Here is an actual transaction which took place twenty-five years ago, long before the business of arrivals, as they are called, or of futures, had been introduced into the methods of commerce. A Chinese merchant aked A & Co, an American firm in Canton, to contract to deliver to him 300 bales of cotton cloth par month, at a given price, for ten succeeding months. A & Co's Boston mill. The mill's agent got his cotton buyer in the south to contract for the future da-fixed price. and was insured against any changes in value or price. The gist of the whole business of futures, legitimately used, was in that transaction of a quarter of a century ago, before the time of ocean cables, and when steam transportation, both by land and sea, was employed to a comparative-ly moderate degree. Since that day the methods of commerce have been de-veloped by the use of steam and electricity at a rapid rate, but no faster than the re-quirements of the world have demanded. The selling of merchandise only on the spet cessed to be the rule when samples and mail advices arrived days, weeks or months perhaps, before the actual consignment. Then it became not only desirable but often necessary also, in a business sense, to sell to arrive, to sell good- or crops in advance of their arrival. In this way the risks of change were reduced to a minimum. The seller was not obliged to store his goods while awaiting a purchaser, but delivered them directly from the car or vessel to the the seller, therefore, could enter with safety into new engagements, and the buyer, purchasing at favorable moments ahead of his wants, could yet so time the arrivals as to meet his regular require-ments. That is what "arrivals" are in the top boots. The Pittsburg Telegraph is responsible for the statement that a daily chicken train has been started on the Pennsylvania rail-road. They have a passenger Cochin the rear and a locomotive to pullet. Mr T C Berchard, public school teacher, Norland, writes: "During the fall of 1881 I was much troubled with Biliousness and Dyspepsia, and part of the time was un-able to attend to the duties of my profes-sion. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Dis-covery and Dyspeptic Cure was recom-mended to me, and I have much pleasure in stating that I was entirely cured by in stating that I was entirely cured by using one bottle. I have not had an at-tack of my old complaint since, and have gained fifteen pounds in weight."

It gave; the nest was finished; And as the sweet bird sang, Out of the bush of joy The lovely rose-bud sprang.
