TRAGEDIES OF THE SLUMS AND OF RURAL ENGLAND

Some Old Country Problems as Seen by a Thoughtful and Observing Canadian.

It cannot be expected that one should speak with ultimate authority about things in Britain after five or six weeks' pilgrimage; yet even that is an advantage over the American who saw London "in a day." I can only offer an opinion and speak of what I saw. Nevertheless my opportunity of seeing and hearing things from many different points of view was good. In the party with which I travelled there were about two hundred fellow-Canadians who, like Ulysses, were travelling with "hungry hearts" and were casting and peering about with keen eyes for comparisons. What one did not see the others did, and there was much time spent comparing notes. We passed, for example, from Glasgow, our landing place to Edinburgh, to Sterling, Dumfries, Melrose, Carlisle, the Lake Country, Oxford, Warwick, Stratford-on-Avon, Oath, London, where we entered for nearly two weeks, thence to Portsmouth, Southampton, Channel Islands, thence back to Weymouth, Taunton, Gloucester, Tewkesbury, Chester and Liverpool. Visits were made at different times to points of interest nearby some of these places, such for instance as Windsor, Eton, Nuneaton, the home of the Harcourts, Aldershot, Glasbury, Wells, Abington, Hatfield House, Epping Forest, etc., etc.

In connection with this itinerary we met all classes of people and England has many classes; we had excellent opportunities of interviewing all the "estates of the realm"; politicians, aristocrats, soldiers, sailors, farmers, merchants, civil service officers, hotel proprietors, attendants, cabbies and what not. The people of the British Isles talk conversation with visitors, especially if they are "Colonials." There is something flattering about answering the questions of a comparative stranger. It gives the man or woman of the homeland a feeling of superiority. Then again the average homelander holds opinions. No country under the sun has a better reputation for "opinions" than John Bull's land. Hasn't it been so for centuries? What was all the fuss about at the time of Jack Cade's rebellion on Blackheath Common, or at the time of the Civil War? So we had no difficulty at any point of engaging in the most interesting kind of conversation about affairs at home and abroad.

The Englishman displays his opinions something as a merchant would show his wares. He does it, too, with the consciousness that he has the best goods or "opinions" in the world! The beauty of it is that the Englishman is no less anxious to hear you express your view of things, British or mundane. He will ask you sooner or later "What impresses you most?" "What do you think of London?" and such like questions. Now, with regard to the former question my letters in general will suffice for an answer on the Canadian side, with regard to the latter question, it would be impossible to frame an adequate answer. London impresses me as a clean city to begin with. Considering the vast population, the cleanliness of the streets and the orderly way in which traffic moves back and forth is phenomenal. I rode one self in their place. They have had to struggle to keep out of the maelstrom. That struggle under more just conditions would prove their greatest asset and would place them higher on the ladder of prosperity, it may be, than those who lox with disdain on them now. I would wager on an immigrant from a "slum" or a "ragged school" making a success quicker than I would on a runout scion of some aristocratic family.

Perhaps I have digressed more than I should just here, but the subject was attractive. The homelander has been sending out great numbers of immigrants during the last decade, but after my few weeks looking about I should say she could well afford to spare a million more forthwith. I think the million themselves would be better off, also the colony to which they went, and the homelander. Of course, for the most part they would be tillers of the soil. In a new land like Canada or Australia they would become buyers and producers, and carrying with them the rich heritage of an Anglo-Saxon civilization they would leaven the new civilization with their constructive ideals of government, and make the wastes a garden. The homelander would be relieved of a surplus population, have more trade and a better living to share among her peoples. Further than that, the bounds of Empire would be widened and strengthened. Does this look like a bold or rash statement? Let us look. One of the most notable things in my itinerary was the number of men employed at little jobs, such as for instance as hawk picture post cards on the streets, selling papers. In one of England's most ancient and classical cities, you could scarcely cross the street with a hand satchel, but what some full-grown, poorly dressed man would pop out from somewhere, hurry to your side and with a salute say beseechingly, "Carry your satchel, Sir!" At Portsmouth, where 15,000 men are now employed in the Navy dockyards, I was told by an official that the average sailor's wages was about thirty shillings per week. I am sure that when good meat is about a shilling a pound and a man has a family to support and rent to pay.

In the best farming districts of Somersetshire, Devon and Cornwall the wage of the farm laborer is twelve shillings per week not including board. The Wiltshire County Council recently voted down a proposition to pay a minimum of eight shillings per week to look out for the welfare of the poor. The writer under the very shadow of a wealthy royal castle that their wage was twenty-eight shillings a week with the possibility of a rise to thirty-two, I believe. England's rural parts are pleasant to look upon, but, also they spell in many cases, a tragedy. So long as men accept the present order—Lords, squires, parsons, tenantry—the essential nature of things, things will go quietly and peacefully for a while longer. But for the most part the land we see is not cultivated by its owner. It has a tenant in charge and judging by the attractive appearance of the land he must be doing good work. As a matter of fact he has to do well. Only the best he can do will give him an existence at all. Apart from that, the English farmer is not progressive. The government provided "analysts" for expert advice and help, but the percentage who apply for such advice is woefully small. The old way is good enough for him. Only the keen competition of the world's markets will suffice to force a new method. There is little hope of the average farmer or farm laborer in England rising to a place of independence. Little wonder that many of them have ceased to hope for anything better.

An elect lady of Oxford expressed in her conversation warm disapproval of Lloyd George's land taxing scheme which laid a greater portion of the monetary burden of the nation on the large land owners. "Why," she said by way of argument (as if it were one that would close the case) "the tenants themselves object to it. They have been so long under the government of the landlords they fear independence." My reply to this was perhaps a little blunt. I said: "That was the argument for slavery, and was a good reason for doing away with it." England is far from being democratic yet, but that is the way things are tending. If some leave the country for Israel, faire opposition has it just what they might expect. If some stay and quarrel with the powers that be we need not be surprised. That is going on now. If some accept the situation as a matter of Providence or caste we need not be surprised. Such systems always have produced the three classes. We need not speak of others who try to drown their sorrows in drink.

Just in closing, what a boon to both homelander and colony that there has been a free outlet for the people. Energy must have room for expansion or there will be discontent and revolution. As it is the outlook is full of hope, though the hour when all will share with equal justice and generosity in the commonwealth may be yet long delayed.

Open Season for Moose

(Morning Chronicle)

The open season for moose began on September 16, and the festive sportsman is at liberty to get back to the woods, and after the killing of Nova Scotia's game moose. The season lasts until November 15th and until that date sports can hunt moose, but each must be satisfied with one kill per season. In fact he may not even again hunt moose after having already killed one in that season. But though it is open to all now to get after the big game, many city sportsmen will not get into the timber until there is frost in the air and snow has fallen. According to reports from outside of the city moose promise to be plentiful this season. The game laws as applying to moose are practically the same as last year, except that with the skull, antlers with head and neck skin attached, the skins of the legs from knees to hoofs must only be brought out of the woods for exhibition by a justice of the peace or warden, as required by the act, and not the whole legs, bone and all. Cow moose or calves may not be hunted or killed this year. The total moose killings last season as reported to Chief Game Commissioner Knight was 687, as against 617 during the season of 1911. Halifax led all counties in the number killed within its boundaries, the figures for 1912 in comparison for 1911 being as follows:—

Annapolis County	77	70
Colchester County	25	15
Cumberland County	31	44
Digby County	33	43
Guysborough County	45	57
Halifax County	152	134
Hants County	26	49
Kings County	7	13
Lunenburg County	13	23
Pictou County	33	48
Queens County	27	37
Shelburne County	27	37
Yarmouth County	34	44
	617	687

Caribou may not be killed or hunted before next season in Pictou County other than by the warden and deer likewise may not be hunted before October of next year.

The open season for shooting rabbits begins October 1st and lasts until March 1st, but snaring of other mammals is allowed from December 1st and March 1st. According to reports, rabbits promise to be fairly plentiful, notwithstanding the forest fires.

The season for foxhunting, wilson snipe, blue-winged duck and woodcock opened Sept. 1st and closes March 1st. Reports so far indicate black duck unusually plentiful, but woodcock very scarce. The partridge season opens Oct. 1st and lasts but a month. Partridge are reported fairly plentiful now.

Angling for the season will close on October 1st, the season for fishing trout and land-locked salmon, which opened April 1st, closing then. Some anglers feel the open season for trout might be closed a month earlier, with beneficial results.

But you will find upon examination that Nova Scotia is decidedly desirable. For the first six months of this year the issuing Company earned a large surplus over the amount necessary for preferred dividends and with the many orders on hand this is likely to continue for the balance of the year.

The dividends are 7 p.c. and cumulative. Today the stock can be bought outright or on our Partial Payment Plan at 98 p.c. to give the handsome yield of 7 p.c. May we send you further details?

The Apple Maggot or Railroad Worm

A short time ago I issued a note of warning against this pest, but at that time the department here did not know of any infestation in the Annapolis fruit belt. Information had come to us of a reported outbreak around Jordantown but we could not locate it. All our men began inspection work west of Annapolis; a careful lookout for this pest was maintained. In order to determine the presence of this pest every orchard had to be closely inspected and hundreds of apples had to be cut open in the search. Mr. A. Kelsall's party was delegated to search the district west from Bear River and further east should the pest be found. Assisted by Mr. H. G. Payne, the territory between Bear River on the east and as far west as any infestation could be found was closely inspected. As a result of this inspection Mr. Kelsall reports finding apple maggot generally distributed in the district from Bear River to about three miles west of Digby on the main Yarmouth road. The centre of the infestation is around Acaciaville where several badly infested orchards were found. Unfortunately, the maggot has been discovered quite abundantly in wild apple as well. The pest was found most prevalent in Bush Sweets, Gravensteins and Astrachans as well as the softer kinds of wild apples. A small infestation was found about a mile east of the Bear River Bridge but none for several miles further east.

It would seem that the present outbreak is practically confined to the district from Bear River west to about three miles beyond Digby on the Yarmouth road. In order that the distribution of this pest be restricted as much as possible I am placing Mr. Kelsall in the infested district to give all necessary help and warn fruit growers of the necessity of active control measures. All dropped fruit should be gathered every four or five days and fed or buried, not buried. Fruit growers should also closely inspect all wild apple trees and see that any infested fruit is destroyed. When in doubt write the department here, and every effort will be made to aid in the work.

If the fruit growers in the infested district will see to it that all wind falls are destroyed by cooking or feeding within a few days after they have fallen it will mean a great reduction in the pest for the coming year. Next year all these orchards as well as wild apple trees should be carefully sprayed with lead arsenate just after the blossoms fall and then about two weeks later. These are the two regular codling moth sprays and in large commercial orchards in badly infested districts have proven successful in controlling this pest. However, full directions will be issued in the spring dealing with the necessary control measures.

At this time it may also be well to warn all buyers to avoid shipping fruit from the infested to uninfested districts for packing purposes. For in this way culls are so often thrown away and if the maggots are present in the fruit as they frequently are new outbreaks are bound to occur.

CELEBRATES HER NINTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Catherine Armstrong, one of the oldest residents of North Sydney, celebrated her 90th birthday on Friday last, having been born in Bridgetown, N. S., on Sept. 12, 1823. Her husband, the late James Armstrong, who was a widely known and highly esteemed citizen of our town, died some twelve years ago at the age of eighty-four years. Her surviving children are Mrs. S. C. Erskine, of Rosedale, Mass., Rev. W. F. Armstrong D. D., of Rangoon, India; Hon. Dr. J. N. Armstrong, of this town, and T. J. Armstrong, Esq., a leading business man of Portland, Oregon, and President and owner of the Noon Bag Co., one of the largest manufacturing establishments of that city.

On the occasion of her 90th birthday Mrs. Armstrong was the recipient of congratulatory messages and remembrances from her children and other members of the family, and numerous friends. Enjoying good health and remarkable in many ways for a person of her advanced age, the North Sydney Herald trusts Mrs. Armstrong may still see and experience many years of life and happiness. Mrs. Armstrong resides here with her son—North Sydney Herald.

LAWRENCETOWN SCHOOL EXHIBITION

Great Interest Shown by the Scholars in this Splendid Method of Instruction

The annual exhibition of the Lawrence Public School was held on Friday last and has been pronounced by all as the most successful one yet. These exhibitions have been held now for several years and deserve more than a local attention as a successful attempt and way to interest our school children in their work and in the country about them.

The exhibits quite filled the large school rooms, and would have done credit to a much larger country fair. But far more important than the size of the exhibits and the interest manifested by the children in this method of instruction. The large number of competitors indicated a very general concern had seized the whole school for this variety of knowledge.

Besides prizes for vegetables grown by the children, prizes were also awarded for the best small garden cared for by a boy or girl. These had been visited several times during the summer by the judges and the award given at this time. The boys and girls were in separate sections, the girls not requiring to care for quite as large an area as the boys. Another section was for collection of insects and several very good boxes of these were shown neatly mounted.

Wild flowers and weeds formed another class and brought together numerous collections of well preserved wild flowers that had been carefully dried, pressed and mounted and named.

Manual training work done by pupils at home without a master was shown on one wall, and was a display of the ingenuity and dexterity of the boys that showed a great variety of useful articles from a rolling pin to a bob-sled.

The collection of native woods was shown on another table and upwards of forty varieties displayed in neatly cut and planed quarter sections six inches long.

To be sure that these were done by the small boy who showed more interest in nature studies than in his spelling book, one had but to glance at the names on some of them. Cedar was marked "Seeder," while the graceful sumack received a practical turn from this enthusiastic collection by being spelled "shoe mack."

The Domestic Science exhibit brought together many dainty garments with plain and fancy sewing and needle work, as well as plenty of bread, rolls and some cake, all done by the children.

Another class was made up of drawing and painting and another showing penmanship, in all of which there were numerous entries and close competition and all displaying much taste and art.

A prize for the best essay on "The Educational Value of School Premises," brought together a desk full of plans and details for school houses and grounds that would do credit to more mature architects, and

"the boy is father of the man" many of these plans may yet work out into improved school grounds and buildings in our County in the next generation.

On the whole the Exhibition reflects great credit on those who managed it. We notice in the officers and Committee of Management such well known educationalists and teachers as Dr. Hall, Principal Banks and his staff of teachers, R. J. Messenger, H. H. Whitman, the town clergy, in fact the whole community and the Monitor hopes to be able to report many more such Exhibitions at Lawrence town and in many other schools throughout the County from year to year.

POSITIVE HAIR GROWER FOUND AT LAST

Greatest discovery of the age SAGEINE—grows hair in thirty days. Costs nothing if it fails. Men and women whose hair is falling, who are growing bald and gray, whose heads are those who have been bald for years—have now the opportunity of having lots of hair. SAGEINE is Professor Lacomatin's great discovery of how all can have glorious hair. Mr. H.P. Young, of 342 Bryant Street, Buffalo writes that SAGEINE has grown a handsome head of hair for him after he has been bald three years. We have hundreds of letters with just such wonderful proof. If you are troubled with baldness or prematurely gray hair, or lifeless, stringy or matted hair without lustre; if you have dandruff or itchy scalp, try a bottle of SAGEINE at our risk. One bottle will convince. And it costs but 50c. for a large treatment in a fine shaker bottle so that it is easily applied. SAGEINE is as dainty as some for men and women and brings a natural rich wave. W. A. Warren, sole agent. Other stores don't have SAGEINE.

HE SHOOK HANDS

There were one or two unrecalled incidents at the opening of the new King's College Hospital, Denmark Hill, by King George and Queen Mary, which caused considerable amusement to Their Majesties. A number of purses were handled in by children from three years old and upwards. One small boy, despite the nudging of his teachers, insisted upon shaking hands with His Majesty. Another mite, a shy little girl, walked backward until she would have fallen off the platform had she not been caught in the arms of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was standing just beneath it.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., Ltd.

Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disabled for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly, W. A. V. R.

London Haunts of Oliver Goldsmith.

(By Fred Myron Colby)

The most interesting figure one could have seen in London during the latter half of the eighteenth century was that of Oliver Goldsmith, poet, novelist, dramatist, whose warm Irish heart made him hosts of friends while living, and whose genial temper and unmistakable genius have won him the admiration of the world since.

Of the London of those days little remains intact, but there are a few sites that might still be recognizable to the "Literary Club" if any of them could return. Let us take a walk down Fleet Street and those busy thoroughfares about the Temple and peep into the poorer lanes and courts branching off therefrom, pass in and out of the Devil and Mitre taverns, toil up the steep flights of steps to the garret lodgings of the author, and pause for reflection where his body rests in the Temple Church.

Goldsmith settled in London before he was thirty years old, and with scarcely any interruption, he spent the remainder of his days there. He went there poor, unknown, wearing threadbare clothing, and with but few friends in the world. He died seventeen years later, the best known man of letters of his day, comfortably well to do, with an income that might have made him affluent, and numbering among his friends the most prominent wits, gentlemen, scholars, and authors of England. His first lodging was a garret in a miserable court, from which he had to climb from the brink of Fleet ditch by a dizzy ladder of flagstones, called Breakneck Steps. The court and the ascent have long since disappeared, but old Londoners still remember both. Washington Irving, in his "Tales of a Traveller," gives a racy description of it as it appeared in his day.

As soon as he was in easier circumstances, somewhere about 1760, Goldsmith emerged from this dismal abode in Green Arbour Court and took respectable apartments in Wine Office Court, Fleet Street. The building still stands, a tall, prisonlike structure, looking out upon the narrow court over whose stone pavements "Noll" and his friends must have often walked with their high-heeled, buckled shoes. There was the smell of burnt coffee and stale bread in the house; and we could imagine a red-cheeked, tight-bodied girl cooking a supper within, just as her prototype might have done for the genial author and his associates in those old days of the eighteenth century.

On the 31st of May, 1761, in this house, Doctor Johnson, as a guest at a literary supper given by Goldsmith, met the latter for the first time. Who would not like to have been one of that party? It was the most select, socially and intellectually, of anything in Europe, for there were Reynolds in art, Burke in oratory, the great Leviathan himself, and "Goldy," and half a dozen other famous gentlemen.

Near this very court, and not three blocks away from Goldsmith's lodgings, stands one of the most historic structures of its kind in London, still maintaining its ancient character and peculiarities. This is "Ye Old Cheshire Cheese," a common resort for men of arts and letters during the eighteenth century. Bolingbroke, Pope, Congreve, and old Robert Herrick, of the generation preceding Goldsmith's, were all frequenters of the "Cheshire Cheese," and it is claimed that "Will" Shakespeare was not an unusual visitor. But as the old inn was not built until 1667, we must discard that pretty story.

The house is one of the heavy-timbered buildings of the Stuart time, with huge doors and wide, deep-set small-paned windows. In the left-hand room—the very one where Johnson took his seat at the table on the right, with Goldsmith on one side and Boswell on the other—are the wooden settees, the open-bricked fireplace, the grates and the "hobs," which were familiar to that famous coterie. Many a rare cup of coffee was imbibed as his associates sat around the blazing wood-fire in the wide fireplace.

One can see, in imagination, the great men coming into that humble room, one after another, like the figures in the procession upon an ancient frieze. There was Goldsmith himself, dressed foppishly in a suit of scarlet velvet that looked wondrously ungraceful on his lank, awkward figure; the large, uncouth form of Johnson, with a little dark wig which scarcely covered his head, and his clothes hanging loosely upon him, scarcely anything being in place; Hogarth, the painter, a stout, active bustling little man of sixty, in a sky-blue coat; Beauclerk and Laneton, two fine stylish young men, dressed in elegant suits of black velvet; the florid-faced handsome, dignified Joshua Reynolds, the genial Garrick, and Burke, full of his talk of Parliament; and the government of George III.; all those have lounged in that old, dingy room and sipped their solacing drinks in the blaze of the firelight in the chimney. Think of being in with four such admirable talkers as Johnson, Burke, Beauclerk and Garrick, and of being on terms of intimacy with the four! Not a little of Goldsmith's inspiration must have sprung direct from his associations with his learned and accomplished friends.

The residence of Doctor Johnson, still known by its tablet over the door, is through the old arch and in the next court to that of the "Cheshire Cheese." To the old red brick building in Gough Square, Goldsmith must many times have wended his steps during the sunny afternoons of those latter years, and it must have been interesting to see these two sit down to sup at the table of poor Mrs. Williams, Johnson's half blind pensioner. Sometimes we could have seen the large, shuffling figure of the lexicographer, his wig awry, his large, heavy shoes unbuckled, his clothes hanging every way about his person, carrying his big cane in his hand, come down the steps and set off arm-in-arm with Goldsmith. The latter's sturdy little figure arrayed in a scarlet roquelaure buttoned to the chin, purple silk small clothes, a professional wig, and a three-cornered hat, either to visit the shop of Davies, the bookseller, in Russell Street, Covent Garden, one of the much-frequented literary gossiping places of the day, or to drink tea with Mrs. Thrale at her own town house, in Grosvenor Square.

Another resort of Goldsmith's was a large, roomy mansion, No. 47, Leicester Square. The rooms are still spacious; the staircase massive oak, the windows wide and grand; but the mirth, splendour, and dignity of the old house have departed. From 1760 to 1792 this elegant residence was the home of Sir Joshua Reynolds, the greatest painter of his age and a fast friend of Goldsmith's. The author often took dinner under the hospitable roof, and he and Johnson and all of that circle usually attended the painter's evening soirées. Goldsmith did not shine in company; but when the party broke up we can fancy the three inseparables, Goldsmith, Johnson and Boswell, coming out together, crossing Leicester Square, where link boys were running with torches or waiting to be hired, where sedan chairs were jostling each other, where coaches were lumbering by, as the fashionable world returned from "Ranelagh" or Vauxhall Gardens, or from some ball at Kensington or Hampton Court; then Goldsmith's good-humored nonsense answered Boswell's bold sallies and Johnson's learned expositions. Goldsmith passed the last of his days at No. 2 Brick Court, Middle Temple in the same building where Blackstone wrote his "Commentaries," a dull, faded old building, looking as solitary as a prison. Once a week on Monday night he went to meet his club at the "Turk's Head," in Gerald street, Soho Square, an association numbering thirteen literary and cultivated gentlemen, of which Johnson and Goldsmith were the lions. Sometimes the author and several "Jolly Pigeon" friends would enjoy what they called a "shoemaker's holiday." The party would breakfast in his chambers and then set out on foot, making extensive rambles by footpaths and green lanes to Blackheath, Chelsea, Highgate, or some other pleasant resort a few miles out of London. They would take dinner at some rural tavern, stroll back to town and sup at the Temple Exchange Coffee House, or at the Globe Tavern, in Fleet Street. Goldsmith died in his room at the Temple, April 4, 1774, aged only forty-six years. "Is your mind at ease?" asked a medical attendant, as he lay dying. "No, it is not," answered the man who had described so many sad and serious things in life. These were the last recorded words of Oliver Goldsmith.—From an English paper.

THE "BIG BROTHER" MOVEMENT

One of the most interesting endeavors to counteract the evils of juvenile delinquency is the "Big Brother" movement, which had its genesis in the city of New York some nine years ago. Mr. Ernest Coulter was clerk of the Juvenile Court. He recognized the good which it accomplished, but he also saw that many of the poor little chaps who came under its jurisdiction looked upon its agencies and its officers as merely "professional," so that in spite of their best endeavors their influence sometimes apparently lacked the warm human element. Mr. Coulter conceived the idea of becoming "chums" with a boy who had been released on probation, but who was in danger of being drawn back among his old associates. He visited this boy's home in a purely unofficial manner, let the lad know that he could return the visits as often as he felt inclined, brought him to a show now and then, got him a job, and in a general manner acted toward him as a "big brother" should. The "expulsive power of a new affection" had its usual effect. The little fellow became a loyal friend to the man, and today he is a worthy young citizen.

For a while Mr. Coulter never considered this incident in his own experience as having any general application. At last, when speaking at a meeting of the Men's Club, of the Central Presbyterian Church, on the problem presented in the person of the neglected city boy, he told of a little fellow in the same position as the boy whom he had helped, and asked if some one would volunteer to be a "big brother" to him. The men whom he addressed were busy men, but to his surprise practically every one of them—there were about forty—volunteered to help the boy in the manner indicated. Mr. Coulter introduced one of them to the boy, and taking the names of the others, provided each with a "little brother" as the occasion presented itself.

Since this incident occurred the movement has taken root in about forty cities in the United States, Australia and Canada. So wonderfully has the work grown that last year there were no less than six hundred and ninety-five business and professional men in the city of New York each actively "big brotthering" one or more boys, in fact no less than 2,888 boys found chums among the New York "big brothers" in that year.

The men who help are, as a rule, just the busiest men in the various cities. Bank presidents, merchants and manufacturers, lawyers, surgeons and physicians, such men form much the largest proportion of the "Big Brothers." Some of the boys helped are delinquent, others are lads who have never got into trouble, but who might easily do so. Each is given the individual assistance which he needs. Of course, the demands of real friendship are exacting, and this is especially so when one friend is a poor, ignorant and neglected boy, and the other a business man. But the exacting are gallantly met, and the statistics which show that ninety-seven percent of the juvenile delinquents who have been "brothered," never come again before the courts are evidence that the work is more than worth while.—Daily Telegraph.

THE PRINCE RUPERT SOLD. Long Time in Bay Service, Will Plough Waters of the West Indies (Digby Courier.)

The steamer Prince Rupert, for some years in the Bay of Fundy service between St. John and Digby, has been sold to West Indies interests. H. C. Grout, of the C. P. R., has received a telegram from D. McNeill, vice-president of the C. P. R., confirming the sale. A representative of the purchasing company, Mr. Whigan, of Cuba, has been in St. John looking the steamer over, and he recommended that the purchase be made. The deal was put through Friday in Montreal, and it was said in the telegram received by Mr. Grout that the transaction called for immediate delivery.

The Prince Rupert has rendered excellent service during the time she has been on the route, but has given away to the up-to-date and speedier steamer "St. George." The headquarters of the company making the purchase are at San Diego, and it is the intention to have her engage in local service in the West Indies. The C. P. R. have completed arrangements as regards the taking of the steamers on the bay routes now, and, as we reported last week, in addition to the St. George the steamer "Yarmouth" is flying the company's flag. A. McGregor, who has his headquarters at Yarmouth, will in future direct the affairs of the company in connection with the Fundy service from St. John. He will take up his location in the city at once.

Running up and down stairs, sweeping and bending over making beds will not make a woman healthy or beautiful. She must get out of doors, walk a mile or two every day and take Chamberlain's Tablets to improve her digestion and regulate her bowels. For sale by all dealers.

At a religious service in Scotland the late Lord Kelvin noticed a youngster accompanying his grandparents and sitting wise as a young owl through the sermon. WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 24, 1913.

On Wednesday of last week the names of two hundred and twenty pupils were enrolled on the registers of the different departments of the Bridgetown School. Other pupils are coming in and this year promises to be a record-breaking one in the matter of attendance.

At the close of the school recently the teachers met together to consult respecting possible methods for the making of their work more efficient. They all recognize the great importance of "the three R's." But, there is difficulty with the curriculum. A certain course of study is marked out for each grade by our educational authorities. These courses of study are quite full and exacting, especially in the higher grades. Very few of the subjects in them are optional, and unless the pupils have taken all the required subjects they cannot be advanced. The Provincial examiners will certainly observe their deficiency and pronounce them as having failed.

The teachers, however, have agreed to make some alterations in their plans, by which they hope to be able to concentrate attention upon the most fundamental matters. A change which was proposed in one department at the beginning of the term, and which would certainly have been better from an educational point of view, was foiled by notes from several parents requesting, in the case of their children, that the change should not be made.

There is not in any of these courses any study which is not worthy of attention, or in which, speaking generally, any ambitious pupil would not become interested, but the attention necessary to the mastery of some of them tends to push into the background more fundamental, and therefore more necessary, subjects. The persons who prepare these courses of study do not seem to recognize the fact that the great majority of the pupils in the public schools never attend Institutions of higher learning, and what they especially need is "thorough, practical knowledge of those things which are at the foundations of education.

The structure must always remain more or less unreliable if the foundations are not properly laid. Complaints respecting the courses of study in the public schools are by no means confined to our Province. Several periodicals in the United States are at present discussing this question, and the same is true in England.

After all, "the three R's" are the essential things in school days.

The unexpected delay of the needed equipment has prevented the opening of the department of Manual Training. The School Board, however, fully expects the work of this department to begin next week. The services of an efficient teacher, Mr. G. M. L. Blackadar, have been secured. He will divide his time between the schools of Middleton, Annapolis and Bridgetown.

GOD'S ACRE.

I like that ancient Saxon phrase which calls The burial ground God's Acre! It is just; It concentrates each grave within its walls, And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust."

A correspondent wishes us to call special attention to some facts and plans respecting our local God's Acre.

Recently a gentleman from Florida visited the graves of relatives interested there and was so highly gratified with what he saw that he called on the Treasurer and left in his hands a considerable donation to aid in the continuance of the work. Two ladies, also, spending some time among friends visited the grounds, and were equally loud in their praises. The same may be said of many others from far and near. It is great and acknowledged credit to those who have directed the work, some of whom have been unstinted in the time and effort devoted to it, and also a credit to all who have aided them financially or otherwise, that such respect has been paid to the memory of the departed. We may truly add it is an ornament as well as a credit to the town.

The especial need at present is the wherewithal to purchase bulbs which should soon be planted in anticipation of the coming spring. It was the intention to ask all interested friends to assist in a public entertainment for this purpose. But, as something of this kind is planned for a later date, and as several who have been consulted have judged it best to ask for voluntary contributions of money, and have themselves offered to contribute in this way, it has been decided to make a general call. Dr. Armstrong has kindly consented to be the medium through whom this money will reach the Cemetery Committee, and will gladly receive any sums large or small to be used for this purpose.

The Committee hopes for, and expects a very generous response from young and old to this reasonable call. And remember, please, remember, Bis dat qui cito dat.

Annapolis County S.S. Convention

The Fortieth Annual Sunday School Convention of Annapolis County was held at the Torbrook Baptist church, Sept. 17th.

The day was perfect and everyone who had planned to attend were not hindered by bad weather.

In the early morning teams from all parts of the County were starting for Torbrook, and many delegates went the day before by train who were met by the Committee, and taken to their several homes. In fact everything was done by all that would help to make the Convention a grand success.

The first session was largely attended, and also the others in proportion to the time, until evening the church was filled. The reports from different officers and Superintendents were full of encouragement, showing that some faithful work had been done.

The speakers were filled with enthusiasm and it was hard to say what address or discussion was most helpful. We were highly favored with several solos by Rev. E. A. Wheeler of Melvern Square.

Rev. J. W. Brown, our field Secretary, gave us a very interesting report of the World's Sunday School Convention, held at Zurich, Switzerland.

He also stated that the Provincial Committee were trying to arrange for a Summer School on the Berwick Camp grounds. The Methodist body are willing to give the use of the grounds and all public buildings free, with police protection.

There has been one hundred and eighteen united with the churches during the year.

There were seventy-one delegates present, twenty-six schools represented, four pastors, seven County Officers, twenty-eight teachers, three superintendents of Sunday Schools.

The following officers were elected:—Pres. Capt. F. A. Brown, Middleton; 1st Vice-Pres., Henry Messenger, Clarence; 2nd Vice-Pres., R. J. Messenger, Lawrencetown; Sec-Treas., Mrs. Annie L. Saunders, Nictaux; Rec. Secty., Miss Etta May Long, Clementsport; Supt. Elementary, Division, Mrs. C. S. Balcom, Lawrencetown; Supt. Adult Div. Rev. O. E. Steeves, Nictaux; Secondary, C. F. Armstrong, Middleton; Home, Mrs. W. G. Holland, Torbrook; I. B. R. A., Mrs. Amos Frail, Clementsvalle; Missionary Miss Belle Wiswall, South Farmington; Education, W. C. MacPherson, Lawrencetown; Temperance, Mrs. C. W. Hoffman, Nictaux; Rep. on Prov. Executive, O. P. Goucher, Middleton. These officers were all present and we expect greater work will be done the coming year, for we all felt an inspiration and know that no grander work can be engaged in, than teaching the young from the Word of God.

The financial report was given, and we need about $39.00 to make Annapolis County the banner County. Now there is a chance for all lovers of the work, whether members of any Sunday School or not. We would gladly receive any amount that might be contributed on or before Sept. 30th toward this end, which will be acknowledged by the Secretary. An earnest vote of thanks was given to the people of Torbrook who entertained, the choir for their music and the Committee of arrangements, and to all who in any way helped to make the Convention a success. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. O. B. Steeves. W. C. MacPHERSON, Secty.

FOSTER-MILNER

The Baptist parsonage, Bridgetown, was the scene of an interesting event on the 17th inst., when Laura Winnifred Foster, Port Lorne, was united in marriage to Frederick C. Milner, Parkers Cove. The ceremony was performed by Rev. N. A. MacNeill, the ring service being used. Only the immediate relatives of the bride were present. The bride's travelling suit was of blue broadcloth with hat to match. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Milner were conveyed by Anderson's coach to the station, where they took the Bluenose for a wedding tour to Boston and New York.

ANDERSON-MCDONALD NUPTIALS.

(Sydney Daily Post, Sept. 14.) St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was the scene of a very pretty wedding this morning when Miss Catherine May, daughter of Mrs. Jessie McDonald, was united in marriage to Mr. Appleton P. Anderson, manager of the C. P. R. Telegraph office, both of this city.

The bride wore a tailored suit of blue with a Parisian model colour felt hat to match, and carried an exquisite bouquet of white roses, carnations and maiden hair fern. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Pringle.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson left immediately after the ceremony on their wedding tour, which will include the cities of Toronto, Montreal, Chicago and New York, returning via the Annapolis Valley, and spending a few days in Bridgetown, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's parents.

Mrs. Anderson was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents.

The Boston Comedy Company, ably supported by the genial Fritz Webber and his wife, Edwina Gray, was greeted by a good sized house at the Primrose Theatre last Wednesday evening, when the new royalty play, "A Queen for a Day," was presented for the first time in Bridgetown. The play is a stirring one, with amusing incidents, the events in the play being brought on by the extraordinary likeness of Mona Baringold, a girl from the United States, to the Princess Delores, the ruler of Guanama. The various parts in the cast were very cleverly sustained by the Company. On Thursday evening the play "The Lancashire Lass" was put on by the Company. The audience on this evening was very small owing to the stormy weather. Nevertheless the performers gave the same careful attention to the rendering of the play as though the house had been full. Just previous to the raising of the curtain for the last act Mr. Webber, in his usual happy way, spoke of the cordial reception that had always been given him, not only in Bridgetown, but throughout the Province, during the thirty-eight years he has been before the public in theatrical work. He also spoke of the theatrical schools that have come into existence in that time, and of the higher standard of the theatrical profession. Mr. Webber and his Company will play a return engagement in the Primrose Theatre on Saturday evening, Oct. 25, one night only, when the play "Tip Van Winkle" will be presented.

Because He No Longer Suffers With Headaches

TAYLORVILLE, ONT.
"I was a sufferer from Fearful Headaches for over two years. Sometimes, they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicine, was treated by physicians, but yet the Headaches persisted."

A short time ago, I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and I did so, with instant success, very little faith. But after I had taken them for three days, my Headaches were easier and in a week they left me.

After I had taken a box of these tablets, my headaches were quite cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad—and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion excellent.

I had become thin and weak from the constant Headaches but now not only have I been cured of these awful Headaches, but my strength is growing up once more and I feel like a new man!"

NEW LAW FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC.

A number of very important amendments to the criminal code of Canada passed by the federal parliament at the close of its last session, go into force on the 14th of this month. They refer mainly to the suppression of the white slave traffic, although they cover other ground. By the law the offence of procuring is made to cover a very wide variety of cases, and every conceivable form of this infamous traffic is clearly defined and placed under the ban. The penalty is severe, though none too severe, considering the nature of the crime. Every one guilty of an indictable offence under this law is liable to five years imprisonment, and on any second or subsequent conviction is liable to be whipped in addition to imprisonment. The wretch who compasses the ruin of an innocent girl should never again have an opportunity to lure another astray. Penitentiary life is none too severe a penalty for such a crime; while the man or woman who forces a girl into a life of shame is worse than a murderer and should share the fate of the murderer. The enforcement of the law facilitated by the provision that any peace officer may arrest without a warrant any person whom he has good cause to suspect of having committed or being about to commit any of the offences mentioned in the act. The owners of houses used for disorderly purposes also become liable to a penalty. The law as now amended is a very effective weapon for the suppression of a great and widespread evil.—Presbyterian Witness.

If you knew of the real value of Chamberlain's Liniment for lame back, soreness of the muscles, sprains and rheumatic pains, you would never wish to be without it. For sale by all dealers.

WHEN THE PLAINS WERE BLACK WITH BUFFALO.

Out of the one-time vast number of bison that roamed the great American plains as their own, there remain but few, writes E. H. Kemp, in Farm and Ranch.

For unrecorded ages the bison held all the fertile grazing land of this country as their own. The greater part of these herds were in the south and west, but when Europeans began to settle in America small bunches of the animals were occasionally found near the Atlantic coast, though they were generally rare everywhere east of the Appalachian Mountains. From Kentucky across the continent to Nevada, from the Great Slave Lake in Canada on the north to Georgia and Mexico on the south, the bison wandered in mighty droves, migrating as snowstorms and drought dictated.

Wide, rolling plains blackened as far as the sharp eyes of the settlers could reach with huge, shaggy, hump-backed beasts, bellowing, fighting and pawing the earth until it trembled as though an earthquake approached.

A HERD OF FOUR MILLION ANIMALS.

It is almost impossible for the average person of today to realize what the number of these herds amounted to, though an idea may be formed from the statement of Colonel Dodge in a report to the United States National Museum. In making a journey through Arkansas he passed through a continuous herd of buffalo for twenty-five miles.

"The whole country appeared to be one mass of buffalo moving slowly to the northward," he says, "and it was only when actually among them that it could be ascertained that the apparently solid mass was an agglomeration of innumerable small herds of from fifty to two hundred animals, separated from the surrounding herds by greater or less space, but still separated. When I reached a point where the hills were no longer than a mile from the road, the buffalo on the hills, seen in an unusual object in the rear, turned, stared an instant, then started at full speed directly toward me, stampeding and bringing with them the numberless herds through which they passed, and pouring down on me all the herds, no longer separated, but one immense, compact mass of plunging animals, mad with fright and as irresistible as an avalanche. Reining in my horse, I waited until the front of the mass was within fifty yards, when a few well-directed shots split the herd and sent it pouring off in two streams to the right and left. When all had passed they stopped, apparently satisfied, many within less than one hundred yards. From the top of Pawnee Rock I could see from six to ten miles in almost every direction. This whole space was covered with buffalo, looking at a distance like a compact mass."

From careful information it is estimated that this herd comprised at least four million animals. It is difficult now to realize that these animals were often a menace to wagon travel on the plains, besides stopping railway trains and at times throwing them from the track.

BUFFALO A DULL ANIMAL.

The buffalo is an animal of a rather low order of intelligence and his dullness was one of the prime factors in his phenomenally swift extermination. Being exceedingly slow to realize the existence and nature of dangers which threatened his life, he would often quietly stand and see scores and even hundreds of his fellows killed with seemingly the most stolid indifference.

Regularly as winter came on these animals moved to the southern part of their range much the same as do certain species of birds. Upon reaching their winter pasturage they scattered and at the end of the season returned north in less conspicuous herds. They travelled much faster than one would suppose from their ungainly appearance, and rarely followed any but their own well-beaten paths.

When free from ice, rivers as wide as a mile were crossed without hesitation in winter the combined weight of the herds often broke the ice, drowning numbers.

Soft, muddy places and shallow pools were sought by these animals, where they rolled and wallowed until they had completely covered themselves with mud, which when baked in the sun formed an effective armor against the attacks of annoying insects.

Soon after the vast herds of buffalo were so ruthlessly slaughtered some wiser ones who had the good of the country and its people at heart began to realize the loss and the possibilities of a cross with these animals and domestic cattle.

So there has sprung up a new breed of animals, the cattalo, which promises to surpass even the buffalo in hardiness and desirability. One of the great values of the new breed is that of a range animal, under conditions where ordinary cattle do not thrive. Whenever there is a sufficient number of these animals it is held that they will compete with cattle on any footing and more than hold their own in the production of beef, to say nothing of valuable robes and leather.

THEY ARE GOOD EATERS.

They are characterized by great size, being heavier than either race from which they came. They are also very hardy and have remarkable feeding qualities. Their hardiness is indicated by the fact that they can live altogether in the open year round with no feed but grass. They herd in droves and do not separate as do domestic cattle. In winter they dig under the snow for food. They are able to pasture some distance from a stream, being able to do without water for as long as three days.

The buffalo or anything pertaining to him stands out boldly against the most picturesque background that our country affords, being associated with the Indians, the famous early explorers and settlers and historic spots with such poetic and dramatic scenes as may never again be witnessed. He is and always will be the leading animal character in the portraying of the early days of this country, and for this one thing the remnant of his once mighty race should be carefully preserved.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

I received the sample box of Gin Pills and was greatly benefited by them. My kidneys were in such bad condition I could not lift or stoop without pain. In fact, they pained me nearly all the time. I have taken three boxes of Gin Pills, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

FULL-COURSE DINNER FOR FOUR CENTS.

"I never go without one good meal a day at least," said the weary old man with the drooping features. "I'm shabby, I know; I want a shave. But I'm not hungry. Never am, in London. And why should I be, when there is plenty of food for all—food in heaps all over the place, only waiting to be picked up."

"Mind you," he went on, "you have to walk about a bit to get it and you must have the use of a room however humble. You must have, besides, a saucepan and a frying pan. Last of all, you ought to have at least twopence if you want to do the thing in style."

"Now, if a man hasn't sufficient gumption and enterprise to get hold of twopence somehow he has no right to live at all" as far as I can see. Can't he hold a horse for five minutes? Can't he carry a bag? Can't he do a bit of griddling—singing in the street?"

"I'll tell you how to get a five-course dinner for nothing at all. I'll tell you how to get a six-course dinner—with a glass of bitter beer thrown in—for twopence." He considered a while. "The dinner would consist of hors d'oeuvres, soup, fish, joint, cheese and dessert."

"Let us begin with the six-course dinner. Let us see how we can procure our hors d'oeuvres for nothing, first of all."

"We rise early. We dig our very raggedest rags, in case of emergency. Then we hie to Billingsgate. There the salesmen are sorting out their goods. Frequently they come upon a red herring, or a bloater, or a sprat that has got broken or crushed in transit. They dare not restore those damaged goods to the box they have opened as a sample. The buyers are too nice. They would plunge their hands in among the fish, discover the damaged one, and use their discovery to beat down the salesman's price. So he throws it away. And I pick it up and put it in my bag. Dried fish, filleted and cut into strips, makes an excellent dish. You get no better at a swagger west end hotel."

"There is other damaged fish, of course, which is flung aside, and gathered in by you in just the same way. Thus we have, you see, obtained courses one and three. "To procure the material for soup we go to Covent Garden Market. There we shall find, amid heaps of cabbage leaves and other waste green stuff, abundance of vegetables—small cabbages, potatoes, onions, carrots, turnips—whatever happens to be in season, the spillings from overflow baskets. We shall find also the fruit for our dessert, and if you are fond of beautiful things, you may even pick up flowers to adorn your table with."

"So you see, we now have courses one, two, three and six. From Covent Garden we went our way to Smithfield. There we shall find any amount of bones to put in our stockpot under the stalls, in pails, everywhere. We shall find odds and ends of meat, too, for our fourth course. We shall find giblets with which to thicken and flavor our soup. So we have now obtained—for nothing at all—a dinner of five courses. We get six courses for twopence, with a glass of beer, too."

"You will observe that the only course missing from the six-course banquet is the fifth—the chicken. The publican supplies this. I go into the saloon and order my glass of bitter. "You possess so many vegetables that you don't need bread. But if you prefer to take bread, you have only to keep your eyes open to get enough to stock a baker's shop. The waste of bread in London is prodigious. You will find great chunks of it in almost every street. "Fuel? I will not insult your intelligence by telling you where to find paper, and bits of wood lie about everywhere. For coal you go to the arches near King's Cross. There you can get a hundredweight," he concluded, "if you are strong enough to carry it."

The implicit confidence that many people have in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is founded on their experience in the use of that remedy and their knowledge of the many remarkable cures of colic, diarrhoea and dysentery that it has effected. For sale by all dealers.

Joker's Corner

"Do you have as much trouble finding your cuff and collar buttons as you used to?"

"No, I always find 'em in one place now."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, I go to the vacuum cleaner."

It has to be confessed that the minister was rather long-winded. During the "fiftly" a young wife in the congregation remembered that she had left the Sunday dinner in the gas-range without regulating the flame.

She hastily wrote a note and slipped it to her husband, who was an usher. He, thinking it was intended for the minister, calmly walked up and laid it on the pulpit.

The minister paused, took the note with a smile, which changed into a terrific frown as he read— "Please hurry home and shut off the gas."

The jury, after long deliberation, seemed unable to agree in a perfectly clear case. The judge, thoroughly exasperated at the delay, said: "I discharge this jury."

One sensitive juror, indignant at what he considered a rebuke, faced the judge.

"You can't discharge me!" he said with a tone of conviction.

"And why not?" inquired the judge in surprise.

"Because," announced the juror, pointing to the lawyer for the defence, "I was hired by that man there!"

An negro went into a drug store in Richmond and said: "Boss, will you please, sub, call de Colonel on de telephone?"

"Yes," he called the colonel. The old dorky said "Colonel, dar am mule done stall right in de main street right out here in front of de store."

"Yaas, sub, I done tied strings around his ears, but he didn't budge. "What's dat? What's dat? Yaas, sub, I built a fire under him, but it didn't do nothin' but scorch de harness."

"Yaas, sub, yaas, sub, I took de things out, but he wouldn't budge. "Yaas, sub, yaas, sub. What's dat? "No, sub; no, sub, Colonel, I did not twist his tail."

"Yaas, sub; yaas, sub, another gemmen twis' his tail. He look like a Northern mennen."

"What's dat, Colonel? Yaas, sub, dey tye him to de hospital. "No, sah; no, sah; I ain't hear! yit."

The topic that was being talked in Washington related to the proper training of children, which reminded Congressman Oscar Calloway of Texas of an incident that occurred in one of the small towns in his State.

For the fifth time, the Congressman said, a colored boy was arrested on a charge of appropriating chickens, and the Magistrate decided to try an appeal to the lad's father.

"Look here, Rastus," said the Magistrate, when the father appeared in court. "This is the fifth time that your son Ebenezer has been in this court, and I am tired of seeing him here."

"I don't blame yo', Jedge," replied the father, a little sadly. "I've tired ob seeing him here myself."

"Then why don't you teach him how to act?" demanded the Magistrate. "Why don't you show him the right way?"

"Say, Jedge," earnestly replied the father, "I hab done gone an' show dat boy de right way a dozen times, but somehow he allus git caught wid de chickens on him."

"John, I would like to invite my Mrs. Smalley, this evening. Will you be able to be in?"

"No, my dear, I must attend the meeting of the Ancient Order of Foresters tonight."

"Well, tomorrow evening?"

"I have the Royal Arcanum and you know—"

"What about Wednesday evening?"

"Oh, the Odd Fellows meet that night; on Thursday evening I have a meeting of the Knights of Labor to attend; on Friday the Royal Templars of Temperance; on Saturday there's a special meeting of the Masonic Lodge, and I couldn't miss that; and then an Sunday night—let me see—what is there on Sunday night, my dear?"

"The Grand and Ancient Order of Christian Fellowship."

"Why, I have forgotten. Am I a member of that. Let me see—"

"But you have forgotten another society, John, of which you were once a member."

"What's that?"

"Your wife's society."

ROD AND GUN

September Rod and Gun contains a list of contents appropriate of the month and to the character of this magazine of outdoor life. The American Scap on the Pacific Coast is Bonnycastle Dale's contribution.

"Janek" gives some practical advice to duck shooters and reminiscences of duck hunting expeditions in days gone by. Shooting over a Dog by "Senex" will be of interest to those sportsmen who find big game hunting too strenuous but enjoy the milder form of sport involved in the pursuit of small winged game. A Day Among the Ducks by a Saskatchewan writer is a very amusing account of the duck hunting experiences of an amateur shot. Amongst the Manitoba Prairie Chickens, The Cub Across the Midway, Hunting the Loon, the Sport of the Red Men, and other illustrated articles make up an entertaining number of this publication which is issued by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

DUTIES OF THE MARSHALSEA COURT.

Windsor Castle and the other royal residences outside London are under the authority of the Court of Marshalsea. It has the same officials and powers as the Green Cloth, and was established by Henry VIII. In particular it is charged to administer justice between the King's servants so that they are not drawn into the service of foreign sovereigns.

Among cases decided in recent years was that of the second master cook, who, in the absence of the master cook, seated himself in the chair at dinner and thus violated precedence. Again, when King Edward took into his service the Arab chief whose real Turkish coffee had won royal approval at Mevihad, it fell to the Courts of Marshalsea and Green Cloth to decide his exact rank in the culinary hierarchy.

A Paris Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair
In Paris the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats, which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-sought-for article is proven every day.
The French are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale. This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant dressing, and is sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle can be purchased for fifty cents.
