

EXCRUCIATING PAINS, CRAMPS

Entirely Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Theresa Ont. "I started with cramps and bearing-down pains at the age of eleven years, and I would get so nervous I could hardly sit in bed, and I had such pains that I would scream, and my mother would call the doctor to give me something to take. At eighteen I married, and I have four healthy children, but I still have pains in my right side. I am a farmer's wife with more work than I am able to do. I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel that it is helping me every day. My sister-in-law, who has been taking your medicine for some time and uses your Sensitive Wash, told me about it and I recommend it now, as I have received great relief from it."—Mrs. Anderson, 107, R. 1, Eberhart, Ont.

Lady Wyvernes Daughter.

CHAPTER XXX. Her heart gave one great leap. What was it? Who had placed it there? She raised it and held it unopened for a few minutes in her hand. An instinctive dread of coming sorrow had seized her. Slowly unfolding it, she saw that it was in her husband's writing, and addressed to Luigi Carnello.

Never was stature more white and still than that hapless girl as she read every word of that fatal, cowardly letter. Every letter seemed to burn itself into her brain as she read. Then she sat as one in a hideous dream. "I will wait here until he comes," she said. "I will confront him with it, and know the truth at last."

There was no tremor on that proud, pale face. She sat as erect and as haughty as a queen, awaiting the approach of the man who had helped to betray her. He came at last, and with a courteous bow and kindly words, Luigi attempted to take her hand. She withdrew it proudly, and a look of fear came into his face as he observed her haughty gesture.

"Luigi Carnello," said she, "stand there, as a criminal before his judge, and answer me. You say you were my husband's friend?"

In the Open Desert.

AN INCIDENT IN THE GREAT ROUND-THE-WORLD AIR FLIGHT

Major Blake, describing some of his adventures on the great attempted Round-the-World Air Flight, writes:—

"On several memorable occasions when we were stranded in the desert with little or no food, Boveril was most valuable."

"I recollect one of the bitterest cold nights in the open desert when our essential machine and ourselves had to land miles away from anywhere. We sat huddled up under the machine unable to sleep through cold, until we drained some petrol out of one of the tanks and heated some of our small supply of water. Then we opened up a Boveril tin, enabling us to thoroughly warm ourselves and get a little sleep."

"I cannot over estimate the value of this food to us. I should be extremely loath to undertake a trip of this nature without this food."

BOVERIL Prevents that Sickening Feeling

"I was," he replied. "Did he write to you occasionally?" she asked.

"Often—almost every day," was the reply.

"Listen to this letter," she said, "and tell me if he wrote it." "Without a tremor or break in her voice, she read coldly and calmly—

"MY DEAR LUIGI.—Come to me this evening about ten; I am in a most serious dilemma. I begin to wish I had never seen the belle of Serranto, as you call her. I must have been made to have shackled myself with a penniless girl. She is beautiful enough, but gold outweighs all beauty. D. M. has smiled upon me. If I had a little more sense, I might have secured the heiress, instead of throwing myself away upon a nobody. I was born under an unlucky star; come and tell me what it is to be done."

Yours ever, RINALDO M.

"Now tell me," she said—"and I charge you to speak truly—was this letter written by Count Montalti to you?"

"It was," he replied. "Then before he died," she continued, "he repented having married me, and regretted that he had secured the heiress of whom he speaks; tell me truly, do not spare me—was it so?"

"Yes," he replied, and she spoke. "How basely he must have deceived me!" she said. "See, this letter is dated three weeks back. I saw him twice after then, and each time he professed greater affection for me. Tell me, Luigi Carnello, you who know his secrets, did he ever love me, or was it all a delusion?"

"He loved you at first," he said; "and then—then I think he grew tired of you, and regretted that he had married for money, as he had always intended to do."

"If he had lived," she said, "what would he have done with me?" "Deserted you, most probably."

"That is enough, sir," she interrupted; "say no more; I understand now that I have been a credulous dupe. Listen to me, even as I tear this infamous letter into shreds, so do I tear the memory of Rinaldo Montalti from my heart. He deceived me; no one ever deceives a Monteleone twice. If he were living I would curse him; as he is dead I give him my undying contempt; and as for you, sir, false friend, false man, never dare to venture into my presence again, never dare to speak of me or to remember that I live."

She waved him imperiously from her presence. "What a scene!" he said slowly to himself when he was quite away, and far upon the road. "She is a perfect 'tragedy queen.' If I had been Mon-talto, I would not have lost her for all the wealth of Venice. She made me feel like a whipped cur. Well, everything has an ending in this world, and I have seen the last of Ines Countess Montalti—nee Monteleone."

There, where she had learned to love, where she had listened to false words, where she had found her brief delusive happiness, Ines knelt, and shed bitter tears, at last. She wept over her young love and faith, betrayed; she wept for the sad fate that seemed to have marked her as its own.

"A lonely, neglected child," she said; "and now a lonely, deceived wife. He never cared for me; he had a passing fancy for what he called my beautiful face. Ah, would that its beauty had been marred and blighted; then for its sake I had never been betrayed—my poor beauty, of which I was so proud!"

All that high, proud spirit had been aroused. She, the last of the Monteleones, of high lineage and stainless race, had been duped and laughed at! The man who declared he could not love without her had grown tired of her in a few weeks, and wished he had never seen her.

"If he were living," she cried again, "I would curse him—dead, I loathe his memory and his name!"

"Then, for the first time, she saw the extent of her folly and her sin. What right had she, a young girl, trusted by her guardian, to meet the stranger as she had done? What inconceivable folly and madness possessed her that she could yield to his wish for a private marriage! Hot crimson flushes dyed her face with shame as she saw the plain truth in his hideous form before her. She had disgraced her proud race; she had acted foolishly and sinfully. He might well despise and tire of her. There was no mutual love near her now to gloss over the truth with sweet, honeyed words. Her conscience, for the first time, seemed awakened to the wrong she had done.

"I am glad he is dead!" she cried; "he was wiser and older than I. He knew better, and he deceived me. I am glad he is dead, for there is no one now to remind me of my folly. No one will ever know my shameful secret, and I—I will begin life again."

"You have soon tired of your fancy for black Ines," said Madame Monteleone, with a smile, as the young girl entered the room the morning after the finding of the letter.

"One tires of all fancies in time," she replied, drearily.

She bore her pain bravely, but she smarted under the knowledge that she had given her love to one who was unworthy of it.

"A child would not have been deceived so easily as I was," she thought, and she despised herself when she remembered the powerful influence which a few flattering words had had over her. "I was young, and so lonely," she would say, as though pleading to her own heart for pardon and excuse, and in these words lay the explanation of her folly. Had she been less lonely, had she seen more of her fellow-creatures, had she been allowed some slight amusements suitable to her age, she would never have gazed to meet Rinaldo. Had she met him out in the world, where she could have compared him with other men, she would never have loved the false Italian.

PIMPLES ON HEAD AND NECK

Small and Formed Sore Eruptions, Skin Sore and Red, Cuticura Heals.

"Pimples broke out on the back of my head and neck. At first the pimples were small and then ran into each other and formed sore eruptions about the size of a ten-cent piece. The skin was sore and red and itched a great deal, causing me to scratch. I had the trouble about six months before I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using three cakes of Soap and three boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) J. A. Macdonald, Gifford, Quebec.

SIDETALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

HUSBANDS AND ELASTIC BANDS. If you do not want to make an idea take hold upon a person it is not a good thing to suggest it to that person constantly. And yet a great many women do just that. Here is the sort of thing I mean.

In one of Margaret Deland's beautiful stories one of her characters says: "I remember when my first baby was coming I was very forlorn and I couldn't do anything or go anywhere, and Henry stayed at home with me like a saint. I told father that I had told Henry it was hard on him to sit at home with a sticky wife. And father said, 'If you tell him so often enough he'll agree with you.'"

"I Can See You Are."

There is a word which the psychologists use a great deal lately—the word suggestibility. It means a person's capacity for being influenced by suggestions. Many people have this capacity in a very high degree. They are the people who cannot read a patent medicine ad without fancying that they have all the symptoms. The patent medicine maker knows about this tendency and deliberately makes use of it. He means to plant ideas in their minds.

But the woman who says: "I don't believe you love me as much as you used to," I suppose I am getting old and unattractive, or "I wish I were clever like Mrs. B. and understood all about politics and economics, but you know I was a silly little thing when you married me," or "You have a good enough time when there's anyone else around but when you're with me you seem bored. I can see you're getting tired of me," certainly doesn't want to plant the ideas she suggests.

Wants Him to Say It. What she really wants is a denial from her John or Henry. She wants him to say that he loves her more than ever, or that he likes her much better than if she took an intelligent interest in affairs of the day, or that he never likes to see a new face and would rather live on a desert island with her than have all the rest of the women in the world at his command.

Maybe he makes those denials a hundred times. Then maybe some terrible day comes when he fails to make them, and the poor, foolish woman gets a cruel disappointment.

But even when he does deny the idea most strenuously, it probably has some effect upon his subconscious mind. You may stretch out an elastic band a hundred times and it may snap back every time, but each time is taking from its elasticity and bringing nearer the time when it will lose its comeback—or perhaps break.

Ready to Pity Ourselves. It is a splendid thing to know one's weaknesses and faults, to admit them when one is accused of them and make known one's determination to do better. But it is just as well not to force them on one's husband's attention or to suggest to him reasons for being dissatisfied.

Several times I have caught myself indulging in self-pity because someone had suggested to me that I deserved sympathy for something that up to that time, I had never realized was a burden. Surely you have had that same experience. That's what suggestibility can do. Look out for it.

Ford's Candidacy Commands Attention.

Washington, June 9. (By Canadian Press.)—Developments with respect to Henry Ford as a presidential possibility continue to command attention among the leaders of both political parties. Mr. Ford's candidacy for a candidate, but the fact remains his friends are active and that this activity has reached a stage where it is giving concern to many democratic chiefs and is also giving warning to republican leaders. Democratic politicians who have been in the South recently have come to Washington in the last few days declaring that Ford will get the delegates of several Southern States, that most of the Southern delegates will be either for Ford or McAdoo, and that Senator Underwood, outside of Alabama, will have little backing from the South. It is declared that practically every Southern delegation will have some Ford delegates. Heretofore, it has been generally supposed that McAdoo and Underwood would get the Southern delegates. The recent visit of Mr. McAdoo here has stirred up much democratic political gossip and one phase of it is the fact that an increasing number of democratic leaders are showing friendliness to Ford. They are asserting that Ford would command a big vote and make a strong run at the polls. Republican leaders, though insisting Mr. Harding will be re-nominated and re-elected, admit that the nomination of Henry Ford would create a highly uncertain situation, and that it is impossible to gauge his power as a vote-getter. One theory is that Ford would be easily vanquished and another that the more Ford was attacked by his opponents, the stronger he would become with the great body of voters.

GETTING EYEN. Tobias Ganling came around and gathered up my cow, and took her to the village pound, where she is in durance now. As soon as I can raise the price I'll go and pay her this, for every hour I miss her, twice that good old cow of mine. Old Ganling's had it in for me, he's hated me with vim, since I chopped down a banyan tree he said belonged to him. He's waited long to even up, and see his threats come true, and make me drink the bitter cup that holds a wormwood brew. And shall I go with bitter words and roast him for his trick, with language that would scare the birds and make my pastor sick? Oh, shall I, an avenger dread, tramp down on Ganling's toes, and punch his weather-beaten head, and tweak his ears and nose? Such vengeance always is a fluke; when someone scars my hide, I find the heaviest rebuke is kindness well applied. So I'll approach this Ganling with kindly gulp and jest, and treat him, so absurdly right, and treat him, so absurdly right, remorse, will fill his breast, I'll look for chances to believe the lies he may endure, I'll cheer him when he's prone to grieve, when sick I'll bring a cure. With weary hands he'll brush the sweat from his repentant brow, recalling with a wild regret the day he killed my cow.

Marvels of the Deep.

TORCH FISH IS QUEEREST OF THE SEA CREATURES.

Of all the luminous varieties of fish the torch fish is one of the queerest, says a writer in Popular Science Magazine, in an interesting article on "Strange Water Creatures." Upon its nose, and erect upon a short stem, is a small organ which is phosphorescent.

"This fish has the power to make it glow at will. A long and slender filament swings from beneath its lower jaws tutted at the free end, and the torch fish moves this about like a little bait. The small fish are attracted by the light of the torch, and they dart about unhesitatingly in the region of their allures'—singing to devour them. Of the ordinary lantern fishes little can be said to explain their luminous organs and their functions. So little is known of the conditions to which the deep-sea species are subjected that the real function of their lanterns can only be surmised. It may be certainly said, however, that these lights are an asset in procuring food, because they aid the fish to find its way about in the murky depths.

"The blind fishes represent a very odd division of the water's inhabitants. This group of fishes is a very ancient one, for it has taken many generations of them to have evolved to the point where their eyes atrophied to nothing. When the fish first swam inadvertently into the subterranean caverns, they proceeded into total darkness, where their eyes became useless. Among those individual fish capable of carrying on their lives under such untoward conditions many generations found less and less use for their eyes, which became functionless, and were finally eliminated.

"On the other hand, many fishes which live in the deep seas where it is for ever dim, have made extra effort to rub the light; and in these cases the eyes have become larger and larger through the succeeding generations. This is a striking example of the result of an effort to maintain the organ of sight at any expense, and is in direct contrast with the lack of effort of the blind fish, which did not fight the gradual loss of its eyes, and consequently completely sacrificed them.

"In speaking of the eyes of fish, an extraordinary fact about the common plaice flounder comes to light.

Almost everywhere in Mongolia we meet with either single pairs or whole hocks of the grayish-yellow partridge, in an interesting article on "Partridge Swallows." Upon its nose, and erect upon a short stem, is a small organ which is phosphorescent.

Famous Abdications.

DIOCLETIAN, WHO GREW CABAGES; CHARLES V, WHO ENTERED A MONASTERY.
Abduction has been the refuge of the weak and the fate of the strong. Yet in the course of 2,000 years twice at least have powerful Emperors, of their own choice and unlike Napoleon or James II, foregone power for privacy, the Roman Emperor Diocletian in the fourth century and the Holy Roman Emperor Charles V. in the sixteenth. Their abdications form one of the most remarkable parallels in the history of kings.

Son of a Slave.
In the third century the Roman Empire stretched from the Grampians to the Sahara, and from the Atlantic to the sands of Mesopotamia; to govern these vast dominions the Roman legions chose Diocletian, the son of a slave.

At the Height of His Success.
In Britain, France, and Africa revolts were suppressed by the wise head of Diocletian and the firm hand of his lieutenants; in Mesopotamia, that bugbear which for centuries had cost the Romans so much blood and treasure and which successive Emperors could never make up their minds either to conquer or to leave, Diocletian patched up a peace with the Kurds and Persians near Mosul in 297. In 302 and 303 Diocletian and his principal Imperial colleague Maximian celebrated at Rome a magnificent triumph; it was the last Eternal City ever beheld.

Oldest Description of Saviour.
BY PREDECESSOR OF PONTIUS PILATE DISCOVERED.
(From The World's Bureau)
PARIS, May 9.—The oldest description of Jesus Christ has, according to the Math. Just been discovered in an old Latin text in the Vatican library which has been revised under the supervision of Pope Pius XI. It is a popular report under Pro-Consul Publius Lentulus, who, it is stated, was the predecessor of Pontius Pilate. The description of Jesus Christ is as follows:

THE OFFICIAL COUNT.
PORT ARTHUR, June 11.—The final vote in the Presbyterian General Assembly on Church Union, taken on the report of the Union Committee which involves immediate steps to bring about union with the Methodist and Congregational Churches, was, according to the official count 426 to 134 in favor of union. Rev. D. R. Drummond's amendment to the report asking delay, was voted down 415 to 137.

he recognized the right of a nation to its own form of religion, and twice before he died he saw the champions of St. Denis and St. Peter, of Luther and Mohammed, all leagued in unholy alliance against his own most catholic majesty. He abdicated the crowns of Empire, a sick and disappointed king, and escorted by the British Navy, sailed on September 13th, 1556, from Flushing to fulfil in Spain a desire cherished for twenty years of entering a monastery.

Gluttony and Gout.
He finally took up his abode at the Hieronymite Monastery of Yuste in the Estremadura, famous for the sanctity of Fra Juan de Xeres, who, in his last sickness, was attended by the Eleven Thousand Virgins. At Yuste he spent two years in the enjoyment of religious ceremonies and unexemplified gluttony. He suffered from gout, consequent upon his surfeits of sardine omelettes, iced beer, and what-nots.

Feeling the approach of death, this gloomy monarch ordered the monks of Yuste to rehearse the celebration of his own obsequies. The high altar, the catafalque, the whole church glittered with wax lights; the gentlemen of the house attended in deep mourning. Charles himself during the solemn mass for the dead gave up his black taper to the priest, in token of yielding up his soul to His Maker.

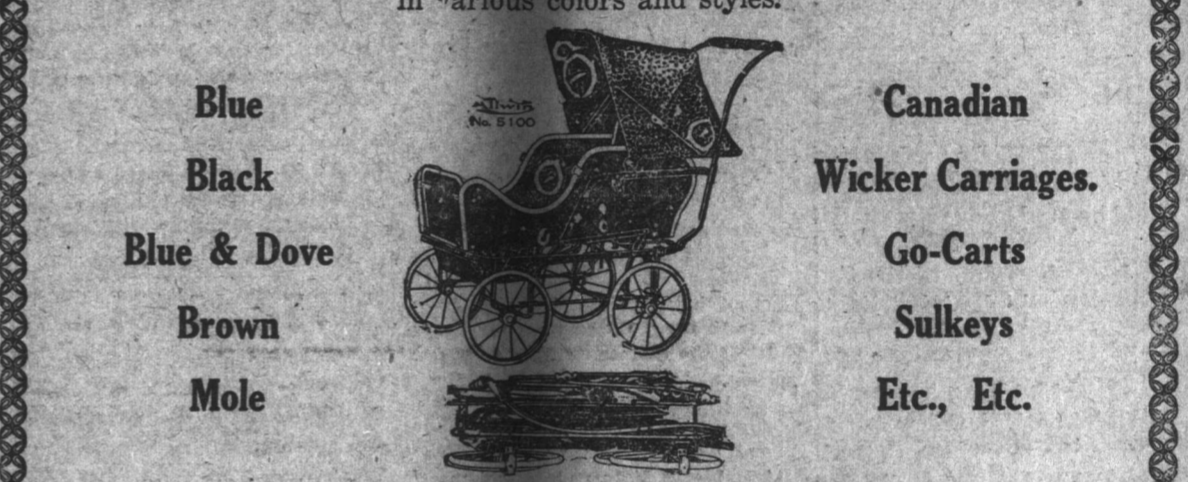

A few days later the monks repeated the ceremony in earnest over the corpse of this strange man. He lies buried in the Pantheon near Madrid. —John O'London's Weekly.

Protection Against Fires.

The protection of property in St. John's against fire has been so much increased during the past ten years chiefly by the utilization of new methods and new apparatus in fire fighting that it looks as though the city has come to the point that a seriously destructive fire is not possible. The use of a pumping truck whereby the salt water of the harbor as well as the fresh water in the mains can be utilized will afford additional protection against serious fires on Water Street, and we have no doubt will before long result in a reduction of premiums now paid for fire risks there.

will be compelled to use it, if they do not do so willingly, as has been so often the case in the past when fish houses were erected. It is also to be desired that the market be kept clean. Now that the Council is going to do this work, they should erect a model market place, and even though there is only one in the city, it will no doubt by and bye result in the erection of others. If the first one is perfect all the others will have to conform to the perfection of the first model one which we hope will now be erected. The practice of laying out fresh fish for sale near the curb on Water Street in dirty boxes, on boards and oars should be forbidden by law when the market houses are erected, and cleanliness should be insisted on by the City Council. Strangers visiting our city who have been accustomed to the clean markets where fish is exhibited for sale in other countries must be shocked to see the manner and the places in which our fishermen display their fresh cod, salmon and herring. Reform is badly needed in this matter and we trust that the new fish market which the City Council is about to establish in Steer's Cove will be a model for all others and that before long similar markets will be erected in the other coves east of this where fishermen usually come to dispose of their daily catch of fish.

Free Codfish Entry in Italy.

A cablegram was received yesterday from Mr. Bernard at Naples saying that "Free entry of all codfish will be allowed in Italy from to-day, June 10th." This is good news for Newfoundland and comes like a ray of sunshine after a long spurt of murky weather. The duty heretofore paid on our fish going into that country was five lire per 100 kilograms. The gold lire is 9 1/2 pence, which is 19 cents. This means 95 cents per 100 kilos, or 220 lbs. and comes to 47 1/2 cents per our quintal of 112 lbs. During the war and since gold is practically unobtainable in Italy and all importers have had to pay duties in paper lire, which has depreciated to about one-fifth of the gold standard. This means that instead of importers having to pay about 95 cents per quintal they had to pay $2.00 per quintal. This two dollars is the duty that has been remitted and the consumption of codfish in Italy ought now to increase.

Despicable Conduct.

It is time some urgent steps were made to catch the culprits who invade the various cemeteries at this season of the year and loot the graves. Last week some person or persons unknown, visited the Belvedere Cemetery and plucked flowers and roots, which at a considerable time and expense were planted by friends of the deceased in order to beautify their loved ones' graves. Such callous conduct deserves the severest punishment that can lawfully be accorded the perpetrators. Not a few well known citizens have been discouraged by the wanton and despicable actions of those grave thieves and henceforth will abstain from bringing flowers to the cemetery, but will confine their attentions to keeping their plots sodded only. It is a pity that these soulless looters cannot be caught and an example that should serve as a fitting warning made of them with the view of preventing unwarranted desecration of the resting places of loved ones.

An Ideal Sports Ground.

That section of Banerman Park running from the gates on Banerman Road across to Rennie's Mill Road to Circular Road would make an ideal sports ground, is the general opinion of the great majority of footballers, baseballers, long and short distance runners and other identified with outdoor sports in St. John's. Now that the New Era Grounds are lost to the public it is generally acceptable by sports and athletes in general that this portion of Banerman Park, which seems to be of no value, would be the best location possible. This section area would provide a running track and give a required portion for grand stands, seats, football, baseball, tennis and suitable dressing rooms. We leave it for our readers to give an opinion on the matter.

New Fish Market.

The City Council is about to erect a fresh fish market in Steer's Cove for the convenience of the fishermen and the public. This is very necessary, and it is to be hoped that when it is completed the fishermen

McMurdo's Store News.

CARE OF THE TEETH. Dental authorities, almost the world over, are seeking to bring about a new Dental Era. Few people keep their teeth free from film, few escape decay. Probably millions of people are affected by diseases local or internal which tooth trouble breed. So in modern tooth paste dental science aims to combat this film, to destroy it or digest it, and in the tooth brush, science aims at effective film removal. Leading Dental authorities have now agreed that Peppodent Tooth Paste and the Decoater Tooth Brush are the best means for destroying this film. Peppodent Tooth Paste contains no soap, no chalk, no gum, nothing to harden film, nothing to scratch enamel, nothing which isn't helpful. The Decoater Tooth Brush massages the gums, penetrates the interstices and cleans the teeth. We are offering this week to introduce this special Tooth Paste, a Tube of Peppodent and Decoater Tooth Brush for $1.20. T. McMURDO & CO., LTD. 1823.

Assistance for Belvedere.

A card party and dance in aid of Belvedere Orphanage takes place at the Star of the Sea Hall to-morrow night. At the present time the Orphanage is in special need of funds, and all those who possibly can should attend to-morrow night's affair.

Danger Spot Near Chainrock.

CAVE-IN CONNECTS WITH SEA. Last evening several young gentlemen taking a stroll out around the Lower Battery found their path cut off by a deep gulch which had recently been formed by a cave-in. The hole made is several yards square and connects with the sea 70 or 80 feet below. The point where the cave-in occurred is about 100 yards outside of Chainrock. The place is very dangerous and should be attended to by the authorities. Going out the Narrows a cave or gulch may be observed in the hill at this point, but nobody seems to know anything about it excepting that it had some connection with the French occupation in bygone years.

Ayre Athletic Garden Party.

ANNUAL EVENT TAKES PLACE ON JULY 10th. The joint committees of the Ayre Athletic Association and the Methodist Orphanage held a meeting in the M.C.L.I. Rooms at the Methodist College Hall last night, to make arrangements for the annual Garden Party. Mr. C. P. Ayre, the President of the Ayre Athletic Association, occupied the chair. It was decided to hold the annual event this year on July 11th, on the Ayre Athletic Field. The various working committees, social, sports and otherwise, were appointed and much business was transacted before the meeting closed. Besides the usual track events, which will be controlled by the Guards' Sports Committee, a special feature of the meet will be a Tennis Tournament. The various committees in charge are now actively engaged making the necessary preparations, and in view of the worthiness of the object, "Help the Orphans," the success of the day can be assured.

The Prime Minister and the Unemployed.

A number of the unemployed held a meeting yesterday afternoon and formed a general committee for the purpose of seeking avenues of employment for the large number of men belonging to the city who have been without work since previous to the election. This morning the committee had an interview with the Prime Minister and from what can be learned they were given a very poor reception. The chairman and other members of the committee state that the language used was insulting to a degree that is really surprising. The delegation later called on the Chief Justice, Sir Wm. Horwood, anticipating that he would be acting Administrator during the absence of his Excellency the Governor. This was found not to be the case, nevertheless the Chief Justice kindly received the men.

Gibbon's Only Love Affair.

FAMOUS HISTORIAN'S POMPOUS LETTERS.

If he had possessed greater enterprise and a warmer heart, Edward Gibbon, the author of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" (which Silas Weir read assiduously to Mr. Boffin), might have married the beautiful lady who was afterwards Mrs. Necker.

Gibbon was born in 1737. He was a sickly boy, and Westminster School was too much for him; but, after two years' work with private tutors, he went to Oxford, where he was converted to Roman Catholicism.

Mlle. Curchod eventually married Jacques Necker, the famous Finance Minister of Louis XVI, who endeavored to stave off the Revolution.

I need not blush at recollecting the object of my choice, and though my love was disappointed of success, I am rather proud that I was once capable of feeling such a pure and exalted sentiment.

The pair met again at Coltaire's house at Perney, and after the meeting Mlle. Curchod wrote: "I do not now threaten you with the anger of Heaven—an expression which escaped me impulsively, but without having the gift of prophecy, I can assure you that you will one day regret the irreparable loss you have suffered in alienating for ever the too tender and the too open heart of S. C."

"The Finest Soul I Know." Here is a pompous letter written by Gibbon from Lausanne: "I have always esteemed you highly, but the happy week which I spent at Crester has given you a prominence in my mind which you had not before."

"I Do Not Despair." Gibbon obviously expected trouble from his father. In a letter dated February 9th, 1768, he writes: "The condition which the noblest principle made you exact, and which the tenderest motive led me to accept with pleasure, to take up my residence in this country—will with difficulty be listened to by my father, whose paternal love and whose ambition for his son will be equally shocked by it."

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

TO GUARD AGAINST FIRES. FREDERICTON, N.B., June 12. Federal authorities have been appealed to to send a detail of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to Northern New Brunswick in an effort to stop the setting of fires along the inter-provincial boundary of New Brunswick and Quebec, by settlers.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE. NEWCASTLE, N.B., June 12. The Presbyterian Church and Manse, Orange Hall and twenty other buildings were destroyed by a fire which swept the settlement of Redbank on the Miramichi River yesterday.

FLOODS TOLL. KANSAS CITY, June 12. Seven dead and many reported missing, thousands homeless and property loss exceeding five million dollars is the known toll of floods which have sent virtually every stream in Kansas and Northern Oklahoma to the highest stage in years.

CHINESE BANDITS RELEASE CAPTIVES. TIAOCHUANG, June 13. Eight captives, the last of the foreigners kidnapped by Chinese bandits and who were held up on the See-Sang Peking express, near Suchow on May sixth and held in the mountain retreat of the outlaws since then, were released today.

CASUALTIES IN RUHR. ROCKLIN CHAUZU, June 12. A French sentry was killed near the railroad station here today and authorities have declared martial law throughout the district of Dusseldorf. Six Germans were killed and three wounded by soldiers in Dortmund on Sunday night, says the official bulletin issued at French headquarters today.

SOVIET NOTE ACCUSES SWISS. BERNE, June 12. The Swiss Government yesterday made public a note from Soviet Russia, dated June 8th, charging Switzerland with moral complicity in the recent assassination at Lausanne of the Soviet envoy Vorovsky.

MOROCCANS HEAVY LOSS. LONDON, June 12. A despatch from Tangier to the Daily Express stated that the British and Spanish forces, after a hard-fought battle at Tizazza, had captured Spanish advance positions at Tizazza. A previous despatch from Madrid announced that seven thousand Moroccans had been routed by Spanish forces with heavy loss and that all was quiet along the Tizazza front.

An Ill-Fated Empress.

The aged ex-Empress of Russia, who has been on a visit to her sister, Queen Alexandra, in London, after an absence of three years, is, perhaps, the most pathetic of any living figure at the present time.

Her life has always been filled with a mixture of romance and tragedy. Married at the early age of nineteen to the subsequent Emperor Alexander III. of Russia, she had previously been betrothed to his older brother, Nicholas, who died of consumption shortly before the date fixed for their marriage.

In 1878 Gibbon made his permanent home in Switzerland, and met Mme. Necker very frequently. In his lonely old age he once more thought of marriage, and there is a story that he not only proposed to Mme. Necker, but also to Lady Elizabeth Foster, who was staying at Lausanne.

Ill-starred late Casarita, differed on almost every possible point, and fell off upon almost every possible occasion to see things from the same angle. The ex-Empress almost instinctively distrusted the pro-German atmosphere with which the younger Empress surrounded herself, and sought to combat this by every means in her power.

Proletarian. The word proletarian comes from the Latin word proles (offspring), and 2,000 years ago was used by the Romans to designate the less substantial and useful members of society, those who had nothing except their labor or workman who lives, as it were, from hand to mouth, and who has no reserve to support him in time of need.

Since the day when the ex-Empress was rescued from her summer home in the Crimea by a British warship and safely transported to England, despite the demands of the revolutionaries for her surrender and return to them, she has lived in almost complete retirement and has busied herself with good works. Her name is almost worshipped in her native city of Copenhagen, where she now has her home, while she still possesses many devoted friends in England, all of whom delight to welcome her in their midst.

This winged messenger, named President Wilson, is the sole survivor of a basket of signal corps pigeons that attempted to carry messages from the "Lost Battalion" to headquarters. For this service the war department has cited it for the Distinguished Service Cross. In action it had its left leg shot away.

Mushrooms at Versailles. Because huge mushrooms of the poisonous type known as Phellium cryptarium have elected to grow on the large wooden beams of the Versailles Chateau it is reported that the building is in danger and immediate repairs must be made if one wing is to be saved. Henceforth all windows are to be kept open for three hours daily in an attempt to exterminate the mushrooms, which it is said, spread with great rapidity and eat their way right through the wood-work. Phellium cryptarium mushrooms, which hate fresh air and sunlight, were recently discovered in an abandoned school house in Biampes where they caused the building to collapse.

Our Montreal Letter.

June 8th.—
 "At last we're off, the boat goes fast. That we are glad, there's no denying. Though shots are fired, they rattle past. From our prison home we are flying."
 So sang two convicts who made their escape here lately from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary under a hail of rifle bullets from the guards, William G. McDonald and John Clark headed not the bullets fired at them, but rowed to freedom across the Black River. They are still at liberty. Both men were serving four years for burglary committed in Montreal over a year ago.
 With a number of other convicts, they were working under guard digging a trench for a water main in the warden's garden. Both crept around to the protection of the adjacent convent wall, and made their way to the river bank, where they jumped into a boat and made off in the direction of Montreal North.
 They were well across the river when they were missed. The guard who was in charge of them was unable to leave his other prisoners and fired a couple of shots at random. Another guard came to his assistance, and Col. Grosjean, warden, was attracted by the shooting. He joined in the fusillade but the pair kept on rowing to the other shore. They were last seen just before 2:30 o'clock as they left the boat.
 McDonald is said to have been a native of Hamilton and Clark of Detroit.
 McDonald was 27 years of age; five feet eight inches tall; weighed 152 pounds; brown hair, eyes and complexion; his number is 8,506; his left small toe is off; there is a scar from an operation on his left side; scar on his left shoulder and left knee and above his right eye. He does not speak French.
 Clark is number 7777 on the Canadian criminal records and is five ft., nine inches tall; weighs 138 pounds; has blue eyes, light hair and complexion; he is 20 years of age; has no identifying marks and speaks a little French.
 Both men were attired in the brown denim uniforms of the penitentiary.
 "Nobody knows the anxious fears. Lest Darling may not weather. The storms of life in after years. Nobody knows, but mother."
 For a large number of mothers in this big growing and dangerous city, "anxious fears" have or play no part in their lives. They never give a thought to "the storms of life in after years," for they have lost control of their children, even at the ages of nine and ten. Sad to relate, nevertheless too true. Street education, bad company and the records of the Juvenile Court—all can tell their tales of the "rising generation" going from the path of rectitude, into the arms of vice. Compulsory education is one of the factors required to stem the increasing evil of delinquent children. Recently a judge gave orders, that all children found wandering around the streets that could not give a satisfactory explanation why they don't attend school, the police officer had the power to arrest them. This is a move in the right direction. The careless parents who encourage the children to go wrong, both by word and example are the ones that the law should severely punish. The schools are fighting a lost cause in dealing with such pupils and parents.

 "Concurring in the views of mental experts versed in their work, I would recommend stricted marriage laws in regard to health and mentality, sterilisation of criminals and defectives, and the establishment of special classes with specially trained teachers, to cope with the question of the backward and indifferent child" stated Dr. G. S. Mundie, head of the Committee for Mental Hygiene in a recent interview.
 The Habit Clinic, of which Dr. Mundie is in charge, deals with problem children referred for treatment by the schools as well as other agencies. Mentioning the case of one boy, Dr. Mundie said: "The boy was attending school, was backward in his studies; an examination showed that he was not mentally deficient. He played truant from school, gradually inducing other boys to do likewise, until finally his mother took him to the Juvenile Court for stealing. Investigation showed that there had not been complete understanding between the boy's parents in regard to his training. On account of his low standing in school he had become discouraged; his work not appealing to his capabilities at all. This boy's problem is still unsolved under the present methods of education.
 "The biggest problem, however, is that of the care of the mentally deficient child. An attempt should be made to educate these children according to their capabilities, so that later on they will become self-supporting citizens, and not cases for our social service agencies. Under the present methods we are trying to educate mentally deficient children in the same way as normal children. Until we have special classes our social agencies will be faced with an impossible problem."
 "Another Habit Clinic case was that of a boy who had been struck on the head with a stick about a year ago and shortly afterwards he had developed epileptic attacks.
 Previous to taking these attacks he had never shown any delinquent signs but after the attacks started he had become a changed boy; not nearly so bright and difficult to handle. Under treatment he has definitely improved his delinquency being more or less the effect of the epilepsy.
 Stressing the need of special treatment for over-nervous children, Dr. Mundie stated that consideration should be given to the proper handling of children who walk in their sleep, have night-mares or show a tendency of over-nervous minds. He further stressed the need of an institution where certain types of delinquents could be specially trained and treated, stating that 70% of the unmarried mothers who applied for assistance were mentally deficient.

 Hall! to our worthy Champions. The most daring ever seen; They're the heroes of the day. The brave "little men in green."
 They went, they played and they conquered. They played three different teams in Winnipeg and won, and then played a combination of stars from the three teams and again came out victorious. They took some awful chances as well as heavy punishment, but they were out for victories and they succeeded. The wonderful stops of their goal-minder Jack Barry, whose father was one of the Star players of the old champion Shamrock team, brought the spectators to their feet on several occasions when at close range, cannon ball shots were let drive at the nets, but Jack said: "They cannot pass now, try again," and Jack stopped them with his lacrosse stick, with his chest, and even his hands. The captain of the team, another Jack, would twist and turn and fight his way amidst heavy checking to the mouth of the net for a sure goal. Captain Egan didn't mind the punishment, and at times when his team would be a goal behind, the fearless captain would take a pass, go into the fray and score five consecutive goals. It was due partly to his brilliant work that the victories were obtained. The Montreal Herald speaking of their return says:

Back from a brilliant invasion of the west, in which their sparkling play did much to revive the waning interest in lacrosse both here and abroad, the Shamrocks returned to Montreal.
 The trip had something of a thrilling finale, as the train bearing the Irish team from Winnipeg was the last to pass through the fire-swept area of White River, and the players reported that the best of the racing forest fire drove the passengers off the observation platform. Dense clouds of smoke rolled over the coaches bearing Shamrocks east, and delayed them to such an extent that they were unable to play the scheduled match in Toronto. They won all four matches in which they engaged in Winnipeg, and were voted winners in praise of their treatment in the western city where they were banqueted by Premier Bracken and presented with the freedom of the city.
 The party included Manager and President, Ed. McCarthy, Jim Barry, Herb Hyland, Larry, Ben and Max Alliman, Jimmy Penny, Wattier, Bill Ellard, Campbell, Butler, Capt. Jack Egan, Paddy Lappin, Ray Holland, Brady, Trainer George Devine and Mascot Leo McCarthy.
 The people wondered and said:—
 "What means that peculiar sky so some awful storm is hand?
 No, it is the forest fire."
 What portrayed a storm was only the reflection in the Heavens of the forest fires raging throughout different parts of the country. A peculiar thing was that in Quebec, Ontario and different parts of the States forest fires were burning fiercely at the same time. In a part of Minnesota, 10,000 acres were burned. In Quebec, the fires are worst in the Laurentian Mountains, Lake Kipawa, Lac Du Moine, near Red River. In Ontario, White River had a very disastrous one. After flames had entered the town from the east side it looked as though the whole place was a mass of blazes and was to become another Halleybury and sid another disaster to the North Country. Every precaution was immediately taken to save the town. It is impossible to picture the feelings of the people all through this distressing day. At times, fear prompted many to leave their homes hurriedly carrying with them valises, trunks and other articles. They landed on the station platform while a train was made up of empty box cars to accommodate the fugitives. Others took their belongings to the railway tracks in expectation to leave town and catch the train. Some were seen burying their valuables in the ground.
 Two engines supplied by the C.P.R. with portable pump attached to the rear kept watering nearby houses in order to check the progress of the flames. In the afternoon it was feared the C.P.R. shops would be destroyed but fire hoses were applied continually to the buildings on the opposite side of the river and thanks to the valiant efforts of fire rangers the building was saved.
 Careless sportsmen, camping in the woods, are blamed for some of the fires.
 "This life is often sad and weary. And oh! our spirits seek for rest; Farewell friends, we are leaving you. To join God in 'The Land of Blest.'"
 The sunset of life came quickly to two of Montreal's famous lawyers in the passing of F. J. Bisailion, K.C., and Victor Geoffrion, K.C., who died within a few hours of each other. Victor Geoffrion who had not been feeling well for some days went to his office as usual and after talking over the death of his friend, F. J. Bisailion, said: "Well, I won't be long after him. I guess I'll be the next." He began to work at his desk, and a few minutes afterwards, one of the office assistants entered his private office and found him dead in his chair. Death came with lightning rapidity.

 Francis Joseph Bisailion, K. C., well-known civil court and corporation lawyer, and prominent in many cases before the Privy Council in England, died at his residence, 448 Sherbrooke Street East.
 Mr. Bisailion was born in Laprairie 72 years ago, but came to Montreal as a youth. He became a member of the bar, of which he has been associated with for more than 50 years. In 1877, he was created a Queen's Councillor by Lord Lansdowne. He was well known in legal circles on both sides of the Atlantic.
 Mr. Bisailion had been ailing for nine or ten days, with congestion of the lungs. The sickness affected his heart and he succumbed. Among close relatives surviving are Mrs. Bisailion, Lieut.-Col. P. R. Bisailion, son, and Mrs. L. G. Belque, daughter-in-law of Senator Belque, daughter.
 Victor Geoffrion of the well known firm of Geoffrion & Geoffrion, was born in the parish of St. Cuthbert, Berthier County, in 1848, and was admitted to the Bar in 1872, thus spending over half a century, at his profession. From 1900 to 1911 he represented Chambly-Norcherries in the Federal Parliament. Both men were of brilliant attainments, great jurists and able debaters and spoke both languages fluently. In every big case in the courts here, the names of Bisailion and Geoffrion always figured as the leading lawyers. Duty to the end was their watchword. The funerals of both bore ample testimony to their popularity and worth. Hundreds of citizens irrespective of race or creed assisted at the solemn Requiem Services held here and accompanied the remains to the station. The interment of F. J. Bisailion took place at Laprairie and Victor Geoffrion at St. Cuthbert, Berthier County.
 "Shame on the man who forgets his Creator. Upcoming traditions held sacred from birth; God help us to keep the Sunday holy. And worship in peace, our Father on earth."
 A pastoral letter deploring the increase of Sunday labor and desecration of the Sabbath has been addressed to Catholic clergy by Archbishop Gauthier, Apostolic Administrator of Montreal. The letter calls the clergy to take notice of the growing desecration of Sunday and take every effort to obtain the proper observance of the Lord's Day.
 "It is a fact, which no one will deny and which all may discern for themselves, that for a great number of Catholics Sunday has become a day on which they participate in profane pleasures," the Archbishop writes. "If they do not miss Mass, they frequently attend an early one, and then leaving so that they may enter upon a journey, or take part in outings which are sometimes dangerous to morals. To neglect God in this manner is indeed a great evil."
 The Archbishop observes with satisfaction that an inquiry is about to be undertaken concerning the spread of Sunday labor in the province, and expresses the hope that it will be complete and searching.
 The Feast of Corpus Christi which falls on Thursday, was celebrated throughout the diocese of Montreal on Sunday. There were public processions of the Blessed Sacrament throughout the streets in which all the central parishes of the city were joined, including the parishes of the Basilica, Notre Dame, St. Patrick's, St. James and St. Helen. The processions formed up at Notre Dame and went to Bonsecours Street, via Place Viger Square to St. Hubert, west along St. Catherine and back to Notre Dame Street via St. Denis and thence to Place d'Armes Square. Other parishes had their own local processions. Thousands took part in the different processions, both morning, afternoon, and evening, while thousands of spectators viewed the magnificent spectacle of piety, decorum, grandeur, harmony, religious belief and loyalty to Christ, their Eucharistic King.

Learn How to Make STRADIVARIUS VIOLINS.

The secret of Stradivarius has been discovered by a Frenchman after years of research in ancient Italian archives! This cry of "Eureka!" has been heard intermittently during the last two centuries; but French violin manufacturers now declare they are using a varnish which will preserve the vibrant qualities of the wood for centuries, and that the instruments turned out by the little shops not far from the Bastille will be just as famous 500 years hence as any "Strad" to-day.
 The whole charm of the Cremona violins—without giving other as to proportions or method of construction—it seems, consisted of a certain mixture of red cedar, sandalwood, and olive oil. Modern violins have been treated only with ordinary alcohol varnishes.—N. Y. Times.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

BLOOD GUARANTEE OF PURITY ON EVERY BAR

The Name SUNLIGHT is a guarantee of purity and excellence.

It seems to me the duty of all good citizens to aid in punishing wrongdoers, and the promotion of election petitions seems always to have been justified when the trial of them results in unseating and disqualifying candidates for bribery and other corrupt and illegal practices. I cannot aver that corrupt practices prevailed at the recent election to the same extent as in 1893, or greater, but if they did, no more patriotic or beneficial work could be done than to present petitions and to press them to final judgment, for otherwise the cancer will destroy the body politic.

Wedding Bells.

LEWIS-OKE.
A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at Gover Street Methodist Parsonage, at 7 o'clock this morning, when Mr. Alex. A. D. Oke, accountant with the firm of Messrs. Royal Stores, Ltd., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Emily Lewis, nurse at the Fever Hospital, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lewis, contractor. The bride looked charming in a costume of Navy Blue with hat to match, and carried a beautiful bouquet of carnations and ferns. She was attended by her sister Miss Clara Lewis, while the groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Charles C. Oke, Secretary of the Board of Pensions. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Hammond Johnston, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the party motored to the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Oke, Quill Hill Road, where the wedding breakfast was served. The feast of the newly-wedded couple was enthusiastically proposed and honored, and after receiving the hearty congratulations of their many friends, they motored to Waterford, Bridge and entrained for Colinet via Whitebourne where the honeymoon will be spent. The presents received were numerous and costly, which testified to the popularity in which the young couple are held.

Mr. Robert K. Oke, a brother of the groom, is also being married in Moncton, N.B., to-day, a rather unique coincidence. The bride-to-be is Miss Blanche Powell, of Little Hr. N.S. The wedding will take place at the Presbyterian Manse, Moncton, N.B. at 8 o'clock this evening.

The Evening Telegram joins with their many friends in extending to the contracting parties very many years of happy wedded life.

At the Majestic.

The name of Mary Pickford in connection with screen interpretation usually suggests a light comedy role, abounding in bright vivacious situations which afford room for her natural liveliness. But those who have heretofore enjoyed her comedy work will certainly enjoy her in "The Lovelight," her first emotional effort. Those who saw this production at the Majestic last night were fond in their praises and claimed she rose to her whole career.

The story centres around the lives of Italian fisher folk in a little village bordering on the Mediterranean. Angela Carlotti (Mary Pickford) is being courted by Giovanni Novella who is held in contempt by the fisher folk because instead of handling the nets and row boats, he raises flowers for the perfume market of Genoa. In time Antonio (Mary's brother) joins the army of his country and a little later Mario, another brother also enlists. Giovanni is still at home and Angela voices her contempt at his apparent lack of patriotism, this decides for Giovanni that he should go and he returns blinded. During his absence Angela cares for his garden and also takes the lighthouse keeper's place. One day Angela comes upon the unconscious form of a sailor, a big handsome foreigner, who claims to have deserted his ship. Angela falls in love with him and they are married. A little later she hears of the death of her two brothers. Now the stranger proves to be an enemy of Angela's country, and how Angela sacrifices everything in order to protect not only her neighbors but her enemies, is presented in a series of gripping and startling situations which naturally must be seen to be appreciated.

Are the City Parks Free?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Now that the season is at hand when city Parks will be frequented by the public in the evenings it is pertinent to ask are the Parks free to the public or is it only a fiction and a delusion to think so? In former years the City Council employed the Bands at certain nights to give concerts for the enjoyment of the public, but in recent years the three city brigade Bands have taken the matter into their own hands as a money-making venture laying an entrance fee on Band nights on every citizen—man, woman and child entering the gates. Of course you will be told that the payment is purely voluntary and that you need not pay, if you don't like. But when a man is stationed at the gate with a collection box one needs to have a good nerve and rare hardihood to pass the collector without depositing a coin. If he fails to do so he knows that he has rendered himself subject to uncompensated criticisms from the collector and others who may be standing around. He is regarded as a mean man even though he is acting strictly within his rights. I do not knock the Bands, but I contend that they should not be used to deprive any one of free entrance to the Parks, and if the public want concerts they should be paid for through the City Council out of the city revenue like in former years, and the system of collecting entrance fees at the gates should be abolished. It has now developed into such a money-making business that the Bands jealously insist on getting their turn to play in Bannerman Park and not one dollar of the fifty to seventy collected goes back to the City Council for the privilege of thus using the people's park! In my understanding, divided up amongst the Bandsmen. They have three nights a week for Band concerts. Why not six nights a week? If three more Bands were organized each would want its night, and the principle being admitted it is foolishness to say that the Parks are free to the public. The Bands are, of course, to be commended for their industry and enterprise in making all the money they can, and as long as this privilege is given to them they would be foolish not to take full advantage of it. But what is open to objection is the conduct of the City Council in being the responsible party for depriving any citizen of free admission to the Parks. To put up the argument that frequenters of the Parks need not pay if they don't like to do so will not, I think, be regarded by the general public as a satisfactory answer to my contention. The reasons are quite obvious.

Yours truly,
EAST END CITIZEN.

OLIVOTTI AND LAWRENCE

Again go Over the Top.

In the language of the street "I'll tell the world" this talented team again last evening scored another brilliant success. To the packed audiences that attended the popular Star comment is unnecessary for they went, saw and realized that all that has been said of them is not alone true, but "the half was not told." To those who did not see them the Management of the Star can only say, if you are a movie patron you have missed the best show in the city, and if you are not a movie patron go to-night and see a show that is certainly one worth going to see. Miss Olivotti now enters on her tenth week of her second engagement, and if we are not mistaken this is a record in Newfoundland and a record that this lady has every reason to feel proud of for since her opening night she has been greeted with large and appreciative audiences. Mr. Lawrence, her partner of three weeks, is in himself an attraction that is far and away ahead of many who claim world wide reputation. Last evening they sang "The Cricket on the Hearth" and by popular demand "Sympathy" and the applause given them at both performances must undoubtedly be highly gratifying to them.

As will be seen from the ad. the management has booked for their theatre the big "Kentucky Derby," which is going to prove a big hit, whilst on to-morrow there is a complete change in which will be included Larry Semon. See this paper.

IN THE REALMS OF SPORT. THE TRUTH WITHOUT FEAR OR FAVOR.

GUARDS WILL TRAIN ATHLETES.

A number of promising young athletes of the Methodist Guards Comrades Association met in the Club Rooms last night for the purpose of forming a track team to compete in the various athletic events of the season. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one, and it was decided to commence training immediately. The first practice will be held on the Arre Athletic Field, Thursday next, at 7:30 p.m. The Guards have excellent material to choose from and are bound to make a creditable showing in the forthcoming events.

GOOD EXHIBITION OF "FIVES."

The preliminary football fixes for St. Bon's Sports were run off on the College Campus last night, before a large attendance of fans and spectators. Four good snappy exhibitions of football were dotted out, and the final games, which take place on Sports Day will be looked forward to with much interest. The Cadet team blossomed forth in their new regalia and with the addition of James Young, late of the Saints, and Walter Callahan of the B.S., they have a very formidable aggregation, and bid fair to cop the honors on Wednesday afternoon. The games resulted as follows:—

(a)—C.L.B. vs. Feildians—Won by C.L.B.; 1 goal to 1 corner.

(b)—Guards vs. Star—Won by Guards; 2 corners to nil.

ST. MARY'S GARDEN PARTY FEATURES BIG SPORTS PROGRAM.

The parishoners of St. Mary's Church (Southside) are holding their annual garden party (the first event of its kind for the season) at Lester's Field, Cornwall Avenue, to-morrow afternoon. Like other years the energetic committee has undertaken to provide a good day's amusement in the shape of a sports programme, which no doubt will be the chief attraction. The programme of events comprises the regular short and middle distance runs, with a three mile road race as a feature, while the other items consist of foot and handball, Cavalry Tournament, Tug of War and Football Sixes. Many of our young athletes who have been hard at training during the past three weeks, have already entered their names to compete. The three mile road race, which starts near the Sanitarium, will finish on Lester's Field, the course being Topsail Road and Cornwall Avenue. The course has been accurately measured and official timekeepers have been engaged to clock the winners' time. A large number of competitors have decided to take part in this race, many of whom are coming athletes and will show their wares for a first time. The entry list will be kept open until the day of the sports, and anyone desirous of competing, can do so by phoning Mr. B. Colton, c/o C. F. Bennett & Company. The owners of motor cars and other vehicles are asked to give the runners a wide berth while the race is in progress and all those moving in the opposite direction are asked as a special favor to stop their cars until all competitors have passed. Should Not Injurious.

There is a general impression that so-called "athletic heart" is responsible for early deaths among men and women who engage in strenuous outdoor sports that require every ounce of energy that can be put into them. Experiments conducted by medical scientists have proved that there is little foundation for this belief. A large number of athletes at Yale and Columbia were examined, including the oarsmen, whose sport is one of the most strenuous of all. Rowing over a long course as fast as the men can impose on the body a test of the greatest severity, and oarsmen very often finish a race in a state of exhaustion. Sometimes they collapse altogether. The Presbyterian Hospital in New York has a record of the Yale and Columbia oarsmen covering a period of years and showing that there were no bad effects from the exercise. The crews were examined by doctors when training began, before the men started in the race, and after the race was over. No damages to the athletes was revealed. In this connection it is pointed out that after years of hard rowing Eddie Darman found himself with a heart regular and normal in its functioning. "The weight of informed opinion on the subject," says one authority, "is that any danger to the heart from athletics comes

His Ambition.

Jole is one of the cockiest athletes in the game. He does not believe there is a man living who can beat him over any distance from a mile to 2 miles. He is convinced there is no runner in America who can turn the trick and he wants to make a trip to Europe to meet Hill, the fleet Englishman, or any other middle distance man of note to warrant giving him a race. His one ambition at the present time is to remain good enough to make the American team which will compete in the Olympic Games in France in 1924. If he does not go to Europe this summer he will have the satisfaction of meeting the best man in the world at the 1924 games. Unless the unforeseen happens there is no reason why Jole should not be as good one year from this summer as he is at the present time.

Knows His Opponents.

It is a well known fact in athletics that some athletes can be run off their feet early in a race, while some others will be able to go through certain distances in fast time, if the pace for the half of the contest is not too gruelling. Ray knows the strength and weakness of practically every middle distance runner in America, and this is one of the reasons why he wins his races with such ridiculous ease.

JOE RAY A NATURAL ATHLETE.

Jole Ray of the Illinois A.C., whose performances on indoor tracks this past winter stamp him as the greatest middle distance runner ever developed in America, is a natural athlete. Running was a gift, and the only thing the fleet little runner has done to improve himself since he broke into the spotlight some ten years ago is to learn pace.

The I.A.C. athlete has been running miles so often that he can step the quarters within fifth of a second of the time denoted by his trainer. He knows just how fast he will have to run to win, but he always has enough in reserve to stave off any challenge. He has made a study of the running game and the men he meets.

Knows His Opponents.

It is a well known fact in athletics that some athletes can be run off their feet early in a race, while some others will be able to go through certain distances in fast time, if the pace for the half of the contest is not too gruelling. Ray knows the strength and weakness of practically every middle distance runner in America, and this is one of the reasons why he wins his races with such ridiculous ease.

Ray originally came from Kankakee, Ill., where he was known as a tireless runner. When still a boy it was a common sight to see him turn mile after mile on the old trotting track at the fair grounds. He was fond of fires and would run miles across the country to watch some farmer's barn burn. In fact, he was always on the run, no matter what he had to do, and it undoubtedly was this vigorous outdoor training which has given him the constitution to still run at a world's record breaking clip.

Sailing Under the Red Flag.

Life on the ocean under the red flag is thus described by a wireless operator in a London paper:

"On general principles, I object to paying steamship companies' passage but I was in New York and wanted to get to London and there was no berth available. It seemed there was no other course open to me, but one evening at the sailors' institute a bearded Russian captain offered me a passage and fifty dollars for the run across."

This suited well enough, and so for the first time I sailed under the red flag.

It was a novel experience. The ship was a fine ten thousand tonner and had once been in the passenger trade, though it was now employed as a freighter. There was ample cabin accommodation for everybody aboard.

The strangest feature of the ship, however, was that she was without discipline as we know it. There were no distinctions between officers and men—we were all comrades and all equals.

The officers' job was merely to navigate and fix the position of the ship. Even the captain had no authority over the crew. The deck hands and the engineers and stokers elected deputies, and these, with the Old Man formed a Soviet committee which controlled everything.

The scheme worked well enough on our run across because we had easy conditions all the time, but after many years in British ships the plan seemed to have grave disadvantages in moments of crisis. If the steering gear had been carried away in a "blow" a meeting of the Soviet before anything could be done might have had serious disadvantages.

I was the only Englishman aboard, but I was treated with the greatest courtesy and no attempt was made to convert me to the Cause.

At meals, and all other times when I was about, the officers always used English in order that I should not feel uncomfortable.

We had Russian fare at every meal, and that was the least enjoyable feature. I lived on board for the most part. I gathered that poker was the national card game. Everybody played it.

The passage and the cash were easily earned, but I should care to be master of a B' shevik ship, and I think our seamer are just as happy and more efficient, though they don't call the Old Man "Comrade."

Metal Paper.

It is reported that lithographers have for sometime been using plated paper instead of thin metal sheets, preferring the former as the paper body gives a soft cushioning effect which cannot be obtained with the solid metal. For this purpose the metal is electro-plated on the surface of the paper, which has first been coated with a layer of graphite to give it a conducting surface. The principle thus employed is old, but the difficulty has always been that the liquid in the plating bath would soak into the paper and would loosen the metal film from it even while this was being deposited. Now the users have learned that by first coating the paper with a varnish or lacquer impervious to moisture, they can make it immune against the direct action of the liquid, so that the film of metal will cling firmly to it.

Make the Weather Suit Her Frock.

"Fine weather for young ducks!" How often we have heard this expression on a rainy day. That's all right for ducks. They take to the water almost from the shell. Their instinct for water and for swimming is very strong. They will not be injured by wet ground or rain unless it is very cold at the time. This must be guarded against even with ducks.

But young chicks are different. They must have their weather made for them. They are often as tender as an infant. No mother would expose her week-old infant to a draught or a chill, damp air. The mother hen is equally solicitous and keeps her young family under her wings as much as possible when the days are dull and the nights are chill. Many chicks are drowned in thunder storms because shelter is not accessible or convenient. It is necessary for them to be entirely submerged to be drowned. Let them be thoroughly soaked and they will drop in the mud and succumb—practically drowned.

Wet and cold, under certain conditions, will give the chicks digestive and bowel trouble. Before the symptoms become very marked the case may progress beyond recovery. Hence the need of a watchful eye in this regard. The poultryman should be a weatherman as well. If he cannot control the weather he can at least provide against its rigors. In spring, cold and sudden changes may affect old as well as young birds. Croup, diphtheria, tuberculosis, rheumatism, etc., will attack any flock unless preventive measures are taken at the proper time. If this is true of mature fowls, how much more care is needed in rearing young birds?

Incubator chicks are entirely at the mercy of the breeder. He cannot hope for success unless the artificial brooder or hover is used immediately after the young are hatched and reasonable shelter is provided until they are fully fledged and able to take care of themselves which may take a month.

Whether a fire is needed in a brooder does not depend entirely upon the age of the chicks. The climate conditions and the feathering of the birds must be considered. Some of the birds might be so well grown during the six weeks of nice weather that they would need no more heat. Other chicks might be slow in feathering and the weather might be very cold. In that case keep the fire burning rather than allow the growing stock to huddle and develop colds. Watch the actions of the birds at night when they reach the time for "weaning." You can soon tell when it is safe to let the brooder fire die out.

Pullets that feather quickly are found to be the most vigorous and best layers. They are early maturing and more profitable than the occasional chicks which may feather slowly in spite of the best care. It is probably best to mark any late-feathering birds and cull them out when broiler size is reached. Soon after chicks are weaned from the brooder is pays to teach them to roost. The roosts can be sprayed to keep down mites and lice. The roosting birds do not crowd and become overheated. Early roosting might make a few crooked breasts, but a few colds in the flock will cause much more worry than a few crooked breasts. If the stock are vigorous and well fed they will make a normal development and few breasts will be deformed.

Have the roosts for young birds set fairly low.

A Candle Ten Feet High.

A candle ten feet high, guaranteed to burn for two years or more, was manufactured some time ago in New York for an Italian cathedral. It was doubtless the largest as well as the most persistent candle in the world. It measured eight inches in diameter, and weighed 318 pounds. Its sides were decorated with pictures of flowers and reproductions of paintings of a religious nature, all carved out elaborately with many bright colors. The candle was made entirely of beeswax, and cost $300.

This contrivance for a wholesale illumination has a certain history. The candle was designed as a thank offering by Raffaele Cascone, an Italian living in New York. Cascone was tried for murder and acquitted. There was much delay in the case, and the prisoner was confined in goal for weary months.

During his long imprisonment Cascone vowed solemnly that if he should ever be freed he would show his gratitude in some extraordinary fashion. Finally, when he at last found himself a free man, his gratitude was so great that he insisted on crawling on his hands and knees from the Tombs Prison to his home.

He was dissuaded from this, however, and thereupon comforted himself by ordering the largest candle in the world to be sent to the cathedral where he had worshipped when a boy.

Mountain Peaks Used to Support Giant Antennae.

BAVARIAN ALPS TO HAVE HUGE WIRELESS STATION, HIGHEST IN THE WORLD, WHENCE RADIO MESSAGES SOON MAY BE FLASHING TO ALL LANDS.

MUNICH, June 2.—The peaks of the Bavarian Alps soon will be flashing wireless messages to all parts of the world if an expensive experiment by the Lorenz firm of wireless constructors which is nearing completion, is successful.

The summit of the Herzogstand Mountain, south of Munich, is being used for the construction of a huge wireless station under the Lorenz experiment, which will lift the antennae higher than those of the Eiffel Tower or the Nauzen tower, Germany's present transatlantic station.

Herzogstand Mountain is 6,000 feet above sea level and on the other side of a narrow valley is another peak nearly as high. By stretching a wire cable between these two peaks the cogly construction of steel towers is avoided and the damp valley gives every possible advantage for the reception or dispatching of radio waves. In addition, the enormous electrical energy required to operate a station of this magnitude will be developed from water power exploitation in the Walchensee.

Because of the great height and the length of the wire cable an ingenious arrangement is used by which the ends of the cable are attached to devices like wagons, heavily weighted with stones so as to compensate the wind pressure. The peaks are easily accessible from one side, but the sides which face the valley are almost perpendicular, which makes the location an ideal one for the experiment, the engineers say.

Two wave lengths will be adopted, a shorter one for nearer points, but with the longer one it is hoped to reach places hitherto out of the radius of the greatest wireless plants in the world.

The work, which was started last fall, but was stopped because of the long Alpine winter, is again well under way and it is expected the station will be completed early this summer.—N.Y. Herald.

Ghost of the Sea.

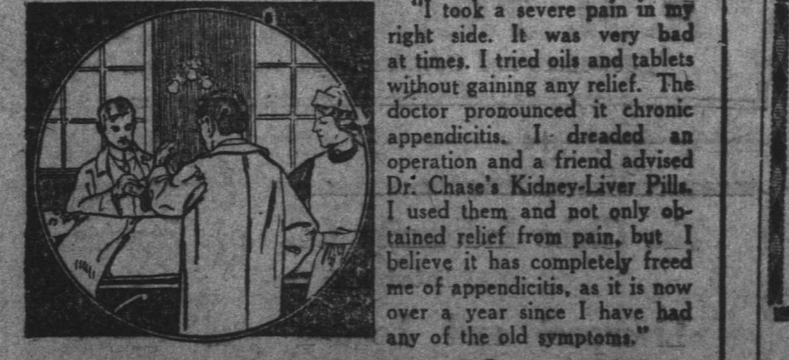

Few stranger stories have been brought up from the sea than that of the silent sentry of H.M.S. Ariadne, told by the diver who has been working on the wreck of the cruiser sunk by a German submarine five miles off Eastbourne in 1917.

According to the diver, Dan Homet of Glasgow, he saw a marine supported by a portion of the ship standing as though on duty, his rifle with bayonet fixed grasped in his hand. He seemed as though he had been in the same position in the dim shadows of the wreck for five years, standing sentry over the dead, for 34 men are believed to have gone down with the ship.

The diver told the story when he came up from the wreck after being imprisoned there for an hour. He got into an awkward corner and narrowly escaped with his life. He was in a condition of much stress at the time after his experience.

American Tourists in England Athirst.

Show Tendency to Criticize British Cocktails and Insist on the Best—Have a Taste for Beer.

As an unforeseen result of Uncle Sam's plan to prescribe a dry voyage eastward for all persons sailing from American ports, it is expected that dry tourists will arrive in London with a greater desire to sample everything in the way of alcoholic beverages in the British metropolis, even if they shake their thirst at Southampton or Liverpool en route.

What has irritated some barkeeps here is the tendency of American tourists to criticize the cocktails. The barkeeps thought that Americans, through inforced acquaintance with bootleg booze, had retained no fastidiousness in the matter of cocktails or other mixed drinks. But the experienced tourist, they say, seems to remember only too well how the ingredients should be compounded, and will have only the best.

Another characteristic of the American consumer is a penchant for beer. Americans explain this as due to the fact that although spirituous liquors, even of questionable origin, have been available at home, they have not been able to get enough beer. As most high class bars do not purvey such a plebeian drink, the Yank with a thirst for it must patronize the ordinary "pub."

There may be something for psychologists in the fact that though Englishmen are content to abide by the early closing regulations effective here, their American acquaintances like nothing better than obtaining liquor after licensed hours. This is thought due to the habit formed at home of circumventing the dry law wherever and whenever possible. As one Briton expressed it, it seems to be a newly acquired desire to break the law.

Mirrors of Olden Times.

In pre-historic times lakes, rivers or pools of water were the only mirrors. But the artificial mirrors of highly polished metal, such as steel or silver, have been in use from a very early date. Similar to these were the unbreakable "trench mirrors" used by our soldiers in the World War.

The Romans made mirrors of polished stones, especially obsidian, a form of vitrified lava, but also of emeralds and rubies, which appear to have been more ornamental than useful. Not until the 13th century were mirrors of glass with backs of lead or tin manufactured. In the 17th century the Venetians made a wonderful
