes other than photographing the human body. It was employed effectively during the war for the examination of metals, and many faults were revealed at early stages of manufacture and much money saved in consequence. In industry the employment of X-ray is daily becoming more general. At a factory in America the moth trouble has been eradicated by the use of the rays, which kill the eggs. For examination purposes the rays are applied to such articles as golf balls and boots, while even cigars benefit by treatment. There is a microbe which inhabits the tobacco leaf and is capable of ruining a good cigar, but a course of the rays puts an end to its operations without affecting the flavor of the "smoke." The X-rays are also effective in sterilising food, and are employed chiefly in dealing with tinned meat. In regard to milk, I am informed there is a further field for usefulness. In this connection advantage is claimed for "X-raying" over sterilisation, which destroys certain properties of the milk, and chilling, which only stuns the microbes, the latter becoming active again once the temperature of the liquid is raised. "X-rays," said an expert on their uses, "wipe the microbes out altogether, and do not alter the character of the milk."

A DISTINGUISHED PUBLISHER.
An unusual and interesting personality has passed out of London life by the sudden death of William Heinemann. Many people owe their introduction to the modern foreign masters to this publisher, and everyone who cares what he reads owes something. Personally I remember with gratitude the yellow volumes of Constance Garnett's translation of Turgenieff. He issued many books on art and artists, finely produced, and it was he who published the "Beggars' Calendar," which was so notable an event in the art movement of the nineties. The little windmill design that was the symbol of the firm was the work of William Nicholson, one of the "Beggars' staffs." He published several of Max Beerholm's books at a time when their publication required faith as well as enterprise. Courage, indeed, was characteristic of his whole publishing career. He had a fair for new authors of a fresh turn of mind, and he thought that the public could stand a fair amount of good art and literature. He published also a number of advanced political works which would probably have astonished his fellow members of the Conservative Club if they had ever heard of them. He wrote several plays himself, but none of them has lived into success.

DANCING "BLACKINGS."
The dancing season opens in earnest this week at most of the big hotels. A Charing Cross Road agent tells me that practically every room which is big enough to accommodate over twenty couples has been booked for dances, and generally by those who are giving lessons there during the day. Several instructors are complaining that their competitors are running "blackleg dances," namely, dances which are not run on a paying basis. In one case a well-known dancer is making no charge for her room, a "jazz" drummer is giving his services free, and another dancer is organizing the dances without payment. In this way they can run dances which act as advertisements for their lessons at a price which the promoter, paying for a room and drummer, cannot hope to equal. There is, however, no dancing instructors' trade union.

To-Night's Lantern Lecture.
At the Canon Wood Hall this evening commencing at 8 o'clock lantern lecture entitled "Missionary Scenes in many lands" will be given. This will be interesting and instructive to all who are concerned about the development of Missionary Work. A unique feature will be the use of a lantern which can perfectly reproduce on a screen pictures from cards, magazines, etc., and the audience is therefore assured of a view of pictures which have never been screened before. An admission fee of twenty cents will be charged.

Warning to Mariners.
While on the voyage from St. John's to the port of North Sydney Wednesday night, says the North Sydney Herald of Oct. 29, Capt. Murley, commander of the steamer Sable I, ran close to an iceberg which loomed up fully one hundred feet out of the water. The stranger was sighted 55 miles west of Cape Race, right in the track of steamers going or coming from St. John's, and is a menace to navigation, especially during a fog or on a dark night. The Sable I, passed within a hundred yards of this berg, and the passengers and crew had the novel experience of having a good view of it.

Cooped In a Cabin

By P. O'D.

(In Saturday Night—Toronto.)
 A cabin on shipboard is a sort of cubby-hole with shelves. If the untravelled reader should wish to capture the sensation of sleeping in one, we can only suggest that he should climb up with the preserves in the pantry during an earthquake.
 Ours is an inside cabin for four. Fortunately, there are only three of us in it. If the fourth man were to come along, he would have to dress and undress out in the corridor. He might even have to sleep out there. We have been using his bunk as a receptacle for everything the three of us take out of our steamer trunks and suit cases. It is very convenient—or would be if the stuff didn't tumble off every time the ship rolls. As it is, we spend most of our time staggering about knee-deep in collars and trousers and pairs of suspenders and toilet articles.
 Of course, there are receptacles provided in the cabin for such things. There is a neat little cupboard about the right size of a layette—that, we believe, is the technical term for the trousseau of a child of two months. In addition there are four tiny drawers, one for each of the inmates. We might be able to keep our personal jewelry in ours, if we didn't wear it all on our wrist in a strap. It might also be very handy for spare car tickets, but naturally one has used them all getting down to the boat.
 So far as we can figure the thing out, the best system of disposing of temporary belongings is to throw them on the other fellow's bed. Then he tosses them to the floor, and in this way a very pleasing spirit of camaraderie is built up.
 But it is in the morning when you get up and start in to wash that all the ingenuity and heartlessness of shipbuilders is revealed. These clever gentlemen have invented a sort of folding basin which tips up into the wall. Theoretically, it is an admirable contrivance. Practically, it is a miserable failure. It holds about a tea-cup of water, and is so close to the wall that the only part of you that can be washed without slopping the water all over the floor is the upper part of the forehead. And to do even that you are in constant danger of bashing your head against the woodwork every time the ship lurches. Already we have a set of bumps on our forehead that would indicate the possession of extraordinary genius if they were permanent. And probably they will become permanent by dint of repeated concussion—permanent and purple.
 The floor space is nicely designed so that only one human being of ordinary stature can stand on it and do anything to himself. But such is the unshakable nature of human optimism that there are always at least two of us trying to shave and wash at the same time. Luckily, we all use safety razors. If we didn't, heaven only knows what horrible tragedy would occur. It has been blowing hard the last couple of days, and every few minutes we are brought up in one another's arms. Shaving under such circumstances becomes an acrobatic performance of a highly complicated nature. In the course of which we have shaved almost every part of our head except our chin. Inadvertently we have done a little impromptu shaving on our cabin companions, and they have rendered us the same service—yesterday one of them nearly removed our right ear.
 We did not begin this article, however, with any idea of harrowing the reader's soul with an account of the horrors of ocean travel. If the reader has been there himself, the reader doesn't need to be told. If the reader hasn't, nothing that we could say would give him any adequate notion of the situation.

 Our real idea was to describe the company in our cabin—our stable-mates, so to speak. We are not doing this in any spirit of vindictiveness or revenge. In the first place, they will never see this account, and in the second we are not that kind of fellow. But we are a chronic and incorrigible psychologist, and this is the first time we have ever lived in a tin with a couple of other sardines.
 One of the gentlemen—naturally they are both of the sterner sex—one of the gentlemen, we repeat, who have been washing and shaving out of the same tea-cup with us for the past four days, is a youthful novelist of budding distinction. He wears silk dressing gowns and is prodigal of epigrams. He watches us with a cool and disconcerting eye—possibly he will figure as a comic butler in his new novel—and he has a most embarrassing habit of making notes when we say anything particularly silly. We would give anything to read the notes, but naturally our sense of honor is of a singularly exalted and fastidious type. Besides, he keeps them locked up in his writing case when he isn't carrying them in his pocket.
 Intimate association with a man of his type and his intellectual attainments is naturally a very great privilege, and we are doing our best to become as intimate with him as possible. Only yesterday morning we pitched one another clear across the cabin into the opposite bunk, when a more than usually large and vigorous wave caught the ship while we were engaged in our matutinal ablutions. It is only fair to him to state that he displayed, when he got his breath, a command of language which promises greatly for his future career.
 We are conscious, however, of a certain sense of strain. His style of conversation is one that is difficult to live up to. You see, he has discovered that we have spent a certain number of years as a book-reviewer, and he is fond of putting us over the literary jumps. So far we cannot say that we have performed with much credit to ourselves.
 "Who was it that said the protagonist of Balzac's novels was the twenty-franc piece?" he asked us the other morning while we sat on the edge of our bunk waiting for the roll of the boat to throw us into our trousers.
 Men who ask questions like that in the morning seem destined to die young and unloved. We didn't care a darn who made the remark originally, and we didn't see why anyone else should care. It seemed a very poor joke to make on poor old Balzac. And what's a protagonist anyway?
 "What's that got to do with you getting ready for breakfast?" we countered in the way of a wife with her husband.
 "Oh, nothing, dear old bean," he assured us. "But I was thinking of making a summary of Joseph Conrad in a similar style. What would you say was the protagonist of Conrad's novels?"
 Naturally we had no intention of helping him with his epigrams—we have trouble enough with the simple ones we make for ourselves. But we were conscious of a steady flow of aimless profanity.
 Last night we got in a bit late. We felt obliged to keep an eye on the ship's progress in the moonlight—a young lady also condescended to assist in the work. When we got in our friend, the novelist, was reclining gracefully on one elbow in his upper berth, smoking a large pipe and reading with an air of contempt John Galsworthy's last book—these rival artists do certainly love one another.
 "Ha, ha!" he said to us in his best satirical style. "You have been out listening to the sirens, my boy—very dangerous in the moonlight, old thing, very dangerous!"

Now if there is any form of address which gets on our nerves, it is to be called an "old bean" or an "old thing." As the years go on we even hate to be called "old boy"—it begins to sound too descriptive. Besides, we hadn't been listening to the sirens. We had been trying to get the sirens to listen to us. So we just told him brutally it was none of his business. But he paid no attention to our petulance—he was in travail with another epigram.
 "I have often wondered," he said, "if women realize that we kiss them only when they are not sufficiently interesting to talk to."

Think of rooming with a fellow who talks like that under the influence of a night-cap! Think also of a man who knows as little as that about kissing! Fortunately, we are receiving considerable moral support from the third inmate of the cabin. At first we frankly despised of him. He is a mild little man with an extraordinarily propitiating manner. For the first couple of days we never saw him except in vague outline when he was coiled up under the bed-clothes in his berth. When we were there, he was always asleep—in fact, our talented fellow-traveller promptly christened him "the Dormouse," inspired, we presume, by recollections of "Alice in Wonderland."

The "Dormouse's" manner is always nervously apologetic, even with us, though we are not a man of dominating personality in any sense. He slipped into the cabin the other afternoon while we were taking a nap.

"Ho, hee-hee me, sir," he said in the Cockney language, "Hi was just wantin' my coat, if you don't mind, sir."

With magnanimity we assured him that we didn't mind, and that he could come in and get his coat any time.

"Thank you, sir," and then in his nervous anxiety not to be in the way, he sized his garment and ran, leaving the door open.

"Oh, Mr. Dormouse—" we called and stopped in confusion. That is the worst of those infernal nicknames. Luckily he didn't get the application.

"Yes, yes, the door, sir," he said, and hurried back to latch it.

The "Dormouse" is the sort of person that it is very difficult to treat otherwise than with marked condescension—his manner invites it. On the few occasions when we all happen to be in the cabin together, the novelist bathes him in a flow of airy periphrase which leaves him vaguely uncomfortable but otherwise as unaffected as a doormat by the music of a hurdy-hurdy.

For the first few days we paid no attention to the "Dormouse." Personally, we have accepted him as an unobtrusive feature of the furnishings of the cabin. His one suit case is shoved modestly under his bunk. He makes no attempt to use any of the cabin-hooks or the funny little drawers intended for the Lord only knows what purpose. His one ambition seems to be to get in no man's way, and he achieves it. He is up and dressed long before we dream of turning out, and all we hear of him at night is a pathetic little sigh from behind the curtains when the novelist turns on all the lights and conducts a scintillating monologue for an hour or two before consenting to go to sleep.

But since yesterday morning we have begun to form expectations of the "Dormouse." We happened to roll over and open an eye while he was engaged in dressing himself. Even in the dimness of the cabin—the "Dormouse" would never dream of turning on the lights and disturbing us—we were astonished to notice the breadth of his shoulders and the wiry strength of his arms. It suddenly occurred to us that the "Dormouse," though well on to middle-age, is an unusually husky and active person. And then we recalled having noticed in a vague way the obvious power and weight of his gnarled hands.

We took occasion in the smoking room during the afternoon to enter into conversation with him—the "Dormouse's" one virile characteristic seems to be a fine and whole-hearted appreciation of the brew that has made Scotland famous.

"Been long in Canada?" we asked—it is usually a pretty safe opening.
 "Ten years," he said, "and Hi'm on my way 'ome for a visit."

He was not very communicative till we happened in the course of the very desultory and rather tiresome conversation to say something about a prize-fighter or prize-fighting. Immediately there came into his mild though battered countenance a dull glow indicative of awakened intelligence and interest.

In fact, he opened up with a line of technical language and inside ring history which was very surprising in a man of his lamblike docility.

"You seem to know a lot about the prize-right," we finally said.

He looked around a little nervously and at the same time with a touch of swagger, as though he were half afraid he might be overheard and yet conscious of a certain pride in his secret.

"Why shouldn't Hi know about it?" he asked. "Hi was the Clapham Chicken in my d'y. Hi was."

The "Clapham Chicken"—it meant nothing to our Colonial ears. We recalled, however, the pleasant custom of English ring-followers in dubbing their heroes as though they were exhibits at a poultry show.

"My, my, how interesting," we murmured. "And did you fight many battles?"
 For answer he doubled up his fists and extended them for inspection. They were certainly formidable weapons, gnarled and battered in many a fray. There could be no question that they had hit something or someone, many times and often.
 "How do you like the other chap in the cabin?" we asked, as a sudden thought struck us.
 "Well, he do seem a bit 'aughty," he said, "but he don't annoy me—not yet."
 That "not yet" gave us pause. Was it in reference to the liberties we had taken with his couch as a receptacle for suit cases? Or had the novelist held forth a little too long the other night with the light full on? These were subjects we preferred not to go into. But we are being very considerate just now. If the "Clapham Chicken" should break loose, we prefer that we should be a witness at the inquest rather than Exhibit A.

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER

The mid-week programme at the Casino is a delightful comedy success entitled "Potash and Perlmutter." Briefly, the story deals with the trials and tribulations of those most lovable partners who risk their all to save from a Russian prison a co-religionist who has been falsely accused of bomb-throwing, but who, through their very self-sacrifice, secured the services of the greatest cloak and suit designer of her day, Ruth Goldman, a young woman who is described as having a "business head like Andrew Carnegie and a form like Lillian Russell." For three acts the misfortunes and fortunes of the partners are carried forward amid a perfect gale of laughter, that drowns the occasional tear. Although containing a thousand laughs, the play is full of deepest heart-interest and although he does not appear on the programme, the busiest character of all is little Cupid.
 The first scenes of the piece are laid in the somewhat shabby downtown office and the work-room of the firm, then in their handsome Fifth Avenue establishment, and finally in the home of Abe Potash. This is a story that will appeal to all theatre goers as it is a brimful of action.

British Trawler Slips Off

CONSTERNATION CAUSED AMONG SHIPPING.

Consternation among waterfront habitués prevailed for a time yesterday afternoon, and skippers of the many craft were at their wits end to know the cause of the shriekings of sirens and whistles that continued for nearly half an hour. Finally it was learned that one of the four trawlers that called here earlier in the day had broken away to sea, and in a vain endeavor to induce the skipper to return, orders were given for the rest of the fleet to start their sirens, while the commander of the fleet gave chase on the tender CD-15, but to no avail. The chap kept on his way to Bonnie Scotland.

The four trawlers, which together with many others which were used during the war as drifters, etc., are being sent to Inverness, Scotland, to be commissioned for sale to the British fishing industry, and arrangements have been made to send them across the Atlantic in groups of four or five at a time. They will all take coal at the Bras d'Or Coal Company's pier at the Little Bras d'Or Gut. This first batch encountered all kind of trouble. A couple ran aground on the voyage here from Halifax, while another was lost.

Wednesday evening the four that arrived here yesterday left the Little Bras d'Or Gut on the voyage to Scotland. Late that night one of them had engine trouble while off Cape Breton coast, and the steamer Sable I and other craft coming here wondered at the strange lights of the group of vessels which drifted about waiting repairs on the disabled craft. Finally it was decided to run into North Sydney, and the quartet reached here yesterday, when repairs to the trawler was completed.

As soon as this was accomplished the skipper of the latter decided to beat it out to sea on his way to Inverness, and without sanction of the commander, who is on board the tender CD-15, or without imparting his intention to any of the other skippers, he quietly slipped off.

As soon as the commander noticed the lone trawler speeding away, he caused the rest of the fleet to signal him back by their whistles, at the same time using the siren on the tug Maggie M., and other steamcraft in the harbor. Naturally the commander was wrathful, but as one of the skippers of another trawler said "I canna blame the boob; we're a wee bit o'er don this hangin' aroon sa muck."—North Sydney Herald, Oct. 29.

Mr. Asquith's Isolation.

Unless Mr. Asquith is careful, he will soon find himself, like another distinguished ex-Premier, relegated to the ploughing of a lonely furrow.

His recent pronouncement on Ireland seems to have been made without consultation with even the most devoted of his old colleagues, and it appears to be repudiated by everybody—except Sinn Féin!

Even such a staunch supporter as Lord Grey—who rivals Mr. Asquith himself as a critic of the present administration of Ireland—has hastened to dissociate himself from his former chief, and to declare his conviction that Irish harbours in hostile hands, or in the hands of a weak neutral, would afford naval bases for an attack on the British lines of communication.

And Sir Donald Maclean, Mr. Asquith's chief lieutenant, had already repudiated the ex-Premier's Republican ideas in advance. For at Bonnyrigg on Tuesday last week he was at pains to "make it clear that it is not possible for this country to allow Ireland to become a separate independent Republic. That," he added with emphasis, "is my view and deep conviction."

As we anticipated, Mr. Arthur Griffith, "Acting President of the Irish Republic," has, of course, lost no time in indicating his willingness and that of Mr. DeValera, "the President of the Republic," graciously to consider Mr. Asquith's proposals.

"Once England recognizes our right as a nation to independence," declares Mr. Griffiths, accommodatingly, "Ireland is ready to meet her, and discuss with her as a friend any military, international, or financial points upon which she may be uneasy and to enter into treaties which will secure our mutual interests and protect hers."

It is in this impudent condescension that the mischievous possibilities of Mr. Asquith's proposals are revealed. The proposals are too absurd to commend themselves to any responsible body of opinion in this country. But their reception in Ireland—and by the so-called friends of Ireland here and in America—will sufficiently strengthen Sinn Féin opposition to dispel whatever hopes there may have been of any immediate settlement on constitutional lines.—Glasgow Weekly Herald, Oct. 16.

Rum Smugglers at Bay.

REVOLVER FIGHT OVER LIQUOR WORTH £100,000.

A New York telegram says:—A score of Illinois prohibition agents engaged in a pitched battle in the forests of Northern Wisconsin at midnight with ten rum-runners. Manning four motor-torries, from which they fought with revolvers and rifles, the smugglers sought to save £100,000 worth of liquor they were carrying to lumber camps in the heart of the woods. The driver of the leading van started by a red lantern which was suddenly swung in front of him on the road, while a stern voice in the darkness called upon him to halt in the name of the law.

For reply the driver shouted a curse and put on full speed. A volley from the agents in ambush among the trees on the side of the road brought him pitching to the ground dead, with four bullets in his body. All the men on the trucks promptly returned the fire, but they could not see the agents, and the fight was a short one. Four more smugglers dropped wounded. Then their comrades surrendered. After disarming these and picking up the dead driver, the agents boarded the four vehicles and raced for dear life with their prizes and prisoners for safety. They got away not a moment too soon, for on all sides they could hear the cries and oaths of "Lumber Jacks," who had been roused by the noise of the battle, and came swearing through the woods to the rescue of the smugglers and their precious cargoes, firing as they ran.

Threat to Seize Foreign Vessels.

A New York telegram says—Certain British ships making regular trips here, together with vessels of other nationalities, are under the suspicion of the Internal Revenue authorities. Some of them, it is intimated in Washington, may be seized as examples on the charge of violating the prohibition law by smuggling liquor into this country. It is asserted that the crew of one ship brought over 800 bottles of Scotch whisky which they sold for ten dollars (nominally 40c.) a bottle.

Some foreign shipmasters are alleged to have entered into arrangements with crews by which the latter get only a trifling percentage of their pay, but are allowed to lay in large stocks of liquor to dispose of here at the high figures. The supply of alcoholic drinks along the eastern seaboard is said to have been greatly augmented in this way. However this may be, it is certain that of late there has been a marked recrudescence of intoxication in this city.

Mike Koval Guilty.

There were only four witnesses examined yesterday in the trial at Sydney of Mike Koval, the Russian who was previously acquitted of the charge of murdering Jim Marinelli about a year ago, and who was immediately held on a charge of perjury. The defence offered no evidence and the jury after deliberating 20 minutes brought in a verdict of "guilty." D. A. Cameron, K. C., for the prisoner, asked the court for a "crown case reserved," arguing that the crown officials in the present instance did not prove the record of the trial of Alice Marinelli at which the accused committed the alleged perjury. The matter will be further argued probably to-day, after which Justice Longley will hand out his decision.—North Sydney Herald, Oct. 29.

Borderers Honour Haig.

A STATELY CEREMONY.

Field-Marshal Earl Haig of Bournemouth visited St. Bonaville on Saturday afternoon, and was the central figure in two public ceremonies. In presence of a gathering of several thousand people, he was made the recipient of a lance and pennon, which bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Field-Marshal Earl Haig by men and women of the Scottish Borderland in recognition of his services as Commander-in-Chief of the victorious British forces in France, October, 1920." Later in the afternoon he laid the memorial stone of the cottages at The Green, erected by the Scottish Veterans' Garden City Association. The proceedings were favoured with genial, sunny weather.

The presentation ceremony took place on a raised platform (on the cricket ground), the general public lining the roped enclosure. Pipe-Major Mackie, carrying the pennon, took up his position in front of the platform. He was accompanied by Drum-Major Abbot, bugler to Earl Haig, and two standard bearers—Colour-Sergeants Parkinson and Gunn, from the K.O.S.P. Depot. Standing near by were six Border cornets—Messrs. R. E. Tait, Hawick; W. N. Brown, Galashiels; T. Russell, Melrose; J. B. Stewart, Selkirk; Robert Porteous, Lauder; and Peter Swanson, Jedburgh. The men of the 4th Battalion, K.O.S.B., under Major P. L. P. Laing and Lieutenants Logan and Wilkie, and about 50 ex-Service men, in charge of Lieutenant-Colonel E. D. Jackson, commanding the 4th Battalion, K.O.S.B., were drawn up on the left of the platform. Parties, headed by the Duke of Buccleuch and Earl Haig, proceeded to the platform from the right and the left respectively, the Field-Marshal inspecting on his way the guard of honour and the ex-Service men.

In presenting the lance and pennon, the Duke of Buccleuch said the Borderers had gathered together to do honour to the greatest commander and the most brilliant general that Scotland had ever seen, and to render homage to one who had saved his country.

In reply, Earl Haig said he was indeed very grateful for the signal honour which had been conferred upon him. If the days had gone by when the Scots raided the south with spear and sword across the Border, he hoped he might still carry the pennon in knightly fashion.

Earl Haig brought his campaign in Scotland on behalf of ex-Service men to a close on Monday by a speech at Langholm. The Field-Marshal was accompanied by the Duke of Buccleuch, whose guest he was over the weekend.—Glasgow Weekly Herald, Oct. 15.

Pecksniff Running for President.

It is the fate of Senator Harding, the Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States, to suggest to the outside onlooker certain characters in literature. Until quite lately his tendency toward platitudes, and his seeming desire to agree with everyone, irresistibly suggested Polonius. Lately, since the rupture between the divergent forces of his party compelled him to say something that sounded definite on the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations, the analogy between himself and a literary personage whose characteristics gave a proverbial phrase to the world, becomes apparent. We allude to Mr. Pecksniff. Long before Mr. Pecksniff was immortalized in the pages of "Martin Chuzzlewit" he had been a familiar figure in all walks of life. Since then he has made politics his particular field and can be found in various transformations in almost every land.

Certainly the clear and unctuous voice of Pecksniff rings through the following passage from a statement on the League of Nations, recently issued by Senator Harding at Marion, Indiana:

"I earnestly believe that the conscience, the ready sympathies, the sense of justice and the plain common sense of the United States can be depended upon by the rest of the world, and that it would be stupid as well as unlawful to attempt to chain our sympathies, our sense of justice and our common sense, to tie these strong, fine, dependable qualities to the possibly selfish ambitions and aims of foreign nations or groups of nations whose ideals are not the same as ours, never have been and never will be."

We should hate to think that any preponderant part of the electorate of the United States are imbued with the idea that they are holier, nobler and wiser than other peoples; or that their votes can be caught by such greasy flattery. James Russell once protested against "a certain condescension in foreigners"; but had he lived to this day he would have protested equally strongly against "a certain condescension in Americans."

Those of our neighbors who imagine that the people of other nations cannot rise to the same exalted heights of idealism as they, might well ask themselves how they acquired this baptism of grace. They or their not very remote ancestors all came from other lands. Does this American idealism diffuse itself like a sweet odor from the sacred fount of Tammany Hall, and impart a new spiritual strength to immigrants as they land in New York harbor? Or is it wafted across hill and stream from the office of the Steel Trust of Pittsburgh, where the nomination of Senator Harding was staged last spring? —Saturday Night.

Child Burned to Death.

SHOCKING FATALITY AT SYDNEY MINES.

North Sydney, Oct. 29.—A shocking fatality occurred yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mancini, Atlantic street, Sydney Mines, when their bright little daughter, Geneva, aged four years and a half, was burned to death.

Just how the terrible affair occurred will forever remain a mystery. In the afternoon Mrs. Mancini, accompanied by Geneva and the latter's brother, Armando, started to make some purchases at a store about 100 yards distant from their home, leaving Mr. Mancini alone. While the woman was absent her husband left the house to attend to some business up town, but did not tell his wife he was going.

Half an hour later Mrs. Mancini and her two children started from the store on their way home; but had only proceeded a short distance when she met a neighbor with whom she conversed for twenty minutes or so. During their conversation the two children proceeded to the house, which was only a short distance away.

When Mrs. Mancini was within 100 yards of her home she heard Armando crying, and on quickening her step she rushed into the house. The sight that met her gaze was one that would shock even the strongest, for there on the floor of the dining room was the crisp remains of her eldest daughter that only several minutes previous she listened with pride to her childish voice. Almost every bit of clothing on the child was completely burned, the only part not affected being the feet which were encased in boots. So badly, in fact, were her burns that her features were scarcely recognizable, while around the charred remains were pieces of smouldering clothing and fragments of paper. On top of a table in the centre of the room was little Armando, 3 years old, who was the sole witness of the awful affair.

How the fatality occurred is not known, but it is presumed the little fellow procured some paper, and lighting a torch at the stove in the kitchen ignited the pile of paper in the dining room, and in her endeavors to extinguish it, Geneva's clothing caught fire with such dreadful effects. The parents are distracted over the tragic death of their oldest child, a bright, winsome girl beloved by every person in the neighborhood.

The funeral will take place this afternoon, at North Sydney, at 3 o'clock, interment being in Lave-view cemetery.

International Fishing Knowling's Schooner Race.

Lunenburg Craft Crosses the Line Slightly in Advance of the Esperanto.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 30.—Ghosting easily along in a gentle southwest breeze with every stitch of round white canvas gleaming in the morning sun, the Esperanto and Delawana, representing respectively the American and Canadian fishing fleets, are contending off Halifax harbor this morning for the blue ribbon honors of the north Atlantic. The eyes of most of Halifax and some part of Gloucester and Boston was fastened on the Delawana as she swept grandly across the starting line leading the Esperanto by twenty-five seconds. In a thirteen knot breeze the vessels were logging over nine knots an hour, and it was considered probable that if the wind held they would be able to finish the forty mile course in the time allowance of nine hours.

The course chosen gives the schooners a six and a half mile reach, close-handed from the starting line at Point Pleasant breakwater to the inner automatic buoy, thence over an irregular triangle; a six mile reach to the outer automatic buoy, a nine and a quarter mile run to the bell buoy off Shut In Island, and an eleven mile beat to the inner automatic buoy, and a six and a half mile broad reach back to the starting line.

D. G. S. Tyrrian, by Wireless, off Halifax, N. S., Oct. 30.

Fifteen minutes preparatory gun fired, both schooners on starboard tack with Delawana to windward. Ten minutes later Canadian came about, stood on port tack and turned the starting line. "Marty" Walsh followed thirty seconds later. Both schooners carried mainsail, foresail, jumbo, gib, topsail and main top sail, swinging around the schooner's then head up the harbor toward starting line light in ten knot southwest wind which was freshening. Within two minutes of starting gun both schooners set foretopsails, Delawana crossing starting line to windward and ahead.

Shortly after the start the Esperanto edged up to windward of Delawana, which had set staysail. The schooners were close hauled and beam and beam.

At 9:21 both schooners were off Herring Cove. It was a nip and tuck struggle with the Delawana slightly ahead, though to leeward of Esperanto.

At 9:27 Delawana had worked through Esperanto's lee and was leading by a length and a half. It was in this position that the schooners passed the Tyrrian steaming out to take the official time at the first buoy. The Tyrrian was logging nine knots.

At 9:50 Esperanto was fully a minute ahead of Delawana. Esperanto's headsails seemed to have greater full than the Canadian, and when Captain Himmelman eased his headsail sheets the Delawana seemed to foot faster.

Leaving the inner automatic buoy to port with the Delawana twelve seconds in the lead, the schooners reached for the southeast automatic buoy six and one half miles southeast. One half east the Esperanto immediately began to cut down Delawana's lead and at 9:45 was upwards of a length ahead. The Esperanto demonstrated she was considerably faster than the Delawana off the wind.

The official starting time announced as Delawana 9:00:40, Esperanto 9:01:07.

Rounding second mark three minutes and four seconds ahead of Delawana, the Esperanto took in fore topsail and started to run down the wind of 9 1/4 miles to Shut In Island buoy. The Esperanto had gained three minutes and sixteen seconds on the Delawana on the reach from inner automatic buoy. Delawana took in fore topsail shortly before coming up to mark and on leaving it appeared to be holding her own with Esperanto.

With half the run to Shut In Island buoy completed, it was estimated the Esperanto was just about holding her three-minute lead, with both schooners carrying staysails.

Delawana rounded second mark 10:17:54.

Esperanto rounded southeast automatic second mark at 10:14:50.

At 10:55, with Esperanto half a mile from Shut In Island buoy, Delawana appeared to be gaining slightly on American.

The Esperanto found on sighting the buoy that she had made considerable to leeward of it. "Marty" immediately tightened sheets and the Delawana astern, taking one, followed suit.

Esperanto turned Shut In Island at 11:01:15, the Delawana at 11:07:39. Passing Shut In Island buoy "Marty" brought the Esperanto about on starboard tack and set foretopsail after having started to clear it up. Esperanto's crew handled sails in fine fashion. The Delawana, which lost two minutes and thirty-eight seconds on the run from the outer automatic on top of the 3 minute and sixteen seconds lost on the reach from inner to the outer automatic, split-tacks with the Esperanto on coming up to buoy and continued inshore on port tack.

Esperanto came about on port tack six minutes later and the net result was that Marty had wasted a tack at the start of the eleven miles dead heat to windward to the inner automatic buoy.

Capt. Himmelman brought Delawana about on starboard tack. Esperanto, which continued inshore, appeared to be pointing higher than the Canadian schooner.

At 11:30 Esperanto, which had gone well in on eastern shore, came about which left both schooners on starboards tack heading toward Sambro. When Esperanto squared away on this tack it was seen that she was more than a mile to weather.

Both ships were carrying full sail. Himmelman's mainsail was setting like a charm, but Capt. Marty's headsails appeared to be acting better and his ship continued to point higher. The wind appeared to be lightening a little and both schooners were carrying their lee ralls well clear of the water, though the Delawana was obviously stiffer than her rival.

Official time at Shut In Island buoy: Esperanto 11:11:40; Delawana 11:17:33.

At 11:50 both boats were still heading seawards on the starboard tack and were estimated to be six miles to leeward of the inner automatic buoy. Range finders on the Tyrrian placed Esperanto a mile to windward and Delawana a half mile farther on the tack. There was quite a lop, and the Canadian schooner seemed to ride it more easily than her rival, which appeared to be somewhat down by the head.

At 12:25 the Delawana came about and headed for the inner automatic buoy, estimated to be seven miles to windward. Esperanto still kept on starboard tack but doused her staysail and was expected to come about at any minute, on the long port tack the vessels sailed fully ten miles to sea from the eastern shore, so watchers in the committee boats said. From the steamer Tyrrian, which was adding a straight course for the inner automatic buoy, the schooners were more than hulls down. Esperanto's lowers could be faintly discerned but only the Delawana's uppers are visible. The American vessel appeared to be a mile and a half to weather of Canadian and seemed to be about parallel with her, as the Delawana came about.

By Wireless S.S. Tyrrian, Oct. 30.
Captain Marty had been pointing his ship higher in the wind and at the same time footing faster the wind which had lightened somewhat increased again slightly and both boats seemed to have a better breeze than hitherto.

At one-twenty the schooners were on the port tack, the Esperanto leading by an estimated time of five minutes.
The wind dropped from fourteen miles an hour at the start of the race to eleven miles, increasing again as the vessels began the beat on the fourth leg.

Schooner skippers on the Tyrrian said that according to the present position of the racing craft, neither the Esperanto nor the Delawana could make the inner automatic without a hitch. They not only gave the American a lead of a mile and a half, but also placed her to weather of Canadian, but predicted that the wind will haul more westerly off Chebucto Head and said the schooners must take another starboard tack before they can make the mark.

At 12:30 Esperanto came about and headed for inner automatic six or seven miles to windward. As the schooners were seen lined upon the port tack, for the mark the American vessel was estimated to have established a lead of fully a mile and a half and was still sailing faster.

At 1:15 Esperanto was four miles from inner automatic and two miles ahead of Delawana. Schooners at this time were pointing well to leeward of mark, the wind had lightened and hauled more westerly. Delawana appeared to have a favourable puff and was pointing higher than the American. Indications were that when she came about Himmelman's position would give him a chance to gain some of his lost time.

At 1:30 Esperanto came about going on starboard tack to make a position for final hitch for inner automatic. Delawana, two and one half miles in rear, remained on port tack. The wind continued to lighten and Esperanto was not expected to make the mark until well after two o'clock. It was not anticipated that race would finish until after three o'clock.

At two-fifteen the Esperanto was reported about a quarter of a mile from the inner automatic buoy and considerably to weather of the Delawana. The Delawana was about a mile behind the American. Esperanto and should turn the buoy in five minutes.

Compelled to Marry.

That he was compelled to marry because of threats is the plea of Astor Mabardi, of Mabardi Brothers, importers, who is suing for divorce from Eileen Mabardi, his wife, who came from New York to Denver to marry him.

In a Supreme Court complaint he declares that she compelled him to wed her by threatening to sue him for breach of promise if he failed to do so, and deceived him by pretending an affection that she does not feel for him. Since their wedding, Mabardi asserts, his bride has been a wife in name only. She refuses to live with him as his wife, he says, and he has come to the conclusion that she brought about their marriage "by means of wrongful devices, trickery, force, duress, and deception."

Mabardi corresponded with the defendant when she was in Denver and was in New York by writing many letters "stimulating great love, devotion, and admiration for him," he says, she was led to believe that she "sincerely and honestly was in love." He found out, however, that she and her parents were spying on him, and he broke with her and her parents. On March 20 last she and her mother came to New York from Denver and invited him to call at their hotel. They read to him parts of letters which he had written to the defendant, and informed him that he would be "involved in a lot of uncalculated publicity" that would greatly embarrass him, and that he would have to pay the young woman in the case a large sum of money for breach of promise unless he married her. On April 15, 1920, he was married at the home of his mother, in the presence of members of his family and the mother and aunt of the defendant. After the wedding, he asserts, his bride repudiated him, and ever since has been cold to him.

A Political Duel.

A regular duel is developing between the Prime Minister and Mr. Asquith, and the autumn political interest will centre round the Irish controversy, which shows every sign of being protracted. A certain amount of feeling seems to have been generated on both sides.

There is one point on which the Premier will certainly be pressed to give further information. He has, in previous speeches in the House, hinted darkly of the connection between the Sinn Féin movement and German intrigue, but he went a little further in his Carnarvon speech, and he will undoubtedly be asked to be still more explained both by those who think there are revelations to come which will strengthen the case against Dominion Home Rule and by those who think that the extent of German intrigue has been exaggerated. — Liverpool Weekly Post.

Girl Poses as Man.

Posing as a man, Jacqueline Gay (2), who says she is an Oklahoma Indian girl, obtained a license, married, and lived four years as the husband of another girl. These facts (says a Philadelphia correspondent) were brought to light in a suit brought by Jacqueline against a man whom she alleges sold her narcotics. The woman's story of how she had posed as a man to evade the perils of the Tenderloin, where she worked at a mission, was elicited immediately after the arrest on a charge of drug trafficking. She related that girls whom she had nursed started her in the narcotic habit, but said nothing in her "confession" of being married.

In a further confession she told the police that on September 30, 1916, she obtained a license to marry Winifred M'Yaugh (20), and that the ceremony was performed by the Rev. William B. Chalfont, of Philadelphia. She says she and Winifred kept house together until she was arrested, the police thinking her a man when they saw her receive a packet supposed to contain drugs from Nazerona Cavallirio, whom they also arrested. Jacqueline then issued a statement implicating Feliz Cardullo, a wealthy leader of the Italian colony, as an agent in the drug traffic. Cardullo was arrested, forfeited his bail, but has again reappeared.

Expect to Stage Carpentier and Dempsey in N. Y.

New York.—When and where the Dempsey-Carpentier bout will be held is a matter of conjecture. Judging by what Kearns intimated, both Dempsey and Carpentier are extremely anxious to meet in this city. They appreciate the fact that a bigger gate could be obtained at Madison Square Garden than anywhere else. This will depend entirely upon the way in which the authorities—the New York State Boxing Commission and the license committee—view the bout. If the governing bodies of the sport in this state regard the match favorably there is not the slightest doubt that it will be held here.

Under existing conditions it is probable that the bout will not be held before the first of the year. It is understood that in all of the meetings that have thus far been held only dates between next January and June have been considered. Carpentier wants to return to France for a while and the persons concerned are anxious to give the machinery of the new Walker law ample time in which to thoroughly establish the sport in this state before attempting to stage what undoubtedly will prove the biggest boxing attraction that has ever been held, both from a financial viewpoint and world-wide interest.

The matter of Carpentier's return to this country to prepare for his biggest test has been discussed at some length and it is said that he is anxious to remain with his family in France over Christmas holidays.

This would mean that Carpentier could not return to the United States before January. Since both of the boxers would demand at least a month's training, possibly six weeks, in which to prepare for their meeting in the ring, it is evident that the match could not possibly be held before the middle of February at the earliest. It is certain that there is not the remotest chance of the fight being put on before the first of the year.

Cheap Sugar All Next Year.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(Canadian Press).—That the price of sugar in the United States will be maintained around 12 or 13 cents a pound for the entire year 1921, barring unforeseen complications, was the prediction made yesterday by Stanley Wyckoff, Federal Fair Price Administrator for Indiana. He bases this on his knowledge of conditions in Cuba, backed up by the steps that have been taken by the United States government to prevent high sugar prices because of the aid being given the republic of Cuba in its present financial difficulties.

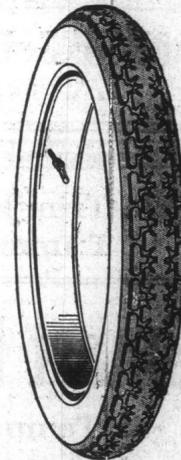

Because it has been definitely determined that a price of seven cents a pound on Cuban sugar will give a fair return to Cuban sugar planters, exclusive of those who have bought plantation land at speculative prices it is the expectation that little, if any, Cuban sugar will be exported in 1921 above the seven cent price.

Admired By His Contemporaries.

Mozart came nearest to the distinction of escaping adverse criticism at the hands of brother composers. He was the chief among Meyerbeer's favorites of the past. Haydn greatly revered him, describing him as "the most extraordinary, original, and comprehensible musical genius ever known in this or any age or nation." "I only wish I could impress upon every friend of mine," he wrote in 1787, "and on great men in particular, the same deep, musical sympathy and profound appreciation which I myself feel for Mozart's inimitable music; then nations would vie with each other to possess such a jewel within their frontiers. It enrages me to think that the unparalleled Mozart is not en-
