The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Douglas Library
Queen's University

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol  $\rightarrow$  (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol  $\nabla$  (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Douglas Library

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole  $\rightarrow$  signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole  $\nabla$  signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

A D V E R T I S E M E N T

From the EDITOR of the last, and of the present EDITION.

THAT Candour and Liberality, which has ever distinguished the British Nation, will render all Apology unnecessary, for the Liberty, the Editor ventures to take, of glorying in the very favourable Reception which has been given to the last Edition of this valuable Work. Had it been his own original Production, he could not more sensibly have felt the Satisfaction this Circumstance affords him. Delicacy, however, in that Case, might have confined him to a very concise, grateful Acknowledgement; but as the chief Merit of every Edition must be founded on the intrinsic Value of the extensive Plan projected and carried into Execution by the late venerable Mr. Beaues; he may be allowed more freely to expatiate on the many Advantages which the mercantile World, and the Gentlemen of the Long Robe, have derived from it.

Being a Complete Commercial Code, it has afforded useful Information on all Subjects of Dispute respecting maritime and trading Concerns; and has occasioned many amicable Compromises and Adjustments, by Arbitration and References; without entering into tedious and expensive Litigations; but when Law-suits have been unavoidable, it has equally served as a Guide to able Counsellors, and to learned Judges on the Bench, who have frequently quoted the Precedents it furnishes of the Custom of Merchants, and of the Decisions of former Courts. This the Reader will find in a great Measure set forth in the Royal License for the exclusive Right to publish, granted to the Author, upwards of Forty Years ago; and after the Death of Mr. Beaues, the Proprietors, encouraged by a continual Demand for the Work, grown into confirmed Reputation, constantly took every Step in their Power to improve the new Editions, down to the present Time; by intrusting their Editor to make such valuable Alterations and Additions as the Revolutions in commercial Affairs; the modern Decisions in our Courts of Law; and the Increase of able commercial Writers, rendered essentially necessary.

The extensive Circulation and general Approbation of the Work in all Parts of Europe, and even in Asia, was noticed in the Advertisement prefixed to the last Edition, it shall not therefore be repeated; but with Respect to the present Edition, it may be proper to observe, that the final Settlement of the new Government of the United States of America, and the great commercial Revolution which established a Treaty of Commerce between France and Great-Britain, made it the Editor's ardent Wish, that a new Impression might be called for, at no great Distance of Time from the Dates of those important Events.

A Simplification of the Customs, so far as it goes, has been one happy Consequence of this unexpected new Connection with our reputed natural Enemies, and if no other national Benefit had been derived from it, this alone would have been sufficient to have done Honour to the Talents and Integrity of the present Administration. But in Justice to the Framers of the last Treaty of Peace with France, let it likewise be remembered, that the Basis of the Commercial Treaty, of the Consolidating Act, and of the Convention, was laid by them. All these Treaties are inserted in their proper Places.

To this Edition then, we have been enabled to add, not only those and other public Papers, such as the Treaty with Spain, &c. but likewise a complete Tariff of the Duties on Importation and Exportation, Drawbacks, Bounties, &c. which could could not even be attempted in any former Edition, on Account of the complex and perplexing Mode of collecting the Customs, before the Consolidating Act took Place.

With Respect to ancient Documents of Authority, the Forms of which have not undergone any Alteration whatever, they are preserved as they stood in the Original, being testimonials of the Care and Attention of the deceased Author, and Memorials of the great Number of Years, that his Book has been held in deserved Esteem.

Some Pages of obsolete Matter, such for Instance, as the Ordinances regulating the old Banks of France, established during the Minority of Louis XV; and other Papers of a similar Nature, have been rejected, and in their Stead, new and interesting Subjects of the present Day have been introduced, which will be easily found in the general Contents, and in the Index. Unwilling, therefore, to descend to Particulars, we shall only mention the last Regulations of the Corn Trade, and the latest Decisions upon that most important Concern, the Circulation of Accommodation Bills of Exchange, with fictitious Endorsements.

To the List of modern commercial Writers, mentioned in the last Edition, as having afforded great Assistance to the Editor, he has now to add the new Edition of Cooke's Bankrupt Laws. The Reports of Cases adjudged in the Court of Chancery by William Brown, Esq; down to last Trinity Term 1791. Kyd's Treatise on the Law of Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes. The Term Reports, &c. From all these Compilations, he has extracted whatever was essential to complete his own; and always with a candid Acknowledgement of the Obligation; a fair Practice, which he takes this Opportunity to recommend to those, who have most copiously borrowed from the every Edition of Lex Mercatoria, without any Restriction on the Part of its respectable Proprietors.

A new Arrangement was judged necessary with Respect to the Customs, which has been transposed to the Close of the Work, with a View to annex further Regulations of Government, which have been daily expected.

Finally, as the public Funds are now generally considered to be the Barometer of our national Prosperity, which is reputed to increase or decrease, as they rise or fall in any great Degree; and most of our Merchants are deeply interested in them, for themselves, and their foreign Correspondents, the last general Statement of them, as delivered into Parliament, forms one very important Article of the Appendix.

HISTORICAL DEDUCTION
OF
FROM THEIR ORIGIN.

IT is essentially necessary for the better understanding of this historical Deduction, that we should define the Distinction between the Terms TRADE and COMMERCE, according to their general Acceptation at this Day throughout the mercantile World.

TRADE is that Kind of Traffick which is carried on between the Members of any Community, great or small, inhabiting the same COUNTRY; wherein Exchanges are made of one Commodity for another: In which Case, the Trade so carried on is usually called Barter; or wherein Purchases of Commodities are made from each other, through the Medium of Money, or its Representative Bills, Notes, Bonds, and other Paper Securities.

COMMERCE is that Intercourse with foreign Nations, which is carried on from one COUNTRY to another by Means of Navigation; either for the Exchange of Commodities, or for the Sale or Purchase of them, through the Medium of Money. Commerce then, has its Basis in Navigation, and is supported by EXPORTS and IMPORTS, whereas simple Trade may be transacted independent of these Elements of Commerce, and herein chiefly consists the Difference.

TRADE is almost as old as the Creation; a very small Increase of Mankind proved its Utility, and demonstrated the natural Dependence our Species had upon one another: Their Occupations were, by the wise Disposition of Providence, suited to their Wants; and the diligent Discharge of the one, by his Blessing, rendered sufficient to supply the moderate Cravings of the other; and though Tilling of the Earth, or Feeding of Flocks, were the sole primevous Labours, yet, limited as they were, they could not be exercised by the first Race of Men with that Comfort their great Creator designed them, without a mutual Correspondence and Traffick, as the Husbandman's Subsistence would have been poor without the Grazer's Help, and the latter's comfortable, under the Want of Corn, Fruits, and Pulse to his Milk; this led them to an Exchange of Commodities; and thus Trade commenced in the Infant World, and so continued whilst our Progenitors could content themselves with these Riches of Nature, and were not obliged by a growing Posterity, to alter their Method in disposing of them. But when this became the Case, buying and selling through the Medium of Money was invented and adapted in Lieu of Barter by most Nations, and Commerce has been so handed down to us, with the Exception of those Savages to whom the Use of Coin has hitherto remained unknown, and whose Traffick is still carried on in its primitive Way, though not always with its native Simplicity.

AN HISTORICAL DEDUCTION OF TRADE

But before this Alteration, occasioned by the great Increase of Mankind, their Desires were easily satisfied, as their Wants were the Boundaries of them; they contentedly made the Fleece of their Sheep serve them for Cloathing, and their Hunger found a ready Supply from their Gardens and Flocks; a neighbouring Spring slacked their Thirst; and a Tree, or a Tent, was sufficient to defend them from the Inclemencies of Weather, in those Climes where the first Race was settled. Their Labour procured them a satisfactory Support, and the Products of the Earth and Cattle supplied them with the common Necessaries and Comforts of Life; till the Contamination of Vice introduced Fraud, and this gave Birth to Avarice and Violence; the Stronger began to invade the Weaker, and as separate Property could only be maintained by Force and Policy, Cities were built, and Governments formed; and when by this Means an aggregated Number swelled to too great a Magnitude, to have their Necessities supplied by neighbouring Territories, they were compelled to seek for remoter Helps, by Commerce, destroying those halcyon Days, pregnant with the Blessings of Health and Peace, by the Introduction of Luxury and Excess, which spreading in Proportion to the Extension of Commerce, carried with them a long Train of Mischief and Diseases, quite changing the Face of the primeval Golden Age, so replete with Quiet and Tranquillity; Distempers and Disquiets flowed in from this Defection; and our unhappy Forefathers no sooner quitted the Rules of Abstinence and Moderation, than they found this Deviation and Change productive of a thousand Ills, destructive to the Ease both of Mind and Body. But though these were the fatal Consequences of Commerce abused, yet the Growth of Mankind, and the peopling thereby of different Parts of the Earth, rendered the Continuation of it absolutely necessary for their Comfort and Support; and Life itself would have proved burthensome, without this Intercourse of mutual Assistance, which, in Process of Time, encreasing as Mankind did, and Men's Views and Designs being extended in Proportion to their Desires, Commerce was no longer limited to the providing the Necessaries and Luxuries of Life, but Profit was sought in, and became a Motive to the carrying it on; which, however, might occasionally have promoted both Unity and Charity among Men, had the Correspondence been conducted with that Sincerity it ought; and by this Means might have been rendered productive of those reciprocal Benefits and Advantages, that naturally accrue from the supplying the Wants of one Country, with the Superfluities of another. And though the Degeneracy of Mankind has prevented the first Principles of Commerce leading to Happiness having the intended Effect, by intermixing Cozenage and Deceit in their Dealings, and, for many Ages past, has made Ambition and Avarice the chief Motives to the Continuance and Extension of Commerce; yet these sinister Designs have accidentally proved very beneficial to latter Ages, as it is probable, that without such Excitements, the greatest Part of the World had still remained unknown to us; but, pushed on by the Desire of Gain, in order to support the one and satisfy the other, Men have made many Discoveries which lay hid for Ages, disregarding the Risks they ran, and the Inconveniencies they suffered, whilst they considered themselves in the Road to Riches and Preferment: The pleasing Prospect animated them to fresh Engagements, and the Succession of these opened to us the wide Field for Commerce that now lies before us; whatever then were the Motives to the daring Enterprizes of former Ages, we of the present are generally indebted to the Undertakers of them, for many of the Comforts and Conveniencies of Life. And my Design in the Remainder of this Chapter being to shew the Advantages we receive from their Labours, and to deduce the Growth and Progress of Commerce from the small Beginnings I have mentioned, I shall point out the beneficial Influence it always had, and still has, on human Affairs; and shew that all Nations have increased in Strength and Power, or remained weak and abject, in Proportion as they have encouraged or neglected Commerce; which is now become an universal Instrument that offers itself to every one, for the Improvement of his Fortune, and from whence the most flourishing States derive their Strength, Sovereigns their surest Revenues, and private Men the Establishment of their Families in Ease and Splendor.

Whoever runs over all the Ages of the World will find, that the Histories, even of the most warlike Nations, will furnish him with more interesting Accounts of their Commerce than of their Conquests.

If the greatest Empires were established by Valour and the Force of Arms, they were made firm, and supported, only, by the Succours, which Trade, through the Labour and Industry of the People, furnished them with; and the Conquerors would soon have languished, and perished with the Conquered, had they not, as the Scripture expresses it, converted the Iron of their Arms into Ploughshares, and had Recourse to Riches, which Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce produce, in order to preserve and improve, by the tranquil Arts of Peace, the Advantages acquired in the Horrors and Tumults of War.

In Proof of the above general Assertion, of the Utility and Excellence of Commerce, let us look back into the first Ages of the World, and bring the History of it down to our Times.

MONSIEUR HUET*, the learned Author of that excellent Book, entitled, A History of the Commerce and Navigation of the Ancients, seems persuaded, that the Phenicians were the first Navigators in the World; though many think the late ingenious Dr. GARCIN, better founded in assigning it to the Arabians, in the little Tract he communicated to the Publick on that Subject. I shall not presume to offer my Sentiments on so intricate a Subject, after what has been advanced by those learned Authors; but shall lay before my Readers the Reasons they assign for their different Conclusions, from which they may draw Motives for fixing their own Judgement, on the Side they think most agreeable to Truth. I shall begin with the Opinion of the first of these great Men, and conclude with that of the latter.

The PHENICIANS, whose Capital was the City of TYRE, are the first that present themselves on examining the History of the Ancients; and they will sufficiently prove, to what a Height of Glory, Grandeur, and Riches, a Nation is capable of attaining by the sole Resources of Commerce.

COMMERCE
TYRIANS.

These People, according to HUET, only occupied a narrow Border along the Sea-Coast, and Tyre itself was built on an ungrateful barren Soil, which, when most fruitful and productive, was insufficient to support that great Number of Inhabitants, which the first Successes of Commerce had brought thither.

Two Advantages, however, indemnified this Defect; they had excellent Ports on the Coast of their little State, particularly that of their Capital; and they were born with so happy a Genius for Commerce, as to be commonly associated with the Egyptians, in the Honour done these latter, by supposing them the Inventors of Naval Commerce, particularly that of long Voyages.

The Phenicians knew so happily how to profit by these two Advantages, that they soon became Masters of the Sea, and of Commerce. Lebanon, and the other neighbouring Mountains, furnished them with excellent Wood for the Construction of their Ships; and they had in a short Time numerous Fleets which ran the Hazards of unknown Voyages to establish their Commerce; and their People multiplying almost to Infinity, by the great Number of Strangers, which the Desire of Gain, and the sure Occasion of enriching themselves, drew to their City, they found themselves in a Condition to send out many Colonies, particularly that famous one of Carthage, which preserved the Phenician Spirit of Traffick, and did not yield to Tyre itself in its Commerce, whilst it greatly surpassed it in the Extent of its Dominion.

The Degree of Glory and Power, to which the Navigation and Commerce of Tyre had raised it, rendered it so famous, that the Report of prophane Authors would hardly be believed destitute of Exaggeration, had not the Prophets themselves spoke of it with still greater Magnificence; so that the Description of its Grandeur, of its Forces, and the almost incredible Number of its Vessels, Merchants, and Merchandizes, makes one of the most beautiful Passages in the Prophecy of Ezekiel, which could not possibly be forgot, when we are speaking of the Excellence of Commerce, and its Splendor. The Prophet Jsaiah likewise says, That Tyre is the common City of all Nations, and the Centre of all Commerce; and in a Word, is the Queen of Cities, whereof the Merchants are Princes, and which has for Traders the most illustrious Persons of the Earth. Such was the ancient Tyre, when she fell, or sunk, under the Arms of Nebuchadnezzar, after a Siege of thirteen Years. It is true, that Providence had secured an Asylum and Resource to the Inhabitants of this unfortunate City; for the Tyrians, during so long a Siege, had both the Precaution and Time to fortify a neighbouring Island, where they established their maritime Forces, and where their Merchants retired with their Stores and Merchandizes, and there continued to flourish a Traffick, that the taking and ruining of their first City, did not destroy their Empire of the Sea, nor the Reputation of their Commerce.

AN HISTORICAL DEDUCTION OF TRADE

It was this new City of Tyre, which, trusting in its Riches and Puissance, dared afterwards to resist Alexander the Great, already Master of one Part of Asia, and had like to have interrupted, for some Time, the Course of his Victories; but in Reward for its Temerity, it was entirely destroyed by the Conqueror; and, to the End there might remain to it no Hopes of being a second Time restored, he removed its Marine and Commerce, transferring them to Alexandria, a new City that its Founder intended to make the Capital of the Empire of Asia, of which he then meditated the Conquest.

NIANS.

Whilst the old and the new Tyre experienced these great Revolutions, Carthage, a Tyrian Colony augmented its Forces by Commerce, and thus became enabled to dispute with Rome the Empire of the World.

These new Africans soon reaped the Benefits, which the happy Situation of their City offered, and profited by the Genius for Navigation and Commerce, which they had brought with them from Phœnicia; they made their Fleets and Merchants pass on one Side to the Ocean, beyond the Pillars of Hercules; and, on the other, along the whole western Coast of Europe; and, if some Autors may be credited, their Pilots and their Merchants even had the Boldness, or good Fortune, to be the first that penetrated as far as the unknown Lands, the Discovery of which, many Ages afterwards, has done so much Honour, and brought so much Profit to the Spaniards.

The Carthaginians, totally occupied in their Commerce, never thought, till too late, to avail themselves of the immense Riches, which they had amassed by this Means, to extend their Dominion abroad; however, their being unseasonably tired of their pacific State cost them dear.

Their City, which Commerce had peopled with above seven hundred thousand Inhabitants, was soon deserted, to furnish their Armies with Troops and Recruits. Their Fleets, accustomed solely to carry their Merchants and Merchandize, were now only loaded with Soldiers and warlike Stores; and of their wisest and more fortunate Traders were formed those Chiefs, and Generals of Armies, which were destined to make Rome tremble, and put Carthage in a Condition to become the Mistress of the World.

The renowned military Exploits of the Carthaginians in Scily, Sardinia, Spain, and particularly Italy, under the famous HANNIBAL, and also the Disorder of their Affairs by the Victories of the two SCIPIOS, are Facts well known, and are of too little Import to the Matter of which we treat here, to call for any Detail of them. I shall, therefore, only add, that Commerce had raised Carthage to so high a Degree of Riches and Power, as obliged the Romans to carry on a cruel and doubtful War for fifty Years; to subdue this Rival; and, in fine, triumphant Rome believed she could not entirely subjugate and reduce her by any better Means, than cutting off those Resources which she might yet find in Commerce, and which, during so long a Time had supported her against all the Forces of the Republick.

It was, in Effect, that Resolution of the Senate which decided the Fate of Carthage; and the Carthaginians themselves were so terrified, that having apprehended by this Design, they should be obliged to give up their Fleet, and to retire inland five Leagues from the Sea, they chose rather to expose themselves to the Hazards of the third Panic War, so fatal to them, than to renounce so easily the only Hopes that could remain to them in their Misfortunes, and voluntarily consent to see their Commerce pass to Utica, where they knew the Romans, to achieve their Ruin, proposed to transfer it, as we have said Alexander did did that of Tyre, to the new City he had given his Name to, when he determined to punish the Tyrians for having dared to retard his Conquests.

ALEXANDER lived too short a Time to be Witness of the happy and flourishing State, to which Commerce would elevate this last City. The Ptolemies, who, after his Death, had Egypt for their Part of his Conquests, took Care to support the Infant Trade of Alexandria, and soon brought it to such a Degree of Perfection and Extent, as to bury in Oblivion both Tyre and Carthage, which, during so long a Time, had carried it on, almost alone, and had re-assembled to them the Commerce of all other Nations.

EGYPTIANS.

The rapid Success of the Commerce of Alexandria, ought not to occasion much Surprize, when Reflection is made on its happy Situation, which rendered it so commodious to be the Depository of all Merchandizes from the East and West; and to maintain the Empire of the Sea, the surest Means of surpassing all other Nations in Wealth and Power.

This famous City had on one Side a free Commerce with Asia, and all the East, by the Red Sea; the same Sea and the Nile gave her Entrance into the vast and rich Countries of Ethiopia. The Commerce of the rest of Africa and Europe was open to her by the Mediterranean; and, if she would carry on the interior Commerce of Egypt, she had besides the Convenience of the Nile, and Canals made by the Hands of Men, Works immortal, and almost incredible, of the first Egyptians, with the Advantage of Caravans, so convenient for the Safety of Merchants, and for the Transportation of their Merchandizes.

Add to these, a large and safe Port, where foreign Vessels arrived from all Parts, and whence departed incessantly the Egyptian Vessels, which carried their Merchants and Commerce to all Parts of the then known World.

It was this Conveniency of depositing Merchandizes at Alexandria, that spread through all Egypt those immense Riches, which rendered their Kings sufficiently powerful to support themselves, for more than a Century against the Romans, who endeavoured, from Time to Time, to subdue so fine a Kingdom: Riches so considerable, that Historians affirm, that the Product only of the Customs of Importation and Exportation, upon the Merchandizes that passed the Custom-Houses of Alexandria, amounted annually to more than thirty Millions of Livres, or about 2,250,000*l.* Sterling, though the major Part of the Ptolemies were moderate in the Imposts which they laid on their People.

Before the Battle of Actium, the Romans had always found, in the Spoils of the Nations they had subjected, from whence to fill the Treasury of the Republick; and, at the same Time, to furnish a Sufficiency for the Expences, in which the Plan of an universal Monarchy continually engaged them.

COMMERCE
ROMANS.

These Resources beginning to fail them, the Commerce of Egypt seemed very proper to support, by its Riches and Credit, the Reputation and Empire of Rome.

From the Time that AUGUSTUS had reduced this Kingdom to a Province, he earnestly endeavoured to make the Commerce of Alexandria flourish more than ever, and at the same Time he augmented that which the Egyptians had carried on in Arabia, the Indies, and to the most remote Parts of the East, by Way of the Red Sea.

Alexandria become Roman, was only inferior to Rome itself, in Grandeur and in Number of Inhabitants. The Magazines of the Capital of the World were no longer filled but with the Merchandizes which came to it from the Capital of Egypt; and very soon neither Rome, nor all Italy subsisted; out by the Corn and other Provisions brought to it by the Merchants and by Egyptian Fleets; and that in so great a Quantity and Abundance, that Josephus affirms, though doubtless with some Exaggeration, that Alexandria yielded more Riches to the Treasury of Rome in one Month, than all Egypt in a Year: Though, if Pliny's Calculation is to be credited, the Profits of the Commerce of Egypt amounted yearly, for Rome, to 125,000,000 Crowns, or about 28,125,000*l.* Sterling; that is to say, a hundred Times more than the Romans employed, whose ordinary Expences did not amount to above 1,150,000 Crowns.

This great Commerce, which soon caused that of all the other Provinces of the Empire to flourish, augmented incessantly, and made the Senate determine to maintain it, by the Corporations established in Rome, for Trade and Traders, by the Laws which it made in their Favour, or rather by those of the Rhodians, which it adopted, and which are long since become a Part of the Law of Nations, for the Navigation and Commerce of the Mediterranean, by the Magistracy it charged with their Execution, and by the Protection which it afforded to Merchants, as well Strangers as Romans, throughout the Empire.

Alexandria, notwithstanding, had, in the End, the Fortune of Tyre and of Carthage. Commerce had raised her, and the Fall of her Commerce overfet her. The Saracens, who seized on Egypt in the Reign of Heraclius, having by their Ferocity driven away the Merchants, who love Tranquillity and Peace, this City, which then held the first Rank after Rome and Constantinople, hardly preserved any Thing of its ancient Splendor; and though it afterwards regained some Vigour under the Sultans, and enjoys the same now from the Christian Nations which carry on the Commerce of the Levant, it is, however, no longer possible to know again that ancient Alexandria, once so famous, and which by its Commerce was, for so long a Time, the Glory and Support of an Empire, that, in Truth, was founded by Arms, but received its principal Strength from Commerce.

GAULS,

Before we proceed to treat of the Commerce of the Moderns, we will yet add some Examples of the Gallick Cities, which were formerly rendered famous by the Enterprizes of their Merchants.

Marfeilles, the most ancient Ally of the Romans, equally celebrated for its Antiquity, for the Wisdom and Equity of its Senate, for the Sciences taught in its Academies, for the many Colonies it established, and for the Wars it gloriously maintained against so many different People, jealous of its Riches, was indebted only to its Trade for these Advantages; and it was solely by the Means of Commerce, that it arrived, in so short a Time, to that high Point of Respect and Power, which rendered it for a long Time, the Arbitrator of the neighbouring Nations, who were drawn there to learn the Arts and Politeness of Greece, which its first Inhabitants brought from Asia, when they left it, to settle among the Gauls.

The Example of Marfeilles soon animated the greatest Part of the Gallick Cities to engage in Commerce, more especially those that were situated upon the same Sea, or that were not far distant.

Arles became famous for its Experience in Navigation, and for its Ability in the Art of building Ships. It likewise distinguished itself for the Invention of divers Manufactures, and above all, its Works in Gold and Silver gave it a great Reputation.

Narbonne even yet exceeded Arles, and, so long as its Port existed, it saw Fleets arrive from the East, from Africa, Spain, and Sicily, laden with all Sorts of Merchandize; whilst the Inhabitants on their Side equipped their own Ships to carry abroad the Products of their Country, or the Manufactures produced by their Industry.

When the Alteration of the Course of the River Aude had occasioned its deserting the Port of Narbonne, Montpellier took the Advantage of that Change, and this last City received in her own, Ships from all Parts of the Mediterranean, which arrived before in that of the first mentioned.

There was yet reckoned among the Number of the French Cities, situated on this Coast, which Commerce had rendered flourishing, though in a very inferior Degree to those just now mentioned, Agde, Toulon, Anteb., Frejus, and Ague-Morte, particularly the last, before the Sands of the Rhone had left it at a Distance from the Sea; and no one can be ignorant, that even in the Time of St. Lewis, this was the Port where the Embarkations were made for the holy Wars, and that it was the Merchants of this Place who furnished that Monarch with the greatest Part of the Ships that composed the numerous Fleet which he fitted out in the last Years of his Life for his Expedition against Tunis.

The Gallick Ocean had likewise its Ports and Cities for Trade, of great Reputation; as Bordeaux in Guyenne, Vannes and Nantes in Bretagne, and the famous Cerbillon, now unknown, which Strabo places near the Mouth of the Loire.

AND COMMERCE, FROM THEIR ORIGIN.

In fine, in the inland Country was Lyons, a City at this Time famous for its Trade, where, if we may believe some Authors, there formerly assembled no less than sixty Nations to treat of their Commerce, and which, from that Time, by its happy Situation at the Confluence of the Rhone and Saone, extended its Intercourse from the Ocean to the Mediterranean, and was become as a general Staple or Storehouse for all the French Merchandizes, without reckoning the Commerce which she carried on in all the Levant, and particularly in Egypt, by Means of the Correspondencies which she had with Arles and Marseilles.

Let us now pass from the ancient History, to those of the middle Ages and latest Times, and these two Histories will furnish us with Facts, which will not be less interesting, nor less glorious to Commerce, than those of which Antiquity has taken Care to preserve to us the Memory.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMERCE IN THE WEST.

Though the Romans, as we have seen, cultivated and improved the Commerce of Egypt, after that Country became one of their Provinces; yet in general they were not a People possessing the Spirit of Commerce, they rather supplied the Want of native Industry by their attachment to military Glory, and they provided themselves with the Luxuries of other Nations by conquering and plundering them. The Accounts of the immense Treasures they brought home, after subduing the richest Countries of the then known World, almost surpass the Bounds of Probability; but they are so well authenticated, that they must find a Place here as Memorials of the Splendor of ancient Rome.

Julius Caesar, upon his Conquest of Gaul, Africa, Egypt, and Pontus, is said to have had at one Time carried before him in his Triumph, Vessels of Gold and Silver, computed by modern Authors to have been equal in Value to twelve Millions Sterling, which were deposited in the publick Treasury; also 1822 Gold Diadems, weighing 15,023 Pounds, independent of the vast Treasure which belonged to him as General. Their Pro-consuls were likewise continually sending or bringing home, from the conquered Provinces of the East, immense Riches in Gold and Silver, precious Stones, and every Article rare or excellent for Cloathing, Furniture, Tables, and Equipages, and for the Decoration of their publick Buildings. The Palaces, Estates, and Revenues of many of the first Citizens of Rome equalled those of Sovereign-Princes. Lentulus, Craffus, and others had Estates worth three or four Millions. The Emperor Nero's Donations at sundry Times are by some computed to have amounted to 17,750,000l. Sterling; and it is recorded, that he paid for a single Carpet the Sum of 32,000l. Some Roman Ladies are said to have paid 3,000l. for a single Piece of Linen; and Lullia Paulina, when dressed in all her Jewels, wore to the Value of 322,000l. Sterling. Yet these immense Luxuries not being employed in Circulation, through the various Channels of Commerce, were in a great Degree to be considered as a dead Stock locked up in the Houses of Individuals; and as the Sloth, Luxury, and Effeminacy of the Emperors, the Magistrates, and the People increased with them, it was soon found by sad Experience, that the Empire could not sustain the vast Expence of her civil and military Establishments without Industry, without Manufactures, without Trade, to support general Commerce. Its Dissolution was the Consequence of Relaxation from the Principles of Industry, Sobriety, and Oeconomy, the Basis of the durable Prosperity of Commercial States.

The Fall of the Roman Empire drew after it that of all the People who had submitted to it. The Inundation of the Barbarians, so fatal to the Sciences and polite Arts, was not less so to Commerce; and, if the Learned saw their Libraries, and the finest Works, sacrificed to the Flames, by People equally brutal as ignorant, the Merchants had not more Power to save from their Fury, either their numerous trading Fleets; with which they covered both the one and the other Sea, nor the vast Magazines, which they had always full of the most useful and rich Merchandizes.

So that whilst these fierce Nations, were fighting with the Romans, or whilst they were disputing among themselves the Possession of the Countries they had usurped, all their Commerce consisted only of the Spoils of the Vanquished; and they had no other Trade than the sharing of those immense Treasures, they found amassed in all the Towns of the Empire, which they sacked, and particu-ticularly in the Capital, which was more than once exposed a Prey to their Fury and Avarice.

But after the bravest and most fortunate of these Barbarians had formed powerful Monarchies from the Ruins of the Roman Empire: When they were established, some among the Gauls, as the Franks; others in Spain, as the Goths; and others in Italy, as the Lombards; they soon learnt from the People they had subjected, and with whom they afterwards associated, the Necessity of Commerce, and the Manner of carrying it on with Success; and they became so skilful, that some of them were in a State or Capacity of giving Lessons to others; for it is to the Lombards that the Invention and Use of Banks, of Books with double Entries, of Exchanges, and a Number of other ingenious Practices, which facilitate and secure Commerce, are commonly attributed.

It does not appear very certain who were the People of Europe, who, after the new Masters had divided it, and restored Peace, applied themselves first to Commerce, and made it flourish.

Some Injunctions of Charlemagne, and of Louis le Debonnaire, might make it believed, that it was by France that Commerce re-established itself in the West, and the Laws that those two Princes made, either to hinder their Subjects from a contraband Trade with their Neighbours, or to ease the Merchants who trafficked in the interior Parts of their Estates, from the new Impositions which they would have laid on their Merchandizes, at least shew that the French, before the eighth Century, did not carry on an inconsiderable Trade, either within or without the Kingdom.

There is, however, an Appearance, that the Civil Wars, which were so frequent under the Reign of Debonnaire, and during that of his Children, soon interrupted the first Success of Commerce, revived in France, and the Incursions of the Normans, who, almost at the same Time, laid waste the French Empire, having entirely destroyed Trade; the Italians had a Juncture to acquire the Glory of being its new Restorers, as they ought to have that of afterwards recalling the liberal Arts and Sciences, which had been banished ever since the dismembering the Roman Empire.

It is therefore to the People of Italy, particularly to those of Venice and Genoa; that the Re-establishment of Commerce is indebted; and it is also to Commerce that these two famous Republicks, which have been so long Rivals, owe their Glory and Power.

COMMERCE
VENETIANS.

In the Bottom of the Adriatick Sea, there were a Quantity of small marshy Isles, separated only by narrow Canals, but covered and secured by divers Morasses, which rendered the taking them almost impracticable. Here some Fishermen retired, and lived on the small Traffick which they made with their Fish, and the Salt they drew from the Ponds on some of these Isles.

It was these Islands which served for a Retreat to the Venetians, a People of that Part of Italy situated along the Gulph, when Alaric King of the Goths, and afterwards Attila King of the Huns, came to ravage Italy, particularly after the last, who highly merited the Name of the Scourge of God, which he gave himself, had taken Padua and Aquila, and reduced them to Ashes.

These new Inhabitants of the Morasses did not at first compose any Body Politic, but each of the seventy-two Isles of this little Archipelago had, for a long Time, their proper Magistrates, and, a Kind of separate Sovereignty.

When their Commerce became so flourishing as to give Jealousy to their Neighbours, the Venetian Islanders thought of forming themselves into a Republick, and it was this Union, first begun in the sixth Century, but not perfected till towards the Middle of the eighth, which laid the most solid Foundations of the Power and Commerce of the Venetians, particularly that of the last, which, during more than four Ages, had not its Equal in all Europe.

Before the Union of the Isles, the Commerce of their Inhabitants spread but little beyond the Coasts of the Mediterranean; but the Establishment of the new Republick having given Courage and Strength to their Merchants, their Fleets were in a short Time seen to visit the most distant Parts of the Ocean, and afterwards those of Egypt; and by the Treaties made with the Sultans, under the Pope's Approbation, secured the Article of Spices, and other rich Merchandizes dizes of the East, which they were to purchase at Cairo, a new City the Saracen Princes had built on the Banks of the Nile.

The Riches of the Venetians increased to such a Degree, by the Commerce with Egypt, that they thought themselves strong enough to undertake some Conquests, and to form, from the taking a Number of important Towns, what they called their State of Terra Firma, which rendered them yet more considerable in Italy, though they lost part of it, after the famous League of Cambray.

Animated by these first Successes, and supported by the Resources of their Commerce, and by the inexhaustible Funds, which their Merchants were capable of furnishing to the Treasury of the Republic, Venice happily carried her Arms yet farther, and extended her Conquests on the Side of the Morea, and in many of the principal Isles of the Mediterranean and Archipelago, which she subjected to her Dominion; and, to complete her Renown, she had a great Share in almost all the Croisades which were made for the Recovery of the Holy Land, or for the Succour of the Christians of the Levant, as well as at the taking of Constantinople, and the Conquest of the best Part of the Grecian Empire, which past under the Dominion of the French Princes, in the Beginning of the thirteenth Century.

Venice was in this State of Prosperity and Glory when she experienced the Lot of so many powerful Cities, which the Fall of their Commerce had either ruined or weakened; she found, in the Diminution of her own, the fatal Term of that Power which had given Umbrage to so great a Number of Princes combined to her Destruction, who signed the Treaty of Cambray in 1508; and two of her most celebrated Historians take particular Notice that their sage Senate had not had so much Trouble to re-establish their public Affairs after the famous Battle of Aignadel, but because the Republic could not any longer find the same Resources as heretofore, in the Commerce of the Merchants, already greatly enfeebled by the Loss of that of the Spices, which the Portuguese had begun to carry from them, and which was also diminished from another Side by the Provincials, particularly by those of Marfeilles, who became in greater esteem than the Venetians at Constantinople, and in the principle Sea-Ports of the Levant, and who knew so well how to maintain their Credit, that very soon all the Commerce of those Parts was carried on only under French Colours.

Genoa, which had re-commenced an Application to Commerce, at the same Time with Venice, and had not been in any Degree less fortunate in making it flourish, was, for a long Time, a troublesome Rival, who disputed with the Venetians the Empire of the Sea, and who shared with them the Commerce, they carried on to Egypt, and all the other Ports of the Levant, and of the West.

A Jealousy was not long in breaking out, and the two Republics having come to a Rupture, it was not till after three Centuries of an almost continual War, only suspended by some Treaties, that the Genoese, commonly superior to the Venetians, lost, about the End of the fourteenth Century, their Reputation and Superiority at the Battle of Chiozza, where ANDREW CONTARINI, Doge and General of the Venetians, secured to his Republic, by a happy Desperation, the Honour of an unequal combat, which decided for ever a Quarrel so famous, and restored to Venice the Empire of the Sea, and the Superiority of Commerce which were the Rewards of a Victory so unexpected.

Genoa was never able to recover its Loss, and victorious Venice enjoyed for a whole Century its Advantages, both in Commerce and War; but, in fine, these two Republics, although very unequal for the Rank which they hold now in Europe, and for the figure they make, attained a Sort of Equality in Commerce, with this Difference, however, that the Venetians carried on a greater than the Genoese in the Levant, and the Genoese a more considerable one than the Venetians in France, Spain, and other Christian States in Europe.

The wild, enthusiastic Expeditions of the Crusaders for the Recovery of the Holy-Land from the Saracens, in the Eleventh and following Centuries; the Introduction of the Distillery into Europe in the twelfth Century; the Conquests of the German Knights of the Cross in Prussia and Livonia; all these Circumstances concurred to the Revival and Strengthening of Commerce in the meridional Parts of Europe. But, above all, the Institution of a Society of Merchants in the North, which not only brought it to all the Perfection it was capable of having, before the Discovery of the East and West Indies, but also began to give it those Laws it has continued to observe under the Name of Uses and Sea Customs, and to form a Sort of Code, the original of all those, which have been since made for Maritime Commerce.

This Society is the famous Association of the Hanseatick Towns, which is commonly believed to have begun at Bremen on the Wefer, in 1614.

It was not at first composed of more than the Towns situated on the Baltick Sea, or of those that were but little distant. Its Reputation and its Forces increasing, there were but few of the trading Towns in Europe which were not desirous of engaging in it. FRANCE furnished to the Confederation, Rouen, St. Malo, Bourdeaux, Bayonne, and Marsilles; SPAIN, Barcelona, Seville, and Cadix; ENGLAND, London; PORTUGAL, Lisbon; the LOW COUNTRIES, Antwerp, Dort, Amsterdam, Bruges, Rotterdam, Ostend, and Dunkirk; ITALY and SICILY, Messina, Livorno, and Naples.

The End of the fourteenth Century and the Beginning of the 15th were the most flourishing Times of this Alliance; it was then it presumed to declare War against Kings; and History has not forgot that which it made against Waldemar, King of Denmark, about 1348, and against Eric in 1428; particularly this last, when the Hanseatick Fleet was composed of forty Ships, with twelve Thousand regular Troops, exclusive of the Sailors.

The Policy of the Princes, whose principal Towns had entered into this Association, thought it ought to give Bounds to a Power, which began to grow suspicious, and which had not failed to become very soon formidable; the Means were easy and short; each one withdrew their Merchants from the Alliance, which, in a little Time (of that large Number of Towns of which it was composed in its greatest Power) found itself reduced to only those that had begun the Confederation; Towns, notwithstanding, still so powerful by their Commerce, that they were admitted to make Treaties with the greatest Kings, and particularly with those of France.

Some Towns of Lower Germany still preserve the Name of Hanseatick Towns, but, for the greatest Part, this is rather a Title with which they aim to honour themselves, than a Mark that they continue to carry on Commerce under the Laws and Protection of the Ancient Alliance, there not being now more than Lubeck, Hamburg, Bremen, Rostock, Brunswick, Cologne, and a few others, which are truly Hanseaticks, and of which the Deputies are found at the Assemblies, either ordinary or extraordinary, which they hold for the Common Interest of the Association.

The great Commerce which Holland carries on with the Hanseatick Towns, does not contribute a little to support them in a Part of their ancient Reputation; and it is particularly to the Alliance which they have with that powerful Republic, that they owe the Preservation of their Liberty; the Succours which some of them have received have more than once saved them from the Enterprizes of the Princes their Neighbours, who either pretend to have a Right over them, or were jealous of the Riches that their Merchants amass by Commerce.

It was also Commerce, and the immense Riches the Dutch acquired by it, that laid the first and most solid foundation of that Power, which has placed them in a Condition to give so great Succours to their Allies; and it is only to the Resources, which they have found in Commerce, that they owe that Degree of Strength and Credit, in which, at present, their Republic appears; a Credit so great and so well established, as has already, for a long Time, rendered it equal to Kings, and in some Sort the Arbitrator of their Differences.

DUTCH.

The Netherlands, or Low Countries, now known by the names of Austrian, French, and Dutch Flanders; and the Seven United Provinces, forming the Republic of Holland, were anciently known by the Name of Lower Germany, or Belgium. They were reduced to a deplorable Condition after the Fall of the Western Empire, by the Ravages of the Barbarians, when, through Want of People, their Lands remained uncultivated. But about the tenth Century, by what means we know not, they began to make a Figure in Europe by the Manufacture of Woollen Cloths, with which they supplied Britain and Germany.
The

AND COMMERCE, FROM THEIR ORIGIN.

The four natural Products of which the British Isles had a Superfluity were Wool, Leather, Tin, and Lead, and occasionally a fifth, viz. Corn. The Inhabitants of the Netherlands had little or no Superfluity of natural Products to export; they wanted most of those of other Countries, and they were supplied with them by Way of Barter for their Woollen Manufactures. Baldwin Count of Flanders about the Year 960, considerably improved the Inland Trade of the Country by the Establishment of Yearly Fairs or Markets, and Goods were permitted to be brought to them from foreign Countries free of all Duty.

In the fifteenth Century these Provinces passed under the Dominion of Spain, and were governed by the Spanish Monarchs with so much Severity, that in the End, they revolted from Philip II. who suffered his Governor of these Provinces to invade their religious and civil Rights, and seven of them by the powerful assistance of the immortal Queen Elizabeth, and other Protestant Powers, formed the famous Republick of Holland, which has since become one of the first commercial States of Europe.

The Spaniards, to stop the Progress of this new-born Republic. believed that hindering their Commerce would suffice, and to prohibit that which its Merchants had always continued notwithstanding the War in all the Ports of the Spanish Dominions.

The Project would have been effectual, for the Dutch, deprived of this Resource, would have found themselves reduced to the last Extremity, if the most daring of their Merchants had not taken the Resolution to go to the East Indies, to partake, if it was possible, with the Portuguese, then united with the Spaniards, the immense Riches which the Oriental Trade produced.

This Enterprize, which appeared far beyond the Power of these People, but ill fixed in their Liberty, or rather who still fought to obtain it, after some unsuccessful Voyages, was in the End fortunate; and they fitted out twenty Fleets in less than ten Years, which returned laden with Spices and other Merchandizes of the Indies, as well as with the Spoils and Booty of the Spaniards and Portuguese.

And, to prevent the Confusion and Disorder that so many different Companies which were daily forming, and that had nothing in common but the Object of their Commerce, might bring to it, it was then determined, by uniting them all together, to form the famous Dutch East-India Company.

This great Establishment was made in the Year 1602, and it is this that has served as a Model to so many other celebrated Companies, which have since carried on Commerce from Holland to all other Parts of the World, and particularly to the Ports of the Levant, Africa, the West-Indies, and, in one Word, to every Place, where business could be transacted: These able Merchants neglected not any, and they found in the less important, as well as in the more considerable, Profits and Resources, which ordinarily escaped the Notice of other Nations.

It is this Commerce, which may be termed universal, that collects together in Holland, an infinite variety of Merchandizes, which it afterwards diffuses throughout Europe.

It produces hardly any thing, and yet has wherewith to furnish other People all that they can have need of. It is without Forests, and almost without Wood, and there is not seen any where else so many Carpenters, which work in naval Constructions either for War or Merchandize. Its Lands are not fit for the Culture of wines, and it is the Staple or Mart of Wines, which are gathered in all Parts of the World, and of Brandies drawn from them. It has no Mines nor Metals, and yet there is found almost as much Gold and Silver as in New Spain or Peru, as much Iron as in France, as much Tin as in England, and as much Copper as in Sweden. The Wheat and other Grains that are there sown, hardly suffice for Nourishment to a Part of its Inhabitants, and it is notwithstanding, from hence that the greatest Part of its Neighbours receive them, either for their Subsistence or Trade; in fine, it seems as if the Spices grew there; that the Oils were gathered there; that it nourished the precious Insects which spin the Silk, and that all sorts of Drugs for Medicine or Dying were in the Number of its Products, and of its Growth; its Warehouses are so full, and its Merchants seem to carry so much to Strangers, or so many Strangers come to load in its Ports, that there is not a Day, or it may be said, a moment, when Ships do not come in or go out, and frequently entire Fleets.

COMMERCE
RUSSIANS,

The Commerce of the Russians, a Commerce already so established and extended, and which we see increasing under our Eyes, merits without Doubt not to be forgotten in this historical Abridgment of the Progress of Trade, and of the Advantages which thereby accrue to those Nations that apply themselves to it.

The Situation of Russia is one of the happiest for Commerce; its Frontiers bordering on the South of China, give to it a Facility of carrying on Trade, in that vast and rich Empire, which re-unites, in some Sort, the whole Traffick of all the East.

On the North Side of the Caspian Sea, there is offered to it, the Commerce of Persia, Armenia, and of the East-Indies; it may maintain a very considerable one with Constantinople, and the other States of the Grand Signor, by Means of the Ports, which it has, or which it may establish, on the Euxine Sea, and Archangel secures to it a great Traffick with France, England, Holland, the Lower Germany, and many other Nations.

In fine, to support this vast Commerce with Reputation, it is not deficient in rich Merchandizes, either of its own Product, or, at least, that are found there, both better, and in greater Abundance, than elsewhere; and, for the Transportation into its Provinces, of those which come to it from abroad, it has four great Rivers, whose Courses are near enough to be easily joined by Canals, and which discharge themselves into the four Seas, by which this grand Empire is in Part bounded, providing, as one may say, for bringing even into the Capital, the Spoils of all the rest of the World.

So many Advantages were for a long Time neglected by a Nation equally uncivilized and lazy, and where the natural Indolence was maintained for Ages, by the political Diffidence and Suspicions of the greatest Part of their Princes, which had prohibited them all Communication with Strangers.

It is true, that after the English had discovered, by a fortunate Chance, the celebrated Port of Archangel, all Nations, which carried on the Commerce of the North had a free Admittance into this Part of the Russian Dominions, but it was not properly till the glorious Reign of Peter the Great*, that Russia knew her Strength and true Interest, in Regard to Commerce; and it is to this Monarch, always vigilant for the Glory of his Nation, and the Prosperity of his People, that it is indebted for having extended its commercial Intercourses to all Parts of the World, where other Nations of Europe have established theirs, and where till then, the Name and Empire of the Russians were hardly known.

It is to the Year 1697, that the Epocha of the Establishment of their Commerce ought to be fixed; a Year which should for ever be consecrated in the Russian Annals, since it was at that Time, that the political Voyage of the CZAR, Peter Alexowitz, began, and that this Monarch formed the Grand Design of changing the Face of the Russian Empire, and, by introducing Commerce, to bring in also in its Train, Politeness, the Sciences, liberal Arts, and the many other Advantages, which are ordinarily the Fruits of them.

For the Execution of a Project so worthy of him that had conceived it, that famous Embassy, to which was given the Name of the Grand Embassy, which without Doubt it merited, on Account of the Czar's Presence, who determined to be there in Person, though incognito, and mixing in the Train of the Ambassadors, was seen to arrive in Holland, and afterwards pass over to England.

The Pretext was the Renewal of ancient Treaties: The true Reason was, that the Prince this Way found an Occasion to come and study in these two Nations, so skilful and fortunate in Commerce, the most sure Grounds of that, which he designed to establish in his own Dominions.

It was then, that Deprived of the Marks of Grandeur, and mingled with the most simple Workmen, he did not think it unworthy of his Rank, to employ his royal Hands in the same Works as they.

* This great Prince was the first of his Country, who assumed the title of Emperor of all the Russias which was confirmed to him by the other sovereigns of Europe, who sought his friendship. He was the founder of St. Petersburg in 1721, and died in 1725.

Sometimes with the Mallet and Chiffel in Hand, he worked in the Yards at all Sorts of Naval Constructions, which could make the Marine flourish. At others, attentive to the Lessons of some skilful Pilot, he informed himself of the divers Points of Wind that reign at Sea, or learned the Manner of using the Compass, and Sea-Charts for a safe Navigation. At other Times, he took the Shuttle, and Studied, in the Manufactories, the Art of making those fine Cloths, which the English and Dutch had till then sold so dear to his Subjects. Sometimes also, by Conversation with the most able Merchants, he sought to penetrate into the Secrets of the Bank and Exchange, and to secure before-hand Correspondents at London and Amsterdam to the Bankers, whom he proposed to establish in the principal Towns of his Dominions. In fine, nothing escaped his Curiosity, from the Desire which he had to form his Subjects to Arts and Manufactures: And, as if he designed some Time or other to set up as a Master in the Fabrication of all Sorts of Works, he himself served a Sort of Apprenticeship, and was seen assiduous in the Work-Houses of the most able Artificers; here to handle the Iron with the Blacksmith, there cutting Wood with the Carpenter; in another Place, twisting Hemp with the Ropemaker; and in one Word, working at all the Trades which are necessary to support Commerce, and render it flourishing.

It cannot be expressed how many Establishments, favourable to Trade, and till then unknown to the Russians, were the happy Consequences of the curious Discoveries of a Prince so universally attentive to the Good of his People.

New Ports were opened in divers Parts of his Dominions, and that of Peterburgh now vies with Amsterdam.

On the Land Side, with numerous Caravans, the Russians made a Road across the vast Regions of Tartary, and being admitted at Pekin, they returned loaded with the richest Merchandizes of China, and the East.

The Junction of the Baltick with the White Sea is almost atchieved, by Canals cut in the Lands, with a Labour and Expence immense and truly Royal; and there are lately others dug to join these two Seas with the Caspian, by Means of the Volga.

But still a Variety of Regulations, and a Fund of sound Policy was wanting to bring Commerce and arts to an eminent degree of Perfection in an Empire so subject to Revolutions in its Government. These we have seen established by an admirable code of Laws, and in general, by the wise Administration of the reigning Empress, the renowned Catharine II. the liberal Patroness of Learning and the Polite Arts, who, adopting the best Parts of the Plan of Peter I. for civilizing his Subjects, sends a number of Youth annually at her own Expence to England and other Countries, to study Agriculture, Botany, Trade, the mechanic and polite Arts, in short, every Branch of useful Knowledge. At the same Time, she spares no Pains or Expence to attract skilful Artists, and able Workmen in every Class to her Country. Honours, Pensions, and large Emoluments are the Rewards of those who enter into her Service. However, it is the Duty of the British Legislature and the Magistracy to guard as much as possible against the Seduction of her Manufacturers. For the excellent Policy of this Princess may be as detrimental to the Trade and Manufactures of other Countries, as it is Beneficial to her own. Her Alliance is already become so formidable as to be contended for by the first Powers of Europe, and a Country which at the Beginning of the present Century had scarce any Weight in the Affairs of Europe bids fair to turn the Scale, into which she shall place her Influence or Interest. If her Commerce increases in the same rapid Proportions as her civil, military, and naval Power, those who have had the greatest Hand in erecting it, may be the first to repent the Measure.

Let us now join to so many Examples, ancient and modern, of the Advantages that Commerce produces to States, and among the Nations where it flourishes some remarkable instances of Individuals, whom it has raised to the highest Fortune. Perhaps those who are more affected by their own Interest than by that of the Publick, may herein find motives and Inducements to animate and engage them to a Profession which may be attended with so great and happy Effects.

France and Italy furnish us with the two first, in the Order of Time, and England with a third, all equally celebrated and singular.

JAMES

James Coeur, a Native of Bourges in the Province of Berry, was a Son of a private Merchant; he followed the Profession of his Father, but with such speedy and happy Success, that an Author assures us, he gained more alone, than all the Merchants of the Kingdom together.

His Commerce was extended to all the Mediterranean; he trafficked in Asia with the Turks or Persians, and the other Subjects of the Sultans of Babylon, and in Africa with the Saracens.

It was by the City of Montpellier (which then was the only Entrance of the Kingdom on that Side) that he carried on such extensive Commerce; this also was the only Reason that could render that City dear to James Coeur, with which he had not otherwise any Connection, and consequently this was the sole Motive that could determine him to embellish it. After speaking of a Fountain which he made, where his Arms still remain, we shall enlarge a little on the common Exchange of the Merchants, known at Montpellier under the Name of the Loge, which he built, that this Edifice might have a remarkable Conformity with the Commerce of the City, as it is visible, he never dreamt of undertaking the former, but with the View of augmenting and facilitating the latter. This Building, which still subsists, is solid and magnificent. What is admired above all, are the Basso Relievs in Medallions, which ornament the Front, and which employ the vain Curiosity of those, who have yet the Weakness to give into the Search after the Philosopher's Stone; these are to them so many enigmatical Emblems, under which they imagine that James Coeur has hid the Mysteries of the grand Work, of which he made Use, as they pretend, to acquire his immense Riches, which, notwithstanding, he owed solely to Trade, according to Mr. Astruc.

His great Riches, acquired by a Way so lawful, and the Probity with which he always conducted his Business, having rendered him famous among Foreigners, and known at Court; Charles VII. called him to the Ministry, and intrusted to him the Management of his Finances, making him Grand Treasurer, A. D. 1444.

His Elevation did not in the least interrupt his Merchandizing, but, on the contrary, excited him to continue it with greater Reputation and Success; but then this generous Merchant, whose Heart was yet greater than his Fortune, had the most noble Views in his Commerce, and preferring the Interest of the State to his own, it was more in his own Funds than the Prince's Exchequer, that he found Resources, not only to re-establish the Kingdom, exhausted by a long War, but to carry on Enterprizes against the ancient Enemies of the French nation, and to re-unite to the Crown, one of its finest and richest Provinces, which had been for a long Time in the Hands of the English.

In Effect, very soon, Armies were raised and maintained solely at the Expence of this disinterested Minister: He advised the Conquest of Normandy, and he alone was at almost all the Charge. When he went in Embassy to Rome, a Fleet of twelve Ships, which accompanied him, belonged to him entirely, and it was he that was at all the Expence of fitting them out. In a Word, after Charles had, as it were associated James Coeur in the Government of the State, there was nothing in France that was great and considerable, which was not supported by the Credit of this sage and rich Merchant, and wherein he did not employ the better Part of the great Effects that arose to him from his Trade. Mr. Astruc says, his very Disgrace, which it appears he never merited, seemed to have rendered him illustrious.

It is true that the People, accustomed to fancy a Mystery and Prodigy in Things that surprized them, and were above their Comprehension, reported, that James Coeur owed his Fortune to the Secret of making Gold; but, the truth is, that all the Philosopher's Stone of this fortunate and able Merchant only consisted in his great commercial Connections; and that he knew no Chymistry more proper to operate the Transmutation of Metals, than the immense Traffick that furnished him with those rich Merchandizes, of which his Storehouses were always full, and which he exchanged with so much Profit against Gold and Silver, that an ignorant and credulous Populace attributed it to the Perfection of the grand Work, which it imagined he had the good Luck to find out.

Another Example of Fortune and Glory, to which private men have attained, by the Means only of Commerce, is not less remarkable, though more illustrious.

The Family of Medicis has been always praise-worthy and commendable, both for the Antiquity and Nobleness of its Origin, and the Greatness of its Credit and Riches.

THE HOUSE
MEDICIS.

From the Eleventh Century it has had great Men, and there is found in History, an honourable Succession of the Race of the Medici, who, in this first Rise of their House, were equally distinguished by the Lustre of ecclesiastical Dignities, by the Honour they acquired in the Profession of Arms, by that which they obtained in the Government of States, and in the chief Magistracies of Cities.

It was not, however, till the Beginning of the fifteenth Century, that this Family, reserved to so great a Fate, ought properly to count the Epocha, or Æra of its Elevation; and it is to Cosmo de Medicis, that famous Citizen of Florence, who so justly merited the Name of Great, Father of the People, and Deliverer of his County, that it is indebted for the first, or at least the most solid Foundations of a Grandeur, which would be hardly credible, did we not see, so lately as the Year, 1722 their fortunate and illustrious Posterity, governing with so much Sagacity, the descendants of those People, who formerly owed their Liberty to the Courage and Prudence of this first Citizen of their Republic*.

In Effect, after this great Man had set in Motion the Wheel of Fortune, which was to raise his House so high, there were but very few Dignities, Honours, Titles, or Alliances, by which this Family was not illustrated; and, in less than a Century, it gave four sovereign Pontiffs to the Church, two Queens to France, and to the sacred College more celebrated Subjects than any other house, even sovereign ones, had given to it till then.

It was nevertheless Commerce only that was the Source of so much Renown; the Ancestors of Cosmo, following the Custom of the Nobility of Italy, had not neglected this Resource, to support them in the Honours either of the Camp or Cabinet; but he, more fortunate, or more intelligent, had made so large a Fortune, that he became even comparable to Sovereigns for his Riches, and he was always courted and regarded, on Account of the great Influence which he preserved all his Life, in the Affairs of Italy.

Lawrence, his Brother, who, to the Name of Great, which he merited as well as Cosmo, added that of Father of Letters, was so well known at the Porte, on Account of the Factors which he maintained in all Parts of the Levant, and of the great Number of Ships which he sent, that Bajazet, the fierce Ottoman Emperor, not only always regarded him as one of his Allies, but even honoured him with the Name of his Friend.

All the other Medici, who came after these two great Men, and were elevated to the chief Honours of their Republic, had the wise Policy to imitate them, and in no manner to deprive themselves, by a false Delicacy, of the Utility of Commerce; and when, in fine, the great Qualities and merit of another Cosmo, had raised this House to the Sovereignty of Florence, neither he, nor his Successors, thought it unworthy of them, to continue to seek, in an honourable mercantile line, the means to support, with great Credit, the Splendor of a Rank, which, in some Sort, was owing to it; and, to this very Day, the Palaces of the Grand Duke are never shut either to Tradesmen or Merchants.

The third Instance we shall produce is, that of Sir Thomas Gresham an Eng-lishman, who, though he did not attain to the very high Honours of James Coeur or Cosmo de Medicis, does not yield to either in the Services he performed for his Country, or the Riches and Credit he acquired by Merchandize. The general Incidents of the Life of this illustrious Citizen of London are so well known, and are so amply related in all our Histories of England, and Lives of our eminent Men, that I shall only recite such Particulars as may serve to place him in many Respects upon a Level with the Frenchman and the Italian.

Mr.

* This illustrious House became extinct by the Death of Cosmo, the last Grand Duke of Florence, to whom the late Emperor of Germany, then Duke of Lorraine, succeeded.

Mr. Thomas Gresham was the youngest Son of Sir Richard Gresham an eminent Citizen of London in the Reign of Edward VI. he succeeded his Father in the Office of Agent to the King for the Negotiation of his Loans and the Sale of his Wool at Antwerp; and in that City he laid the Foundation of his Fortune. It was, at that Time, the Custom for the Kings of England to borrow Money of the Flemings for any Exigencies of the State, and, by Mismanagement, the Crown was become considerably indebted to the principal Merchants at Antwerp: Upon which Occasion the Flemings demanded most exorbitant Interest, and sometimes the royal Jewels were pledged for the Payment. By his prudent Management he not only cleared the King by discharging all his Debts, but in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth he put an end to the disgraceful and extravagant Method of borrowing from Foreigners, by delivering a Plan to the Queen for negotiating Loans for the public Service at home, a Plan which pleased her own Subjects, and occasioned a great Saving to the Nation. For this Service her Majesty conferred on him the Honour of Knighthood. He established the Credit of the English Merchants with the Hanseatick Towns, and he was highly instrumental in bringing over a great Number of the persecuted Flemings who fled from the Tyranny of the Duke D'Alva, the Spanish Governor of the Netherlands, under Philip II. At his own Expence, he built the Royal Exchange in London, and founded a College, known by the name of Gresham College, endowing it with an Income for the Support of a Professor of each of the liberal Sciences, who continue to this Day, and read public Lectures in Divinity, Law, Physic, Astronomy, Geometry, Music, and Rhetoric. He also bequeathed a great many Donations of annual Sums to public charitable Institutions; yet this did not prevent his making ample Provision for his Widow, and he died very Rich in the Year 1579.

FRENCH.

Mr. Savary supposes it a Matter of Surprise, that among so many Examples of the Advantages that Commerce produces in the States where it flourishes, France had not, at the Time of his writing, furnished any one; it is owned, he says, with Regret, that, in Regard to Commerce, the French at present are less in a Condition to serve as a Model, than they are in need of being animated by the Example of others.

And then proceeds with making the following Queries, and giving the succeeding Account of the Aptitude and Qualifications of the French for Trade; and, though he seems a little partial in Favour of his Countrymen, I think he exaggerates nothing in his Description of the Kingdom.

“ Will this generous Nation, says he, so capable of the greatest Enterprizes, be inferior to others in this Thing only, whilst she greatly surpasses them in every Thing else? No surely: and excepting her Haughtiness, which often made her regard Trade as little worthy of her, or her Impatience, which almost always discouraged her on the first Difficulties, there is certainly no one that could carry on Commerce with more Advantage, or to whom, I may affirm, it is more proper, when she will apply herself to it in earnest.

“ What is there in Effect wanting to France of all that is necessary to carry on a considerable Trade?

“ She has an infinite Number of Inhabitants, hardy, enterprizing, laborious, and, at the same Time full of Genius, Address, and Industry.

“ Her Lands, which are as fertile as any in the World, deny her hardly any Sort of Fruits, Provisions, Drugs, or other Merchandize.

“ Her different Provinces, according to the Diversity of their Soil, produce in Abundance, Corn, Wine, Salt, and every Necessary to the Support of Life.

“ There is found Silk, Flax, and Hemp, for all Sorts of Stuffs and Linens, or other Works which are made of these Materials.

“ Its Pastures feed an almost incredible Quantity of large and small Cattle, which serve for Nourishment, and to furnish excellent Hides and fine Wools, and its Mines produce the most necessary Metals and Minerals for Arts and Trades, and for the Fabrick of Manufactures.

“ If its Merchants inclined to Commerce, the two Seas, which wash its Coasts, open to them excellent Ports, and offer them the Conveniency for carrying it on to the four Quarters of the World.

“ If they will content themselves with a home Trade, the French Manufactures, or those that are imitated from Strangers, are arrived to the last Degree

“ of Perfection, by the wise Regulations, and by the Attention of the Magistrates of the Police, and the Inspectors appointed to take Care of their Performance.

“ In a Word, it may be said, and I shall say it without Exaggeration, that France reunites at home all the Advantages of Commerce, which are found divided among the other People of Europe, and, that, being sufficient to itself, it can absolutely pass without other Nations and content itself with its own Abundance, whilst they, on their Parts, will find it difficult to subsist without our Succours, and that great Commerce, of which some, and with a great deal of Reason, are so proud, would soon be seen to fall, if they ceased to receive from us that infinite Number of Merchandizes which are necessary to them, and which it is with Difficulty they can find elsewhere.

“ It is this Truth ill understood, and urged too far, that has given Room to that Paradox so dangerous, which they of this Way of Thinking would establish in these latter Times; that France ought to carry on no Commerce with Strangers, and that she would always be sufficiently happy and flourishing, if she did not want Labourers and Soldiers.

“ The Necessity of the one and the other is indisputable; without Soldiers our Frontiers would remain open to our Enemies, and the Kingdom without Defence, and without Labourers to cultivate our Lands, they would be no longer sufficient for our Support. But upon what shall the Pay and Maintenance of our Troops be established, if Commerce, which is the most fruitful Source of the Riches which enter our King's Exchequer, be taken from us? And what will the Farmers do with their Crops, though never so abundant, if they have no longer an Opening to get rid of their Superfluity; and, by Want of Trade see those Provisions miserably perish on their Hands, which would have enriched them, if they had passed into those of their Neighbours?

“ The Merchants then are a third Order of Persons, of which France has Need, and who are not less necessary to her than her Soldiers and Labourers; and Commerce is a Profession, without which all would languish in the Kingdom, and the Inhabitants would sink under their own Abundance, as they could consume neither the Whole at Home, nor have the Liberty to carry a Part abroad.

“ It is sufficiently comprehended, that by Commerce, supposed so necessary to France, and for which it is known, that the French are at least as fit as the other Nations of Europe, is not to be understood that Trade which is carried on in our Provinces, by the Communication which they have with one another, of the natural Productions, or the Works of Art, that they have each at home, for this would be always flourishing enough, if there was a Care at the same Time to carry on that abroad; but it is the Commerce which may be maintained with Foreigners that is principally in View, whether they come to our Ports to carry away those Merchandizes of which they have Need, or whether we send our Ships to load with those which they have and we want.

“ It is true, that, for long Voyages, France has already at Home, a Company of Commerce, of which the first Success seems to promise, that it will not one Day be any Thing inferior to the more celebrated ones established among our Neighbours; so that, without encroaching upon the vast Grant of a Company so profitably formed and so wisely conducted, I shall content myself to animate the French Merchants to such other Objects of Commerce as they may share with the other Nations of Europe, or even that they may carry on with a greater Facility and Profit than they.

“ These Hopes, with which I dare flatter our Merchants, are not false nor even dubious. Whoever surveys the Parts of Europe where the English and Dutch carry on their most considerable Commerce, Spain, for Example, or the Towns of the North and the Baltick Sea, will see what Nation is most likely to succeed.

“ Almost all the necessary Merchandizes for those important Branches of Commerce are found in France; on the contrary, England and Holland have hardly any.

AN HISTORICAL DEDUCTION OF TRADE

“ We have for Spain, Stuffs of Gold, Silver, and Silk, Clothes, Woollens, Linens, Paper, Hats, all Sorts of Stockings, Cards, Laces of Silk and Thread, Mercery, Iron Wares, and many others. The North cannot do without our Wines, Brandies, Vinegars, Salts, Prunes, Chefnuts, and Walnuts, so that it will presently be decided, to which Nation the Loading of Ships for the North, or Spain, is most easy; whether to the French, who, without borrowing any Thing from others, have, within themselves wherewith to make up an entire Cargo; or to the English and Dutch, who come to seek in France what they want, and who, destitute of this Succour, would be obliged to send their Ships half laden, and without the proper Assortments for those two Countries.

“ It is also the same in Proportion with all other Trades, by which the French may enter into Competition with their Neighbours.

“ In Regard to Profit, it is as clear, and shorter. Whoever sells at second-hand can make but one Gain, whilst he that sells at the first acquires two; the English and Dutch are in the first Case, the French in the second; so that those can only benefit themselves on the Price, which the Merchandize they sell in Spain and the North costs them in France, and these add yet to the said Profit, that which was made on the first Sales of such Merchandize.

“ This is not enough; the Advantage of Returns is yet all entirely on the Part of France, since the French Ships, by bringing back the Northern and Spanish Commodities, take away from Strangers those immense Profits, which they used to make on us, when they brought the same Merchandizes into our Ports.

“ One cannot on this Subject help expressing some Concern at not seeing established in France, that wise Policy of the English, who, by their Act of Navigation in the Year 1660, ordained, that none of the Merchandizes and Products of Europe be brought into England, nor the States that depend on it, but in Ships appertaining to English Subjects, or from the Places of their Manufacture and Growth; and that none of the Merchandizes of the Growth of any of the English Colonies, or that may hereafter become so, of Asia, Africa, and America, shall any longer be brought in but in English Ships, or those appertaining to the English.

“ A Policy certainly both prudent and equitable, and, if it had Place among us, would open our Ports to Strangers, who should bring the Merchandizes of their Country, and wisely shut them against those who, having nothing of their own Growth, come to sell us those at a dear Rate which they have collected from all Parts of the World; and who, flattered by our Indulgence, or, it may be, by our Vanity, have insensibly accustomed us to receive only from their Hands, at an excessive Price, what it would be easy for us to get on much better terms, if we would only take the Pains to send for them.

“ It may probably be alledged, that, as the French Marine is not in any Degree comparable, but much inferior, to that of their Neighbours, with whom they are invited to become Competitors, there is but little Appearance that they should ever find the Facility or Advantages with which they in vain were flattered in carrying it on.

“ And it must be confessed, that, in Maritime States, Commerce and Navigation ought to go Hand in Hand, for there is so strict and intimate a Tye between the one and the other, that Commerce is without Strength, whilst the Marine is languishing, and the Weakness of the one necessarily draws on the Fall of the other.

“ But besides, that our Ports are not so unprovided with Ships of War, as to leave the French Merchants at any Time destitute of Convoy and Guards, to favour and protect their Trade; what Doubt is there that, even on this Part, France, when she pleases, need not yield to any other Power whatever.

“ Our Neighbours are obliged to fetch from abroad, the greatest Part of their Naval Stores; Wood, Iron, Cordage, Sails; all these come to them from Foreigners; instead of which, our Provinces easily furnish us with the best Part of that we have need of for the building and fitting out our Navy.

“ Some of them have Wood proper for the Bodies of Ships; and there are found in the Mountains, others fit for making the rest of their Materials; there are, in many, Mines of Copper and Iron sufficient to supply our Yards and Docks; and all, in general, are so abundant in Flax and Hemp, for making Sails and Cordage, that it is even from us that other Nations receive the greatest Part of those they consume in their Rope-Walks, or that their Weavers, make into Cloth proper to sail their Vessels.

“ We are no more in Want of Provisions or Ammunition, but are even in a Condition to spare Part to others; and, to man our Ships of War and Merchant Fleets, we have more than sixty Thousand Sailors, distributed in five Classes, of which the Rolls are renewed annually, and of which the one is always accounted engaged, from the Beginning of each Year, to serve in the King's Ships, and the four others are reserved for the Merchants' Service.

“ These Hopes, which are founded on so many Advantages, that might render our Marine flourishing, either for War or Trade, are certainly not in the Number of those ideal Projects, that it is not possible ever to carry into Execution.

“ Those Times, so glorious to the Marine of France, 1690, are still remembered, when our naval Forces, equal to those of our Enemies, obtained the Victory over the united Fleets of the Two Powers, who each in particular would have attributed to itself the Empire of the Sea; and we have not in the least forgot, that, during all the War which was terminated by the Treaty of Ryswick, 1697, our Privateers, superior to those of the English and Dutch together, took from one of them so great a Number of Ships, that their Merchants, who avow that their Loss amounted to more than three Thousand Vessels, were obliged to carry their Complaints to their Parliaments; and the Trade of the other was so disturbed or impeded by the fortunate Cruizes of the same Privateers, that this was one of the principal Reasons that made them desire a Peace, and, in some Sort, to demand it with Eagerness.

“ It is not, however to be denied, that Events which Prudence could not foresee nor Courage repair, have weakened the French Marine; but why should we lose the Hopes of seeing it recover? That which so happily succeeded under the Reign of Lewis XIV. will it be impossible, if undertaken, to prosper under that of Lewis XV.? A young Monarch, in whom shine so many great Qualities, that they seem already to foretel the Happiness and Glory of France! And an Establishment, which was seen pushed on almost to Perfection, under the Ministry of Monf. Colbert, and of the Marquis of Seignelay his Son, why may it not gather new Strength, supported by the Care and Experience of a Prince who has recorded his first Campaigns at Sea by a Victory, and who labours with so much Application to restore us a Marine, capable of making our Colours always respected; and, at the same Time, to put our Merchants in a Condition of carrying on, in all Parts of the World, a Commerce, for which they have so much Facility and Advantage?”

Mr. Savary here finishes his Sentiments of his Country and the French Nation; and, I think, he has proved a true Prophet, in Regard to their Commerce, which has been greatly extended and increased since his Time, to the no small Detriment of ours. They were at least a Century behind us in mercantile Affairs, and it is a Matter both of Surprise and Concern, that they have in any Shape exceeded us; as despotick Governments are not calculated for prosperous Commerce, and had not Lewis XIII. and XIV. stepped out of the common Track of arbitrary Kings, in order to protect and render it flourishing, we should never have seen that Nation, from Competitors with, become superior to us in any Branch of it; but the good Regulations made in those Kings' Reigns, and since continued added, to the Fertility of the Soil and Temper of the People, who can content themselves with a less expensive Way of Life than we are unhappily fallen into, have enabled them to carry many of their Commodities cheaper to Market than our higher Wages, and dearer Living, will permit us to do, and consequently robbed us of the Sale of our inferior Sorts of Woollens, which they have been able to imitate; but, as I shall speak of this when I come to treat of Commerce in general, I shall only add here,

AN HISTORICAL DEDUCTION OF TRADE

here, that I fear they now equal us at least in the Dispatch of their home Manufactures, though I hope not in the Products, and Trade of their Plantations, their Sugar Colonies only excepted.

Mr. Savary having left the English out of this Historical Deduction of Trade and Commerce, as if they had been a People without any Concern in it, I can only impute it to that Deference he every where pays to his Father's Judgment, whose malicious Insinuations against us, in his Parfait Negociant, the Son must have contradicted, had he treated us with the same Impartiality he has others; to avoid which, and not expose the Weakness of his envious Parent's ill-grounded and unjust Invectives, we may presume were the motives that induced him to pass us over in his Account of Commercial Nations, and made him prefer leaving a Chasm, rather than a Blot, in his otherwise valuable Works; though he is not wholly to be acquitted from inheriting or adopting Part of his Father's Partiality, as he has copied some of his Aspersions, when he speaks of us in the Body of his Dictionary; to confute which, and do Justice to my Countrymen, I shall endeavour to improve this Opportunity by demonstrating his Partiality, and supplying his Defect, that we may appear in the true Light we ought, in the History of the European Commerce; and in order thereto, I shall here only briefly mention what occurs to me concerning our first Engagements in Commerce, and refer my Reader for a more ample Account of its Progress and present state of Improvement to the sequel of the Work.

ENGLISH.

Though it must be allowed that the English, in respect of most other European Nations, were late beginners in universal Commerce, yet they have improved in it with an amazing Rapidity.

It is many Ages since they knew the Value of a naval Power, and were taught by the Romans how necessary this would be for their Defence and Support, as well as conducive to their Commerce with other Nations; the former, we have seen before, were Masters of the Art, and consequently in a Capacity to give Lessons; they knew the great Advantages derived to Kingdoms from it, and indeed that this only could make a Nation flourish. They considered how capable of Improvement our Country was, and being settled among us, were desirous of rendering this Union as advantageous as possible, and, having met with a People brave and daring as themselves, and in every Respect fit to undertake any hazardous Enterprizes, they would certainly have raised Commerce to a flourishing Pitch, had not their own intestine Broils called them Home, and, Ours on this Occurrence increasing, left Commerce to languish, as it did for Ages after, till our victorious Edward III. and afterwards the glorious Queen Elizabeth, animated their Subjects to an Imitation of their Neighbours, and, by proper Encouragements, led them in to share the Advantages which hitherto other Nations only had reaped, exclusive of them. The Introduction of a few Walloon Manufacturers of Woollen Cloths from Flanders, and the Privileges granted to them by Edward, laid the Foundation of the British Woollen Manufactories; but to Elizabeth was reserved the immortal Renown of completing the great commercial Revolution, which took Place at that memorable Æra.

Voltaire, who, as an Historian, is by no Means partial to the English Nation, gives the following Account of this happy Event. "From the first Beginning of Elizabeth's Reign, the English applied themselves to Manufactures: The Flemings being persecuted by Philip II. King of Spain, removed, in large Bodies, from Flanders to London, bringing with them an increase of Inhabitants, Industry, and Riches. This Capital, which Enjoyed the Blessings of Peace under Elizabeth, cultivated likewise the liberal Arts, which are the Badges and Consequences of Plenty. In a Word, London was enlarged, civilized and embellished; and, in a short Time, one Half of the little Island of Britain was able to counterbalance the whole Power of Spain."

The best Principles of Commerce derived from the Ancients, were Adopted by the wise and active Ministers of Elizabeth. She sent out skilful Navigators to make Discoveries in America. She established Colonies; and kept up a maritime Force for the Protection of the Commerce of her Subjects at Sea. In fine, she Founded the East India and other commercial Companies; and it was under her glorious Administration, that the English gained a Superiority on the Ocean, which which has ever since been preserved; and on the Support of which, not only our commercial Interests, but our independent Existence as a Nation depends.

The Increase of our Commerce has consequently been that of our Power, which is happily risen to the Summit of human Glory, as there is no Potentate on Earth, who can equal our maritime Force, become now the Bulwark of our Country; and may it always continue unrivalled and triumphant whilst Time endures!

It is in this Place, that I must beg leave to congratulate my Countrymen on the happy Situation of Great Britain, which is the best calculated that can be conceived, for the Security, Ease, and Convenience of its Inhabitants as a commercial People. The Southern Division, still distinguished by its ancient Name, England, is bounded on the East by the German Ocean; and on the West by the Atlantic, which, by their Union, form the British Channel, its Barrier to the South. On the North, it is defended by the Deucaliedonian Sea; and a facility of Communication is afforded to this vast Body of Waters surrounding the British Isles, not only by a Number of excellent Harbours and commodious Sea-port Towns; but by sundry large navigable Rivers flowing from the inland Provinces, of which the Thames is the principal.

This happy Spot thus admirably protected by Nature from the Incurfions of neighbouring States, and enabled by her insular Station, to keep constantly on float, a maritime Force for the farther Security of her Commerce, whenever its Safety but appears to be endangered, is likewise indebted to the indulgent Bounty of Providence for every Necessary and Convenience of Life; and is blessed with a Temperature of Air, which, while the Inhabitants lived according to the sober Laws of Nature, and sought not the Destruction of their Health by the Use of spirituous Liquors, afforded more frequent Instances of remarkable Longevity, than any other Part of the known World. But, notwithstanding a visible, and much to be lamented Degeneracy, the great Body of the People, by whose Industry, the Manufactures and Commerce of the Country is supported, are justly distinguished for their Ingenuity, Perseverance, diligent Application to Business, and superior Expedition in completing the Works they undertake.

Our Lands may justly be counted some of the most fertile, and their Products of Fruits, Provisions, &c. as plentiful and as good as any in Europe, and our Merchandizes more than other Countries can boast of.

The different Counties, according to their Situation, produce Corn, and all Necessaries of Life in Abundance, which, on many Occasions, have preserved several of our Neighbours from famine.

We have Hemp and Flax for the manufacturing our Linens and Canvas, now brought to Perfection, and our Pastures feed an almost infinite Number of Cattle, which not only supply our Markets with excellent Food, but furnish us with fine Wools, and the best Leather in the World.

Our Mines produce Iron, Lead, Tin, Copper, Coal, &c. in Abundance, and our Forests and Woods are so well stocked with Oak for Shipping, as seems to promise, under well-regulated Laws, an inexhaustible Supply.

Our Seas are well filled with their finny Inhabitants, which, according to the Steps taken by the Legislature for the Encouragement of our Fisheries, and the ready Concurrence of our Merchants in promoting so beneficial a Design, must prove productive of immense Riches to the Nation, besides occasionally providing comfortably for our Poor, which Advantages have for many Years past been reaped by our industrious Neighbours.

I think a Deduction of this Nature ought not to be closed without mentioning a Word of the Spaniards, who, like us, have been past over by our Author in Silence; for, though they have been tardy in finding out the Advantages Nature has given them for Trade, and have long remained blind to their own Interest, yet their Commerce is not so despicable and small as to be overlooked when we are treating of Commercial Nations.

Their Discovery of America, and their subsequent Settlements on that Continent, gave Birth to their Trade and Riches; for, though a potent Nation before, in Dominion, they wanted the Snews of Power, which the Mines of Mexico and Peru have since produced them.

COMMERCE
SPANIARDS.

AN HISTORICAL DEDUCTION OF TRADE

They have very considerable Ports, equally well situated for Commerce, both on the Biscayan and Mediterranean Seas, and where large concerns are transacted though principally by Foreigners, as the Spaniards in general consider Traffick to be a mean Employ, and consequently a Derogation from the Gentility they almost all affect being born to; however, they have formed some very considerable Companies among them, as that of the Philippines, Guipuscoa, and one lately established at Seville for the manufacturing of Woollens, Stockings, Hats, Silks, and most other Commodities they formerly imported for their American Trade; and, having received great Encouragement from the Crown for perfecting their other Manufactures, they have, for some Time past, clothed all their Troops with their own Cloths, and the King's wearing them himself, and prohibiting the Importation of foreign ones, has brought their Fabricks into such great Repute, that they are daily increasing; and the uncommon Privileges granted the Weavers, it is to be presumed, will, in Time, animate them to new Engagements, and teach them to imitate the other Woollen Fabricks of Europe, as they have been so successful in copying their Cloths, more especially if they can procure Workmen from their Neighbours to assist them, as they have lately endeavoured, and in some Degree, succeeded in, from hence.

Their Silk Manufactories have likewise kept pace with their Woollen, and both their West-Indian and European Dominions are now principally supplied by them, as they were formerly from France, so that their eyes having been opened to these Advantages; both Old and New Spain feel the salutary Effects of this Discernment, and, if the same Measures are pursued as have been so happily begun in Favour of the Subject, we may reasonably expect, in a few Years, to see them a more flourishing People than it was possible for them to be, till roused from their former Indolence and Neglect, to a just Sense of the Advantages that Industry and Application offers them.

I might here mention their Tunney Fishery, and some other Instances of their Improvements, but shall refer expatiating or descending to Particulars till I come to treat of them in the general Body of Trade, and only add here an Observation, that as the Spaniards have improved the different Manufactures I have mentioned, their Neighbours have proportionably found a Decay in their's, which can only be remedied by seeking other Channels for the Sale of their Commodities, though I must confess, I think this to be despaired of, when the common Paths of Trade are become so beaten, and every Branch of it so prejudiced by Interlopers, except the following Sheets open new Scenes, which, by Care, may be improved to the Adventurer's Advantage. I should here mention something of the Swedes, Danes, &c. but shall refer my Reader to what I shall afterwards say of their Trade, when I come to describe it minutely.

* DR. GARCIN'S Account of the Origin of Navigation and Commerce.

Historians seem hitherto to have forgot, by the little they have said, that the Arabians were the first Navigators, and the first People who opened the Commerce between Asia, Africa, and Europe; this is a Thing, however, very easy to be proved, notwithstanding the Invention of Navigation is attributed to the Tyrians and Egyptians, at the Beginning of this Historical Deduction.

The Situation of their Country, which is, in this Regard, the most favourable in all Respects. at first naturally brought them thither. As Arabia is a very large Peninsula, washed by the Sea on three Sides, and its Entry on the fourth being the most difficult, by Reason of the Extent of its Deserts, which are filled with Sand, and without Water, Necessity induced this Nation, one of the most ancient, in order to procure an advantageous Communication with others, to open Passages by Water; to invent the first marine Vessels, and to form itself courageously to Navigation; it had so much the more Cause to improve, and become acquainted with its Seas, as it was no great Distance from the Indies, which, as is known, was at all Times fuller of Riches than any other Part of the World.

This Practice being attained, it was much easier for its Inhabitants to pass by Water to many of their Neighbours, than to traverse Deserts so dangerous; and to make such great Tours, either to go out of, or to return to their Country. Thus it was by their Fleets that they corresponded wherever there was a Sea, and by Caravans on the Land Side to the Mediterranean; it was, in fine, by these powerful Means, and by the Arabians only, that the most sought for, and precious Things of all the Indies, pass from East to West; in the most ancient Times, and in those which followed, until that of the Emperor Augustus.

This Nation, according to Historians, has been the richest of the World, in the earliest Ages, as we shall soon see by relating what they have said of it; and this is one of the strongest Proofs of its ancient Commerce with the Indies, and from thence with the Countries which border on the Mediterranean; for the Tyrians and Egyptians were not formerly flourishing in their Commerce; otherwise than as the Industry and Riches of the Arabians made them so, who furnished them, under large Profits, with all the Merchandizes of the Isles, and of the Maritime Coasts of Asia, the same as the Portuguese and Dutch have some Time since done in Europe, and it is by the same Commerce of the Indies that they are enriched. The Oriental Sea was to the Arabians what the Mediterranean was to Phœnicia and Egypt; these three Nations enriched themselves mutually by the Trade of those two Seas, each having laboured on its Part for the properest Means to cultivate it by Navigation in the two Seas; and by Caravans through the lands that separate them.

It is known by very ancient Experience, that the richest Countries are not ordinarily such, but by the Means of Commerce and Navigation. The Sabeans, an Arabian People, who inhabited the Countries bordering on the Indian and Red Seas, were incomparable in their Sumptuousness and Riches: one need only read Agatharchides, Diodorus Siculus, and Strabo, to be convinced of it by the Detail which they give. They drained, says the first of these Historians, in Phœtia, the Treasures of Asia and Europe by the Exchange they made of the most precious Things. They surpassed, says the second, Lib. III. by the Riches and Abundance which they had of all precious Things, not only those of Barbary, their Neighbours, but also all other Nations: Considerable Summs were necessary to purchase a middling Quantity of their Merchandizes; these Historians record, that these People, so rich by their Commerce, made Ivory, Gold, Silver, and precious Stones, to shine in their Furniture, upon the Doors, Columns, Walls, and Roofs of their Edifices; and that they possessed a very great Quantity of Gold and Silver Vessels; they relate, that their Expences were enormous in all Things; even in Works of the most admirable Sculpture and Engraving; in a Word, that their Magnificence was unequalled, which demonstrates that this Nation was skilful, bold, and venturesome in the Indian Trade and Navigation, and that it was by her that the Tyrians and Egyptians flourished so much in theirs, and upon the same Merchandizes which they received and passed to the other western Nations; the most remote. The Prophet Ezekiel, Chap. xvii. Verse 22, in addressing himself to the City of Tyre, speaks of this Nation of the Sabeans under the Names of Sheba and Raamah, which were two Places of Arabia. The Merchants, says he, of Sheba and Raamah were thy Factors, making thy Fairs valuable in all Sorts of the chiefest Spices, and with all Sorts of precious Stones and Gold: This is a sure Testimony of the Antiquity and the Opulence of its Commerce which it had with the Indies.

It was this Opulence which determined Alexander the Great to make Sheba the Capital of his Empire; and tempted the Romans to its Conquest in the time of Augustus; a Time in which they began better to know the Oriental Sea, and the Coasts which limit or bound the Western.

We may believe, as the greatest Part of the Ancients did, that the precious Merchandizes of the Arabians were all the Growth of their own Country; but it is a Mistake, they being carried to them; for it is certain that Arabia has never produced of itself, the sixth Part of its Riches. Of all the Aromatics only Incense, Balsam, Myrrh, and Calamus Aromaticus, grow there; the two last of which were not sought for, only as they were deemed to be something better than than those which grew in the other Parts of Asia and Africa. It may also have a little Gold, but in no Quantity, as some of the Ancients imagine; the Arabians brought it from India, the same as they did other Aromatics, precious Stones, and rich Merchandizes of all Sorts. Strabo seems to insinuate so in saying, that they changed their Aromatics and precious Stones against the Gold and Silver of Strangers. One may be persuaded, that in some Parts of Asia, the Origin of all these Things is yet near the same as it was in former Times, all the Difference being that it is now infinitely better known.

Incense, in Reality, was to them of very great Advantage, as they furnished all the western Nations with it, who were then Pagans, and consequently consumed infinitely more than they do at present: But, as the Ancients were passionately fond of all the most exquisite Aromatics, those which the Arabians brought from India making the greatest Number, produced also their greatest Riches.

The Aloe Wood, Cassia, and Cinnamon which are mentioned in many Passages of Scripture, and in the most ancient Historians, made, beyond Dispute, after the Gold, the principal Branch of their Commerce. Malabar, Ceylon, and Sumatra, or Malacca, were really the principal Places where their Fleets often went to take in their Loadings, as it was only from thence that they drew all those rich Merchandizes; these were formerly much better esteemed than they are at present; and, as this Nation solely supplied all the Countries of the World that wanted those Commodities, this is yet another demonstrative Proof of their ancient Navigation to the Indies.

It is nevertheless a Matter of Surprise, that ancient History either does not speak of it at all, or if it does, it is in a Manner very obscure: This proceeds from Arabia being very little frequented, and consequently very little known to other Nations. The great difficulty and danger of traversing its sandy and arid Deserts, and of being sheltered from the Robberies which a Part of its Inhabitants were always given to, in beating the Field, plundering the Caravans, and stripping the Travellers and Merchants, were the Causes that our first Ancestors could not be informed about it until the Time of Alexander, or even till that of Augustus. We may moreover add, that their Navigation was but little known even to the Time when the Portuguese went to India by the Cape of Good Hope, and that thereby they ran away with that rich European Trade which the others carried on by Means of the Egyptians, and these by that of the Venetians. They were therefore always Masters of the Indian Sea, by their Navigation, till then, as is well known even to all the Indians. This Navigation, as well as their Commerce, was indeed a little disturbed by the Romans, but this was only for some Time. Another Cause, which made their Navigation unknown in ancient Times, is that the Arabians, the better to preserve the Commerce of the Indies, which they found so advantageous, always took care to conceal from Strangers who lived towards the Mediterranean, the Voyages which they made on the Oriental Seas, the Routes or Courses which they used, and the Origin of the Merchandizes which they brought in, and which so greatly augmented their Riches.

Besides, in those Times, the Arts which facilitate the Intercourse of Nations were wanting, which made History so ignorant of a Country so distant. These are Geography, Printing, the Conveniency of Posts, and the Improvements in Navigation; thus the Arabians always succeeded in their intended Concealment, with the View of making their Commerce lasting, and to attract thereby the greater Profits.

And, to have the Thing succeed the better, and to impose on the foreign Nations, who so very earnestly enquired after their Spices, they invented Fables or pretended Difficulties that subsisted, above all, in Regard to the Cassia and Cinnamon on which they made the most considerable Profit; and affirmed them to grow in the Middle of their Country, but in Places almost inaccessible, and so dangerous, that they could not procure but a very small Quantity, with infinite Industry and Trouble. The whole Contrivance is recorded by Herodotus, Lib. III.

It was this which made all Antiquity believe, that these Spices or Aromatics were scarce, and only to be found in Arabia. Pliny was the first who discovered that these Fables were only invented in order to sell their Drugs dearer; but, on rejecting these, he substituted others nothing inferior, in declaring the Cinnamon to be brought from Ethiopia, in mentioning the Manner of its Growth, that of gathering, and transporting it abroad, or to Strangers; the Difficulties he has stamped upon all these Circumstances, and on the Means of having it in Time, as also the Cassia, do not appear less great, nor less fabulous, than those of Herodotus, which he would not admit. See Pliny, Lib. XII. Co. 19.

It is certain that neither Ethiopia, nor Arabia, has ever produced any of these aromatic Barks; the Trees from whence they are taken can never be transported, on Account of the different Nature of the Soils, and the Drought and Heat which reigns there: and it is only in the Isle of Ceylon the Air and Earth are really fit to nourish them, so that it is this Place alone, which has in all Times supplied the rest of the World with these Aromatics.

In fine, the ancient Arabians did not invent fewer Fables in Favour of their Commerce, than the Persians did to represent the Dangers which they had in procuring the Gold in those Parts of India where they could find it, and which were believed fandy. This is what may likewise be seen in the Book of Herodotus above cited.

Pliny says nothing of the Navigation of the Arabians, which is a Proof that it was unknown in his Time. He only mentions that of the Fleet of Alexander, which pass from India to Euphrates, and that which the Romans made every Year also in his Time to the Indies: He has described the Route from Egypt, but he has made it appear, that their Voyages only terminated about the River Indus. The Romans, although Masters of some Ports of Arabia, did not, in the least, discover the Navigation, which the Arabians took Care to hide, and which they made directly from some of their Ports to the Island of Ceylon, to load with Cassia, Cinnamon, and precious Stones; and from other Parts of India, to do the same with other Merchandizes, as Gold, Drugs, and odoriferous Woods. It seems by the Recital of Pliny, that the Navigation which the Romans made to that Corner of the Indies of which he speaks, did no Injury to the Arabians, only in the smaller Part of their Commerce.

It is easy to comprehend that these last, in Proportion to their navigating their Seas, should have the good Luck to discover the shortest Passages to many Parts of the first Peninsula of the Ganges, and from that to the others; for we must not believe that the Romans were the first that crossed the Arabian Sea, which it bounds, as Pliny remarks, Lib. VI. Cb. 23.

It was infinitely easier to the Arabians to cross this Sea to India, or to Ceylon, than it was for the Tyrians to run over the different Parts of the Mediterranean. The first had fine Weather to chuse at their Pleasure, and Winds that were fixed and regular, by which they might securely perform their Voyages with as much Exactness, Rectitude, and Speed, as they had occasion for, and always, in a Manner, equal in the same Seasons; Advantages which the Tyrians had but very rarely; they never had fine weather at a certain Point, on which they might depend, so that these had more Need of Ability in the Marine than the former, on Account of the Variableness of the Winds, cloudy Weather, and Tempests, which often reign in the Mediterranean.

The Winds of the Indian Sea, rarely tempestuous, are always regular, changing twice a Year, and under two Directions, alternately opposite one to the other; each lasts six Months, at least, if the Latitude is near our Tropic. These Winds are the South West and North East; and they are called Monsoons, of the which one is dry, and the other rainy; the North East Wind causes the dry Monsoon, and begins in the Month of November, on this Side the Equinoctial Line: The rainy one begins in the Month of May, and it is occasioned by the South West, which makes it last till October.

In fine, the Monsoons, which reign at Sea on this Side the Equinoctial, are always opposite to those which reign on the other Side of that Line.

It is therefore seen by the Exactness of these two Seasons, and the regular Winds of the Indies, that it was not any Thing difficult to the Arabians happily to succeed in their Navigation for passing the Sea, not only to the Ile of Ceylon but also to that of Sumatra, or to Malacca, which is in its Neighbourhood. They yet make to this very Day these Traverses, in a great Measure, without using the Compass, at least very rarely; for the Winds, being once fixed and invariable, serve them for Guides and Rules in the Direction of their Route, almost as well, and even in some Manner more exact, than they would do by the Help of the Stars in serene Weather. What is it then that should have hindered the performing the same in ancient Times? This is what the modern Historians have not thought of, in speaking of the ancient Navigation of India. It is probable, had they been on the Spot, as I have been, they would have thought as I do.

Many Nations among the Indians have always crossed these Seas by the Favour of these Winds. The dry Monsoons, periodically renewed by the North East Wind, assist their sailing to the Westward; and the wet Monsoons, formed in like Manner by the opposite Winds of South West, serve them also for sailing Eastward. One Monsoon serving them to go, and the other to return, and those always equally certain and regular.

The Arabians, washed by the same Sea, ought therefore to do the same Thing; and it is what they have always done, according to the Tradition of the Indian Nations, who regarded them as the Masters of the Navigation of the Seas, till the Arrival of the Portuguese among them, who ruined entirely the vast Commerce of Arabia, which had been of so long a Duration.

Pliny makes Mention of these two Winds for traversing the Arabian Sea. The South West, which was called, says he, in that Country, Hypalus, was the proper Wind for sailing from the Cape of Syagros, which is believed to be that of Partaque, to Zixerus, a Port in India; this is apparently that of the present Diu: They, in returning, adds he, departed from thence in the Month of December, or even in that of January, and this Traverse was made, according to him, in forty Days. The Periplus of the Red Sea, attributed to Arianus, says the same, according to Mr. Huet; it informs us farther, that they sailed from Arabia for India in the Month of July, and these Seasons are exactly the same now, with respect to the Navigation of those Countries.

Mr. Huet believed, by the Relation of Pliny, that these Courses were new, and had been discovered by the Romans, which might be so in Regard to the Romans only, but it is absolutely not the same in Respect to the Arabians, as these Routes were at that Time known to the latter, and had been so for several Ages. The Author of the Periplus, before-mentioned, says, that it was an ancient Pilot named Hypalus, who first discovered, by Favour of a South West Wind, this Course to the Indies, and that his Example was followed with so much Success, that they gave to this Wind, the said Pilot's Name*. However, we ought to be persuaded, that this only regards the Navigation of the Romans.

In fine, after these Eclaircissements, we ought not any longer to be surprized at the ancient Splendor of the Arabians, which, at the same Time, occasioned that of the Tyrrians and Egyptians; the commodious Situation of their Country, the Pleasantness of a frequent or almost continual Serenity of their Sky, the direct Regularity of the Winds which reigned in their Oriental Seas, and their own Spices, above all, the Incense, were Advantages which would naturally render them flourishing, if improved, as they always were by them; and it may be added, that the Goodness of their Ports, infinitely better than all those of India, was what favoured them most in their Commerce. I am strongly led to believe, with Mr. Huet, that the Surname of Happy, which Arabia anciently received, only came from the Excellency of her Harbours, and from that of her former Commerce. This Arabia, called happy, was never so rich in its own Product as to merit so fine an Appellation; it might rather have been given her for being the richest Nation in the World by her Traffick with Strangers, than because her Soil was found better comparatively than that of Stoney or Desert Arabia.

The last Remark to be made is, that the Treasures and Commerce of the Arabians enriched the neighbouring Nations; Judsa, above all, felt it most, as may be judged by the Revenues and Wealth of Solomon, which the Scripture describes in the tenth Chapter of the first Book of Kings, and the ninth and second of Chronicles, to have been so immense "that all the Kings and Governors of Arabia brought him Gold and Silver, besides his annual Revenue, amounting to six Hundred and sixty-six Talents of Gold;" and it is likewise from thence known, what were the Presents which the Queen of Sheba made him, after coming from the Depth of Arabia to see him and prove his Wisdom, importing only in Gold one Hundred and twenty Talents, besides Spices and precious Stones, making, according to Father Calmet, 8,176,000 French Livres, or, at the Exchange of 54*d.* per French Crown, of three Livres, as it was then governed, about 613,200 l. Sterling: though Dean Prideaux computes it at 864,000*l.*; a plain Proof of the great Richness of this Queen's Country; and, to confirm the many Advantages that Judea reaped from Trade, I think Dr. Garcin might have added to what he has said on this Subject, the Mention that is made in the twenty-second Chapter of the first Book of Chronicles, of the Wealth King David had prepared for the House of the Lord: viz. an hundred thousand Talents of Gold, and a thousand times, one thousand Talents of Silver, making the immense Sum of 1170,000,000*l.* Sterling, according to the aforesaid Dean's Calculation of 7,200*l.* per Talent of Gold, and 450*l.* per Talent of Silver, only in those two Metals, besides, Brass and Iron without Weight, and the Addition that he made out of his privy Purse, towards that pious Work, of three thousand Talents of Gold, and seven thousand Talents of refined Silver, as hinted in the twenty-ninth Chapter of the above-mentioned Book, and the fourth Verse; to which we may subjoin what is recorded in the seventh Verse, That the Fathers and Princes of the Tribes of Israel, &c. gave five thousand Talents, and ten thousand Drums of Gold, ten thousand Talents of Silver, eighteen thousand Talents of Brass, and an hundred thousand Talents of Iron, as an additional Proof of the Benefits brought to this Country by Commerce; for none of this vast Treasure was the Product of it, and consequently must have been imported, to the great enriching both of Prince and People; as plainly appears from the Magnificence of their Gifts. And though we have not the Account of King David's Trade to the Land of Ophir and Tarshish, as fully noticed as we have that of his son Solomon's, yet he undoubtedly commenced it, on his Conquest of the Kingdom of Edom, which made him Master of Elat and Eziongeber, two Sea-Port Towns on the Red-Sea; from whence he might, and certainly did, direct his Traffick to the Coast of Africa westward, and to Arabia, Perfia, and India, on the East; and, as he lived twenty-five Years after making that Conquest, we may account for his amassing such, otherwise, an incredible Sum, by the long Continuance and vast Profit of his Trade.

I am not ignorant, that many learned Authors judge the Talents above-mentioned to have been less than they are here calculated at; yet, supposing with them, that they were not above half the Value, the Sum still remains prodigiously great, and shews, what I am contending for, that Commerce alone could furnish such a Treasure.

From the Commerce and Navigation of the Arabians, we may pass, with great Propriety, to that of the Fleet of Solomon, which went to Ophir. . . . After what we have seen of the Navigation of the former, it will not be very difficult to make appear more clearly than has ever yet been done, which Way it took for performing this Voyage.

First, there is a great Probability, that Solomon was informed by some Arabians, or by the Queen of Sheba herself, long before she came to see him, of the Maritime Places, from whence they drew their Gold, their Spices, and the other rich Merchandizes of their Commerce, as well as of the Route which they had to go; and that it was in Consequence of this Discovery, that he took the Resolution to maintain, in some Port of the Red Sea, a Fleet to proceed every three Years, according to the sacred Text, to the same Places which were frequented by that of the Arabians; this could not be otherwise for many Reasons, which may be deduced from all that I have advanced, and from that which I shall yet add here.

Secondly, it cannot be doubted that Solomon, after this Discovery, and with the Design of drawing from India, the same Treasure which the Ports of Arabia procured, did not take Care to secure Pilots to conduct his Ships to those Places; and and as his Fleet wanted Men to fit it out, and serve aboard it, this Prince, for that Reason, obtained, as the Scripture informs us, from Hiram King of Tyre, some People experienced in Maritime Affairs, who, as it likewise appears, had also Ships in the Red Sea, to join with those of Solomon in this Voyage.

It is evident by what I have said, in Regard to the Arabians, that the Islands of Ceylon and Sumatra were the principal Places, to which they sailed; the Fleet of Solomon ought certainly to do the same in holding the same Route; I would say, in traversing the midst of the Sea.

It cannot positively be affirmed, that the Isle of Ceylon has been formerly rich in Gold, as many of the Learned believed, and that this Fleet which certainly went thither, drew its Gold from thence, as it did its precious Stones, Cassia, and Cinnamon; but it may be supposed, with much greater Probability, that it got it from some Part of the Peninsula of Malacca, called anciently the Chersonese of Gold, or from the Island of Sumatra, since this has been always, as it still is, full of this precious Metal. The Sea is as easy, or easier, to pass from the Isle of Ceylon to that of Sumatra by the western Monsoon, than it is from Arabia to the Coast of Malabar, or to the Island of Ceylon, as I have demonstrated. These two Traverses have been always practised with the greatest Facility. That which the Learned suppose, along the Eastern Coast of Africa to Soffala, is ten Times more difficult and dangerous, without reckoning that this last Place is two hundred Leagues more distant from Arabia than the Isle of Sumatra is, and that the Winds, which are not the same, nigh this Coast, as in the Middle of the Sea, are irregular, and very often contrary. In a proper Season, a Passage is now made from Arabia to Sumatra in less than a Month, which cannot be done in four, from the same Place to Soffala, by coasting Africa, in any Time that may be chosen.

It is then clear that this is that direct Route from Arabia to Ceylon and Sumatra which the Arabians took; and which the Fleet of Solomon always chose as the easiest and most profitable, or as the only one that could procure him the most precious Merchandizes of all the East as well as all Sorts of Spices.

Aloe, which is a most odoriferous Wood, and which is spoken of in Scripture, is only found in these Countries, and of which it having been always a principal Commerce, is a strong Proof, that the Fleet of the Arabians, and that of Solomon, went to those Places. Let us yet add, that the Woods of Almuggbin came from thence, and it may reasonably be supposed the Sandal, being also a sweet smelling Wood; it comes from the Island of Timor, and the Macaifers have always carried it to Malacca and Acbin, in the Isle of Sumatra, for Sale to the other Nations of India, who have ever diligently sought it.

These Elucidations, which strongly agree in Favour of the Truth of those ancient Voyages, ought to release the Curious from the Perplexities and Embarrassments, into which the Commentators on the Bible, by the Difference of their Opinions on this Matter, have thrown them. The ancient History of Commerce receives also a clear Light from this easy Demonstration, where the Navigation of the Indies has always been, and the Transport of the rich Merchandizes that have at all Times come from thence.

Besides, it is seen by these very Eclaircissements, that it is by no Means necessary to make the Fleets of Solomon and Hiram undertake the painful Tour of Africa, to fetch every Time the Gold and Merchandize as far as Spain, as Mr. Huet has pretended, and yet more recently the Author of the Speſtacle de la Nature. These Gentlemen, on the Credit of some ancient Historians, who relate an Example of a Voyage that was made round Africa, have thought they might conclude, that the Fleets of the Hebrews and Tyrians, which sailed from the Red Sea, made this Route in the same Manner, and, what is more, that they repeated it, according to them, every three Years.

This is not a proper Place to enlarge on explaining the Difficulties the Fleets must encounter, to make this prodigious Tour along Shore, as these Authors have advanced: It is easier to imagine it in a Closet than to make it on the Spot, and to go to examine or prove the Dangers; if they had drawn for themselves an exact Picture of the Fatigues to be endured in risking to follow the Coasts of this great Part of the World, and had painted the unknown Shelves and Banks under Water,

AND COMMERCE, FROM THEIR ORIGIN.

Water, with which the Coasts are so well furnished; the contrary Winds and Currents which last long; and, what is worse, the Wrecks which Tempests almost continually occasion, on being too near a Shore, they would, without Doubt, have changed their Language. Even now, when Navigation is more perfect than ever, how many Wrecks happen in tempestuous Seasons, when Ships are in Sight of the Coasts either near their Arrival, or after sailing from some Port? These Wrecks would be more frequent and numerous, if the Seas and Havens were strange and unknown, and without the Charts now used, of which they were formerly ignorant.

The Coasts of Africa are in many Parts difficult to frequent; there are Heights, Lengths, and Steepnesses, full of Shelves, and where the Sea is dreadful in the Motion and Noise of its Waves, which break against an Infinitude of Rocks. How many Ships have the Portuguese, English, and Dutch lost, and still lose, near the Cape of Good Hope, notwithstanding the great Experience they have had in Navigation on that Coast! Their Losses have been still greater on many Occasions in the very Road of that Cape.

Africa has in truth always produced Gold and Ivory, but it is a Mistake to think that it has also yielded Spices and precious Stones; if Historians of former Times, and, among others, Pliny have affirmed it, they ought to be regarded as having fallen into an Error in that Respect, the same as has often happened to them in many other Things.

On the contrary, the Indies have always abundantly afforded these rich Productions, with many others, of which Use has been made in Trade. Present Experience suffices to demonstrate these two Truths; and these are Facts which prove in their Turn, that it was not to Africa, and yet less to Spain, that Solomon sent his Fleet to load those precious Commodities, so diligently sought after in Antiquity. If any such Fleet had risked making the Tour of Africa to come to Spain, what Appearance or Probability was there that it returned by the same Way, and under the same Risques, rather than through the Mediterranean, to get to some Port in Syria, which is much nearer, and the Sea better known and less dangerous?

Ophir and Tarshish, where the said Fleets went, according to Scripture, are not then the same Places that Mess. Huet and Pulche have endeavoured to establish in Africa and Spain, viz. Ophir at Soffala, and Tarshish in Andalusia. The learned Bochart has likewise found these Places in the Indies, notwithstanding the Opposition which the Abbé Pluche made against him. I am strongly led to believe, with Antoine du Pinet, the Translator of Pliny, that Tarshish was Guzurate, named by Pliny himself Gedrosi Populi. That Author always translated this ancient Name into that of Tarshish and Guzurate.

The first Voyages to the Indies were made from that Side, and it is probable from this, that the Hebrews called the Sea which bordered on it, the Sea of Tarshish, to distinguish it from the Red Sea, which was the nearest to their Country among those to the Eastward of them.

In fine, in Respect of Ophir, it appears, that that Place must be Sumatra, because this Ile has always been the richest in Gold; or else the Peninsula of Meiacca, believed to be the Golden Chersonese of the Ancients, and where were found the odoriferous Woods, and other Aromatics, which the more remote Nations have always brought there, and even to Acbin, the Capital of Sumatra.

To finish this Subject, I shall remark, that the Author of the Speſtacle de la Nature has attempted to demonstrate, "that the Knowledge of the North Star rendered Navigation anciently more bold and fortunate; that the Phœnicians were those that applied themselves to it most; that they taught it with Success to the Hebrews, and that they served for Guides to the Fleets of Solomon; and "that, in fine, by their indefatigable Activity, and by their continual Attention to the Information of the Polar Star, they penetrated every where:" By which this learned Man gives us to understand, that these same Phœnicians made the Hebrews make the Tour of Africa by the Assistance of that Star; but how could it serve for this long Voyage, when it is hardly seen only at five Degrees of Northern Latitude, that is to say, one hundred Leagues on this Side the Line?

This Author, to shew that the Phœnicians with the Hebrews might make this Tour Coastways, relates an Example taken from Herodotus, viz. that Necao, King of Egypt, sent some Pilots on the Red Sea, and ordered them to make the Tour of Africa, which they did, and, returning by the Straits of Gibraltar, they arrived in Egypt the third Year: But when will another Fleet, supposing this Story true, be able to do the same? And, seeing that these Pilots were near three Years in making this Tour, the Fleet of Solomon would not have failed being almost six, in making the same Voyage twice, going and coming, without counting its Stay in Spain; besides, a Fleet never fails, by a third, so quick, as a Ship or two, can separately.

As these Pilots with their People did not incurber themselves, it is said, with many Provisions to make this prodigious Tour, he takes Care to relate the Passage of Herodotus, which says, that these People advanced into the Southern Sea, and that as they were not ignorant, that the Summer Rains destroyed, in the most remote Part of Africa, that which was sown in the Spring, when they found themselves in Autumn, they landed, sowed, and waited the Crop, without ever leaving the Coasts of Lybia, that is to say, of Africa, getting in their Harvest, and reëmbarking.

This favours strongly of a Fable, to any one acquainted with the Country and Soil of Africa; besides, Herodotus supposes a Thing of which he was ignorant, viz. that our Autumn makes the Spring in the meridional Parts of Africa, their Seasons being opposite to ours. There might be many Things offered to demonstrate the Impossibility of this Practice among Travellers of this order.

When a Writer is ignorant of Geographical Particulars, and the Nature of a remote Country, he cannot avoid, at least, falling into false Suppositions, when he speaks minutely of them. This is what Persons who know these Places, by having been there, generally remark very well and justly.

Of Merchants, whether Natives or Foreigners; their Character; some Directions for their prudent Conduct; and an Abstract of the Laws now in Force concerning them.

THE Antiquity of the free Profession of a MERCHANT may justly entitle it to claim Precedency to Nobility of Birth, and all hereditary, or new created Dignities conferred on Men by Emperors or Kings; for there were eminent Merchants in the World long before there were any Nobles, or titled Gentry. But, in the early Ages of Commerce, the Rank and Profession of a Merchant was neither so well understood, nor so clearly distinguished from that of simple Inland Traders or Shopkeepers, as it has been in modern Times.

A Confusion of the terms Merchant and Trader, derived from the Latin word Mercator and Tradendo, prevailed for a long Time, and was adopted by Commercial Writers. The literal Translators from Cicero give no other Definition of his Sense of the Word Mercator, than that he is a Person who buyeth and tradeth in any Thing. And in the early Annals of England and Scotland we find Traders, who resorted to the publick Fairs, indiscriminately stiled Mercatores; they are thus denominated in the publick Records in the Reign of Edward I. But, after the firm and extensive Establishment of Commerce in this Country, protected by a maritime Force, and improved by the Settlement of Colonies, a just Distinction took Place between the Merchant, and the inland Trader, whether in the Gross or by retail. Mun, an eminent modern commercial Writer, very happily calls a Merchant, the Steward of the Kingdom's Stock, by Way of Commerce with other Nations. "None therefore, in Great-Britain, can properly be stiled Merchants, but such as export her native Products and Manufactures, or those of her Colonies, to foreign Climes; or import the Commodities of different Countries into these Kingdoms." To this proper Acceptation of the Word Merchant it will be necessary strictly to adhere, that we may not confound the Rank and Character of the British Merchant, with that of the wholesale Dealer or Trader, an Error which we may be easily led into, if we consult the common Directories and other printed Lists of our Citizens, some of whom, prompted by Vanity, give a small annual Gratification to the Printers, to be placed in the first Class of Citizens, when their Situation only entitles them to the Second. This Distinction deserves particular Notice in this Place, because the Education required to accomplish the Character of a British Merchant, is by no Means necessary for the second Class of Citizens, wholesale Traders.

The mercantile Profession stands in a high Degree of Estimation with all the Nations of Europe, except Spain. In France, by two Arrests of Lewis XIV. the one in 1669, and the other in 1701, a Nobleman is allowed to trade both by Land and Sea, without any Disparagement to his Nobility; and we have frequent Instances of Merchants being ennobled in that Country, from Respect to the Utility which their Commerce, and the Manufactures they have set up, has produced to the State. In Bretagne, even a Retail-Trader does not derogate from his Nobility, which only sleeps whilst he continues to exercise it, or, in other Words, he only only ceases to enjoy the Privileges of his Noblesse, whilst he carries it on, and re-assumes it by leaving off Trade, without any Letter or Instrument of Rehabilitation. In many other States, and more especially in the Republics of Venice, Holland, and Genoa, its Value increases, and I wish I could say the same Regard was paid to it in England; but its Importance is not so justly considered by us as it ought to be, more especially, as we enjoy every desirable Advantage for carrying it on; and, could the Gentlemen engaged in it be brought to this Way of thinking, and be persuaded to do Justice to a Profession we all esteem honourable, by a stricter Imitation of the above-mentioned States, and, not only study, but adopt their Assiduity and Diligence, more especially that practised by our industrious Flemish Neighbours, from a sincere Conviction of the Excellency of the mercantile Employ; we should soon outstrip every Competitor, and render the British Merchant as celebrated as the British Valour, or the British Power, which he, more than others, contributes to support. It is true, Commerce stands so fair in the Esteem of an Englishman, and promises so many Occasions either for raising or improving a Fortune, that many younger Sons and Brothers of Peers are frequently bred up to, and embrace it; but then, they are too apt to quit it on succeeding to the Dignities of their Families, or to some publick Employment, and withdraw those Funds, which might otherwise be continued in it, both to their own and the Nation's Emolument; whereas, was a contrary Practice observed, and could many, whose immense Riches enable them, be persuaded to pursue their first Beginnings, and destine Part of their great Effects to run into this Channel, we should see Commerce yet daily improve, and many more active Professors shining at the Head of it than we now do; a Number of important Enterprizes might be undertaken, and happily concluded, to the no small Increase both of publick and private Interest: But it is a Misfortune that many Gentlemen who have been enriched by it, or their Inheritors, frequently withdraw from it, to live in Retirement, or by an Advancement to Honours and Posts, change the profitable and pleasureable mercantile Life for the more troublesome, though splendid one, of Grandeur and Power; and notwithstanding such may, and undoubtedly often do, look down on their quondam Business as derogatory and now beneath them, yet a prime Minister of France, and several successive Grand Dukes of Tuscany, as mentioned in the preceding Discourse, I should think might countenance any one's Continuance in it, as they deemed it no Disparagement to their high Stations. And, to shew how Commerce is thought of by most Foreigners, we may subjoin to the Examples already quoted of the Regard paid to it, that many of the Italian Princes are the principal Merchants of their States, and think it no Discredit to make their Palaces serve as Warehouses. Many of the Kings of Asia, most of those on the Coast of Africa and Guinea, traffick with the Europeans, either in Person or by their Ministers; so that, in Reality, Spain is the only Country I know of, where the mercantile Profession is in Disrepute; and there it is counted less ignoble and ungenerous to beg, than to make, or improve a Fortune, by merchandizing. And, before I proceed to mention the Laws in Force concerning Trade and Commerce, I shall here describe the necessary Qualifications of Merchants, and give some few Rules for their Conduct, tending to secure to them the Success they aim at.

Previous to a Man's becoming a universal Dealer, he ought to treasure up such a Fund of useful Knowledge, as may enable him to carry it on with Ease to himself, and without risking such Losses and Disgraces, as great ill-concerted Undertakings will naturally expose him to; wherefore, to reduce this necessary Science to a proper Regulation, I shall recommend the following Particulars to his Acquisition, and, if his Concerns are more limited, his Learning and Knowledge may be so too.

The first Care of Parents or Guardians who design to bring up a Youth to be a British Merchant should be, to instil into his tender Mind the soundest Principles of Religion and Morality, and a sacred Veneration for Truth; Probity should be the Basis of all his juvenile Actions; nor should he, even in his Sports and Pastimes, ever be suffered to forfeit his Word, or evade his Promise.

The early Cultivation of his native Tongue is indispensably necessary and to be preferred to the Study of the dead Languages. Parents cannot be guilty of a greater Folly than to make Lads labour hard at Latin and Greek seven or eight Years, when perhaps they will not have Occasion twice in their Lives, to speak, read, or write, either of these Languages.

The general Merchant then, should learn;

1. To write properly and correctly his native Language.
2. All the Rules of Arithmetick, which have any Affinity or Relation to Commerce.
3. To keep Books of double and single Entry, as Journals, Ledger, &c.
4. To be expert in the Order and Forms of Invoices, Accounts of Sales, Policies of Insurance, Charter-parties, Bills of Lading, and Bills of Exchange.
5. To know the Agreement between the Monies, Weights, and Measures of all Nations.
6. If he deals in Silk, Woollen, Linen, or Hair Manufactories, he ought to know the Places where the different Sorts of Merchandizes are manufactured, in what Manner they are made, what are the Materials of which they are composed, and from whence they come, the Preparations of these Materials before working up, and the Merchandize after their Fabrication.
7. The Lengths and Breadths which Silk, Woollen, or Hair Stuffs, Linens, Cottons, Fustians, &c. ought to have, according to the diverse Statutes and Regulations of the Places where they are manufactured, with their different Prices according to their Times and Seasons, and, if he can add to this Knowledge, the different Dyes and Ingredients which enter into the Formation of the various Colours, it will not be useless.
8. If he confines his Traffick to Oils, Wines, &c. he ought to inform himself particularly of the Appearances of the succeeding Crops, for his Government in disposing of what he has on Hand, or to learn, as exactly as he can, what they have produced when got in, for his Direction in making the necessary Purchases and Engagements.
9. What are the Sorts of Merchandize which are found more in one Country than another, those which are scarce, their different Species and Qualities, and the properest Method for bringing them to a good Market, either by Land or Sea.
10. Which are the Merchandize permitted or prohibited, as well entering as going out of the Kingdoms or Estates where they are made.
11. The Price of Exchange, according to the Course of different Places, and what is the Cause of its Rise and Fall.
12. The Customs due on Importation or Exportation of Merchandize, according to the Usages, Tariffs, and Regulations, of the Places, that he trades to.
13. The best Manner of folding up, embalming, or tonning the Merchandize for their Preservation; and to be the least chargeable.
14. The Price and Condition of freighting, and insuring Ships and Merchandize.
15. The Goodness and Value of all Necessaries for the Construction and Repairs of Shipping, the different Manners of their Building, what the Wood, the Iron, the Masts, the Cordage, the Anchors, Cannons, Sails, and all Requisites may cost.
16. The Wages commonly given to Captains, Officers, and Sailors, and the Manner of engaging with them.
17. The modern foreign Languages, or at least as many of them as he can attain to, which may be reduced to five principal ones, viz. The Spanish and Portuguese which are in Use in almost all the East, particularly on the Coasts of Africa, from the Canaries to the Cape of Good Hope. The Italian, understood on all the Coasts of the Mediterranean, and in many Parts of the Levant. The Teutonick or German, which is understood in almost all the northern Countries.

tries. And the French, which is now become almost universally current, fashionable, and useful.

18. The consular Jurisdiction with the Laws, Customs, and Usages, of the different Countries he does or may trade to; and generally, all the Ordinances and Regulations which have any Relation to Commerce, either at Home or Abroad.

19. In fine, although it is not precisely necessary that a Merchant be very learned, it is, notwithstanding, very proper that he should know something of History, particularly that of his own Country; of Geography, Hydrography, or the Science of Navigation; and that he has a Knowledge of the Discoveries of the Countries where Trade is established, in what Manner it is settled, of the Companies which are formed to support those Establishments, of the Colonies that they have sent out, of which he need not want Memoirs, as almost all are inserted in this Work, and which he may also learn from the Relations of Travellers; all these Things are of a very great Utility for the Enterprizes of Commerce, which he may have a design to undertake.

20. If the Circumstances of Situation and Fortune will allow of it, after he has finished his domestick Education, and has been introduced into the Accounting-House, to be shewn the general Method of Correspondence with foreign Merchants, we will suppose about his eighteenth Year, he should be sent for two or three Years on his Travels to commercial Nations; recommending him, at each Place where he is to reside, to some considerable Merchant, who should be advised to receive him without Form or Ceremony, upon the Footing of one of his Family; and, so far as is consistent with the necessary Secrecy of commercial Transactions, to let him assist in his Accounting-House, at the Custom Houses, and on the Quays.

We may add to the foregoing Requisites for forming a Merchant, that he ought on all Occasions to avoid Fraud and Deceit as corroding Cankers to his Reputation and Fortune; for however cunningly the Mask is worn, Chance may, or Time certainly will, discover the Cheat, and render the Wearer exposed to the Contempt and Insults of those he has imposed on; and, to what has been said, permit me to subjoin the Advice, that he who undertakes to be a Merchant should do it with great Caution, and Circumspection, observing several Circumstances tending to secure him Success: as first, to make himself Master of that Branch of Commerce he intends to engage in; and if he does not transact his Business personally, to be cautious in his Choice of Factors; above all, that they be noted for their Capacity and Integrity, otherwise the best laid Scheme may be rendered abortive, and produce a considerable Loss, instead of an expected Advantage, through the Treachery, Neglect, or Ignorance of the Agent; for which Reason a Merchant should not be drawn in to employ a Factor, with whose Character he is unacquainted, from any Motive whatsoever, even from that most prevailing one, of serving for a less Commission than what others commonly do, as I am sure no Concern is worth carrying on, that will not afford the Allowance generally made to those the Merchant thinks proper to substitute and employ. His first Care, therefore, should be the Choice of such a Correspondent as he can depend on, whose Integrity will naturally lead him assiduously to solicit and promote the Interest of his Principal, unbiassed by any sinister Views of his own. But as Merchants, as well as Inland Traders transact a great Part of their Business themselves, I shall here add some valuable Remarks for their Government in Purchases and Sales, partly extracted from Monf. Savary's Parfait Negociant, and partly what my own Experience has furnished me with, as they may be equally serviceable to an English and French Reader; though Mr. Savary's Share of them was principally intended for the latter.

Trade becomes more or less perplexing, according as it is more or less extensive; and it is for this Reason that Merchants ought to appropriate different Maxims and Considerations for the Conduct and Management of their Affairs.

Those who traffick in the Merchandize of our own Manufactories, or confine their Trade to the Consumption of one City only, run less risks, and carry on their Business easier than those who dispose of their Goods, not only in the Place of their Residence, but to Dealers or Retailers in other Parts of the Kingdom, or abroad; this shall be explained, after treating of the Manner which Merchants ought to observe in the Purchase of Commodities, and the establishing Fabricks themselves.

And for this it is to be remarked, that in Places where any considerable Manufactories are settled, there are generally associated Merchants, who supply the Fabricators with the necessary Materials for their Works, which they sell them, and in Payment take their Goods, which they afterwards dispose of in other Places, or on the Spot, to supply Comm'ions given them.

Though there are some of the Artificers so opulent, as to buy and procure the Materials they want for the supply of their Manufactories from the first Hands; yet there are others, who being Masters of less Stock, sell their Goods to the first Purchasers that demand them.

Now Merchants must govern themselves in their Dealings with these three Sorts of Men, according as the Times and Seasons shall dictate; for in those when the Merchandize are scarce and in Demand, they must buy of all as well as they can, and according to the Advantages that may present; but, when Commerce is dead, or little stirring, and Abundance of Goods lying on Hand, they should then act with Circumpection, and observe the following Maxims in all their Purchases.

1. When Goods begin to rise in Price, which commonly proceeds from these two Causes, either that the Value of Materials is exceedingly augmented on Account of their Scarcity, or that there are but few Goods ready-made, to supply a brisk Demand, it is natural for those that are perfected to increase in Value, in Proportion to the Want and Paucity of them; but it is Prudence in him who would buy under such Circumstances, to examine the Causes that produce this Augmentation, and, if the Goods are Silk, enquire whether the Crop of that Commodity has been good or bad, though, if the Season has been moist and rainy at the Place of its Growth, he may be assured of the latter, and that the Scarcity of the Merchandize proceeds from this of the principal Material.

It is equally the same in the Manufactories of Cloth and other Woollens, when Wools are scarce and risen in Price; and the same with Linens under the Shortness of the Crop of Hemp and Flax, and indeed of all Sorts of Materials, which compose the Manufactures of the different Sorts of Merchandize, current in Trade; because the Scarceness of these augments their Price, and consequently that of the Commodities made of them.

There is no Doubt, that when the augmented Price of Merchandize proceeds from the Scarcity of their Materials, that it not only will remain so long, but that it will daily rise by little and little, and in this Case afford the Merchant no Room for Deliberation, who ought immediately to buy and make his Bargain, to receive afterwards, in a certain Time, the Quantity he judges he may want to sell.

If the Rise of Goods proceeds from there being few in the Fabricks, and a great Demand for them, and not through Want of the Materials which compose them, the Buyer ought to act with Sagacity and Prudence in their Purchase; because this probably is a Fire that will soon extinguish, and this Augmentation last no longer than the Warmth that occasioned it, for two Reasons; the first, because it may be, Chance effected it, owing to several Merchants of different Places accidentally giving their Commissions at the same Time, or that they happen to meet at the Manufactories, which makes the Fabricators stand firm to their Prices, though, when these Merchants are supplied, Things return to the same State they were in before, and such an Occurrence makes them sometimes even diminish greatly in their Value; because the Workmen, seeing themselves fought after, engage deeply in their Fabricks, and the Abundance then occasions a Cheapness, in the same Manner, as a Scarcity before produced the Reverse; and these Considerations are very important towards successful Purchases.

2. The second Maxim, necessary to be observed in the buying Merchandize is to be extremely circumspect in his Words, that the Purchaser's Desire of having the Goods he is treating for may not appear; and he should not slight or undervalue them, in order to be thought not to want them, as this Cunning only serves to embarrass the Mind of the Manufacturer, and make him more firm and tenacious cious under the Uncertainty, whether this is a Feint or not, and is a Means of his not so soon resolving to part with his Goods at the Price offered for Fear of being surprized: On the contrary, he ought to act with Sincerity and Frankness, accompanied, however, with Prudence; Workmen liking better to deal with such Sort of Chapmen, than with those who use Tricks and Subtlety.

3. The third is to consider whether the Merchandize has diminished in Price from a higher Degree to which it was before mounted, or whether it is augmented in Price from a lower one, at which it was, by Reason of a Dulness in Trade, or by the too great Abundance that there has been in the Fabricks: This is the greatest Nicety on the Part of the Buyers.

For if it is at the Height of its Dearness, and tends to a Fall, then you ought not to buy, because it is certain, that if the Cause which made it mount to so high a Price ceases, it will daily diminish, till it returns to the Point of its just Value.

On the contrary, if the Goods are at their lowest Value, and the Price begins to rise, it is then a Time to buy, because it is certain that it will daily augment, so long as the Cause which gave room for its Augmentation lasts.

And though what has been said may appear a Paradox, it is however a Truth founded on Experience, and by which the most skilful and ingenious Merchants have greatly lost or gained, according as they have timely taken their Measures or neglected them.

4. The fourth Maxim in the Purchase of Goods is, both to know and reflect where they will meet the best Sales, and then suit their Quality to the Taste of the Inhabitants.

5. The fifth Maxim is to buy of the poorest Workmen, because they, not having Means to lay up their Manufactures, must sell cheaper than the Opulent, who have Substance, and can keep their Goods till a fit Opportunity offers for a more advantageous Sale.

6. The sixth Maxim is, not to be drawn in to engage beyond your Capital by the tempting Bait of a cheap Purchase, and from a wrong Calculation of your Ability to pay at the Time agreed on; as a Failure of Punctuality herein will occasion a Loss of Credit among the Fabricators, not to be recovered.

7. The seventh Maxim is, not to employ, as Factors at the Fabrick, any who act as Merchants, and sell the Materials to the Manufacturers; for they always buy the Goods dearer than others who have nothing to sell, because they give a Part in Payment, and very often to recover from their Debtors they take of them Merchandizes in Payment, which are neither so good nor so fashionable as those bought with ready Money.

8. The eighth and last Maxim, which I shall mention on this Subject, is, that if the Buyer has a Partner, one of them should be on the Spot, for two Reasons; first, because, being interested in the Purchase, he is more diligent, and takes better Care of what he does, than a Factor, who often regards nothing more than his own Interest, and who, having Commissions from several Merchants, favours those he pleases: The second is, because Affairs are transacted more secretly, and, many Times, Opportunities offer for good Purchases, which one commissioned doth not dare to engage in, though on such Adventures large Profits are frequently to be made.

These Maxims also hold good in the Purchase of all other Commodities, and if carefully attended to, will lead the Merchant in the Steps he ought to tread, to secure Success; and as these have been advanced to guide him in laying out his Money to the best Advantage, I shall now borrow the Assistance of the same Author to furnish him with proper Directions for his Management in conducting his Sales.

First, The Merchant should avoid many Words and Circumlocutions in his Dealings, as they will make him look more like a Retailer than one who is not so; and, supposing he is treating with one of this last Class, he may be assured, that the Buyer understands the Value of the Goods, so that the Merchant only occasions himself an unnecessary Trouble to ask much out of the Way, therefore what is principally to be observed, in Sales on Credit, is, that his Debtor be one noted for his Punctuality and Honesty, and also for dispatching large Quantities of Goods, as these Motives should induce a Preference to be given to one so qualified, though with less Profit, rather than to another with an inferior Credit and less Trade.

OF MERCHANTS.

2. If the Merchandizes dealt in are such as are dependent, in some Sort, for their Value on the Mode, Seasons ought to be consulted for advantageous Sales, so that, if those proper for the Winter are asked for at the latter End of it, it is not reasonable to expect so much then as in the Beginning, neither is it consistent with the Owner's Interest to keep them, as he may have no other Offers till the returning Year, and he then risks their continuing in Fashion, so that it will be prudent to embrace any tolerable Offer, under these Circumstances, that is made him.

3. He ought not to trust too much to any one Person; for, in Case of a Failure, it may straiten him, and, in the End, bring him to the same Misfortune; therefore Prudence will direct him to disperse his Effects in many Hands, that, if one or two miscarry, he may be less sensible of his Loss, and better able to support it: This is a very necessary Maxim to be observed by those who have large Dealings, as the Sufferings by a contrary Practice are innumerable, and there is no one Article of Misconduct that has brought so many to Ruin at this.

4. A Merchant should not inconsiderately engage with young Men, who have little more to recommend them to Credit than being the Children of rich Parents, as a Trust on this Account is the Product of a very false Maxim; because, if they do otherwise than well, their Fathers would hardly pay their Debts, as the Creditor may have flattered himself, neither is it reasonable to expect it, no more than to think they should incommode themselves, or hurt their other Children, purely to support a Son, whom Gaming, Debauchery, or at best Imprudence, has reduced.

5. If it happens, that Debtors omit paying what they owe at the Time agreed on, the Creditors should not oppress them with an extravagant Interest; for, though Necessity obliges them seemingly to submit, it is a sure Canker to their Fortunes, which too often at last involves both the Truſted, and him that trusts, in Ruin. Besides, if the latter escape a Failure he has drawn the other into, I should think he must suffer severely from the Stings of Conscience, when reflecting on his occasioning the Debtor's Misfortunes, by the Extortion he had imposed.

6. The sixth Maxim is never to lend to any Sort of Persons whatsoever on an unjustifiable Security, nor to take an unwarrantable Interest; for this is a detestable Act, and exposes the Usurer to the Penalty of the Law, and renders him abominable both in the Sight of God and Man.

It is, however, both reasonable and prudent for a Merchant to take Pledges or Securities from his Debtors, and to be cautious of what they consist; for, if they are in Merchandize, the Colours, Fashions, &c. of them may change, or the Quality may suffer by keeping, so that whilst he imagines he has the Value of what is owing him in Hand, he may be mistaken by the Half: And in these Cases of lending or selling on Trust, and taking Pawns instead of Notes for Security, the Seller or Lender should add to the above Precaution, that of making the Terms of the Deposit very clear and apparent, in Case of a Failure in the Debtor, and a consequential Claim of the Goods by the other Creditors, as a joint Property; otherwise he may be accused of endeavouring to conceal the Bankrupt's Effects; and if he has not taken the prudent Steps he ought in his Dealings, may be obliged to give up what he has received as a Security, besides suffering in his Reputation, for being unable to justify what he asserted and pretended; it would therefore be very proper to have the Affair transacted before Witnesses, or at least to have all the Goods that are pledged particularly specified in the Note or Obligation given for the Trust or Loan, by which Means the aforementioned Inconveniences would be avoided.

7. A Merchant should always endeavour to dispose of such Goods as are decaying, damaged, or growing unfashionable, as soon as he conveniently can; and if Money is not obtainable for them, he should barter them, if he can do it, on a tolerable Footing; regarding, however, in this Case, not to make the Exchange, as it were with his Eyes shut, but, first, be certain, that he is well versed in the Quality, and has a perfect Knowledge of the Goods he takes in Return, otherwise he may verify the Proverb of being Out of the Frying-Pan into the Fire; for Deceits are very common in these Negotiations. Secondly, he ought to know where, and on what Terms he can get rid of his new Effects, otherwise he may risk losing more by them, than by his old ones. And, thirdly, he should always avoid giving any Share of ready Money in the Bargain, if he possibly can, as he that parts with it is sure to have less Advantage in these uncertain Dealings, than he that receives it.

8. And lastly, A Merchant should never sell any of his Goods in small Parcels, except driven thereto by mere Necessity, as this is derogating from his Character, and will certainly occasion him a Loss of his Retail Customers.

I shall now lay before the Reader, Abstracts from the Statute Laws of England, relating to Merchants, independent of the Law-Merchant, or the Laws of Corporations and Commercial Companies.

Merchants here, were always considered as subject to the Jurisdiction of the Common-Law; though the municipal Laws of England, or indeed of any one Realm, are not sufficient for the ordering and determining the Affairs of Traffick and Matters relating to Commerce; Merchandizing being so universal, and extensive, that it is impossible; therefore, the Law-Merchant was established, so called from its consisting of certain invariable Maxims, Rules, and Regulations, which have attained the general Assent of the respectable Merchants of every considerable commercial Country for Ages past, and to which all Nations pay a just Regard. In all Contests decided by Arbitration, the Law-Merchant is principally adhered to; and the common and Statute Laws of this Kingdom leave the Causes of Merchants in many Cases to their own peculiar Laws. In the Reign of King Edward IV. a Merchant Stranger made Suit before the King's Privy Council, for several Bales of Silk feloniously taken from him, wherein it was moved, that this Matter should be determined at common Law, but it was answered by the Lord Chancellor, that as this Suit was brought by a Merchant, he was not bound to sue according to the Law of the Land.

In former Times it was conceived that those Laws that were prohibitory against foreign Goods did not bind a Merchant Stranger; but it has been a long Time since ruled otherwise, for in the Treaties that are now established between Nation and Nation, the Laws of either Kingdom are excepted, so that as the English in France, or any other foreign Country in Amity, are subject to the Laws of that Country where they reside, so must the People of France, or any other Kingdom, be subject to the Laws of England, when resident here.

Mich. 12 and 13 Elix. Dyer 206. English Merchants are not restrained to depart the Kingdom without Licence, as all other Subjects formerly were; they may depart, and live out of the Realm, and the King's Obedience, and the same is no Contempt, they being excepted out of the Statute 5 Ricb. II. c. 2. and by the common Law they might pass the Seas without Licence though not to merchandise.

9 Hen. III. c. 30. By Magna Charta it is enacted, that all Merchant Strangers in Amity (not publicly prohibited) shall have safe Conduct to come into, depart out of, and remain in England, and to travel by Water or Land, in and through the same to buy and sell, &c.

Stat. 9 Edw. III. c. 1. And if any Disturbance or Abuse be offered them, or any other Merchant in a Corporation, and the Head Officer there do not provide a Remedy, the Franchise shall be seized, and the Disturber shall answer Double Damages, and suffer one Year's Imprisonment, &c.

Edw. III. 14. Stat. 2. c. 2. All Merchants (except Enemies) may safely come into England, with their Goods and Merchandize.

5. Ricb. II. c. 1. Hen. IV. c. 7. Merchant Strangers may come into this Realm, and depart at their Pleasure, and they are to be friendly entertained: and Merchants Aliën shall be used in this Kingdom as Denizens are in others by the Statute.

27 Edw. III. c. 17. No Merchant shall be impleaded for another's Debt, whereof he is not Debtor, &c. and if a Difference arises between the King and any foreign State, Aliën Merchants shall have forty Days Notice, or longer Time, to sell their Effects and leave the Kingdom.

N. B. The Time for Merchants to withdraw their Effects has been by all late Treaties enlarged to six Months, during which Term they are to remain free and unmolested as well in Person as Goods. But by the sound Policy of Great-Britain this regulation is rendered useless, for all foreign Merchants, even the Natives of the Kingdoms with which we are at War, are suffered to remain with their Effects, and to carry on their Commerce in Time of War as usual, so long as they conform themselves in every Respect to the Laws of the Land, and behave as other good Subjects of the King. The French and the Spanish Government on the contrary have made it a Rule, to banish British Merchants and Traders from their Dominions according to the aforementioned Regulation.

All Merchants may buy Merchandize of the Staple, and any Merchant may deal in more Merchandizes than one; he may buy, sell, and transport all Kinds of Merchandize, excepting by later Acts, Wool, &c.

Merchant Strangers are to find Sureties, that they shall not carry out the Merchandize which they bring into England.

And when they bring any Merchandize into the Realm, and sell the same for Money, they are to bestow it upon other Merchandizes of England, without exporting any Gold or Silver in Coin, Plate, &c. on Pain of Forfeiture.

The above Law is altered, permitting Gold or Silver Bullion, or any foreign Coin, or Jewels to be exported.

The same extends as well to Denizens as Strangers, and in Strictness of Law they ought not to receive any Gold in Payment. But now Payment may be made in any of the current Coins of this Kingdom.

And the Reasons of these Laws were to keep the Gold and Silver within the Realm, and at the same Time increase our Manufactures by encouraging their Exportation abroad.

Foreign Merchants are to sell their Merchandize at the Port where they land in Gross, and not by Retail.

But Goods imported in British built Ships, being the Property of Foreigners, shall pay Alien's Duty.

Alien's Duty taken off upon all the native Commodities, Coals only excepted, and Manufactures of England exported by Foreigners.

And Merchandize is to be laden, and unladen, at certain Ports, and in the Day-time under Penalties.

It shall be lawful for Merchants to transport Iron, Armour, Pistols, Muskets, Saddles, Swords, Bridles, &c.

Merchants, &c. corrupting or adulterating Wine, or selling the same adulterated, are liable to Penalties.

On Importation of Tobacco, Merchants have an Allowance of Eight per Cent.

All Merchants Strangers, that shall be made Denizens, either by the King's Letters Patents, or by Act of Parliament, must pay for their Merchandize, like Custom and Subsidy as they ought, or should pay before they were made Denizens.

The Wares, Merchandizes, Debts, or Duties that Merchants have as Joint-Traders or Partners, shall not go to the Survivor, but shall go to the Executor of him that is deceased; and the Executor may join in an Action with the surviving Merchant.

In Copartnerhips between Merchants it is not necessary to provide against Survivorship.

If two Joint-Merchants occupy their Stock, Goods, and Merchandize in common, to their common Profit, one of them naming himself a Merchant, shall have an Account against the other, naming him a Merchant, and shall charge him as Receptor † Denariumum, &c. that is, as Receiver of the Money of him B, from

Laws and Regulations respecting the Corn Trade.

ALL former Laws and Regulations, so far as they regard the Prices, and the Duties on Corn imported or exported are repealed; and from and after the first Day of January, 1774, it is enacted, that whenever the Price of middling British Wheat, at the Ports and Places where Wheat shall be imported into this Kingdom, shall appear, according to the Methods directed by the several Acts of Parliament for ascertaining the Rates and Prices of Corn and Grain imported, or as herein after to be directed by this Act, to be at or above 48s. per Quarter; Middling British Rye, Pease and Beans respectively at or above 32s. per Quarter; Middling British Barley, Beer, or Big at or above 24s. per Quarter; And, middling British Oats at or above 16s. per Quarter: All Customs and Duties now payable respectively upon Wheat, Wheat-Flour, Rye, Pease, Beans, Barley, Beer, Big and Oats imported into this Kingdom, shall respectively cease, determine, and be no longer paid, or payable during the respective Continuance of such respective Prices as aforesaid; and in lieu of the former Duties, a Duty of only 6d. per Quarter shall be laid on all Wheat; of 2d. on every hundred Weight of Wheat-Flour; of 3d. on Rye, Pease, and Beans; of 2d. on Barley, Beer, or Bigg; and Oats per Quarter.

Corn, Grain, &c. imported at the usual Ports, allowed to import it, may be Warehoused in the King's Warehouses under the joint Locks of the King, and the Importers, Duty free; but upon taking out any Part thereof for Home Consumption, the Duties are to be paid down in ready Money; to be returned upon exporting any Part to foreign Countries, upon giving Bond to the Collector of the Customs, that it shall not be reloaded in any Part of Great Britain or Ireland, &c.

But Corn, Grain, &c. imported from Ireland and Warehoused intended for home Consumption, if not so disposed of, may be carried back to Ireland, under the like Securities and Restrictions, as are required for the Exportation of any other foreign Corn, Grain, or Flour.

Whenever middling British Wheat shall appear to be at or above 44s. per Quarter; Rye, Pease, or Beans at 28s.; Barley, Beer, or Bigg at 22s.; Oats at 24s.; at the Ports where they are intended to be exported: It shall not be lawful to export the same directly or indirectly, under the Penalty of Forfeiture of the Commodity, and of the Ship, Vessel, or Boat on which it is laden; and 20s. per Bushel additional Fine, on every Bushel of Corn, Grain, &c. attempted to be exported by Offenders against this Act.

Not to extend to the Sustainers of Ships of War, nor to Vessels carrying the said Articles Coast-wise. Nor to Grain exported to Ireland; nor to such of our Forts, Garrisons, and Settlements in foreign Parts, as shall by this, or subsequent Acts be allowed certain specified Quantities yearly; though British Corn, &c. be above the Price at which it is allowed to be exported.

After the first of January, 1774, all the former Bounties, allowed by Law upon the Exportation of any Sort of Corn or Grain, cease and determine, and the following Bounties took Place, and still continue; all the Regulations of this Act being made a permanent Law. Whenever middling British Wheat, or Malt made of Wheat, shall be under 44*s.* per Quarter, a Bounty of 5*s.* per Quarter shall be allowed upon the Exportation in British Shipping, whereof the Master, and Two-thirds of the Mariners, at least, are of his Majesty's Subjects. On Rye, when under 28*s.* per Quarter, a Bounty of 3*s.* On Barley, Beer, or Bigg, when under 22*s.* a Bounty of 2*s.* 6*d.* per Quarter; and the same on Malt made of these Grains. On Oats, when under 14*s.* a Quarter, 2*s.* and 2*s.* 6*d.* for Oatmeal, reckoning 226*lb.* Averdupois to the Quarter.

When Oatmeal does not exceed 16*s.* in Scotland, per Boll, weighing eight Stone Troy; it shall not be imported from Ireland, or any foreign Parts beyond the Seas, into the said Country, under Forfeiture of the Ship and her Appurtenances, and a Penalty of treble the Value of the Oatmeal, on all Persons aiding or assisting in landing it. But when Oatmeal in any Port or Place in Scotland does exceed the Price of 16*s.* per Boll, the Importation from Ireland, or any other Part beyond the Seas, is allowed.

In the Year 1756, a very great Scarcity of Corn happened all over Europe, and large Exports having been made the preceding Year from Great-Britain, the Poor suffered greatly from the Dearth of this first Necessary of Life; for Remedy thereof sundry Acts of Parliament were made, which continued in Force till the Year 1759, when Plenty was again restored. In the Month of June 1767, Wheat was at the enormous Price of 3*l.* 12*s.* per Quarter, and all other Grain in Proportion. An Act was then made to prohibit, for a limited Time, the Exportation of Corn, Malt, Meal, Flour, Bread, Biscuit, and Starch. Also an Act to discontinue the Duties on the Importation of Corn and Flour; and to permit the Importation in neutral Ships. But in the Year 1780, the Abundance of Corn was so great, that an Act was passed, to allow the Exportation in foreign Ships belonging to any Nation in Amity with Great-Britain. Also, half the Bounty allowed on Exportation in British Bottoms.

Sect. 4.

The Officers of the Customs shall admeasure all Corn whereon there is an Allowance payable for Exportation, and such Admeasurement shall be made by a Measure containing four Winchester Bushels; and if such Corn shall be brought to be shipped in Sacks, the Officers are to make Choice of two of these Sacks, out of any Number not exceeding twenty, before the same shall be put on board, and thereby compute the Quantity intended to be shipped, and, according to such Computation, the Allowance shall be paid to the Exporter, upon his producing a Certificate from the Officers of the Customs, attesting the Quantity and Quality of the Corn shipped for Exportation.

Sect. 5.

The like Regulations shall be extended to the ascertaining the Prices and Quantity of Beer or Bigg, Oatmeal and Wheat Malt, intended for Exportation; Provided, that nothing in this Act shall alter the present Practice of shipping Corn from the Port of London; but the same may be measured by sworn Meters, by whose Certificate the Searchers or other Officers of the Customs are to certify the Quantity of Corn shipped for Exportation, as hath been practised.

12 Sect. 1.

It shall be lawful for the Justices of Peace, for the several Counties within England, Wales, and Berwick, wherein foreign Corn shall be imported, at their Quarter Sessions, to give in Charge to the Grand Jury, to make Presentment of the Market Prices of middling English Corn of the Sorts mentioned in an Act 22 Car. II. Cap. 13.

c. 39.

Registers were appointed to be kept of the Prices at which Corn is sold in the several Counties of Great Britain, and of the Quantity exported and imported. The Justices at the Quarter Sessions to order weekly Returns to be made throughout the Year, of the Prices of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Oats,

OF MERCHANTS.

Oats, Beans, and Bigg, from not less than two, or more than six market Towns in each County, and to appoint a Person to receive the said Returns. Meal-Weighers in London to make a weekly Return of the average Prices. The Persons making the Returns to be paid out of the County Rates. The Returns to be transmitted to the Treasury, where a Person is to be appointed to receive them, and to publish them, or Abstracts from them Weekly in the London Gazette. Commissioners of the Treasury to keep an Account of the Quantities of Corn exported and imported, and of the Duties and Bounties paid thereon. This proved a very salutary Act for ascertaining the true Price of Corn throughout the Kingdom, and for judging of the Plenty or Scarcity.

The following is a copy of the weekly Returns, when Corn rose above the Price at which the Bounty stops:

And in the Month of December following, Wheat rose to 53s. per Quarter, when an Embargo was laid on all Ships laden with Corn for Exportation; and the Ports were opened for the Importation of American Wheat and Flour in British built Ships.

By this Act, which commenced and took Place September 29, 1789, additional Regulations are made, which merit Insertion in this Place, the Subject being of the first Importance. To guard, as much as possible, against false or partial Returns, every Corn Factor, from whom any Return is required by the 21 George III. shall, within one calendar Month from the Time of his beginning to deal by Commission in the Sale of Corn and Grain, take the following Oath, or, being one of the People called Quakers, affirm; videlicet,

I A. B. do swear (or affirm) that the Returns of the Prices and Quantities of British Corn and Grain, which henceforward shall be, by or for me, sold and delivered, shall, to the best of my Knowledge and Belief, contain the whole Quantity, and no more, of the Corn bona fide sold and delivered, by or for me, within the Period to which they shall refer, with the Prices and Names of the Buyers respectively; and, to the best of my Judgement, conformable to the Direction of an Act passed in the Twenty-first Year of the Reign of his present Majesty, intituled, An Act for further regulating and ascertaining the Importation and Exportation of Corn and Grain, within the several Ports and Places therein mentioned.

Any Person carrying on the Trade or Business of a Corn Factor, without taking the said Oath, is subjected to a Penalty of Fifty Pounds.

The

The Inspector of the Corn-returns at the Corn Exchange, London, to receive from every Corn-Factor in London, and the Suburbs, a Weekly return of the Corn brought into the Thames, Eastward of London-Bridge, which was sold by him during the preceding Week.

The average Prices formed from the Weekly returns, to be deemed the common Price of middling British Corn within London, Essex, Kent, and Suffolk.

For the Purposes of this Act, the maritime Counties of England are to be divided into Districts; and the Justices at the next Michaelmas Sessions, shall select a Number of principal Market-Towns, from which, and the Sea Ports having peculiar Jurisdictions, the Price of Corn for each County shall be taken.

Millers purchasing British Corn and Grain for Sale, are, by this Act, obliged to make true and just-returns, upon Oath, of the Quantities so bought by them, within three calendar Months after the passing this Act; or within one Month after they shall begin to deal in Corn and Grain; the Returns to be Weekly Accounts, and to be delivered to the Corn-Inspector of the Market, where the Purchases were made; under a Penalty of Ten Pounds for every Omission.

No Debenture for a Bounty on Exportation of any Corn, Grain, or Flour, shall be made out or granted for the Allowance of any Bounty on any Corn, Grain, or Flour, entered or shipped for Exportation from any Port within any of the Districts, during the Time that foreign Corn, or Grain of the same Species is allowed to be imported into such Districts at the low Duties.

§ Geo. II. c. 12.
Sect. 5. No Warrant, Cocket, &c. shall be granted for carrying to Sea, from any Port within England, Wales, and Berwick, to any other Port of the same, any foreign Corn after Importation thereof; and no Person shall transport any foreign Corn, or foreign Corn mixed with English, under Penalty, that all such Corn that shall be transported or laden contrary to this Act shall be forfeited, and every Offender shall forfeit 20*s.* for every Bushel of such Corn, and the Ship upon which such Corn shall be laden, shall be forfeited; and the Master and Mariners of such Ship, wherein such Offence shall be committed, knowing such Offence, and assisting thereunto, shall be imprisoned three Months.

11 Geo. II. c.
22. Sect. 1. If any Person beat, wound, or use any Violence to hinder one from buying Corn, and shall stop or seize on any Carriage laden with Wheat, Flour, &c. and destroy the same, or shall take away, or hurt any of the Horses or Drivers, &c. upon Conviction, he shall be sent to Gaol or House of Correction, and be kept to hard Labour, not exceeding three Months, nor for less than one, and shall be once publicly whipped at the Market-Place on a Market-Day.

Sect. 2. If any Person after Conviction shall commit any of the Offences a second Time, or shall pull down or destroy any Store-house, or Place where Corn shall be kept to be exported, or shall enter on board any Ship, and from either of these Depositories carry away or destroy any Corn, Meal, &c. such Offenders shall be adjudged guilty of Felony, and shall be transported for seven Years.

Sect. 5. The Inhabitants of every Hundred in England, wherein such Offence shall be committed, shall make Satisfaction for all Damages sustained, not exceeding 100*l.*

Sect. 6. Provided that no Persons be enabled to recover Damages by this Act, unless they by themselves or their Servants, within two Days after Damage done, shall give Notice of such Offence to one of the Constables of the Hundred or to the Headborough, &c. of the Town, &c. in or near which such Fact shall be committed, and shall within ten Days after such Notice give in their, or their Servants Examinations upon Oath, before any Justice of Peace where such Fact shall be committed.

Sect. 7. Where any Offence shall be committed against this Act, and any one of the Offenders shall be apprehended and convicted within twelve Months after the Offence, no Hundred shall be liable to make Satisfaction.

Sect. 8. No Person shall be enabled hereby to sue or bring any Action against any Hundred till after the Expiration of one Year, nor unless the Parties sustaining such Damage shall commence their Action within two Years after the Offence.

12 Car. II.
Cap. 4. Sect. 4. If any Goods of any Merchant born Denizen shall be taken by Enemies or Pirates upon the Sea, or perish in any Ship that shall be taken or perished, whereof the Duties shall be paid or agreed for, and that duly proved before the

Treasury

Treasury or Chief Baron of the Exchequer, by the Examination of the Merchants, or by two Witnesses, or other reasonable Proof; the same Merchants may newly ship in the same Port where the Goods were customed so much other Goods as the Goods lost shall amount unto in Custom, without paying any Thing, so as the Proof be recorded and allowed in the Exchequer, and certified to the Collectors of the Port; and every Merchant Denizen, who shall ship Goods in any Carrack or Galley, shall pay all Customs and Subsidies as an Alien born.

Provided that it shall be lawful to all Subjects to transport in Ships, and other Vessels of Subjects, all Herrings and other Sea-Fish to be taken by Subjects out of any Port, to any Place out of his Majesty's Dominions without paying Custom.

It shall be lawful for any Person to transport by Way of Merchandize any of these Goods following, viz. Iron, Armour, Bandoleers, Bridle-Bits, Halbert-Heads, and Sharps, Holsters, Muskets, Carbines, Fowling-Pieces, Pistols, Pike-Heads, Sword and Rapier-Blades, Saddles, Snuffers, Stirrups, Calf-Skins dressed or undressed, Geldings, Oxen, Sheep-Skins dressed without the Wool, and all Manufactures made of Leather, Paying the Rates appointed by this Act.

It shall be lawful for any Person to transport by Way of Merchandize Gun-powder, when the same doth not exceed the Price of 5*l.* per Barrel: But this is constantly prohibited by Proclamation in Times of War; together with Arms, Ammunition, and warlike Stores, unless special Licence is granted for exporting them to particular Countries in Alliance with Great Britain.

Merchants or their Agents, or any other Persons, enticing or seducing British Manufacturers, Artificers, and Workmen to leave the Kingdom and go abroad to carry on their Arts in foreign Countries are liable to a Penalty (on Conviction) of 500*l.* and one Year's Imprisonment; and for the second Offence 1000*l.* and two Years Imprisonment. Also Persons exporting the Tools and Utensils made use of in the woollen and silk Manufactures, forfeit the said Tools, and are to pay a fine of 200*l.* Masters of Ships receiving such Utensils on board subject to a Penalty of 100*l.* Custom-House Officers signing Cockets for exporting them to forfeit 100*l.* and lose their Employments.

Having now quoted the Laws in Force, more immediately concerning Merchants, who cannot always act without their Substitutes and Dependents, the Transition is natural from the former to the latter, and I shall therefore proceed to treat of them in Order.

Of Factors, Supercargoes, and Agents.

AS these are all Persons acting by Deputation for Account of the Principals who employ them, to whose Orders they are obliged to conform, on a cursory View it should seem that they mean one, and the same Thing. But in the present mercantile System they differ materially with Respect to the Extent of their Powers, and the Nature of their Employments. It will therefore be necessary to treat of them separately.

FACTORS are Persons appointed by written Commissions from private Merchants or commercial Companies to reside in foreign Countries, to transact the Business of selling the Commodities exported by their Principals and consigned to them, to purchase other Merchandize in the Countries where they reside, to be sent home to their Principals; and to negotiate Bills of Exchange and Remittances in Money, for the Sale, or Purchase of such Merchandize, or the Balance of Accounts. There are likewise Factors concerned in the domestic Trade of a Country, and in that which is carried on between different Parts of the Dominions of the same Sovereign. These usually reside at the Capital of the Kingdom, or in some great maritime City. Thus, we have Irisb and Scotch Linen Factors in London, Liverpool, Bristol, &c. Also Blackwell-Hall or Woollen Factors, Cheese Factors, and a Number of other Persons, falsely passing under the Denomination of Merchants, whose Employment is to sell upon Commission for the Great Manufacturers, their Principals, the various Product of their Manufactories. All these Factors are subject to Stipulations, Rules, and Regulations peculiar to the Branch of Business in which they are engaged, which are expressed in the Commissions, Letters or other written Contracts between them and their Principals, and they differ so materially, that no general Laws can be adapted to them all; for every Contest between a Factor and his Principal must be determined by the special Conditions of the Contract between them. For this Reason, we can only state the general Qualifications of Factors, and some Law-Precedents upon Cases that have been decided in the Courts of Law.

A Factor differs from a Servant in this, the Servant receives Wages, and if he commits a Fault only incurs Displeasure, he is likewise confined to act only for his Master. A Factor may transact Business for several Principals, he acts under Contract, receives a Consideration of so much per Cent on the Invoice or Value of the Commodities he buys or sells, which is called Commission or Factorage, and is responsible in all Respects to his Principal: He ought therefore to keep strictly to the Tenor of his Orders, as a Deviation from them, even in the most minute Particular, exposes him to make ample Satisfaction for any Loss that may accrue from his Non-observance of them; and it is very reasonable it should be so, as the Distance of his Situation renders him unable to judge of his Principal's Views and Intentions; therefore he should submit implicitly to them, though always exerting his best Endeavours for the Merchant's Interest, as his Gain is certain, whilst his Employer's is precarious.

When unlimited Orders are given to Factors, and they are left to sell or buy on the best Conditions they can, whatever Detriment occurs to their Constituents, they have their Excuse in their Hands, as it is to be presumed they acted for the best, and were governed by the Dictates of Prudence.

A Factor is barely a Trustee for his Principal; therefore, if this latter, having Goods in the other's Hands, owes him Money by simple Contract, and then dies indebted by Specialty, more than his Assets are worth, the Factor cannot retain the Goods.

If a Factor receives only a bare Commission to sell and dispose, it will not enable him to trust; for, in the due Execution of his Authority, he ought on a Sale to receive quid pro quo; and, on the Delivery of the one, to receive the other; for, otherwise, by that means, as they may trust six Months, they may trust sixteen Years; nor by Virtue of any Clause in their Orders that leaves them at Liberty to act as they think best, or of doing as if the Affair was their own, may they trust an unreasonable Time, as ten or twenty Years, instead of one, two or three Months, supposing this the customary Time of Credit for the like Commodities: and so it was adjudged, where one had remitted Jewels to his Factor in Barbary, who disposed of the same to Mulleback the Emperor, for a Sum certain to be paid at a Time, which being elapsed, the Factor not obtaining it, was forced to make the same good to his Principal.

Again, one and the same Factor may, and generally does, act for several Merchants, who must run the joint Risk of his Actions, though they are mere Strangers to one another; as if five Merchants shall remit to one Factor five distinct Bales of Goods, and the Factor makes a joint Sale of them to one Man, who is to pay one Moiety down, and the other at six Months End; if the Buyer breaks before the second Payment, each Man must bear a proportional Share of the Loss, and be contented to accept of their Dividend of the Money advanced.

But if such a Factor draws a Bill of Exchange upon all those five Merchants, and one of them accepts the same, the others shall not be obliged to make good the Payment. Tamen quere de hoc.

Hub. verif.
24, 25.

And as the Authority and Trust reposed in Factors is very great, so ought they to be provident in their Actions for the Benefit of their Principals; and therefore, if Factors shall give Time to a Man for payment of Monies contracted on Sales of their Principal's Goods, and after the Time is elapsed they shall sell Goods of their own to such Persons for ready Cash (leaving their Principal's unreceived) and then such Men break and become insolvent, the Factors, in Equity and Honesty, ought to make good the Losses; for they ought not to dispense with the Non-payment of their Principal's Monies, after they become due, and procure Payment of their own to another Man's Loss, though by the Laws of England, they cannot be compelled.

If Goods are remitted to a Factor, and upon Arrival he shall make a false Entry at the Custom-house, or land them without entering, whereby they shall incur Seizure, or Forfeiture; whatsoever the Principal is endamaged, he must inevitably make good, nor will such general Clause help him, as above; but, if a Factor makes his Entry according to Invoice, or his Letters of Advice, and it happens that these are erroneous, if the Goods are then lost, the Factor is discharged.

If a Factor sells Goods, either by themselves or among others, without advising his Principal, and afterwards deals with the Person to whom he sold them in other Accounts, if the Person becomes insolvent, the Factor shall be answerable to his Principal, whom he did not advise in Time of the Sale of his Goods; it shall be deemed the same as if he had sold them contrary to Orders.

If a Factor, by Error of Account, wrongs his Employers, he is to make good not only the Principal, but Interest for the Time; if the Error is to the Factor's own wrong, his Principal is to answer it in like Manner.

And as Fidelity, Diligence, and Honesty, are expected in the Factor, so the Law requires the like from his Employer, judging the Act of the one to be the Act of the other; and, therefore, if a Merchant shall consign counterfeit Jewels to his Factor, who sells and disposes of them for valuable Considerations, as if they were real; if the Factor receives any Loss or Prejudice thereby, by Imprisonment or other Punishment, the Merchant shall not only make good the Damage to the Factor, but also render Satisfaction to the Party damnified: And so it was adjudged, where one How was possessed of three counterfeit Jewels, and having Factors in Barbary, and knowing one Southern, a Merchant, was resident on the Place, consigns those Jewels to his Factor, who receiving them, intreated Southern to sell them for him, telling him that they were good Jewels; whereupon Southern, not knowing they were counterfeit, sold them to the King in whose Dominions he resided, for eight hundred Pounds, they being worth really but one hundred Pounds, and delivered the Money to the Factor, who remitted the same to How: The King, not long after, finding himself defrauded, committed Southern to Prison, till he repaid the eight hundred Pounds. Whereupon Southern coming to England, brought his Action against How, and had Judgment to recover his Damage; for the Principal shall answer for his Factor in all Cases, where he is privy to the Act or Wrong: And so it is in Contracts, if a Factor shall buy Goods on the Account of his Principal, especially if he has used so to do, the Contract of the Factor will oblige the Principal to a Performance of the Bargain.

When Factors have obtained a Profit for their Principal, they must be cautious how they dispose of it, for if they act without Commission or Order, they become responsible. Goods remitted to Factors ought, in Honesty, to be carefully preserved, as the Trust reposed in them is great; and therefore a Factor robbed, in an Account brought against him by his Principal, the same shall discharge him*. And so it is, if a Factor buys Goods for his Principal, which afterwards happen to be damnified, the Principal must bear the Misfortune; but, if a Factor shall dispose of the Goods of his Principal, and take Money that is false, he shall make good the Loss; yet, if he receives Monies, and afterwards the same is by Edict or Proclamation lessened in Value, the Merchant, and not the Factor, must, in that Case, bear the Loss.

The Factor must likewise be careful in regard to Letters of Credit, observing nicely whether they are for a Time limited, or to such a Value, or not exceeding such a Sum, or general; as he may otherwise bring himself into considerable Losses.

If a Merchant remits Goods to his Factor, and about a Month after draws a Bill on him, the Factor, who having Effects in his Hands, accepts the Bill; and then the Merchant breaks, against whom a Commission of Bankrupt is awarded, and the Goods

Quere, if Equity may not relieve in such Cases.

* Southeby's Case Cok. Lib. 4, Fol. 84.

Goods in the Factor's Hands are seized; it has been conceived, the Factor must answer the Bill notwithstanding, and come in a Creditor for so much as he was enforced by reason of his Acceptance to pay.

A Factor, who enters into a Charter-party with a Master for Freightment, is obliged by the Contract; but if he loads aboard generally, the Goods, the Principals, and the Lading are made liable for the Freightment, and not the Factor.

The Factor, having Money in his Hands appertaining to his Principal, receives Orders from him to make Insurance on Ships and Goods, as soon as he has loaded, which, if he has neglected to perform, and the Ship miscarries, he shall, by the Custom of Merchants, be obliged to make good the Damage; and, in Case of Loss, he ought not to make a Composition without Orders from his Principal.

One Joint-Factor may account, without his Companion, by the Law of Merchants; for Factors are oftentime dispersed, so as they cannot be both present at their Accounts.

A Merchant delivered Goods to be sold in Spain, and the Factor sells them to one who becomes a Bankrupt: We judge here that he shall be discharged.

In Account, it was held Per Curiam, that if a Man delivers Money to his Bailiff or Factor to lay out for him in Commodities, he cannot bring an Assumpsit, but only an Account; for it may so happen, that the Factor hath laid out more Money than he hath received.

A Factor should always be punctual in the Advices of his Transactions, in Sales, Purchases, Freightments, and more especially in Draughts by Exchange; for if he sells Goods on Trust without giving Advice thereof, and the Buyer breaks, he is liable to Trouble for his Neglect; and if he draws without advising his having so done, he may justly expect to have his Bill returned protested, to his no small Detriment and Discredit.

If a Factor deviates from the Orders he receives in the Execution of a Commission for purchasing Goods, either in Price, Quality, or Kind, or if after they are bought, he sends them to a different Place from that he was directed to, they must remain for his own Account, except the Merchant, on Advice of his Proceedings, admits them according to his first Intention.

A Factor who sells a Commodity under the Price he is ordered, shall be obliged to make good the Difference; and if he purchases Goods for another at a Price limited, and afterwards they rise, and he fraudulently takes them for his own Account, and sends them to another Part, in order to secure an Advantage that seemingly offers, he will, on Proof thereof, be obliged, by the Custom of Merchants, to satisfy his Principal for Damages.

If a Factor, in Conformity with a Merchant's Orders, buys with his Money, or his Credit, a Commodity he shall be directed to purchase, and, without giving Advice of the Transaction, sells it again to Profit, and appropriates to himself the Advantage, the Merchant shall recover it from him, and besides have him amerced for his Fraud.

If a Merchant orders his Factor to ship him a Sum in the current Coin of a Kingdom when Exportation is prohibited, and the Money is seized in endeavouring to get it aboard, the Loss is for the Merchant's Account, and not the Factor's.

If a Factor pays Money of a Merchant's without his Orders, it is at his own Peril; and if he lends his Cash without his Leave, though he proposes the Interest shall be the Merchant's, and any Loss happens before his Principal's Determination about it be known, it shall remain to the Factor.

SUPERCARGOES are Persons employed by commercial Companies, or private Merchants, to take Charge of the Cargoes they export to foreign Countries, to sell them there to the best Advantage, and to purchase proper Commodities to re-lade the Ships on their Return home. For this Reason, Supercargoes generally go out and return home with the Ships on board of which they were embarked, and therein differ from Factors who reside abroad, at the Settlements of the publick Companies for whom they act. The East India Company only send out Supercargoes to Places where they have no Factories, and and sometimes the chief Supercargo remains at the Place of a Ship's Destination for a Time, waiting the Arrival or Return of other Ships, and acting as Factor for the Company.

AGENTS are Persons employed in the different Departments of Commerce, the Law, the Army, and the Navy.

COMMERCIAL AGENTS are frequently appointed to settle Accounts, and dispose of the Effects of Merchants and other Persons dying, or failing in foreign Countries, or at home; their Commission terminates with the particular Business for which they were appointed; and they generally give Security for the Trust reposed in them. Agents are likewise appointed by Colonies, and particular Districts of Colonies, to transact the public commercial Concerns of the Places from which they are deputed, with the Officers under the Government of the Mother Country to which they belong. It is their duty to preserve the commercial Rights and Franchises of their Principals, to present Petitions against any Measures that are about to be taken detrimental to their Interest, and regularly to correspond with them upon these Subjects, and also to consult and advice with the Merchants, Planters, and others interested in the Welfare of the said Colonies, and residing in the mother Country. Such were the Agents for Carolina, Virginia, and the other Colonies of North-America, before the Revolt of those Colonies. And such at present are the Agents for our West India Islands and other Settlements abroad, their public Business lies chiefly with the Board of Trade and Plantations, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

SHIPS HUSBANDS, a class of Agents so called, whose chief Employment in capital Sea-port Towns, particularly in the Port of London, is, to purchase the Ship's stores for her voyage; to procure Cargoes on Freight; to settle the Terms and obtain Policies of Insurance; to receive the Amount of the Freight both at Home and Abroad; to pay the Captain or Master his Salary, and Disbursements for the Ship's Use; and, finally, to make out an Account of all these Transactions for his Employers, the Owners of Ships, to whom he is, as it were, a Steward at Land, as the Officer bearing that Name is, on Board, when the Ship is at Sea. The general Commission allowed to Ships Husbands on their Accounts is two per cent.

Of the LAW AGENTS little notice need be taken in this Work, especially as it is a limited Term, and mostly confined to such Attornies and Solicitors as are appointed to manage Appeals to the House of Lords, from Decrees of the inferior Courts of Judicature of Great-Britain and Ireland. It is their Business to present the Petitions for Appeals to be heard, to produce and attend the Witnesses to be sworn, and to retain the Counsel.

ARMY and NAVY Agents receive the Pay, Wages, Pensions, and frequently the Prize-Money of the Officers of the Army and Navy, their Wives, Widows, and Children, and keep Cash Accounts for them, nearly in the same Manner as Bankers for Merchants. They likewise pass the Commissions of Officers through the proper Offices. All this Business they transact in Virtue of Letters of Attorney from their Principals, and Wills. When they have Cash in Hand, Officers may draw upon their Agents, from any Part of the Globe, where they shall happen to be stationed; and for Men of approved Character and Credit Agents will frequently advance Money by Anticipation upon their Wages, Pay, &c. having full Powers to reimburse themselves from their accruing Effects.

Of Ships, Owners, Captains, and Sailors.

THE great Advantages that arise from Trade to a Nation have been fully proved by the Introductory Discourse, and, as I have therein given a Deduction of it from the earliest Times, the separate History of Navigation would be here superfluous, as this and Commerce are so blended, or more properly only distinct Parts of the same Thing, that having spoken so largely of the one, I have little Room, and less Need, to expatiate much on the other in an historical Way: However, if any Gentleman inclines to a separate Account of them, he will find his Taste fully gratified, and Expectation answered, on reading the History of Navigation, supposed to be wrote by the celebrated Mr. Locke, prefixed to Churchill's Collection of Voyages and Travels; but to omit it as inconsistent with my intended Conciseness, I shall proceed to particularize the integral Parts of maritime Affairs; and, as a Ship is a principal one in them, and, indeed, without which, no Commerce could be carried on, I shall begin with this wonderful Piece of Art.

*Franc. Roc-cus de Nav.
Nau. & Affic.
Nov. 1.*

The Name, Navis, is derived from the Effect, that is, à navigando, sailing, and the Use of it is certainly both necessary and profitable to every Commonwealth capable of employing it.

Who was the first Architect of these floating Fabricks has been hitherto conjectured, and therefore, in all Probability, will now never be known; however, rejecting the fabulous Stories of Dadalus, Janus, &c. it is natural to suppose Noah's Ark inspired the Idea, and that it served as a Pattern to be improved by the first Navigator, though, as there was no Occasion for such, till about three Centuries after the Confusion at the Tower of Babel had dispersed its Builders, so we may reasonably conjecture that Occurrence to have been the Epocha from which Navigation took its Beginning; as Providence chastised their audacious Attempt to scale Heaven, by dispersing the Offenders over the Face of all the Earth, and consequently in their Peregrinations they must have found it necessary to invent some Sort of Vessels for their Conveyance cross those great Rivers, which undoubtedly sometimes impeded their Progress, by lying in the Way of their Journey: How they managed in their maritime Affairs, when they reached the Sea, History leaves us in the Dark; but Necessity would certainly inspire them with some Means of supplying themselves with necessary Products; and it is natural to believe, they went on improving the first Invention, as they had Occasion to discover its Defects, till by successive Improvements, it was brought to the Perfection in which we now see and admire it.

The Phœnicians, who are the same the Scripture calls the Philistines or Canaanites, as is largely proved by Bechart and others, are generally allowed to have been the first and ablest Mariners we read of; yet the Commerce of those early Ages did not require Vessels of such Strength and Compactness as latter Times have, to resist the Storms and Tempests they are now exposed to, by launching cut into the main Ocean, and engaging in long and hazardous Voyages unknown, and consequently, unattempted by Infant-Navigation. For though these People were bold and daring enough to engage in several long Voyages, as to Ophir, &c. in which they must cross many spacious Gulphs and Bays, to avoid expending a vast Space of Time in coasting round them, yet it is hardly credible they ever ventured to cross that immense Body of Waters, that lie between Europe and America, as some suppose, and the Reflection on their doing what they did without the Assistance of the Compass, then undiscovered, I must confess is to me a Matter of no small Surprise; for, though a learned Author supposes them to have conducted their Navigation by the Sun's Course in the Day, and by that of the Stars in their nocturnal Sailing, and that they only ventured to Sea during Summer; yet, when one considers, that these guides must be frequently lost to them by cloudy Weather, even in that Season, not only for a little while, but often for Days together, and consequently their Knowledge of them, let it have been as great as the said Author conjectures, by this intervening Occurrence rendered unserviceable, we must allow them to have been daring Adventurers, in combating the Frowns and Ruffles of a lowering Sky, which must frequently have been too boisterous for their little Skill and slight-built Vessels to resist or evade, and to risk the imminent Dangers they exposed themselves to on that fickle Element, by their engaging in those Voyages, which might then be justly counted long and dangerous.

The Greeks, who were their Scholars in this Science, greatly improved it, and gave their Masters several signal Overtrows in their naval Encounters, as at the famous Battle of Salamis, &c. and though the Romans succeeded the Greeks in their Profession of this Art, and undoubtedly their Practice must lead them to the Discovery of its Defects, and, consequently, to that of its Improvement, yet they and several succeeding Ages still laboured in the Dark, till Providence, about the Year 1300, discovered the Loadstone's Virtue, and by this Means dissipated the Mists of Guess-Work, and rendered Navigation more clear and certain: It is to this happy Discovery we owe that of new Worlds, and the great Improvement of maritime Affairs, since brought to such Perfection.

The Fabrick of Ships has been various, as Occasions have required, and Invention could dictate, to make them answer the Intent, which Variety continues to this very Day, not only between Nations, but even in the same Country, some being built for War, some for sailing, and others with the lucrative View of stowing well, and each has a Name properly adapted, as Gallies, Frigates, &c. and the Increase of these, and Improvement of Navigation, has always so much merited the Attention of Legislators from the earliest Times, as to have occasioned many excellent Laws being made for these Purposes in different Countries. Of the British Laws, the most celebrated, which has been admired for its sound Policy throughout Europe, is the Act passed in the 12th Year of the Reign of Charles II. A. D. 1660. entitled, An Act for the encouraging and increasing of Shipping and Navigation: usually called the Navigation Act. It is of the utmost Importance for all Persons concerned in Commerce to be well acquainted with this Act, for whatever Alterations it may undergo, or whatever Infringements may be made upon it by Rebellion, or any other temporary or local Causes, the Principles of it must be as permanent as the maritime Power of Great-Britain, the Maintenance of the latter, depending upon the former, for which reason it is here given in Abstract.

The British Navigation Act.

IT is enacted, that after the 1st of December, 1660, no Goods or Commodities whatsoever shall be imported into, or exported out of, any of the English Colonies, or that should afterwards become so, in Asia, Africa, or America, but in Vessels which do truly belong to the People of England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, and navigated with a Master, and Three-fourths of English Sailors, under the Penalty of forfeiting Ship and Cargo.

2. No Person born out of the Allegiance of his Majesty, who is not naturalized or made a free Denizen, shall, after the 1st of February, 1661, act as a Merchant or Factor in any of the said Places, upon Pain of losing all his Goods and Chattles, and of these Clauses the Governors are obliged by Oath to take Cognizance and Care.

3. No Goods or Commodities whatever, of the Growth or Manufacture of Africa, Asia, and America, shall be imported into England, Ireland, Wales, Islands of Guernsey and Jersey, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in any other Ships but those belonging to the said Places, or to the Plantations, and navigated in the Manner aforesaid, under Penalty of forfeiting Ship and Cargo.

4. No Goods or Commodities of a foreign Growth or Manufacture shall be brought into England, Ireland, Wales, the Islands of Guernsey and Jersey, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in Ships appertaining to his Majesty's Subjects, but from the Places of their Manufactures and Growths.

5. That all Sorts of Ling, Stockfish, Pilchards, Cod, and Herring, or any other Kind of dried or salted Fish, usually caught by the People of England, Ireland, Wales, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, or any Fish-Oil, or Blubber, Whale-Fins, or Whale-Bones, not imported by Ships belonging to the said Places, shall pay double Aliens Duties.

6. Henceforth it shall not be lawful for any Vessel, in which any Stranger (not denized or naturalized) is an Owner, or that is not navigated by an English Master, and Three-fourths English Sailors, to load or carry any Sorts of Goods or Commodities from any Port or Creek of England, Ireland, Wales, Islands of Guernsey or Jersey, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, to another Port or Creek, or any of them, under Penalty of forfeiting Ship and Cargo.

7. That

7. That where any Ease, Abatement, or Privilege is given in the Book of Rates, to Goods or Commodities imported or exported in English built Shipping, it shall extend only to such as are navigated with a Master and Three-fourths of the Sailors English, and, where it is required that they shall be so, the true Intent and Meaning is, that they be such during the whole Voyage, unless in Case of Sickness, Death, or being taken Prisoners, to be proved by the Oath of the Master, or other chief Officer.

8. No Goods or Commodities of the Growth or Manufacture of Muscovy, or any of the Dominions of the Emperor thereof, or any Sorts of Masts, Timber, or Boards, foreign Salt, Pitch, Tar, Rosin, Hemp or Flax, Raisins, Figs, Prunes, Olive Oils, nor any Sort of Corn or Grain, Sugar, Pot-Ashes, Wines, Vinegar, or Spirits called Aqua Vita, or Brandy, shall, after the 1st of April, 1661, be imported into England, Ireland, Wales, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in any Ships but such as belong to the People thereof and navigated as before-mentioned; and that no Currants, nor any other Commodities, of the Growth or Manufacture of any Part of the Turkish Empire, shall, after the 1st of September, 1661, be imported into any of the abovesaid Places, in any but an English built Ship, and navigated as aforesaid, except only in such foreign Ships as are the Built of that Country or Place, of which the Goods are the Growth or Manufacture, or of such Port where the said Goods can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for Transportation, and whereof the Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners, at least, are of the said Country or Place, under Penalty of losing Ship and Goods.

9. And, to prevent the great Frauds daily used in colouring and concealing Aliens Goods, all Wines of the Growth of France or Germany, which, after the 20th of October, 1660, shall be imported into any of the Ports or Places aforesaid, in any other Ships than those belonging to them, and navigated with the Mariners thereof, shall be deemed Aliens Goods, and pay Customs accordingly: And all Sorts of Masts, Timber, or Boards, as also all foreign Salts, Pitch, Tar, Rosin, Hemp, Flax, Raisins, Figs, Prunes, Olive Oils, all Sorts of Corn or Grain, Sugar, Pot Ashes, Spirits, commonly called Brandy, or Aqua Vita, Wines of the Growth of Spain, the Canaries, Portugal, Madeira, or Western Islands; and all the Goods of the Growth or Manufacture of Muscovy, or Russia, which, after the 1st of April, 1661, shall be imported into any of the aforesaid Places, in any other than such Shipping, and so navigated; and all currants and Turkey Commodities, which, after the 1st of September, 1661, shall be imported into any of the aforesaid Places, in any other than English built Shipping, and navigated as aforesaid, shall be deemed Aliens Goods, and pay accordingly.

10. And, for the Prevention of all Frauds in buying of foreign Ships, it is enacted, that from the 1st of April, 1661, no foreign-built Ship whatsoever shall be deemed an English Ship, or enjoy the Privilege of one, until such Time that he or they, claiming the said Ship, shall make appear by the chief Officer of the Customs, in the Port next to the Place of his or their Abode, that he or they are not Aliens, and shall have taken an Oath (which the Officer is hereby authorised to administer) that such Ship was by him or them bought for a valuable Consideration, expressing the Sum, as also the Time, Place, and Persons from whom it was bought, and who are his Part Owners, if he has any; all which Part Owners shall be liable to take the said Oath before the chief Officer of the Custom-house of the Port next to the Place of their Abode; and that no Foreigner, directly or indirectly, hath any Share or Interest therein; and upon such Oath, he or they shall receive a Certificate under the Hand and Seal of the said chief Officer, that the said Ship may in future be deemed as a Ship belonging to that Port, and enjoy the Privilege of such a Ship, and the Officers shall keep a Register of all such Certificates as they shall give, and return a Duplicate thereof to the chief Officers of the Customs at London, for such as shall be granted in England, Wales, and Berwick, and to the chief Officers of the Customs at Dublin, for such as shall be given in Ireland, together with the Names of the Persons from whom such Ship was bought, and the Sum of Money which was paid for her, as also the Names of all such who are Part Owners of her, if any such be.

11. It is likewise enacted, that if any Officer of the Customs, shall, after the said 1st of April, allow the Privilege of an English built Ship to any foreign built one, until such Certificate be produced, or Oath taken, and until Examination be made whether the Master and Three-fourths of the Sailors be English, or shall allow the Privileges given by this Act to any foreign built Ship bringing in the Commodities of the Growth of the Country where it was built, until Examination and Proof, whether it be a Ship of the Built of that Country, and that the Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners are of that Country; or if any Governors of any of the Plantations shall suffer any foreign built Ship to load or unload any Commodities or Goods within the Precincts of their Government, until such Certificates shall be produced to them, or those appointed by them, and Examination is made whether the Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners be English, such Officer of the Customs, or such Governors shall be displaced for their Offence.

12. It is however provided, that this Act, nor any thing herein contained, extend not, or be meant to restrain and prohibit the Importation of any of the Commodities of the Streights or Lewant Seas, loaden in English built Shipping, and whereof the Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners be English, from the usual Ports or Places for lading of them heretofore, within the said Streights or Lewant Seas, though the said Commodities be not of the Growth of the said Places.

13. Provided also, that this Act, or any Thing therein contained, extend not to restrain the importing of any East-India Commodities, loaden in English built Shipping, and whereof the Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners are English, from the usual Places for lading of them in any Part of those Seas to the Southward and Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, although the said Ports be not the very Places of their Growth.

14. And it is likewise provided, that it shall be lawful for any of the People of England, Ireland, Wales, Islands of Guernsey or Jersey, or Berwick upon Tweed, in their Ships, navigated with a Master and Three-fourths English Sailors, to bring in from any of the Ports of Spain, Portugal, the Azores, Madeira, or the Canary Islands, all Sorts of Goods or Commodities of the Growth or Manufacture of either of them.

15. Provided always, that this Act extend not to Bullion, nor yet to any Goods taken by Way of Reprisal by any English Ship, navigated as before-mentioned, and with his Majesty's Commission.

16. Nothing in this Act shall extend to lay Aliens Duties upon any Corn of the Growth of Scotland, or any Salt made there, or any Fish caught and cured by the People of that Kingdom, and imported directly from thence in Scotch built Vessels, and sailed with a Master and Three-fourths of the Mariners of his Majesty's Subjects, nor to any Seal Oil of Russia, imported from thence into England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, in Shipping thereunto belonging, and navigated as aforesaid.

17. And it is hereby enacted, that every Vessel belonging to any Subject of the French King, which after the 20th of October, 1660, shall come into any Port, Creek, &c. of England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, and shall there lade or unlade any Goods or Commodities, or take in, or set on Shore, any Passengers, shall pay to the Collector of his Majesty's Customs in such Port, &c. for every Ton of the Ship's Burthen, to be computed by the Officer thereunto appointed, the Sum of five Shillings, of current Money of England; and that no such Ship be suffered to depart out of such Port, &c. until the said Duty be fully paid; and that this Duty shall continue to be collected for such Time, as a certain Duty, fifty Sols per Ton, lately imposed by the French King, or any Part thereof, shall continue to be collected upon the Shipping of England lading in France, and three Months after, and no longer.

18. And it is farther enacted, that after the 1st of April, 1661, no Sugars, Tobacco, Cotton, Wool, Indigo, Ginger, Fustick, or other dying Wood, of the Growth or Manufacture of any English Plantations in America, Asia, or Africa,

Africa, shall be carried from any of the said English Plantations to any Place whatsoever, other than to such other English Plantations as do belong to his Majesty or to the Kingdom of England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, there to be laid on Shore, under the Penalty of forfeiting Ship and Goods.

19. And for every Ship, which after the 25th of December, 1660, shall set out from England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed, for any English Plantation in America, Asia, or Africa, sufficient Bond shall be given, with one Surety to the chief Officers of the Custom-house of such Port from whence the said Ship shall sail, to the Value of one Thousand Pounds, if the said Ship be of less Burthen than one Hundred Tons, and of two Thousand Pounds, if the Ship shall be of greater Burthen; that in Case the said Ship shall load any of the said Commodities at any of the said English Plantations, that the same Commodities shall be brought by the said Ship to some Port of England, Ireland, Wales, or to the Port of Berwick upon Tweed, and shall there put on shore the same, the Danger of the Seas only excepted: And for all Ships coming from any other Port or Place to any of the aforesaid Plantations, which by this Act are permitted to trade there, that the Governor of such English Plantations shall, before the said Ship be permitted to load any of the said Commodities, take Bond in the Manner and to the Value aforesaid, for each respective Ship, that such Ship shall carry all the aforesaid Goods that shall be laden on board to some other of his Majesty's English Plantations, or to England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick upon Tweed: and that every Ship which shall load any of the aforesaid Goods, until such Bond be given to the Governor, or Certificate produced from the Officers of any Custom-house in England, &c. that such Bonds have been there duly given, shall be forfeited; and the said Governors shall twice in every Year, after the 1st of January, 1660, return true Copies of all such Bonds to the chief Officer of the Customs in London.

In treating of Maritime Affairs, the Owners of Ships are the first who naturally challenge our Regard, and they become such either by building or purchasing their Vessels; and this, either in Partnership or alone; and if the former, and the Property is distributed among several, the major Part of them may let the Ship out to Freight against the Consent, though not without the Privy of the Minor.

*Blacket against A. J. B. Raymond 235.
Trinity Term
9 Will. III.*

Thirty seven Part Owners of a Ship would send her a Voyage, but two or three of the other Part-Owners would not consent. Upon which the Admiralty took Stipulation in Nature of a Recognizance of the Thirty seven for Security for the safe bringing back of the Ship. The Ship being lost, the two or three Part-Owners, who opposed the Voyage, libelled upon this Stipulation against the Thirty seven, upon which they moved for a Prohibition, but it was denied; for per curiam, though by the Law of England two or three Part-Owners may hinder the others from sending the Ship a Voyage without their Consent, yet the Law of the Admiralty is otherwise; for there, for the Encouragement of Navigation, the Court of Admiralty will permit the Ship to make the Voyage, upon Security given to bring her back safe; for it is reasonable that the others should have some Security for their Ship. Then, if the Ship be lost, it is at the Peril of the Adventurers, and they shall be suable upon their Stipulation by the others in the Admiralty; for now it is not doubted but the Admiralty may take Stipulation.

An Owner letting his Ship to another for a Voyage, for a certain Sum, and agreeing that the Person hiring the Vessel shall have the benefit of the Freight of Goods, is not thereby discharged from Responsibility for the Loss of Goods, as was adjudged in the Case of Parish against Crawford. Crawford the sole Owner had let his Ship to Fletcher; Parish shipped a Number of Moidores and had Bills of lading from Fletcher, Part of the Money was not delivered according to the Consignment. And Judgement was given against Crawford. Hill. Term 19 Geo. II. Strange's Reports, 1251.

In case a Ship be taken away from the Owners, or they be otherwise disposed, it is provided, both by the Common and Maritime Laws of this Realm, that they maintain an Action of Trover and Conversion for an Eighth, Sixteenth, or any other Part or Share of the same; and in Action on the Case, the Plaintiff declared, that he was Owner of the Sixteenth Part of a Ship, and the Defendant Owner of another Sixteenth Part of the same Ship, and that the Defendant fraudulently and deceitfully carried the said Ship ad Loca transmarina (into a foreign Part) and disposed of her to his own Use, by which the Plaintiff lost his sixteenth Part to his Damage: On not guilty pleaded, and Verdict for the Plaintiff, it was moved in Arrest of Judgment, that the Action did not lie; for, though it be found deceptive, yet this did not help it, if the Action did not lie on the Subject Matter; and here they are Tenants in common of the Ship, and by Littleton, between Tenants in common there is not any Remedy, and there cannot be any Fraud between them, because the Law supposes a Trust and Confidence betwixt them, and upon these Reasons Judgment was given quod Querens nil capit per Billam.

Owners are not bound to continue their Pacton or Partnership longer than they please, for though by the Law Marine it was required, that a new built Ship should make one Voyage upon the common Risk, before the Owners should be allowed to separate, yet by the Law of England any Owner may sell or transfer his Right at what Time he pleases.

But, if any one obstinately refuses his Consent to a Voyage, the Law will force him either to hold or sell his Share: But, if he will set no Price, the rest may fit the Ship out at their own Cost and Charges, and whatsoever Freight she earns shall be solely theirs, and no Part thereof be given to the dissenting Owner, but if the Ship should miscarry, or be cast away, the rest must make him Satisfaction for the Part he hold.

But, on the contrary, if the greatest Part of the Owners refuse to fit out the Vessel, they shall not be compelled, on Account of the Majority, but in this Case, the Ship shall be valued and sold, and the like where Part of the Owners become deficient and unable to fit her out.

Owners of Ships are liable for the Actions of the Masters they employ, therefore it behoves them carefully to consult as well the Honesty as Ability of him they intend to commit the Care of their Interests to, as the Charge both of the Vessel and its Lading rests on him; and the Owners are obliged, both by the common Laws of England and the Law-Marine, to make Satisfaction for all Damages that shall accrue through the Master's Neglect, and were formerly obliged to make good the Contents of a Bill of Lading signed by the Master, provided he absconded, though the said Bill of Lading might be iniquitously obtained; as I remember to have occurred with a Merchant, who had a Ship of his own from Lisbon, and was arrested, I think, in fifteen Actions for Money his Master had signed Bills of Lading for, and had run away with, and which he might have continued coining, and firmed new Bills every Day to the utter Ruin of his Owner, though never so wealthy, had not the Act 7 Geo. II. Cap. 15. Sect. 1. prevented such fraudulent Proceedings, by limiting the Owners Loits to Ship and Freight, so that he now knows the Extent of what Damage a roguish Master can do him, which was before unascertained and endless.

On the other Hand, if the Master commits Offences, either negligently or wilfully, he shall be responsible to his Owners for the Reparation of Damages, and they are not bound to sue jointly, but may do it separately, both according to the common and marine Law; as also in Case the Ship hath by Freight got something clear to divide, and the Master hath paid some of the Owners their Parts, the Rest may bring their Action for their Shares without joining with the others. But the Owners must be responsible to the Freighters, as in the following Case.

ble 444.

The Defendant and seven other Persons were Proprietors of a Ship, which usually carried Goods on Freight between Topsham and London, and the Plaintiff loaded Goods upon her at the latter, to be carried to the former Port; but the Defendant, not careful of his Duty, had so carelessly stowed the said Goods, that though the Ship arrived safe at Topsham, yet the Goods were all spoiled. And upon Non Culp. pleaded, the Jury found a special Verdict, viz. that the Defendant, and seven other Persons were Proprietors and Part Owners of the Ship; that the Ship had a Master Locat' in her by the Part-Owners, who had Sixty Pounds Pounds Wages for every Voyage between Topsham and London, that the Goods were delivered to the Master, none of the Part Owners being present, and that there was not any Contract made with them, or any of them by the Plaintiff; that the Ship arrived safe at Topsham, but the Goods were spoiled. Et si pro Qyer, pro Qyer; si non, pro Def.

And two Points were made:

1st. If the Proprietors are chargeable, no Contract being made with them, and there being a Master that is chargeable in Respect of his Wages, according to the Case of Morse and Shue; yet per Holt, C. J. clearly, that though the Master be chargeable in Respect of his Wages, so are the Proprietors in Respect of their Freight, that they receive for the Carriage of their Goods at the Election of the Plaintiff.

2ndly. If the Action lay against the Defendant alone, it appearing that there are other Part-Owners, not made Defendants; and held that the Action did not lie against him sole, but ought to have been against all the Part-Owners; for all the Part-Owners are chargeable in Respect of the Profit they make by the Carriage of the Goods, and that in Point of Contract, upon their Undertaking, be it implied or express, and are not chargeable as Trespassers, for then one might be chargeable alone, but in Point of Contract, upon their Receipt of the Goods to be carried for Hire. If a Ship be broken up, or taken in Pieces with an intent to convert the same to other Uses, and afterwards on change of Mind she be rebuilt with the same Materials, she is now another, and not the same ship, especially if the Keel be ript up, or changed, and the whole Ship be all once taken asunder and rebuilt, there determines the Partnership, quoad the Ship; but if a Ship be ripped up in Parts, and taken asunder in Parts, and repaired in Parts, yet she remains still the same Vessel, and not another; nay, though she hath been so often repaired that there remains not one Stick of the original Fabrick.

ditto, S. 7.

If a Man repairs his Ship with Plank or other Materials not his own, but appertaining to another, yet the Property is not hereby altered, but the Ship maintains and keeps her first Owners. Though if a Man take Plank and Materials prepared for the Use of Shipping, and belonging to another, the Property of the Vessel follows the Owner of the Materials, and not the Builder; but, if a Man cut down the Trees of another, or takes Timber or Planks prepared for the erecting or repairing of a Dwelling-House, nay though some of them were for Shipping, and builds a Ship, the Property follows not the Owners but the Builders.

If a Ship is under repair in a Dock belonging to the Shipwright who is ordered by the Owner to repair her, and a Fire happens, not through the Negligence of the Shipwright, but by Accident, and destroys the Ship before the Repairs are completed; the Shipwright shall be paid his Charges for the Repairs. As was adjudged by the Court of King's Bench in the Case of Minetons against Athaws. 3. Burrow's Report, 1592. Michaelmas Term, 5 Geo. III.

The Repairer of a Ship has his Election to sue the Master who employs him, or the Owners, but if he undertakes it on a special Promise from either, the other is discharged.

The Words which were usually made use of formerly in the Sale of Ships, viz. the Tackle, Furniture, Apparel, and all other Instruments thereunto belonging, did not convey the Ship's Boat, which, if unexpressed in the Sale, remained still in the Owners, as she does, if a Ship is forfeited for committing Piracy.

Linter's Case.
Leon. 45, 47.

Though Ballast is generally used in Shipping, where a Vessel goes out empty, or filled with light Goods, yet it is not esteemed any Part of her Furniture; and so it was adjudged in Debt on Bond; of which the Condition was, that whereas the Plaintiff had bought of the Defendant a Ship, if the Plaintiff shall enjoy the said Ship with all the Furniture belonging to the same, without being disturbed for the Ship, or any Furniture appertaining to it, that then, &c. and the Case was, after the Sale of the Ship, a Stranger sued the Plaintiff for certain Monies

Monies due for Ballast bought by the Defendant for the same Ship, in which Suit he obtained Sentence, upon which the Ship was seized. The Question was whether Ballast be Furniture for a Ship or not, and it was resolved in the Negative; for although it may sometimes be as necessary as Sails, yet it is not always so, as Ships frequently sail without it, more especially when a heavy Loading answers the Purpose by supplying its Place.

If a Ship commits a Piracy, and is thereby become forfeited, but before Seizure she be bona Fide sold, the Property shall not be questioned, nor the Owners divested of the same. Engley's Case Kolls' Abridg. fol. 530.

And if a Mortgagee of Ships, by Deed, entrasts the Mortgager with the original Bill of Sale; and the Mortgager indorses thereon subsequent Mortgages, or Bills of Sale of several Parts of the Ship, the first Mortgagee acquiesces, he shall be postponed. 1 Terr. Will. 397. 394.

Upon an Information tam quam, grounded upon the Act of Navigation for importing Goods in a foreign Vessel contrary to that Act, the Question was, whether or not, if a foreign Ship naturalized by the New Act, being a Prize taken in the late War with Holland, be afterwards sold to a Foreigner, who sells her again to an Englishman, whether or no the Oath must be taken again, according to the Act; per Cur. it need not, because the Ship was once lawfully naturalized. Hardres, 511. Martin v. Verdne. Molloy de Jure Mar. Page 227, 228. Sect. 15.

An Agent for the East India Company, in the East Indies, bought a Ship and Cargo of the Commander, who had no Right or Power to sell either, and the Owner on a Suit here had the Value decreed him for Ship and Cargo, the Value being found by a Jury, with Indian Interest. viz. 12 per Cent. Ditto, Page 226. Per Will. 395.

If a Man gets Possession of a Ship, without a just Title to the same, he shall, by the Law Marine, answer for such Profit, as the Ship, in all Probability, might have earned: And the Reason of that is, because the only End of Shipping is the Employment thereof; but if a Warrant be directed out of the Admiralty to the Marshal to arrest such a Ship, and Salvo Custodire (preserve her in Safety) who by Force of the same enters into the Ship; though the Warrant does not mention that the Officer should carry away her Sails, yet he may justify the taking of them, for that he cannot Salvo Custodire her, unless he takes away the Sails. Ditto, page ditto. Dig. Lib. 6. tit. 1. 62. & Lib. 7. tit. 1. 12 S. 1. Creamer v. Jockley Latch. fol. 880.

In Case a Ship is freighted out, and in Consequence of the Agreement receives her Lading aboard, if an Embargo happens afterwards, and her Cargo is taken as forfeited, yet the Owners shall notwithstanding receive the Freight, as the Fault was not in them, but in him whose Property the Goods were. Dig. lib. 19. tit. 2. 61.

In the Main Sea, or in an Arm of it, a Ship may not become a Deodand, though any Body be drowned out of it, or otherwise come by their Death aboard, because on such Waters Ships are naturally exposed to the Dangers of tempestuous Weather; but a Ship or Vessel in fresh Water may become a Deodand, as happened with one lying at Rotherhithe, near the Shore, to be careened, where a Shipwright being at work under her at Low-Water, as she leaned aside, she unexpectedly turned over, and unfortunately killed him. Upon a Trial at Bar, the Question was, whether she belonged to the Lord of the Manor contiguous to the Place where the Man was slain, or to the Almoner, as a Matter not granted out of the Crown; and it was resolved that the Ship was a Deodand, and the Jury found a Verdict for the Lord of the Manor. *3. If foreign Brandy or Spirits shall be imported in any Ship under fifteen Tons, except for the Use of the Seamen, not exceeding one Gallon each, such Brandy, &c. shall be forfeited. 2 Keel. 604. Home a 1762. 12 Will. III. Cap. 11. S. 1. 2 Edw. VI. Cap. 37. Sect. 5.

If any Master, Owner, Purser, or Boatwain of any Ship willingly permit any Brass, Copper, Laten, Bell-Metal, Pan-Metal, Gun-Metal, or Shrof-Metal, whether it be clear or mixed, Tin and Lead excepted, to be shipped contrary to this Act, or perceiving such Metal to be shipped, do not disclose the same in three Days after Knowledge had to the Customer or Comptroller of the Port,

- 13 and 14
Car. II. Cap. 11. Sect. 15. No Ship or Goods shall be seized as forfeited for unlawful Importation or Exportation, or for Non-Payment of Customs, but by the Persons appointed to manage the Customs, or Officers of Custom, or Persons deputed by Warrant from the Lord-Treasurer, or Under-Treasurer, or by Commission from his Majesty under the Great or Privy-Seal, and if any Seizure shall be made by any other Person for the Causes aforesaid, such Seizure shall be void.
- Ditto, Sect.
29. In Case the Seizure or Information shall be made upon the Act of Navigation, the Defendants shall, on their Request, have a Commission out of Chancery to examine Witnesses beyond Sea, and have a competent Time allowed for the Return thereof before Trial; and the Examination of Witnesses so returned shall be Evidence at the Trial.
- Ditto, Sect.
35. Every Person who shall export Goods from any Port of this Kingdom, capable of a Ship of two Hundred Tons, upon an ordinary full Sea, to any Part of the Mediterranean beyond the Port of Malaga, or import Goods from the Places aforesaid, in any Ship that hath not two Decks, and do carry less than sixteen Pieces of Ordnance mounted, with two Men for each Gun, and other Ammunition proportionable, shall pay for all Merchandizes so exported or imported One per Cent. above the Tonnage and Poundage.
- Ditto, Sect.
36. It shall be lawful to export Fish into any of the Ports of the Mediterranean in any English Ship, provided one Moiety of her Lading be Fish, and to import Merchandize in the same Ship for that Voyage, without paying any other Rates than accustomed.
- 8 Ann. Cap.
13. Sect. 19. The Master of every Ship, carrying Certificate Goods to Ireland, shall take from the Collector in Great-Britain a Duplicate of his Contents, under the Hand and Seal of the Collector and Comptroller, which they are required to deliver without Fee, and such Master shall deliver such Duplicate to the Officers of the Customs in Ireland before he be permitted to land such Goods.

In Case any foreign Goods shall, by any Collier, Fisher-Boat, or other Coasting Vessel, be taken in at Sea, or out of any Vessel, to be landed, or put into any other Ship, &c. within the Limits of any Port, without Payment of the Duties, such Goods shall be forfeited, and the Master of such Collier, &c. shall forfeit treble the Value, unless in Case of Necessity, of which such Master shall give Notice, and make Proof before the chief Officers of the Customs of the first Port where he shall arrive; the Master or other Person taking Charge of the Ship out of which such Goods shall be taken in at Sea, shall forfeit treble the Value.

Where any Vessel of fifty Tons, or under, laden with customable, or prohibited Goods, shall be found hovering on the Coasts, within the Limits of any Port, and not proceeding on her Voyage, Wind and Weather permitting, any Officer of the Customs may go on board, and take an Account of the Lading, and demand Security of the Master, &c. by his own Bond, to his Majesty, &c. in treble the Value of the foreign Goods on board, with Condition, that such Vessel (as soon as Wind and Weather, and the State of such Vessel doth permit) shall proceed on her Voyage, and shall land such Goods in some foreign Port. And if such Master, &c. shall refuse to enter into such Bond, or shall not proceed on such Voyage, as soon as Wind, Weather, and the State of such Ship, will permit, unless suffered to make longer Stay by the Collector, or other chief Officer, not exceeding twenty Days, all the foreign Goods on board such Vessel may, by any Officer of the Customs by Direction of the Collector, or other principal Officer, be taken out of the Ship and secured; and, if such Goods are customable, the Duties shall be paid; and Wool, or any prohibited Goods, found on board, are declared subject to Forfeiture *

All Goods found concealed on board any Ship after the Master shall have made his Report at the Custom-house, and not mentioned in the said Report, shall be forfeited, and may be seized and prosecuted by any Officer of the Customs, and the Master of such Ship, in Case he was privy to such Concealment, shall forfeit treble the Value of the Goods.

It shall be lawful for the Officers of Excise to go on board any Vessel within the Limits of any Port, and to continue on board, and rummage in like Manner as the Officers of the Customs, for Arrack, Rum, Brandy, or other exciseable Liquors; and for Coffee, Tea, Cocoa-Nuts, Chocolate, and Cocoa-Paste; and to seize for his Majesty's Use all such of the said Commodities there found, as by Law shall be forfeited, together with the Package; and to seize such of the said Commodities, as before due Entry, and without paying or securing the Duties on the Importation, shall be found unshipping or unshipped.

For Encouragement of the North-Sea, Island, and Westmony Fisheries, no fresh Herring, fresh Cod, or Haddock, Coal-Fish, or Gull-Fish, shall be imported but in English built Ships, and having Certificate as in the Act, and whereof the Master and three-fourths of the Mariners are English, and which have been caught in such Ships, and not bought of Strangers, under Pain of Forfeiture of all such Fish, and the Ship in which it was imported.

No British Ship, trading to any Part of the Mediterranean Sea beyond Malaga, shall be entitled to the Exemption granted in the Act 13 and 14 Car. II. Cap. 11. Sect. 36. herein before recited, for that one Moiety of the Loading of such Ship shall consist of Fish, unless such Moiety consist of Fish taken and cured by his Majesty's Subjects.

It shall be lawful for Natives of England or Ireland to import into England directly from Ireland any Sorts of Hemp or Flax, and all the Productions thereof, as Thread, Yarn, and any Manufacture thereof, of the Growth and Manufacture of Ireland, free from all Duties, the Master of the Vessel importing the same bringing a Certificate from the chief Officer of the Port in Ireland, expressing the Marks, Number, Tale, or Weight, of the Species in each Bale, mentioned in the Bills of Lading, with the Names and Places of Abode of the Exporters from Ireland, and of such Persons that shall have sworn the Goods to be of the Growth and Manufacture of that Kingdom, and where, and to whom in England consigned; and the Master of the Ship, on Arrival in England, making Oath that the said Bales and Goods are the Bales and Goods taken on board by Virtue of the said Certificates.

* N. B. There is the same Act made for any Ship hovering on the Coast of Ireland, &c. by 6 George I. Cap. 1. Sect. 62.

3 Geo. I. c. 21. All Linen made in Ireland, and imported into Great-Britain, may be again exported to any British Plantation in America, without Payment of any Duty whatsoever.

4 Geo. III. Cap. 26. Sect. 1. To encourage the Importation of rough and undressed Hemp or Flax from the British Colonies in America; for Hemp, Water rotted, bright and clean, or rough undressed Flax, so imported, the following Bounties are to be given by the Collector of the Customs at the Port of Importation: between June 24, 1764, and June 24, 1771, 8*l. per Ton*; between June 24, 1771, and June 24, 1778, 6*l. per Ton*; and between June 24, 1778, and June 24, 1785, 4*l. per Ton*.

19 Geo. III. c. 37. Grants the following Bounties on Hemp, the Growth of Ireland, imported from thence into Great-Britain. From June 24, 1779, to ditto, 1786, 8*l. per Ton*. From June 24, 1786, to ditto, 1793, 6*l. per Ton*. From June 24, 1793, to ditto 1800, 4*l. per Ton*.

Ditto, Sect. 11. Any Master or Owner of a Vessel, fraudulently importing foreign Hemp or Flax to obtain these Bounties, incurs the Forfeiture of 100*l.* and the Vessel, with all her Furniture, shall also be forfeited.

15 Geo. III. c. 45. Grant an additional Bounty of 5*s. per* Hogshead upon Flax Seed imported into Ireland, for which a Bounty is allowed in that Kingdom, by Acts made there in the Third and Sixteenth of his present Majesty. Rape Seed, and Rape Cakes, may be imported from Ireland into Great-Britain, Duty free.

15 Geo. III. c. 34. Cotton Yarn, the Manufacture of Ireland, may be imported into Great-Britain, Duty free.

18 Geo. III. c. 56. Tea exported to Ireland, as Merchandise, to draw back the whole Customs, subject to the Regulations prescribed by 12 Geo. III. c. 60, and 16 Geo. III. c. 51.

17 Geo. III. c. 27. Repeals the Act of 19 of Henry VII. prohibiting the Exportation of Gold and Silver Coin from Great-Britain to Ireland, and allows the said Exportation.

20 Geo. III. c. 16. Sect. 1. Sect. 2. Repeals the Act of 9 Anne, prohibiting the Importation of foreign Hops into Ireland, and allows them to be imported there.

Also, the Act 6 Geo. I. c. 11, which enacts that no Draw-back shall be allowed on the Exportation of Hops from Great-Britain to Ireland, and allows the Draw-backs to be paid for Hops, whether of foreign or British Growth.

3. Repeals so much of an Act of 26 Geo. II. as confines the Levant Trade to Subjects of Great-Britain only, admitted Members of the Turkey Company; and enacts, that the Subjects of Ireland, on Request, shall be admitted Members of the said Turkey Company, and being so admitted, may export directly from Ireland to the Levant Seas, or import from thence into Ireland, such Commodities as are allowed to be imported into Great-Britain from the said Seas; or to be exported to the same, by any Person free of the Turkey Company.

23 Geo. III. c. 45. Allows any Persons, free of the Turkey Company, to import into Great-Britain or Ireland, any Goods or Commodities which have hitherto been usually imported from Turkey or Egypt, or from any Place within the Dominions of the Grand Seigneur, not only in Ships built in, and belonging to, Great-Britain or Ireland, but in any Ship or Vessel belonging to any Kingdom or State in Amity with his Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors, navigated by foreign Seamen, from any Port or Place whatsoever, upon Payment of the same Duties if imported into Great-Britain, as the like Goods would be subject to if imported in British Ships directly from the Place of their Growth, Production, or Manufacture; the Goods so imported in foreign-built Ships to be liable to the Aliens Duties, if such Goods were subject thereto before the passing of this Act.

No Entry to be allowed to be made of any such Goods at the Custom-house till Certificate is produced by the Importer, that he is free of the Turkey Company.

After January 1, 1780, Goods usually imported from the Mediterranean may be imported from any Port or Place whatever, by any Persons whatsoever, into Great-Britain or Ireland, in British built Ships, or in Ships belonging to any Kingdom or State in Amity with his Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors, upon Payment of the same Duties, if imported into Great Britain, as they would have been liable to if imported directly from the Places of their Growth, &c. except Drugs, which, if not imported by Persons free of the Turkey Company, shall be liable to the same Duties as if not imported from the Place of their Growth. The Goods so imported from the Mediterranean in foreign Ships to be liable to Aliens Duties, if they were so before, notwithstanding this Act.

Payment

Cotton or Cotton Wool imported into Great-Britain after the 1st of Jan. 1780, in foreign Ships, to be subject to a Duty of One Penny Farthing on every Pound Weight, and also to the additional Duty of Five per Cent. on the Amount of the said Duty, as granted by the Act of 19 Geo. III. And no Draw-back is to be allowed on the Re-exportation of the said Cotton or Cotton Wool. The Produce of the said Duty of one Penny Farthing per Pound Weight is to be paid from Time to Time into the Receipt of the Exchequer, and is to be kept separate and apart as a Fund for the Encouragement of the Growth of Cotton in his Majesty's Leeward Islands, and for encouraging the Importation thereof into Great-Britain, in such Way and Manner as Parliament shall hereafter direct.

No Commodity of the Product or Manufacture of the East-Indies shall be <sup>7 Geo. I. Cap. 11. Sect. 4<sup>o</sup>.</sup> imported into Ireland, the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or to any of the Plantations in Africa or America, belonging to the Crown of Great-Britain, but such only as shall be shipped in Great-Britain in Ships navigated according to Law, on Penalty of forfeiting all such Goods, or the Value thereof, together with the Ship, &c.

It shall be lawful for any Natives of England or Ireland to ship, in any Port <sup>3 Ann. Cap. 8. S. 11.</sup> of Ireland, in English built Shipping, whereof the Master and three-fourths of the Mariners be English or Irish, any white or brown Linen-Cloth, of the Manufacture of Ireland, and the same to transport into any of the Plantations, the Act 15 Car. II. Cap. 7. notwithstanding.

Provided, that no Ship coming to the Plantations from Ireland shall break Bulk, <sup>Ditto S. 2.</sup> until the Master shall have made known to the Governor, or to such Officer as shall be by him appointed, the Arrival of the said Ship, with her Name, and the Name of the Master, and shall have delivered a true Inventory or Invoice of the Lading, together with the Certificate from the chief Officer of the Port in Ireland where such Ship shall be laden, expressing the Particulars of such Lading, with the Names and Abodes of the Exporters, and of two Persons, who shall have made Oath before such chief Officer, that the said Goods and Linen are Bona Fide of the Manufacture of Ireland; and until the Master shall have made Oath, before such Governor or Officer, that the said Goods are the same that he took on board by Virtue of such Certificate, nor until such Ship shall have been searched by an Officer; and, in Case the Commander of such Ship shall break Bulk before such Notice given and Certificate produced, and such Oath made, or before such Search, or if any Goods of Woollen Manufacture, not laden in Ireland, necessary Apparel of the Commander and Mariners excepted, or any Linen Goods not laden in Ireland, nor of the Manufacture of Ireland, shall be found, such Ship shall be forfeited, together with all Goods imported, or found in such Ship.

Makes it lawful to export, under certain Regulations, directly from Ireland <sup>18 Geo. III. S. 53.</sup> to British America, the West Indies, or any of the British Settlements on the Coast of Africa, any Goods, the produce or Manufacture of Ireland, except Wool and Woollen Manufactures, and Cotton Manufactures; Hats, Glafs, Hops, Gunpowder, and Coals.

And all Goods of the Growth, Product, or Manufacture of Great-Britain, imported from thence into Ireland, except Woollen Manufactures and Glafs. Also all foreign Certificate Goods, legally exported from Great-Britain to Ireland may be re-exported directly from Ireland to the said Plantations and Settlements; but not to extend to foreign Linens, painted, &c. in Ireland; nor to Bar-Iron, Iron slit or rolled, plated or tinned, nor any manufactured Iron Wares, till a Duty is imposed thereon in Ireland. Nor to any such Articles if a Bounty or Premium is allowed thereon.

Allows the Exportation of Woollen Manufactures from Ireland into any foreign <sup>20 Geo. III.</sup> Part, and of Glafs, and repeals all former Acts prohibiting the same.

c. 10.

Any Goods which may be legally imported from British America, the West-Indies, or any of the British Settlements on the Coast of Africa, into Great-Britain, may, in like Manner, be imported directly from the said Settlements to Ireland.

And any Goods which may be legally exported from Great-Britain to British America, or the said Settlements, may be exported directly from Ireland to the same Places.

On Condition that the Irish Parliament impose on the Goods to be so exported or imported, Duties, and allow Draw-backs, equal to those imposed and allowed on the Exportation or Importation of the said Goods in Great-Britain.

c. 16.

Gum Senega, or Gum Arabic: thirty Tons may be exported annually from Great-Britain to Ireland Duty-free, by Licence from the Treasury; to be used in the Linen Manufactures of that Kingdom.

c. 15.

Clothing and Accoutrements, the Produce of Great-Britain or Ireland, for the Use of his Majesty's Forces abroad, paid in Part out of the Irish Revenue, may be exported from Ireland.

Cap. 7. S. 6.

No Commodity, of the Production of Europe, shall be imported into any Plantation or Place, which shall belong to his Majesty in Asia, Africa, or America, but what shall be shipped in England, Wales, or Berwick, and in English built Shipping, and whereof the Master and three-fourths of the Mariners are English, and which shall be carried directly thence to the said Plantations, under the Penalty of the Loss of all such Commodities imported from any other Place; and, if by Water, of the Ship also, with her Tackle.

Ditto S. 7.

Provided, that it shall be lawful to lade in Ships navigated as in the foregoing Clause, in any Part of Europe, Salt, for the Fisheries of New-England and Newfoundland, and to ship in the Madeiras, Wines of the Growth thereof, and to ship in the Western Islands or Azores, Wines of the Growth of the said Islands, and to take in Servants or horses in Ireland, and to ship in Ireland Victuals of the Production of Ireland, and the same to transport into any of the said Plantations.

Ditto S. 8.

Every Person importing by Land any Goods into the said Plantations, shall deliver to the Governor, or to such Person as shall be by him appointed within twenty-four hours after such Importation, his Name, and a Particular of all such Goods: And no Ship coming to any such Plantation shall lade or unlade any Goods, until the Master shall first have made known to the Governor, or such other Officer as shall be by him appointed, the Arrival of the Ship, with her Name, and the Name of her Commander, and have shewn to him that she is an English built Ship, or made proof by producing such Certificate, that she is a Ship belonging to England, Wales, or Berwick, and navigated with an English Master, and three-fourth Parts of the Mariners English, and have delivered to such Governor, or other Officer, an Inventory of her Lading, with the Places, in which the Goods were laden, under the Pain of Loss of the Ship with her Tackle, and of all such Goods of the Production of Europe, as were not laden in England, Wales, or Berwick.

Car. II. Cap.
26. S. 11.

The Word Ireland shall be left out of all Bonds taken from any Ship, which shall set Sail from England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick for any English Plantation in America, Asia, or Africa; and, in Case the Ship shall load any of the said Commodities at the said English Plantations, the said Commodities shall be by the said Ship brought to some Port of England, Wales, or Berwick, and shall there unload the same, Danger of the Seas excepted; and in like Manner for all Ships coming from any other Port to the said Plantations, the Governor of such Plantations shall, before the Ships be permitted to load any of the said Commodities, take Bond in the Manner directed in the Act, 12 Car. II. Cap. 18. for the encouraging of Navigation, that such Ship shall carry all the said Goods to some other of his Majesty's English Plantations, or to England, Wales, or Berwick; and every such Ship which shall load any of the said Commodities, until such Bond given, or Certificate produced, from the Officers of some Custom-house of England, Wales, or Berwick, that such Bond hath been there given, or which, contrary to the Tenor of such Bond, shall carry the said Goods to any Place other than to other English Plantations, or to England, Wales, or Berwick, and there lay lay the same on shore, every such Ship shall be forfeited, with her tackle and Lading.

If any Ship, which by Law may trade in any of his Majesty's Plantations, shall come to any of them to ship any of the said Commodities, and Bond shall not be first given with Surety, to bring the same to England, Wales, or Berwick, and there to unload the same, the Danger of the Seas excepted, there shall be paid to his Majesty, for so much of the said Commodities as shall be put on board such Ship, these Duties, viz. for Sugar white, the hundred Weight, 5*s.* brown Sugar and Muscovadoes 1*s.* 6*d.* for Tobacco, the Pound, 1*d.* Cotton Wool one Half-penny; Indigo, 2*d.* Ginger, the hundred Weight, 1*s.* for Logwood, 5*l.* for Fustick, and all other Dying Woods, 6*d.* and for every Pound of Cocoa Nuts, 1*d.* to be collected as shall be appointed in the Plantations before the Landing thereof, and under such Penalties as for defrauding his Majesty of his Customs in England.

In Case any Person liable to pay the Duties before-mentioned shall not have Monies to pay the same, the Officers shall accept such a Proportion of the Commodities as shall amount to the Value.

No Goods shall be imported into, or exported out of any Plantation, belonging to his Majesty, in Asia, Africa or America, or shall be carried from any one Port in the Plantations to any other Port in the same, the Kingdom of England, Wales, or Berwick, in any Ship but what shall be of the Built of England, or of Ireland, or the Plantations, and wholly owned by the people thereof, and navigated with the Masters, and three-fourths of the Mariners, of the said Places, except Ships taken as Prize, and Condemnation thereof made in the Courts of Admiralty in England, Ireland, or the Plantations, to be navigated by the Master and three-fourths of the Mariners English, or of the Plantations, and whereof the Property doth belong to Englishmen, under Pain of Forfeiture of Ship and Goods.

Repeals so much of the above recited Acts of 15, 22, and 23, of Charles II. and of the 7th and 8th of William III. as restricts the Importation into the British Colonies and Settlements in America, the West-Indies, and on the Coast of Africa, to Great-Britain alone; and orders the word Ireland to be put into all Bonds taken from Ships, lading Commodities in the said Plantations to land the same in Great-Britain or Ireland, as directed by the Navigation Act, and allows the Trade between Ireland and the said Colonies to be carried on in like Manner as it is now carried on between Great Britain, and the said Colonies and Settlements.

Merchandizes may be exported or imported to and from this Kingdom and Places aforesaid, in any Ships taken as Prize, and whereof Condemnation shall be made in one of the Courts of Admiralty aforesaid, and shall be navigated by the Master, and three-fourths of the Mariners, English, and whereof the Property shall belong to Englishmen.

All Ships coming into, or going out of any of the Plantations, and lading or unloading any Goods, whether the same be his Majesty's Ships of War, or Merchants Ships, and the Commanders thereof, shall be liable to the same Rules, Visitations and Forfeitures, as to the entering, lading, or discharging their Ships, as Ships are liable to in this Kingdom, by 13 and 14 Car. II. Cap. 11. for preventing Frauds in his Majesty's Customs; and the Officers for collecting his Majesty's Revenue, and inspecting the Plantation Trade in the Plantations, shall have the same Power for searching of Ships, and taking their Entries, and for seizing Goods prohibited, or for which any Duties are payable, as are provided for the Officers of the Customs in England, by the said Act, as also to enter Houses or Warehouses, to search for and seize such Goods; and all Wharfingers, Lightermen, or other Persons, assisting in the Concealment or Rescue of the said Goods, or in the hindering the Officers in the Performance of their duty, and the Vessels employed in the Conveyance of such Goods, shall be subject to the like Penalties, as are provided by the same Act, in Relation to prohibited or uncustomed Goods in this Kingdom; and the like Assistance shall be given to the Officers, as by the said Act is provided for the Officers in England, &c.

Where any Question shall arise concerning the Importation or Exportation of any Goods into or out of the said Plantations, the Proof shall lie upon the Owner, and the Claimer shall be reputed the Importer or Owner.

- Ditto Sect. 9. All Laws, By-Laws, Usages or Customs, which shall be in practice in the Plantations, repugnant to the before-mentioned Laws, or to this Act, or any other Law to be made in this Kingdom, so far as such Law shall relate to the Plantations, are void.
- Ditto Sect. 10. Where the Governor, or Officers appointed by the Commissioners of the Customs, in the Plantations, shall have Ground of Suspicion, that the Certificate of having given Security in England is false; the Governor, or Officers of the Customs, shall take Security there for the Discharge of the Plantation Lading in Ireland, Wales, or Berwick, (substitute the Words Great-Britain or Ireland, in Conformity to 20 Geo. III. C. 10.) and where there shall be Cause to suspect, that the Certificates of having discharged her Lading of Plantation Goods in this Kingdom is false, the Governor or Officers shall not cancel the Security given in the Plantation, until they be informed from the Commissioners of the Customs, that the Certificate is true; and if any person shall raise or falsify any Cocket, Certificate, Return, or Permit, for any Vessel or Goods, or shall knowingly make Use thereof, such Person shall forfeit Five Hundred Pounds.
- Ditto Sect. 11. The Commissioners of the Treasury, and the Commissioners of the Customs, may appoint such Officers of the Customs in any City, Town, River, Port, Harbour, or Creek, of any of the Islands, Tracts of Land, and Proprieties, as shall seem needful; also upon any Suits brought in the Plantations, upon any Law concerning his Majesty's Duties, or Ships or Goods forfeited by reason of any unlawful Importations or Exportations, there shall not be any Jury, but of such only as are Natives of England or Ireland, or born in his Majesty's Plantations; and upon all such Suits the Offences may be laid in any Province, Country, or Division, of any of the Plantations, at the Pleasure of the Informer.
- Ditto Sect. 13. In all Bonds to be taken in the Plantations by 22 and 23 Car. II. Cap. 26. the Sureties shall be Persons of known Residence and Ability in the Plantations, and the Conditions of the Bond shall be within eighteen Months after the Date, the Danger of the Seas excepted, to produce Certificates of having landed the Goods in one of his Majesty's Plantations, or in England, Wales, or Berwick, (substitute the Words Great-Britain or Ireland, in Conformity to 20 Geo. III.) otherwise such Bond, or Copies thereof, attested under the Hand and Seal of the Governor to whom such Bonds were given, shall be in Force and allowed of in any Court in England, Ireland, or the Plantations, as if the Original were produced.
- 6 Geo. III. C. 21. Tobacco exported to Ireland, if less appears to be landed than shipped in Great-Britain, an Allowance, not exceeding two per Cent. may be made for Waste during the Voyage.
- 13 Geo. III. C. 35. Repeals the Acts of 12 and 15 Charles II. and any other Act which prohibits or restrains the setting, planting, or improving to grow, making, or curing Tobacco, either in Seed, Plant, or otherwise, in Ireland.
- 7 and 8 Will. III. C. 12. S. 17. No Ship shall pass as a Ship of the Built of England, Ireland, Wales, Berwick, Guernsey, Jersey, or any of his Majesty's Plantations in America, so as to trade to the Plantations, until the Persons claiming Property in such Ship, shall register the same, viz. if the Ship belong to any Port in England, Ireland, Wales, or Berwick, Proof shall be made upon Oath of one of the Owners, before the Collector and Comptroller of his Majesty's Customs in such Port; or if the Ship belong to any of his Majesty's Plantations in America, or to the Islands of Guernsey or Jersey, then the like Proof to be made before the Governor, with the principal Officer of Revenue residing on such Plantation or Island.
- 26 Geo. III. 1786. c. 60. Sect. 1. By this Act, entitled, An Act for the further Increase and Encouragement of Shipping and Navigation, It is enacted, that from and after the first Day of August, 1786, no Ship or Vessel foreign built (except such Ships or Vessels as have been, or shall hereafter be, taken by any of his Majesty's Ships of War, or by any private, or other Ship or Vessel, and condemned as lawful Prize in any Court of Admiralty) nor any Ship or Vessel built or rebuilt upon any foreign-made Keel or Bottom, in the Manner heretofore practised and allowed, although owned by British Subjects and navigated according to Law, shall be any longer intitled to any of the Privileges and Advantages of a British built Ship, or of a Ship owned by British Subjects :

Subjects: and that all the said Privileges and Advantages shall hereafter be confined to such Ships as are wholly of the Built of Great-Britain, or Ireland, Guernsey, Jersey, or the Ile of Man, or of some of the Colonies, Plantations, Islands, or Territories in Asia, Africa, or America, which now belong, or at the Time of building such Ships or Vessels did belong, or which may hereafter belong to, or be in the Possession of his Majesty, his Heirs or Successors.

But foreign built Ships belonging to British Subjects in Great-Britain, or Ireland, &c. and registered according to former Acts of Parliament, before the first Day of May, 1786, shall continue to enjoy the Privileges and Advantages of British built Ships navigated according to Law.

Ships begun to be repaired, or rebuilt before the 1st of May, 1786, and registered according to, and in pursuance of this Act, by an Order under the Hands of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs, which they are authorized to grant, provided it shall appear to them, upon Oath, that such Ships or Vessels were stranded, and were at the Time of being so stranded, the sole Property of some Foreigners, and having received such Damage that they could not proceed to Sea again without a thorough Repair, and were therefore necessarily sold, and purchased by British Subjects, or being a Droit of Admiralty, shall enjoy all the Privileges and Advantages of British-built Ships; provided always, that they have been so repaired; that two Thirds of them, at the least, are of British built.

No Ship rebuilt, or repaired in a Foreign Port, shall be deemed British built, sect. 2. though originally wholly so, if such Repairs exceed fifteen Shillings per Ton, except she shall receive such extraordinary Damage at Sea, during her being absent from any of his Majesty's Dominions, as shall oblige her to put into some Foreign Port, to undergo Repairs exceeding that Sum; in which Case the Nature of such Distress, and the Necessity of the Repairs, are to be certified to the Consul, or other chief British Officer residing there, upon the Oath of the Master, or other Person having charge of the Ship. The Consul to give his Certificate of the Particulars under his Hand and Seal, and in case there is no Consul, or other British Officer, the said Certificate shall be given under the Hands and Seals of two British Merchants; and on the Arrival of the Ship in England, it shall be delivered to an Officer of the Customs on Oath.

By this Act the Provisions in the above Clause are extended to Ships or Vessels, having Decks, and being of the Burthen of fifteen Tons or upwards.

No Registry to be made, but at the Port to which a Ship belongs, except for sect. 4. Prizes condemned at Guernsey, Jersey, or the Ile of Man.

The Port from and to which a Ship usually trades to be deemed her Port.

No Ship built in the United States of America, during the Existence of any prohibitory Acts of Parliament, shall be entitled to be registered.

The Oath required on registering Ships by 7 and 8 William III. is repealed, and no Ship or Vessel to be registered till the following Oath be taken by one, or more of the Owners; and if more than two joint Owners, then by the greater Part, if they reside within twenty Miles of the Port to which the Ship belongs; but if they all reside at a greater Distance, one Owner taking the Oath is sufficient.

I A. B. of [Place of Residence and Occupation] do make Oath that the Ship or Vessel [Name] of [Port or Place] whereof [Master's Name] is at present Master, being [Kind of Built, Burthen, et cetera, as described in the Certificate of the Surveying Officer] was [when and where built, or if Prize, Capture and Condemnation] and that I the said A. B. [and the other Owners' Names and Occupations, if any, and where they respectively reside, videlicet, Town, Place, or Parish, and County, or if Member of, and resident in, any Factory in Foreign Parts, or in any Foreign Town or City, being an Agent for, or Partner in, any House or Copartnership actually carrying on Trade in Great-Britain or Ireland, the Name of such Factory, Foreign Town or City, and the Names of such House or Copartnership] am [or are] sole Owner [or Owners] of the said Vessel, and that no other Person or Persons whatever hath or have any Right, Title, Interest, Share, or Property therein or thereto; and that I the said A. B. [and the said other Owners, if any] am [or are] truly and bonâ fide a Subject ject [or Subjects] of Great-Britain, and that I the said A. B. have not [nor have any of the other Owners, to the best of my Knowledge and Belief] taken the Oath of Allegiance to any Foreign State whatever [except under the Terms of some Capitulation, describing the Particulars thereof] or that since my taking [or his or their taking] the Oath of Allegiance to [naming the Foreign States respectively to which he or any of the said Owners shall have taken the same] and prior to the passing of an Act in the Twenty-sixth Year of the Reign of King George the Third, (intituled, An Act for the further Increase and Encouragement of Shipping and Navigation), I have [or he or they hath or have] become a Subject [or Subjects] of Great-Britain [either by his Majesty's Letters Patent, as a Denizen or Denizens, or naturalized by Act of Parliament, as the Case may be, naming the Dates of the Letters of Denization, or the Act or Acts of Parliament for Naturalization, respectively] or [as the Case may be] I have [or he or they hath or have] become a Denizen [or Denizens, or naturalized Subject or Subjects, as the Case may be] of Great-Britain, by His Majesty's Letters Patent, or by an Act of Parliament passed since the First Day of January One thousand seven hundred and eighty-six, [naming the Times when such Letters of Denization have been granted respectively, or the Year or Years in which such Act or Acts for Naturalization have passed respectively] and that no Foreigner, directly or indirectly, hath any Share or Part or Interest in the said Ship or Vessel.

Sec. 11. In Case the Ship to be registered shall belong to three or more joint Owners, and three of them do not personally attend to take and subscribe the aforesaid Oath; then the Owner or Owners present shall further make Oath, that the part Owner or Owners absent, are not resident within twenty Miles of the Ship's Port, and to the best of their Knowledge and Belief have not absented themselves in order to avoid taking the said Oath.

Before registering or granting any Certificate of Registry, the Ship shall be examined by proper Persons appointed by the Commissioners of the Customs in England or Scotland; or by the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander in Chief of Guernsey, Jersey, and Man; or of the Colonies, Plantations, Islands, or Territories aforesaid; to discover whether such Ship or Vessel is the same with that, for which, a Certificate is alledged to be granted.

Sec. 13. Persons giving false Descriptions of Ships, or making false Registries, knowingly, shall forfeit the Sum of one Hundred Pounds, as well Masters, and Owners, as Examiners on the Part of Government.

Sec. 15. Bond to be given, not to lend, sell, or dispose of Certificates of Registry, and to deliver them up to the proper Officers above-mentioned, in Case any Foreigner or Foreigners shall by Purchase or otherwise become whole or part Owners of any Ship or Vessel registered as aforesaid; or, in Case the Ship shall be lost, or taken by an Enemy, and the Certificate is preserved, Penalty for Non-Compliance, from Three Hundred to One Thousand Pounds, according to the Burthen of the Ship. Also the Mediterranean Passes that may have been obtained shall be delivered up with the Certificate of Registry, upon any such transfer of Property in the Ship.

Not only the Sale or Transfer of any Part, or of the whole Property in any Ship, within the Port to which she belongs, shall be acknowledged by Indorsement on the Registry, and Certificate so delivered up, agreeable to 7 and 8 William III. but there shall also be indorsed before two Witnesses, the Town, Place, or Parish, where all and every Person or Persons to whom the Property in any Ship or Vessel, or any Part thereof, shall be so transferred, shall reside; and if residing in foreign Parts, as Member of any British Factory, or as a British Merchant, the Name of the Place, and of the Factory where he or they reside, and of their Co-partners or Agents in Great-Britain or Ireland; and Copies of such Indorsement shall be delivered by such Agents or Co-Partners to the Offices appointed to register and grant Certificates of Registry.

In all Cases of transfer, the original Certificate of Registry shall be recited in Words

Words at length, in the Bill or other Instrument of sale. Also the Changes of the Masters of Ships and Vessels shall be indorsed on the said Certificates.

And whereas many Frauds have been committed by the frequent Change of Names given to Ships and Vessels; be it therefore enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any Owner or Owners of any Ship or Vessel to give any Name to such Ship or Vessel, other than that, by which she was first registered in Pursuance of this Act: And that the Owner or Owners within one Month from the Time of registering shall paint, or cause to be painted, in White or Yellow Letters, of a Length not less than four Inches, upon a black Ground, on some conspicuous Part of the Stern, the Name by which such Ship or Vessel shall have been registered, and the Port to which she belongs. The Penalty on Erasure, or Concealment of such Names, or on giving any other in any Writing, printed Paper, or other Document; or, for not keeping up, and preserving the same, is One Hundred Pounds.

Persons applying for Certificates in Great-Britain, Guernsey, Jersey, or the Isle of Man, for Ships or Vessels which shall be built, or whose Building shall be completed after the 1st of August, 1786, shall produce a particular Account of the same under the Hand of the Builder, and make Oath of the Identity of such Ship or Vessel. This Clause to be extended to the Colonies, Plantations, &c. after the 1st of January, 1787. Ships registered before this Act, are to exchange their Certificates, and apply for new Ones in Conformity thereto: And others, now appointed to be registered by this Act, must apply for Certificates, viz. within twelve Months for Ports within Great-Britain; and eighteen Months for the Colonies, Plantations, &c.

Ships leaving Port without Certificates shall be forfeited; if found in any other Port, shall give Bond to procure Certificate.

If square-rigged Vessels cannot enter the Ports to which they belong for want of Depth of Water, Certificates may be obtained upon their being surveyed at the Port where they touch.

Certificates of Registry to be produced at every Port, in which any Ship or Vessel shall be, either in his Majesty's Dominions, or in foreign Countries, under Penalty of One Hundred Pounds. British Consuls abroad to inspect such Certificates.

Persons making false Oaths to any of the Matters herein before required to be verified, shall suffer the Pains and Penalties incurred by Persons committing wilful and corrupt Perjury. And Persons altering or making use of altered, erased, or falsified Certificates, shall forfeit the Sum of Five Hundred Pounds.

Former Acts of Trade and Navigation not repealed by this Act, to remain in full force.

All Ships or Vessels registered in Ireland, according to an Act of Parliament of that Kingdom, passed in the present Session, shall enjoy all the Privileges and Advantages of Ships and Vessels owned by any of his Majesty's Subjects.

Every Ship and Vessel belonging to his Majesty's Subjects in Ireland registered there, according to Law, previous to the said Act, shall continue to enjoy the like Privileges during the Times appointed by the Commissioners of the Revenue of Ireland. But at the Expiration of such Time, they shall be registered, de novo, agreeable to the said Act.

No Oath to be taken by any British Subject in any foreign State, to enable him to become a Citizen or Burgher during his temporary Residence, shall be deemed an Oath of Allegiance to such State, depriving him of the Rights of registering his Ship or Vessel, according to the Tenour of the Oath of Registry of 26 Geo. III.

Instead of the Owners, as in the Case of private Ships, the Secretary to the East-India Company, or some other Officer belonging to any other Body Corporate, shall take and subscribe the Oath of Registry, deposing that the Ship doth wholly and truly belong to the said Company, or other Body Corporate.

Vessels not exceeding thirty Tons Burthen, and not having a fixed Deck, may be employed in the Fishery at Newfoundland, and the Shores of Ryebeck, Nova Scotia, &c. without being registered.

- Sec. 9. Ships built at Newfoundland, &c. for British Subjects residing in his Majesty's Dominions in Europe, may be registered there by the Ship's Husband or Agent, on his taking the Oath required by 26 Geo. III. but such Ship on its Arrival in Europe must be registered, de novo, conformable to that Act.
- Sec. 10. After the 1st of July, 1787, Goods and Commodities of the Growth, Production, or Manufacture of Europe, enumerated and specified in the Acts of 12, 13, 14 of Charles II. and 6 Geo. I. may be imported into Great-Britain, either in British built Ships, or in Ships built in the Country, or Place, in which such Goods or Commodities, grow or are produced, subject to the Rules, Regulations, and Restrictions, contained in the said Acts.
- Sec. 11. Goods of Morocco imported into Gibraltar may be imported from thence in Ships built in his Majesty's Dominions, or Ships belonging thereto, prior to the 1st of May, 1786, on Payment of the same Duties, as if imported from Africa.
- Sec. 12. Provided always, that such Goods shall be accompanied with a Certificate, that they were imported into Gibraltar, in such Ships or Vessels as above described.
- All Ships and Vessels which by 26 Geo. III. c. 60. are declared not to be intitled to the Privileges of British built Ships, shall be deemed alien Ships, liable to the same Duties, Penalties, and Forfeitures as alien Ships.
- 14 Geo. III. c. 55. Sect. 9. Ships built in Ireland, and owned by his Majesty's Subjects residing in any Part of the British Dominions in Europe, to be deemed British built, and intitled to the like Privileges and Advantages in all Respects, as Ships built in Great Britain: And, Ships belonging to any of his Majesty's Subjects residing in Ireland, and not British built, are to be intitled to the same Privileges and Advantages in all Parts of his Majesty's Dominions, as Ships belonging to his Majesty's Subjects residing in Great-Britain, and not British or Irish built, are intitled to. Confirmed by 27 Geo. III. C. 90. Sect. 1.

Bounties, and other Advantages granted by the Legislature, to the Owners and Masters of Ships; and to Sailors, and Fishermen, for the Encouragement of the NEWFOUNDLAND, GREENLAND, and other BRITISH FISHERIES.

- 26 Geo. III. 1786. c. 26. IT having been found by long Experience that several of the Provisions and Regulations, hitherto in Force, for encouraging the Fisheries carried on at Newfoundland, and Parts adjacent, are insufficient to answer the good Purposes thereby intended.
- Sec. 1. It is hereby enacted, that from and after the first of January, 1787, the respective bounties herein aftermentioned, shall be paid and allowed annually, for ten Years, to a certain Number of Ships or Vessels employed in the British Fishery on the Banks of Newfoundland, under the Limitations and Restrictions herein after expressed, that is to say, that such Vessels as shall appear to be British built, and wholly owned by his Majesty's Subjects residing in Great-Britain. Ireland, or the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, or Man, and shall be navigated each with a Master, and at least three-fourths of the Mariners being British Subjects, usually residing in his Majesty's European Dominions; and shall be fitted and cleared out from some Port in Great-Britain, or the aforesaid Islands, after the said first of January, 1787, and after that Day in each succeeding Year, and shall proceed to the Banks of Newfoundland, and having caught a Cargo of Fish upon those Banks, consisting of not less than 10,000 Fish by Tale, shall land the same at any one of the Ports in the North, the East, or South Side of the Island of Newfoundland, between Cape St. John and Cape Raye, on or before the 15th of July in each Year; and shall make one more Trip, at least, to the said Banks, and to return with another Cargo of Fish caught there, to the same Port.

Port—In such Case, the One Hundred Ships that shall first arrive at Newfoundland, and catch the Cargo of Fish, and make the Trip afore-mentioned, shall, if navigated with not less than twelve Men each, be intitled to Forty Pounds each; but if navigated with less than twelve Men, and not less than seven, they shall be intitled to Twenty-five Pounds each: Provided always, that in either of the Cases abovementioned, any of the One Hundred Vessels so first arriving, which shall be wholly navigated by Men going out upon Shares, that is to say, receiving a certain Share of the Profits of the Voyage in Lieu of Wages, such of the said Vessels as shall be so navigated with not less than twelve Men each, shall be intitled to Fifty Pounds; and if so navigated with a less Number than twelve, and not less than seven Men, to Thirty-five Pounds each.

For the second Hundred, in the order of Time, arriving at the Banks, catching the Fish, and making the Trip afore said; navigated with not less than twelve Men Twenty-five Pounds each: If with not less than seven Men Eighteen Pounds each—If the Men go out upon Shares, Thirty-five Pounds for twelve Men, and Twenty-one Pounds each, for not less than seven Men.

Certificates to be produced to the Collector of the Customs, at the Port in Great-Britain, from which the Ships were cleared out, under the Hands of the Governor, or Deputy Governor, or principal Officer of the Customs at Newfoundland, certifying the Qualifications of the Ships, and the Conformity of the Masters to the afore said Regulations, the said Certificate must likewise have been founded upon another under the Hand and Seal of the naval Officer stationed on the Banks, and delivered to the Governor, or some Person appointed by him, testifying the Time of the Ship's Arrival, the requisite Quantity of Fish being caught, &c. and the Whole must be further confirmed by the Oaths of the Masters and Mates of each Vessel. The Collectors of the Customs at the Port in Great-Britain to which the Ships return, are empowered to pay the respective Bounties from the Funds appointed for that Purpose by 15 Geo. III.

The Certificates and Affidavits made before the naval Officer or Commander of sec. 3. any of his Majesty's Ships stationed on the Coast, in order to satisfy the Governor, or Deputy Governor, of the Facts whereon he is to ground his Certificate, must be delivered within the District of St. John's, in the said Island of Newfoundland, before the 15th of September in each Year; and within any other District of the Island before the 30th of September in each Year.

Masters of Vessels, previous to receiving the Bounties to make Oath, that all the sec. 4. Men belonging to his Ship, who sailed out with him, or a Number of Men equal to them, are returned to Great-Britain, unless any of them have died at Newfoundland, or on the Voyage.

Hirers or Employers of Fishermen are by this Act allowed to advance to Sea- sec. 5. men and Fishermen more than half the Wages due to them, or contracted for; provided the Sum do not exceed five Pounds ten Shillings for each Green Man, and that a Reserve of forty Shillings be kept in the Employer's Hands to pay the Charges of bringing him Home pursuant to the Regulations of 15 Geo. III.

Seamen or Fishermen, wilfully absenting themselves for one Day, or neglecting, sec. 6. or refusing to work, shall forfeit five Days Pay, for every Day's Neglect. Refusal to work, or Absence; to be paid to the Hirer or Employer of such Seamen or Fishermen at the Discretion of the Governor, in Recompence for the Loss he may have sustained by such Absence or Neglect.

No Oil or Blubber to be entered Duty-free in any Port of Great-Britain till the sec. 7. Master or other Person, having the Command of the Ship or Vessel in which it is imported, shall have made Oath before the Collector, or other Chief Officer of the Customs, that the same, and every Part thereof, is really and bonâ Fide the Oil or Blubber of Fish, or Creatures, actually caught and taken on the Banks and Shores of Newfoundland and Parts adjacent, wholly by his Majesty's Subjects carrying on the said Fishery, from his Majesty's European Dominions; and usually residing in the said Dominions. A similar Oath is to be taken relative to Seal Skins.

Oil, Blubber, or Seal Skins, purchased at Newfoundland, upon producing Cer- sec. 9. tificates, that the same was the Produce of Fish, or Creatures caught there by British Subjects, and the further Oath of the Master of the Ship, may be entered Duty-free.

It shall not be lawful to use any Sean or Net of any Kind or Denomination whatsoever, for catching Cod Fish, the Scale or Mesh of which Sean or Net shall be less in Dimension than four Inches, under the Penalty of forfeiting One Hundred Pounds for each Offence.

Sec. 12. Seamen or Fishermen deserting from Newfoundland, with an Intention to enter into the Service of foreign States, shall, if they came from his Majesty's European Dominions, be imprisoned three Months, and then sent Home; and in case they do not come from his Majesty's European Dominions, they shall, upon Conviction, be imprisoned twelve Months.

Sec. 13. No British Ship, Vessel, or Boat, belonging to the Fishery, to be sold, bartered, or exchanged with any Foreigner whatever, nor any Tackle, Hook, Baits, or other Tools or Implements of the said Fishery. Persons found guilty of selling, bartering, or exchanging the same, or aiding or abetting therein, shall be committed to prison till the next Quarter-Session, and shall forfeit treble the Value of the Articles sold, bartered or exchanged. No foreign Goods or Commodities shall be bought or bartered for by any Fisherman, under the same Penalties upon Conviction.

Sec. 10. The foregoing Provisions not to extend to the Importation of Bread, Flour, Indian Corn, or live Stock in British Ships, in pursuance of the Act of this Session for the Encouragement of Navigation, &c.

Sec. 18. No more than forty Shillings to be paid for the Passage to Great-Britain for every Person put on board by order of the Governor or Deputy Governor to be carried to Great-Britain. The said forty Shillings to be paid by the Commissioners of the Navy, if the Funds in the Hands of the Collectors of the Customs at the Port to which any Ship returns are deficient.

Sec. 20. Officers commanding any of his Majesty's Ships, stationed at the Island of Newfoundland, are empowered to search, examine, and detain British Ships or Vessels, coming to or going from the said Island, which he shall have reason to suspect are going to, or coming from the Islands of St. Pierre or Miquelon for the Purposes of lading contraband Goods, or Commodities, or of bartering Fishing-tackle, Tools, &c. for such Commodities; and if such Commodities or Merchandise shall be found on board, the Vessel and Goods shall be forfeited.

Sec. 21. Suits, relative to Ships seized, to be carried on in the Vice-Admiralty Court at Newfoundland. If it shall appear upon Trial that there was a probable Cause for Seizure, though a Verdict be given for the Defendant or Defendants, Claimer or Claimers of any Ship or Vessel, the Judge of the Court is to grant a Certificate to the Officer who seized her, stating such probable Cause, which shall be given in Evidence against any Action to be brought in any Court in Great-Britain.

Sec. 22. No Action shall be commenced for any thing done in Consequence of this Act, after three Months, from the Time of committing the Offence, at Newfoundland or in Great-Britain, unless commenced there, three Months after the Return of the Person or Persons complained of.

19 Geo. III. His Majesty's Subjects residing in Ireland may transport directly from thence
C. 31. S. 3. to Newfoundland, or to any part of America where the Fishery is carried on, Provisions, Hooks, Lines, Netting, or other Tools or Implements necessary for the Fishery; being the Product and Manufacture of Great-Britain or Ireland.

26 Geo. III. This Act, for the Encouragement of the Southern Whale Fishery, establishes new 1726. c. 50. and additional Premiums for the Fisheries carried on by his Majesty's European Subjects in the Seas to the Southward of the Greenland Seas and Davis's Straits, for the Purpose of taking Whales and other Creatures found in those Seas. It repeals the Acts of 15 and 16 Geo. III. (our Guide in the last Edition of this Work) and grants the following Premiums to Twenty Ships registered, manned, &c. according to the Regulations of the Act of 26 Geo. III. cap. 26. To fifteen of the Ships or Vessels so fitted out between the first of May and the first of September, 1786, in each of the succeeding ten Years, and which shall have sailed to the Southward of the seventh Degree of North Latitude, and shall there have bond Fide carried on the said Fishery; and shall return to some Port in Great-Britain before the first of July, in the Year subsequent to that in which they cleared out, there shall be paid the Sum of Five Hundred Pounds to each of the three first Ships that shall arrive, arrive, with the greatest Quantity of Oil or Head-matter taken together, being not less in the whole than Twenty Tons in each Ship, and being the Produce of one or more Whale or Whales, or other Creature living in the Seas, taken and killed by the Crews of every such Ship or Vessel.—Four Hundred Pounds to the Three Ships next arriving under the foregoing Circumstances.—Three Hundred Pounds for the next Three Ships.—Two Hundred Pounds for the next Three.—And One Hundred Pounds for the Three last of the Fifteen.

For the Five Ships or Vessels last fitted out, and sailing to the Southward of the Thirty-sixth Degree of South Latitude, and returning within the Times before limited, the following Premiums shall be paid and allowed—Seven Hundred Pounds for the First Ship that arrives at any Port in Great-Britain.—Six Hundred Pounds for the Second of such Ships.—Five Hundred Pounds for the Third Ship.—Four Hundred Pounds for the Fourth Ship.—Three Hundred Pounds for the Fifth Ship. The Quantity of Oil and Head-matter taken together to be not less than Twenty Tons, in each Ship or Vessel, and the greatest Quantity in each Ship to have the largest Premium, and so in Proportion; Regard being always had to the Priority of the Time of Arrival.

The Master and Three-fourths of the Crew must be British Subjects, or foreign Protestants intending to settle in Great-Britain. Sect. 5.

No Premium shall be paid unless there be an Apprentice for the Term of three Years on board the Ship that claims it, for every fifty Tons Burthen of the said Ship: Thus a Ship of 200 Tons Burthen must carry out four Apprentices, and so in Proportion; or forfeit all Pretensions to any of the Premiums. Sect. 6.

No Premium shall be paid for any Ship, under the aforesaid Circumstances, unless a regular Log Book has been kept during the whole Course of the Voyage; which shall be produced to the Commander of any of his Majesty's Ships of War, that may be met with at Sea, or to the British Consul at any foreign Port, into which the said Ship or Vessel may happen to put; and the Commander of the Ship of War, and the British Consul, are required to make Memorandums in the said Log Book, of the Day on which it was produced to them. Also, on the Arrival of any such Ship or Vessel in any Port of Great-Britain, with a Cargo entitled to a Premium, the Master shall deliver up his Log Book to the Collector of the Customs at the said Port; and jointly and separately himself and his Mate shall verify on Oath, the contents of the said Log Book. Sect. 7 and 8.

The Master, Mate, and two of the Mariners belonging to every such Ship or Vessel, shall make Oath, upon the Importation of any Oil or Head-matter, that it is the Produce of Fish, or other Creatures killed by the Ship's Crew, within the Latitudes prescribed. Sect. 9.

Persons taking out any Part of the Cargo of another Ship to add to their own, in order to obtain any Premium, shall forfeit Five Hundred Pounds. And, on Information given of this Offence, the Owners of such Ships and Vessels shall not pay any Money that shall be due to him, the said Master, but shall pay it to the Collector of the Customs, towards discharging the Sum forfeited, upon Conviction; and, if the Owner or Owners do not comply with this Clause, they shall be made accountable for the Sum they have paid to the said Master. Sect. 10.

The Produce of Whales, caught near the Latitudes before recited, by Ships on their Voyage out, or on their return Home, to be accounted Part of the Quantity entitling them to Premiums, provided they have actually sailed and bonâ Fide carried on the Fishery in the said Latitudes, and within the Times before specified. Sect. 11.

Ships employed in the Southern Whale Fishery, may sail and pass for that Purpose to the Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, and to the Westward of Cape Horn, or through the Straits of Magellan. Sect. 14.

But such Ships, sailing to the Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, shall not sail or pass to the Northward of Thirty Degrees of South Latitude, nor make more than fifteen Degrees of East Longitude, from the said Cape of Good Hope; nor shall any such Ship or Vessel so being and passing to the Westward of Cape Horn, or through the Straits of Magellan, for the Purpose aforesaid, be allowed to pass to the Northward of the Equinoctial Line, nor make more than Fifty Degrees of West Longitude from Cape Horn. Sect. 15.

- Sect. 16. Ships, intending to sail to the Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, must take out a Licence before they leave Great-Britain from the East India Company; and the said Company shall not be required to grant Licences to more than ten Ships in one Season.
- Sect. 17. Ships sailing out of their Limits, or having improper Merchandise on board, shall be liable to the Penalties incurred for Ships trading to the East Indies without Leave.
- Sect. 18. Ships that have obtained Licences from the East India Company to sail to the Eastward of the Cape of Good Hope, must, within thirty Days after their Return to Great-Britain, obtain a Certificate from the East India Company, that no East India Goods have been imported in such Ships, before they can obtain any Premium under the Authority of this Act.
- Sect. 19. Ships or Vessels, in like Manner intending to navigate within, or frequent any Part of the Seas comprized in the Boundaries of the exclusive Trade of the South Sea Company, must take out a Licence from the said Company.
- Sect. 20, 21. No Ship or Vessel shall be intitled to more than one Premium in the same Season. And if Water be mixed with the Oil imported it shall be forfeited, together with all Claims to any Premium. And in Case of any Dispute, the Owners of the Ships, if required by the Officers of his Majesty's Customs, shall prove the Purity of the Oil.
- Sect. 22, 23. The Quantity of Oil and Head-matter imported shall be ascertained by an Officer of the Customs before any Premium is paid. Oil and Head-matter may be imported Duty Free, in British-built Ships.
- Sect. 24. Foreigners, settled in Great-Britain, who have carried on the Fishery five Years, shall be naturalized, upon producing a Certificate thereof, from the proper Officers of his Majesty's Customs, and taking the Oath of Allegiance.
- Sect. 25. No Harpooner, Line Manager, or Boat-steerer, belonging to any Ship or Vessel fitted out on the aforesaid Fishery, shall be impressed from the said Service.
- Sect. 26, 27. Ships belonging to foreign Protestants coming to reside in any Part of Great-Britain before the 25th of June, 1787, and which Ships, not to exceed forty in Number, were built before the first of June, 1786, may be licensed by his Majesty in Council to carry on this Fishery, subject to the several Regulations aforesaid; and import Oil, &c. Duty free, but shall not be intitled to any Premium in Virtue thereof. And in Case of the Death of a Foreigner, whose Family has been resident in Great-Britain five Years, and whose Ship has been employed in the Fishery five Seasons, Licence shall be granted to her as a British built Ship. The Owners of such Ships to take the Oath of Allegiance before the Certificate of registering the Ship is granted.
- Sect. 29. Officers of the Customs, &c. granting false Certificates, are made liable to a Penalty of Five Hundred Pounds, upon Conviction; and rendered incapable of serving his Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors, in any Office whatever.

It would be unpardonable to close this important Article, without noticing the beneficial Effects of these Encouragements given to our Fisheries in foreign Parts.

Only eighteen Ships were employed in the Southern Whale Fishery in 1785; and the Amount of their Cargoes was estimated at 30,000*l.* In 1787, when the additional Bounties and Privileges granted by the Legislature began to take Effect, no less than thirty-eight Ships were employed, and the Cargoes were estimated at 100,000*l.* And it is highly probable that the public statement of this valuable Branch of Commerce made up for the Year 1790, will make the Number of Ships employed near sixty, and the Amount of the Cargoes about 300,000*l.*

The Greenland Fishery before the last War never employed more than One Hundred Ships; there are now upwards of two Hundred and Fifty employed in that Business, to the great Increase of our Shipping and Navigation; and the Cargoes are valued at 500,000*l.*

Home Fisheries.

WE must now take a cursory View of the great Advantages likely to accrue from the Encouragements lately given to the Fisheries established, and to be established within the Realm of Great-Britain.

The Pilchard Fishery was greatly promoted by an Act of Parliament of 25 Geo. II. whereby a Bounty of seven Shillings was granted for every Cask or Vessel of Pilchards, containing 50 Gallons taken, cured, and exported, from any Port or Place in Great-Britain, to Parts beyond the Sea; and so in Proportion for a greater or lesser Quantity thereof; and the said Act recites two former Acts of 5 Geo. I. and 3 Geo. II. by which a Bounty of two Shillings had been granted, for the before named Quantities of Pilchards, so taken and cured. These Acts expiring, the two Bounties united are granted for five Years, from 1786 to 1791; and nine Shillings for every Cask or Vessel containing fifty Gallons, exported as aforesaid, is allowed; provided always, that in Case more than 20,000 Hogsheds shall be exported in one Year, only seven Shillings shall be paid for the Quantity exceeding 20,000 Hogsheds; and the additional two Shillings on every Cask or Vessel of Fifty Gallons, shall be divided and shared proportionally by the Ships exporting together to the total amount of 20,000 Hogsheds.

Incorporates certain Persons therein named, by the name and stile of The British Society for extending the Fisheries, and improving the Sea Coasts of this Kingdom; and enables them, when incorporated, to subscribe a Joint-Stock, and therewith to purchase Lands, and build thereon Free-Towns, Villages, and Fishing Stations, in the Highlands, and Islands, in that Part of Great-Britain called Scotland; and for other Purposes. The Preamble states the obvious national Benefits that must be derived from this capital Undertaking, if it succeeds, of which there can be but little Doubt; since the Members of the Corporation named in the Act consists of the principal Nobility and Gentry of Scotland; in short, it is an Association of Power, Influence, and Riches, combined for the Improvement of the Highlands and Islands of North-Britain, and calculated to obviate those Impediments, which rendered former Attempts of a similar Nature abortive.

Empowers them to purchase Lands; and Sect. 3, enables them to raise a joint Capital Stock or Fund, for the Purposes of building Free-Towns, Villages, Harbours, Quays, Piers, &c. The sum to be so raised not to exceed 150,000*l.* Sterling; and to be divided into Shares of Fifty Pounds each; each Share intitling the Subscriber to one Vote, at all Meetings for transacting the Affairs of the Society. Two Shares to intitle to only one Vote; three or four, to only two; five, six, and seven Shares to only three; eight or nine Shares to four; and ten Shares to five Votes, and no more. Votes in these Proportions to be admitted by Proxy.

Then follow the Oath of the Governour, and other Officers, and the Bye-Law, founded on Precedent of similar commercial Societies, and containing nothing new or extraordinary.

No Transfer, other than by Gift or Bequest shall be made of any of the said Capital-Stock, or Share, under three Years, from August 10, 1786.

The Books of Accounts relating to the Society shall be stated and settled; and every Proprietor shall have free Access to them, at convenient Times.

Encouragement of British-made Sail Cloth.

9 Geo. II. c. 37. S. 4. EVERY Ship which shall be built in Great-Britain, and every Ship built in his Majesty's Plantations in America, shall, upon her first setting out, have one complete Set of Sails, made of Cloth manufactured in Great-Britain, and in Case such Ship shall not be fitted as aforesaid, the Master shall forfeit 50*l*.

Ditto, S. 5. No Person shall make into Sails or Tarpawlines, any foreign Sail-Cloth imported after the 24th of June, 1731, not stamped; and in Case any Person shall make up foreign Sail-Cloth, other than as aforesaid, such Sails and Tarpawlines shall be forfeited, and such Person shall forfeit 20*l*.

Ditto, S. 10. This Act shall continue five Years from the 24th of June, 1736, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament.

Continued till the 1st of June, 1747, and until the next Session of Parliament, by 15 and 16 Geo. II.

Confirmed by 19 Geo. II. p. 457. And it is there also enacted, that from the 24th of June, 1746, every Master of a Vessel belonging to a Subject, navigated with, or having any foreign-made Sails aboard, shall at the Time of his making his Entry at the Custom-house of such Vessel, also make Entry and Report upon Oath of all foreign-made Sails used in, or being aboard such Vessel, and before the Vessel shall be cleared by the Officers of the Customs inwards, where the shall discharge any of her Lading, he shall pay the like Duties payable by an Act of 12 Anne.

Every such Sail shall be stamped at the Place where the Vessel shall make her Entry, in Manner herein aforementioned; and if the Master shall not make such Entry, and pay the Duty before the Vessel shall be cleared by the Officers of the Customs inwards, all such Sails shall be forfeited, and the Master for every such Offence shall forfeit 50*l*.

Page 458. If the Master after his Report or Entry made, and before the Vessel is cleared by the Officers of the Customs, shall declare his Intention of not choosing to pay the Duty, and shall deliver such Sails to the Officer of the Port where he makes his Entry, in such Case the Sails are to be forfeited, and the Master shall not be liable to pay the Duty or Penalty of 50*l*.

Nothing herein contained shall make Captains or Masters of Vessels, coming from the East-Indies, liable to the Duties or Forfeitures aforesaid, for such Vessels being navigated with, or having foreign-made Sails on board, which shall bonâ fide be brought by them from thence.

The Commissioners of the Customs of Great-Britain, by the 24th of June, 1746, shall provide a sufficient Number of Stamps of eight Inches Diameter for the Stamping of foreign-made Sails, &c.

And as Doubts have arisen about the meaning of a Clause in the said Act of 9 Geo. II. by which Vessels are obliged at their first setting out, or being first navigated at Sea, to be furnished with one full and complete Set of Sails, made of Sail-Cloth manufactured in Great-Britain: to obviate such Doubts for the future, it is enacted, that from the 24th of June, 1746, every Vessel which shall be built in Great-Britain, and from the 29th of December, 1746, every Vessel which shall be built in his Majesty's Plantations in America, upon her first being navigated, shall be furnished with one full and complete Set of Sails (bonâ fide belonging to such Vessel, &c) made of Sail-Cloth manufactured in Great-Britain, under Penalty, for every Default, of 50*l*. to be forfeited by the Master.

Page 461. 26 Geo. III. c. 53. S. 3. All the foregoing recited Acts, relative to British made and foreign Sail-Cloth, are continued, and to remain in Force, until the 29th of September, 1792; and from thence to the end of the then next Session of Parliament.

5 and 6 Will. and Mar. C. 7. S. 21. If any Subject of this Realm shall ship any Salt or Rock Salt, that hath paid the Duty, to convey it by Sea to any Part of England, and the Vessel perish at Sea, or be taken by Enemies with such Salt on board, such Person shall, upon Proof made at the Quarter Sessions for the County, &c. wherein he doth inhabit, habit, of the Loss of such Salt, receive from the Sessions a Certificate, and upon producing the Certificate to any Officers of the Duty having been paid, they are to let such Persons ship the like Quantity of Salt without paying any Duty.

Where any Ship laden with Salt shall be found hovering on the Coasts, not proceeding on her Voyage, it shall be lawful for the Officers of the Customs, or of the Duty on Salt, to go on board such Vessels, and compel them to come into Port, and to continue on board until the Salt be unladen, or the Ship shall depart from the Port; and if the Persons on board any Ship importing Salt, shall neglect to enter or unlade such Salt twenty Days after the same is come into Port, or within that Time to depart and proceed on their Voyage, unless permitted by the chief Officer of the Customs, to make a longer Stay, all the Salt on board such Ship shall be forfeited, and double the Value thereof, to be recovered of the Master.

No foreign Salt shall be imported in any Ship of less Burthen than twenty Tons, and in Bulk only (except for the Provisions of the Ships) upon Pain of forfeiting the Salt, and double the Value, to be recovered of the Person importing.

If any Ship laden with Salt, to be carried beyond the Seas, shall come into any Place in England, it shall be lawful for the Officer of Salt, to enter such Ship, and there continue till the Ship unlade her Cargo, or return to Sea, under the Penalty of 20*l.* to be recovered of the Master, who shall refuse such Officer to come on board; and if any Person shall unlade any of the Salt before Entry or Re-payment of the Duty, the whole Cargo of Salt shall be forfeited.

Where any Salt shall be laid on board any Ship, either to be transported beyond the Seas, or carried Coastwise, the Officer of the Customs shall in the Cockets (which shall be also signed by the officer for the Duty on Salt, and given without Fee) express the Quantity of Salt; and in Case such Ship shall come into any Port in England, it shall be lawful for the Officers of the Customs or Officers for the said Duties, to go on board such Ship, and demand a sight of such Cocket, and in Case he has Cause to suspect that there is not so much Salt on board as the Quantity expressed from such Cocket (and shall make Affidavit thereof before the Collector, or Customer of the Port) to weigh all the Salt remaining on board; and in Case there shall appear not to be so much as the Quantity expressed in such Cocket (making Allowance for the Waste, and for Salt delivered at another Port, and indorsed in the Permit) the Salt remaining shall be forfeited.

No Salt of the Produce or Manufacture of England, Wales, Berwick, Scotland, or Ireland, nor any other Salt coming from Ireland, Scotland, or the Isle of Man, shall, after June 1, 1704, be imported into England, Wales, or Berwick, upon Pain that all the Salt so imported, &c. shall be forfeited, and that the Ship shall also be forfeited; and every Person that shall take any Salt out of such Ship, or carry the same on Shore, or convey the same from the Shore, or be assisting therein, shall forfeit 20*l.* or suffer six Months Imprisonment.

It shall be lawful for any of the Officers for the Duties upon Salt, within two Months after the landing any such Salt, to seize the Salt, and also the Ship; and in case the Owner of such Salt or Ship shall not within twenty Days claim the Salt and Ship, and give Security to answer the Value, the Salt and Ship shall be sold.

Nothing in this Act shall extend to any Salt shipped to be carried Coastwise, by Certificate, from one Port to another, according to former Acts.

In Cases where Salt shall have been shipped to be exported, and the Ship by Strefs of Weather, Enemies, or other Necessities, be forced into any Port in England, it shall be lawful for the Owner of such Salt, or Master of such Ship within twenty Days, to reland the Salt, so as due Entry be made, and the Duties again paid down for the whole Quantity that was entered to be exported before any Part thereof be relanded.

Where any Ship shall come into any Port of England from Ireland, or other foreign Part, having on board any Salt which was taken in only for the Provision of the Ship, or for curing of Fish, it shall be lawful to land the Salt, so as Entry

- be made thereof within ten Days after coming into Port, and the Duties paid down or secured before any Part thereof be landed.
- Ditto, S. 10. Where any Salt (the Duties whereof shall have been paid or secured) shall be shipped, and perish by the sinking of the Ship, before going out of Port, and before the Exporter shall be intitled to a Drawback; the Exporter or Proprietor of the Salt shall, upon Proof made before the Justices at the next Quarter Sessions, receive a Certificate to such Proof, and upon producing it to any Collector of the Duties, he shall let the Proprietor buy the like Quantity of Salt without paying Duty.
- Ditto, S. 18. Or if any Salt is lost at Sea by stormy Weather, or by being thrown over-board for the Ship's Preservation, the Owner thereof shall, upon Proof by the Oaths of two (whereof the Master or Mate of the Vessel to be one) receive a Certificate as above, and be allowed to buy the like Quantity of Salt without Duty.
- 15 Geo. I. C.
13. S. 18. If any Master of a Ship, who shall import into Great-Britain any Salt taken in for the Provisions of the Ship, or for curing Fish, shall not enter and pay, or secure the Duty for the same within ten Days after coming into any Port, and before the same be landed, the Salt so imported shall be forfeited, and the Master or Owner shall forfeit double the Value.
- Ditto, S. 20. Every Master of any Vessel, who shall transport any foreign Salt from Scotland, or any of the Islands thereof belonging to England, or from one Port to another in Great-Britain, shall, before landing or delivering such Salt, deliver to the Officers for collecting the duties on Salt a Particular of the Quantity, signed by the Officers of Salt and Customs for the Port whence the Vessel came, and the Master, his Mate, or Boatswain, shall make Oath, before the Commissioners for the Salt Duties, or their Officers, that to his Knowledge there hath not been taken into the Vessel any Salt since he came from such Port: And if such Vessel be to deliver Part of her Salt at one Port, and part at another, the Officers of the Salt Duties, and of the Customs, where such Salt shall be delivered, shall certify on the Back of the Cocket or Transire, or else by Certificate, what Quantity of the Salt hath been delivered, on Penalty of double the Value of the Salt otherwise delivered, and 10s. per Bushel.
- Ditto, S. 21. It shall be lawful for the Salt Officers at any unloading Port to go on board such Vessel, before the Delivery, and demand a Sight of the Cocket, and to weigh the Salt upon the unloading; and if the Salt be found to be more in Weight than what is contained in the Cocket, the Surplusage shall be forfeited, and if the Master refuses to show the Cocket, the Officer may seize the Salt, and detain it till the Cocket be produced; and if it be not produced in four Days, the Salt shall be forfeited.
- Ditto S. 22. The Officers of the Customs, or of the Duties on Salt, may go board any Vessel to search if there be any Salt on board, and may seize the same, if it be found on board any other Vessel than that in which the Salt was imported, unless it had been duly entered, or the Duties paid or secured; and all such Salt shall be forfeited, or the Value thereof to be recovered of the Master or Owner of such Vessel, who shall likewise be liable to all other Penalties, as if the same had been landed, without Entry or Payment of the Duties; and every Person who shall hinder any Officer in going on board any Vessel and searching, shall forfeit 40s.
- Ditto, S. 24. If any foreign Salt be put on Shore before Entry or the Duty paid, or without a Warrant, the Person landing the same, or conveying it from the Shore, or assisting therein, shall, over and above the Penalties already given, forfeit 100s.
- Ditto, S. 25. On reshipping any Salt, British or Foreign, from any Boat into any Ship, and before any Dispatches for the Salt so rehipped be granted, the Master, &c. that comes along with the Salt to be shipped on board another Vessel, shall make Oath before the Salt Officer, that all the Salt he took in is truly rehipped, and that there was no Salt added to it, or taken from it, to the best of his knowledge, on Penalty of forfeiting double the Value of the Salt, that shall be otherwise rehipped, and also 10s. per Bushel.
- 5 Geo. III. c.
45. S. 40. Salt landed without the presence of any Officer, is forfeited, with 10s. per Bushel; and the Vessel out of which it shall be taken, with the Tackle and Furniture are forfeited; and every Person concerned therein shall forfeit 20s.

Officers for the Duty of Salt, meeting any Person conveying Salt by Land or Water, by Day or Night, may demand a Sight of the Permit, and may at their own Expence weigh the Salt; and if it be found more in Weight than contained in the Permit, the Surplusage shall be forfeited; and the Persons conveying the same shall be liable to the same Penalties and Forfeitures, as Persons are liable to for removing Salt without due Entry.

Persons obstructing or abusing Officers, in the Execution of their Duty, shall forfeit 2*s*. for every Offence.

Salt may be imported from any Part of Europe to New-Brunswick, or may also be imported into Quebeck.

This Act continued and to be in Force, until January 1, 1763; and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

The throwing of Silk is not a Manufacture within the Intention of the Act of Navigation, 12 Car. II. Cap. 18. and no thrown Silk or the Growth or Production of Turkey, Persia, East-Indies, or China, or of any Country or Place, (except only such thrown Silk as shall be of the Growth, or Production of Italy, Sicily, or of the Kingdom of Naples, and which shall be imported in such Ships, and navigated in such Manner as in the Act is directed, and brought from some of the Ports of those Countries, whereof the same is of the Growth or Production, and which shall come directly by Sea, and not otherwise) shall be imported into England, &c. upon the forfeiture of all thrown Silk imported contrary to this Act.

No foreign wrought Silks or Velvets shall be imported into Great-Britain, the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, on Forfeiture; and the further Penalty of 100*l.* to be paid by the Importer, for each Piece or Remnant, with Costs of Suit.

This not to extend to East Indian Silks or Velvets; or to Silks, Crapes, or Tiffanies, the Manufacture of Italy.

Exportation of Raw Silk from Ireland incurs the Forfeiture of the Silk, together with that of the Vessel and Furniture.

The Treasurer, Comptroller, Surveyor, Clerk of the Acts, and Commissioners of the Navy, or one of them, on Oath of one Witness, that his Majesty's Stores, &c. are conveyed into any Ship, being at Anchor, and not ready to sail that Tide, within any of the Roads, Harbours, &c. in his Majesty's Dominions, may authorise any Persons by their Warrant (in which the Quantity and Quality of such Goods shall be specified) in the Day time to go on board such Ship, &c. and in Case of Resistance to break open the Hatches, &c. and search for such Goods, &c. and seize the same for his Majesty's Use, unless the said Officers and Commissioners shall find, upon hearing of the Matter, that they were unjustly seized, and thereupon restore them to the Party.

In Case the Master of any Ship shall bring into this Realm from Ireland, the Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey, or Sark, or any of the foreign Plantations, any Rogue, Vagabond, or Beggar, or any other Person likely to live by begging, being a Native of any of the said Islands, or Plantations, and the Person so brought over shall be apprehended wandering and begging, or otherwise misordering himself as aforesaid, such Master, &c. shall forfeit 5*l.* for every Rogue, &c. over and above such Money as shall be necessary to defray the Charges that any Constable shall be put to, by Means of apprehending and re-conveying the Person; and the Constable or other Officer of any Parish where any Person so brought over shall be found wandering and begging, or misordering himself, may cause him to be apprehended, and openly whipt, and after put on board any Ship, to be set on Shore in the Place from whence he was brought, paying for the Passage back of such Person such Rate as the Justices at their Quarter-Sessions shall appoint; and in Case such Constable, &c. shall upon Oath make appear before any Justice of Peace what Expence he hath been put to upon such Occasion, it shall be lawful for such Justice by Order to direct the Payment of the Money so expended, as also of the Penalty of 5*l.* and in Case such Master, &c. of the Ship shall neglect to pay the Monies upon Demand, it shall be lawful for such Justice, by Warrant, to levy the same by Distress, and Sale of the Ship, or any Goods within the same, while remaining within the Jurisdiction of such Justice; and if the Master of the Ship shall be gone out of the Jurisdiction, &c. the said Order of the Justice may be removed by Certiorari into the Queen's Bench, and being filed, the Judges are required to direct Process for arresting the Ship, and detaining the same, until the Monies mentioned in such Order, together with the Charges of such Process be satisfied, or otherwise to award Process for levying the Monies by capias, fieri facias, or eligit, against the Master or Owners of the Ship, as the Court shall think proper.

Ditto, S. 25. Provided that in Case such Master or Owners shall in the said Court shew any probable Ground of Grievance by the said Order, they may be admitted to traverse the same; giving Security in the Penalty of 50*l.* to answer the Costs of such Traverse, in Case it be determined against them.

Ditto, S. 26. All Masters of Ships bound for Ireland, the Isles of Man, Jersey, Guernsey, or Sicily, shall, upon Warrant to them directed by a Justice of Peace of the County, &c. where such Ship shall lie, take on board such Vagrants as shall be named in the Warrant, and convey them to such Place in Ireland, the Ile of Man, Jersey, Guernsey, or Sicily, as such Ship shall be bound to, or arrive at; and for the Charges thereof, the Constable, or the Person who serves him with the Warrant, shall pay him such rate as the Quarter Sessions shall appoint, and such Master shall on the Back of the Warrant sign a Receipt for the Money, and also for the Vagrants; which Warrant shall be produced to the Justice who signed the same, and upon his Allowance thereof, under his Hand, the Money shall be repaid by the County; and every Master of such Ship, neglecting to receive or transport such Vagrants, or to endorse such Receipt, shall forfeit 5*l.* to be levied by Distress, or Sale of the Ship, or any Goods within the same, by Warrant of any Justice of Peace for the same County, &c.

Confirmed by 13 Geo. II. p. 478 and 479.

4 and 5 Ann. C. 2. s. 6. Matters of Ships knowingly importing foreign cut Whale-Fins or Whale-Bone, shall forfeit 50*l.* &c.

If any Person or Persons whoſoever ſhall, from and after the paſſing this Act, ſect. 2. bring, deliver, ſend, receive, or take, or cauſe, or procure to be brought, delivered, ſent, received, or taken into any Ship, Veſſel, or Boat, any Rams, Sheep, or Lambs of any Sort or Deſcription whatſoever, of the Breed of the Kingdom of Great-Britain, or of the Iſles of Jerſey, Guernſey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, being alive, to be carried or conveyed out of the ſaid Kingdom, or any of the ſaid Iſles; the ſaid Rams, Sheep, and Lambs, and alſo the Ship, Veſſel, or Boat, on Board of which the ſame ſhall be taken, or received, ſhall become forfeited, and liable to be ſeized and ſecured, for the Benefit of any Perſon or Perſons ſeizing the ſame; and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons ſo offending, his, her, and their Aiders, Abettors, Procurers, and Comforters, knowing thereof, and who ſhall be thereof convicted, ſhall, for every Sheep or Lamb which ſhall be brought, delivered, ſent, received, or taken with any ſuch Intent as aforeſaid, into any Ship, Veſſel, or Boat, forfeit the Sum of Three Pounds, of lawful Money of Great-Britain, and ſhall alſo ſuffer ſolitary Imprifonment in the common Gaol or Houſe of Correction of the County, Riding, Diſtrict, or Stewartry wherein ſuch Offender or Offenders ſhall be reſpectively convicted, for the Space of three Months, without Bail, or Mainprize, and until ſuch Forfeiture ſhall be paid; but the Whole of the ſaid Imprifonment for Non-payment of the Forfeiture, not to exceed twelve Months. For a ſecond Offence, the Forfeiture to be five Pounds for every Sheep, with ſix Months Imprifonment, and two Years for Non-payment of the Forfeiture; but not to extend to carrying Sheep on board for the neceſſary Proviſion of the Maſter and Mariners, and Paſſengers of any Ship or Veſſel on her Voyage.

No live Wether Sheep to be ſhipped on board any Ship or Veſſel, for neceſſary ſect. 3. Food or Proviſion for the Maſter, and Mariners, or Paſſengers, without a Licence from the Collector or Comptroller of the Customs at the Port from whence they are ſhipped, ſpecifying the Number of Sheep ſo taken on board, and they muſt be put on Board in the Preſence of the proper Officers, appointed by the Custom-houſe to attend for that Purpoſe; under the Penalty of Twenty Shillings for every Sheep, and Forfeiture of the ſame.

Where there is no Officer at the Shipping Port, a Licence muſt be obtained ſect. 4. from the Officers at the neareſt Port.

Not to extend to Veſſels bound to, or from any Place between the Mull of ſect. 5. Canire and Cape Wrath, in Scotland.

Nor to the Removal of Sheep from the main Land to Iſlands within the Firths ſect. 6. 7. 8. of Scotland, where Eſtates conſiſt of both. Provided always that the Proprietors of ſuch Eſtates, or their Tenants ſhall give Bond to the King, under the Penalty of One Hundred Pounds, not to export ſuch Sheep and Lambs to foreign Countries, and ſhall take out a Licence for ſuch Removals, ſpecifying the Names and Situations of the Iſlands, to and from which any Sheep are removed, and the Names and Places of Abode of the Owners.

Perſons, who ſhall directly or indirectly carry, export, tranſport, or otherwiſe ſect. 9. convey, or cauſe or procure to be conveyed, out of the Kingdom of Great-Britain, or the Iſles of Jerſey, Guernſey, Alderney, Sark and Man, any Wool whatſoever of the Growth of the Kingdom, or of the Iſles aforeſaid, or any Woolfels, Mortlings, Shortlings, Yarn, or Worſted, made of Wool, &c. &c. &c. and alſo all and every Owner or Owners of any Ship, or Veſſel, and the Owners of any Horſe or other Beaſt of Burthen, Waggon, Cart, or Carriage, upon which any Sheep, Wool, or other Articles before enumerated, ſhall be exported, tranſported, carried, or conveyed, packed, or loaded, with an Intent to be exported, knowing thereof, and being actually aiding, aſſiſting, or conſenting thereto; and alſo every Maſter and Commander, and Mariner, of or in ſuch Ship or other Veſſel, wherein any ſuch Wool or other Articles aforeſaid, and which are hereby prohibited to be exported, ſhall be ſo exported, tranſported, carried, or conveyed, or laden or laid on Board as aforeſaid, with any ſuch Intent or Purpoſe, knowing thereof, and being actually aiding, aſſiſting, or conſenting thereunto; and alſo every Factor or Servant, or other Perſon whatſoever, and every Collector, Cuſtomer, Comptroller, Waiter, Searcher, Surveyor, or other Officer or Officers whomſoever, knowing thereof, and being actually aiding, aſſiſting assisting or consenting therunto, and who shall be thereof convicted, shall forfeit and pay for the first Offence, three Shillings for every Pound Weight of such Wool, or other the aforesaid enumerated Articles, or the Sum of Fifty Pounds, in the whole, at the Election of the Person or Persons who shall sue for the same; and shall also suffer solitary Imprisonment in the common Gaol, or House of Correction of the County, wherein such Offender or Offenders shall be convicted, for the Space of three Months, and until the Penalty shall be paid, the whole Imprisonment for Non-payment of the Penalty not to exceed twelve Months. For the second, or any subsequent Offence, the same Penalty to be incurred with six Months Imprisonment for the Offence, and two Years for the Non-payment of the Penalty. The Penalties and Forfeitures to be for the Benefit of the Persons suing for the same; and the Ship, Vessel, Boat, Cart, Waggon, Carriage, Horses, or Beasts, on which the said Articles are carried, or conveyed to be exported, shall be liable to be seized, and shall become forfeited, for the Benefit of the Person or Persons who shall seize the same.

Sec. 10. This Clause not to extend to prohibit the Exportation of Tobacco-pipe Clay to our Sugar Colonies in the West-Indies, under the Regulations of 17 Geo. III. continued by subsequent Acts.

Sec. 11. Wool intended to be sent Coast-wise if it is carried to any Sea Port, or other Place on the Sea Coast, or other Woollen Articles before enumerated, must first be entered with the proper Officer of the Customs, at the Place from which it is intended to be conveyed to any other Port or Place in the Kingdom, and a Certificate of such Entry shall accompany it; otherwise, if found within five Miles of the Sea Coast, it shall be seized and forfeited, together with the Waggon, Cart, &c. conveying the same.

Sec. 12, 13, and 14. The foregoing Clause not to extend to Wool carrying from the Place of Shearing to the Owner's House, though within five Miles of the Sea, provided the Number of Fleeces, and the Place where it is to be housed, be certified to an Officer of the Customs, at the Port nearest to the Place where it is housed; and that it be not removed from thence, or otherwise disposed of, without Notice given in Writing, signed by the Owner, to the Officer or Officers of the Customs, of the Intention to remove, or otherwise dispose of the same. If there be no Port within five Miles of the Dwelling House of the Owner of the Wool, the Certificate, Notice, &c. may be given to a Justice of the Peace, or any Officer of his Majesty's Revenue nearest at Hand. Provided also, that in Case any Sheep shall be shorn between the first Day of March, and the first of July in any Year, for the sole Purpose of sending them to Market, it shall not be necessary for the Owner to certify the Quantity and Quality of the said Wool so shorn, and where the same is housed, until the General Shearing for that Season of the whole of the Flock or Flocks of Sheep belonging to him is finished for that Season, when he shall give an Account of the Quantity of Wool, and the Number of Fleeces shorn from the whole.

Sec. 15. It shall be lawful for any Person or Persons authorized and qualified as is herein after mentioned, to seize, take, and challenge to and for his own Use and Benefit, all such Wool, Woolfels, Mortlings, Shortlings, and other the aforesaid Worsted and Woollen Articles, Fuller's Earth, Pulling-Clay, and Tobacco-Pipe Clay; as he, or they shall happen to see, know, or discover, to be brought, carried, or laid on shore, at or near the Sea, or any navigable River, to the Intent or Purpose of being exported or conveyed out of the said Kingdom of Great-Britain, or out of the Isles aforesaid, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of this Act; and the Offender or Offenders therein shall be subject and liable to the like Forfeiture, Pains, and Penalties, as Persons by this Act are subject to for exporting, transporting, or shipping of Wool, or the other Commodities before enumerated.

Sec. 16, 17, 18. Wool for the only Use and Behalf of the Inhabitants of the Isles of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark may be exported from the Port of Southampton only, under the following Regulations; Such Wool to be shipped on board Ships or Vessels the Owners whereof are at the Time, actual Inhabitants of the said Isles. And the Person or Persons shipping the same shall deliver to the proper Officers of the Customs at the Port of Southampton, a writing under under the Hand and Seal of the Governor or Deputy-Governor of the said Isles respectively, specifying the Quantity of Tods of Wool to be exported; that the said Wool is to be used and manufactured in one of the said Isles, or in some of the Members or Parts of the same; and that the Party named therein is properly authorized and appointed to export, or cause the said Wool to be exported, and has given Bond to the King for the landing of the same in manner aforesaid.

The Quantity to be exported annually from the said Port of Southampton to the said Isles, in any one Year, accounting from the first Day of January last past, to the first Day of January in every succeeding Year, shall not exceed the Quantity hereunder specified, that is to say, unto the Isle of Jersey four thousand Tods of uncombed Wool, and no more; and to the Isle of Guernsey two thousand Tods; and to the Isle of Alderney four hundred Tods, and to the Isle of Sark two hundred Tods; each Tod of the said uncombed Wool, not exceeding Thirty two Pounds in Weight. And the Governors or their Deputies, (for whom they shall answer) shall not sign any Writing authorizing the Exportation to the said Isles of any more than the Quantities specified as above. Also it is enacted that if any Custom-House Officer at the Port of Southampton shall permit more than the allowed Quantities to be shipped for the said Isles, he shall forfeit 50*l.* and be discharged from his Office. And if the Governor or Deputy-Governor of any of the said Isles shall give, grant, or make out any Licence or Licences for exporting more than the aforesaid Quantities, he or they shall forfeit 20*l.* for every Tod of Wool, so licenced to be exported, over and above the Proportions of Wool in and by this Act, or the true Meaning thereof, limited or appointed. One Moiety of the aforesaid Forfeitures to be for the Use of his Majesty; and the other Moiety for the Benefit of the Person or Persons suing for the same. One Shilling, and no more shall be paid to the Clerks, Officers, or Servants of the Governors for signing, sealing, and entering each Licence into Books to be kept for that Purpose.

No Wool nor any of the Woollen Articles before enumerated to be shipped <sup>Sec. 19.</sup> but in Ships, Vessels, or Boats belonging to natural-born Subjects resident in Great-Britain. Provided always, that this Act shall not extend to any Lamb-Skins ready dressed and prepared, fit and useful for Fur, or Linings.

Repeals so much of the Act of 9 and 10 William III. c. 40, as prohibits <sup>Sec. 20.</sup> Persons residing within fifteen Miles of the Sea, in the Counties of Kent and Suffex, from selling their Wool to other Persons residing at the same distance from the Sea, under the Penalty of Forfeiture; and enacts the free Sale of the same within the said Distances, upon giving the Notices of Housing and Removal, according to the true Intent and Meaning of Sect. 12 of this Act.

Wool laid up, or lodged within ten Miles of the Sea, within the aforesaid <sup>Sec. 21, 22.</sup> Counties, may be carried to any Town, Field, or Place, where a regular and established Fair shall be held for the Sale of Wool. Provided always that a Permit or Permits shall be taken out, from the proper Offices, previous to the Removal of such Wool, specifying the Quantity to be removed. The Purchasers of the Wool, sold at such Fairs, shall produce a Permit of the Quantities purchased, to the proper Officers attending the Fair, who shall grant a fresh Permit for the Removal of the same from the said Fair. And the Wool, remaining unsold, shall be returned to the House or Place from whence it was taken; and shall become subject and liable to the same Rules, Restrictions, and Laws, as it would have been, in Case it had never been moved, or taken to any Fair as aforesaid. Persons counterfeiting Certificates, Licences, or Permits, to forfeit Twenty Pounds, to any Person suing for the same.

Wool, or any of the before specified Woollen or Worsted Articles, removed <sup>Sec. 25, 26.</sup> or carried towards the Sea, within five Miles of the Coast, upon any Pretence whatever, between Sun-setting and Sun-rising, shall be forfeited; and may be seized, together with the Hories, Waggon, Cart or Carriage, for the Benefit of the Person or Persons seizing the same. And the Driver or Drivers, upon Conviction, shall be committed, for one Month, to the House of Correction. But this Clause not to extend to the Removal of Wool shorn that Day, from the shearing Place to the Dwelling or Store-house of the Farmer or Grower, although such Removal shall be towards the Sea and within five Miles of the Coast thereof.

Sec. 27. Worsted Yarn not exceeding 14 lb. prepared for knitting, may be carried to retail Shops, provided it is directed to the Retailer to whom it is carried, and marked according to the Directions of the Act or Acts of Parliament requiring the marking thereof.

Sec. 28, 29. No Wool, Mortlings, Shortlings, Wool-Flocks, Worsted Bay, or Woollen
30, 31. Yarn, shall be packed up in any other Package otherwise than Packs or Truffles of Leather or Canvas, commonly called Pack Cloths, or in Linen or Woollen; and all such Packs or Truffles of Leather, Canvas, Linen, or Woollen, shall be stamped or marked on the Outside thereof with the Word Wool, in large Characters, not less than three Inches in Length; on Forfeiture, for Neglect of the same, of all such Wool, or other the aforesaid Articles, to the Person or Persons seizing the same; and also upon Forfeiture, by the Person or Persons to whom such Wool or other aforesaid Articles shall belong, of any Sum or Sums of Money, not exceeding one Shilling for every Pound Weight of such Wool, or other the aforesaid Articles so seized, to the Person or Persons seizing the same, as the Court or Justices before whom such Wool, or other the aforesaid Articles shall be condemned, shall direct: But this Clause not to extend to Worsted Yarn packed in Paper, according to the Regulations of Sett. 27. Justices are authorized to order any Wool, &c. seized for not being stamped or marked, to be returned to the Owner or Owners; but they shall not in any Case, mitigate the Penalty below sixpence for every Pound Weight.

Wool or other the aforesaid Woollen or Worsted Articles, not being packed according to the Regulations of this Act, shall be forfeited, together with a Penalty of three Shillings for every Pound Weight. And Persons packing Wool, &c. contrary to this Act, or assisting therein, shall be subject and liable to all the Penalties incurred by Exporters of Wool, and the other Articles prohibited to be exported. But Persons assisting in such illegal Package, giving Information of the Master-Packers, or Master-Packers discovering their Employers, shall be entitled to the Wool, &c. so seized and condemned; and the Employers alone shall be liable to the Penalties on Exporters of Wool.

Sec. 32, 33. And whereas great Quantities of Wool are frequently lying at the publick Wharfs in different Ports of Great-Britain, which Wool being under no Control of the Commissioners of the Customs, or their Officers, evil disposed Persons may, in the Night-time, put the same on board Vessels ready for sailing to foreign Parts; and also in many Cases, where Wool is regularly entered to be put on board Vessels bound Coastways, it is easy to put on board such Vessels in the Night-time, a larger Number of Packs of Wool than have been duly entered for that Purpose, and which, by being concealed under such Packs as have been duly entered, cannot easily be discovered, and which Wool may, after the said Ships have proceeded some Way on their intended Voyages, be put on board other Vessels bound to foreign Parts; for Remedy thereof, it is enacted, that every Person or Persons who shall keep any Wharf for the Reception of Wool, in or at any Port of Great-Britain, shall enter into a Bond to the Use of the King's Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, under the Penalty of Two Hundred Pounds, not to ship any Wool illegally; and to keep a regular Entry and Account of the Quantity of Bags or Cloths of Wool by them received and delivered; with the Time when, and the Names and Residence of the Persons from whom such Wool was so received; and to whom such Wool was so delivered, with the Marks and Numbers upon the Sheets, and the Weight of such Wool; a Copy of which Account shall be delivered to the principal Officers of the Customs, at the Port at which such Wharfingers shall reside, at the End of every six Months, and oftener, if the same shall be required by such Officers. And if any Wharfinger shall refuse to enter into such Bond, within six Months after the passing of this Act, or hereafter within one Month of any Person or Persons beginning to keep any such Wharf, they shall forfeit and pay the Sum of Two Hundred Pounds, to the Person or Persons who shall sue for the same; and in Case such Wharfinger or Wharfingers shall refuse to keep and deliver the Accounts above required to be kept and delivered, or shall be convicted of keeping or delivering a false Account, every such Wharfinger shall, for every such Offence, forfeit and pay the Sum of Fifty Pounds, to be paid to the Person or Persons suing for the same; and the Informers against Wharfingers shipping Wool illegally shall, upon their Conviction, be intitled to Forty Pounds, for every Offender. Wharfingers shall give an account to the proper Officer, of any Wool received by land Carriage, or inland Navigation, within seven Days after the Receipt thereof, under a Penalty of Ten Pounds for every Neglect.

And the better to prevent any fraudulent Exportation of Wool, or any of the before mentioned Woolen or Worsted Articles prohibited by this Act, to be exported, under the Pretence of carrying the same Coastwise in the Kingdom of Great-Britain; no Wool nor any of the said Articles shall be put on board any Ship, Vessel, or Boat, to be carried Coastwise, or from one Port to another, unless Notice be first given to the Commissioners or chief Managers of the Customs, or to the Customer, or Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, at the Port from which the same is intended to be sent, of the Quantity, Quality, and Package, together with the Marks, Numbers, and Weight thereof, with the Name of the Ship, and Master or Commander, on board of which such Goods are to be laden, together with the Name or Names of the Owner or Owners of the said Goods, and the Place of his or their Abode or Habitation, and the Place and Port at which the same are intended to be landed, and the Name of the Person or Persons to whom the same are consigned; and also unless a Bond be first entered into to the Use of the King's Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, by two good and sufficient Persons, in treble the Value of the said Goods so intended to be carried Coastwise, that the same shall (the Danger of the Seas excepted) be landed accordingly which said Bond shall be executed by the Owner or Owners of the said Goods, or some Person or Persons by him, her, or them, appointed to execute the same, and which Execution shall be deemed to be the Act of such Owner or Owners, or Shipper or Shippers thereof; which said Shipper or Shippers, if acting as Agent, or having sold such Goods to any Person or Persons, shall and may sue for and recover, of or from the Proprietor or Proprietors of the Goods so shipped, all such Sum and Sums of Money as such Shipper or Shippers shall or may pay, expend, or be put unto, without their wilful Default or Negligence, for or by Reason of his, her, or their entering into such Bond or Bonds; and in Case any such Bond or Bonds shall be so entered into for any Wool, or any other the Articles aforesaid, being the Property of different Persons, then such Owner or Owners, or Person or Persons for whose account such Bond was so entered into, shall be accountable for his, her, or their Share of the Money so expended, in Proportion to the Amount of such Goods so shipped; and also unless a Licence be first taken out under the Hands of the Commissioners or chief Managers of the Customs for the Time being, or any three of them, or from the Customer, or Collector and Comptroller of the Customs where any such Bond was given, for the lading, carrying, and landing thereof, as aforesaid, which Licence they are hereby required to grant without any Fee or Reward, or any other Charge, to the Person demanding the same. And if any Wool, &c. be not shipped to be carried Coastwise according to the Directions of this Act, it shall be forfeited, together with the Ship, Vessel or Boat, and all the Guns, Ammunition, Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture belonging thereunto.

Wool, the Produce of any of the Islands of Scotland, may be carried from one Part to another of the Lechs, or from the Islands, to the main Land of Scotland; and shall not be subject to the Restrictions and Regulations contained in the foregoing Sections of this Act, respecting the carrying of Wool Coastwise. Provided always that this Exemption shall not authorise the carrying such Wool, and other the aforesaid recited Articles to open Sea, but under such Restrictions and Regulations as are herein for that Purpose mentioned and expressed. The Customer, or Collector and Comptroller of his Majesty's Customs at the Port where any Wool, &c. is shipped to be carried Coastwise, shall, immediately on the Clearance of such Ship at such Port, transmit a Notice in Writing, setting forth the Quantity, Quality, and Package of such Wool, &c. together with the Marks and Numbers thereof, the Name of the Ship, and of the Master or Commander thereof, to the Customer, or Collector and Comptroller of the Customs at the Port to which such Wool, &c. are intended to be conveyed; under the Penalty of ten Pounds, to be paid by the Officer neglecting to transmit such Notice, to the Person who shall inform against such Officer. And the Bonds herein-before directed to be given, on shipping the said Wool and other Articles aforesaid, shall not be discharged until a Certificate under the Hand and Seal of the Customer, or Collector and Comptroller of the Port or Place in Great-Britain where the same was landed, shall be produced to and left with the Person or Persons in whose Possession such Bond shall be kept at the Custom house of the Port from whence the said Wool and other Articles were shipped. And the proper Officer at the Port of landing is to transmit such Certificate within seven Days, after the landing thereof, to the proper Officer at the Port from whence they were shipped, under the Penalty of ten Pounds, to be paid by the Officer neglecting to transmit the same, to the Person or Persons informing against him. The Collector or Comptroller of the Customs at the Port, where such Wool &c. is duly landed, shall grant and deliver another Certificate to the Master or Commander of the Ship from which the same shall be landed. If Bonds are not discharged within six Months, they shall be sent to the Commissioners of the Customs; and if Wool, &c. shipped at any Port, shall not be landed at the Place to which it is consigned within a reasonable Time, Notice thereof shall be transmitted to the Officers of the Customs at the Port where it was shipped, who shall make proper Enquiries without Delay, in what Manner the said Wool or other Articles have been disposed of.

Sect. 37, 38, 39, 40. No Wool, or any other the said herein before enumerated Articles, Fullers Earth, Fulling Clay, or Tobacco-pipe Clay, shall be shipped on board any Ship or Vessel bound to Parts beyond the Seas, on any Pretence whatsoever; under the Penalty of Forfeiture, for the Benefit of the Person or Persons who shall inform thereof, of all such Goods, and also of such Ship, Vessel, Bottom or Boat, on which such Goods shall be so laden, or put on board, and all the Guns, Ammunition, Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture thereunto belonging. And, moreover, the Master or Commander of such Ship or Vessel, &c. shall, in such Case, be deemed the Exporter thereof, and shall be subject and liable to the Pains and Penalties in such Case made and provided; unless such Master or Commander shall and do, immediately upon his being apprehended, discover and make known the Person or Persons who actually shipped such Goods, and enter into a Recognizance with two sufficient Sureties, before some Justice of the Peace for the County, City, Borough, or Place, in or at which such last mentioned Goods shall be discovered, to prosecute and give Evidence against such Shipper, so as he may be convicted thereof.

Masters of Vessels not regularly clearing out for Foreign Ports, as well as all Persons on board, privy to any illicit Transaction against this Act, shall be liable to all the Pains and Penalties of Exporters of Wool, &c. But any Person on board, except the Master, immediately on his, or her being apprehended giving Information thereof, so as the Master may be convicted, shall be intitled to a Reward of Forty Pounds, and shall not be liable to the Pains and Penalties he or she would otherwise have incurred.

Masters of Ships, &c. and Drivers of Carts, &c. shall be exempt from Punishment, or Forfeiture of their Vessels, Carts and Horses, if it is proved, from the Smallness of the Quantity that they were not privy to Wool, &c. being on board, or in such Carriages, &c. But the Wool, &c. so found on board, or laden on such Carriages, or Beasts of Burthen, shall be forfeited to the Person or Persons who shall find, discover, and seize the same.

Sect. 41. The Officers of the Customs, at all the Ports in Great-Britain, shall keep a Register of all Wool, &c. sent Coastwise, and transmit a Copy thereof Half-yearly to the Commissioners of the Customs at London; where the Register may be inspected by any Person or Persons whomsoever, on paying one Shilling, and Copies shall be transmitted annually to all the Custom-houses in the Kingdom, where they may be examined for the same Fee.

If Wool shipped to be carried Coastwise, be unpacked on board, the Master Sec. 42. of the Vessel shall forfeit Forty Shillings for every Bag so unpacked, unless he makes Oath before a Justice of Peace, upon his Arrival at the delivering Port, that it was done from absolute Necessity.

Wool to be carried Coastwise shall be shipped and landed in the Presence of an Sec. 43, 44. Officer at the respective Ports, and at lawful Quays; under the Penalty of Forfeiture of the Wool, and Payment of three Shillings for every Pound Weight: Cocquets and Certificates for carrying the said Wool, &c. Coastwise, to be written on Paper, and not Parchment, and signed by three or more of the chief Officers of the Ports of shipping and landing, and the exact Weight of the Wool (weighed in their Presence) shall be expressed therein, together with the Marks, Numbers, &c.

Persons insuring the Conveyance of Sheep, Wool, or other the before enumerated Sec. 45, 46, 47, 48. Articles, to foreign Parts, are liable to the same Penalties as the Exporters. Persons paying for such Insurances are liable to the like Penalties, and to forfeit the Articles insured, to the Person or Persons who shall sue for the same. Any Person concerned in such Insurance, upon giving Information to the Commissioners of the Customs, shall be acquitted of the Offence, and shall have the Sheep, Wool, &c. so insured, for their own Use and Benefit. Also, if the Informant be insured, he shall receive back his Insurance Money or Premium, provided he is the first Discoverer, and gives the Information within the Space of six Months. And the Policies of such Insurances are declared to be null and void.

It shall be lawful for the Master, or Commander, or any other commissioned Sec. 49, 50. or deputed Officer of any of his Majesty's Ships or Sloops, in any Port, Creek, or Road, or in the open Seas; within the Limits of the Station which shall be assigned to any such Ships or Sloops, and he is hereby required to enter and search, or cause to be entered and searched, any Ship, Vessel or Boat; and if upon such Search any Sheep, Wool, or any other of the said Articles hereby prohibited to be exported, shall be found therein, and the Master or Commander of such Ship, Vessel or Boat, shall not immediately produce a lawful Cocquet or Warrant, licensing such Articles to be carried Coastwise, or to the aforesaid Isles, or some of them, such Commander is hereby directed to take and seize such Ship, Vessel or Boat, and to carry the same, together with the Crew and Cargo thereof into some Port in Great-Britain, and there deliver the same into the Custody of the Collector and Comptroller of such Port.

And all the Wool, and other the said Articles, so found and seized, shall be lodged in the King's Warehouse in such Port, into which the same shall be brought, and condemned according to Law, and being so condemned shall be publicly exposed to Sale, after sixty Days publick Notice being given in writing at the Custom-house of the said Port, and on the Royal Exchange of London, by Inch of Candle, to the last and best Bidder; and such Ships, Vessels or Boats, that shall be so seized, and which are hereby declared to be forfeited, and which shall be condemned as aforesaid, shall, together with all their Guns, Tackle, Furniture and Apparel, be exposed to Sale in like Manner; and the Produce of the said Sales, after deducting the Expences of the Prosecution and Condemnation, shall be divided in Manner following; that is to say, one third Part thereof to the Commander or Commanders, one third to the Officers of the Ship or Ships, Sloop or Sloops, that took the same, and the remaining third Part to the Mariners belonging to such Ships, &c. to be equally divided and paid amongst the said Mariners by the Collectors of the said Port, or such Person or Persons as shall be authorized to pay the same; and if such Seizure shall be made upon the Information of any Person or Persons, not being a Mariner on board such Ships or Sloops, so appointed to cruise and search, such Informer or Informers shall not only be indemnified from the Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures, to which Exporters of the aforesaid prohibited Articles, their Aiders and Abettors, are liable, but shall also receive one third of the Produce of such Sales; and the Residue thereof shall be divided and distributed in Manner as is before directed.

- sect. 51. Every Commander of such Ship or Sloop, neglecting his Duty by this Act required, shall lose and forfeit all Pay and Wages due to him, and suffer six Months Imprisonment; and be for ever incapable of serving his Majesty in any Office in the Navy, Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties; and any Person or Persons giving Information against any such Commander for neglecting his Duty, shall, on the Conviction of such Offender, be entitled to receive the Sum of Forty Pounds, to be paid to such Informer or Informers immediately after such Conviction, by the Commissioners of the Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, or other of his Majesty's Revenue Officers.
- sect. 52, 53. In Order to prevent collusive Seizures and Agreements and fraudulent Practices, it shall not be lawful for any Person or Persons, (except an Officer of his Majesty's Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties) who shall have Cause to suspect that any Sheep, Wool, or any of the before enumerated Articles, is or are carrying or conveying contrary to the Directions and true Intent and Meaning of this Act, to examine or seize such Sheep, Wool, &c. other than together and in Company with a Constable, or other Officer of the Peace, who are hereby required, on Application being made to him or them, immediately to attend the Person or Persons applying for such Assistance. And in Case any such Constable or other Peace-Officer, upon Application made to him for that Purpose, shall neglect or refuse to attend any Person or Persons making such Application, every such Constable or other Peace-Officer, upon Conviction thereof, shall forfeit and pay the Sum of Twenty Pounds, one Moiety thereof shall go to the Person or Persons suing for the same, and the other to the Poor of the Parish or Place where the Offence shall have been committed.
- sect. 54. And to prevent any Dispute relating to the Authority of any Person or Persons, acting as an Officer or Officers of the Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, in this Kingdom, for putting in Execution this Act; be it further enacted, that every Person who, by Deputation, Commission, or other Instrument, under the Hands and Seals of the Commissioners of the Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, in this Kingdom, or the Isles aforesaid respectively, shall be appointed to act as an Officer or Servant under them, for putting this Act in Execution, shall be esteemed an Officer of the Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties respectively, to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever.
- sect. 55. If any Officer of the Revenue, or any other Person or Persons, shall, directly or indirectly, make any collusive Seizure, or Information of any of the aforesaid Articles hereby prohibited from being exported; or any fraudulent or collusive Agreement whatsoever, whereby the Owner or Claimer thereof, their Agents or Servants, or any Offender or Offenders against this Act, may avoid the Forfeitures, Penalties, and Punishments, or any Part thereof incurred or inflicted by this Act; he, she, and they shall, upon Conviction, be subject to the like Penalties as are herein-before directed to be incurred by the Exporter of Wool, &c. And Persons not concerned in such collusive Seizures or Agreements, who shall first make a discovery thereof to the Commissioners of the Customs, shall be entitled to the Benefit arising from the Proceedings had thereon. And any Person actually concerned in such collusive Seizures or Agreements, who shall first discover his Offence to the Commissioners of the Customs, within three Months after the said Offence shall have been committed, and so as one or more of his Accomplices therein be convicted thereof, shall not only be acquitted and discharged thereof, but shall, as a further Encouragement, have and receive the Sum of Forty Pounds to be paid by the Commissioners of the Customs on the Conviction of such Offender or Offenders; provided always that such Informer or Informers be not an Officer of his Majesty's Revenue, or Owner of the Goods.
- sect. 56, 57. Persons opposing any Person or Persons putting this Act in Execution, and obstructing, molesting, wounding or beating them, or going disguised and armed with offensive Arms or Weapons, and attempting to hinder the Seizure of Sheep, Wool, &c. carrying towards the Coasts, or actually put on board any Ship, Vessel, or Boat, to be exported contrary to the Intent and true Meaning of this Act; or who shall rescue, or attempt to rescue, Sheep, Wool, &c. which shall have been seized according to the Directions of this Act, by Night or by Day, by Land or by Water, shall, on Conviction of any such Offences, be sentenced by the Court before whom they shall be tried, to be transported to some Place beyond the Seas, for such Term or Terms as such Court shall think fit, not exceeding Seven Years; and if any such Offender or Offenders shall return into Great-Britain before the Expiration of the Term for which they were transported, upon Conviction thereof, they shall suffer Death as Felons.

Persons offering, or promising Bribes to Custom-house Officers, or other Persons, to connive at, or permit the Exportation or the Concealment of any Sheep, Wool, &c. or the Removal thereof, contrary to the Directions of this Act, shall forfeit and pay the Sum of Three Hundred Pounds, to be recovered and applied to the Use of him, her, or them, who shall inform or sue for the same, by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information in any of his Majesty's Courts of Record, at Westminster. Secd. 57, 58.

Officers of the Customs, Excise, and Salt Duties, neglecting the Duty by this Act required, or compounding for any Ship, Vessel, or Boat, which are by this Act directed to be forfeited, shall be deemed Aiders and Abettors in the Exportation of Sheep, Wool, &c. and shall suffer the Punishment herein enacted against the Exporters thereof.

Bonds taken, or to be taken, in Pursuance of this Act, shall not be chargeable with any of the Duties upon stamped Vellum, Parchment, or Paper; any Law or Statute made, or to be made, to the contrary notwithstanding. Secd. 59.

In all Prosecutions for Offences committed against this Act, the Proof that the Sheep, Wool, &c. are not of the Breed, Growth, and Produce of this Kingdom, shall lie upon the Defendant or Defendants. Secd. 60, 61, 62, 63, & 64.

Prosecutions upon this, or upon the said recited Acts of 9 and 10 of William III. may be commenced in any of his Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster; or in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; or in any Court of Oyer and Terminer, Great-Session, or Gaol-Delivery; or at the Quarter-Session of the Peace; or before any two Justices of the Peace for any County, City, or Place, in the Kingdom, in a summary Way, at the Election of the Seizer or Informer.

But no Prosecution shall be had, commenced, or proceeded upon, before any two Justices of the Peace, in a summary Way, where the Seizure, Penalty, or Forfeiture, then claimed, shall exceed in the whole the Sum of Two Hundred Pounds.

Justices assembled at any Quarter-Session, and also such aforesaid two Justices of the Peace, are empowered to order all such Ships, Vessels, Goods, Carriages, and Cattle, as shall be by them declared to be forfeited, and which shall have been seized by Virtue of this, or the said recited Acts, to be publickly sold to the highest Bidder; and shall by their Warrant or Order levy the Penalties and Forfeitures incurred by any Offender or Offenders against this Act, by Distress and Sale of the Goods and Chattels of such Offender or Offenders.

One clear Moiety of the Seizures, Penalties, and Forfeitures (except the Penalties of the Bonds) by this Act directed to be inflicted upon Offenders against the same (except such as are by this Act otherwise directed and applied) shall, when recovered, be paid and applied to such Person or Persons who shall give such Information to any Officer of his Majesty's Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, as may be the Means of recovering the same; and after deducting the Expences of recovering such Penalties, the Remainder of the other Moiety shall be paid to the Officer or Officers assisting in making any such Seizures; but in Case any Officer or Officers of his Majesty's Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, shall make any of the Seizures herein-before directed, without Information, then after deducting the Expences of Recovery, the Remainder of such Produce shall be paid to the Officer or Officers seizing the same.

It shall and may be lawful for all Officers of his Majesty's Customs, &c. Constables and other Officers of the Peace; and all Persons acting in their, or any of their Aid and Assistance, to stop, arrest, and detain all and every the Person or Persons who shall be found actually exporting, or attempting to export any Sheep, Wool, &c. or who shall be aiding, abetting, or assisting in the exporting, or attempting to export the same; and him, her, and them, to carry and convey before one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, near to the Place where Secd. 65, 66.

the Offence shall be committed; and the Justice or Justices, if he, or they see Cause, shall commit the Person or Persons so brought before him or them, to the County Gaol or House of Correction, until the next General Quarter-Sessions of the Peace, then to be tried and dealt with as by this Act is directed.

Persons, conveying Offenders so arrested before Justices of the Peace, shall enter into Recognizances, in the Sum of Forty Pounds to appear, and prosecute them at the next Quarter-Sessions.

Sect. 67, 68. In Case the Goods and Chattels of Offenders are not sufficient to pay the Penalties incurred, Justices of the Peace may commit such Offenders to the Common Gaol, or House of Correction of the County or Place where the Offence was committed, for three Months, unless the whole of the Penalty shall be sooner paid.

But if an Offender before his Commitment to Prison can find two sufficient Sureties for the Payment of the Penalty, he shall be admitted to Bail; and in Case of Non-payment at the Time stipulated, the Offender and his Sureties, shall, and may be lawfully committed to the common Gaol, for the same Term of three Months, or till the Penalty and Costs be paid.

Sect. 69, 70, 71. Appeals may be made from the Decisions of any Justice or Justices of the Peace, to the Quarter-Sessions, if the Offender gives Notice in Writing to the Informer of such Appeal, and enters himself with two sufficient Sureties into Recognizances to appear and prosecute such Appeal, and to abide by the Decision of such Court; and in Case the Judgement, Determination, or Conviction so appealed against, shall be affirmed, he shall pay double Costs, to be ascertained by Order of the same Court. Upon every Information to be made under this Act, upon Oath, Justices of the Peace are empowered to summon and examine Witnesses, who are hereby required to attend and give Evidence accordingly.

Sect. 74, 75. All Actions and Informations, which shall be commenced in Virtue of this Act in any of his Majesty's Courts of Record, shall be tried by a Jury of good and lawful Freeholders, to be summoned out of any other County than that wherein the Fact shall have been committed.

All Prosecutions for Offence against this Act to be commenced within the Space of three Years next ensuing the Offence committed.

Sect. 78. The first three Persons who have actually been concerned in Exporting of Sheep, Wool, or any of the Articles before recited, who, after their Return into the Kingdom of Great-Britain, or within three Months after their Knowledge thereof, shall give Information to any Justice of the Peace, whereby the Punishment and Penalties of this Act may be inflicted or recovered, shall be exempt from the Penalties and Punishments they had incurred by aiding and abetting such Exportations; provided always, that the Parties making such Discovery are not Owners of the Sheep, Wool, or other Articles that have been exported. Owners of Ships or Vessels, and the Masters, Commanders, or Mariners, who have been aiding or assisting in loading any Ship, Vessel, or Boat, knowing of such Exportation, who upon their Return shall give the first Information thereof to the Barons of the Exchequer, or to the head Officer of any Port where they shall first arrive, or to any Justice or Justices of the Peace, upon Oath; and shall further enter into Recognizances in the Sum of Forty Pounds each, with two sufficient Sureties, personally to appear and give Evidence of the same; then such Owners, Masters, Commanders, and Mariners shall not be liable to the Penalties or Forfeitures in this Act; but shall be, and are hereby enabled to recover and receive such Benefit and Advantage as is appointed to be received and allowed by this Act, on Conviction of such Offenders.

Sect. 79. And whereas an Act of Parliament was passed in the Twenty-third Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth; "For the winding of Wool," whereby it was enacted; that "from thenceforth no Manner of Person or Persons do wind, or cause to be wound, any Fleece of Wool being not sufficiently rived or washed; nor wind, nor cause to be wound, within any Fleece, Clay, Lead, Stone, Sand, Tails, deceitful Locks, Cots, Coils, Comber, Lamb's Wool, or any other Thing, whereby the Fleece might be made more weighty, to the Deceit and Loss of the Buyer, upon Pain, the Seller of any such deceitful Wools to forfeit for every such Fleece, Six-pence, the one Moiety, to the King, the other to the Finder

" Finder and Prover of such Deceit." And it was provided in and by the said Act, that " the same Act concerning rivering and washing of any Wool, should not in any wise extend to any Shire or Shires, the Inhabitants whereof had not customably used before that Time, to river or wash their Sheep afore they were thorn, nor should in any wise be hurtful or prejudicial to any Person or Persons that had used customably to sell their Wool by Tale or Number of the Fleeces, and not by Weight; any Thing in the said Act to the contrary notwithstanding." Which said Statute was made perpetual in and by another Act of Parliament, passed in the Thirtieth Year of Queen Elizabeth, intituled, "An Act for reviving and Continuance of certain Statutes"; and whereas the said laws have not now the good Effects thereby proposed and intended, by Reason of the said Penalty being so small, and one Moiety thereof being directed to be paid to the King, and the great Expence attending the recovery of the same; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing this Act, every Person and Persons offending against the said last-mentioned Acts, shall, in Lieu of every Six-pence, which by the said Acts, or either of them, might be recovered, forfeit and pay the Sum of two Shillings, the whole whereof shall be paid to the Finder or Prover of the above-mentioned Deceits; and the Offences against the said Acts, or either of them, from henceforth shall and may be proceeded upon, heard, and determined by and before any one Justice of the Peace, residing at or near the Place where such Offence or Offences shall be committed, in a summary Way; and such said Justice of the Peace shall be, and he is hereby empowered to cause the respective Person or Persons, against whom any such Information shall be laid, to be summoned at a certain Time and Place to be fixed by such Justice, and he is hereby authorized, empowered, and required, upon the Appearance or Default of such Person or Persons, to examine into, and give Judgment in the Premises.

Justices are empowered to discharge ill founded Complaints, if it appears to their satisfaction, that no Fraud was intended; but that the Clay, Sand, or Earth, found on the Fleeces, became mixed or connected with the same, by Reason of the necessary pasturing, folding, or keeping of the Sheep, subsequent to the rivering or washing of them. The Penalties incurred for, or in Respect of, the false winding of Wool, or the selling or disposing thereof, if not paid within three Days after Conviction, shall be levied by Distress, by Warrants under the Hands and Seals of the Justices. Sect. 80. 81. and 82.

Persons complained of for selling Wool, deceitfully wound, may, if it was done without their Privy, require the Appearance of the Person or Persons who wound the same, before the Justices, who shall determine, with whom the Offence lies, and act accordingly.

Persons, thinking themselves aggrieved by the Decision of any Justice of the Peace, may appeal to the next Quarter-Sessions of the Peace. But no Conviction shall be set aside for Want of Form, or through the mistating of any Fact, Circumstance, or other Matter whatsoever; provided the material Facts alledged in such Conviction, or Judgment, and upon which the same shall be grounded, be proved to the Satisfaction of the Court. Sect. 83. 84.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the Twenty-seventh Year of King Edward the Third, intituled, "The Officers of the Staple and Merchants repairing to it, shall be sworn to maintain the Staple and the Laws and Customs of it," it was ordained, that a certain Number of Winders of Wool, and other Officers therein mentioned, be sufficiently ordained for the Place where the Staple is, and they and the Correctors, and all Manner of Officers of the Staple, besides the Constables, shall be sworn before the Mayor of the Staple, that they lawfully shall execute their Office, without Fraud or Deceit: And whereas all Winders, now to be sworn, do repair to the Mayor of the Staple at Westminster, for the Purpose of being so sworn, whereby the Persons so desirous of being sworn are subjected to great Expence and Inconvenience; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the Justices of the Peace, who shall hereafter be assembled at any General Quarter-Sessions of the Peace, within the Kingdom of Great-Britain, or any Adjournment thereof, and they are hereby empowered and required to administer to every such Person as shall be desirous of becoming a Sworn Winder of Wool, and and shall produce a Certificate under the Hands of any two Growers of Wool, testifying to the Satisfaction of such Justices, that such Person is properly qualified to become a Sworn Winder of Wool, an Oath to the following Purport and Effect; that is to say,

I A. B. do swear that I will truly and justly, without Deceit, wind and fold all and singular the Wool which I shall take upon me to wind and fold, without leaving or putting any Clay, Lead, Stones, Sand, Tails, deceitful Locks, Lamb's Wool, or any other Thing, whereby the Fleece may be made more weighty, to the Deceit and Loss of the Buyer; and that I will not use any other Deceit, Craft, Guile, or Fraud, in the winding or folding of any such aforesaid Wool.
So help me GOD.

An Entry of the administering and taking of which Oath shall be made in the Records of the said Session, and a Certificate thereof shall be delivered by the Clerk of the Peace, or other proper Officer, to the Person or Persons who shall have taken the same. Provided always, and be it enacted; that nothing herein contained shall be construed to hinder or prevent any one from employing any Person in winding or folding of Wool, although such Person or Persons shall not have been sworn in Manner before mentioned.

Sect. 87, 88. No Prosecution shall be commenced for any Offences committed against any Acts now in Force, before the first Day of May, 1788. And a general Pardon is hereby extended to all Persons in Prison, and Fugitives beyond the Seas, for former Offences. Also his Majesty's Share of Fines now due, or which may become due in any Prosecution now pending, shall be remitted; and all Persons against whom any Process of Outlawry hath been sued out, for the Matters aforesaid, may be at Liberty to apply, by Motion, to the Court out of which such Process issued, to set aside, or reverse the same.

Sect. 89, 90. If any Person or Persons, who shall claim the Benefit of this Act, shall commence any Prosecution against any Officer of his Majesty's Customs, Excise, or Salt Duties, or against any Person or Persons, who shall have been aiding and assisting them, for any Matter or Thing done by them, or for any Offence committed by the Persons claiming the Benefit of this Act; the Officers or other Persons so prosecuted may plead the general Issue, and give the special Matter in Evidence; and shall recover Costs of Suit against the Person or Persons so bringing or commencing such Action or Prosecution. But, Nothing in this Act shall be construed to extend to the Discharge or Release of any Seizures of Sheep, Wool, &c. or of any Ships, Vessels, Boats, Horses, Waggon, Carts, &c. under any Act or Acts of Parliament now in force against the Exportation of live Sheep, Wool, and the other before enumerated Articles; nor to the Discharge and Release or Acquittal of any Fines which have been actually levied, or may become due in Consequence of any Suit now depending, to any Officer or other Person suing for the same under the Directions of the said Act or Acts.

Sect. 91. Any Action, Suit, or Information, that shall be commenced, brought and prosecuted on Account of the Seizure of any Sheep, Wool, &c. or of any Ship, Vessel, Boat, Cart, Waggon, &c. or for any Matter, Cause, or Thing done, or executed by Virtue of this Act, or any Clause or Article herein contained; shall be commenced within six Months after the Fact, and not afterwards; and shall be laid in the proper County where the Fact was done or committed. And the Person or Persons so sued may file common Bail, or enter a common Appearance, and plead the general Issue, not guilty; and may give this Act, and the special Matter in Evidence at the Trial; and that the same was done in Pursuance and by the Authority of this Act. And if a Verdict is given for the Defendant or Defendants, the Plaintiff or Plaintiffs shall pay treble Costs. But, though a Verdict shall be given for the Plaintiff or Plaintiffs, they shall not be intitled to above two Pence Damages, nor to any Costs of Suit, if the Court or Judge, before whom the Cause was tried, shall certify on the said Record, that there was a probable Cause for such Seizure; nor shall the Defendant be fined above one Shilling; but the Effects seized shall be restored to the Plaintiffs.

24 Geo. III. C. 1. Prohibits the Exportation of British Hare Skins, British Hare Wool, and British Cony Wool.

No Wool shall be shipped from Ireland, but from Dublin, Waterford, Youghall, Kinsale, Cork, and Drogheda.

For every Ship which shall sail from Ireland, in order to export any of the Commodities aforesaid to this Kingdom, Bond shall be given by two known Inhabitants of or near the Place, to the chief Officers of the Customs belonging to the Port in Ireland, in double the Value of the Goods, before the Ship shall be permitted to lade any of the Commodities aforesaid, with Condition, that if the Ship shall take on board any of the said Goods in Ireland, all the said Goods shall be brought by the same Ship to some Port in England or Wales, and shall there be unladen, and pay the Duties thereof (the Danger of the Seas excepted) and every Ship which shall lade any of the said Goods, until such Bond be given, shall be forfeited as aforesaid.

All such Goods, exported from Ireland into this Kingdom or Wales, shall be shipped off at the Ports of Dublin, Waterford, Youghall, Kinsale, Cork, and Drogheda, and from no other Port; nor shall be imported into any Parts of England or Wales, other than Bideford, Barnstable, Minehead, Bridgewater, Bristol, Milford-Haven, Chester and Liverpool.

It shall be lawful to import from any of the aforesaid Ports in Ireland, any Wool, &c. into such Ports of this Kingdom as aforesaid; so as Notice be first given to the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs in this Kingdom, or to the Customer or Collector in the Ports to which the same is to be brought, of the Quantity, Quality, and Package, with the Marks and Numbers thereof, the Name of the Ship and Master, and the Port into which they are to be imported, and so as Bond be first entered into, to the Use of his Majesty, with one or more Sureties, in treble the Value of the Goods, that the same shall (Dangers of the Seas excepted) be landed accordingly, and so as a Licence be first taken, under the Hands of the Commissioners of the Customs, or from the Customer or Collector, where such Bond is given for the landing thereof, which Licence they are to grant without Fee.

All Actions and Informations which shall be prosecuted, by Virtue of any Act, for preventing the Exportation of Wool, or Woollen Manufactures, from Ireland, shall be tried in any of the four Courts at Dublin, by a Jury of Freeholders, to be summoned out of any other County, than that wherein the Fact was committed; and the first three who have been assisting in exporting of Wool or Woollen Commodities, who shall inform any Justice of Peace thereof, whereby the Punishment may be inflicted, such Discoverer (not being the Owner or Part-Owner thereof) shall not suffer any of the Punishment.

All such Wool, and other the Commodities mentioned in 10 and 11 Will. III. Ditto, s. 21. Cap. 10. which shall be carried or laid on Shore near the Sea, or any navigable River, to the Intent to be exported out of Ireland, contrary to that Act, shall be forfeited, and the Offender shall be liable to the like Penalties, as Persons by that Act are subject to for exporting of Wool, &c.

The Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of Great-Britain shall appoint three Ships of the sixth Rate, and eight or more armed Sloops, constantly to cruise on the Coast of Great-Britain and Ireland, with Orders for seizing all Vessels in which any Worsted, Bay, or Woollen Yarn, or any Drapery Stuffs, and Woollen Manufactures, made up or mixed with Wool or Wool-Flocks, shall be exported or laden from Ireland into foreign Parts, &c.

All Wool, and Woollen or Bay Yarn, Woolfels, Shortlings, Mortlings, Flocks, Worsted, Yarn, Cloth, Serge, Bays, Kerfies, Says, Frizes, Druggets, Cloth Serges, Shalloons, Stuffs, and other Draperies and Woollen Manufactures, or mixed with Wool, or Wool-Flocks, which shall be exported from Ireland after the 1st of May, 1740, into the Ports of this Kingdom hereafter mentioned, shall be shipped off, and entered at the Ports of Dublin, Waterford, Youghall, Kinsale, Cork, Drogheda, New Ross, Newry, Wexford, Wicklow, Sligo, Limerick, Galway, and Dundalk, in the said Kingdom of Ireland, and from no other Port or Place; nor shall the same be imported into any Parts of this Kingdom, other than the Ports of Bideford, Barnstable, Minehead, Bridgewater, Bristol, Milford-Haven, Chester, and Liverpool, in the same Manner as if the said Ports of Newry, Wexford, Wicklow, Sligo, Limerick, Galway, and Dundalk,

Dundalk, had been particularly named for Exportation of the said Goods, in the Act 10 and 11 Will. III. intitled, An Act to prevent the Exportation of Wool out of the Kingdom of Ireland and England, and for other Purposes therein mentioned.

26 Geo. II. By this Act, Wool, &c. under the Restriction of the above Act, may be exported from any Port of Ireland into any Port of England.

After the 25th of December, 1739, no Wool, or any of the said Goods, shall be laden on board any Ship or Boat in Ireland, or imported from thence into this Kingdom, but in such Vessels or boats as shall be of the built of Great-Britain or Ireland, and wholly owned and manned by the Subjects of this Kingdom or Ireland, and duly registered in the Manner hereafter mentioned, under the Penalty of the Forfeiture of the said Goods, or the Value thereof, and of the Vessel or Boat in which the same shall be laden, together with all her Ammunition and Furniture.

5 Geo. II. C. 24. S. 2. No Coffee shall be put on board any Ship in any of his Majesty's Plantations in America, until the Planter or his known Agent shall make Oath, or Affirmation, before two Justices of the Peace, that the same is of the Growth of such Planter's Plantation, which Oath, &c. shall be produced to the Collector, Comptroller, and Naval Officer, by the Person who shall enter such Coffee; and such Persons shall likewise make Oath, or Affirmation, before the said Officers, that the Coffee then to be shipped is the same that is mentioned in such Oath, &c. of the Planter; and the Collector, and Comptroller, and Naval Officer, are required to deliver a Certificate of such Affidavit to the Commander of such Ship, on board which the said Coffee is to be shipped; and the Master of such Ship shall, before clearing his Ship, also make Oath, that he has received such Coffee on board, and that he has no other Coffee on board than such, for which Proofs shall be made as aforesaid, and that he will not take any more Coffee on board before his Arrival in Great-Britain, and making a Report of his lading there; for which Affidavit and Certificate the Collector, and Comptroller, or Naval Officer, shall receive 5s. and all Certificates of such Affidavit shall, by the Commander of such Ship, be produced to the Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, at the Port where such Ship shall unlade, and the Master shall deliver to such Collector and Comptroller, a Certificate of the Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, and Naval Officer of the Place, where such Coffee shall have been shipped, or any two of them, testifying the particular Quantities of such Coffee, and of which such Proofs shall be made, specifying the Package, with the Marks, Numbers, and Weights of each Package; and the Master shall likewise make Oath, or affirm, that the Coffee in the Certificate was taken on board as in the Certificate, and that after his Departure he did not take on board any Coffee, and that all the Coffee on board his Ship is mentioned in the said Certificate; and upon Entry of such Coffee at the Custom-house, and paying or securing the Duties, a Mark shall be set on every Parcel; and thereupon such Coffee shall be lodged in a Warehouse, and the Importer shall deliver to the Collector the Certificate of the Affidavit of the Growth of the Coffee, together with the Oath, and the Oath, or a Copy thereof, made by the Planter; as also the Certificate of the Package, Marks, and Numbers of the Coffee.

Ditto, S. 4. No Commander of any Ship shall take in at America or at Sea, or shall land in any of the said Plantations, any Coffee of the Growth of any foreign Country, except such as shall be exported from Great-Britain, on Pain of forfeiting such Coffee and 200*l.* and likewise twelve Months' Imprisonment.

Ditto, S. 5. If any Person shall falsely make Oath or Affirmation, by this Act directed, and thereof be convicted, &c. such Person shall forfeit 200*l.* and be imprisoned twelve Months; and if any Person shall forge a Certificate of the said Oath or Affirmation, or shall publish such Certificate, knowing the same to be forged, and be convicted in any of his Majesty's Courts, such Person shall forfeit 200*l.*

Ditto, S. 6. This Act shall continue to the 25th of March, 1739, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament.

Further continued for seven Years, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament by 11 Geo. II. Cap. 18. Further continued for seven Years, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament by 19 Geo. II. P. 412. Further continued by 25 Geo. II. to 25 March, 1758; and further by 32 Geo. II. till 24 June, 1766, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

Coffee shall not be imported but in Packages of 112lb. nett at least; and to 5 Geo. III. C. be stowed openly in the Hold of the Vessel, on Forfeiture of the Goods and 43 S. 33. Package; which may be seized by any Officer of the Customs or Excise.

Coffee of the British Plantations in America, or foreign Coffee, which shall 6 Geo. II. C. have been warehoused on the Continent of America, to pay only half the old 52 S. 22. Subsidy on Importation; and to be warehoused as directed, by 10 Geo. I. Cap. 10. Sect. 26. subject to the like Duties, Restrictions, and Regulations, if taken out for home Consumption; and to the like Securities, &c. if for Exportation, as Coffee warehoused pursuant to that Statute.

Enacts that the Acts 12, 15, and 25 Car. II. so far as the same extend to Sugar 12 Geo. II. P. of the Growth and Produce of his Majesty's Plantations in America, being one of 551, 552, 553. the Commodities enumerated in the said Acts, shall be ratified and confirmed in all respects whatsoever, except only as to such Sugars, as by this Act shall be permitted to be exported from the said Sugar Colonies, by such Persons, in such Ships, to such foreign Countries, and under such Regulations as are herein described and appointed for that Purpose.

After 29 September, 1739, any of his Majesty's Subjects, in any Vessel built in Great-Britain, and navigated according to Law, and belonging to any of his Majesty's Subjects, of which the major Part shall be residing in Great-Britain, and the Residue residing either in Great-Britain or some of the said Sugar Colonies, and not elsewhere, that shall clear outwards in any Port of Great-Britain for any of the said Colonies, may load in the said Colonies any Sugars of the Growth and Manufacture of the said Colonies, and may carry the same to any foreign Part of Europe, provided a Licence be first taken out for that Purpose, under the Hands of the Commissioners of the Customs at London or Edinburgh, subject to the Regulations, and on the Conditions hereafter mentioned, viz. that Notice be first given to the Master in Writing, or one of the Owners of such Vessel, to the Collector or Comptroller of the Port where such Vessel happens to be, of the Intention of such Master or Owner, that such Ship shall proceed to some of the said Sugar Colonies to lade Sugars to be carried to some other Part of Europe than Great-Britain; and that such Master or Owner, shall Page 554. enter into Bond, to the Use of his Majesty, with one or more sufficient Securities, in the Sum of 1000*l.* if the Ship be of less Burthen than 100 Tons, and in the Sum of 2000*l.* if she be of that, or greater Burthen, with Condition, that in Case a Licence be granted to carry Sugars from the said Sugar Colonies to foreign Parts, such Ship shall proceed from Great-Britain to the said Colonies, and shall deliver the Licence to the Naval Officer there, in Case he intends to make Use of the Liberty granted by such Licence, which he shall declare in Writing to the Naval Officer before he takes any Goods on board; and that in such Case no Tobacco, Melasses, Ginger, Cotton Wool, Indico, Fustic, or other dying Wood, Tar, Pitch, Turpentine, Hemp, Masts, Yards, Bowsprits, Copper Ore, Beaver Skins, or other Furs, of the Growth and Manufacture of any British Plantation in America, shall be taken on board such Ship, unless for the necessary Provisions in her Voyage; and that such Ship before she proceeds to any foreign Port shall touch at some Port in Great-Britain, and that the Master or Commander shall deliver to the Collector and Comptroller of such Port a new Manifest, attested upon Oath (or if a Quaker by Affirmation) of the Lading, mentioning the Marks, Numbers, Package, and Contents of all the Goods on board; and shall also bring back the said Licence, with a Certificate endorsed or affixed thereto, containing an Account of the Marks, Numbers, Package, Contents, and Sorts of Sugars on board such Ship, in the Manner hereafter directed; and that when such Ship hath discharged her Lading (the Danger of Page 555. the Seas and Enemies excepted) she shall return to Great-Britain within eight Months after she has delivered her Lading in any foreign Part, and before she returns to any of the Plantations in America; and that in Case such Vessel should take on board any Merchandizes before her Return to Great-Britain, all such Merchandizes that shall remain on board the said Ship on her Arrival in Great-Britain shall be entered and landed, in like Manner as other Ships importing Goods into this Kingdom are obliged to do by the Laws of the Customs, or otherwise such Goods shall be forfeited.

Upon such Bond being entered into, and the other Requisites being duly complied with, a Licence shall be granted accordingly, giving Liberty, for that Voyage only, to carry Sugars of the Growth of the said Sugar Colonies to any foreign Part, in the Manner and according to the Intention of this Act; but no Ship shall have Licence to carry Sugars to foreign Parts, unless it first appear by Oath (or Affirmation) of the Master, that the Property thereof is in his Majesty's Subjects, of which the major Part are residing in Great-Britain, and the Residue either in Great-Britain or in some of the said Sugar Colonies, and not elsewhere; such Oath or Affirmation to be in the Form hereafter mentioned, viz.

P. 556.

A. B. makes Oath (or solemnly declares and affirms) that the (Ship or Vessel) called the (Name) whereof he (this Deponent or Affirmant) is Master, and hath the Charge and Command for this present Voyage to (Place bound to) being (describe the Built) (Ship or Vessel) of the Burthen of (Number) Tons, was built at (Place) in the Year (Time when) and that the said (Ship or Vessel) is wholly owned by the (Person or Persons) whose (Name or Names) and usual (Place or Places) of Abode (is or are) undermentioned, and described by this (Deponent or Affirmant) that such (Owner or Owners) (is or are) his Majesty's British (Subject or Subjects) and that no Foreigner, directly or indirectly, hath any Share, Part, or Interest in the said (Ship or Vessel) to the best of this (Deponent's or Affirmant's) Knowledge or Belief; and that he, this (Deponent or Affirmant) and three-fourths of the Mariners navigating the said (Ship or Vessel) are his Majesty's British Subjects.

If any Vessel licensed by Virtue of this Act shall take on board in any of the Sugar Islands, or in her Voyage from thence, any Sugars or other Goods, being the Property of any other Person than some of his Majesty's Subjects, and such as shall be laden on their proper Risk and Account to be carried to foreign Parts, the same shall be forfeited.

Before any Sugar be put on board any Vessel at the said Colonies, to be carried to any foreign Port in Europe, the Master shall deliver to the Collector of the Port where such Ship is to take in her Lading, the said Licence, signed by the Commissioners of the Customs, and a Certificate of such Bond having been given in Great-Britain as aforesaid, and shall declare in Writing to the Collector, whether he intends to load any Sugar pursuant to such Licence, which shall be done before any Goods are laden on board such Vessel, otherwise such Licence shall be of no Force; but if it be declared that Sugars are intended to be laden, and carried to foreign Parts, then, in order to ascertain the Quantity, &c. of the Sugars to be exported from the said Colonies, and to prevent the Exportation of any Goods before enumerated, the Person intending to Export Sugars, or other Goods not enumerated, in such Vessel, shall, before the same are put on board, make an Entry of such Sugars, or other Goods with the Comptroller of the Customs and the naval Officer, expressing the Name of the Ship and Master, and where she lies; and also the Keys and Wharfs where they are to be laden, or first Water-borne, in order to be laden; which shall be such only where an Officer is or shall be appointed to attend the shipping thereof, or at such Places as shall be mentioned in a Warrant to be taken out from the Comptroller for that Purpose; and shall thereupon take out a Warrant, whereon shall be endorsed by the Exporter, the Marks, Numbers, Contents, Sorts, or proper Denomination of such Sugars, and shall deliver the Warrant so endorsed to the Searcher, and shall lade such Sugars in the Presence of such Officer, or at the Places mentioned in the said Warrant, that the proper Officers may attend the shipping thereof; and such Officers are empowered to examine the same, before they are put on board; and if, upon examining the said Sugars or any Goods shipped or brought to be shipped as such, either before or after the shipping thereof, the Number of Casks shall appear to be greater than endorsed on such Warrant; or if there be found any other Sugar but such as shall be so endorsed, taken out, and delivered as aforesaid, or any of the Goods before enumerated, which by Law are to be carried from thence only to Great-Britain, or some of his Majesty's other Plantations; or if it be discovered that any enumerated Goods,

P. 557.

Goods, other than Sugar, have been put on board any Vessel having Liberty to trade by Virtue of this Act, or shall be brought to be shipped on board such Vessel, or shall be put into any Boat, &c. in order to be put on board such Vessel, before such Entry, or taking out, endorsing, and delivering of such Warrants, contrary to the Directions of this Act, all such Sugar and other Goods shall be forfeited; and the Vessel or Carriage employed in shipping or attempting to ship any enumerated Goods, other than Sugars, together with the Vessel on which such other Goods shall be laden, and the Owner of such Sugar or other Goods shall forfeit double the Value thereof. And before such Vessel shall depart with the Sugar, the Master shall receive the said Licence from the Comptroller and Naval Officer, with a Certificate under their Seals of Office, containing an Account of the Marks, &c. of each Cask of Sugar so shipped; and the other Officers aforesaid are to make two Copies of such Licence and Certificates; for all which Entries, &c. or Copies, no more shall be taken than the accustomed Fees; and the Master, before he receives the said Licence, shall attest the said Copies under his Hand, which are to be left with the Collector, and Comptroller, and Naval Officer; and the said Collector and Comptroller are required, as soon as conveniently they can, to transmit one of the said Copies to the Commissioners of the Customs in Great Britain, by whom the Licence was granted when the Ship sailed from Great-Britain; and the Master shall proceed from the said Colonies directly to Great-Britain, without putting into any other Port unless forced by Strefs of Weather; Proof whereof shall be made on Oath to the satisfaction of the Commissioners; and on the Return of such Ship to Great-Britain, the Master shall produce the said Licence to the Commissioners, or to the Collector of the Port at which he shall arrive, with the Endorsement or Certificate annexed as before directed, and shall also deliver a true Manifest, expressing the Marks and Numbers, with the Tale and Sorts of Casks of all his Lading, attested upon Oath (or if a Quaker, by Affirmation) before the Collector and Comptroller of such Port, who are impowered to administer the same; and shall also make an Entry of the Quantities and Sorts of all the Sugars laden on board the said Ship at any of the said Colonies, and then remaining on board and bound to foreign Parts; (which Entry the said Collector and Comptroller are to pass, without demanding any Duties for such Sugar; mentioning in their Account, that such Entries were passed by Virtue of this Act) and shall also declare upon Oath or Affirmation to what foreign Ports he is bound with such Lading; then such Master shall be at Liberty to proceed with all the Goods on board mentioned in the said Manifest, being none of the Goods before enumerated, to any foreign Port, without being obliged to land, or pay Duty for the same, as aforesaid, taking with him the said Licence, and a Certificate under the Seals of Office from the said Collector and Comptroller, testifying that the said Ship had touched at such Port, and had in all Respects complied with the Directions of this Act; but if any such Vessel shall proceed to any foreign Part without having first touched at some Port in Great-Britain, and having complied with the Directions of this Act, and having the same certified as aforesaid; or if any of the Goods before enumerated, besides Sugars, shall be found on board, or carried by any such Vessel to any foreign Parts, then the Liberty granted by such Licence shall become void, and such Vessel, and also the Master, and all others concerned, shall be liable to the same Penalties as they would have been liable to if this Act had not been made.

If the Commissioners of the Customs in Great-Britain, or the Collector and Comptroller of the Port where the Vessel shall touch, shall, upon Information on Oath, have cause to suspect that some enumerated Goods, other than Sugars, are on board such Vessel, and shall thereupon judge it necessary to unlade the Goods from such Ship, or any Part thereof; in such Case, the Officers of the Customs, or any Persons employed by them, may enter and remain on board such Ship, and unlade the same or any Part thereof, as they shall judge necessary, to enable them to examine any Part of such Ship and all the Goods on board, and detain her so long as shall be necessary for the Purpose, and also may open and examine any Cabins, &c. or any Concealments, or other Places in the Sides of such Ship, or any Part thereof, or any Trunk, Cask, &c. to discover whether any more, or other Goods are on board, than such as are mentioned in the Manifest delivered by the Master, and may seize all Goods not mentioned therein, which shall be forfeited; but in Case no Goods be found on board but what are mentioned in the said Manifest, then the Officers who shall unload or unpack any Goods shall re-load and re-pack the same, and repair such Damage as shall be done by unloading or unpacking thereof, without being liable to any other Costs for Demurrage, or on any other Account whatsoever; but if any other Goods are found on board besides such as are mentioned in the Master's Manifest (except the necessary Provisions of the Ship) then the Master shall be at the Charge of re-loading and re-packing all the Goods unladen or opened, and of repairing all other Damages occasioned thereby; and the Officers concerned shall not be at any Expence, or be liable to any Costs whatsoever.

If any Ship shall have on board any Sugar, for which Licence shall have been granted as aforesaid, or any other Goods not enumerated in the Act before-mentioned, and the Owners, or their Agent, on the Arrival of such Ship in Great-Britain, shall be desirous to enter and pay the Duty, and land the Goods, or any Part thereof, they shall have Liberty so to do, the Master first making a Report of his whole Lading with the proper Officers of the Customs, in like Manner as he was required to do before the making of this Act.

P. 562.

If the Master, or Person taking Charge of any Vessel, for which a Licence has been granted, shall, on his Arrival in any of the said Sugar Colonies, have delivered to the Collector, Comptroller, or Naval Officer, the said Licence, with a Certificate of Bond being given in Great-Britain, as aforesaid; and before he lades any Goods shall declare in writing, upon Oath, or Affirmation, before any two of them, that the Sugars he intends to lade are to be carried to some Place to the Southward of Cape Finislerre; then the said Master may, in Case he has in all Respects complied with the Directions of this Act, proceed thither directly with such Vessel, taking with him such Licence and Oath, or Affirmation, endorsed thereon by the Collector, &c. together with an Account of the Marks, &c. of Sugars laden by Virtue of such Licence, likewise endorsed thereon, or contained in a Certificate annexed, in the Manner before directed, and may there land the same, without first touching at any Port in Great-Britain; but in such Case the Master shall, within eight Months after landing the said Sugars, and before such Vessel shall go again to any of the Plantations in America, return to some Port of Great-Britain, and there deliver his said Licence to the Commissioners of the Customs, or the Collector and Comptroller of such Port, with such Oath or Affirmation endorsed thereon, and Certificate annexed thereto as aforesaid, together with a Certificate from the Consul or two known British Merchants of good Credit, residing at the Places where such Sugars were landed, testifying the Landing thereof as aforesaid; and the Master shall likewise make Oath or Affirmation before the Collector to the Truth of such Certificate, and that none of the Goods before enumerated, except Sugar, were taken on board at any of the said Colonies, or landed at the Place mentioned in the Certificate; and shall likewise make an Entry with such Collector, of the Quantity and Sorts of all the Sugars laden on board the said Ship at any of the said Colonies, and landed at any Port to the Southward of Cape Finislerre, which Entry the Collector or Comptroller are to pass, without demanding any Duties for the same, mentioning in their Accounts, that such Entries were passed, by Virtue of this Act; and in Case the said Master shall neglect or refuse to make such Entry, on his return to Great-Britain, he shall forfeit 100*l.*

P. 563.

Upon the Return to Great-Britain of any Ship or Vessel which shall carry Sugars from the Sugar Colonies to any foreign Parts, the Master shall, in either Case before-mentioned, bring back, and deliver to the Commissioners of the Customs, or to the Collector of the Port where such Vessel shall arrive, the said Licence, together with a Certificate, signed and sealed by the Consul, or two known British Merchants of good Credit, at the Port where such Sugar was landed, certifying the Landing thereof, with the Number of Casks landed, and the Mark, Number, and Contents of each Cask, with the Name of the Ship and Master, and that they verily believe that no Tobacco, or other Goods before enumerated, except Sugar, have been there landed out of such Vessel; and upon such Licence being returned, with the Oath or Affirmation of the Master, and P. 564: an Account of the Lading endorsed thereon, or annexed thereto as aforesaid; and the several other Things required by this Act being duly complied with, the Bond given before granting such Licence shall be discharged and delivered up; otherwise such Bond shall be forfeited, and may be prosecuted in the Manner directed by this Act.

In Case any Ship or Vessel shall, after unloading such Sugars, or any Part thereof, take on board any Goods before her Return to Great-Britain, all such of the said Goods as remain on board at her Arrival in Great-Britain, shall be entered and landed on the Return of such Vessel to Great-Britain, and before her Departure from thence, and shall be subject to such Regulations, as the like Goods imported in any other Ship are subject to by the Laws of the Customs.

This Act not to excuse any Vessel trading to or from the said Sugar Colonies being registered pursuant to the Act 7 and 8 Will. III. on Proof of the Property made by one or more of the Owners in the Manner, and under the Penalties inflicted by the said Act.

No Master or Owner of any Vessel, carrying Sugars, as aforesaid, shall advance P. 565. to any Mariner during the Time he shall be in Parts beyond the Seas any Money or Effects, upon Account of Wages, exceeding one Moiety of the whole Wages due from the Time of his Departure from Great-Britain, till such Vessel shall return to Great-Britain, and if any Master or Owner shall advance any Wages to any Seamen above the said Moiety, such Master or Owner shall forfeit double the Money he shall so advance.

If any Person shall grant any false Certificate, or counterfeit, erase, or alter any Licence, Oath, or Certificate, made pursuant to this Act, or shall knowingly publish or make use thereof, such Person shall forfeit 500*l.* to be recovered, and disposed of in the Manner directed by this Act, and such Licence, &c. shall be void.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to give Liberty to carry Sugars P. 566. from any of the said Sugar Colonies to Ireland. (This Clause is repealed by 20 Geo. III.)

This Act shall continue in force five Years, from the 29th of September, 1792, <sup>26 Geo. III.</sup> C. 53.

By an Act passed 7 and 8 Will. III. for preventing frauds and regulating <sup>15 and 16</sup> Abuses in the Plantation Trade; and by another Act of 5 Anne, for an Union <sup>Geo. II. P.</sup> of the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, no Ship or Vessel shall pass as a Ship of the Built and Property of Great-Britain, Ireland, Guernsey, Jersey, or any of his Majesty's Plantations in America, or a Prize Ship made free, so as to be qualified to trade to, or from, or in any of the said Plantations, till the Persons claiming Property therein shall make Oath, and register the same in P. 712. Manner therein directed; and if any Ship's Name so registered shall be altered, or any Transfer of Property to another Port, such Ship is thereby directed to be registered de Novo, on delivering up the former Certificate to be cancelled; and if the Property be altered in the same Port by the Sale of Shares in any Ship, after registering, such Sale is to be acknowledged, by endorsing on the Register before two Witnesses; notwithstanding which the Certificates of the Register of several Ships have been frequently sold to Foreigners and delivered to the Purchasers; and the Ships of Foreigners under Colour thereof have been admitted to trade to and from the Plantations, though of foreign Extraction, contrary to Law, to the Prejudice of the Navigation of Great-Britain and the Plantations; for preventing which it is enacted, that after the 25th of December, 1742, no Ship or Vessel, required by the said Acts to be registered, and carrying Merchandizes to and from any of his Majesty's Plantations in America, or to and from one Plantation to another, shall be deemed qualified to trade within the Intent of the said Acts, till the Master, or Person having Charge of the Ship, shall upon Oath or Affirmation before the Governor or Collector of the Customs, of every the said Plantations, where they shall arrive, give a just and true Account of the Name and Burthen thereof, and of the Place from whence she came, and of all Particulars in the following Form, viz.

A. B. maketh Oath (or, if a Quaker, solemnly affirms) that the Ship or Vessel, whereof he, this Deponent or Affirmant, is Master, or hath the Charge and Command, during this present Voyage, being of the Burthen of Tons, came last from and that she is as he verily believes, the same Ship or Vessel described, meant, and intended in, and by, the Certificate now produced by him; and that the same does now, as he believes, belong wholly to his Majesty's British Subjects, and that no Foreigner has, directly or indirectly, any Share, Property or Interest therein, to his Knowledge or Belief.

P. 713.

If any Ship or Vessel shall load or unload any Goods, &c. in any of the Plantations in America before such Proof be made, the same shall be forfeited, and may be prosecuted, recovered, and divided, in like Manner as if she had not been registered, as directed in the Act 7 and 8 Will. III.

After the 25th of December, 1742, if any Ship or Vessel duly qualified to trade to, and from, and in his Majesty's Plantations, shall happen to be in any of the said Plantations, and the Certificate of the Register shall be lost or mislaid, the Master or other Person, having the Charge of the said Ship or Vessel, may make Oath, or Affirmation, before the Governor or Collector of the Customs, in the Port where the Ship or Vessel shall happen to be, in the following Form:

A. B. being Master, or having the Charge of the Ship or Vessel called the does swear (or solemnly affirm) that the said Ship or Vessel has been, as he verily believes, registered according to Law, to qualify her to trade to, from, and in his Majesty's Plantations, in America, and that he had a Certificate thereof, granted at the Port of but that the same is lost or mislaid, and that he cannot find the same, and does not know where the same is, or what is become thereof, and that the same hath not been, nor shall be, with his Privy or Knowledge sold or disposed of to any Person or Persons whatsoever; and that he, this Deponent or Affirmant, and three-fourths of the Mariners navigating the said Ship or Vessel are his Majesty's British Subjects, and the said Ship or Vessel does now, as he believes, belong wholly to his Majesty's British Subjects, and that no Foreigner has, to his Knowledge or Belief, any Share, Property, or Interest therein.

The said Master, or other Person navigating the said Ship or Vessel, shall give good Security, if the Ship be of one hundred Tons Burthen or under, and so in Proportion for any greater Burthen, to the Collector of the Port where the Ship shall be, in his Majesty's Name, and to his Use, with Condition that the Ship was duly registered according to Law, for qualifying the same to trade to, from, or in his Majesty's Plantations in America; and that the Certificate of the said Register, if found, shall be delivered up to the Commissioners of the Customs, to be cancelled, and that no illegal Use has been, or shall be made thereof; that the same has not been, or shall be fraudulently disposed of; that the said Ship or Vessel wholly belongs to British Subjects; and that no Foreigner has any Share, Property, or Interest therein; and on making such Oath, or Affirmation, and giving such Bond, the Governour and Collector of the Customs shall freely give the Master, &c. of such Ship or Vessel a fresh Certificate, which shall enable him to trade for that Voyage only; and the Officers taking the said Oath and Bond shall transmit an Account thereof to the Commissioners of the Customs.

If the Certificate of the Register of any Ship be lost, and the Master, or Person having Charge of the Ship, and one or more of the Owners, shall make Proof to the Satisfaction of the Commissioners of the Customs in Case the Owners or any of them, shall reside in Great-Britain or Ireland, Guernsey, or Jersey; or of the Governour, or Collector of the Customs, residing in any of his Majesty's Majesty's Plantations in America, if she was registered in such Plantation; and none of the Owners shall reside in Great-Britain or Ireland, Guernsey or Jersey, upon Oath, or Affirmation, of the Loss of such Certificate, also of the Name, Burthen, Built, Property, and other Particulars, required by the Act 7 and 8 Will. III. in the same Manner, and before the same Persons as are required on original Registers, and shall give 500*l.* Security, if the Ship be of one hundred Tons, and so in Proportion for any greater Burthen, to the Collector of the Port where the Ship shall belong, and that the original Certificate hath not been, nor shall be fraudulently disposed of, or used contrary to Law; and that if the same be found, it shall be delivered up to the Commissioners to be cancelled; in such Case the said Commissioners, and the Governor, and Collector of the Customs, residing at the Plantations respectively, are required to permit such Ship or Vessel to be registered de novo, and the proper Officers shall deliver a Certificate thereof to the Owners as directed by the Act 7 and 8 Will. III. and therein mention the Name by which the Ship was formerly registered, and that such a Certificate of a new Register is granted in Pursuance of this Act instead of a former Certificate, which appears by such Proof, as this Act requires, to be lost; and that such new Register and Certificate shall have the same Effect with the Original, and a Duplicate shall be transmitted to the Commissioners.

After the 29th September, 1742, all Plantation Bonds taken in Great-Britain, Page 716. pursuant to any former Act of Parliament, whereby the Goods therein enumerated are to be brought to Great-Britain, shall be with Condition, that within eighteen Months from the Date thereof (the Danger of the Seas excepted) a Certificate shall be produced from the Collector and Comptroller of the Port where such Goods shall be delivered, that they have been there landed and discharged; otherwise such Bonds shall be forfeited, and the Penalty sued for in the Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland or Ireland, respectively.

This Act shall not extend to Bonds for Ships lading Sugars, in any of Page 717. his Majesty's Sugar Colonies in America, by Licence from the Commissioners, to be carried directly to any foreign Part of Europe pursuant to an Act passed 12 Geo. II.

By two Clauses in the Act 12 Car. II. it is enacted, that no Goods or Com- 17 Geo. II. modities whatsoever, of the Growth, Production, or Manufacture of Africa, Asia, or America, shall be imported into England, Ireland, or Wales, Islands of Guernsey or Jersey, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, from any other Places or Countries, but only from those of the said Growth, Production, or Manufacture, or from those Ports where the said Goods and Commodities can only be, or usually have been, first shipped for Transportation, under the Penalty of the P. 720. Forfeiture of all such Goods as shall be imported from any other Place or Country, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning thereof; as also of the Ship in which they were imported, with all her Guns, Furniture, Ammunition, Tackle and Apparel; and there is a Proviso in the said Act, that it shall be lawful for any of the People of England, Ireland, Wales, Islands of Guernsey, or Jersey, or Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in Vessels, or Ships to them belonging, and whereof the Master and three-fourths, of the Mariners, at least, are English, to load, and bring in from any of the Ports of Spain or Portugal, or Western Islands commonly called Azores, or Madeira or Canary Islands, all Sorts of Commodities of the Growth, Production, or Manufacture of the Plantations or Dominions of either of them respectively; and Disputes have arose on the Construction of the said Proviso, whether the Goods of the Growth, Production, or Manufacture of the Plantations of Spain or Portugal, may be imported for Account of Aliens, from the Places, and in the Manner expressed in the said Proviso, and whether such Goods belonging to Aliens, so imported are not liable to be forfeited, together with the Ship, which tends to the Prejudice of the British Navigation, as likewise detrimental to the publick Revenue; it is therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for any Persons to import the Goods mentioned in the said Proviso, and in such Ship so navigated, as is therein expressed, although such Goods are the Property of Aliens.

7 Geo. II. C. 18. 3. 2. It shall be lawful to import, in any Ship belonging to Great-Britain, or any State in Amity, from any Place, Indigo of all Sorts.

Ditto, S. 3. The said Act 13 Geo. I. Cap. 25. and this Act shall continue seven Years from the 24th of June 1734, &c.

Continued till June 1, 1747, and from thence to the End of the next Session of Parliament, by 14 Geo. II. p. 660. and further continued till the 1st of June, 1754, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament by 20 Geo. II. p. 972.

And as several Acts have been made to encourage the Growth of this, and several other Commodities in his Majesty's American Colonies, I think they may properly be introduced in this Place, as Affairs in which Navigation has a considerable Concern; therefore, before I conclude the Subject of Shipping, I shall let my Readers see what Premiums have been given by Parliament, on the Importation of them here.

21 Geo. II. P. 887.

It is hereby enacted, that from and after the 25th of March, 1749, all Persons who shall import into this Kingdom, directly from any of the British Colonies in America, in Vessels that may legally trade there, and manned as by Law is required, any good and merchantable Indigo, free from any false Mixture, and fit for Dyers Use, being the Product of the Colony from whence the same is imported, shall be intitled to 6*d.* for every Pound thereof, to be paid out of the Customs upon Demand, by the Collector of the Port where the same shall be imported, and for Want of sufficient Money in his Hands, he shall certify the same to the Commissioners of the Customs, who shall cause the Bounty of the Indigo, imported into England, to be paid by the Receiver-General of the Customs in England, and of that imported into Scotland, by the Receiver-General there.

P. 888.

Every Person loading Indigo, on board any Vessel in any of the British Colonies in America, shall, before the clearing out of such Ship for any Port of Great-Britain, produce to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Collector and Comptroller, of the Customs, and Naval Officer, or any two of them, a Certificate, signed and sworn to before some Justice there, by the Planter, his known Agent or Factor, that a Quantity of Indigo (expressing the Weight) had been sent from his Indigo Work, or Plantation, where the same was made, in order to be shipped off or sold by him to the Person therein named, and was of the Growth and Produce of the said Plantation, situate in the District or Parish of within the Island or Colony of which Certificate shall be attested by the said Justice, to have been signed and sworn to in his Presence, and he is required to do the same gratis.

P. 889.

The Merchant, at the Time of producing such Certificate, shall also sign a Certificate before the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Collector, &c. or any two of them, that the Indigo shipped by him is the same mentioned in the Certificate; and they shall thereupon deliver to him a Certificate, under their Hands and Seal of Office, of his having received such Certificate; and that at the same Time a Certificate from the Planter or Agent, &c. had been produced and left with them, pursuant to the Directions of this Act; and no Person importing Indigo shall be intitled to the Premium, unless he shall produce such Certificate to the chief Officer of the Customs at the Port in Great-Britain, where the same shall be imported.

On the Importation of any Indigo into Great-Britain, a Certificate shall be given, by the Master or commanding Officer, that the same was shipped on board the said Ship, within such British Colony in America, as is mentioned in the Certificate; and also a Certificate, signed by two Officers of the Customs of the Port where the same is entered and landed, specifying the Weight, and that the said Indigo is good and merchantable, free from false Mixtures, and of such Quality as to be intitled to the said Premiums; which Certificate the said Officers are to grant, within ten Days after the Landing thereof, unless they can assign sufficient Cause for their Refusal; upon producing which several Certificates to the proper Officer, as aforesaid, he shall pay the Premium to the Importer.

If any Person shall make Entry of foreign-made Indigo, under the Name of British Plantation-made, or shall mix any foreign Indigo, or other false Mixture with that made in the British Plantations, in order to claim the Premium, he shall forfeit all such Indigo; and in Case of such Mixture the Quantity so mixed, both foreign and British Plantation-made, and double the Value thereof, shall be forfeited by the Person making such Mixture.

No Certificate shall be granted for the said Premium on Indigo that is not good and merchantable, and free from any false Mixture.

The Officers of the Customs, before their making out any such Certificate, P. 890, shall examine the Indigo by opening each Package, and seeing the whole Contents, to discover whether the Indigo is good and merchantable, and free from any false Mixture.

No Certificate shall be granted by the Officers of the Customs for any Indigo which is not worth 3s. when the French, or other Indigo of equal Goodness with the best French, is worth 4s. per Pound; and so in Proportion, if the best French or other Indigo of equal Goodness shall be at the higher or lower Price.

If any Dispute shall arise concerning the Quality of such Indigo as is imported into the Port of London, the Commissioners of the Customs may call two or more Dyers, Dry-Salters, Brokers, or others well skilled in that Commodity, who shall declare their Opinion upon Oath, as to the Quality thereof, if required, and determine whether the said Indigo is intitled to the Premium or not; and in Case of any Dispute in any of the Out-Ports in England, Samples of the Indigo shall be sent up to the Commissioner of the Customs at London; and in the Out-Ports in Scotland, to the Commissioners of the Customs at Edinburgh; in such Manner as the respective Commissioners shall direct, in order to be inspected and adjudged there.

No Fee shall be demanded or taken by any Officer of the Customs, for the examining or delivering such Indigo, or for signing Certificates for the Premium; under Penalty of forfeiting his Office and 100l. &c.

No Certificates or Debentures, made in Pursuance of this Act, shall be chargeable with any Stamp Duties.

If any British Plantation-made Indigo from America, shall, after the 25th of P. 891. March, 1749, be exported from Great-Britain, the Exporter, before the Entry thereof, shall pay to the Collector or chief Officer of the Customs of the Port, the whole of the Premium, over and above any Duty such Indigo is subject to at Exportation by any former Act.

If any Person shall be found fraudulently to export such Indigo, without paying the Premium as aforesaid, he shall forfeit the Indigo, and double the Value thereof.

If any Dispute shall arise, whether the said Indigo, or any Part thereof, so to be exported, is of the Growth and Manufacture of the British Plantations in America, or of foreign Product, the Onus Probandi shall lie on the Claimer and not on the Profecutor.

If any Governor, Collector, or any other Persons, shall, during the Continuance of this Act, falsely make a Certificate of the Produce and Manufacture of any Indigo, not being of the British Plantations in America, or shall counterfeit any such Certificate, in order to obtain the Premium aforesaid, he shall forfeit 200l. and if the Offender be a Collector, or any other Officer of the Customs, he P. 892. shall also lose his Office, and be incapable of serving his Majesty, &c.

This Act shall be in Force for seven Years, to commence from the 25th of March, 1749, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

Further continued by 28 Geo II. till 25 March, 1763, and to the End of the Session.

As it will greatly tend to the Increase and Improvement of the Silk Manufac- 23 Geo. Time of Importation, in the same Manner and Form (expressing the Package, Marks, and Numbers, together with the Qualities of the respective Goods) as was used before the making of this Act, and so as the same be landed in the Presence of, and examined by, the proper Officer of the Customs, and be imported in Vessels that may lawfully trade to his Majesty's Plantations, manned as the Law requires; and, on Failure of the Conditions herein last mentioned, the said Silks are to be liable to Payment of the respective Duties, as if this Act had not been made.

The Merchant or other Person, who shall, after the 24th of June, 1750, lade any raw Silk on board any Vessel in any of the British Colonies in America, is before the Clearing out of such Vessel from thence, to make Oath before the Collector or Comptroller of the Customs, and Naval Officer of the Port, or any two of them, that the said Silk (expressing the Quantity thereof) is bona fide of the Growth and Culture of the British Plantations in America; expressing the Parish or Place where the same was cultivated, and by whom, producing such Person's Oath thereto, made before the Governor of the Place, or the next Justice of the Peace (which several Oaths are to be administered gratis) and the Master or Person taking Charge of such Vessel is to bring with him a Certificate, signed and sealed by the Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, and Naval Officer, or any two of them (which they are to give gratis) expressing the Marks, Numbers, Tale, and Weight of the raw Silk in each Bale or Package, with the Names and Place of Abode of the Exporters thereof, and of the Person who shall have sworn the same to be of the Growth and Culture of the said British Colonies, and of the Person to whom the same shall be consigned in the Port of London; which Certificate the Master, on his Arrival at the Port of London, is to deliver to the Collector or Comptroller, or other chief Officers of the Customs, at or before the Entry of the said Silk, and to make Oath before one of the said Officers (which Oath is to be administered gratis) that the said Bales and Parcels, and Goods contained in such Certificate, are the same which were taken on board in the said British Plantations in America; and on Default made in any of the Premises, the said Silks are liable to the Payment of the respective Duties, as if this Act had not been made.

P. 398.

If any Person shall, after the 24th of June, 1750, enter any foreign raw Silk under the Name or Description of raw Silk of the Growth or Culture of any of the British Colonies of America, or shall mix any foreign raw Silk with raw Silk of the Growth of the said British Colonies, in order to avoid Payment of the Duties for the same, he is to forfeit 50*l.* for every such Offence, and all such foreign raw Silk; and, in Case of any Mixture, the Quantity mixed, both of foreign and British Plantation Growth, or the Value thereof, together with the Packages containing the same, are to be forfeited, &c.

If any Doubt or Dispute shall arise, whether the said raw Silk is foreign, or of the Growth or Culture of the British American Plantations, the Onus Probandi lies on the Claimer.

P. 520.

As the Importation of Bar-Iron from his Majesty's Colonies in America, into the Port of London, and the Importation of Pig-Iron from the said Colonies into any Port of Great-Britain, &c. will be a great Advantage, not only to the said Colonies but also to this Kingdom, &c. It is enacted, that from and after the 24th of June, 1750, the Duties, now payable on Pig-Iron, made in, and imported from his Majesty's Colonies in America, into any Port of Great-Britain, shall cease; and that no Duty shall be payable upon Bar-Iron made in, and imported from the said Colonies, into the Port of London.

No such Bar-Iron so imported into the Port of London shall afterwards be exported or be carried coastwise to be landed at any other Place in Great-Britain, except for the Use of his Majesty's Dock-Yards, upon Pain that the same, and the Vessel, be liable to such Forfeiture and Seizure, as prohibited or uncustomed Goods clandestinely exported or imported, or the Vessel on board of which the same shall be exported or imported, are now liable to by Law; and also upon Pain that the Exporter, and Master, and Mariners of the Vessel, shall be subject to the like Penalties and Punishments as the Master or Mariners of Vessels laden with prohibited or uncustomed Goods, or Goods clandestinely exported or imported are now liable by Law; and no Officer of the Customs shall grant any Cocket, Cocket, &c. for exporting or carrying coastwise any such Bar-Iron so exported, except for the Use of his Majesty's Dock-Yards, upon Pain of forfeiting 20*l.* &c. and if any such Cocket, &c. shall be granted, the same shall be void.

No Bar-Iron whatsoever shall be permitted to be carried coastwise, unless Mention be made in the Certificate of the Day on which the Duties payable on the Importation thereof, were paid, and of the Names of the Persons by whom paid.

No Bar-Iron imported into the Ports of London, by Virtue of this Act shall be carried or conveyed by Land-Carriage to any Place beyond ten Miles from any Part of the Port of London, except to his Majesty's Dock-Yards for the Use of the same, upon Pain of the Offender paying 20*s.* for every Hundred-weight thereof.

Every Person loading Pig, or Bar-Iron on board any Vessel in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, shall, before clearing out for any Port of Great-Britain, make Oath before the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, and Naval Officer, or any two of them (which Oath they are to administer without Fee) that the Pig or Bar-Iron so shipped (the true Weight whereof shall be expressed in the Oath) was made at _____ within the Colony of _____; in which Oath also the Name of the Person to whom the Iron shall be sold or consigned shall be expressed; and thereupon the said Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, and Naval Officer, or any two of them, shall give to the Person making such Oath, a Certificate under their Hands and Seal of Office, of the same having been made before them.

No such Pig or Bar-Iron shall be imported Duty-free, as aforesaid, unless the same shall be stamped with some Marks denoting the Colony or Place where the same was made, and unless the Importer shall produce such Certificate to the chief Officer of the Customs at the Port where the same shall be imported, and unless Oath be made by the Master of the Vessel, before such Officer (which he is to administer without Fee) that the said Iron is the same mentioned in the Certificate.

All Pig or Bar-Iron, which shall not be stamped and certified as aforesaid, shall be subject to the Payment of the same Duties to which it was liable before the making of this Act.

If any Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Collector, or Comptroller of the Cus- P. 524 toms, Naval Officer, or chief Officer of the Customs as aforesaid, shall falsely make any such Certificate, he shall forfeit 200*l.* for every such Offence, and his Office, &c. and if any Merchant, &c. shall falsely make any Oath required by this Act, he shall incur the Penalties of wilful and corrupt Perjury; and if any Person shall knowingly counterfeit any such Stamp or Certificate, or publish the same knowing it to be counterfeited, he shall incur the Penalties of Forgery.

After the 24th of June, 1750, no Mill, or other Engine for slitting or rolling of Iron, or any Plating-Forge to work with a Tilt Hammer, or any Furnace for making Steel, shall be erected or continued in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, upon Pain that every Person offending herein shall, for every such Mill, Engine, Forge, or Furnace, forfeit 200*l.*

Every such Mill, Engine, Forge, or Furnace, erected or continued contrary to the Directions of this Act, shall be deemed a common Nuisance; and every Governor, &c. of any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, where any such Mill, &c. shall be erected or continued, shall, upon Information thereof made to him by two Witnesses upon Oath (which Oath he is to administer) cause such Mill, &c. to be abated, within thirty Days after such Information, upon Pain of forfeiting 50*l.* for every such Offence, &c.

All Bar-Iron, which shall be imported from any of the British Colonies in P. 524
America into the Port of London, shall be entered at the Custom-house at London; and every Bar shall be marked or stamped in three different Parts, with such Mark as the Commissioners of the Customs shall direct, two of the said Marks at the Distance of one Yard from each End of the Bar, and the other near the Middle thereof.

If any Person shall counterfeit, destroy, or deface any of the said Stamps, with P. 525 an Intent to convey the same to any Place ten Miles from the Port of London, contrary to this Act, and be legally convicted thereof, he shall forfeit 100*l.* &c.

Every Governor, &c. of any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, shall transmit mit, within six Months after the said 24th of June, to the Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, a Certificate under his Hand and Seal of Office, containing a particular Account of every Mill or Engine for slitting or rolling Iron, and every Plating-Forge to work with a Tilt Hammer, and every Furnace for making Steel, erected in his Colony, at the Time of the Commencement of this Act; expressing therein also such of them as are used, and the Names of the Proprietors, and Place where erected, and Number in the said Colony; upon Pain of being subject to the like Penalties and Forfeitures, as for any other Offence committed by them against this Act, &c.

P. 516.

The Importation of Bar-Iron is extended to all the Ports of Great-Britain.

30 Geo. II.

Likewise the Clauses relating to the carrying Iron coastwise, and by Land beyond ten Miles from London, are repealed.

HAVING now concluded that Part of the Article of Shipping, which concerns Exports and Imports, and inserted Abstracts from all the Laws in force relative thereto, particularly specifying those which were passed in the Years 1779 and 1780, in Favour of the Commerce of Ireland, removing the Restraints to which it was before oppressively subjected; I shall proceed to some other Particulars, respecting the Obligations which the Masters of Merchant-Ships, and the Seamen are under, both by the Laws of Conscience, and those of their Country.

Hob. Rep.
Fol. 11.
Ridgeman's
Case.

A Master of a Ship is appointed by the Owners under a Supposition of his having a sufficient Capacity and Integrity to discharge the Trust reposed in him, by a faithful, prudent, and discreet Management of the Ship, and Affairs committed to his Care . . . . . He hath no Property, either general or special, in his being constituted, though the Law looks upon him as an Officer, who must render and give an Account for whatsoever is put into his Custody and under his Direction; and therefore whatever Misfortunes happen, or Losses occur, be they through Negligence, Wilfulness, or Ignorance, either in himself or Mariners, he must be responsible.

In Chancery.

A Master of a Ship, so appointed by B. Owner, treats with the Plaintiff to take the Ship to freight for 80 Tons, to sail from London to Falmouth, and so from thence to Barcelona, without altering the Voyage, and there to unlade, at a certain Rate per Ton: And to perform this the Master and Merchant entered into a Charterparty; the former obliging the Ship and her Appurtenances (valued at 300*l.*) though the Owners of the Ship were no Parties thereunto; the Master deviates and commits Barretery, and the Merchant thereby becomes a Sufferer in the Loss of his Voyage and Goods, for the Merchandize (being Fish) arrived not till Lent was passed, and then rotten. The Factor, to whom the Cargo went consigned, in order to procure Satisfaction for his Employer, sueth the Master in the Court of Admiralty at Barcelona, and upon an Appeal to a higher Court in Spain, obtains Sentence against the Master and the Ship; which coming to the Merchant's Hands, the Owner brings an Action of Trover for the Ship; the Master sues in Chancery to stop the Suit, and another brought by the Owner for Freight, claiming Deductions out of both, for his Damages sustained by the Master's Breach of Articles; for if the Owner gives Authority to the Master to contract, he shall bear the Loss; but in Case of Bottomry after the Voyage begun, the Master cannot oblige the Owner beyond the Value of the Ship; but this Case is on Contract.

Lord Chancellor. The Charterparty values the Ship at a certain Rate, and you shall not oblige the Owners farther, and that only with Relation to the Freight, not to the Value of the Ship; the Master is liable to the Deviation and Barretery, but not the Owners; else Masters would be Owners of all Men's Ships and Estate.

Mich. 29.
Car. II.

The Master of a Ship buying provisions for a Ship, and having Money from the Owners to pay for Provisions, nevertheless takes them upon Credit, and fails. The Owners are liable to pay the Debt in Proportion to their respective Shares in the Ship.

2 Vern. 643.
In Chancery,
1709.

The Master of the Ship took Beef, Sails, &c. on Credit, and failed; the Owners were obliged to pay, and not allowed to defend themselves, by insisting ing that the Master was liable only, and that they had given him Money to pay the Plaintiff. He is but their Servant, and therefore for his Purchases they are answerable, and continue so till he has paid the Creditor, though they gave him Money for that Purpose.

As soon as Merchandizes, or other Commodities, are put aboard a Ship, whether she be riding in Port, Haven, or any other Part of the Seas, he that is Exercitor Navis (Master of her) is chargeable therewith, and if the same be there lost or purloined, or sustain any Damage, whether in the Haven or Port, before, or upon the Seas, after she is on her Voyage, either by the Mariners or by any other through their Permission, he that is the Commander must answer the Damage, for the very Lading the Goods aboard the Ship subjects him thereto. And with this agrees the Common Law, where it was adjudged, that Goods being sent aboard a Ship, and the Master having signed his Bills of Lading for the same, the Goods were stowed; and, under Pretence of being Press-Masters, divers Persons, in the Night, entered the Ship, and robbed her of those Goods; the Merchant brought an Action at Common Law against the Master; and the Question was, whether he should answer the same; for it was alledged on his Part, that there was no Default or Negligence in him, as he had a sufficient Guard, the Goods were all locked up under Hatches, and the Thieves came as Press-Masters, and by Force robbed the Ship; and that the same was Vis Major*, which he could not prevent: And lastly, that though he was Master, or Exercitor Navis, yet he had no Share in the Ship, and was but in the Nature of a Servant, acting for a Salary. But notwithstanding, it was adjudged to the Plaintiff; for the Master at his Peril must see that all Things be forthcoming which are delivered to him, let what Accident soever happen (the Act of God, or an Enemy, Perils and Dangers of the Seas only excepted) but for Fire, Thieves and the like he must answer; and is in the Nature of a † common Carrier; and that though he receives a Salary, yet is a known and public Officer, and one that the Law looks upon to answer; and the Plaintiff hath his Election to charge either Master or Owners, or both, at his Pleasure, though he can have but one Satisfaction.

If a Master shall receive Goods at the Wharf, or Key, or shall send his Boat for the same, and they happen to be lost, he shall likewise answer both by the Marine and Common Law.

Mayor and Com. de London, against Hunt.

Error of Judgement in B. R. in Assumpsit brought by the Mayor and Commonalty against Hunt, where they declared of a Custom that they and their Predecessors, Mayors, &c. had of every Master of a Ship 8s. per Ton, for every Ton of Cheese brought from any Place in England, to the Port of London, ab Oriente de London Bridge (to the Eastward of London Bridge) in the Name of Weighage; and that the Defendant being Master of a Ship had brought to the Port of London so many Tons which at that Rate came to so much, which he had not paid; upon non Assumpsit, Verdict and Judgement for the Plaintiff. Upon which Hunt the Defendant brought a Writ of Error, and two Errors were assigned: 1. That the Action did not lie against the Master, but that the Duty was due from the Merchants, Owners of the Goods; but the Judgement was affirmed, for that the Master is entrusted with the Goods and hath a Recompence from the Merchants for bringing the Goods, and is responsible for them, and therefore shall be charged for the Duty; as it would be infinite to search for the Owners of the several Goods which are all in the Custody of the Master who brought them into Port, and therefore he shall be charged.

If Goods are shipped, and an Embargo or Restraint is afterwards issued by the Prince or State where the Master then is, and then he breaks Ground or endeavours to sail away, and in Consequence thereof any Damages ensue, he shall be responsible for the same; the Reason is, because his Freight is due, and must be paid; nay, although the very Goods be seized as bona contrabanda.

Vern. 241. A Ship was let out to Freight to J. S. in England, at 3l. 10s. per Ton, to go to Bourdeaux, then an Embargo is laid; she afterwards proceeds to Bourdeaux, and the Master, without discovering his first Contract, agrees with the Correspondents there of J. S. to allow him 6l. 10s. per Ton; upon this last Agreement he recovered at Law; and Equity would not relieve, because the Performance of the first Agreement was hindered by the Embargo.

105 Oleron. Judg. 2. A Master ought not to sail in tempestuous Weather, nor put forth to Sea, without having first consulted with his Company; nor must he stay in Port or Harbour without just Cause, when a fair Wind invites his Departure.

If a Vessel proves leaky or disabled, the Master ought not for that to put any of his Merchants Goods aboard any Enemy's Ship, without Letters of safe Conduct, as by so doing they may be made Prize, and he be obliged to answer the Damages consequent to the Action.

15 Hen. VI. C. 8. Nor shall he put into any Creeks or other Places disallowed, except driven in by Tempest, but into such Ports as are by Law appointed.

1 El. C. 11. S. 2. Nor ought he to ship any Merchandizes, but only at the publick Ports and Keys.

15 and 14. Car. II. C. 11. S. 14. He must not lade any prohibited or unlawful Goods, whereby the whole Cargo may be in Danger of Confiscation, or at least subject to Seizure or Surreption.

1 Jac. C. 25. C. 18. He may not sail without able and sufficient Mariners, both for Quality and Number.

1 J. d. Raymond. Page 22. Wilson vers. Bird. The Ship was libelled against in the Admiralty, for that the Master, being taken by a French Privateer, had ransomed the Ship for 300*l.* and had sued for the Payment of it, and was carried Prisoner to Dunkirk, and the Money was not paid, &c. and Sentence was given in the Admiralty against the Ship; and upon Motion for a Prohibition, it was denied by Holt, Chief Justice, then alone in Court; because the Taking and Pledge being upon the high Sea, the Ship, by the Law of the Admiralty, shall answer for the Redemption of the Master by his own Contract. Ex relatione m'ri Place.

J. d. Raymond. P. 152. Bronson vers. Jeffrey. Motion was made for a Prohibition to the Court of Admiralty, where a Suit was prosecuted against a Ship, which the Master had hypothecated for Necessaries, being upon the Sea in Strefs of Weather; and the Suggestion was, that the Agreement was made, and the Money lent upon Land, viz. in the Port of London, it being a Venetian Vessel, which came here by way of Trade, and not Strefs of Weather; but per Holt, Chief Justice, the Master of the Ship has Power to hypothecate, but he cannot sell it; and, by the pawning, the Ship becomes liable to Condemnation. This was resolved in solemn Debate, in the Case of Costard v. Lewytie, 2 Will. and Mar. B. R. Then there is no Remedy there for the Hypothecation, but by Way of Contract: Therefore, since the King's Bench cannot do Right to the Parties, it will not hinder the Admiralty from doing them Right; for if the King's Bench allows the Hypothecation, and yet denies the Remedy, it will be a manifest Contradiction.—An Action was brought upon the Stat. 2 Hen. IV. Cap. 11. for suing in the Admiralty on an Hypothecation, and it was held to be out of the Statute, in the Time of Lord Chief Justice Hale. And as to the Objection, that the Contract was made upon the Land, and the Money paid there, it must of Necessity be so; for if a Man be in Distress upon the Sea, and compelled to go into Port, he must receive the Money there, or not at all. And if his Ship be impaired by Tempest, so that he is forced to borrow Money to refit, otherwise she will be lost and for security of this Money, he pledges his Ship, since the Cause of the Pledging arises upon the Sea, the Suit may well be in the Admiralty Court: But because there was a Precedent, where a Prohibition in such Case had been granted, the Court granted the Prohibition, and ordered the Plaintiff to declare upon it, for the Law seemed clear to them, as before is said.

S. C. 1 Saik. 33. Carth. 518. L. d. Raymond, P. 576. 577. 578. The Defendant, as Executrix to the Master of a Ship, libelled in the Admiralty Court for the Wages owing to the Testator by the Owner; upon which the Plaintiff to have a Prohibition, suggested the Stat. of 15 Rich. II. Cap. 3. that the Admiralty Court shall not have Cognizance of Contracts made upon the Land, and shews this Contract to have been made upon the Land, &c. and this this Case was moved in several Terms, but opposed, and the Council for the Prohibition argued, that Prohibitions are grantable de jure, and are not discretionary in the Court, Raym. 3, 4. That the Case in Winch, Rep. 8. was the first Case where a Prohibition was denied, in Case of a Suit by Mariners for their Wages, in the Admiralty Court, and the Denial was grounded upon Compassionate Reasons, because they were poor Men, and because there they might join in Action, but here they must sever; but the said Case is contrary to the Reasons and Grounds of the Law; for where the Contract is made upon the Land, though the Service was done upon the Sea, it is out of the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty; and so vice versa, if the Service was done upon the Land, and the Contract upon the Sea, 12 Co. 79, 80. Staunf. 51, b. Hob. 212. A Consultation is always denied in Case of a Suit by Mariners, if there is a Charter-party; and the Sealing of a Writing cannot make any Difference in Reason, Raym. 3. A Prohibition granted where the Master libelled alone; and contra, it was said for the Defendant, that the Case of Mariners was now settled, and ought not to be stirred; but that the great Reason why they are permitted to sue there is, the Ship is the Debtor, and by the Law of the Admiralty they may attach her, which they cannot do by the Common Law; and in the Admiralty Court they may all join in Suit, whereas by the Common Law they must bring several Actions: That the Case of the Master is not different, for the Ship is Security to him, and he is but a Mariner, and his Wages are Wages at Sea; but however, where the Master dies in the Voyage, as he did in this Case, there can be no Reason to exclude his Executors from suing in the Admiralty, because he had no Opportunity of bringing his Wages to Account with the Owners. And in 2 Vent. 181. Allison v. Marlb. the Purser, though an Officer of the Ship, was allowed to sue for his Wages in the Admiralty. And in 2 Keb. 779. pl. 6. Rex. v. Pike, a Prohibition was denied where the Master and Mariners joined in a Suit in the Admiralty for their Wages (but Holt said, that a Prohibition ought to have been granted quoad in the said Case) and he cited a Case Hil. 27. and 28 Car. II. C. B. between Cook and Older, where Atkins and Ellis, Justices, were of Opinion, that a Prohibition ought to be granted to the Suit in the Admiralty Court, by the Master of a Ship for his Wages, though North, Chief Justice, and Wyndham, Justice, held the contrary Opinion. But Holt, Chief Justice, said, that it is an Indulgence, that the Courts at Westminster permit Mariners to sue for their Wages in the Admiralty Court, because they may all join in Suit; and it is grounded upon the Principle, Quod communis Error facit Jus, but they will not extend it to the Master of the Ship, especially if he was Master at the Beginning of the Voyage here in England, and the Contract was made with him here. Possibly if the Master of a Ship died in the Voyage, and another Man took upon him the Charge of the Ship upon the Sea, such Case might be different. As in the Case of Groswick v. Louthby, where it was held in this Court lately, that if a Ship was hypothecated, and Money borrowed upon her at Amsterdam, upon the Voyage, he who lent the Money may sue in the Admiralty for it; and this Court granted a Consultation in that Case: But in another Case, where the Money was borrowed upon the Ship before the Voyage, the King's Bench granted a Prohibition, and the Parties acquiesced under it. There are many Precedents in the Court of Admiralty of Suits by the Mariners for their Wages, but none for the Master of the Ship: And the Cases differ; for the Mariners contract upon the Credit of the Ship, and the Master upon the Credit of the Owners of the Ship, of whom generally he is one, &c. It was moved, that the Court would compel the Plaintiff to put in Bail to the Action to be brought for the Wages at Common Law, or otherwise deny the Prohibition, which it was said had been done often: Holt, Chief Justice, confessed that the Court had sometimes interposed, and procured Bail to be given, but it was by Consent, and in Case of the Proprietor himself; but in Regard that in this Case the Plaintiff was a Purchaser without Notice, there was no Reason, and a Prohibition was granted.

BALLAM libelled in the Admiralty against a Ship of Norway, for that she s. C. 1 Salt being in great Distress for Want of an Anchor and Cable, the Master contracted with Ballam, who delivered them on board, &c. upon which a Motion was made in this Court for a Prohibition to be directed to the Judge of the Admiralty, to prohibit him from proceeding in the said Suit, upon a Suggestion that the said Contract was made upon the Land, viz. at Ratcliffe, upon the River Thames, the said Ship being then there; and a Rule was made, that the Defendant should shew Cause why a Prohibition should not go; upon which it was shewed for Cause, 1. That of late Times the Admiralty had been always encouraged, and that they ought to have Cognizance of all Things incident to the Navigation, therefore they shall have Cognizance of a Suit for Mariners Wages. 2. That in this Case the Defendant would be without Remedy, if a Prohibition should be granted; because the Master of the Ship with whom the Contract was made, was dead, and the Part Owners were Foreigners. 3. That the Contract being upon the Land will not hinder the Admiralty to hold Plea, as was held in the Case of Cosford v. Lewistie, where a Libel was in the Admiralty against a Ship upon a Hypothecation made of her at Land, and that appeared upon the Instrument of Hypothecation, which mentioned it to have been made at Rotterdam; and yet a Prohibition was denied after great Consideration. Now here, though the Anchor, &c. were sold upon the Land, yet the Strefs of Weather which disabled the Ship, was upon the high Sea, and therefore the original Cause being within the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty, will draw the Residue to it as incident. Sed non allocatur, for, per curiam, this is not like the Case of Cosford v. Lewistie. 1. Because it does not appear in this Case, that this Ship was in her Voyage when she became in Distress, for Want of an Anchor, &c. and at the Time of the Contract. 2. There was no Hypothecation here, as there was in the Case cited; now where there is an Hypothecation, if the Admiralty should be prohibited to proceed, &c. the Party would be without Remedy, for no Suit can be against the Ship at Common Law upon it. Now it is true, that by the Maritime Law every Contract with the Master of a Ship implies an Hypothecation; but it is otherwise by the Law of England; therefore this being a Contract made with the Master upon the Land, it is the common Case; the Admiralty cannot have Cognizance of such a Suit, and therefore a Prohibition was granted: But, at the Impertunity of the Defendant's Council, the Court gave Order that the Plaintiff should declare upon it, &c.

S. C. Salt. 35. WATSON was Master of a Merchant Ship, which was taken at Sea by a Ad. Raymond. French Privateer; Watson agreed with the Captain of the Privateer for the
 P. 931. 932. Ransom of the Ship and Goods at 1200*l.* and as a Pledge or Security for the
 933. 934. Payment of the Money, Watson was detained and carried into France; but the Franter vers. Ship and Goods were released, and brought into Bristol, where the Ship was Watson. unladen, and the Goods landed (after Custom paid) and delivered to one Day;
 Trinity Term. but whether in Trust for the Benefit of the Master, or for the Use of the 2 Ann. Re Owners, was not agreed. Watson commences his Suit in the Court of Admiralty ginz. against the Owners, to compel them to pay the 1200*l.* and redeem him; and thereupon a Warrant was issued out of that Court to arrest the Ship and Goods, in quoddam causâ salvagii, in order to compel the Defendant to appear there, and the Ship and Goods were seized thereon: A Prohibition was prayed as to the Goods, suggesting the Seizure on Land infra corpus comitatûs, and so not within their Jurisdiction; it was insisted, that the Master had no Power to make such an Agreement, nor to subject the Goods to the payment of his Ransom, without the express Authority and Consent of his Owners. The Power of Hypothecation in a Voyage for Necessaries is incident to his Office, and allowed for the Necessity of the Thing, and the Benefit of the Owner; but this is not so, for this is a Redemption, and a new buying of the Ship; and if this be allowed lawful, it will give a Power to the Master to do an Injury to the Owners, by obliging them to the Performance of an Agreement of his making, upon any Terms never so unreasonable, and to compel them to pay more than the Ship and Goods are worth, as the Agreement in this Case is: Besides, the Power of the Master is only over the Ship, and he has no Power over the Goods and Lading to make any Disposition thereof; admitting the Master has such Power to subject the Goods to the Payment of his Ransom, yet he ought not to bring the Suit in his own Name, but the Suit ought to be carried on in the Name of the Vendee, or Purchaser of the Goods. Admitting this Suit proper, yet the Seizure is illegal; for the Court of Admiralty cannot award such Process; as their first Process to compel the Party to appear is in the Nature of an Execution against the Goods, and they can no more begin with such Process than an inferior Court; and as a Prohibition shall be awarded to any inferior Court, in such Cases, so ought it in this, though the Party have not yet appeared, nor any Libel be as yet exhibited; and so was it done in the Case of Capt. Sands and Sir Jehab Child, 5 Will. and Mar.

On the other Side it was insisted, that no Prohibition ought to go in this Salk. 31. Case, for that the Master has Power in this Case, to subject the Goods to the Payment of his Redemption; and it is founded on the same Reason as his Power of Hypothecation, the Necessity of the Thing, and the Benefit of the Owners, by parting with some Part of the Goods to save the Rest, whereas otherwise the whole would have been lost; so is Molloy 213, 214. Hob. 11, 12. but this being a Matter and a Cause properly within the Jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, shall be determined there: And in a Maritime Cause, whereof they have Cognizance, the Process of the Court may be executed upon Land, infra corpus comitatibus, &c. As to the Objection that the Suit in curia admiraltatis ought not to be in the Master's Name, it was answered, that it is most proper in his Name, for the Captors to whom the Ransom belongs, and who have the Master in their Custody, cannot sue in their own Name, because they are Enemies; but if the Suit be not carried on between proper Parties, it is good Cause for an Appeal, and shall be determined by the Rules of the Marine Law, but it is no Ground for a Prohibition. But admitting the Merits of the Cause to be against the Master, yet the Owners come too soon for a Prohibition before they have appeared, and before any Libel exhibited, so that it cannot appear to this Court what the Nature of the Suit is.

The Court desired to hear a Civilian before they made any Rule in this Case, and accordingly Dr. Lane attended for the Plaintiff in curia admiraltatis: He argued, that Salvage, or causa salvagii, as is mentioned in the Warrant, is of Admiralty Jurisdiction; that the Master represents both the Owners of the Ship and the Traders, and has a Trust reposed in him, which extends to the Goods as well as the Ship; the Master may detain the Goods of the Merchant for the Freight of the Ship or Wages of Mariners. The Master in this Case, by the Marine Law, hath an Hypothecation of the Goods to him, to keep till Payment be made of the Money agreed, and not only a bare Possession; and therefore though he depart with the Possession of the Goods before Payment, that does not divest his Interest. The Goods were in the Power and Possession of the Enemy, who might have kept or destroyed them all, if they had not been redeemed by the Master, which is for the Benefit of the Owners. Redemption, is a Redemption by the Master, who gives Security for the Payment of the Money agreed, by subjecting his Person as a Pawn or Pledge, so that he has, as it were, paid for the Goods. This Power of Redemption is not founded on the Rhodian Laws, or the Laws of Oleron, but arises from the Custom and Law of Nations, and the same Custom or Law gives the Master in this Case an Interest in the Ship and Goods.

It was agreed by the whole Court, that no Prohibition should be granted in this Case.

Holt, Chief Justice, said, that it seemed very just and reasonable in this Case, that the Owners of the Goods ought to pay the Redemption. If a Pirate should take the Ship and Goods, and the Master redeem them, the Owners shall make him Satisfaction; and then much more in this Case, when taken by an Enemy. When the Master makes a Composition for the Benefit of the Owners, it is highly reasonable that he should be indemnified. The whole Ship and Goods would have been Prize, if he had not made this Composition; therefore where there is an instant Danger of losing Ship and Goods (as in this Case, when they were under the Capture and Power of the Enemy) and no hopes of saving them then appears (though afterwards it may happen that the Ship may be rescued on fresh Pursuit) cannot the Master make such an Agreement as this, as well as he may throw part of the Goods overboard in Case of a Tempest, to save the Rest? The Master has the Custody and Care of the Ship and Goods: Supposing then that the Master has such a Power of compounding, the Goods then remain to him as a Security, and he may detain them till Payment, as he may for Freight; but then it is to be considered, whether, when he has once delivered them to the Owner, or to his Use, he has not departed with his Security, and has no Way to come at them again, as it is in Case of Freight. These Things are considerable if we go into the Merits of the Cause, but that not being before us, I give no Opinion therein.

S. C. Salk, 35. Ld. Raymond. P. 982, 983, and 984. Trinity Term. 2 Jan. Reg. Johnson v. Shippen. A Ship was outward bound to and being in Distress at Sea in her Voyage put into Boston in New-England, and there the Master took up Money, which he applying in Necessaries for the Ship; and, as a Security for the Repayment, by Way of Hypothecation, made a Bill of Sale to the Party, of Part of the Ship, who now libelled in the Court of Admiralty against the Ship and Owners, to compel the Payment of the Money. Serjeant Darnall moved for a Prohibition, and a Day was given to hear Counsel on both Sides. On the Day, Serjeant Darnall insisted, that as this Case is, there ought to go a Prohibition, because it appears, upon the Face of the Libel, that this Hypothecation was upon Land in Port, viz. at Boston, and not upon the Sea, as it ought to be, to give that Court a Jurisdiction. Besides this appears to be a Bill of Sale of Part of the Ship, upon which the Party may have his Remedy at Common Law, and not a proper Hypothecation. Also the Proceedings are against the Owners as well as against the Ship; and, if the Owners are liable, they are chargeable at Common Law.

Mr. Chesbire against the Prohibition. It makes no Difference whether the Hypothecation were upon the Sea or upon Land, being done in a Voyage; and a Prohibition has been denied upon the same Point as this Case, in this Court, between Coflard and Louthesly, Trin. 1 Wil. & Mar. where the Hypothecation was in Port, viz. at Rotterdam. The same was adjudged here, Hil. 1696, between Benoir and Jeffrys; and about a Year since between Juslin and Ballam, a Prohibition was granted, because it did not appear there was any Hypothecation. In this Case the Necessity of the Thing requires that it be done at Land and it would be prejudicial to Navigation, if this Suit in the Admiralty should not be.

Holt, Chief Justice. The Case of Coflard and Louthesly was the same as this; and there, on a Demurrer to a Declaration in a Prohibition, a Consultation was awarded by the whole Court. When an Hypothecation is made, either for Money to buy Necessaries, or for Necessaries for the Ship in a Voyage, the Court of Admiralty have a Jurisdiction, for the Party has no other Remedy; we cannot give him any Remedy against the Ship; and if the Suit there should not be allowed, the Master will have no Credit to take up Necessaries for the Use of the Ship.

Powel, Justice, of the same Opinion.

Holt, Chief Justice. No Master of a Ship can have Credit abroad, but upon the Security by Hypothecation; and shall we hinder the Court of Admiralty from giving Remedy, when we can give none ourselves? It will be the greatest Prejudice to Trade that can be, to grant a Prohibition in this Case. Indeed, if a Ship be hypothecated here in England before the Voyage begin, that is not a Matter within the Jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, for it is a Contract made here, and the Owners can give Security to perform the Contract. Which Powel agreed.

Holt, Chief Justice. There is no Difference whether the Hypothecation be alleged in the Libel to be made in Port, or appears so to be by the Suggestion, as it was in the Case of Coflard and Louthesly; and as to what you say, that this is a Bill of Sale, and so a Remedy at Law, that is not so, for the Master has no Authority to sell any Part of the Ship, and his Sale transfers no Property; but he may hypothecate. And since the Proceedings in the Court of Admiralty are against the Owners as well as against the Ship, let a Prohibition go quoad the Proceedings Proceedings against the Owners, and let them go on to condemn the Ship. To which the rest of the Judges agreed.

The preceding few Cases may serve to show the Power lodged in the Captain to engage his Ship for Payment of what Cash he may take up for his Repairs and Use; and though the Law disallows of his selling her, yet she is obliged for the fulfilling his Contracts so far as her Value, and that of her Freight (as has been shewn before); though he on his Part must give a just Account to the Owners, how the Money he has received was expended, and is consequently answerable to them for the same, and to act upon the Trust reposed in him, and the Good Conduct expected from him.

He must not carry any counterfeit Cockets or other fictitious and colourable Ship-Papers, that may occasionally involve the Goods of the Innocent with the Noцент.

Nor must he refuse the Payment of any just and ordinary Duties and Port Charges, Customs or Imposts, to the Hazard of any Part of his Lading; yet if he offers that which is due and he ought to pay, then he is excused. <sup>Leg. Oleron.</sup> 24

Boats, Anchors, and Sails are distrainable if the Master refuses to pay Port Duties, but no Part of the Cargo, for the Ship and its Masters are answerable for these Duties, as was adjudged in Favour of the Mayor and Burgeses of Newcastle, Salkeld 249, Michaelmas Term, 10 Will. III. But Chief Justice Holt gave a separate Opinion from the Court, that the Cargo is likewise liable. It is, however, the safest Way to distrain Things belonging to the Ship, or to the Master.

In some foreign Ports it is the Practice, upon any Dispute respecting the Payment of Harbour Dues and Fees, and the Refusal of the Payment of Debts contracted by the Master, to unhang the Rudder of the Ship, and to deliver it to the Quay-Master or some other Officer of the Place, till the Matter in Litigation is decided, or Satisfaction is made for the Demands of the Creditors on the Master. This is the established Custom at Ostend in particular, and as it absolutely prevents the Sailing of a Ship on her Voyage, should be carefully attended to by the Owners and Freighters, in their Orders to their Agents in such Ports, that they may readily make themselves responsible in such Cases, and thereby guard against the Consequences of the obstinacy and Perverseness of many Masters, who very often will not submit to the Advice of the Agent or Factor to whom the Ship is consigned.

Every Master ought carefully to examine his Rigging and Tackle before proceeding on a Voyage, that he may not sail with any insufficient and defective; nor ought he to go with fewer or smaller Cables than is usual and requisite for a Ship of equal Burthen with his; for, if any Damage happens in delivering the Goods, either in a Lighter or otherwise, by the breaking of a Rope or the like, he must be answerable for it; but when once out of his Custody, he is no further responsible; so that if on taking them out of the Lighter at the Wharf or Key, they are any Ways damaged, the Wharfinger then (and not the Master) must be accountable for it. But if fine Goods, or the like, are put into a close Lighter, to be conveyed from the Ship to the Key, it is usual in this Case for the Master to send a competent Number of his Mariners to look to the Merchandise, and if then any Part thereof be lost or embezzled, the Master is responsible*, and not the Wharfinger; but if such Goods are to be sent on board a Ship, there the Wharfinger at his Peril must take Care that the same be preserved.

On his Arrival at his destined Port, his first Care should be to see his Ship well anchored and moored, and, after she is reloaded, not to depart till she is cleared; for if any Damage happens through his, or his Mariner's Fault or Neglect, whereby the Cargo is prejudiced, he must answer the same. <sup>18 Eliza. C. 9; 14 Car. II. C. 1.</sup>

If there is a Consul or Vice Consul appointed by his Sovereign, or by any Commercial Company authorized by the Crown, to appoint such an Officer, resident at the Port where any merchant Ship arrives, it is the Duty of the Master to report his Arrival with his own Name, the Name of the Ship, and whereof her Cargo principally consists, and to put himself under his Protection, as far as his Authority extends, during his Stay in Port. If the Master does not conform to the legal Orders of the Consul of his Nation, and any Damage

Damage happens to his Ship or Cargo, he will be answerable, and not the Owners or Freighters. As in the following Case: A Master of an English Ship had moored her in the Harbour of Ostend, in a Place judged improper by the Quay-Master; on being ordered to remove her to another, he refused to obey either the Quay-Master, or the Consul. The Quay-Master thereupon cut the Cables, and the Ship being adrift, bulged against the opposite Side of the Basin, and was considerably damaged. The Consul, at the Request of the Merchant to whom the Cargo was consigned, protested against the Master, in Favour of the Owners, and he paid the Damages. He would have been imprisoned by the Magistrates of Ostend, if the Consul had not interceded.

And as the Law subjects him to the aforesaid Things in Port, so it does to many others in his Voyage; as that if he deviates in his Course without just Cause, or steers a dangerous and unusual one, when he may have a more secure Passage (though to avoid illegal Impositions he may somewhat change it); nor may he fail by Places infested by Pirates, Enemies, or other Places notoriously known to be unsafe, nor engage his Vessel among Rocks, or remarkable Sands, not being necessitated thereto by Violence of Wind and Weather, or deluded by false Lights.

No Master is answerable for the Contracts of his Mariners, unless he has recommended them to Credit, but they may be detained for Debts, or Misdemeanours.

He that will charge a Master with a fault in Relation to his Duty, by the Marine Law, must not think that a general Charge is sufficient, but he ought to assign and specify the very Fault wherewith he is so charged.

So he that will infer, that such or such a sad Disaster hath happened, or been occasioned by Reason of some fault in the Mariners, must not only prove the Fault itself, but must also prove the Fault did dispose to such a sad Event; or that such a Misfortune could not have happened, without such a Fault precedent.

If an Infant, being Master of a Ship, contracts to bring Goods from any Port to England, and there to deliver them, but does not deliver them according to Agreement, but wastes and consumes them, he may be sued in the Admiralty Court although he be an Infant; for this Suit is but in Nature of a Detinue or a Trover and Conversion at the common Law; and a Prohibition denied for that Cause.

A Master can let out his Vessel to freight, take in Goods and Passengers, mend and furnish his Ship, and to that Effect he may (if need be) in a strange Country, borrow Money upon the Ship, some of the Tackle, or sell some of the Merchandise; and in this latter Case, the highest Price that the Remainder is sold for, must be paid to the Merchant or Owner of them, who in Return must pay freight as well for what (through Necessity) was so sold, as for what remained. Leg. Oleron 1. But if the Ship in the Voyage afterwards should happen to be cast away, then only shall be tendered the Price that the Goods were bought for.

Salk. 34 pl. 1.

By the Common Law, the Master of a Ship should not impawn the Ship or Goods; for any Property, either general or special, was not him in, nor is such Power given unto him by the constituting of him a Master. Yet the Common Law hath held the Law of Oleron reasonable, that if a ship springs a Leak at Sea, or is in Want of Victuals and other Necessaries, whereby she is either in Danger, or the Voyage may be defeated, that in such Case of Necessity the Master may impawn for Money, or other Things, to relieve such Extremities, by employing the same to that End; and therefore he being the Person trusted with the Ship and the Voyage may be reasonably thought to have the Power given to him implicitly, rather than to see the whole lost.

2 Vernon 645.
1759.

The Master of a Ship putting into Port by Strefs of Weather on his Voyage, and having no Money may hypothecate, or mortgage the Ship, for Necessaries or Repairs, and the Owners must indemnify him; but he cannot sell the Ship, neither ought he, except in the Case of extreme Necessity, to sell any Part of his Cargo. Indeed this Necessity can scarce ever happen, unless a Ship is driven into a Place inhabited by Barbarians; for it is usual in the Ports of all civilized Nations, to take the Master's Bills of Exchange on the Owners or Freighters for Repairs or Provisions.

But

But if the Master takes up Money to repair or victual a Ship when there is no Occasion, he only shall become Debtor; or if he takes up more Money than was necessary, so that the Lender advances a far greater Sum than was wanted, the Owners shall not be liable; for this would be to encourage Collusion between the Masters and Foreign Agents or Merchants supplying them, supposing both to have fraudulent Designs. The Master therefore ought to be furnished by the Party who has undertaken the Repairs or Victualling in the Foreign Port, with fair attested Bills of the necessary Acts done for the Ship, and of the Money advanced for the same.

But a Master for any Debt of his own cannot legally impawn or hypothecate the Ship, &c. for the same is no ways liable, but in Case of necessity, for the Relief and completing of the Voyage.

Nor can he sell or dispose of the same without an Authority or Licence from the Owners; and when he does impawn or hypothecate the Vessel or Furniture, he ought to have the consent and advice of his Mariners. Siderf. 453. vide 1 Rolls Abr. 530.olls 2.

A Ship being repaired, &c. in the Thames, he is not liable, but the Owners. Perre Will. 267.

Though the Master cannot on every Case of Necessity impawn the Vessel or Furniture, for if he be freighted, and he being (an Owner) is to join with the rest in buying Provisions for the Voyage, and perhaps he wants Money (a great Sign of Necessity) yet cannot he impawn the Vessel or Furniture, otherwise, or for more, than his own Share in her, the which he may transfer and grant, as a Man may do an eighth or fifth Part in Land or Houses; but such Obligation of the Vessel must be in foreign Parts or Places where the Calamity or Necessity is universal on the Vessel, that will oblige all the Owners. L. K. Sym. 152 Judgement Oleron. C. 22.

If the Vessel happens afterwards to be cast away, and the Mariners by their great Pains and Care recover some of the Wreck and Lading, the Master in that Case may pledge the same, and distribute the Product among his distressed Sailors, in order to their carrying them home to their own Country: But, if the Mariners no Way contributed to the Salvage, then their Reward is lost and sunk with the Vessel. And if there be any considerable Part of the Cargo saved, he ought not to dismiss the Mariners till Advice from the Freighters or Laders; for otherwise, perchance, he may be made liable. Ditto, C. 34.

If Merchants freight a Vessel at their own Charges, and set her to Sea, and she happens afterwards to be weather-bound, the Master may impawn either the Ship or lading at his Pleasure, or at least such as he could most conveniently raise Money on, rather than see the whole Voyage overfet or lost; and, if he cannot pawn the Lading, he may sell the same, what is, so much as is necessary; in all which Cases his Act obliges; however, Orders and Instructions from his Owners are as carefully to be regarded and followed as the Magnet. L. g. Oleron. C. 22.

When a Master shall arrive with his Ship at Gravesend, he shall not be above three Days coming from thence to the Place of Discharge; nor is he to touch at any Quay or Wharf till he comes to Chester Quay, unless hindered by contrary Winds or Draught of Water, or other just Impediment, to be allowed by the Officers: And likewise he or his Purser are there to make Oath of the Burthen, Contents, and Lading of his Ship; and of the Marks, Number, Contents, and Qualities of every Parcel of Goods therein laden, to the best of his Knowledge; also where, and in what Port, she took her Lading, in what Country built, and how manned, who the Master during the Voyage, and who the Owners; and in Out-Ports must come up to the Place of unloading, as the Condition of the Port requires, and make Entries on Pain of 100*l.*—Nor is such a Master to lade aboard any Goods outward to any Place whatsoever, without entering the Ship at the Custom-house, her Captain, Master, Burthen, Guns, Ammunition, and to what Place she intends, and before Departure to bring in a Note under his Hand, of every Merchant that shall have laid aboard any Goods, together with the Marks and Numbers of such Goods, and be sworn as to the same, on Pain of 100*l.* 12 Car. The Mate of a Ship, as well as a single Mariner (or a Number of them) may sue in the Admiralty Court for their Wages, as the Mate only differs from the Sailors in Title, being a Servant to the Master with whom he contracts as the Mariners do. Ld. Raymond. P. 398, 632.

Upon a Motion for a new Trial in an Action for a Seaman's Wages, Holt, Chief Justice, said, that if the Ship be lost before the first Port of Delivery, then the Seamen lose all their Wages; but, if after she has been at the first Port of Delivery, then they lose only those from the last Port of Delivery; but if they run away, although they have been at a Port of Delivery, yet they lose all their Wages. Ex relatione m'ri Jacob.

If a Ship be taken by the Enemy before she arrives at her first Port of Delivery, the Seamen cannot recover any Wages; but if she has delivered her Cargo, and is taken on her Return, they will recover Wages for the outward-bound Voyage, and half the Time of delivering the Cargo at the first Port of Delivery, and no more. In an Action brought for Mariners' Wages, for a Voyage from Carolina to London, it appeared, that the Plaintiff served three or four Months; and before the Ship came to London, which was the delivering Port, he was impressed into the Queen's Service, and afterwards the Ship arrived at the delivering Port; and ruled by Holt on Evidence at Guildhall, that the Plaintiff should recover pro tanto as he served, the Ship coming safe to the delivering Port. Afterwards, in another Cause in such an Action it appeared that the Plaintiff was hired by the Defendant at Carolina, to serve on board the Jane Sloop, whereof the Defendant was Master, from Carolina to England, at 3*l.* per Month; that he served two Months, then the Ship was taken by a French Privateer, and ransomed, and, just as she came off Plymouth, the Plaintiff was impressed, &c. and then the Ship came safe into the River Thames, where she disposed of her Cargo; and, by Holt the Plaintiff can have no Wages, the Ship having been taken by the Enemy and ransomed. Mr. Raymond insisted that in that Case he should recover pro rata, and that the Usage among Merchants was so; which Holt said, if he could prove, it would do; but, wanting Proof of it, the Plaintiff was nonsuited.

It shall be lawful for two Justices of Peace, as also for Mayors, Aldermen, Bailiffs, and other chief Officers and Magistrates of any City, or Town corporate, and likewise for the Church-wardens and Overseers of the Poor of the several Parishes, with the Approbation of such Justices of Peace, Mayors, &c. to bind out any Boys of the Age of ten Years or upwards, or who shall be chargeable, or whose Parents are chargeable to the Parish, or who shall beg for Alms, to be Apprentices to the Sea-Service, to any of her Majesty's Subjects, Masters or Owners of any Ship belonging to any Port within England, Wales, or Berwick, until such Boys shall attain the Age of twenty-one Years; and the Age of every such Boy shall be mentioned in his Indentures, taken from a Copy of the Register Book, wherein the Time of his being baptized is entered (where the same can be had) which Copy shall be given and attested by the Minister or Curate of such Parish, without Fee, and may be wrote without Stamp: And where no such Entry can be found, such Justices, Mayors, &c. shall inform themselves of such Boy's Age, and insert the same in the Indentures; and the Age so inserted, shall be taken to be his true Age. Ann. C. 6. §. 1.

The Church-Wardens and Overseers of the Parish, from whence such Boy shall be bound Apprentice, shall pay to such Master, at the Time of his Binding, 50*s.* to provide Clothing and Bedding. Ditto, §. 2.

The Overseers of the Poor of every Township or Village may execute the Powers hereby directed. Ditto, §. 3.

No such Apprentice shall be impressed; or suffered to enter into her Majesty's Service, till he arrive to the Age of eighteen Years. Ditto, §. 4.

The Church-Wardens and Overseers shall send the Indentures to the Collector of Customs, residing at any Port whereunto such Masters of such Ship belong; who shall enter all Indentures so sent and make an Endorsement of the Registry thereof, without Fee; and such Collector, neglecting to enter such Indentures, and endorse the same, or making false Entries, shall forfeit 5*l.* to the Use of the Poor of the Parish, from whence such Boy was bound; and such Collector shall transmit Certificates to the Admiralty, containing the Names and Ages of every such Apprentice, and to what Ship he belongs; and, upon Receipt of such Certificates, Protections shall be given for such Apprentices, till they attain their Ages of eighteen Years, without Fee; which Certificates are not required to be wrote on stamped Paper, &c.

Every Person to whom any Poor Parish Boy shall be put Apprentice, according to 43 Eliz. Cap. 2. may with the Approbation of two Justices of Peace of the County, dwelling in or near the Parish where such Poor Boy was bound, or with the Approbation of any Mayor, Alderman, Bailiff, or other chief Officer or Magistrate of any City, Borough, or Town Corporate, where such poor Boy was bound

- by Indenture, turn over such poor Boy Apprentice to any Master of such Ship, for the remaining Time of his Apprenticeship; all which Indentures of Assignment are to be registered, and Certificates thereof transmitted, by such Collector at the Ports where such Parish Apprentices shall be so assigned over, in Manner aforesaid; and Protections shall be given for such Apprentices, till they attain their Age of eighteen Years.
- <sup>2</sup> Ann. C. 6. All such poor Boys, till they attain their Ages of eighteen Years, shall be exempted from Payment of 6d. per Month to Greenwich Hospital.
- Ditto, S. 8. All Masters or Owners of Ships of thirty to fifty Tons shall be obliged to take one such Apprentice, and one more for the next fifty Tons, and one more for every hundred Tons such Ship shall exceed the Burthen of one hundred Tons; and such Master or Owner refusing to take such Apprentice, shall forfeit 10% for the Use of the Poor of the Parish from whence such Boy was bound.
- Ditto, S. 9. Every Master or Owner of such Ship, after his Arrival into Port, and before he clears out, shall give an Account under his Hand to the Collector of such Port to which he belongs, containing the Names of such Apprentices as are then in his Service.
- Ditto, S. 10. Every such Apprentice shall be sent to the Port to which his Master shall belong by the Church-wardens and Overseers of the Parish from whence such Apprentice is bound; the Charges to be provided, as the Charges for sending of Vagrants.
- Ditto, S. 11. The Counterpart of such Indentures shall be attested by the Collector at the Port (where such Apprentice shall be bound or assigned over) and the Constable or other Officer, who shall bring such Apprentices; which Constable, &c. shall, transmit the Counterparts of such Indentures to the Church-wardens and Overseers of the Parishes from whence such Apprentices shall be bound.
- Ditto, S. 12. Two Justices of Peace, dwelling in or near the Ports, and all Mayors, Aldermen Bailiffs, and other chief Officers and Magistrates of any City, Borough or Town corporate, in, or near adjoining to such Port to which such Ship shall arrive, shall have Power to enquire into, and examine, hear, and determine all Complaints of ill Usage from the Masters to such Apprentices, and also of all such as shall voluntarily put themselves Apprentices to the Sea Service, as aforesaid, as in other Cases between Masters and Apprentices.
- Ditto, S. 13. Every such Collector shall keep a Register, containing, as well the Number and Burthen of such Ship, together with the Master's or Owners' Names, as also the Names of such Apprentices in each Ship belonging to their Ports, and from what Parishes such Apprentices were sent; and shall transmit Copies of such Register to the Quarter-Sessions, or to such Cities, Boroughs, Towns Corporate, Parishes, or Places, when required, for which Copies no Fees shall be taken, &c.
- Ditto, S. 14. Every Custom-House Officer, at each of the Ports, shall insert at the Bottom of their Cockets, the Number of Men and Boys on board the Ships, at their going out of every such Port, describing the Apprentices by their Names, Ages, and Dates of their Indentures, for which no Fee shall be taken.
- Ditto, S. 15. Every Person who shall voluntarily bind himself Apprentice to any Master or Owner of a Ship shall not be impressed into her Majesty's Sea Service during three Years from the Date of the Indentures, which Indentures are to be registered, and Certificates thereof transmitted by such Collector at the Port where such Apprentices shall bind themselves, as aforesaid: Upon Receipt of which, Protections shall be given for the said first three Years of their Apprenticeship, without Fee.
- Ditto, S. 17. When Parish Children of the Age of eighteen Years, and other voluntary Apprentices shall be impressed, or enter into her Majesty's Service, the Masters of such Apprentices shall be entitled to able Seamen's Wages for such of their Apprentices as shall upon Examination be found qualified.
- <sup>4</sup> and <sup>5</sup> Ann. C. 19. S. 16. No Master shall be obliged to take any Apprentice under the Age of thirteen Years, or who shall not appear to be fitly qualified, both as to Health and Strength of Body for that Service; and any Widow of the Master of such Ship, or the Executor, or Administrator of such Master, who shall have been obliged to take such Parish Boys Apprentice, shall have the same Power of assigning over such Apprentices, to any other Masters of Ships who have not their Complement, as is given given by the Act, 2 Ann. Cap. 6. to such Persons as have taken Apprentices, in Pursuance of the 43 F<sup>ix</sup>. Cap. 2.

No Person of the Age of eighteen Years shall have any Protection from her Majesty's Sea Service who have been in any Sea Service before the Time they bound themselves Apprentices. 17. S. 1. 19. S. 17.

To the Intent, that 6d. per Mensm. may be effectually collected, every Person that shall serve her Majesty or any other in any of her Majesty's Ships, or in any Ships belonging to Subjects of Great-Britain or Ireland, or Dominions thereunto belonging, and every Master working in his own Ship, whether employed upon the high Sea or Coasts, or in any Port, Bay, or Creek (other than such Apprentices under the Age of eighteen Years as are exempted from Payment of 6d. per Mensm. by 2 Ann. Cap. 6. and Persons employed in any Boat upon the Coasts in taking of Fish, which are brought fresh on Shore into Great-Britain and Ireland, and Persons employed in Boats that trade only from Place to Place, within any River, or in open Boats upon the Coasts) shall pay the said 6d. per Mensm. for the support of Greenwich Hospital. 10 Ann. C. 17. S. 1.

The Master of every Ship, not in her Majesty's Service, is required to deduct Ditto, S. 2. out of the Wages accruing to such Seamen 6d. per Mensm. and pay the same to such Officers as shall be appointed by the Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral.

It shall be lawful for the Commissioners executing the Office of Lord High Admiral, to appoint Receivers of the said Duty, and to authorize such Receivers to depute the Collectors, or other Officers of the Customs, of the out Ports and of the Ports of Ireland, or such other as they shall think fit, to collect the same; and it shall be lawful for the Commissioners executing the Office of Lord High Admiral, to make such Allowance to them out of the said Duties as they shall judge reasonable. Ditto, S. 3.

It shall be lawful for the said Receivers, or their Deputies, by Warrant to summon all Masters, or (in their Absence) the Owners of Ships not in her Majesty's Service, to appear at the Office of the said Receivers, &c. so as the Person summoned be not obliged to travel above ten Miles) which Receivers, or their Deputies, are empowered to examine every such Master or Owner as to the Number and Times of Service of all Persons belonging to such Ships, who are chargeable with the said 6d. per Mensm.; and, if such Masters or Owners shall refuse, when summoned (not having a reasonable Excuse) to appear, or if they shall obstinately refuse to make discovery of the Matters aforesaid upon their Oaths, or shall neglect to pay the Monies due to the Hospital within fourteen Days after they shall be cleared inwards, such Offenders shall forfeit 200*l.* &c. And if any such Master shall attempt to go to Sea with his Ship, before he hath paid the said Duties for the Voyage preceding, such Receivers, or their Deputies, are empowered to stop such Ship, and, upon the Death or Removal of any Master, the Owners shall deliver to the succeeding Master a true Account of the said Duty due to the Hospital, and Money sufficient for the Payment of the same, and in Default thereof, such Receivers or their Deputies, may stop such Ship from proceeding to Sea. Ditto, S. 4.

In all Cases where by this Act an Oath is required to be taken, the solemn Affirmation of Quakers shall be accepted instead of such Oath; and, in Case any Quaker shall, upon such Affirmation, declare any Matter which shall be false, or if any other Person shall, pursuant to this Act, willingly make a false Oath, he (being lawfully convicted) shall suffer like Punishment, as Persons convicted of wilful Perjury. Ditto, S. 5.

No private Contracts made by any Seamen shall obstruct or delay the Payment of the Duties appropriated to the said Hospital. Ditto, S. 6.

This Act shall be a publick Act, &c. Ditto, S. 7.

Nothing in this Act shall oblige the Payment of 6d. per Mensm. by any Masters or Servants of the Hoys or Vessels belonging to the Port of London, and employed within the North Foreland, in bringing Corn, Fish, or other Provisions, for London. Ditto, S. 8.

The Commissioners of the Admiralty shall consider as qualified for an Admission into the said Hospital, any Seaman who shall offer himself to be admitted, Ditto, S. 20.

and shall produce a Certificate of his having been wounded or hurt in defending any Ship belonging to the Subjects of her Majesty against Enemies, or in taking any Ship from the Enemy, and thereby disabled from Sea Service. This Sect. confirmed by 3 Geo. II. Cap. 29. Sect. 10.

- <sup>1</sup> Geo. II. St. 2. C. 14. S. 12. The Governors, Ministers, and Consuls, appointed by his Majesty in foreign Parts, or, where none such are resident, any two British Merchants there residing, are required to send and provide for all seafaring Men and Boys, Subjects of Great-Britain, that shall by Shipwreck, Capture, or other unavoidable Accident, be driven or cast away to such foreign Parts; and the said Governours, &c. are required to subsist such seafaring Men and Boys, after the Rate of 6d. per Diem each, and to send Bills of their Disbursements, with proper Vouchers to the Commissioners of the Navy, who are to cause immediate Payment to be made of such Bills; and the said Governors, &c. shall put the said Men and Boys on board the first Ship belonging to his Majesty that shall arrive at any Parts within a convenient Distance: And if no Ship of War shall be within a convenient Distance, they shall send the said Men and Boys on board such Merchant Ships as are bound for Great-Britain, and are in want of Men to make up their Complement; but if neither Case happen, they shall provide a passage Homeward for such Men and Boys in the first Merchant Ship bound for Great-Britain; and every Master of a Merchant Ship homeward bound from thence shall take on board so many of such seafaring Men and Boys as the said Governors, &c. shall direct, not exceeding four for each hundred Tons of his Ship.
- Ditto, S. 13. Every Master of a Vessel who shall produce a Certificate under the Hands of the said Governors, &c. certifying the Numbers and Names of the Men and Boys taken on board by their Direction, and the Time of taking them, and shall make an Affidavit at his Return, setting forth the Time during which he subsisted them, and that he did not, during that Time, want of his own Complement of Men, or how many he did want, and for what Time, shall receive from the Commissioners of the Navy, 6d. per Diem for the Passage and Provisions of each Man and Boy, from the Day of their Embarkation Homewards, to the Day of their Arrival, or being put into some Ship of War; 6d. per Diem only being deducted for such Time as he wanted of his Complement.
- <sup>2</sup> Geo. II. Cap. 7. S. 1. The several Acts concerning the Duty of 6d. per Month, payable by all Seamen, for Support of Greenwich Hospital, shall extend to all Ships belonging to his Majesty's Subjects within the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, and within all his Majesty's Dominions in America, as well as to those within Great-Britain and Ireland.
- Ditto, S. 2. For the better collecting the said Duties, it shall be lawful for the Receivers thereof to depute any Officer of the Customs in the several Ports of the said Islands and Colonies, or such other Persons as they shall think fit, to collect the same; and the Commissioners of the Admiralty may make such Allowance to them out of the said Duty as they shall judge reasonable.
- Ditto, S. 3. The Collectors of the Duties in the Ports of the said Islands and Colonies shall summon and examine upon Oath all Masters and Owners of Ships belonging to his Majesty's Subjects as by 10 Ann. Cap. 17. And if any such Master shall neglect to appear and make such Discovery, such Master, &c. shall forfeit 20l. Money of Great-Britain.
- Ditto, S. 4. All Masters, &c. of Ships belonging to the King's Subjects, within the said Islands or Colonies, shall pay such Part of the said Duty as shall be due at their Arrival, and during their Continuance in Great-Britain or Ireland within the said Kingdoms; and such Part as shall be due at the Time of their Return to, and during their Continuance in the said Islands or Colonies, within the said Islands and Colonies; and all Masters, &c. of Ships belonging to any Subjects of his Majesty within Great-Britain, or Ireland, who shall trade from thence to any of the said Islands or Colonies, shall pay the said Duty of 6d. per Month, only in Great-Britain or Ireland.
- Ditto, S. 5. It shall be lawful for the Receivers of the Duty, and their Deputies, by Warrant, to summon and examine upon Oath all Masters, &c. of Ships employed by the Navy, Victualling, Ordnance, Customs, Post-Office, or any other Public Public Offices of the Crown, in the Service of his Majesty; and if such Master, &c. refuse to appear, or to make Discovery, or shall neglect to pay the said Duty, they shall forfeit 20*l*.

The Secretaries or chief Clerks of the Navy, &c. usually employing Shipping Ditto, s. 6. for the Service of his Majesty, shall, on the first of January in each Year, or within twenty Days following, deliver into the Office of the Receiver of the Duty in the Port of London, a List of the Ships, that, in the Year preceding, shall have been employed by such Offices, and of all Ships which remain in the Service of such Offices, and of such as shall be discharged, and of the Names of the Masters, &c. and the Number of Seamen employed in every such Ship; and no Treasurer, or other Officer belonging to such Offices; shall make out or pay any Bill for the Freight of any Ship so employed, or pay any Wages to any Master, &c. till such Master, &c. shall produce to such Treasurer, &c. an Acquittance signed by the Receiver or his Deputy, whereby it shall appear that such Master, &c. hath paid the said Duty of 6*d.* per Month, and that he is not more than 30 Days in Arrear to the Hospital; and if any Default shall be made by any Secretary, &c. he shall forfeit 5*l*.

All Masters of Merchant Ships, or other private Vessels, liable to the Duty of 6*d.* per Month, shall pay the said Duty before any such Ships shall be cleared inwards, in any of the Ports of Great-Britain or Ireland, or the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, &c. or of the Colonies in America; and no Officer of the Customs shall clear inwards any Merchant Ship liable to the said Duty, or grant any Warrant, to give or make out any Cockett, Transits, Returns, or Discharges to such Ships, nor suffer them to go out of Port till the Master, &c. produce to the Officer an Acquittance signed by the Receiver, whereby it shall appear, that such Master, &c. hath paid the said Duty, and that he is not more than thirty Days in Arrear: And every Master of such Ship who shall neglect to pay the 6*d.* per Month, also every officer of the Customs who shall make Default in the Premises, shall forfeit 20*l*.

It shall not be lawful for any Master of a Ship, bound beyond the Seas, to 2 Geo. II. C. 36. S. 1. carry any Mariner, except his Apprentices, from the Port where he was shipped to proceed on any Voyage beyond the Seas, without first coming to an Agreement with such Mariners for their Wages, which Agreement shall be made in Writing, declaring what Wages each Seaman is to have for so long Time as they shall Ship themselves for, and also to express in the Agreement the Voyage for which such Seamen was shipped; and if any such Master shall carry out any Mariner, except his Apprentice, upon any Voyage beyond the Seas, without first entering into such Agreement, and he and they signing the same, he shall forfeit 5*l.* for every such Mariner to the Use of Greenwich Hospital, to be recovered on Information on the Oath of one Witness, &c. and in Case he refuses to pay the Forfeiture, it shall be levied by Distress, &c.

If any Seaman ship himself on board any Merchant Vessel, on an intended Ditto, s. 2. Voyage for Parts beyond the Seas, he shall be obliged to sign such Agreement within three Days after he shall have entered himself, which Agreement shall be conclusive to all Parties for the Time contracted for.

If any Seaman shall desert, or refuse to proceed on the Voyage, or shall Ditto, s. 3. desert in Parts beyond the Seas, after he shall have signed such Contracts, he shall forfeit to the Owners of such Ship the Wages due to him at the Time of deserting or refusing to proceed on the Voyage.

If any such Seaman shall desert, or absent himself from such Ship, after he hath Ditto, s. 4. signed such Contract, upon Application made to any Justice of the Peace by the Master, or other Person having Charge of the Ship, it shall be lawful for such Justice to issue his Warrant to apprehend such Seaman; and if he shall refuse to proceed on the Voyage, and shall not give a sufficient Reason for such Refusal, to the Satisfaction of the Justice, to commit him to the House of Correction, to be kept to hard Labour, not exceeding thirty Days, nor less than fourteen.

If any Seaman shall absent himself from the Vessel to which he belongs Ditto, s. 5. without Leave of the Master, or other Chief Officer having Charge of such Ship, Ship, he shall for every Day's Absence, forfeit two Day's Pay to the Use of Greenwich Hospital.

2 Geo. II. C. 36. S. 6. If any Seaman, not entering into the Service of his Majesty, shall leave the Vessel to which he belongs, before he shall have a Discharge in Writing from the Master, or other Person having Charge of such Vessel, he shall forfeit one Month's Pay.

Ditto, S. 7. On the Arrival of any Vessel into Great-Britain, from Parts beyond the Seas, the Masters shall pay the Seamen their Wages, if demanded, in thirty Days after the Vessel's being entered at the Custom-house; (except where a Covenant shall be entered into to the contrary) or at the Time the said Seamen shall be discharged, which shall first happen, deducting out of the Wages, the Penalties by this Act imposed, under Penalty of paying to such Seamen that shall be unpaid 20s. over and above the Wages to be recovered as the Wages may be recovered; and such Payment of Wages shall be good in Law, notwithstanding any Action, Bill of Sale, Attachment, or Incumbrance whatsoever.

Ditto, S. 8. No Seaman, by signing such Contract, shall be deprived of using any Means for the Recovery of Wages, which he may now lawfully use; and where it shall be necessary that the Contract in Writing should be produced in Court, no Obligation shall lie on any Seaman to produce the same, but the Master or Owner of the Ship; and no Seaman shall fail in any Action or Process for Recovery of Wages, for want of such Contract being produced.

Ditto, S. 9. The Masters or Owners of Ships shall have Power to deduct out of the Wages of any Seaman all Penalties incurred by this Act, and to enter them in a Book, and to make Oath, if required, to the Truth thereof; which Book shall be signed by the Master and two principal officers belonging to such Ship, setting forth, that the Penalties contained in such Book are the whole Penalties stopt from any Seaman during the Voyage; which Penalties (except the Forfeiture of Wages to the Owners, on the Desertion of any Seaman, or on refusing to proceed on the Voyage) shall go to the Use of Greenwich Hospital, to be paid and accounted for by the Masters of Ships coming from beyond the Seas to the same Officer at any Port, who collects the 6d. per Month, which Officer shall have Power to administer an Oath to every Master touching the Truth of such Penalties.

Ditto, S. 10. If any Masters or Owners of Ships shall deduct out of the Wages of any Seaman any of the Penalties by this Act directed, to the Use of Greenwich Hospital, and shall not pay the Money to some Officer who collects the 6d. per Month, in the Port where the Deduction shall be made, within three Months after such Deduction, they shall forfeit treble the Value to the Use of the Hospital; which, together with the Money deducted, shall be recovered by the same Means, as the Penalties for not duly paying the 6d. per Month.

Secl. 11. This Act shall be a public Act.

Secl. 12. This Act shall continue five Years, &c.

Secl. 13. Nothing in this Act shall debar any Seaman from entering into the Service of his Majesty; nor shall such Seaman for such Entry forfeit the Wages due to him during his service in such Merchant Ship; nor shall such Entry be deemed a Desertion.

Continued by 8 Geo. II. Cap. 21. to 25 March, 1749, &c. Farther continued by 23 Geo. II. p. 487. to 25 March, 1764; and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

22 and 23 Car. II. Cap. 11. S. 2. Where any Goods shall be laden on board any English Ship of the Burden of two hundred Tons or upwards, and mounted with sixteen Guns or more, if the Commander shall yield up the Goods to any Turkish Ships, or to any Pirates or Sea Rovers, without fighting, he shall upon Proof thereof made in the Court of Admiralty, be incapable of taking Charge of any English Ship as

23 and 14 Car. II. Cap. 11. Scl. 35. Ship, he shall suffer Imprisonment by Warrant from the said Court, during six Months for every Offence; and in Case the Persons taking the said Goods shall release the Ship, or pay unto the Master any Money or Goods for Freight, or other Reward, the said Goods or Money, or the Value thereof, as also the Master's Master's Part of such Ships so released, shall be liable to repair the Persons whose Goods were taken, by Action in the Court of Admiralty; and in Case the Commander's Part of the Ship, together with such Money and Goods, shall not be sufficient to repair all the Damages sustained, the Reparations recovered on the Master's Part of the Ship shall be divided pro rata, amongst the Persons prosecuting and proving their Damages, and the Persons damaged shall have their Action against the Master for the Remainder.

No Master of any such English Ship, being at Sea, and having discovered <sup>13 and 14</sup> any Ship to be a Turkish Ship, Pirate, or Sea Rover, shall depart out of his <sup>Car. II. C. 11.</sup> Ship. S. 3.

If the Master of any English Ship, though not of the Burthen of two hundred <sup>Ditto, S. 4.</sup> Tons, or mounted with sixteen Guns, shall yield his Ship unto any Turkish Ship, Pirate, or Sea Rover, (not having at least his double Number of Guns) without fighting, such Master shall be liable to the Sentence of this Act.

Upon Process out of the Court of Admiralty, it shall be lawful for all Com- <sup>Ditto, S. 5.</sup> manders of his Majesty's Ships, or the Commanders of any other English Ships, to seize such Ships or Masters so offending, according to the Process, and the same to send in Custody, into any Ports of his Majesty's Dominions, to be proceeded against according to this Act.

Provided that none be hereby encouraged to violate the Rights of the Port of <sup>Ditto, S. 6.</sup> any foreign Prince or State in Amity.

If the Mariners or inferior Officers of any English Ship laden with Goods <sup>Ditto, S. 7.</sup> shall decline or refuse to fight, and defend the Ship, when they shall be thereunto commanded by the Master, or shall utter any Words to discourage the other Mariners from defending the Ship, every Mariner who shall be found guilty of declining, or refusing, as aforesaid, shall lose all his Wages due to him, together with such Goods as he hath in his Ship, and suffer Imprisonment, not exceeding six Months; and shall during such Time be kept to hard Labour for his Maintenance.

Provided, that if any Ship shall have been yielded, contrary to the Will of the <sup>Ditto, S. 8.</sup> Commander, by the Disobedience of the Mariners, testified by their having laid violent Hands on him, the Master shall not be liable to the Sentence of Incapacity, nor to any Action for the Losses sustained by the Merchants, unless he shall have received back, from the Takers, his Ship, or some Reward.

Masters may re-imburse themselves out of the Wages of their Mariners for Losses happening by their Negligence. As was adjudged in the Case of Lane against Sir Robert Cotton. Raymond 650, Easter Term, 13 Will. III. Goods were stolen from on board the Ship in the River.

Every Mariner who shall have laid violent Hands on his Commander, to hinder <sup>Ditto, S. 9.</sup> him from fighting in Defence of his Ship and Goods, shall suffer Death as a Felon.

When any English Ship shall have been defended by Fight, and brought to <sup>Ditto, S. 10.</sup> her Port, in which Fight any of the Officers or Seamen shall have been wounded, it shall be lawful for the Judge of the Admiralty, or his Surrogate, or the Judge of the Vice-Admiralty, within which the Ship shall arrive, upon Petition of the Master or Seaman, to call unto him such as he shall be informed to be Adventurers, or Owners of the Ship and Goods, and by Advice with them to raise upon the Owners and Adventurers by Process of the Court such Sums of Money, as himself with the major Part of the Adventurers or Owners present, shall judge reasonable, not exceeding two per Cent. of the Ship and Goods, according to the first Costs of the Goods by the Invoice (which the Owner or his Factor is to produce) or by the Oath of the Owner, or his Correspondent; which Money shall be paid to the Register of the Court, who shall receive 3d. in each Pound, thence to be distributed amongst the Captain, Master, Officers, and Seamen of the said Ship, or Widows and Children of the Slain, according to the Direction of the Judge, with the Approbation of three or more of the Owners or Adventurers, who shall proportion the same unto the Ship's Company, having special Regard unto the Widows and Children of such as shall have been slain, and to such as shall have been wounded or maimed.

In Case the Company belonging to any English Merchant Ship shall take <sup>Ditto, S. 11.</sup> any ship which shall first have assaulted them, the Officers and Mariners shall, after

- after Condemnation of such Ship and Goods, have such Part thereof as is practised in private Men of War.

- Ditto, P. 396. Every Person of what Age soever, who shall use the Sea, shall be exempted from being impressed for the Space of two Years, to be computed from his first going to Sea; and every Person who having used the Sea shall bind himself Apprentice to serve at Sea, shall be exempted for the Space of three Years, to be computed from the Time of Binding.

Substance of the Act of the 20th of George II. establishing the Corporate Company for the Relief and Support of sick, maimed, and disabled Seamen; and of the Widows and Children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the MERCHANTS' SERVICE.

THE Preamble to this Act observes, that by one made in the 7 and 8 Will. III. P. 835 certain Encouragements were given to Seamen to register themselves for his Majesty's Service; and if any such should, by Age or other Accidents, be disabled for future Service, and should not be able to maintain themselves comfortably, and the Children of such disabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of such of them as should be killed or drowned in the Sea Service, were to be provided for in the Royal Hospital of Greenwich, so far as the said Hospital should be capable to receive them, and the Revenue thereof would extend; and for the better Support of the said Hospital, 6*d.* per Month is by the said Act to be allowed out of the Wages of every Seaman in the Merchants' Service, as well as in the Navy; and that so much of the said Act as relates to the registering of Seamen was repealed by an Act of 9 Ann. whereby every Seaman in the Navy (though not registered) is intitled to the Benefits of the said Hospital; and that by an Act of 10 Ann. any Seaman is to be considered as fully qualified for an Admission into the said Hospital, who shall produce a Certificate of his having been hurt or disabled for Sea Service, in defending any Ships of the Subjects of this Kingdom against an Enemy, or in taking any Ship from an Enemy: And that by an Act of the 8 George I. every Seaman on board a Merchant Ship, who shall be maimed in Fight against any Pirate, is to be admitted into the said Hospital, preferable to any other Seaman disabled merely by Age: And that by an Act of the 8 Geo. II. Seamen on board any Merchant Ship, who shall be maimed in Fight against an Enemy, should be admitted into the said Hospital, in like Manner as any other Seaman, wounded or disabled in his Majesty's Service: And whereas the said Hospital is not capable to receive, nor the Income thereof sufficient to provide for the Seamen in the Service of the Navy, intitled to the Benefits thereof, so that the Seamen in the Merchants' Service, maimed and disabled in Fight and proper Objects of Charity have P. 837. seldom or never been admitted into the same Hospital; and as there is no Provision made by either of the said Acts for such Seamen in the Merchants' Service as are disabled by accidental Misfortunes, or for those worn out by Age, or for the Widows or Children of such as shall be killed or drowned in the said Service; and as the Seamen in the said Service are willing to allow 6*d.* per Month out of their Wages, to be applied for the Relief of such as shall be disabled or worn out by Age, and of the Widows and Children of those killed in the said Service; and as they have during the Course of this War, manifested their Courage, and deserve all due Encouragement; and the establishing the said Charity will tend to the Honour and Good of the Publick: It is enacted, that Alexander Hume, John Bristow, John Bance, Esqrs. &c. and their Successors, to be elected in the Manner hereafter appointed, shall be one Body Corporate and Politick, by the Name of The President and Governors for the Relief and Support of sick, maimed, or disabled Seamen, and of the Widows and Children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the Merchants' Service; and that by the same Name of The President and Governors, they shall have perpetual Succession, and a common Seal, with Power to alter the same as often as they shall judge expedient; and by the same Name may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, &c. in all Courts of Record, and Places of Jurisdiction within this Kingdom; and that they and their Successors may receive and enjoy, in Trust for the Purposes of this Act, all such Sums of Money as are granted, and shall be raised by Virtue of this Act, or shall be contributed or bequeathed by well-disposed Persons; and may at any Time hereafter, without Licence in Mortmain, purchase or receive any Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, or any Estate or Interest therein, so that the same be only for the Scite of, or to be converted into an Hospital, with Offices and Appurtenances necessary for the said Purposes.

P. 839.

The President and Governors shall provide, in the said Hospital, for the Reception of Seamen rendered incapable of Service, or shall allow them certain Pensions or otherwise as they shall think most for the Advantage of the said Charity; and shall also relieve the Widows and Children of such Seamen as shall be killed or drowned in the said Service, provided such Children are not of the Age of fourteen, or if of that Age or upwards, they are incapable of getting a Livelihood, by Reason of Lameness, Blindness, or other Infirmities, and are proper Objects of Charity; and shall make reasonable Allowances to those who shall lose an Eye or Limb, or be otherwise hurt in fighting, defending, or working the Ships in which they serve, or in loading or unloading the Cargoes, or otherwise howsoever in doing their Duty, in Proportion to the Damage they shall receive, so far as the Revenues will extend for the said Purposes, according to such Rules, Orders, and Regulations as shall be established in Pursuance of this Act.

P. 840.

No Seaman in the said Service shall be intitled to any of the Benefits of this Act, unless he shall produce a Certificate of the Hurt, &c. received, to the President, Assistants, and Committees, herein after named, from the Master, Mate, Boatswain, and Surgeon, or so many of them as were in the Vessel to which he belonged at the Time of receiving such Hurt; or of the Master, and two of the Seamen if there is no other Officer; or in Case of the Death of the Master, then of the Person who shall take upon him the Care of the Vessel, and two of the Seamen on board, under their Hands and Seals, signifying how and in what Manner he received such Hurt, where and when he entered, and how long he had served on board; and the Parties giving such Certificates shall make Oath of the Truth of the Contents before some Justice, if given in any of his Majesty's Dominions, or the chief Officer of the Customs of the Place where there is no Justice, or before the British Consul, or Resident, in any foreign Country where such Certificate is executed (who are to administer the same without Fee;) and in Case of Sickness whereby such Seaman shall be rendered incapable of Service, a Certificate in like Manner, signifying that he was healthy when he entered on board, and that the same was contracted in doing his Duty in the Service of the Ship, and not otherwise; and no Widow or Children of any Seaman, killed or drowned in the said Service, shall be intitled to any Allowance by Virtue of this Act, unless they shall produce a Certificate, authenticated in like Manner, signifying how such Seaman lost his Life in the Service of the said Ship, the Time and Place he entered on board, and how long he had served therein; and also another Certificate under the Hands and Seals of the Minister, and Church-wardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish or Township, or any two of them, or of the Minister and Overseers of the Poor where there are no Church-wardens, (and if such Widows or Children are Quakers, then under the Hands of two reputable Persons of that Persuasion) of the Place where such Widow or Children have a legal Settlement, or reside, to be attested by two or more creditable Witnesses, that she was the lawful Wife, and they the Children of such Seaman, and under the Age of Fourteen; or, if of that Age or upwards, not capable of getting a Livelihood, by Reason of Lameness, Blindness, or other Infirmities, and are proper Objects of Charity; and no Seaman shall be provided for by a Pension, or otherwise, as decrepid or worn out, unless he shall have served five Years in the Merchants' Service, and paid 6d. per Month out of his Wages for that Time, for the Purposes of this Act.

P. 841.

If any Person shall forge, counterfeit, alter, or unfairly obtain any such Certificate, the same, upon Discovery thereof, shall be null and void; and the Person applying for Relief shall be for ever incapable of receiving any Benefit from this Act, and shall be punished as an incorrigible Rogue.

For the more constant and ordinary Management of the Monies to be raised for the Purposes aforesaid, there shall be for ever hereafter, from Time to Time, a President and twenty-one Assistants, and Committees of the said Corporation.

P. 842.

The said President and Assistants (therein named) shall continue so to be till the 24th of June, 1748: On which Day yearly, or within five Days before or after (ten Days Notice being first given, in the London Gazette, of the Day fixed by the General Court of the said President and Governors) a new Election of a President and twenty-one Assistants shall be made for the Year following, and taken by the said President and Governors then present.

At all General Courts of the President and Governors, and at the several full Courts of Assistants, the President shall have a Vote, and act as a Member; and, in Case of an Equality of Votes, shall have the casting Voice.

There shall be four General Courts at least held every Year, viz. on the 24th of June, the 20th of September, the 25th of December, the 25th of March, or within five Days before or after either of the said Days of which ten Days, Notice shall be given in the London Gazette; and the President and Assistants may call a General Court at any other Time, as the Affairs of the Corporation shall require, or at the Request of thirteen Members, signifying the same by Writing under their Hands, provided Notice be given as aforesaid of the Time and Place of Meeting.

The President with five or more of the Assistants shall make a full Court of Assistants or Committees; and shall meet upon Wednesdays weekly, in or near London, or at such other Time and Place as they shall appoint; and such Court when assembled shall have Power to apply the Monies arising by this Act for the Relief of such Seamen, and their Widows and Children, as are before described; and to lay out the Surplus thereof, and any Monies contributed by well-disposed Persons, in Parliamentary Securities, or in the Purchase of such Lands, &c. as are before allowed, and under their Common Seal to enter into any Contracts for the Purposes aforesaid, for the better carrying on the said Charity; and to appoint and remove at Pleasure any Officers and Servants, or other Persons employed (except such Officers and Persons as are directed to be chosen at a General Court of the Corporation) and to appoint such Salaries, Perquisites, or other Rewards for their Service, as they shall think proper; and to transact and determine all such Matters as shall appear to be necessary for affecting the Purposes hereby intended.

The Management and Accounts of the President and Assistants shall be liable to such Audit and Inspection, Allowance, Disallowance, and Control of all or such of the Members, as by any By-laws of the Corporation shall be appointed.

There shall be a Receiver of the Corporation, who shall be chosen by a Majority of the President and Governours in a General Court as aforesaid, who shall be allowed such Salary as they shall think proper, and be removed at Pleasure, and another Person chosen in his Room.

If any Vacancy shall happen by Death or Removal of any Person chosen at a General Court, it shall be filled up at a General Court of the President and Governours, after ten Days Notice given of such Election in the London Gazette.

For keeping up a competent Number of Members, and for perpetuating the Succession thereof, and for filling up the Places of Presidents and Assistants, the President and thirteen Governours, present at a General Court to be held as aforesaid, shall elect other fit Persons to be Members in the Room of such of the Persons above-named, or to be from Time to Time elected Members, who shall die, or refuse to accept of, or continue to be Members.

The President and thirteen Governours, assembled in a General Court, may make and constitute such By-laws, &c. as shall seem necessary for the establishing the said Corporation, and the Officers, Servants, and Persons employed by them; and for the applying the Money, and providing for the Persons intitled to the Benefit of this Act; and for the auditing the Accounts, and the controlling, allowing, or disallowing the Transactions of the said President and Assistants, and of the Officers, Servants, and Persons; and for putting the said Laws in Execution, and for revoking and altering the same at Pleasure; which By-laws, &c. shall be duly observed, so as they be reasonable, and not repugnant to the Statutes, Customs, or Laws of this Kingdom or any of the express Regulations of this Act.

If the President shall at any Time not attend, the Courts of Assistants, or Governours at a General Court, shall depute any other Member to preside and act as President in his Absence, and do all other Acts and Things at the said Courts as the President is impowered and required to do.

For the Encouragement of Benefactors to so good a Design, it is enacted, That if any Person shall, at one or more Payments, contribute 50*l.* for the Purposes of this Act, he shall be declared a Governor of the said Corporation.

P. 846. Every Seaman or Person employed in any Vessel belonging to a Subject of England, and every Master or Owner navigating the same (other than such Apprentices under the Age of eighteen, as are exempted from Payment of 6d. per Month to the Hospital at Greenwich, by an Act of 2 Anne, and Persons employed on the Coasts of England in taking Fish brought fresh on Shore; and Persons employed in Boats or Vessels that trade only from Place to Place within any River in England, or in open Boats upon the Coasts thereof) and Pilots employed on board Vessels, shall, after the 29th of September, 1747, pay 6d. per Month, and proportionably for a lesser Time, during their Employment, for the Purposes aforesaid.

The Master, Owner, or Commander of every Vessel is to deduct out of the Wages, &c. of every such Seaman, &c. (except as before excepted) the said Duty of 6d. per Month, and shall pay the same to such Receivers as the President and Governors or the Trustees of the Out-ports shall appoint if such Seaman, &c. shall have, or be intitled to, Wages, Shares, or Profits.

P. 847. The President and Governors, at a full Court of Assistants, shall appoint one or more Receivers of the said Duty at the Port of London; and also depute the Collectors or other Officers of his Majesty's Customs in the several Out-ports of England, or other Persons, to receive the same there (except in such Out-ports where separate Trustees shall be appointed by Virtue of this Act) and the said several Receivers are required to collect and pay over the said Duty, according to the Instructions in Writing, which shall from Time to Time, be sent them by the President and Governors; for which Allowances shall be made them out of the said Duties, as the President and Governors shall think fit.

Every Master or other Person navigating, or having the Care of any Merchant Vessel, shall keep a Book by way of Muster-roll, in which shall be entered his own, and the Names of the Persons employed on board, with the usual Place of their Abode when on Shore; and over against each Name, the Time and Place of entering into such Service, and in what Ship he performed his last Voyage; a Duplicate whereof shall be signed by the said Master, or other Person having the Care of such Vessel, and shall be delivered, before her Departure, to the Collector of the said Duties, at the Port to which she belongs; and the said Master, &c. shall

P. 848. keep such a Muster-roll during the Voyage, and shall enter when and where any Person shall be discharged from, or shall leave or desert such Vessel, and others shipped on board, describing them as before directed; and when and where any of them received any Hurt or Damage, or were killed or drowned: a Duplicate whereof shall be signed and delivered as aforesaid, at the Ship's Return to the Port to which she belongs; true Copies whereof shall be made, and filed by the Collectors, and the original Duplicates transmitted by them to the President and Governors to be filed and kept by such Officer as they shall appoint: And the said Masters and Receivers, &c. in Default of any of the Premises, shall severally forfeit 20*l.* Sterling for every such Offence.

P. 849. For the better Discovery of what shall be due from Persons serving on board Merchant Ships, &c. the Collectors shall summon by Warrant under their Hands all such Masters, &c. or (in their Absence) the Owners of such Vessels, to appear at their Office (so as they be not obliged to travel above ten Miles for the making such Appearance) and to examine them upon Oath (which Oath the said Collectors are to administer) to the Truth of the Copy of such Muster-roll, and the Number and Times of Service of each Person chargeable with the said Duty; and upon their Refusal to appear, or make Oath as aforesaid, they shall be fined 20*l.* Sterling.

For the more easy and effectual collecting the said Duty, from the Masters, &c. of Merchant Vessels employed in the Service of his Majesty, the Secretaries or Chief Clerks of the publick Offices of the Crown, usually hiring, &c. Vessels for that Service shall deliver a Duplicate of the List of the Numbers and Names of such Ships, and of the Masters and Owners thereof respectively, and of the Seamen, &c. to the Collectors of the said Duty at the Port of London, or Out-ports to which they severally belong, as is by an Act of 2 Geo. II. to be delivered to the Collector of the Port of London, of the Duty of 6d. per Month given to the Royal

P. 850. Hospital at Greenwich; and the said Secretaries and other Officers belonging to the the said Offices, and the Masters, &c. of such Vessels, shall do every other Act for the due Payment of the Duty, as is required to be done by the said Act of 2 Geo. II. for the Payment of the Duty of 6*d.* per Month to the said Royal Hospital, and shall be liable to the like Penalties and Forfeitures for any Default herein.

Every Master, &c. liable to the Payment of the said Duty, shall pay all such Monies as shall, from Time to Time, be due to the Collectors appointed, at the Port only to which such Vessel does belong, and before such Vessel shall be cleared inwards, by the Officers of the Customs in any of the Ports of England; and no Officer of the Customs shall clear inwards any Merchant Ship liable to the said Duty, or grant any Warrant, Cocket, Transire, Return, or Discharge, or suffer such Vessel to go out of Port, until the Master, &c. shall produce a Certificate from the Receiver of the said Duty being fully paid, and that he is not more than three Months in Arrear for the same, or that he is exempted from the Payment of the said Duty by Virtue of the exceptions herein contained; and the Persons making Default in any of the Premises, or acting contrary to the Directions before-mentioned, shall forfeit 2*0*l. Sterling for every such Offence. P. 851.

If the Master, &c. shall not produce such Certificate to the Tide-Surveyor, when he shall come on board to clear such Vessel, the Tide-Waiter shall be continued on board at the Expence of such Master, Owner, or Commander, until such Certificate is produced.

In all Cases where an Oath is required to be taken, the solemn Affirmation of Quakers shall be accepted instead thereof; and if any Quaker shall refuse to make such Affirmation, he shall be subject to the like Forfeitures and Penalties as any other Person refusing to take an Oath is liable to by this Act; and any Person convicted of false affirming or swearing, before any Collector, &c. hereby authorized to administer Oaths, he shall suffer Penalties, &c. as Persons convicted of wilful and corrupt Perjury are by the Laws of England liable to. P. 852.

The Charges and Expences of obtaining this Act shall be paid out of the first Monies to be raised and contributed by Virtue hereof at the Port of London.

From and after the 24th of June, 1747, the Owners and Masters of Vessels belonging to Persons residing at any of the Out-Ports of this Kingdom, may meet within the Limits of the said Ports at any proper Time and Place appointed by five or more of them, by giving ten Days previous Notice, to be fixed at the Custom-House Wharf, Key or other publick Place, at such Out-Port; and may from Time to Time appoint by an Instrument in Writing under their Hands and Seals fifteen Persons to be Trustees for such Out-Port, for receiving and applying the said Duty of 6*d.* per Month, at such Out-Port for the Relief of the Seamen employed on board the Vessels belonging to such Persons respectively; and such of their Widows and Children as shall be entitled thereto by this Act; and the said Trustees shall continue to the 26th of December next after such Election, and until new Trustees are nominated and confirmed, and within ten Days after every 26th of December yearly, the said Owners and Masters shall meet and appoint in like Manner fifteen Persons to be Trustees for the Year ensuing, and the said Trustees shall continue until new ones are elected and confirmed; and the said Instrument shall be sent to the President and Assistants, who are to confirm the same under the common Seal of the Corporation, without Fee or Reward within ten Days after the Receipt thereof: and the said Trustees, when so confirmed (five whereof shall be a Quorum) shall be vested with the same Powers to make By-Laws, and to revoke or alter the same, and for receiving and applying Benefactions, and for appointing Receivers and other Officers for collecting and applying the said Duty, as are given to the President and Governors aforesaid, according to such Rules, Orders, and Regulations as shall be established in Pursuance of this Act; and the said Receivers and other Officers shall have the same Powers as other the Receivers and Officers before appointed, and shall be liable to the same Penalties and Forfeitures. P. 853.

And whereas by Letters Patent, bearing Date the 18th of December, in the sixth Year of the Reign of King Edward VI. certain Merchants therein named and their Successors, residing at the Port and City of Bristol, are incorporated by the Name of The Master, Wardens, and Commonalty of Merchant-Venturers of the City

City of Bristol; which Society is willing, for the Benefit of the Seamen employed in the Service of the Merchants, &c. belonging to the said City and Port, to undertake the Collection and Application of the said 6d. per Month, payable there, and of any Donations of well-disposed People; it is therefore enacted, That the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Treasurer of the said incorporated Society, for the Time being, shall be Trustees, and shall be vested with the like Power, &c. for collecting, recovering, and applying, &c. the said Duty and any Donations, at the said City and Port; and for appointing Receivers and other Officers for the said Purposes as are granted by this Act to the President and Governors aforesaid, according to such Rules, Orders, and Regulations as are or shall be established by Virtue of this Act; and such Receivers and other Officers shall have the same Powers, &c. as those to be appointed in Pursuance of this Act, and shall be subject to the like Penalties and Forfeitures; and the said Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Treasurers, shall also have Power to take and receive any Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments in such Manner, and for the like Purposes only, as the said President and Governors are by this Act impowered to take and receive.

P. 855.

And whereas the Guild of Masters and Pilots, Seamen of the Trinity House of Kingston upon Hull, are willing for the Benefit of the Seamen employed in the Service of Merchants, &c. belonging to the said Town and Port, to undertake the Collection and Application of the said Duty, and any Donations of well-disposed People there, it is therefore enacted. That the said Guild of Masters and Pilots, Seamen of the Trinity-House of the Town and Port of Kingston upon Hull, for the Time being, shall be Trustees, and shall be vested with the like Powers for collecting, recovering, and applying, &c. the said Duty and any Donations, and for appointing Receivers and other Officers, as are granted by this Act to the President and Governors aforesaid, according to such Rules, Orders, and Regulations as are or shall be established by Virtue of this Act; and such Receivers and other Officers shall have the same Powers, &c. as those to be appointed in Pursuance of this Act; and shall be subject to the like Penalties and Forfeitures.

P. 856.

Nothing herein contained shall oblige the Receivers or Collectors of the said Duty, who shall be appointed by the Trustees of any of the respective Out-Ports, to send Duplicates of the Muster Rolls (directed to be delivered to them by the Master or Person having Care of any Vessel) to the said President and Assistants; but such Duplicates, after making and filing Copies thereof, shall be delivered by such Collectors, &c. to the said Trustees respectively, to be by them kept for their Use.

No Seaman, &c. in the Merchants' Service, shall be intitled to any Benefit from this Act at the Port of London, or any Out-Port, but those who are liable to, and shall pay the said Duty at the said Ports respectively.

Those Seamen who shall have been longest in the said Service, and contributed most towards the said Duty, shall be first provided for as worn out or decrepit.

If any Seaman or other Person employed on board any Vessel shall, in the Discharge of his Duty, either on Shore or on Board, break any Limb, or be otherwise hurt, so that immediate Care is necessary to be taken of him, the President and Governors of the Port of London, and the respective Trustees for the Out-ports, shall provide proper Relief for such Person, until he shall be so well recovered of such Hurt as to be removed and sent with Safety to the Port to which such Vessel does belong; and the expence thereof, not exceeding 2d. per Mile, shall be paid by the President and Governors at the Port of London, or by the Trustees for the Out-port to which such Person shall be sent.

If any Seaman or other Person shall serve five Years or more in the Merchant Service, and shall have paid the 6d. per Month for that Time, and shall be adjudged by the President and Assistants, or the respective Trustees, a proper Object of Relief, he shall be provided for at the Port where he shall have paid the greatest Part of the said Duty for the last five Years of his Service.

If it shall happen that Seamen employed in the Merchant Service, within the Limits of this Act, shall be shipwrecked or taken by the Enemy, and on their Return from Imprisonment may be travelling with Passes to the Place of their Abode, the President and Governors, and the respective Trustees may relieve them in such Manner as they shall think proper.

Where Certificates directed to be produced by this Act cannot be obtained, such other Certificates as shall be satisfactory to the President and Governors, or Trustees respectively, shall be admitted to intitle the Party to the Pensions or other Relief provided by this Act.

And whereas the United Company of Merchants of England, trading to the East-Indies have at their own Expence provided for such Seamen employed by them, as have been rendered incapable of Service, and for the Widows and Children of such as have been killed or drowned in their Service, and have established a Fund for that Purpose, and are therefore desirous, that the Persons employed in the said Service may be exempted from the Payment of the said 6d. per Month; it is therefore enacted, That no Officer, Seamen, &c. of any Vessel employed in the Service of the said Company, shall, during the Time of such Service, be liable to the Payment of the said Duty. P. 858.

No Officer, or Seaman, &c. during his Employment in the Service of the said Company, nor the Widows or Children of such of them as shall be killed or drowned, shall be intitled to any Benefit of this Act during the Time they shall be employed in the said Service.

All pecuniary Forfeitures and Penalties incurred by Virtue of this Act shall be sued for and recovered in any Court of Record in England, wherein no Effoin, Protection, Privilege, Wager of Law, or more than one Imparlanse shall be allowed; and if a Verdict shall pass for the Plaintiff in any such Action he shall be allowed double Costs; and one Moiety of the Forfeitures, &c. shall be applied to the Uses of this Act, and the other to the Person who will sue for the same in Manner aforesaid. P. 859.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, and be judicially taken Notice of as such by all Judges and other Persons, without specially pleading the same; and all Actions or Suits which shall be commenced against any Person for any Thing done in Pursuance of this Act, or in Relation to the Premises, shall be brought within three Months next after the Fact committed; and shall be laid in the County or Place where the Fact was done, and not elsewhere; and the Defendant may plead the General Issue, and give this Act and the Special Matter in Evidence, and that the same was done in Pursuance thereof; and if it shall so appear, or if such Action, &c. shall be brought after the Time limited, or in any other County or Place, the Jury shall find for the Defendant; or if the Plaintiff shall become nonsuited, or suffer a Discontinuance of his Action, or Verdict shall pass against him, the Defendant shall have double Costs; and shall have such Remedy for the same as Defendants have for Costs of Suit in any other Cases by Law.

The procuring the preceding Act is an Instance of the Benevolent Regard our Merchants have for the future support at Home of those Seamen who shall suffer by valiantly defending their Property, either in Ship or Goods, and for the distressed Families of such, who shall unhappily lose their Lives in their Service; while the following Acts serve no less to demonstrate both theirs, and the Government's indulgent Attention to secure a Sufficiency for them abroad, when reduced by Misfortunes to the Necessity of claiming it; and the charitable Dispositions they contain, plainly evince as well the Prudence as the Beneficence of the Promoters and Compilers of them, justly challenging our Tribute of Praise for such shining Instances of Tenderness and Compassion, in a comfortable Provision for the accidental Sufferings of the Brave, till then left destitute and disregarded. I mean, by Law, for though the 22d and 23d Car. II. Cap. 11. Sect. 10. (before recited) provides something for the maimed and slain, yet it is too small to supply the Loss of Limbs, or give Maintenance to the afflicted Relicts of a Sailor, untimely snatched away; 'tis therefore from these Statutes only the Mariner must expect redress, and a Reflection on their Existence will naturally encourage him to deserve their Protection by a punctual Compliance with his Duty.

An Act for making perpetual an Act for the better Regulation and Government of Seamen in the Merchant Service, and for extending the Provisions thereof to his Majesty's Colonies in America, was made in the first Year of his present Majesty. It is thereby enacted, That from and after the 1st of May 1764 all the Provisions, Penalties, Matters, and Things, in the Act of the 2d of Geo. II. be extended to his Majesty's Dominions in America; and the Forfeitures applicable to Greenwich Hospital to be paid there, to the Officer constituted by the Admiralty; and Masters of Ships deducting any of the said Forfeitures out of the Seamen's Wages, and not duly paying over the same, forfeit treble the Value to the said Hospital.

8 Geo. I. Cap.
17. S. 1.

It shall be lawful for Persons authorized by the Majority of the British Merchants and Factors residing in Portugal, being assembled with the Consul General, or his Deputy, in any of the Ports of Portugal, to recover from all Commanders of British Ships trading from Great-Britain or Ireland, or any other his Majesty's Dominions, to any of the Dominions of the King of Portugal, the following Sums, viz. any Sum not exceeding 200 Reis per Ton on all Tonnage Goods (except Wheat, Barley, Rye, Coals, Timber, Boards, and Lumber) and 100 Reis per Ton on Wheat, Barley, &c. and 15 per Cent. on the Freight of all other Goods exported from any of the King's Dominions to any Place in the Dominions of the King of Portugal; and all Bills of Lading shall specify to pay the Monies accordingly, under Denomination of Contribution, as per Act of Parliament; and the Persons paying the same shall be reimbursed by the Freighters, or the Persons to whom the Goods shall be consigned; and if no Bill of Lading shall appear, and no Freight or Tonnage is settled between the Owner of the Goods and the Master of the Vessel, the Freight or Tonnage shall be valued by two different British Merchants on the Place, one to be chosen by the Consul General, and the other by the Master of the Ship, within ten Days after unloading the Goods; and if the Persons so chosen shall not agree to the same in five Days, such two Persons shall chuse a third (being a British Merchant on the Place) who shall decide the Valuation in three Days.

Ditto, S. 2.

All Master of Ships, trading from Great-Britain, Ireland, or any other his Majesty's Dominions to the Dominions of the King of Portugal, and unloading there, shall within ten Days after their Arrival deliver to the Consul General, or Deputy Consul, residing there, or to such Person as shall be appointed, a Manifest upon Oath, specifying the Particulars of the Cargo, or of such Part thereof as shall be unloaded there, and to whom consigned, which Oath the Consul General, &c. is to administer gratis.

Ditto, S. 3.

The Consul General, or his Deputy shall detain the Clearances outwards of all British and Irish Ships till Payment.

Ditto, S. 4.

The Monies shall be applied in Manner following, viz. to the Minister residing there 300 Mill-Reis per Annum, by equal Quarterly Payments, and the Remainder for the Relief of ship-wreck'd Mariners, and other distressed Persons, his Majesty's Subjects, and to such other charitable and publick Uses as shall be appointed by the Majority of the British Merchants and Factors residing at Lisbon, and other Ports in Portugal, being assembled with the Consul General, or any of his Deputy Consuls.

Ditto, S. 5.

Persons formerly liable to pay the four Reis per Mill, shall, after Payment of the Sums required by this Act, be exempted from the same.

Ditto, S. 6.

The Consul General, or his Deputy Consuls, residing in Portugal, shall, as they see Occasion, call a general Meeting of the British Merchants and Factors, and shall cause such Meetings as often as shall be desired, by Writing under the Hands of any five British Merchants or Factors.

Secl. 7.

This shall be a publick Act, &c.

9 Geo. II.

C. 25. S. 1.

2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

An Act like the preceding was made for his Majesty's Subjects trading to Cadiz and Port St. Mary's, specifying that any Sums of Money not exceeding one Ryal Plate per Ducat, shall be received from all Masters of British and Irish Vessels, trading to those Places, on the Freight of Goods (except Tonnage Goods) imported into the said Ports, and on all Tonnage Goods, any Sums not exceeding two Ryals Plate per Ton, to be collected and disposed of in the same Manner as directed for that raised in Portugal, and the other Part of this Act being verbalium like that, is here omitted to be repeated.

10 Geo. II.

C. 14. S. 1.

It shall be lawful for Persons appointed by the Consul, named for his Majesty's Subjects trading to the Port of Leghorn, together with the Majority of the British Merchants and Factors there, to recover from all Commanders of British or Irish Ships, trading from any Part of his Majesty's Dominions to the said Port, any Sums not exceeding one Livre per Ton on all Tonnage Goods imported into the said Port, and all Bale Goods, not exceeding one third of a Livre per Bale, or Parcel: to be recovered and applied with like Directions as in 9 Geo. II. Cap. 25, for the Consulate Duty at Cadiz and Port St. Mary's.

Mariners must help one another both at Sea and in Port, and never quit the Ship without Leave from the Master, when she is at Anchor. Leg. Oleron. Cap. 13. 5. per Leg. Denmark.

If Mariners get drunk and wound one another, they are not to be cured at the Charge of the Master or Ship, as the Damage is not received in the Service of either; but if any of them are hurt, or taken ill, in doing their Duty, the Expence of their Cure the Ship must defray; and if his Disorders render him unfit to continue on Board, he shall be left on Shore, and have those Accommodations and Assistance his Case requires; and though the Ship must not be detained to attend his Recovery, yet, if this happens afterwards, he shall have his full Wages, deducting only what the Master may have expended for him. Leg. Oleron. Cap. 6. Ditto, Cap. 1.

If Goods are thrown overboard in order to lighten, and by this Means save the Ship in a Storm, upon Proof thereof, by the Oaths of the Master, &c. he shall be acquitted, though the Ship, Freight, and Remainder of the Cargo shall be brought into an Average, to make good what was so thrown away for the Preference of the whole. Leg. Oleron. Cap. 11.

Though a Ship shall be seized for Debt, or otherwise become forfeited, the Mariners must receive their Wages, unless in some Cases, where they are forfeited as well as the Ship; as in Case of committing Piracy, with Letters of Marque, by Reason of which all will be forfeited; but lading of prohibited Goods on board, such as Wool, &c. though it subjects the Ship to a Forfeiture, yet it disables not the Mariner of his Wages; for the Sailors having honestly performed their Parts, the Ship is tacitly obliged for their Wages; but, if the Ship perishes at Sea, they lose their Wages, and the Owners their Freight: And this being the Marine Custom is allowed as well by the Common as Civil Law. Consolat. del Merc. Roll's Abridg. Fol. 530.

Barretery of the Mariners is a Disease so epidemical, that it is difficult for a Master with the greatest Care to prevent it, and though he may not really be faulty yet the Law will always adjudge him so, and impute Sailors Offences to his Negligence; and were it otherwise, the Merchant would be in a very dangerous Condition; and the Reasons why a Master should be responsible for his Crew are, because it is of his own chusing, and under his Correction and Government, and on Ship-board know no other superior but himself, and if they are faulty he may correct and punish them (in a moderate Manner) and justify the same by Law; and the Fact being proved against them, he may re-imburse himself out of their Wages. Just. de ob. jure exdict. 6. Fin. Pajib. 11 Jac. in B. R. Herne. verif. Smith. Roll's Abridg. 533.

This Act explains and amends an Act of 7 Geo. II. Cap. 15. intituled, An Act to settle how far Owners of Ships shall be answerable for the Acts of the Masters or Mariners. 26 Geo. II. Cap. 86.

From and after September 1, 1786, no Person or Persons, who is, are, or shall be Owner or Owners of any Ship or Vessel, shall be subject or liable to answer for or make good, to any one or more Person or Persons, any Loss or Damage, by Reason of any Robbery, Embezzlement, Secreting, or making away with, of any Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Jewels, precious Stones, or other Goods or Merchandise, which shall, from and after that Day, be shipped, taken in, or put on board any Ship or Vessel, or for any Act, Matter or Thing, Damage or Forfeiture; done, occasioned, or incurred, from and after the passing this Act, without the Privity and Knowledge of such Owner or Owners; further than the Value of the Ship or Vessel, with all her Appurtenances and the full Amount of the Freight due, or to grow due, for and during the Voyage wherein such Robbery, Embezzlement, secreting, or making away with as aforesaid, shall be made, committed, or done; although the Master or Mariners, shall not be in any-wise concerned in or privy to such Robbery, Embezzlement, Secreting, or making away with; any Law, Custom, or Usage, to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding. Sect. 1.

16 Geo. III. No Owner or Owners of any Ship or Vessel shall be subject or liable to answer
C. 86. S. 2. for or make good, to any one or more Person or Persons, any Loss or Damages which may happen to any Goods or Merchandise whatever; which from and after September 1, 1786, shall be shipped, taken in, or put on board any such Ship or Vessel; by Reason or Means of any Fire happening to or on board the said Ship or Vessel.

Sec. 3. No Master, Owner or Owners of any Ship or Vessel, shall be subject or liable to answer for, or make good, to any one or more Person or Persons, any Loss or Damage which may happen to any Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Watches, Jewels, or precious Stones, which from and after the passing this Act, shall be shipped, taken in, or put on board any such Ship or Vessel; by Reason or Means of any Robbery, Embezzlement, making away with, or secreting thereof, unless the Owner or Shipper thereof shall, at the Time of shipping the same, insert in his Bill of Lading, or otherwise declare in Writing to the Master, Owner or Owners of such Ship or Vessel, the true Nature, Quality, and Value of such Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Watches, Jewels, or precious Stones.

Sec. 4. Enacts that if several Freightees or Proprietors of any such Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Jewels, or precious Stones, or other Goods or Merchandise, shall suffer any Loss or Damage, by any of the Means aforesaid, in the same Voyage (Fire only excepted) and the Value of the Ship or Vessel with all her Appurtenances, and the Amount of the Freight due, or to grow due during such Voyage, shall not be sufficient to make full Compensation to all and every one of them, then such Freighters or Proprietors shall receive their Satisfaction thereout in Average, in Proportion to their respective Losses or Damages; and in every such Case, it shall and may be lawful to and for such Freighters or Proprietors, or any of them, on Behalf of himself and all other such Freighters and Proprietors, or to and for the Owners of such Ship or Vessel, or any of them, or on Behalf of himself and all the other Part Owners of such Ship or Vessel, to exhibit a Bill in any Court of Equity for a Discovery of the total Amount of such Losses or Damages, and also of the Value of such Ship or Vessel, Appurtenances and Freight, and for an equal Distribution and Payment thereof amongst such Freighters and Proprietors, in Proportion to their respective Losses or Damages, according to the Rules of Equity; provided always, that if any such Bill shall be exhibited, by or on the Behalf of the Part-Owners of such Ship, the Plaintiff or Plaintiffs shall annex an Affidavit to such Bill or Bills, that he, or they do not collude with any of the Defendants thereto; and shall thereby offer to pay the Value of such Ship or Vessel, Appurtenances, and Freight, as such Court shall direct; and such Court shall thereupon take such Method for ascertaining such Value, as to them shall seem just, and shall direct the Payment thereof, in like Manner as is now used and practised in Cases of Bills of Interpleader.

Sec. 5. Provided always, that nothing in this present Act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to impeach, lessen, or discharge any Remedy, which any Person or Persons now hath or shall or may hereafter have, against all, every, or any the Masters and Mariners of such Ship or Vessel, for or in Respect of any Embezzlement, Secreting or making away with any Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Jewels, precious Stones, or Merchandise, shipped or loaded on board such Ship or Vessel, or on Account of any Fraud, Abuse, or Malversation of and in such Masters and Mariners respectively; but that it shall and may be lawful to, and for every Person or Persons so injured or damaged, to pursue and take such Remedy for the same, against the said Master and Mariners respectively, as he or they might have done before the making of this Act.

When Goods are once delivered to a Master, they are not subjected to be attached in his Hands, nor can any Custom whatsoever support the same, for they are in Law as it were bailed to the Ship, until the Freight and all other Charges are paid: And it is very much doubted whether an Attachment can be made in London of any Goods lying on board Ship, in the River of Tbames (though the Port of London) notwithstanding Freight, and all other Charges are paid off.

Mill. 8 Ann. Commissioners of Bankruptcy issued a Warrant to seize Goods of a Bankrupt in Chancery. on board two Ships in Topham Bay in Devonshire; the Goods were consigned to Persons

Persons in Holland, who had not paid the Bankrupt for them; the Masters refused to deliver the Goods notwithstanding the Warrant, which occasioned the Commissioners coming to demand them, though they were still refused.

Sir Peter King moved for an Order upon the Masters for their Contempt.

The Court at first greatly doubted, whether they could make an Order in Aid and Assistance of the Warrant of the Commissioners of Bankruptcy, the Statute having vested a large Power in them; besides, the Persons, to whom the Goods were consigned, would be indebted to the Creditors of the Bankrupt, which Creditors may recover by the Law of Holland.

Sir Peter King. We shall rather lose the Goods than follow them into Holland.

Lord Chancellor. Their refusing to deliver the Goods upon Warrant is no Contempt to this Court, though the Commissioners act under a Commission under the Broad Seal: The Masters in this present Case have some Colour to detain the Goods, for upon a Delivery of them, they may be disappointed of Freight, and the Assignees of the Commission must stand in the same Place as the Bankrupt, and be subject to his Contract.

But, however, an Order was made upon the Masters to deliver the Goods upon Payment of the Freight, and the Masters to be indemnified by the Creditors against a Bill of Lading, which was sent by the Consignees.

I have now finished the subject of Ships and Seamen, which has been spun out to a great Length by the necessary Quotations of the Cases and Laws so interesting a Topick calls for; and I think the omitting of any of them would have rendered the Discourse defective. I shall now according to my proposed Method, proceed to treat of other Marine Affairs; such as

Freight, Charterparties, Bills of Lading, Demorage, and Bottomry.

FREIGHT is the Sum agreed on for Hire of a Ship, entirely or in part, for the Carriage of Goods, from one Port to another, or to many Ports; and must be paid in Preference to all other Debts, for whose Payment the Goods stand engaged; but as those are responsible to the Ship for her Hire, so is the Ship to the Owner of the Goods, in Case of Damage or Waste, through any Defect of the Vessel or Sailors.

CHARTERPARTY (Charta Partita, i. e. a Deed or Writing divided) is the same in the Civil Law with an Indenture at the Common Law. The Parties are either the Owners of Ships on the one Part, and Merchants on the other; or Masters of Ships, invested by the Owners with Power to enter into Charterparties, and Merchants. It is necessary to state this Distinction because the Owners often Charter a Ship Outwards, and leave it to the Discretion of the Master to procure the best back Freight he can in the Foreign Port to which the Cargo is consigned. The Charterparty settles the Agreement, as the BILLS of LADING do the Contents of the Cargo, and binds the Master to deliver them well conditioned at the Place of Discharge, according to the Agreement; and for Performance, the Master or the Owner obliges himself, Ship, Tackle, and Furniture.

The taking a Ship to Freight is the hiring her of her Master or Owners, either in Part or the whole, and either by the Month for an entire Voyage, or by the Ton; and the Contract, reduced into a Writing, is commonly called a Charterparty, executed between the Freighter, and the Person who lets the Ship, and expressive of the different Particulars agreed on, as aforesaid.

The Master or Owners generally covenant to provide both a Sufficiency of Tackle and Mariners, and to fit the Ship in every Respect for performing the Voyage agreed on; and the Merchant, on his Part, stipulates to comply with the Payment, promised for Freight, on Delivery of his Goods, and both oblige themselves in Penalties for Non-compliance; the Nature and Form of which will be shewn in the subsequent Copy of a Charterparty, and the consequent Security of a Bill of Lading, both which I have inserted for my Readers' Government.

Per Leg. Nav. Rhod. Art. 19. If there be a verbal Agreement only, and Earnest given, and the same be broke off by the Merchant, according to the Rhodian Law, he loses his Earnest; but, if the Owners or Master repent, they forfeit double.

Cro. Car. 383. But by the Common Law of England the Party damnified may bring his Action on the Case, and recover all Damages on the Agreement.

If, by the Time appointed in the Charterparty, the Ship is not ready to take in, or the Merchant (after the Days of Demorage commonly granted) not ready to load, the Parties are at Liberty, and the suffering one hath his Remedy against the other by Action, to recompense the Damage.

Ju c Mar. L. 2. Cap. 4. S. 3. If Part of the Loading be on board, and some intervening Misfortune prevents the Merchant from shipping the whole in Time, the Master is at Liberty to contract with another, and shall have Freight by Way of Damage for the Time that those Goods were on board after that limited; for such Agreements, being of a conditional Nature, a precedent Failure as to a complete Loading will determine the same, unless afterwards affirmed by Consent; and though it be no Prudence for every Merchant or Master to depart from the Contract, on a Non-compliance of Articles, yet it is the highest Justice that Ships and Masters should remain free; for otherwise, by the bare Lading of a Cask or Bale, they might be defeated of the Opportunity of Passage, or Season of the Year.

Cro. Car. 383. 3 Lev. 283. So, on the other Hand, if the Vessel be not ready, the Merchant may ship the Remainder of his Goods on board another and discharge the first, and recover Damages against the Master or Owners for the rest; this being grounded on the like Reason as the former.

Charterparties have always by the Common Law had a genuine Construction as near as may be, and according to the Intention and Design, and not according to the literal Sense of Traders, or those that merchandize by Sea, yet they must be regularly pleaded; and therefore in an Action of Covenant or an Indenture dated the 9th Oct. 38 Eliz. wherein was recited, Whereas by Indenture of Charterparty dated, Sept. 8, 38 Eliz. between the Plaintiff and Francis Cherry, the Plaintiff having hired of him a Ship, for a Voyage to Dantzick, upon taking the Ship it was agreed between them, that the Ship should be laden with Corn at Dantzick, and sail from thence to Legborn: Now by the said Indenture, in Consideration the Plaintiff had agreed, that the Defendant should have the Moiety of Corn, quod tunc fuit (what then was) or afterwards should be laden in the Ship during the said Voyage, the Defendant covenanted to pay the Moiety of the Money for the said Corn, quod tunc fuit, or afterwards should be laden, &c. and alledgeth in facto (in fact) that Oct. 9, 38 Eliz. the Ship was laden with sixty Lasts of Corn, and for not Performance of this Covenant the Action was brought; the Defendant pleaded, that the Deed was sealed and delivered Oct. 28, 38 Eliz. & quod ad tunc vel postea (and that at that Time or afterwards) there was not any Corn, laden there, and traverseth the Delivery Oct. 9, or at any Time afterwards before the 28th Oct. 38 Eliz. and it was adjudged upon Demurrer, that in Regard the Plaintiff declared upon a Deed dated Oct. 9, 38 Eliz. it shall be intended to have its Essence and Delivery at that Time, and no other; and if he should confess it to be delivered at any other Time, it would be a Departure from his Declaration, and the Word tunc is referred to the Delivery, and not to the Date; and if it were delivered ten Months after the Date, he should not have the Benefit of the Corn laden before the Delivery: And therefore the Defendant was adjudged not to be charged with paying for any Corn before the Delivery of the Deed, the Words of the Deed being, that he should pay for the Corn then laden, &c. which (then) is referred to the Time of the Essence of the Deed by the Delivery, and not to the Date.

2 Cro. 263. Osley v. Sir Baptist Hick.

3 Bull. 152. 1 Ro. 312. Atkinson contracted with Buckle for the Carriage of an hundred Quarters of Barley, and promised to deliver unto him the hundred Quarters of Barley a-Ship-board at Barton Haven in the County of York, to carry them for him, and for the Carriage thereof did promise to pay him so much; and Buckle promised to carry the same for him, and accordingly brought his Ship to the said Haven, expectpecting there the Delivery of the hundred Quarters of Barley; but Atkinson came not to deliver the same to him, whereupon Buckle brought his Action of the Case upon the Promise, and upon non assumpsit pleaded, had a Verdict and Judgment, which was affirmed upon a Writ of Error.

Covenant upon a Charterparty between Bolton Owner, and Lee and Morgan Merchants, Freighters of a Ship, let by Bolton, on Freight, for a Voyage to Guinea, at 48*l.* per Month, and there was a mutual Covenant between the Parties, & quemlibet eorum modo sequente (and each of them in the following Manner) and then divers Covenants follow, concerning the Ship's Tackle and Performance of the Voyage; and then a Covenant for the Payment of the Freight (viz.) when the Ship arrived at Guinea, the Freight then due, was, upon Notice, to be paid in England; and when she arrived in England, the Residue, from the Time of the last Payment, was to be paid. And saith that at such a Time the Ship arrived, and that six Months and ten Days were then past, which came to so much, whereof Notice was given; and that after such a Time the Ship arrived in England, and that the Freight for six Months, from the Time of the last Payment, came to 287*l.* 4*s.* and that the Defendant had not paid any of the Sums; upon which the Defendant demurred, and took these Exceptions to the Declaration.

1. For this, that the Action is brought against one of the Defendants only, omitting the other, sed non allocatur (but not allowed), the Covenant being between them, et quemlibet eorum, (and each of them) is joint and several of every Part. 1 Mod. Caf. 154. Salk. 393. Pl. 2.

2. For that it appears upon Computation, the Plaintiff demanded more upon the first Breach than is due, by 30*s.* and less than is due upon the second by 16*s.* and though that the first may be cured by the Jurors finding less, or by the Plaintiff's releasing the Overplus, yet where he demands less than is due, it is incurable; and cited several Books there quoted for that Purpose in assumpsit, where, as in this Case, only Damages are to be recovered; and on the other Part was cited, Cro. Jac. 498. Pemberton v. Sbelton, and 529. Parker v. Curson & Uxor. See 2 Levinz 4. Hulme & Sambers; and 2 Vent. 129. Welby and Philips. Hale C. J. took a Difference between this Case of Covenant and Debt, and held, that after Verdict it had been cured without Question; but upon Demurrer there may be some Doubt, the Demurrer being general; but had the Demurrer been special, it had been ill, and ruled Judgment, pro Quer. 2 Levinz 56, and 3 Keble 39 and 50, Bolton and Lee.

If Goods are fully laden on board, and the Ship hath broke Ground, and the Merchant on Consideration determine again to unload them, and not prosecute the Adventure, by the Marine Law the Freight is due.

And if the Ship in her Voyage becomes unable, without the Master's Fault, or that the Master or Ship be arrested by any foreign Prince, or State, in her Voyage, the Master may either mend his Ship, or freight another; but if the Merchant will not consent thereto, then the Freight becomes due, for so much as the Ship hath earned; otherwise the Master is liable for all Damages that shall happen: And therefore if that Ship to which the Goods were translated perished, the Master shall answer; but if both the Ships perish, then he is discharged: But in Case of extreme Necessity, as that the Ship would be in a sinking Condition, and an empty Ship is passing by, or at Hand, he may translate the Goods; and if that Ship sinks or perishes, he is there excused; but then it must be apparent that the Ship seemed probable and sufficient.

If a Master shall weigh Anchor, and sail after the Time covenanted or agreed for his Departure, if any Damage happens at Sea after that Time, he shall refund and make Good all such Misfortune; yet if a Charterparty is made, that the Plaintiff shall sail from London to Lisbon, with the first Wind and Opportunity, &c. in Consideration of which the Merchant did covenant to pay so much for Freight; the Ship departs not with the first Wind and Opportunity, yet afterwards breaks Ground, and arrives at her Port, the Freight in this Case is become due; for there is nothing can bar the Ship of her Freight, but the not Departure, for only that in Law is traversable, being material to avoid the Payment

Latch 12, 49.

ment of the Freight; but to say the Ship did not depart with the next Wind, is but a Circumstance, which, in Strictness of Law is not traversible.

If it be agreed, that the Master shall sail from London to Legborn in two Months, and Freight accordingly is agreed on, if he begins the Voyage within the two Months, though he does not arrive at Legborn within the Time, yet the Freight is become due.

<sup>2 Vern. 210.</sup> The East-India Company might by Charterparty keep a Ship they had freighted a long Time in India, and did so keep her until she was unfit for Service, and could not come home; they were obliged in Chancery to pay the Damage, though by the Charterparty it was payable at the Return of the Ship.

<sup>2 Vern. 212.</sup> So where no Freight was to be paid for the Cargo Outwards, but Freight for the Cargo Homewards, and the Factor abroad had no Goods to load her homewards, Payment of the Freight was decreed.

And if a Ship is freighted to go to any Place to load, and on Arrival there the Factor cannot, or will not put any thing on board her, after the Master has staid the Days agreed on by Charterparty, and made his regular Protests, he shall be paid, empty or full.

<sup>2 Vern. 727.</sup> Though the Officers and Mariners gave Bond not to demand Wages, unless the Ship returned to London, she arrived at a delivering Port and afterwards was taken by the Enemy, they had their Wages to the delivering Port.

<sup>Leg. Relagatiff. de pœnis & Leg. ult. de sep. 220.</sup> If a Ship is freighted from one Port to another, and thence to a third, fourth, and so Home to the Port from whence she first sailed (commonly called a trading Voyage) this is all but one and the same Voyage, so as it be in Conformity to the Charterparty.

<sup>Tria. 9 Jac. in C. B. Ret. 636. Bright v. Cooper. 1 Broxtonl. 21.</sup> A Merchant agrees with a Master, that if he carries his Goods to such a Port, he will then pay him such a Sum; in the Voyage the Ship is assaulted, entered and robbed by Pirates, and Part of her Lading taken forth, and afterwards the Remainder is brought to the Port of Discharge; yet the Sum agreed upon is not become due, for the Agreement is not by the Master performed.

<sup>1 Co. 97. Shelley's Case. Register and Fogass's Case. Poulden Com. But a Pirate is not an Enemy.</sup> Though by the Civil Law this is vis major or casus fortuitus (the greater Force or an accidental Case) there being no Default in the Master or his Mariners, and the same is a Danger or Peril of the Sea, which if not in naval Agreements expressed, yet it is naturally implied; for it is certain, that if those Goods which the Pirates carried away had been in Strefs of Weather thrown overboard, the same would not have made a Disability as to the Receipt of the Sum agreed on; for both by the Common and Marine Law, the Act of God, or that of an Enemy, shall no Ways work in private Actions.

If a Ship be freighted by the Ton, and she is full laden according to the Charterparty, the Freight is to be paid for the whole, otherwise but for so many Ton as the Lading amounted to.

<sup>Jure Mar. l. 2. Ch. 4. S. 8.</sup> If Freight be contracted for the Lading of certain Cattle, or the like, from Dublin to West-Beffer, and some of them happen to die before the Ship's Arrival, the whole Freight is become due as well for the Dead as the Living.

<sup>Ditto.</sup> But if the Freight be contracted for the transporting them, at so much per Head, if Death happens, there ariseth due no more Freight than only for such as are living, at the Ship's Arrival at her Port of Discharge, and not for the Dead.

<sup>Ditto.</sup> When Cattle or Slaves are sent aboard, without any previous Agreement for lading or transporting them, but generally, then Freight shall be paid as well for the Dead as the Living; and if Freight be contracted for the transporting of Women, and they happen in the Voyage to be delivered of Children, no Freight becomes due for the Infants.

<sup>Ditto.</sup> If Goods are sent on board, generally, the Freight must be according to that commonly paid for the like accustomed Voyages.

<sup>Ditto.</sup> If a Ship shall be freighted, and named to be of such a Burthen, and being freighted by the Ton, shall be found less, there shall be no more paid than only by the Ton, for all the Goods that were laden on board.

<sup>Ditto.</sup> And if a Ship be freighted for two Hundred Tons or thereabouts, the Addition of thereabouts is commonly reduced to be within five Ton, more or less, as the Moiety of the Number ten, whereof the whole is compounded.

If a Ship be freighted by the Great, and the Burthen of it not expressed, yet the Sum certain is to be paid. Chaff. & Jones verif. Lowering Styles 220.

If a Freighter, by loading prohibited or unlawful Goods, occasions the Ship's Detention, or otherwise impedes her Voyage, he shall pay the Freight contracted and agreed for.

When a Ship is freighted out and in (or out and home) there is no Freight due till the whole Voyage is performed; so that if she be cast away coming Home, the Freight outwards, as well as inwards, becomes lost. Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Bright verif. Cawger. Brownlow, Part 2. In Chancery. 13 July, 1689.

A Part Owner of a Ship sued the other Owners for his Share of the Freight on finishing her Voyage: but the other Owners had fitted her out, in which the Complainant would not join, whereupon the other Owners complained in the Admiralty; and by Order there, they gave Security, if the Ship perished in the Voyage, to make good to the Plaintiff his Share, or to that Effect; in such a Case, by the Law Marine and Course of the Admiralty, the Plaintiff was to have no Share of the Freight: It was referred to Sir Lionel Jenkins to certify the Course of the Admiralty, who certified accordingly, and that it was so in all Places, for otherwise there would be no Navigation; whereupon the Plaintiff's Bill was dismissed.

If a Master lets out his Ship, and afterwards secretly takes in other Goods unknown to the first Freighter, by the Law Marine he loses his Freight; and if it should so fall out, that any of the Freighter's Goods should for safety of the Ship be cast overboard, the Rest shall not become subject to the Average, but the Master must make the Damage good; though, if the Goods are brought into the Ship secretly and unknown to him, it is otherwise; and Goods so brought in, may be subjected to what Freight the Master thinks fit. Leg. Oleron 3 Leg. Naval. Rbod. Art. 25. Consul. Del. Mer.

When a Ship puts into any other Port than that she was bound to by Agreement, the Master shall answer all Damages that shall accrue thereby; but if she was forced in by Storm, Enemies, or Pirates, he must afterwards proceed to that he was obliged to by the Contract. Leg. Oleron.

In Construction of Law, the Lading of the Ship is tacitly obliged for the Freight, the same being in Point of Payment preferred before any other Debts to which the Goods so laden are liable, though such Debts, as to Time, were precedent to the Freight; for the Goods remain, as it were, bailed for the same; nor can they be attached in the Master's Hands, though it is commonly conceived otherwise. Bald. in leg. centi Juris int Q. in Verb. quid ergo Cod. locat.

As Ships deserve Wages like a Labourer, the Actions touching the same are, in the Eye of the Law, generally construed favourably for the Ship and Owners; and therefore if four Parts in five of them shall make up their Accounts with the Freighters, and receive their Proportions, yet the fifth Man may sue singly by himself without joining with the Rest, and this as well by the Common Law as the Law Marine. Stanhly verif. 3 Krb. 444.

If a Ship in her Voyage happens to be taken by an Enemy, and afterwards is re-taken by another Ship in Amity, and Restitution is made, and the proceeds on in her Voyage, the Contract is not determined, though the taking by the Enemy divested the Property out of the Owners; yet by the Law of War, that Possession was defeasible, and being recovered in Battle afterwards, the Owners become re-invested; so the Contract, by Fiction of Law, became as if she never had been taken, and so the entire Freight becomes due. 7 R. II. Stalkham Abridg. 54.

It was covenanted by a Charterparty, that a Ship should return by a certain Time within the River of Thames, (the Dangers of the Sea excepted) and afterwards in the Voyage, and within the Time of the Return, the Ship was taken upon the Sea by Enemies unknown to the Covenanter, and being detained by them could not return within the River of Thames, within the Time mentioned in the Covenant. Refused, this Impediment was within the Exception, for these Words intend as well any Danger upon the Sea by Pirates or Men of War, as Dangers of the Sea, by Shipwreck, Tempest, or the like. Pickering and Barkly. Styles 112. 2 Roll. Abridg. 248.

If Freight be taken for a Hundred Tons of Wine, and Twenty of them leak out, so that there is not above eight Inches from the Bulge upwards, yet the Freight becomes due; but, if they be under eight Inches, some conceive it then to be in the Election of the Freighters to sling them up to the Master for Freight; Boce verif. Cobs. Hill. 165. 27 Car. II. B. R.

but most think otherwise; for if all had leaked out (if there was no Fault found in the Stowage, by a Survey from the Trinity-House) there is no Reason the Ship should lose her Freight; for the Freight arises from the Tonnage taken, and if the Leakage was occasioned through Storm*, the same perhaps may come into an Average.

It is certain if a Ship freighted by the Great be cast away, the Freight is lost; but if by the Ton or Parcels, and Part thereof is saved from the Wreck; doubted whether pro rata, she ought not to be answered her Freight †.

If a Ship by Charterparty, reciting her to be of the Burthen of 200 Tons, is taken to Freight for a Sum certain, to be paid at her Return, the Sum certain is to be paid, though the Ship amounts not to that Burden.

In Case a Ship is freighted after the Rate of 20*l.* for every Month that she shall be out, to be paid after Arrival at the Port of London; and the Ship is cast away coming up from the Downs, but the Lading is all preserved, in this Case the Freight is become due; for the Money arises so Monthly by the Contract, and the Place mentioned is only to shew where Payment is to be made; for the Ship deserves Wages like a Mariner who serveth by the Month; and though he dies in the Voyage, yet his Executors are to be answered pro rata. Besides, the Freight becomes due by Indentment on the Delivery or Bringing-up of the Commodities to the Port of London, and not of the Ship.

<sup>1</sup> Bull. 176. If a Man freights a Ship out, and covenants that the Ship should sail out of that Port to Cadix with the first fair Wind and Opportunity, and the Freighters covenants, that for the Freight of all the Premises he would pay unto the Master 18*l.* if the Master doth not aver, that the Ship did arrive at the Port of Cadix, he cannot maintain an Action against the Freighters.

If the Master enters into a Charterparty for himself and Owners, the Master in that Case may release the Freighters, without advising with the Owners; but if the Owners let the Ship out to Freight, whereof J. J. is Master, though the Master covenant in the same Charterparty and subscribes, yet his Release in that Case will not bind the Owners, but the Owners' Release on the other Hand will include the Master; and the Reason is, for that the Master is not made a proper Party to the Indenture. And so it was ruled, where an Indenture of Charterparty was made between Scudamore and others, Owners of the good Ship called the B. whereof Robert Pitman was Master, on the one Part, and Vanicensene on the other Part; in which Indenture the Plaintiff did covenant with the said Vanicensene and Robert Pitman, and bound themselves to the Plaintiff and Robert Pitman for the Performance of Covenants in 60*l.* and the Conclusion of the Indenture was—

In Witness whereof the said Robert Pitman put his Hand and Seal, and delivered the same: In an Action of Covenant, for not performing certain Covenants in this Indenture, the Defendant pleaded the Release of Pitman, whereupon the Plaintiff demurred, and it was adjudged, that the Release of Pitman did not bar the Plaintiff, because he was no Party to the Indenture; and the Diversity in that Case was taken and agreed between an Indenture reciprocal between Parties on the one Side, and Parties on the other Side, as that wa.; for there no Bond, Covenant, or Grant, can be made to, or with any that is not Party to the Deed; but where the Deed indented is not reciprocal, but is without a Between, &c. as Omnibus Christi fidelibus, &c. there a Bond, Covenant, or Grant, may be made to divers several Persons.

If an Indenture of Charterparty be made between A. and B. Owners of a Ship of the one Part, and C. and D. Merchants of the other Part; and A. only seals the Deed on the one Part, and C. and D. on the other Part; but in the Indenture it is mentioned that A. and B. covenant with C. and D. and C. and D. covenant with A. and B.: In this Case, A. and B. may join in an Action against C. and D. though B. never seals the Deed, for he is a Party to the Deed, and C. and D. have sealed the other Part to B. as well as to A.

Covenant upon a Charterparty by which the Master of a Ship covenants to sail with the first fair Wind to Barcelona, and that the Mariners shall attend with a Boat a Boat to relade the Ship, and then to return with the first fair Wind to London, and to unlade and deliver the Goods; and the Merchants covenant to pay so much for Freight, and so much for Demorage every Day; the Master brought his Action for the Freight and Demorage, and declares that he failed such a Day, with the first fair Wind, and upon all the other Points. The Defendant pleads quoad the Freight, that the Ship did not return directly to London, but went to Alicant and Tangier, and made divers Deviations, and by these Delays the Goods were spoiled; and as to the Demorage, that this was occasioned by the Negligence of the Mariners, in not attending with the Boat to relade the Ship, to which the Plaintiff demurred; and per Curiam pro Quer. for that the Covenants are mutual and reciprocal, upon which each shall have his Action against the other, but shall not plead the Breach of one in Bar of another, for perhaps the Damage of the one Side and the other are not equal.

If a Factor freights a Ship, by Order and for Account of another, Out and Home, and a Charterparty is accordingly made and indented between him and the Master, the Factor is liable for the Freight and Performance of all Covenants; but if the Ship be only freighted Outwards, and loaded by the Factor, the Goods shipped are only liable for the Freight, and no Demands to be made on the Freighters in Virtue of the Charterparty, but the Person who receives the Goods is to pay it, according to the Tenor of the Bill of Lading.

If a Ship is freighted Out and Home, and after having delivered her Cargo at the Place agreed on, there are no Goods provided for her Re-lading, the Master must stay the Days of Demorage agreed on by Charterparty, and make his regular Protest for his Freighters's Non-Compliance, who will in this Case be obliged to pay him empty for full; though should the Master not wait the Time stipulated, or omit to make his Protest, he will lose his Freight; and in Case the Master, on his finding no Goods provided by his Freighters, should determine to load some on his own Account, as Salt, or the like, this will not obstruct his recovering his Freight; for if the Ship had been laden only with Salt by the Merchant, which (it may be) would not pay half the Freight, yet the Shipper or Proprietor may at Pleasure abandon the same to the Master for his Freight, and he can demand no more by the Charterparty; but if the Master take in such Salt on his own Account, before the Days of Demorage are expired, and that by some Condition made with his Freighters, he may claim Freight, then this latter is to have the Benefit of the Salt in Deduction of the said Freight.

and Goods returned and discharged at the Port of London aforesaid, for the End of the said Voyage: And also shall and will pay for Demurrage (if any shall be by the Default of him the said C. D. his Factors or Assigns) the Sum of, &c. per Day, daily, and every Day, as the same shall grow due. And the said A. B. for himself, his Executors, and Administrators, doth covenant, promise, and grant, to and with the said C. D. his Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, by these Presents, that the said Ship or Vessel shall be ready at the Port of London, to take in Goods by the said C. D. on or before, &c. next coming. And the said C. D. for himself, his, &c. doth covenant and promise, within ten Days after the said Ship or Vessel shall be thus ready, to have his Goods put on board the said Ship, to proceed on in the said Voyage; and also on the Arrival of the said Ship at, &c. within, &c. Days, to have his Goods ready to put on board the said Ship, to return on the said Voyage. And the said A. B. for himself, his Executors, and Administrators, doth further covenant and grant to and with the said C. D. his Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, that the said Ship or Vessel now is, and at all Times during the said Voyage shall be, to the best Endeavours of him the said A. B. his Executors, and Administrators, and at his and their own proper Costs and Charges, in all Things made and kept stiff, staunch, strong, well apparelled, furnished, and provided, as well with Men and Mariners, sufficient and able to sail, guide, and govern the said Ship, as with all Manner of Rigging, Boats, Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, Provision, and Appurtenances fitting and necessary for the said Men and Mariners, and for the said Ship during the Voyage aforesaid. In Witness, &c.

The following is the Form of a Charterparty, whereby the Owners of one Moiety of a Ship let to Freight their Share to the Owners of the other Moiety.

THIS Charterparty, indented, made, &c. between A. B. and C. D. of London, Merchants, Owners of the one Moiety or half Part of the good Ship or Vessel called the Neptune, of the Burthen of 200 Tons, with the like Moiety of all the Sails, Masts, Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, Ordnance, and Appurtenances thereunto belonging, now riding at Anchor in the River of Thames, within the Port of London, of which the said C. D. is Master, of the one Part, and E. F. and G. H. of London, Merchants, Owners of the other Moiety and Residue of the said Ship, with the Masts, Sails, Tackle, Ordnance, Furniture, and Apparel thereunto belonging, on the other Part, WITNESSETH, that the said A. B. and C. D. have granted and letten to Freight, and by these Presents do grant and let to Freight, all their said Part and Moiety of the said Ship and Premises, unto the said E. F. and G. H. for a Voyage with her (by God's Grace) to be made in Manner and Form following:

That is to say, That the said A. B. and C. D. for them, their Executors, Administrators and Assigns, do hereby covenant and grant to and with the said E. F. and G. H. for them, their and each of their Executors and Administrators by these Presents, that the said Ship (being already laden) shall, with the first good Wind and Weather, after the Date hereof (God permitting) sail directly from the said River of Thames to the Port of Leghorn in Italy (the Perils and Dangers of the Seas excepted) and there unlade and discharge such Goods and Merchandizes as shall be directed and appointed by the said E. F. and G. H. or one of them, their, or one of their Factors or Assigns, in good Condition; and from thence shall sail, and take her direct Course, as Wind and Weather shall serve, with as much Speed as may be (the Perils and Dangers of the Sea excepted) to Venice, and there shall stay and abide the Space of twenty working Days, next after her Arrival there, to unlade all such Goods and Merchandizes as shall remain on board for Account of E. F. and G. H. after her first Delivery at Leghorn as aforesaid; and to relade such Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes as the said E. F. and G. H. or either of them, their or either of their Factors or Assigns, shall think fit to charge and re-lade aboard and into the said Ship, that is to say, so much as the said Ship can conveniently carry, over and above her Victuals, Tackle, Ammunition, Apparel, and Furniture.

And the said Ship with her said Lading shall with the first good Wind and Weather, after the Expiration of the said twenty Days, sail and proceed from the said City of Venice to London, with the said Goods, within the Time, &c. In Consideration consideration whereof the said E. F. and G. H. for themselves, and either of them, their and either of their Executors and Administrators, do covenant, promise, and grant to and with the said A. B. and C. D. and either of them, their and either of their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, by these Presents, that they the said E. F. and G. H. or one of them, their, or one of their Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, shall and will well and truly pay or cause to be paid to the said A. B. and C. D. or one of them, their, or one of their Executors or Administrators, within the said City of London, for every Ton of such Wares and Merchandizes as shall be laden or unladen in the said Ship, during the said Voyage, the Sum of, &c. (counting the Tonnage according to Custom; or if a certain Sum is agreed for the Voyage, Out and Home, or so much per Month) for the Part and Interest of the said A. B. and C. D. in the said Ship, and for, and in Respect of the Freight and Hire of their Part of her; which said Money is to be paid in Manner and Form following, That is to say; one third Part thereof upon the right Discharge of the said Ship, and another third Part thereof within the Space of six Weeks then next following, and the remaining third Part thereof within the Space of two Months next ensuing after the End and Determination of the said six Weeks. And also shall and will pay for demurrage (if any shall be by Default of the said E. F. and G. H. their Factors or Assigns) the Sum of— per Day, daily, and every Day, as the same shall grow due.

And the said A. B. and C. D. for them, and either of them, their and either of their Executors and Administrators, do covenant and grant to and with the said E. F. and G. H. their Executors and Administrators, by these Presents, that the said Ship, for their Part, shall be strong and staunch, and well and sufficiently tackled and apparelled, with Sails, Sail-yards, Anchors, Cables, Ropes, Gun-Shot, Artillery, Gunpowder, and all other Instruments, Tackle, and Apparel, needful and necessary for such a Ship and for such a Voyage, together with an able Master, and sufficient Number of Mariners.

And to the Performance of all, and every the Covenants, Grants, Articles, and Agreements, on the Parts, and Behalves of every of the said Parties, truly to be holden, performed; and kept, in all Things as is aforesaid, the said Parties to these Presents, do bind themselves to one another: that is to say, the said A. B. and C. D. do by these Presents bind themselves, and either of them, and their several Executors and Administrators, Goods, and their Part and Interest in the said Ship, with the Furniture thereof, to the said E. F. and G. H. and to their Executors and Administrators; and the said E. F. and G. H. do in like Manner bind themselves, and either of them, their and either of their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, and all their Goods and Interest in the said Ship, to the said A. B. and C. D. their Executors and Administrators, in the Sum or Penalty of one thousand Pounds, of lawful Money of Great-Britain, by the Party or Parties infringing the said Covenants, or any of them, to the other Party or Parties truly observing, to be paid by Virtue of these Presents.

If before the Departure of the Ship there should happen an Embargo, occasioned by War, Reprisals, or otherwise, with the Country to which the Ship is bound, so that she cannot proceed on her Voyage, the Charterparty shall be dissolved without Damages or Charges to either Party, and the Merchant shall pay the Charges of unloading his Goods; but if the Restraint arises from a Difference between the Parties themselves, the Charterparty shall still remain valid in all its Points.

If the Ports be only shut, and the Vessels stopped for a Time, the Charterparty shall still be valid, and the Master and Merchant shall be reciprocally obliged to wait the Opening of the Ports, and the Liberty of the Ships, without any Pretensions for Damages on either Side.

However, the Merchant, at his own Charges, may unlade his Goods during the shutting up of the Port, upon Condition either to relade them, or indemnify the Master. The great Variety of Circumstances which different Voyages occasion, naturally produce a correspondent Diversity in Charterparties, and were I to quote a Series of all that offers on this Head, I should greatly exceed the Limits I have prescribed myself. I therefore the rather omit it, as from those preceding others may be formed, to answer every Purpose required; I shall, therefore, to what has already been said about Freight, add here the Copy of a Bill of Lading, which is a Writing wherein Masters of Ships acknowledge the Receipt of Goods abroad, and oblige themselves to deliver the same in good Order and Condition at the Place where they are consigned to. There must always be three made out, and in England they are to be on stamped Paper, otherwise they are invalid, of which, one should be remitted per first Post after signing to the Person the Goods go to, the second remain with the Shipper, and the third, made out on an unstamped Paper, be given to the Master for his Government, in ascertaining the specific Merchandise he has on board.

The Form of a Bill of Lading, viz.

W. B. N<sup>o</sup>. 1 & 10. SHIPPED in good Order by A. B. Merchant, in and upon the good Ship called whereof C. D. is Master, now riding at Anchor in the River of Thames, and bound for Alicant in Spain, ten Bales, containing fifty Pieces of Broad Cloth, marked and numbered as per Margin, and are to be delivered in the like good Order and Condition at Alicant aforesaid (the Dangers of the Seas excepted) unto E. F. Merchant there, or to his Assigns, he or they paying for the said Goods per Piece Freight, with Primage and Average accustomed. In Witness whereof the Master or Purser of the said Ship hath affirmed to three Bills of Lading of this Tenor and Date, one of which Bills being accomplished, the other two to stand void. And so God send the good Ship to her designed Port in Safety. Amen.
Dated at London.

The Difference between a Bill of Lading and a Charterparty is, that the first is required and given for a single Article or more, laden on board a Ship that has sundry Merchandise shipped for sundry Accounts. Whereas a Charterparty is a Contract for the whole Ship. Bills of Lading ought to be signed by the Master within twenty-four Hours after the Delivery of the Goods on board. But upon Delivery of the Goods, the Master, or other Person officiating for the Master in his Absence, is to give a common Receipt for them, which is to be delivered up, upon the Master's signing the Bills of Lading.

Upon delivering the Goods at the Port of Destination to the Shipper's Factors or Assigns, giving up the Bill of Lading sent to the Factors or Assigns is not a sufficient Discharge, but the Master may insist upon a Receipt.

DEMORRAGE, or DEMURRAGE, is an Allowance made to the Master of a Ship by his Freighters, for staying longer in a Place than the Time first appointed for his Departure, or his Stay at the delivering Ports; and is generally inserted in the Charterparty to be paid daily as it becomes due; the Days are always limited, so that on Expiration thereof, and Protests duly made, the Master is at Liberty to proceed, as is before-mentioned. The Price is regulated by the Burthen of the Ship.

BOTTOMRY is the Act of borrowing Money upon the Keel or Bottom of a Ship by engaging the Vessel for the Re-payment, so that in Case she miscarry, the Lender loses his Money, though, if she finishes her Voyage and arrives in Safety, the Borrower is to re-pay the Loan with a Premium or Interest agreed on (which is always adequate to the Risk) and if this is denied, or deferred, the Lender shall have the Ship.

Bottomry is likewise called Fœnus Nauticum, Pecunia trajectitia, and sometimes Ufura Marina, though improperly, for notwithstanding the Interest in these Contracts is always much larger than that the Law prescribes for Monies lent on landed Securities, yet it is never accounted Ufury, as Marine Loans are furnished at the Hazard of the Lender, which the others are not; and where the Risk is greatest on the advanced Monies, the Profit ought reasonably to be so too.

Money lent on Bottomry is commonly on the Ship only, though sometimes it is upon the Person of the Borrower, and sometimes on both; the first is where a Man takes up Money, and obliges himself, that if the Ship agreed on arrives at such a Port, then to re-pay the Loan, with the Interest stipulated, but if the Ship miscarry, then nothing. But when Money is lent at Interest, it is delivered at the Peril of the Borrower, and the Profit of this is merely the Price of the Loan; whereas the Profit of the other is a Reward for the Danger and Adventure of the Sea, which the Lender takes upon himself, and makes the Interest lawful. Jacob's Law Ufura Marina joins the advanced Money and the Danger of the Sea together; Dr. J. J. J. and this obligatory sometimes to the Borrower's Ship, Goods, and Person.

See Lewis,

The Interest on Bottomry may amount to 30 or 40 per cent, and yet not fall Ditto within the Statute of Ufury. As thus, 5 per cent for the legal Interest of the principal Sum advanced, 15 per cent for the Hazard of the Voyage outwards, 10 per cent for the Hazard of the Return Home, or more, according to the Agreement, and it is to be remembered, that the Lender will consider the Premium or Price for insuring the Principal at Home, whether he pays it, or takes it upon himself.

Where Bills or Bonds of Bottomry are sealed, and the Money is paid, if the Ship receives Injury by Storm, Fire, &c. before the Beginning of the Voyage, then only the Peril borrowing runs the Hazard, unless it be otherwise provided; as that, if the Ship shall not arrive at such a Place, at such a Time, &c. there the Contract hath a Beginning, from the Time of the sealing; But if the Condition be, that if such Ship shall sail from London to any Port abroad, and shall not arrive there, &c. then, &c. there the Contingency hath not its Beginning till the Departure.

A Master of a Ship may not take up Money on Bottomry in Places where his Owners reside, except he be a Part Owner, and then he may only take up as much as his Share in the Ship will answer; for if he exceeds that, his own Estate is liable to make Satisfaction*; but when a Master is in a strange Country, where there are no Owners, nor any Goods of theirs, or of his own, and for Want of Money he cannot perform his Voyage, he may in this Case take up Money on Bottomry, and all the Owners are chargeable thereto; but this is understood, Stat. 35. where Money cannot be procured by Exchange or any other Means: And in 2 Mod. Cases the first Case, the Owners are liable by their Vessel, though not in their Persons; 79. but they have their Remedy against the Master.

Some Masters of Ships, who had insured or taken up Money on Bottomry, to a greater Value than their Adventure, having made it a Practice to cast away and destroy the Ships under their Charge, it is made Felony, and the Offenders to suffer Death. 10 Car. II. Cap. 6.

By another Statute it is enacted, that after the 1st of August, 1746, every Sum lent on Bottomry, or at Respondentia, upon any Subjects' Ships to, or from the East-Indies, shall be lent only on the Ship, or the Merchandizes laden on board her, and so expressed in the Condition of the Bond, and the Benefit of Salvage shall be allowed to the Lender, his Agents, &c. who alone shall have a Right to make Assurance on the Money lent; and no Borrower of Money on Bottomry, or at Respondentia, as aforesaid, shall recover more on any Assurance than the Value of his Interest on the Ship or Effects, exclusive of the Money borrowed. And if the Value of his Interest doth not amount to the Money borrowed, he shall be responsible to the Lender for the Surplus, with lawful Interest for the same, together with the Assurance and all Charges, &c. notwithstanding the Ship and Merchandize be totally lost. 13 Geo. II. Cap. 37. P. 569.

All his Majesty's Subjects were prohibited during the Continuance of the late War to lend Money on Bottomry or Respondentia, or any Ships or Goods belonging to France, or to any of the French Dominions or Plantations, or the Subjects thereof, and in Case they did, the Contracts and Agreements to be void, and they or any Agent or Broker interfering therein was to forfeit 500*l.* &c. 21 Geo. II. P. 76.

Some have practised the taking up Monies on a fictitious Supposition, the Condition reciting, Whereas there is such a Ship (naming her) bound to Amsterdam, whereof such a Man is Master (although there be neither such a Ship or Master existing) that if that Ship shall not arrive at such a Place within twelve Months, the Money agreed on shall be paid; but if the Ship shall arrive, then nothing; this is an unreasonable Way of raising Money copied from the Italians; and though it is also very unconscionable, and, as to eternal Right, unjust; yet it has had a Currency between the necessitous and avaricious Part of Mankind, and it was adjudged adjudged * that such a Contract was good, according to the common Law of this Realm, and that on a special Verdict; but though it has this Sanction, yet the prohibiting Insurance, Interest or no Interest (as by the afore-recited Act) will tend to render it at least less practicable, if not utterly to destroy it.

TO all People to whom these Presents shall come, I A. B. of, &c. Owner and Master of the Ship called, &c. of the Burthen of two hundred Tons, now riding at, &c. and bound for, &c. in the West Indies, send greeting; Whereas I, the said A. B. am at this Time necessitated to take up, upon the Adventure of the said Ship, called, &c. the Sum of 100l. for setting forth the said Ship to Sea, and furnishing her with Provisions for the said Voyage: which C. D. of, &c. Merchant, hath on Request lent unto me, and supplied me with, at the Rate of 20l. for the said 100l. during the said Voyage: Now, know ye, that I the said A. B. do by these Presents for me, my Executors and Administrators, covenant and grant to and with the said C. D. that the said Ship shall with the first fair Wind, after the Day, &c. depart from the River Thames, and sail, as Wind and Weather shall serve, proceed in her Voyage to, &c. in the West Indies; and having there tarried until, &c. and the Opportunity of a Convoy (if in Time of War) or being sooner dispatched (which shall first happen) shall return from thence, and shall as Wind and Weather shall serve, directly sail back to the River of Thames, to finish her said Voyage: And I the said A. B. in Consideration of the said Sum of 100l. to me in Hand paid by the said C. D. at and before the Sealing and Delivery of these Presents, do hereby bind myself, my Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, my Goods and Chattels, and particularly the said Ship, with the Freight, Tackle and Apparell of the same, to pay unto the said C. D. his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, the Sum of 120l. of lawful British Money, within one and twenty Days next after the Return and safe Arrival of the said Ship, in the said River of Thames, from the said intended Voyage. And I the said A. B. do for me, my Executors and Administrators, covenant and grant, to and with the said C. D. his Executors and Administrators, by these Presents, that I the said A. B. at the Time of Sealing and Delivery of these Presents, am true and lawful Owner, and Master of the said Ship, and have Power and Authority to charge and engage the said Ship, as aforesaid; and that the said Ship shall at all Times, after the said Voyage, be liable and chargeable for the Payment of the 120l. according to the true Intent and Meaning of these Presents. And, lastly, it is hereby declared and agreed, by and between the said Parties to these Presents, that in Case the said Ship shall be lost, miscarry, or be cast away, before her next Arrival in the said River of Thames, from the same intended Voyage, that then the said Payment of the said 120l. shall not be demanded, or be recoverable by the said C. D. his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns; but shall cease and determine, and the Loss thereby be wholly borne and sustained by the said C. D. his Executors and Administrators: And that then, and from thenceforth, every Act, Matter and Thing herein contained, on the Part and Behalf of the said A. B. shall be void; any Thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. In Witness, &c.

Of Ballast.

Linter's Cas.,
L. 1002, G. 47. THOUGH Ballast has been adjudged to be no Part of a Ship's Furniture, yet it is so requisite to the sailing of most Vessels, as to render an Enquiry into its Cost, and the Laws about it, very necessary, while treating on Maritime Affairs: It generally consists of Sand, Gravel, or Stone, though any heavy Matter answers the Purpose, which is to sink the Vessel to its proper Depth in the Water, or so to adjust Weight and Counterpoise, as to enable her to bear Sail without oversetting.

6 Geo. II. C. All Masters of Ships, lying in the River of Thames, shall pay to the Corporation of Trinity-House, for all Ballast demanded and entered at the Ballast Office, the

Ditto, S. 3.

If any Ballastman shall deliver any Ballast, which shall fall short of Quantity; or shall neglect to deliver to any Ship such Quantity as the Rulers of the Ballast Office shall by their usual Tickets direct; or shall deliver more, or other Ballast than shall be directed, every Ballastman so offending, and Oath being made of the Fact within ten Days after the Offence, or within ten Days after the next Return of such Ship, by the Master, or other Officer of any such Ship, before any Supervisor of the Ballast Office, being an elder Brother, shall for every Ton, which shall appear to fall short, and for every Ton, directed by the Ballast-Rulers, which such Ballastman shall neglect to deliver, and for every Ton delivered contrary to the Directions of the said Rulers, forfeit 2*s.* 6*d.*

The said Master, Wardens, and Assistants, shall make good to the Master of such Ship, the Quantity or Value of the Ballast, which shall be found deficient; and in Case such Recompence shall not be made within ten Days after the same shall be demanded, the Corporation shall forfeit 50*l.* &c. which Recompence the Corporation are empowered to stop out of the Wages to such Ballastmen, over and above the Penalties.

No Person shall oblige any Ballastman to deliver Ballast, which shall be directed by the Rulers of the Office to be carried to any other Ship; and if any Person shall fraudulently receive any greater Quantity of Ballast, than they shall enter and pay for at the Office, every Person so offending, and being thereof convicted, upon Oath of one Witness, before a Justice of Peace for the City of London, or the Counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, or Surrey, within their respective Jurisdictions, shall for every Ton of Ballast forfeit 2*s.* and 6*d.*

If any Ballastman shall refuse to work for the Wages herein mentioned, or having contracted to serve for any Term, shall quit such Service, or shall depart from the Service of the Corporation, without giving three Months' Notice in Writing to the Supervisors of the Ballast Office; or shall refuse to work, or shall not work in such Stations in the River Thames as the Corporation shall appoint, or shall work in any Station contrary to the Orders of the Rulers of the Office, given in Writing, or shall join in any Combination to raise Wages, or obstruct the Service of the Corporation, or the Navigation of the River, every Person so offending and being convicted as aforesaid, shall forfeit 5*l.*

The Corporation of Trinity House shall cause Marks to be set on the Stern and Stern of every Lighter, between every two Gauge Marks now placed on the Stern and Stern, that the Tonnage of every such Lighter may be distinguishing by a gradual Progression of two Tons and a half.

It shall be lawful for the Masters of Ships, taking Ballast, to meet in the Square at Billinggate, or the third Monday in June, in every Year, and to adjourn as the Majority of them shall think fit, and by Writing under the Hands and Seals of the major Part of them, to appoint Persons, having been Masters or Mates of Ships, to inspect the Ballast Lighters, which Persons are empowered to examine the Marks; and in Case such Persons shall suspect that any of the Marks have been altered, and shall at the Ballast Office require the said Lighter to be re-weighed, the Corporation shall, within ten working Days after such Request, cause such Lighter to be re-weighed; and in Case the same shall be found to be of as great Tonnage, as by the Marks shall be noted, the Charge of such re-weighing shall be paid by the Persons requiring the same; and in Case such Persons shall not pay the Charge within ten Days after such re-weighing, they shall forfeit 5*l.* but if such Lighter shall be found of less Tonnage than the Marks denote, the Charge of such re-weighing shall be borne by the Corporation, who shall cause the Marks on the Stern and Stern of such Lighter, to be placed in such Manner as to denote the true Tonnage; and in Case the Corporation shall neglect

- to have such Lighter re-weighed, or to make the same according to this Act, the Corporation shall forfeit 5*l.* &c.
- 6 Geo. II. C. 29. S. 9. Ditto, S. 10. No more than two Lighters shall be required to be re-weighed in any one Week. It shall be lawful for any Master of a Ship to appoint two Persons belonging to such Ship (whereof the Mate to be one) to go on board any Lighter, bringing Ballast to such Ship, to inspect the Marks before and after the Delivery of such Ballast; and every Ballastman shall immediately, before the Delivery of Ballast to any Ship, trim such Lighter so as to make the same swim, at equal Marks at the Stem and Stern, and Pump all the Water out; and if any Person working on board such Lighter, shall hinder any Person so appointed from going on board such Lighter, or shall begin to deliver the Ballast before such Lighter shall be trimmed to swim at equal Marks, and the Water pumped out, every Person so offending shall forfeit 5*l.*
- Ditto, S. 11. If any Ballastman shall work, or deliver Ballast, in any Lighter not weighed, marked, numbered, and allowed by the Corporation; or shall alter or counterfeit the Gauge Mark, or the Number of such Lighter, he shall forfeit 10*l.*
- Ditto, S. 12. If any Ballastman shall demand and receive from any Master or Officer, of any Ship, any Money, on Account of Ballast, or the Delivery of the same, he shall forfeit 40*s.*
- Ditto, S. 13. The Ballastmen employed in the service of the Corporation shall be subject to the Regulations of the Corporation, provided such Regulations do not extend to the lowering the Wages.
- Ditto, S. 14. It shall be lawful for any Master of a Ship to carry as Ballast from London, or any Part of the River Thames, any Dung, Chalk, Soap Ashes, Flints, Clay, or other Goods, now claimed to be furnished as Ballast, subject to the Restrictions herein after mentioned.
- Ditto, S. 15. The Master of every such Ship shall first make entry at the Ballast Office, or with the Officer of the said Corporation at Gravesend, of the said Goods, and the Name of such Ship, and of the Master.
- Ditto, S. 16. At the Time of such Entry, the Master of such Ship shall pay for such Licence to the Corporation 1*d.* for every Ton of the said Goods.
- Ditto, S. 17. If any Master of a Ship shall put on board any of the said Goods before such Entry and Payment, or shall ship any greater Quantity than shall be so entered and paid for, he, on Conviction before one Justice, shall forfeit 5*l.* &c.
- Ditto, S. 18. Provided that the whole Quantity of Dung and Compost, licensed to be shipped for the Use of the Coasters and Colliers, does not exceed three Thousand Tons in any one Year, to commence from the first of June; and that the whole Quantity of Chalk and Chalk Rubbish does not exceed three Thousand Tons; and that the Quantity of Soap Ashes, and all other Commodities herein licensed, does not exceed two Thousand Tons, in any one Year.
- Ditto, S. 19. All Entries of the Goods so licensed, which shall be shipped in the last seven Days of May, shall be made at the Trinity House in London, and not at Gravesend.
- Ditto, S. 20. It shall be lawful for any Master of any Ship to carry as Ballast, from any Part of the River Thames, any Bricks, Tiles, Lime or other Merchandizeable Commodity, without paying any Thing to the Corporation.
This Act shall be a public Act, &c.
- Ditto, S. 20. This Act shall continue from the first of June, 1733, for five Years, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament.
- Ditto, S. 25. Continued for seven Years, &c. by 11 Geo. II. Cap. 12, and further continued for 11 Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament by 18 Geo. II. p. 543.
- And as it has been the Practice of many unthinking Masters of Vessels, regardless of the publick Welfare, to throw their Ballast out any where, to the great Detriment of many Ports, &c. the Legislature thought proper to prevent the Continuance of so prejudicial a Custom, by passing the subsequent Law; the Preamble to which sets forth, that Masters, and other Persons belonging to Ships, coming into Havens, navigable Rivers, &c. do throw out their Ballast, either on the Shore or on the Side, and below the usual Sea Mark, and do other Annoyances, to the Detriment and Obstruction of Navigation, &c.

For Remedy whereof, it is enacted, that if, after June 1, 1746, any Master or Owner, or any Person acting as Master of any Ship or other Vessel whatsoever, shall cast, throw out, or unlade, or, if after the Day aforesaid, there shall be thrown out, &c. of any Vessel, being within any Haven, Port, Road, Channel, or navigable River, within England, any Ballast, Rubbish, Gravel, Earth, Stone, Wreck, or Filth, but only upon the Land, where the Tide or Water never flows or runs; any one or more Justices for the County or Place where or near which the Offence shall be committed, upon Information thereof, shall summon, or issue his Warrant, for bringing the Master or Owner of the Vessel, or other Person acting as such, before him, and upon Appearance or Default, shall proceed to examine the Matter of Fact, and upon Proof made thereof, either by Confession of the Party, or on View of the Justice, or upon the Oath of one or more credible Witnesses (which Oath the said Justice is to administer) he shall convict the said Master, &c. and fine him at his Discretion for every such Offence any Sum not exceeding 5*l.* nor under 50*s.* &c. and for want of sufficient Distress, the Justice is to commit the Master, or Person acting as such, and convicted as aforesaid, to the common Gaol or House of Correction, for the Space of two Months, or until Payment of the Penalties.

The Act of 6 Geo. II. for the better regulating Lading and Ballasting in the River Thames, being near expiring, it is enacted that all the Powers, Clauses, and Provisions therein, other than such as are hereby amended, shall continue in Force until the 24th of June, 1770, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

Dung, Compost, Soil, Earth, Chalk, Rubbish, Soap Ashes, Soap Waste, Flints, Tobacco-pipe Clay, or other Clay, or any other Goods, claimed to be furnished as Ballast by the Trinity House, (subject nevertheless to the Payment of Rates and Duties, and under the Provisions and Restrictions aforesaid) may be shipped in Colliers or Coasters from London, or any Part of the Thames, so that the same doth not exceed 3000 Tons, over and above 2000 Tons, allowed to be shipped by the Lessees or Occupiers of Laystalls on the condition after mentioned; of Chalk and Chalk Rubbish 3000 Tons, and of Soap Ashes and other Commodities claimed to be furnished as Ballast by the Trinity House, 2000 Tons.

Before shipping the Ballast claimed by the Trinity House, the Master or Owner shall make a due Entry at the Ballast Office of the Trinity House, London, or at the Trinity House at Graveyard (unless the Ballast be shipped in the last seven Days of the Month of May, then the Entry at London only) and of the Ship's Name and of the Master, and at the same Time to pay to the Corporation 1*d.* a Ton for a Licence.

If any of the Commodities be shipped before Entry, or any greater Quantity shipped than entered, to forfeit 5*l.*

Bricks, Tiles, Lime, or merchantable Commodities, to be shipped without paying for Licence.

All Lighters and other Vessels employed for carrying Dung, &c. on board any Ship or Vessel, to be first weighed, marked, and numbered, by an Officer of the Trinity House, on the Penalty of 5*l.* and a Gauge Mark of the Number and Tonnage of the Vessel to be painted on the Stem or Stern of the Vessel; if removed to forfeit 5*l.*

If the Gauge Mark has been removed, altered or changed, the Corporation may re-weigh the Lighter, and, if the Tonnage is more than marked, the Owner to forfeit 5*l.*

The Trinity Company to find Lighters to take Ballast from Ships, within three Days after Notice from the Master, unless frosty or tempestuous Weather, on Forfeiture of 50*l.*

The Owner or Master to pay 6*d.* per Ton to the Company for Lighterage.

The Master to forfeit 5*l.* for unloading any Ballast below high-water Mark; and 40*s.* to be paid by any Person throwing any Dirt, Rubbish, Ashes, &c. from any Wharf, Quay, or Bank, or from any Barge or Lighter.

Of Pilots, Lodesmen, or Locmen.

BY these different Denominations are signified the same Officer, whose Business it is to conduct any Vessel or Ship into a Road or Harbour, over Bars or Sands, or through intricate and dangerous Channels, being occasionally called in to the Master's Assistance when sailing as above, or by unknown Shores, and diffident of his own Skill and Judgement; though in many Parts, where the Approach or Entrance to Harbours, &c. are hazardous and difficult, the taking a Pilot is not a voluntary Act, but obligatory on the Master, otherwise, in Case of a Loss, he must make it good; and the following Laws are now in Force concerning them in England. After a Pilot is taken on board, the Master has no longer any command of the Ship, till she is safe in Harbour; but then the Master resumes the Government of the same, and is to see to her Bed and Lying; the Pilot being no longer liable, though for his own Convenience he may still be on board. The same Rule holds Good, if a Pilot goes on board only to conduct a Ship through some dangerous Place, as for Instance, Yarmouth Roads; after passing them, the Master must resume the Command, and the Pilot is no longer responsible. Yet it may happen, that the Pilot shall continue on board, the Remainder of the Voyage; for Example, he may want to go to Newcastle; but he is only to be considered as a common Passenger, after he has conducted the Ship through the hazardous Passage, for which Purpose he came on board, neither can he charge any Wages, Salary, or Fee, though he should keep the Helm during the whole Voyage, except for the Duty done in passing the Roads.

If a Master of a Ship finds himself in tempestuous Weather, in any reputed dangerous Place, usually denominated Pilot's Water, and a Pilot offers to come on board, which offer he refuses to accept; the Master in such Cases is liable to his Owners, Freighters, or Insurers, for the Damage or Loss of Ship and Cargo, if either happen in his attempting the Passage without a Pilot.

The Master of an English Collier is held by the Flemings and the Dutch to be Pilot sufficient to Conduct his Ship from Newcastle to their Ports; accordingly, in the Case of a Ship freighted at Shields by a Flemish Merchant at Ostend, with Coals for that Port, he refused to allow the Charge of a Pilot: The Affair was referred to Arbitration, the British Vice Consul MORTIMER, being one of the Arbitrators; when it appeared, that the Ship was driven by Strefs of Weather into Yarmouth Roads which are Pilot's Water, and a Pilot offering his Service, he accepted him. Had he done otherwise, he would have been answerable to his Owners for the Ship if it had been lost, and to the Freighter for his Coals; it was therefore decided, that the Freighter was bound to allow the Pilotage. Pilotage is allowed in most Charterparties, but not in those made for Colliers in England.

3 Geo. I. C. If any Person shall take upon him to conduct or pilot any Ship, by or from
13. S. 1. Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, to any Place on the River Thames or Medway, before he has been first examined by the Master and Wardens of the Society or Fellowship of Pilots, of the Trinity House of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, touching his Ability, and approved and admitted into the said Society, at a Court of Loadmanage, by the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, or his Deputy, and the Master and Wardens; such Person for the first Offence shall forfeit 10*l.* for the second 20*l.* and for every other Offence 40*l.* &c.

Ditto, S. 2. This Act shall not prevent the Master or Mate of any Ship, or Part Owner, residing at Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, from piloting his own Ship; nor subject any Person to the Penalties, who shall be hired by any Master to pilot his Vessel, provided none of the Society, within one Hour after such Ship shall arrive at any of the said Places, be ready to pilot the same.

Ditto, S. 3. Masters of Merchants Ships may make Choice of such Pilot of the Society, as they shall think fit; and no Person shall continue in the Society, who shall not Pilot a Ship, at least twice in one Year (unless prevented by Sickness) to, and from, the Places abovementioned.

For conducting any Ship, from Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, to any <sup>3 Geo. I. C.</sup> Places on the River Thames and Medway, the following, and no greater, Prices <sup>13. S. 4.</sup> shall be taken, viz. For every Ship drawing seven Feet Water 3l. 10s. eight Feet 4l. nine Feet 4l. 10s. ten Feet 5l. eleven Feet 5l. 10s. twelve Feet 6l. thirteen Feet 6l. 10s. fourteen Feet 7l. fifteen Feet 7l. 10s. sixteen Feet 8l. seventeen Feet 8l. 10s. and no Allowance to be made for odd Inches.

If any Pilot shall negligently lose the Ship under his Care, and be thereof <sup>Ditto, S. 5.</sup> convicted, he shall for ever be incapacitated for acting as a Pilot; and the Number of such Pilots shall not be less than an hundred and twenty, whose Names, Ages, and Places of Abode, shall, every 25th of March, be affixed in some publick Place at the Customhouses at London and Dover, and for not returning such List, the Master and Wardens of the Society shall forfeit 10l. &c.

This Act shall not hinder any Person from assisting a Ship in Distress. <sup>Ditto, S. 7.</sup>

The Master and such two Wardens of the Society, as shall be appointed to <sup>Ditto, S. 8.</sup> examine any Person on his being admitted a Pilot, shall take the following Oath, to be given by the Register of the Court of Loadmanage, viz.

I A. B. do swear, that I will impartially examine, and enquire into the Capacity and Skill of <sup>in the Art of Pilotage over the Flats, and round the Long Sand Head, and the Coasts of Flanders and Holland, and will make true and speedy Return thereof to the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, for the Time being, or his Deputy, without Favour, Affection, Fee or Reward.</sup>

So help me God.

This Act shall not extend to the taking away any Liberties vested in the Cor- <sup>Ditto, S. 9.</sup> poration of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond.

This Act shall be a publick Act, and shall continue seven Years, &c. <sup>Ditto, S. 10.</sup>

Continued by 8 Geo. II. Cap. 21. to 25 March, 1749, &c. Further continued until 25 March, 1764; and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, by 23 Geo. II. p. 485.

The Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, or his Deputy, with the Assent of <sup>7 Geo. I. C.</sup> the Commissioners of Loadmanage, and of the Masters and Wardens of the Society <sup>21. S. 14.</sup> of Pilots of the Trinity House of the Cinque Ports, at a Court of Loadmanage, may, during the Continuance of 3 Geo. I. Cap. 13. make Rules and Orders for the better Government and Regulation of the Pilots residing at Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, and may order a sufficient Number of them, not less than eighteen, to ply constantly at Sea, to be ready to conduct Ships up the Rivers of Thames and Medway; and the Lord Warden, &c. at a Court of Loadmanage, may suspend or deprive any of the said Pilots, for breaking the said Rules or Orders; and if any Pilot, during such Suspension or Deprivation, shall take upon himself to conduct any Ship, by, or from Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, to any Place upon the River Thames or Medway, he shall be liable to all Penalties provided by the said Act against such Persons as shall conduct Ships from and to the Places aforesaid, without being first examined and approved of by the Master and Wardens of the said Society.

Continued as the preceding Act of 3 Geo. I. Cap. 13. by 8 Geo. II. Cap. 21. to 25 March, 1749. And further continued to 25 March, 1764, by 23 Geo. II. p. 485.

If any Person shall take the Charge of any Ship as Pilot, down the River of <sup>5 Geo. II. C.</sup> Thames, or through the North Channel, to, or by Orfordness, or round the Long <sup>20. S. 1.</sup> Sand Head, into the Downs, or down the South Channel into the Downs, or from or by Orfordness upon the North Channel, or the River of Thames, or the River Medway, other than such as shall be licensed to act as a Pilot, by the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond, under the common Seal of the Corporation; every Person so offending, and being convicted before two Justices of the Peace for the City of London, or the Counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, or Surry, shall, for every Offence, forfeit 20l. provided that nothing in this Act shall extend to the obliging any Master of any Ship in the Coal Trade or Coasting Trade, to employ a Pilot.

§ Geo. II. C. The Pilots already admitted by the said Corporation shall be subject to the Regulations of the Corporation, provided the Regulations do not relate to the Pilots keeping of Turns, or to the settling the Rates of Pilotage; and shall pay the ancient Dues, provided the same do not exceed one Shilling in the Pound out of their Pilotage, for the Use of the Poor of the Corporation, within ten Days after the Service of such Pilots shall be ended.

Ditto, S. 9. In Case such Pilots shall refuse to take the Charge of any of his Majesty's Ships, when appointed thereto by the said Corporation, or shall have misbehaved themselves in the Conduct of any Ships, or in any other Part of their Duty; or if Pilots shall refuse to obey any Summons of the Corporation, or such Orders as the Corporation shall make in the Premises, the General Court of the said Corporation, upon Examination thereof, are required to recall the Warrants granted to such Pilots; and if such Person shall (after Notice given by the Clerk of the said Corporation to them in Person, or left at their Place of Abode) act as Pilots within the Limits aforementioned, they shall be subject to all the Penalties inflicted on unlicensed Pilots.

Ditto, S. 11. Nothing in this Act shall extend to the impeaching of any Privileges enjoyed by the Pilots of the Trinity House of Kingston upon Hull, or the Trinity House of Newcastle upon Tyne.

Ditto, S. 12. This Act shall not extend to the impeaching any of the Franchises, nor to take away the sole right of piloting Merchant Ships, from or by Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, upon the Rivers Thames and Medway, granted to the Society and Fellowship of the Master, Wardens, and Pilots of the Trinity House of Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet, by 3 Geo. I. Cap. 13.

This Act shall be a publick Act, &c.

Ditto, S. 13. The Masters in the Royal Navy are the Pilots: They have the Charge of the Ship during the whole Voyage. The Captain directs where he would have the Ship conducted to, and takes Care of himself, and with the Assistance of his Lieutenants and other Officers to make the Mariners obey the Master, but he has nothing to do with the Steerage. He is responsible for the Loss of the Ship in Battle, or if he gives the Master Orders to lay her in a Place of Danger, contrary to the Master's Advice; but where no such Event happens, the Master is to Account for the Loss of the Ship, by the Dangers of the Sea.

So far the Marine Laws of England are our Guide, but as it often happens that Disputes arise, for which they have not made any special Provisions, British Consuls, whose Office obliges them to be Arbitrators for their Countrymen; as well as Merchants at Home, who are called upon to arbitrate between British and Foreign Subjects, should be well acquainted with the Marine Laws of other Maritime States, especially such as are held in general Esteem, and are respected in the Courts of Judicature of the Kingdoms and States of Europe.

We shall begin with the Laws of France, which however are founded in a great measure upon the Laws of Oleron, instituted by Richard I. King of England, upon his Return from the Holy Land about the Year 1195; Richard at that Time having extensive Possessions in France, amongst others the Town of Oleron in Gascony, situated on the River Gave, belonged to him.

Dict. de Com. Tom. 3. P. 965. In France no one can serve as a Pilot until he is at least twenty-five Years old, and has passed a strict Examination of his Knowledge in the Fabrick of Ships, and concerning the Tides, Banks, Currents, the Rocks, and other dangerous Parts, in the Rivers, Ports, and Havens, where they are established.

They are obliged after they are approved and admitted always to have their Boats furnished with Anchors and with Oars, that they may always be in a Condition to succour Ships on their first Signal.

No Mariner, that is not admitted a Pilot, as above, shall offer to conduct any Vessel, except where a licensed Pilot is wanting; and, in this Case, the Master of the Ship may take a Fisherman, though this must quit the Care of the Vessel to a regular Pilot, in Case such a one offers, before they have passed the dangerous Parts, and a Satisfaction shall be made the Fisherman for his Assistance out of what would have been due to the Pilot, had he taken Charge of her from the Beginning.

If any Pilot is drunk when he offers to engage in his Function, he shall forfeit 100 Sous, and be suspended for a Month.

Ships that are nearest are to be piloted first, under Penalty of 25 Livres to the Pilot, who shall prefer one that is more distant; and they are equally prohibited to go farther than the Roads to meet the Ships, or to enter them against the Master's Liking; nor to quit them until they are anchored and moored in Port; and, if it is in going out, not until the Ship is in open Sea, on Penalty of losing their Stipend, and being mulcted in 30 Livres.

For the Vessel's Security, and the Pilot's Discharge, the Master shall declare what Water the Ship draws, on pain of forfeiting to the Pilot 25 Livres for every Foot he conceals.

Pilots must not exact more for their Assistance than what is regulated by their Officers, and contained in the Tariffs in the Register Office, and fixed upon the Key, excepting in Cases of Storms, and evident Danger, when it shall be settled by the Arbitration of the ordinary Officers, with the Intervention and Advice of two Merchants.

The Marine Ordinances declare all Promises void, that are made to Pilots under the Apprehension of a Shipwreck.

The Pilot, who through Ignorance strands a Vessel, shall pay 100 Livres, or, if incapable, shall be whipt, and be for ever deprived of exercising his Function again. And he who maliciously runs a Ship ashore shall suffer Death, and his Corps be fixed to a Mast near the Place of the Wreck.

It is likewise the Obligation of the Pilots to see that the Buoys and Sea Marks are well placed, and to examine whether there be no Alteration in the ordinary Depths and Passages, that they may give advice to their Officers, or to the Master of the Key or Port.

As for the Port it is free to all Masters and Captains, as well French as Foreigners, to take those Pilots they like best, without being obliged at their going out to make Use of those that brought them in.

By the Sea Laws of Wibsbuy, in the Isle of Gotland (formerly the Emporium of the North, and the Residence of Merchants of every Nation towards the Close of the twelfth Century, when their Marine Laws were submitted to, and passed for just on all the Coasts of Europe from Muscovy to the Mediterranean) when a Ship comes to a Harbour or River, and the Master doth not know the Coast, nor the River, he ought to take a Pilot of that Country to carry her up the River or Harbour, which Pilot shall be maintained by the Master and paid by the Merchant: Also, if it is thought convenient in any River, or off any dangerous Coast, to take on board a Pilot of the Country, though the Merchant opposes it, if the Master, the Ship's Pilot, and the major Part of the Seamen are for it, he may be hired, and shall be paid by the Ship and Cargo, as Averages are calculated for Goods thrown overboard, Leg. Wib. art. 44. and 60. And by the Ordinances of Konigsburg, if a Master in this Case is obliged to pay exorbitant Pilotage, it shall be made good by the Ship and Cargo as gross Average. The ordinary Pilotage comes within common Average.

In Holland the Regulation of Pilots is suitable to the other equitable marine Institutions of that Republick; as the Pilot's Pay varies in the different Provinces of that State, and our extensive Commerce with it renders a continual Use of them necessary, I shall give my Reader an Account of that Part of their Laws which I think may be of Service, and merit his Regard, in as brief a Manner as the Importance of the Subject to all that are, or may be, concerned in the Dutch Trade will permit, without curtailing any Thing I shall deem requisite for their Information.

The States of Holland and West-Frisse, in their Ordinance about the Pilots of Huyfdynen, Petten, Calans-ogg, Texel, and the neighbouring Parts, order Tbat

No one shall be admitted as a Pilot, who is not strong and robust, not less than twenty-five or above sixty Years of Age, who shall have sailed at least four Years in the Openings of that Country, and have an entire Knowledge of the Currents of the Texel, and he shall then have a Mark given him of his Admittance.

- Ditto, Art. 5. To prevent all Disputes, the Governors or Steerfmen of the Pilot Boats may put aboard the Vessel that wants one, such sworn Pilot as he thinks most capable, without any Hindrance from the others, under Penalty of 6 Florins, except the Master elects any other than him proposed:
- Ditto, Art. 6. No other Pilots but those who have been examined and authorized as aforesaid, and have received the Badge of their Office (which they are to show, as well as this present Ordinance to all Commanders before they undertake to conduct them either in or out, under Penalty of forfeiting 24 Florins for each Offence) shall dare to undertake the Charge of any Ship going out or coming in, &c.
- Ditto, Art. 7. The Pilots are obliged to conduct the Ships, as far as on this Side the Vlaak, and if the Captains desire to be piloted farther, the Pilots may not refuse, though thereby they are detained, one, two, or three Days extraordinary aboard; they shall have 6 Florins besides their common Pay, if the Ship is only in Ballast, or 9 Florins if she is loaded, provided that all foreign Ships (except only those which bring Oxen) pay 9 Florins, if empty, and 13 Florins 10 Stivers, if laden; and, if a Pilot remains aboard more than the said three Days, he shall have 40 Stivers a Day, besides his ordinary Salary, the same as the Pilots of Vlieland and of Terschelling have, according to the fifth article of their Ordinance; but when in Winter, a Pilot has conducted a Ship into a good Road, free from the Danger of the Ice, and remains there two or three Days, the Pilotage is earned, and it shall be free to the Captain to detain the Pilot on board paying him 40 Stivers per Day. If it happens that a Pilot having conducted the Vessel on this Side the Vlaak, and the Master cannot pay him, either for want of Money, or otherwise, so that the Pilot is obliged to come up with the Ship to the Place designed, the Master shall give him twelve Florins besides his Pilotage, and may for this make Use of him until their Arrival; but, if the Pilot is accidentally detained through Want of a Boat, &c. to put him ashore, in such Case, the Master is not obliged to pay him any more than his Pilotage.
- Ditto, Art. 8. All Pilots shall be obliged to board the Ships at a League without the Shallows or Flats, and those which shall not enter them but on this side the first Buoy shall only have half Pilotage.
- Ditto, Art. 9. All Ships and Gallies which come from the West, from the Levant, from Barbary, Genoa, the Canaries, from Spain, France, England, Muscovy, Greenland, Denmark, Sweden, Koningberg, Dantzick, Bergen, Dronthien, Nileus, Hambourg, and other Places in their Neighbourhood, as also the Galliot, or other Vessels, laden with Charcoal, of whatsoever Nation they are, as well Foreigners as Natives, who will enter the Texel, shall be obliged to take Pilots, and to pay them on the Footing of the present Ordinance, when they come to offer themselves without the Buoys, provided that the Vessels from the North shall pay 24 Stivers the Foot to Nieuwe Diep, and 24 Stivers the Foot to this Side of the Vlaak, and that they are free in the Road of the Merchants, or Koopvaarders Reed. The Vessels coming from Normer, Dronthien, and Romsdaal, with Bale Goods, Iron, Fish, Oil, and other Commodities, shall pay as much as those from the Baltick, without Exception: But the Galliot, or Smacks coming from l'Eyder, Jutland, or Norway either in Ballast or laden with Cattle, shall pay 15 Stivers the Foot, if the Pilots go aboard them beyond the Openings, and the Pilots may leave them when they have conducted them into the Road of the Merchants; but if a Pilot quits his Ship before bringing her into the said Roads, he shall forfeit 12 Florins; and, if the Captain will be piloted on this Side the Vlaak, he shall augment the Pilot's Salary 5 Stivers per Foot, paying 20 instead of 15. And if the Captain refuses to pay the Pilot, this latter may follow him to his destined Port, to recover his Salary, and the Charges occasioned him, for which Charges he shall be allowed 12 Florins; the Vessels, which have a third of their Loading, shall pay as is ordered in the 24th Article, and all that is taken in with the Tackel, or that is laden in a Ship from Hand to Hand, whether it be Oils, Bales, Sacks, Casks, Lead, &c. shall be reputed Merchandize, except all Sorts of Wood, which shall not be esteemed such.
- Ditto, Art. 10. The Pilots shall be obliged to go and come once a Month through the Openings to sound the Depths exactly, to visit the Banks and Shores, and nicely to examine the Buoys and their Ropes, to see that they are not worn out, and whether ther the Shallows are any Thing altered, which they shall be also obliged to do, as often as there shall happen tempestuous bad Weather; and, if they perceive any Change in the Shallows, Banks, or elsewhere, they shall be obliged immediately to declare it to the Lords Commissioners, that they may immediately remedy it.

And if it happens that the Pilot runs the Ship ashore, whether through Villainy, Disaster, Inadvertency, or Imprudence, the Commissioners shall take Cognizance of it, and punish him according to the Exigence of the Case, either by Suspension, Discharging, Banishing, or by a greater Punishment, even with Death; but if it happens through an extraordinary Casualty, as by an unforeseen Mischance of a sudden Change of Wind, or of the Current, or other similar Accidents, the Penalty shall be moderated by the Commissioners, as they shall think just; ordering to this Effect the respective Officers to inform themselves exactly, of what has passed, and to send their Declarations to the Commissioners, as also, if the Case require it, to seize the Pilot, and proceed against him according to what he has done.

Ships or other vessels shall pay for piloting out, viz.

Ditto Art. 16.

Those that draw	{	10 Feet Water	_____	8 Stivers, Pence,	} the Foot.
		11 D°	_____	9 D°
		12 D°	_____	10 D°

And those that draw above twelve Feet Water shall pay 12 Stivers the Foot.

And in case of refusing Payment, the Pilot, on the Ship's Return, may pursue the Captain to the Place he is bound to, to recover his Due, with Charges, for which he shall be allowed 12 Florins; but the vessels going to the North are excluded; and those which have a Third or more of their Cargo, shall pay Pilotage as follows.

those that draw more Feet Water, shall pay for every surplus Foot 12 Florins, and 6 Florins for each half Foot, but nothing for the Quarter of a Foot.

And every Pilot shall be obliged to abide aboard till the Ship is got without, and shall not undertake to carry out another till he has conducted the first into open Sea, on Penalty of 12 Florins Mult, and Suspension for twelve Weeks; and when the Wind is fair for getting out, the Pilot's Boat must not take any one to carry aboard, but the Captain of the Ship which the Pilot is going to take under his Care, on Forfeiture of 8 Florins; but if it happens that some other Captain go in the same Boat, they shall be obliged each of them to carry a Pilot with them, to conduct their Ships abroad, if they do not declare that their Pilot is left aboard, and tell their Name and Surname; on Penalty to the Boatman or Pilot who undertakes it (be it through Malice, Ignorance, or Contempt of the Laws) of 9 Florins, for each Captain that he has carried aboard without a Pilot, and shall be obliged on his Return ashore, to declare to the Officer the Names of the Captains that he has carried aboard, and that of the Pilots, as above, on Penalty of 18 Florins.

Ditto Art. 17.

When the Pilots arrive on board, they shall immediately demand of the Captain or Mate how much Water the Ship draws, which they shall be obliged to declare without Reserve, on Pain of forfeiting sixteen Florins.

Ditto Art. 18.

Ditto Art. 19. The following Pilotage shall be paid for the Entrance of Ships, according to the Feet they draw of Water counting by Feet and half Feet, which the Captains shall be obliged to pay, except those which come from the North as in the 9th Article, viz. in Summer, to commence from the 1st of April to the 1st of September, to be counted from the Day that the Ship passes the Vlaak, and not from the Day that she shall be got in.

This being the Tax of Pilotage during Winter; and Ships coming from America, from Brazil, or the neighbouring Coasts, half laden, shall pay as those which come from Guinea; but those which shall come from America, or from the Streights with Salt, shall only pay as other Ships laden with Salt, according to the present Ordinance.

Provided, that the Pilots who shall bring in any Ships in a great Storm, or such as are without Anchors, Masts, Cables, or Rudder, shall have, besides their ordinary Hire, as much as the Commissary, or the Arbitrators which he shall have established, think proper to adjudge. Ditto Art. 26.

And all Pilots shall be likewise obliged to carry all Ships and Captains out to Sea, whenever they are required, and this on reasonable Terms; and no Pilot shall undertake to carry out more than one Ship at a Time, under Penalty of 25 Florins and Suspension of six Weeks: Neither is it permitted to any Pilot who has undertaken to conduct a Ship out, to resign her to another, under Pain of 6 Florins Mulct, but if any such Pilot happens to fall sick, the Captain may take any other he pleases. Ditto Art. 27.

When Pilots are to carry out, or bring in Ships, they cannot oblige Captains to take more than one, nor charge him for any Damage that their Boat may have suffered in going aboard, or before the Ship, on Penalty of 25 Florins, unless that it be by express Order of the Captain, in which Case he must produce Proofs of the said Order; in Want of which, he shall not be allowed more than a common Pilotage. Ditto Art. 28.

And in Case that a Ship appears either by Night or by Day, without meeting with any Pilot, and her Company desire any Fisherman (not admitted to the Function) to conduct her in, the Fisherman is obliged to declare to the Captain that he is no sworn Pilot: In the mean Time, he may enter the Ship, and undertake to bring her in; but if afterwards, it happens that a Pilot comes aboard to offer his Service, he shall be preferred, and the Fisherman obliged to quit her, except he agrees with the Pilot that they share the Pilotage between them, which shall be at the Election of one and the other. Ditto Art. 29.

But if the Fisherman has once brought the Ship within the first Buoy, before the sworn Pilot got on board, the Fisherman shall not be obliged to abandon her, nor to yield up the Moiety of the Pilotage. Ditto Art. 31.

Item, all Ships being in Danger, their Captains may demand and take two Pilots, paying a double Reward; but, if there remains more than one Pilot aboard without the Captain's Order, those that remain unordered shall have nothing to pretend to but what the Captain pleases to give them freely, as he shall think proper. Ditto Art. 32.

When a Pilot has brought in a Ship, and received his Salary, he shall be obliged to give the Captain an Acquittance, which shall contain the Number of Feet the Ship draws, and the Sum he has received; which Acquittance he shall sign or mark, and the Captain shall be obliged to demand one, upon which to reimburse himself the Pilotage from the Merchants, in Want whereof these latter shall not be obligated to pay him any Thing; and besides this, the Captain and the Pilot shall forfeit 6 Florins each. Ditto Art. 33.

We forbid every one, whosoever he be, to insult, abuse, or injure any of the Pilots admitted and sworn, either in the Streets, at the Water-side, in the publick or private Houses, or to deride them for their Employments, on Penalty of 6 Florins for the first Time; 12 Florins, and an arbitrary Correction for the second; 18 Florins and Banishment for two Years for the third. Ditto Art. 35.

If it happens that any Ship is forced to enter by the Openings to anchor, by a contrary Wind or otherwise, and would go out again, she shall pay 15 Stivers per Foot Pilotage; but such as would be conducted within the Vlaak shall pay full Pilotage; and if the Pilot has brought the Ship safely into the Amelander Diep, either by the Captain's Order, or constrained thereto by bad Weather, the Pilot shall be obliged to remain on board, at the Will of the Captain, until a proper Season offers for getting out, and the Pilot shall have six Florins, once for all, for his Time, besides his Victuals. Ditto Art. 6.

If any Captain desires his Ship to be conducted in the Balg the Pilots shall be obliged to carry them for 20 Stivers the Foot for which the said Pilots are to convey the Ships as far into the Balg as the Captains please, and as a great Number of Boats or Barges are commonly employed in going before large Ships, to sound the Coast for their Security, there shall be paid for each Boat, whether they have one or more men in them, the Two-Thirds of the Salary of one Florin per Foot, provided the said Boats shall have a Third more, for Ships laden with Merchandizes in the Article 24; the Whole, without any Dispute, on Penalty of 12 Florins, besides the Pilotage; and it is to be understood, that when a Ship in Winter, or in the icy Seasons, shall have been conducted into the Balg, by Order or Consent of the Captain, or his Mate, the Pilotage shall be earned, and afterwards a half Pilotage shall be paid for carrying the Vessel from the Balg to the Vlaak.

Ditto, Art. 39. Ships which return from the East, from Norway, and the adjacent Parts, although they had taken and hired a Pilot, on going, even with the Consent of the Commissary, they shall nevertheless be obliged, on their Arrival before the Place, to take another to conduct them through the Openings, and to pay him the Pilotage upon the Footing of this present Ordinance, the which Pilotage shall be parted between the two Pilots; and him that shall have been taken to bring the Ship shall be free, after he has brought the Ship in the Road of the Merchants, or Koopvaarders Reed.

Ditto, Art. 40. Each Pilot Boat, or Galliot, shall carry a white Vane or Weather Flag at the Top of the Mast in which may plainly be seen the Number of 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, &c. to the Number of Boats that there shall be, or else the Number shall be marked in large Figures of two foot square, with Black Tar, at the Top of each great Sail of the Boats: And if a Pilot Boat passes by a small Ship, without putting a Pilot aboard her, with the View of going to a larger the Captain may declare it, and in this Case all the Pilots who shall have so neglected him, shall forfeit 25 Florins each; and all who shall go to Sea without their Number marked in their Flag, or in their great Sail, shall also pay 25 Florins each, and shall be suspended six Weeks; those who shall have found any one in Fault, and not declared it to the Officer, shall pay the same Mulct.

Art. 4. The STATES, at the Time of making the foregoing Ordinance, for the Pilots of Huyshynen, Petten, Calan-oog, Tessel, and the adjacent Parts, made another for the Pilots of Vlieland and Ter Schelling, and the neighbouring Territories, differing chiefly from the other in the Names of the Places, and something in the Charges of Pilotage, which I shall particularly mention.

Every Captain of a Ship that enters by the Vlie with a Pilot of Ter Schelling shall be obliged to pay 6 Stivers every Time, more than the ordinary Pilotage, for the Relief of poor and aged Pilots.

Art. 5. The Pilots shall be obliged to go aboard the Ships at a League beyond the Flats, and those who only embark on this Side, the first, second, third, or fourth Buoy, shall have no more than 15 instead of 20 Stivers per Foot; and if any Pilot having conducted a Ship up the Vlaak, is detained either by bad Weather, or the Want of a Boat to carry him ashore, in this Case he shall have 1 Florin per Foot; but if, in Winter Time, the Ship is stopped by Ice, the Pilot shall endeavour to carry her into the Rays ou Slot, and, having secured her there, he shall remain four Days to see whether the Weather will change, and, if then the Ice continues, he has earned his Pilotage, and may quit the Ship, and the Captain shall pay him 3 Florins for his Attendance the four Days; and, if the Captain will detain him yet longer, he shall pay 15 Stivers per Foot, besides his Provisions; but if the Captain will absolutely be carried up the Vlaak, the Days of Pay shall cease on heaving up the Anchor, and the Pilot shall be obliged to conduct him for 16 Stivers the Foot; and we prohibit all others but sworn and admitted Pilots, to undertake the bringing any Ship from Piereweld, by the Opening of the Vlie, on Penalty of 25 Florins.

Art. 7. All Vessels coming from the East, West, from Muscovy, and the adjacent Parts, as also those from Bergen, Drontbiew, and Nileus, and all Charcoal Vessels drawing eight Feet Water, which will enter by the Vlie, shall be obliged to take a Pilot to bring them in, although they have taken one at the Sond, or elsewhere, without leaving the Captains at Liberty to refuse, or to excuse paying the Pilotage; and in Case of Refusal, the Pilots may follow the Captains to the Places they are bound to, to recover the Pilotage and Charge of their Journey, which shall be settled at 12 Florins, provided that the Galliot, or other small Vessels, which draw no more than four, five, and six Feet Water, shall pay to the Sloop 24 Stivers the Foot, and to this Side of the Vlaak, 34 Stivers the Foot; the Ships coming from Normer, Drontbom, or from Roosvlaak, laden with Iron, Oil, &c. shall pay as much as those which come from the Baltick, without Exception; but the Galliot or other Vessels, which only draw ten Feet Water, or less, coming from l'Eyder, Jutland, or Norway, with their Ballast of Salt, or laden with Beeves, shall pay 15 Stivers per Foot, if the Pilots enter them without the Openings, and conduct them to the Sloop, where they may quit them: But if a Pilot leaves a Ship before he has brought her to the said Place, he shall forfeit 12 Florins; and, if the Captain will keep the Pilots till on this Side the Vlaak, they shall pay them 5 Stiver: for each Foot more than the 15: And, in Regard of laden Ships, it shall be regulated, according to the 9th Article, except for those who are only in Ballast, or those which are laden with Wood or Cattle.

Those Vessels which have one-third of their Cargo shall pay Pilotage, as Art. 14. 15. directed in Art. 16. for the Tixel; and those coming from the East and North, shall pay Entrance as underneath, according to the Feet they draw, to be counted by Feet and half Feet; but the Galliot or small Vessels coming from the North, which only draw from four to six Feet, shall be exempt, as in the preceding Article, viz. in Summer to commence the 1st of April, provided the Vessel passes the Vlaak that Day, for afterwards the Distinction shall not be made of the Pilotage of the Summer and Winter, but of the Day that the Ship passes the Vlaak, and not the Day of her Entrance.

is the same as in Article 21 of the foregoing Ordinance: As are all the other Articles which I have omitted here, being only Repetitions of the others quoted before; and as most of the Marine Laws in the Northern, and other Kingdoms where there are any, are taken either from the Sea Laws of Wijbuy, or from the Dutch, who have incorporated most of the Wibuy Laws, and improved upon them, I shall not enlarge further on this Subject.

Of Wrecks, Flotsam, Jetsam, and Lagan:

A WRECK, (in Latin, Wreccum Maris, and in French, Wreck de Mer) signifies in our Law such Goods as, after a Shipwreck, are cast upon Land by the Sea, and left there within some County; for they are not Wrecks so long as they remain at Sea, in the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

Flotsam, is when a Ship is sunk, or otherwise perished, and the Goods float upon the Sea.

Ibid. Jetsam, is when a Ship is in Danger of being lost, and in Order to save by lightening her, some Goods are cast into the Sea, notwithstanding which she afterwards perishes.

Ibid. Lagan, or Ligan, are those heavy Goods which are cast into the Sea, before a Ship is lost, in Order to preserve them; and that they may be found again (if Providence permits) a Buoy is generally fastened to them.

F. N. B. 122. The King shall have Flotsam, Jetsam, and Lagan, when the Ship perisheth or when the Owners of the Goods are not known; but when the Ship does not perish, contra.

Cite 5 Part Est. 107. A Man may have Flotsam and Jetsam by the King's Grant; and may have Flotsam within the high and low Water-mark by Prescription, as it appears by Cite 2 Inst. Fel. 167. those of the West Countries, who prescribe to have Wreck in the Sea, so far as they may see a Humber Barrel.

Sir Hen. Con- By the Grant of Wreck will pass Flotsam, Jetsam, and Lagan, when they suble's Case. are cast upon the Land; but, if they are not cast upon the Land, the Admiral hath Jurisdiction, and not the Common Law, and they cannot be called Wreck.

Case 5 Part Fel. 107. By the Common Law all Wrecks belong to the Crown, and therefore they are not chargeable with any Customs, because Goods coming into the Kingdom by Wreck are not imported by any Body, but cast ashore by the Wind and Sea: But it was usual to seize Wrecks to the King's Use, only when no Owner could be found; and, in that Case, the Property being in no Man, it in Consequence belongs to the King, as Lord of the Narrow Seas.

W. An. 1. C. 4. 3 E. 1. Though when a Man, Dog, or Cat, escapes alive out of any Ship that is lost, neither the Ship, nor any Thing therein, shall be adjudged Wreck, but the Goods shall be saved and kept a Year and a Day by the Sheriff, to be restored to any Person who can prove a Property in them; and if Nobody appears to claim in that Time, they shall be forfeited as Wreck; the Year and Day shall be accounted from the Seizure, and, if the Owner of the Goods dies before the Expiration of that Term, his Executors or Administrators may make Proof, though, if the Goods are Bona peritura (perishable Goods) the Sheriff may sell them within the Year, taking Care he does it to the best Advantage, and account for their Product.

The Owners, claiming a Wreck, must make sufficient Proof of their Title within the Year and Day; and they are to do it by their Marks or Cockets, by the Custom-house Books, or the Testimony of reputable Men.

Where Goods are wrecked on Shore, and the Lord of the Manor takes them, having Power so to do, he shall not pay Custom, neither by the common Law, nor by the Statute Law; for by the common Law shipwrecked Goods could not be charged with Customs, for the Wreck being wholly the King's, he could not have a Custom of what was all his own. Neither by Statute Law, because such wrecked Goods cannot be said to be brought into the Kingdom as Merchandise for Sale. Hill. 23 and 24 Car. II.

12 Ann. Cap. 18. S. 1. Enacts, that the Sheriffs and Justices of the Peace of every County, or of a City or Town, and all Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Head Officers of Corporations and Port Towns near adjoining to the Sea, and all Constables, Tithingmen, and Officers of the Customs, in all such Places, upon Application to them made on Behalf of any Commander of a Ship in Danger of being stranded, or run on Shore, shall command the Constables near the Sea Coast where such Ship shall be in Danger, to call together as many Men as shall be necessary, to the Assistance, and for the Preservation of such Ship; and if there shall be any Ships of War, or other Ships, lying at Anchor near the Place, the Officers of the Customs, and Constables, &c. are to require the Assistance of the superior Officers by their Boats, and what Hands they can spare: and if such Officers shall refuse or neglect to assist, they shall be liable to the Penalty of 100*l.* to be recovered by the chief Officer of the Ship in Distress.

No Person shall enter into such Ships in Distress, without Leave from the Commander or Constable, &c. and the Masters and Constables may, by Force, repel Persons, who shall press on board the said Ships without Leave. And if any Goods are carried off from any such Ship, and found on any Person, if they are not delivered to the Owner on Demand, such Person shall pay treble the Value

Value of the Goods, recoverable by the Owner in an Action at Law. Also, if any Officer of the Customs, or his Deputy, abuse the Trust reposed in him by this Act, and shall be convicted thereof, he shall forfeit treble Damages to the Party grieved, and be incapable of any Employment in the Customs. Persons defacing the Marks of any Goods on board such Ship, shall make double Satisfaction, or be sent to the House of Correction to hard Labour for twelve Months.

And for the Encouragement of such Persons as shall give their Assistance to such Ships or Vessels so in Distress, it is further enacted; that the said Collectors of the Customs, and the Master or commanding Officer of any Ships or Vessels, and all others who shall act or be employed in the preserving any such Ship or Vessel in Distress, or their Cargoes, shall, within thirty Days after the Service performed, be paid a reasonable Reward for the same, by the Commander, Master, or other superior Officer, Mariners, or Owners of the Ship or Vessel so in Distress, or by the Merchant, whose Ship, Vessel, or Goods shall be so saved. In Default, the Ship or Goods may be detained by the Officer of the Customs or his Deputy, till all the Persons employed in the saving the said Ship or Cargo, shall be reasonably gratified for their Assistance and Trouble, or good Security to the Satisfaction of all Parties shall be given for the Payment thereof. If any Difference arises touching the Gratuities deserved by any of the Persons so employed, the said Master or Merchant, and also the said Officer of the Customs, shall nominate three Justices of the Peace in the Neighbourhood, who shall thereupon adjust the quantum of the Monies or Gratuities to be paid to the several Persons acting or being employed in the Salvage of the said Ship, Vessel, or Goods, and such Adjustments shall be binding to all Parties, and shall be recoverable in an Action at Law to be brought in any of her Majesty's Courts of Record. If no Owner appears to claim the Goods saved, they shall be put into the Custody of the chief Officer of the Customs, and if not claimed in twelve Months he shall sell them by publick Sale, and transmit the Amount to her Majesty's Exchequer, there to remain for the Use of the Owners. This Act shall be read four Times in the Year, in all the Parish Churches and Chapels of every Sea-port Town, and upon the Sea Coast in this Kingdom, viz. upon the Sunday next before Michalmas-Day, Christmas-Day, Lady-Day, and Midsommer-Day, in the Morning immediately after Prayers, and before the Sermon.

If any Person or Persons shall make, or be assisting in the making, any Hole in the Bottom, Side or any other Part of any Ship or Vessel so in Distress as aforesaid, or shall steal any Pump belonging to any such Ship or Vessel, or shall be aiding or abetting in the stealing such Pump, or shall wilfully do any Thing tending to the immediate Loss and Destruction of such Ship or Vessel, such Person or Persons shall be, and are hereby made guilty of Felony, without any Benefit of his, her, or their Clergy. This Act was made perpetual by 4 Geo. I. c. 12.

For the effectual preventing the wilful casting away, burning, or otherwise destroying of Ships, by the Owners, Masters, and Mariners thereof, and thereto belonging; it is enacted, that if any Owner of, or Captain, Master, Mariner, or other Officer belonging to any Ship, shall wilfully cast away, burn, or otherwise destroy the Ship of which he is Owner, or unto which he belongeth, or in any Manner direct or procure the same to be done, to the Prejudice of any Person or Persons that shall underwrite any Policy or Policies of Insurance thereon, or of any Merchant or Merchants that shall load Goods thereon, he shall suffer Death. And the 11th of Geo. I. Cap. 19. Sect. 76. after reciting the above Clause, and mentioning that Doubts have arisen about the Trial and Punishment for the said Offences, enacts, that if the said Offences are committed within the Body of any County in the Realm, they shall be tried in the same Courts in such Manner and Form as other Felonies are tried and determined; and if the said Offences are committed upon the high Seas, they shall be tried and adjudged by the Admiralty Court.

- <sup>1</sup> Hawk. P.C. 94. If a Man has a Grant of Wreck, and Goods are wrecked upon his Lands, and another taketh them away before Seizure, he may bring an Action of Trespass, &c. for before they are seized, there is no Property gained to make it Felony.
- <sup>2</sup> Inst. 166. If Goods wrecked are seized by Persons having no Authority, the Owner may have his Action against them; or if the Wrong-doers are unknown he may have a Commission to inquire, &c.
- <sup>27</sup> Ed. III C. 13. Goods lost by Tempest, Piracy, &c. and not by Wreck, if they afterwards come to Land shall be restored to the Owner.
- Case* 2 Inst. 167. When a Ship is ready to sink, and all the Men therein, for the Preservation of their Lives, quit the Ship, and afterwards the perishes, if any of the Men are saved and come to Land, the Goods are not lost.
- A Ship on the Sea was chased by an Enemy; and the Men therein, for the Security of their Lives, forsook her; she was afterwards taken by the Enemy, and spoiled of her Goods and Tackle, and then turned adrift; after this, by Strefs of Weather, she was cast on Land, where it happened her Men safely arrived: And it was resolved that this was no Wreck.
- <sup>1</sup> Gen. I. Cap. 12 §. 2. The Act, 12 Ann. St. Cap. 18. shall not affect the ancient Jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court in the Cinque Ports, but the Officers of the said Court shall put the said Act in Execution, within the Jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports.
In the Year 1753, a following Act passed, which having reduced the greatest Part of the former Laws in this Act, for the Guidance of Masters of Ships and other Persons concerned in Shipping, it is here inserted.
- <sup>6</sup> Gen. II. The Preamble begins that, Whereas, notwithstanding the good and salutary Laws now in being, against plundering and destroying Vessels in Distress, and against taking away shipwrecked, lost or stranded Goods, many wicked Enormities have been committed, to the Disgrace of the Nation, and to the grievous Damage of Merchants and Mariners, of our own and other Countries: Be it enacted, That, if any Person or Persons, shall plunder, steal, take away, or destroy any Goods or Merchandise, or other Effects, from, or belonging to, any Ship or Vessel which shall be in Distress, or shall be wrecked, lost, stranded, or cast on Shore, in any Part of his Majesty's Dominions (whether any living Creature be on board or not) or any of the Furniture, Tackle, Apparel, Provision, or any Part of such Ship or Vessel: or shall beat, or wound, with Intent to kill or destroy, or shall otherwise wilfully obstruct the Escape of any Person endeavouring to save his or her Life, from such Ship or Vessel, or the Wreck thereof; or, if any Person or Persons shall put out any false Light or Lights, with Intention to bring any Ship or Vessel into Danger, then such Person or Persons so offending, shall be deemed guilty of Felony, and being lawfully convicted thereof, shall suffer Death, as in Cases of Felony, without Benefit of Clergy.
- Provided, that when Goods of small Value shall be cast on Shore, and stolen without Circumstances of Cruelty or Violence, the Offender on conviction, be punished as in Cases of Petit Larceny.
- It shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace, upon Information being made to him on Oath, of any Part of the Cargo, or Effects, of any Ship, lost or stranded, being unlawfully carried away, and concealed, to issue his Warrant for searching any House, &c. as in other Cases of stolen Goods: And, if the same shall be found in such House, &c. or in the Possession of any Person not legally authorized to keep the same, and the Owner of such House, or the Person in whose Custody the same shall be found, shall not give an Account to the Satisfaction of the Justice of the Peace, how he came by the Goods, it shall be lawful upon Proof of such Refusal, and he is required, to commit the Offender to the common gaol for six Months, or until he shall have paid the Owner treble the Value of the Things unlawfully detained.
- If any Person shall offer to Sale any Effects belonging to any Vessel lost as aforesaid, and unlawfully taken away, or suspected to have been, it shall be lawful to seize, and carry the same, or give Notice thereof with all convenient Speed, to some Justice of the Peace; and if the Person offering them to Sale, or some other Person in their Behalf, shall not appear before the Justice within ten Days after such Seizure, and make out to the Satisfaction of the Justice, his Property in the Goods, or in some Person who employed him, then the Goods shall be delivered for the Use of the right Owner, upon Payment of a reasonable Reward for such Seizure, to be ascertained by the Justice, to the Person who seized the same, and such Justice shall commit the Offender to the Common Gaol for six Months, or until he shall have paid the Owner treble the Value of the Goods.

In Case any Person, not employed by the Master, &c. in the Salvage of any Vessel or the Cargo, &c. shall, in the Absence of Persons so employed, save any such Ship, Goods, &c. and cause the same to be carried, for the Benefit of the Owners or Proprietors, into Port or Place of safe Custody, immediately giving Notice to some Justice of the Peace, Magistrate, Custom-house or Excise Officer, or shall discover to any Magistrate or Officer where any such Goods are wrongfully bought, sold, or concealed, such Person shall be intitled to a reasonable Reward, to be paid by the Master or Owner of such Vessel, in like Manner as Salvage is to be paid, by 12 Anne, intituled, an Act for the preserving all such Ships and Goods thereof, which have happened to be forced on Shore, or stranded upon the Coast of this Kingdom, or any other of his Majesty's Dominions, or else in the Manner herein after prescribed, as the Case shall require.

For the better ascertaining the Salvage, and putting the Acts in Execution, the Justice of the Peace, Mayor, Bailiff, Collector of the Customs, Chief Constable, who shall be nearest where any Ship is stranded or cast away, shall forthwith give Notice for a Meeting of the Sheriffs or their Deputies, the Justice of the Peace, Mayor or other chief Magistrate of Towns Corporations, Coroners, and Commissioners of Land-Tax, or any Five or more of them, who are required and impowered to employ proper Persons, for saving Ships in Distress, and Ships and Goods as shall be stranded or cast away; and also to examine Persons concerning the same, or the Salvage thereof, to adjust the Quantum of such Salvage, and distribute the same, in Case of Disagreement, among the Parties: And that every Person, attending and acting at such Meeting, shall be allowed four Shillings a Day, out of the Effects saved by their Care and Direction.

But if the Charges and Rewards for Salvage, directed by the Act 11 Anne, and by this present Act, be not paid or Security given within forty Days, the Officer of the Customs, concerned in such Salvage, may borrow Money on the Goods, &c. by Bill of Sale, on such Part of the Goods, &c. as shall be sufficient, redeemable upon Payment of the Principal Sum and Interest, at four per Cent.

And if Oath shall be made before any Magistrate, lawfully impowered to take the same, of any Theft, and the Examination taken shall be delivered to the Clerk of the Peace, for the County, &c. or his Deputy; or if Oath shall be made of the breaking any Ship, contrary to the Act, 12 Anne, and the Examination delivered to the Clerk of the Peace or his Deputy, he shall cause the Offender to be prosecuted, either in the County where the Fact was committed, or the County adjoining, where any Indictment may be laid by any other Prosecutor; and if the Fact be committed in Wyls, then the Prosecution may be carried on in the next adjoining English County: The Charge of such Prosecution by the Clerks of the Peace to be settled by the Justices at Session, and paid by the Treasurer of the County, &c. the Clerk of the Peace, on Refusal or Neglect to carry on such Prosecution, to forfeit one Hundred Pounds for every Offence, to any Person who shall sue for the same.

The Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, the Lieutenant of Dover Castle, the Deputy Warden of the Cinque Ports, and the Judges officiate, and Commissary of the Court of Admiralty of the Cinque Ports, two ancient Towns and the Members thereof, for the Time being, and every Person appointed by the Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, shall put the Acts in Execution within the Jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, two ancient Towns, and their Members, in the same Manner, as the Justices, &c. in other Places.

If any Person, appointed to put this Act in Execution, shall be wounded in such Service, such Person or Persons, so wounding him, shall, upon Trial and Conviction, at the Assizes or General Goal Delivery, or at the General or Quarter Sessions for the County, &c. be transported for seven Years, to some of his Majesty's Colonies in America.

Any Justice of the Peace, in the Absence of the Sheriff, may take sufficient Power to repress all Violences and enforce the Execution of this Act.

To prevent Confusion among Persons assembled to save any Ship, &c. all Persons shall conform to the Orders of the Master, or other Officers, or Owners; or for Want of their Presence or Direction, to any of the Persons appointed to put this Act in Execution, in the following Subordination: First, to the Orders of the Officer of the Customs, then of the Excise, the Sheriff of the County, or his Deputy, a Justice of Peace, the Mayor or chief Magistrate of any Corporation, the Coroner, the Commissioner of the Land-Tax; then of any Chief Constable, Petty Constable, or other Peace Officer: And, whoever acts, knowingly or wilfully, contrary to such Orders, shall forfeit five Pounds, and in Case of Non-payment, be sent to the House of Correction, for any Time not exceeding three Months.

Nothing in this Act extends to Scotland.

Of Salvage, Average, or Contribution.

SALVAGE is an Allowance made for saving of a Ship or Goods, or both, from the Dangers of the Seas, Pirates, or Enemies; it is provided for by several English Statutes, many of which have been given under the preceding Head, as properly relating to Wrecks on Shore and Ships stranded on the Coasts of England.

We are now to treat of Salvage in general at Sea; and on foreign Coasts.

SALVAGE is allowed by all Nations, it being reasonable that a Man should be rewarded who hazards his Life, or employs his Time, in the Service of another; more especially as without his Aid the Lives and Property of the Parties in Distress most probably would have been lost.

The only Difficulty, therefore, that can arise on the Subject of Salvage, is, as to the Proportion of the Sums of Money, or other Gratuities to be allowed; and where there are no stated Laws or Customs to go by, we must be guided by the particular Circumstances of different Cases. This should be the Line of Conduct observed by Arbitrators. For though great Promises may have been made in the Hour of Danger by the Master and Mariners, yet when the Decision comes before a Court of Judicature, or Arbitrators, they are to guard against exorbitant Demands for Salvage, and the Reward must be regulated by the Pains and Trouble the Salvors were put to. Leg. Oleron.

For the Charges of Salvage, very great Allowances have been made to Divers and Salvors, as the Half, the Third, or the Tenth of the Things saved, according to the Depth of Water, out of which they were fished, whether fifteen, eight, or one Fathom. Generally, a tenth Part for Salvage on the Coast, and a Fifth for him, who, saving himself, carries something with him, as Gold, Silver, Jewels, or valuable Papers, which being easy of Transportation are sometimes saved by the Mariners who escape from a Shipwreck.

Where Things are cast up by Shipwreck, or left through casting in Storms, the Laws of Rhodes allow to the Finder, a fifth Part for the Saving, and in France, they allow one third Part for Salvage.

If the Ship only perish, and the Goods be saved, then the Goods shall pay the Tenth or the Fifth, as the Difficulty of the saving thereof shall require: and Gold, Silver, Silk, and the like, being of easy Transportation, shall pay less than Goods of greater Weight, and more burthensome for Carriage, which are in greater Danger. Malines Lex Merc. P. 119.

Salvors may detain Goods till Agreement is made, and Security given, for the Payment of the Salvage; but they cannot convert them to their own Use, in Case the Quantum of the Salvage is disputed; they must remain as Deposits till the Contest is decided, and must then be delivered up to the Owners, upon Payment of the Sums awarded for the Salvage.

If Goods are abandoned or given up to the Salvors, there can be no Claim for Salvage; for Salvage can never exceed the Benefits to be derived from it. Lord Kinn's Prin. of Equity, P. 373.

Though Effects, recovered from Shipwreck, should afterwards be irrecoverably lost, yet Salvage must be allowed for the Recovery. In like Manner as for a Ship, taken again by an Enemy after a Ransom or Recapture.

Anchors are the most common Things found at Sea; and if they are fished up, without any Buoy or Cable floating to direct the Salvors, one Half is allowed; but if there is a Buoy or Cable, then only one third. But as it frequently happens that Disputes arise concerning the finding of Anchors and Cables; a Remedy is provided by Stat. 3 Geo. I. C. 13. S. 6. The Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports shall nominate, under his Hand and Seal, three or more Persons in each of the Cinque Ports, two ancient Towns, and their Members, to adjust any Difference relating to Salvage, between the Master of any Ship that has in bad Weather been forced from her Anchor and Cable, and the Persons bringing them on Shore: And if any Vessel be forced from her Cables and Anchors by Extremity of Weather, and leave the same in any Roads within the Jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, and the Salvage cannot be adjusted between the Persons concerned; the same shall be determined in twelve Hours by any one or more of the the Persons appointed as aforesaid.

The Master and Seamen's wearing Apparel are always excepted from the Allowance of Salvage.

If a Ship is found adrift at Sea, having been abandoned by the Master and Crew, the Allowance for Salvage will be much more than if any Person had been found on board.

Case: An outward bound Dutch East-Indiaman struck upon the Sands off the Port of Dunkirk; the Master and his Crew, imagining she would go to Pieces, as it blew a hard Gale, too hastily abandoned her, and made the best of their Way in their Boats to Ostend, the Surf not admitting of their making their Harbour of Dunkirk. Two Days after, a Passage-Boat belonging to Dover found the Ship adrift, having worked herself off with the Tides, and brought her safe into Dunkirk. The Master soon arrived there, and disputed the Quantum of the Salvage, which the Admiralty Court at Dunkirk adjudged to be one Half, and it was paid accordingly.

The Valuation of a Ship, in order to ascertain the Rate of Salvage, may be determined by the Policy of Insurance, if there is no Reason to suspect she is undervalued; the same Rule may be observed with Respect to Goods, where there are Policies of Insurance upon them. Where this is not the Case, the Salvors have a Right to insist upon Proof of the real Value, which may be done by the Merchants' Invoices, and they must be paid accordingly.

AVERAGE and CONTRIBUTION are synonymous Terms in Marine Cases, and signify a mean Proportion of Loss between the Owners of Goods thrown overboard in a Storm (in order to preserve the Remainder, with the Ship, and Lives of the Men) and the Proprietors of those that are saved, and of the Vessel.

And as Ships in their Voyages are exposed to Storms, and often saved from perishing, by casting Goods overboard to lighten them, it has, therefore, been always allowed, and is justified by Law and Custom, and in Case of imminent Danger any Thing may be thrown away to evade it. Though as heavy Goods seem most likely to answer the Purpose, and are generally least in Value, they should be first destined to Destruction.

However, to make this Action legal, the three following essential Cases ought to concur:

1st. The Ship must be in evident Hazard of perishing, with her Cargo and Crew.

2d. The Resolution the Captain takes on this melancholy Occasion should be in Consequence of a Consultation held with his Officers and Sailors, to endeavour to save themselves, Ship and Cargo, either by throwing some Goods overboard, or by cutting some of the Masts, &c. away, and by occasioning these these extraordinary Expences strive to secure the Remainder for the Proprietors Benefit.

3d. That the Ship and Cargo, or the Part of them that are saved, has been saved by that Means used, with that sole View.

Agreeable to these three Axioms, it must be concluded, that all the Expence and Losses, which are thus voluntarily made to prevent a total one of Ship and Cargo, ought to be equally borne by the Ship, and her remaining Lading. And this is called general or gross Average.

But what is broken or lost by a Storm, as Anchors, Cables, Masts, Sails, Cordage, &c. is not to be comprehended in gross Averages, because the Tempest only was the Occasion of this Loss, and it was not made by the Deliberation of the Master and his Crew, with the View to save the Ship and Lading; though on the contrary, if after Advice taken by the Company, or major Part of them, the Captain cuts away, or abandons any Thing of the Ship or Cargo, with a View to prevent a greater Misfortune, all that is so cut away, &c. must be brought into a general Average.

If the Ship happily out-weatheres the Storm, and arrives in Safety at her destined Port, the Captain must make his regular Protests, and beside, jointly with the major Part of his Crew, must swear, that the Goods were cast overboard for no other Cause, but purely for the Safety of Ship and Lading; and the Method of elucidating and clearing up this Point varies according to the several Countries and Places they arrive at.

The Ship arriving in Safety, those Goods she brings with her must come into a general Average, and not only those that pay Freight but all that have been saved and preserved by such Ejection, even Money, Jewels, Clothes, &c.

But a Man's Apparel in Use, and Victuals, &c. put aboard to be spent, are totally excluded from the Contribution.

The Loss of Anchors, Masts, and Rigging, occasioned by common Accidents at Sea: The Damages which happen to Merchandise by Storms, Capture, or Shipwreck, wet or rotting (not owing to any neglect of the Master) are Losses to be borne by, and the Expences paid by the Thing that suffered the Damage. And this is called simple or particular Average.

Job Taciturnus. L. 1. C. 7. de Jactu; Et de Contribut. In the rating of Goods by Way of Contribution, this Order used to be always observed, viz. If they are cast overboard before half the Voyage be performed, then they are to be esteemed at the Price they cost; and if after, then at such Price as the rest, or the like Sorts, shall be sold at the Place of Discharge; and this Regulation continues still in France and Holland though here and elsewhere the Lost and the Saved are sometimes estimated as the latter sell.

Leg. Navit. 4. ad Leg. Rhod. ad Ventus' Comment. The Owner of the Goods that have been thus ejected, or his Factor, should take Care to have the Loss valued before the Ship's Discharge, in which the Master ought to assist, and settle all Averages before he unloads.

And it is not only the Goods that are thrown over that must come into the Average, but those also which shall have received any Damage, by the Action of the others' Ejection, by Wet, &c.

In stating an Average on Goods, Regard should be had to what Deductions ought to be made from the Invoice amount, covered for Draw-backs, Bounties, and other Allowance at the Custom-House on Exportation: Also for Discounts, and Abatements of Duties, &c. on Importation; and for prompt Payment on Sales, together with the usual Leakage, Westage, &c. It should likewise be considered whether the damaged Goods, (although the whole of the Goods which were loaded may be delivered) are increased or diminished in Weight or Quantity by Means of the Sea Water, as Hemp, Sugar, &c. The true Weight or Quantities, as shipped and landed, should be discovered and compared; and the several Differences of Qualities attended to, particularly in large Parcels or Cargoes of Goods of the same Denomination, in order to find on which Qualities the Damages may have happened: for unless all these Circumstances be adverted to as the Case may require, the Average will be stated erroneously. Wyskett's Digest of Laws of Insurance.

Average is to be allowed as often as it happens, either once or oftner although the Ship afterwards should be lost in the same Voyage. Ord. of Copenb.

If Goods shipped in England are in Tempest thrown overboard, in Order to preserve the Vessel and Crew, and these Goods are taken up and preserved by another English Ship, the Owners bringing Trover, it lies, because delivered upon upon the Land.

It is lawful for Persons to cast Goods overboard out of a Ferry-Boat, in Case of a Tempest, to preserve their Lives; but, if the Ferryman surcharge the Boat with Goods, the Owners of them shall have their Remedy against him, but not otherwise.

So if an Ejection of Goods from any Ship is occasioned by the Indiscretion of the Master's Lading her above Birth-Mark, it is customary in such Cases, by the Marine Laws, to have no Contribution made, but Satisfaction is due from the Ship, Masters, or Owners. Lust. Sernus, S. 27. & Si. 23. ad Leg. Aquil.

And as this Law doth take Care, that such common Calamities shall be borne by all the interested Parties, by a general Contribution, so the Common-Law takes Notice of the Misfortunes, and makes Provisions for the Master's Indemnification; and therefore if the Owner of such ejected Goods shall bring an Action against the Master or the Owner of the Vessel, the Defendant may plead the Special Matter, and the same shall bar the Plaintiff.

As the Common Law looks upon the Goods or Cargo as a Pawn or Pledge for the Freight, so the Marine Law looks upon them likewise as a Security for answering any Average or Contribution, and that the Master ought not to deliver them (as above) till the Contribution is settled, they being tacitly obliged for the one as well as the other.

If a Lighter, Skiff, or the Ship's Boat, into which Part of the Cargo is unladen to lighten the Ship, perish, and the Ship be preserved, in that Case Contribution is to be made; but if the Ship be cast away, and the Lighter, Boat, or Skiff, be preserved, there no Contribution or Average is to be had, it being a Rule Contribution but where the Ships arrive in Safety.

If a Ship be taken by Enemies or Pirates, and the Master to redeem her and Cargo promises a certain Sum of Money, for Performance whereof he becomes a Pledge or Captive in the Hands of the Captor; in this Case, he is to be redeemed at the Expence of the Ship, Lading, and Money (if any on board) all being obliged to contribute for his Ransom, according to each Man's Interest.

So where a Pirate takes Part of the Goods to spare the rest, Contribution must be paid.

But if a Pirate takes by Violence Part of the Goods, the rest are not subject to gross Average, unless the Merchant hath made an express Agreement to pay it after the Ship is robbed.

Though if Part of the Goods are taken by an Enemy, or by Letters of Marque and Reprizal, & contra.

In settling a gross Average, an Estimate must be made of all the Goods lost and saved, as well as of what the Master shall have sacrificed of the Ship's Appurtenances to her Preservation, and that of her Cargo; and if any Thing flung into the Sea is again recovered, Contribution is only to be made for the Damage it shall have received.

The Pilot's Fee, that brought the Ship into a Port or Haven for her Safeguard (it being not the Place she was designed for) must be contributed to, as the raising her from the Ground must be, when there is no Fault in the Master.

If a Master of a Ship lets her out to Freight, and in Consequence thereof receives his Lading, and afterwards takes in some Goods, without Leave of his Freighters, and on a Storm arising at Sea, Part of his Freighters' Goods are thrown overboard, the Remainder are not subject to an Average, but the Master must make good the Loss out of his own Purse.

If a Ship is taken by Force and carried into some Port, and the Crew remains on board to take Care of, and reclaim her; not only the Charges of such reclaiming shall be brought into a general Average, but the Wages and Expences of the Ship's Company during her Arrest, and from the Time of her Capture and being disturbed in her Voyage.

But the Sailors' Wages, &c. of a Ship detained in Port by Order of State, shall not be brought into an Average, and the Reason assigned for it is, that in

And he from the preceding Case, the Crew remained aboard to take Care of the Vessel, whilst they were endeavouring to reclaim her, and these Charges were occasioned by Mr. Adrian Vermeer on the Marine Laws with the sole View of preserving the Ship and Cargo for their Proprietors; but in this latter Case, there was no Room for such a Pretence as the embargoing Sovereign would not have either Ship or Cargo, but only hinder their Departure for some political Reasons, wherefore it could not be said, that the Ship's Company remained on board to prevent an entire Loss; the only Motives to be offered for an Average.

Nevertheless, it seems that both Reason and Justice require that the Expence and Wages of a Ship's Company, detained in Port by a Prince's Order, should be brought into a general Average; for if, on one Side, the Merchants who have laden her, are considerable Sufferers by the Delay, in the Arrival of their Goods at the destined Ports, the Owners of the Ship are not less so, more especially if the Crew is large, and the Detention long; and those who drew up the Ordinance of Lewis XIV. very well perceived in Part, that to oblige the Owners of a Vessel so detained, to support the whole Expence, would be a great Hardship and Injustice, as the VIIIth Article of the said Ordinance (under the Title of Averages) expresses in direct Terms, viz. The Food and Wages of Sailors, belonging to a Ship embargoed by an Order of State, shall be also reputed as Part of general Averages, if she is hired by the Month; but if she is freighted by the Voyage they shall be borne by her alone.

From whence, I think it ought to be concluded, that although a Ship freighted by the Month or Voyage, is only mentioned in the foregoing, yet when the Proprietors of a Vessel hire her Crew by the Month, they have a Right to bring the Expence and Wages of their Sailors into an Average, for the whole Time that the Ship shall be detained; though on the contrary, they cannot justly pretend to bring the Expence of the Mariners into an Average, when they are hired for the Voyage, as the Expence only is always the same, whether they be hired for the Month or Voyage, and being occasioned by the Will of the Sovereign who laid the Embargo, I do not see that there ought to be any Distinction, unless there were some Goods aboard, which were the Cause of her Arrest; for in this Case it would be reasonable, that the said Merchandises should pay the whole Expence.

Though it must be noted, the Charges of unlading a Ship, to get her into a River or Port, ought not to be brought into a general Average, but when occasioned by an indispensable Necessity to prevent the Loss of Ship and Cargo; as when a Ship is forced by a Storm to enter a Port to repair the Damage she has suffered, if she cannot continue her Voyage without an apparent Risque of being lost; in which Case, the Wages and Victuals of the Crew are brought into an Average from the Day it was resolved to seek a Port to refit the Vessel, to the Day of her Departure from it, with all the Charges of unlading and relading, Anchorage, Pilotage, and every other Due and Expence, occasioned by this Necessity.

The Master of a Ship, who is obliged from the aforesaid Motives, to cut away, or throw overboard, any of his Masts, Rigging, &c. has a privileged Hypothecation, and the Right of Detention of the Goods he shall carry to their destined Port, till they contribute to a general Average; and it is to be observed, that Goods cast overboard to lighten the Ship, make no Derelict.

Having now gone through what I thought necessary to offer on the Subject of general and particular Averages, I shall just mention a Word or two, of what we term Petty Average being a small Duty joined to Primage, which Custom has made a Master's Perquisite, extra of the Freight, and is commonly here 5 per Cent. as it has been settled in France and Holland, &c. though 10 per Cent. is commonly paid in the latter, notwithstanding two publick Edicts which limit it, as aforesaid, to half the Sum: The Origin of it was, an Allowance made to Masters of Vessels for sundry petty Expences, to which the Lading was obliged to contribute, but has been, for some Years past, transfused to the Terms aforesaid; and I shall not now enlarge on this Subject of Averages, but refer my Reader to what I shall have Occasion to say more about them, under the title of Insurance; in the mean Time, I shall content myself with the Quotations tions offered, in Hopes I have neither exceeded nor fallen short of my Readers' Expectations, in my treating this extensive Theme, which of itself would furnish sufficient Matter for an entire Volume.

Of British Ports, Havens, Lighthouses, and Sea Marks.

A Port, Harbour, or Haven, is a Place where Ships may shelter from bad Weather, and where Custom-houses are appointed to supervise their lading and unlading; these in England have many Members and Creeks belonging to them, which are distinguished as follows, viz.

Members, are those Places, where anciently a Custom-house hath been kept, and where Officers or their Deputies attend, as they are lawful Places of Exportation or Importation.

Creeks, are Places where commonly Officers are, or have been, placed by Way of Prevention, not out of Duty or Right of Attendance, and are not lawful Places of Exportation or Importation, without a particular Licence or Sufferance from the Port or Member under which it is placed.

The several licensed Ports for lading and landing of Goods, with their Dependencies, as they now account at the Custom-house, are, viz.

Note, All the Ports and Havens in England are infra Corpus Comitatus, and the Court of Admiralty cannot hold Jurisdiction of any Thing done in them. Holland's Case, Earl of Exeter, 30 H. VI. And because he held Plea in the Admiralty of a Thing done infra portum de Hull, Damages were recovered against him, two Thousand Pounds.

And the Port of London being of great Importance, in Regard of the Customs, the Limits of it have been settled by the Exchequer, and declared to extend, and to be accounted, from the Promontory, or Point, called North-Farland, in the Isle of Thanet, and from thence Northward, in a supposed Line to the opposite Promontory, or Point, called the Nass, beyond the Gun-plot, upon the Coast of Essex, and continued Westward, through the River of Thames, and the several Channels, Streams, and Rivers falling into it, to London-Bridge, five the usual and known Rights, Liberty, and Privilege to the Ports of Sandwich and Ipswich, and either of them, and the known Members thereof, and of the Customers, Comptrollers, Searchers, and other Deputies, within the said Ports of Sandwich and Ipswich, and the several Creeks, Harbours, and Havens, to them, or either of them, respectively belonging, within the Counties of Kent or Essex.

This Account of Ports, &c. might have been omitted till I came to treat of the Customs; but, as I thought it more properly introduced here, I have inserted it, and shall subjoin an Abstract of the Laws in Force concerning them. For though it is probable few or none of my Readers may be interested in the Trade of them all, yet, that every one may meet the Information he may occasionally want, I shall briefly mention what has been publicly enacted, for their Establishment and Preservation.

BURLINGTON.

8 Will. III. C. 29. S. 1. From the first of May, 1697, until the 1st of May, 1704, the Duties herein-mentioned shall be paid for the repairing the Port or Pier of Burlington, viz. one Farthing for every Chaldron of Coals, laden on board any Vessel at the Port of Newcastle, or at Sunderland, Blythe, Seaton, Sluice, or any other Member of the Port of Newcastle, which shall be paid to Arthur, Lord Viscount Irvine, &c.

Ditto, S. 4. All Monies raised for the Duties aforesaid, &c. shall be by the Commissioners applied to the repairing the said Port or Pier of Burlington, &c.

Continued by 1 Geo. I. Cap. 49. 5 Geo. I. Cap. 80. for twenty-five Years, from the 24th of June, 1730, and 26 Geo. II. for twenty-five Years, from the 24th of June, 1753.

By this Act, Vessels belonging to Great Yarmouth in Norfolk are exempted from this Duty, the Masters having a Certificate, upon Oath, before the Mayor of Yarmouth, that the Owners of such Vessel, or the greatest Part, are Inhabitants of that Town.

DOVER.

11 Will. III. C. 5. S. 1. From the 1st of May, 1700, to the 1st of May, 1709, there shall be paid by the Master of every English Ship, of the Burthen of twenty Tons, and not exceeding three Hundred Tons, for every Lading and Discharging within this Realm, from, to, or by Dover, or coming into the Harbour there, not having a Cocket testifying his Payment before that Voyage, towards the Repair of Dover Harbour, 3d. for every Ton, and of the Aliens' Ships, of the Burden aforesaid, the like Sum (excepting Ships laden with Coals, Grindstones, or Purbeck or Portland Stones) and for every Chaldron of Sea Coals, or Ton of Grindstones, one Penny Half-penny; the same to be paid to the Customer or Collector of the Customs, in such Port, whence such Ship shall set forth, or where such Ship shall arrive, before they lade or unlade; the Account of the Number of Tons to be made according to the Entry of the Goods of every Ship in the Custom-House, and no Entry of the Goods to be allowed without Information made on Oath by the Master, containing the Burden thereof, and Payment made of the Sums aforesaid, of which Payment the Master shall have Allowance of the Merchants, according to the Rates of the Goods, by Way of Average, &c.

Ditto, S. 2. Provided that no Coaster or Fisherman shall pay the Duty oftener than once in one Year.

Ditto, S. 3. Ships belonging to Weymouth and Melcomb Regis, and Lyme Regis, shall be exempted from paying to the Harbour of Dover, so as they bring a Certificate upon Oath before the Mayor, under the common Seal of the said Corporations, that that the Ships belong thereto, and the Inhabitants of the said Corporations are Owners of the major Part of such Ships.

All Ships English built, and manned according to the Act of Navigation, 11 Will. III. belonging to Great Yarmouth, shall be exempt from paying the said Duties, if the Master produces a Certificate as above, &c.

Ships belonging to Ramsgate, in the Isle of Thanet, shall be exempted from paying to Dover Harbour, bringing a Certificate as before, &c.

Every Ship that shall go through the Gates of the Works of the Harbour shall, before she go into the Gates, take down her Sails, so that she may not go sailing in, upon Pain that every Captain of such Ship, so sailing in, shall forfeit to the Wardens and Assistants of the Harbour, ten Shillings, for the Use of the Harbour, to be recovered by Action of Debt, &c.

Continued by 2 Anne, Cap. 7. 4 Geo. I. Cap. 13. and 9 Geo. I. Cap. 30. to the first of May, 1744. Further continued for twenty-one Years by 11 Geo. II. Cap. 7. This Act further continued for 21 Years, by 31 Geo. II.

M I N E H E A D.

From the 24th of June, 1701, for one and twenty Years, there shall be paid (besides the ancient Acknowledgments accustomed to be paid to Tregonwell Luttrell, Esq; and his Ancestors) for Goods imported or exported, into, or out of, the Port of Minehead, the Duties following, viz. such Sum of Money, not exceeding one Half-penny per Stone for Wool, and one Penny per Stone for Woollen and Bay Yarn imported as the Trustees hereafter appointed shall appoint; each Stone to contain eighteen Pounds, the Duties to be paid by the Person into whose Possession, or by whose Order, the Goods shall be delivered; and the Wool imported shall be weighed at the Town-Hall, according to Custom; and for every Ton of all other Goods there shall be paid 6d. per Ton, by every Master of a Ship that shall take on board or land any Goods in the Port of Minehead.

For every Ship which shall come into the Harbour (the said Port not being their discharging Port) there shall be paid by the Master the Tonnage and Keelage following, viz. for every Ship using the coasting Trade, of thirty Tons, and not amounting to fifty Tons, 1s. and of fifty Tons and upwards 2s. and for every Ship of thirty Tons, and not amounting to fifty, trading to other Parts of Europe, or to his Majesty's Plantations in America, 2s. 6d. and of fifty Tons, and upwards 5s. and for every Ship of thirty Tons, and not amounting to fifty Tons, and trading to any Place in Asia, Africa, or America (other than his Majesty's Plantations,) 5s. and of fifty Tons 10s. and the Master paying the said Keelage shall have Allowance for the same, of the Merchants, by Average.

All Money raised by the Duties, and recovered for the Forfeitures, &c. shall be by the Trustees applied to the Building out a new Head, clearing the Beach, and other Works for maintaining the Pier and Harbour, &c.

After the said Term, so long as the Harbour shall be kept up, there shall be paid to the Lord of the Manor of Minehead, the Duties following, for Goods imported, for the Maintenance of the new Head and other Works, viz. for every twenty Stones of Wool, 1d. for every twenty Stones of Woollen and Bay Yarn 2d. for every Ton of Salt 2d. for every Quarter of Corn 2d. for every Chaldron of Coals 2d.

Continued by 10 Anne, Cap. 24, for sixteen Years, and by 11 Geo. II. Cap. 8. from the 24th of June, 1738, for forty Years.

W H I T B Y.

From the first of May, 1702, for nine Years, there shall be paid unto the Trustees herein named, viz. the Lord of the Manor, Ralph Boys, and others that shall load Coals at the Port of Whitby, by the Owners of every Ship at Newcastle, or at Sunderland, Blithe, Swaton, Shaice, or any other Member of the said Port, one Farthing per Chaldron, and for all the Coals landed within the Port of Whitby, for every Chaldron, Town Measure, Measure, 6*d.* and for every Ton Weight of salt, landed at the Port of Whitby, 2*s.* and for every Quarter of Malt, Corn, and Grain, 4*d.* and for all foreign Goods imported in English Bottoms, 3*d.* per Ton; and all foreign Bottoms importing such Goods, 6*d.* per Ton; and for all Butter shipped off from Whitby, 1*d.* per Firkin; for all dried Fish and Mud Fish, shipped off from Whitby, 1*d.* per Score; for all barrelled Fish so shipped off, per Barrel, 3*d.* Every English Ship, which shall enter within the Piers, shall pay 1*s.* and for every Top of such ship 4*d.* and all foreign Ships 2*s.* and for every Top of such Ship 4*d.* &c.

Ditto, S. 11. All Ships English built, and manned according to the Act of Navigation, belonging to Great Yarmouth, shall be free from the said Duty of one Farthing per Chaldron; so as the Master of such Ship, or some Mariner on his Behalf, produce a Certificate made upon Oath before the Bailiffs of Yarmouth, that such Ship does belong to Yarmouth, and that the Inhabitants thereof are Owners of the major Part of such Ship.

Continued until the 1st of May, 1723, by 7 Anne, and by 7 Geo. I. the Duties before granted (except the said Duty of one Farthing per Chaldron) were made perpetual; and by 8 Geo. II. it was enacted, that from and after the 1st of June, 1735, the said Duty of one Farthing per Chaldron by 1 Anne, should be revived for the Term of thirty-one Years, to commence from the 1st of June, 1735. And to rebuild or repair the East and West Piers of the said Harbour, an additional Duty of a Farthing per Chaldron is granted by 23 Geo. II. P. 667, to be paid from and after the 1st of June 1750, for 31 Years, by all Vessels loading or shipping Coals at the Port of Newcastle upon Tyne, or at Sunderland, Blythe, Seaton, Shuice, Cullercoats, or any other Harbour, Colliery, or Place, reputed a Member of the Port of Newcastle, &c.

PARTON.

<sup>4</sup> Ann. C. 18. S. 1. During the Term of eleven Years, there shall be paid unto the Trustees named in the Act, for the Enlarging and Repairing the Pier and Harbour of Parton in Cumberland, by every Coal Owner that shall put Coals on board any Vessel there, 2*d.* for every 192 Gallons of Coals, within ten Days after such Coals are shipped; and by every Master of every Ship that shall load Coals there 2*d.* for every 192 Gallons; and, after the Expiration of the said eleven Years, one Farthing for every 192 Gallons, to be paid by the Master of the Ship, before each Ship goes out of the Harbour.

Ditto, S. 4. All such Money shall be employed for the Enlarging, Repairing, and Cleaning the Harbour, &c.

Ditto, S. 2. The perpetual Duty of one Farthing, granted by the said Act, shall cease; and, in Lieu thereof, every Master of a Ship shall, for fifteen Years, pay one Halfpenny for every 192 Gallons of Coals, which shall be laden on board such Ship within the said Harbour.

There shall be paid for all Goods herein after mentioned, which shall be discharged out of any Ship in the Harbour, coming Coastwise, from the 1st of May, 1725, for fifteen Years, the Duties following, viz. for every Hoghead of Tobacco 3*d.* for every Hoghead of Sugar 6*d.* for every Ton of Wine or excisable Liquors 2*s.* for every Ton of Hemp or Flax 1*s.* 6*d.* for every Hundred of Deals 8*d.* for every Last of Pitch or Tar 8*d.* for every Ton of Iron 1*s.* for every Ton of Raft or other Timber 4*d.* for every Barrel of Herrings 1*d.* for every Pack of Linen, containing two Hundred Weight, 1*s.* which Duties shall be paid by the Merchant into whose Custody the Goods shall be delivered.

Every

Every Master of any Ship shall pay for such Ship, upon her Arrival in the Harbour from any Port of her Discharge in Europe, other than the Kingdoms of Great-Britain and Ireland, and the Isle of Man, 4*d.* per Ton; and for every Ship, upon her Arrival from the Port of her last Discharge in Asia, Africa, or America, 8*d.* per Ton, to be admeasured as described in 5 Will. and Mar. Cap. 20. and 8 Anne, Cap. 12. Sect. 4. Provided, that for every Ship which shall come in for Security, and not for their Discharge, there shall be paid one Fourth of the Tonnage, and no more.

After the Termination of the said fifteen Years, one third Part of the Duties Dute, shall for ever continue for the perpetual repairing of the Harbour.

The Duties granted by the Act of 11 Geo. I. Cap. 16. shall be continued for 5 Geo. II. C. the further Term of twenty-one Years, for enlarging the Harbour of Parton in Cumberland.

If the Purposes are fully answered, &c. before the Expiration of the said Term, Dute, S. a. the Duties shall cease; and the Duty of a Half-penny for every 192 Gallons of Coals exported from the said Harbour, and one third Part of the Duty on Tonnage of Ships (which, by the Act of 11 Geo. I. Cap. 16. are made perpetual) shall commence.

C A T W A T E R.

Benjamin Joules, his Executors, &c. shall clear the Harbour of Catwater near Plymouth and Sutton Poole in Plymouth, and reduce the Shoals so, that any fourth Rate Ship may safely go in and out, over any Part of them, at half Flood or Ebb; and after the Removal of the Shoals, he shall keep the Water to the same Depth, &c.

And after the 25th of March, 1710, the said Benjamin Joules shall have the sole Ballasting and Unballasting of Ships belonging to her Majesty, and all other Ships in Plymouth Sound, Hammoaze, Catwater, and Sutton Poole, or within the Road between St. Nicholas Island, and the main Land; and every Master, belonging to any Ship that shall come into the said Harbours or Road, and deliver or receive Ballast, shall deliver and receive the same to, and from the said Benjamin Joules, under Pain of forfeiting 5*l.* &c. to hold and enjoy the said sole Liberty of Ballasting, &c. unto the said Benjamin Joules, his Executors, &c. for seventy-one Years.

The said Benjamin Joules shall be bound to furnish all Ships with Ballast; and shall ballast and unballast the same upon such Terms as are herein-mentioned, viz. the Ships of her Majesty at 9*d.* per Ton; all Ships of the Inhabitants of Plymouth or Saltash, at 9*d.* per Ton; all other Ships of her Majesty's Dominions, at 10*d.* per Ton, and all foreign Ships at 12*d.* per Ton.

L I V E R P O O L.

The Mayor, &c. and Common-Council of Liverpool, shall have Power to make a wet Dock or Basin, with Wharfs, Sluices, and Canals, upon the Ground set apart for that Purpose.

There shall, from the 24th of June, 1710, for one and twenty Years, be paid unto the said Mayor, &c. for every Vessel (Ships in her Majesty's Service excepted) coming into or out of the said Port, with any Merchandise (the Limits whereof are as far as a Place in Hoyle Lake, called the Red-Stones, and from thence all over the River Mersey to Warrington and Frodsham Bridges) by the Masters of such Ships, the Duties herein after described, viz. for every Ship trading between the Port and St. David's Head or Carlisle, for every Ton 2*d.* For every Ship trading between St. David's Head and the Land's End, or beyond Carlisle to the Shetlands, or the Isle of Man, for every Ton 3*d.* For every Ship trading to Ireland, for every Ton, 4*d.* For every Ship trading to Norway, Denmark, Hollstein, Holland, Hamburg, Flanders, or any Part of France, without the Straits of Gibraltar, or Jersey, or Guernsey, for every Ton 8*d.* For every Ship trading to Newfoundland, Greenland, Russia, and within the Baltick, Portugal and Spain, without the Straits, Canaries, Madeiras, Western Islands, Azores, for

There shall be paid to the Collector, to be appointed as herein after mentioned, for every Weigh of Salt, for every Last of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Malt, or other Grain, for every Chaldron, Winchester Measure, of Coals and Culm, and for every Ton of other Goods, discharged out of any Ship in the said Haven, or which shall be exported from thence, 1s. to be paid before the same be landed; and there also shall be paid for every Ship, of the Burden of ten Tons or upwards, which shall come into the said Haven, 2d. for every Ton such Ship, &c. shall contain; which Duties shall be paid by the Master, &c.

When the Harbours and Piers shall be rebuilt, and the Monies expended thereon reimbursed, the Duties shall cease; and from thenceforth there shall be paid to the Collectors for every Weigh of Salt, for every Last of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Malt, and other Grain, and for every Chaldron of Coals and Culm, Winchester Measure, and for every Ton of other Goods discharged in the said Haven, or exported, 6d. and for every Ship, &c. which shall come into the Haven, 1d. per Ton and no more. Ditto, S. 7.

Y A R M O U T H.

After the 25th of March, 1723, for 21 Years, and to the End of the next Session of Parliament, there shall be paid by every Master of a Ship which shall unlade within the Haven of Great Yarmouth, or in Yarmouth Road, extending from the South Part of Scraby in Norfolk to the North Part of Corton in Suffolk, at the Time of unlading, for the Goods following, viz. for every Chaldron of Coals, Winchester Measure, Last of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Malt, or other Grain, for every Weigh of Salt, and Ton of other Goods (Fish excepted) such Sums, not exceeding 12d. as the Mayor, Aldermen, Burgessees, and Commonalty of Great Yarmouth, in Common-Council assembled, shall appoint; to be applied as follows, viz. Part of the said Duties not exceeding 6d. towards clearing and improving the Haven, Piers, and Jettees; and 3d. other Part of the said Monies shall yearly, on the 24th of June, be divided in Manner following, viz. One Penny Halfpenny to the Chamberlain of Norwich to be applied towards clearing the Channel of the River Yare, between the two Mills in Norwich and Hardly Croft, &c. and one Halfpenny, other Part of the said 3d. to such Persons as shall be yearly named by the Justices at their Quarter Sessions at Norwich, for the County of Norfolk, to be applied towards clearing the River Bure, called the North River, and for such other Purposes as the Justices shall appoint; and one Halfpenny, other Part of the said 3d. to such Person as shall be yearly named by the Justices at their Quarter Sessions at Beeches, for the County of Suffolk, to be applied towards clearing of the River Waveney, and for such other Purposes as the said Justices shall order; and one Halfpenny, Residue of the said 3d. to such Persons as the Mayor, &c. of Yarmouth shall appoint, to be applied towards repairing the Bridge and the publick Keys belonging to the Corporation, &c. And the further Sum of 3d. or so much thereof as shall be by the twelve Commissioners, to be appointed as herein after is directed, or any seven of them, thought necessary, shall be raised by the Mayor, &c. of Yarmouth, and shall first be applied towards clearing the Channel of that Part of the River Yare, leading from Yarmouth to Norwich, called Braydon, as any seven of the Commissioners shall direct at their Meeting at Yarmouth, &c.

The last mentioned 3d. shall not be raised but when Notice in Writing, signed by seven of the Commissioners, shall be given to the Mayor of Yarmouth, that it is necessary to raise the said Sum, or some Part thereof, and for what Purposes; and then such Sum shall be raised, provided that the Justices for Norfolk, at their Quarter Sessions, yearly, out of the Monies payable for the River Bure, may allot Part thereof for the clearing that Branch of the River which leads from St. Bennet's-Abbey to Dilham, in Norfolk. Ditto, S. 2.

On the Exportation of Goods, which have paid the Sums hereby charged on the Importation, the Collector (Proof in Writing on Oath being first made of the Payment of the Duties, which Oath he may administer) shall repay the Exporter the Money paid on the Importation. Ditto, S. 12.

 of March, 1750, the Duties payable by Virtue of the foregoing Act of 20 Geo. II.
 shall cease: and, in lieu thereof, there shall be paid for twenty-one Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, by every Master of any Ship or Vessel which shall import or unlade within the Haven of Great Yarmouth, or in Yarmouth Road, near adjoining to the said Borough, extending from the South Part of the Town of Scraby, in the County of Norfolk, to the North Part of the Town of Corton, in the County of Suffolk; for every Chaldron of Coals, Winchester Measure, Last of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Malt, or other Grain; and for every Weigh of Salt; and for every Ton of all other Goods or Merchandizes (Fish only excepted) the respective Sums following, viz. for the Term of seven Years, or such other less Term as twelve Commissioners, or seven of them (five being Commissioners for the County of Norfolk, Suffolk, and the City of Norwich) shall order, a Sum not exceeding 1*s.* 6*d.* And after the Expiration of the said, or other less Term of Years, during the Remainder of the Term of twenty-one Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, the Sum of 10*d.* or such other greater Sum as the Commissioners as aforesaid shall order, not exceeding the Sum of 12*d.*
- P. 193. The Sum of 3*d.* Part of the Duties granted by this Act shall every Year be divided, and paid upon the first Tuesday in June, by the Chamberlains, &c. of Great Yarmouth, in the Manner and Proportions following, viz. 1*d.* 2*q.* unto the Chamberlain of the City of Norwich, &c. to be applied towards clearing and deepthning that Part of the Channel of the River of Wenson, commonly called Yare, which lies between the new Mills in Norwich and Hardly Cressy; and for preventing Filth and Mud from falling therein, and for didelling and cleansing the River in such Manner, as the said Corporation shall direct, &c. and the Sum of 2*q.* to be applied towards clearing and deepthning the River Bure commonly called the North River, and all those Branches thereof which lead from St. Bennet's Abbey to Dilbam, and from Bastwick-Bridge to Hickling, in the County
 P. 194. of Norfolk, in such Manner as the Justices shall direct, &c. and the Sum of 2*q.* to be applied towards clearing and deepthning the River Waveny, in such Manner as the Justices shall direct, &c. and the Sum of 2*q.* Residue of the said 3*d.* to be applied towards repairing the Bridge and publick Keys belonging to the said Borough of Great Yarmouth, &c.

The Sum of 3*d.* other Part of the Duties is to be divided and paid in the Manner following viz. the Sum of 2*d.* to be applied towards the further clearing and deepening the River Bure, commonly called the North River, and the Branches thereof, which lead from St. Bennet's Abbey to Dilham, &c. and the Sum of 2*d.* 2*d.* Residue of the said 3*d.* to be applied towards the effectual clearing and deepening of that Part of the River Tare leading from Yarmouth to Norwich, called Braydon, &c. 21 Geo. II.
P. 195.

The last mentioned Sum of 3*d.* is not to be raised, unless Notice in Writing, &c. be given to the Mayor of Great Yarmouth, &c.

The last mentioned 3*d.* when raised, is to be annually accounted for, &c. and the Overplus (if any) of the said 2*d.* 2*d.* Part of the said 3*d.* is to be applied in clearing and deepening the North River, and its Branches, &c. and the Overplus (if any) of the 2*d.* 2*d.* Residue of the said 3*d.* is to remain in the Hands of such Person as the Corporation of Great Yarmouth in Common Council shall appoint, to be applied in clearing and deepening the Channel of Braydon, in such Manner as the Commissioners shall think fit. P. 196.

During the Term of seven Years, the Sum of 4*d.* other Part of the Duties is to be applied in clearing and deepening the Haven, and repairing the Piers and Jettee, and all the Capsterns, Cables, and Ropes belonging thereto, &c.

If in any Year, during the said Term of seven Years, the said Sum of 4*d.* shall not be sufficient for clearing and deepening the Haven and repairing the Piers and Jettee, seven or more of the Commissioners, &c. upon Application of the Corporation of Great Yarmouth, &c. are empowered to direct such further Part of the Residue of the Duties, as they shall think necessary to be applied, with the said 4*d.* towards the said Purposes, and for no other Use.

No Part of the said Sum of 4*d.* is to be applied in erecting any new Works in the Haven, or in pulling down any Parts of the Piers and Jettee.

The said Sum of 4*d.* and such further Sums (if any) as the Commissioners shall direct, to be applied as aforesaid, are to be annually accounted for, &c. and the Overplus (if any) is to be applied in amending and improving the Haven and Piers; &c. P. 197.

During the said Term of seven Years, or other less Term, the Sum of 8*d.* or such Part thereof, as shall not have been disposed of by the Commissioners, in Manner before directed, Residue of the Duties, is to be applied in improving and extending the Haven and Piers, and in erecting new Works, as the Commissioners as aforesaid shall direct, according to the Provisions herein after mentioned.

Seven or more Commissioners, &c. at their first, or some subsequent Meeting, at Great Yarmouth, are to direct such Works to be undertaken, as, with the Advice of some skilful Engineer or Engineers, they shall think necessary for improving and extending the Haven and Piers, &c. P. 198.

During the Term of seven Years, or other less Term, the Chamberlains of Great Yarmouth, &c. are to pay the Money arising by the said Sum of 8*d.* to such Persons as the Commissioners shall direct.

The Surplus (if any) of the said Sum of 8*d.* is to be applied in completing such new Works, as the Commissioners shall direct.

If at any Time, before the Expiration of the said Term of seven Years, the Commissioners shall signify to the Mayor, &c. that, in their Opinion, the Work is completed, and the Haven and Piers effectually improved and extended, then the Payment of the Sum of 8*d.* is to cease, except in the Case herein after excepted. P. 200.

After the Expiration of the said Term of seven Years, or sooner determination of the Payment of the said Sum of 8*d.* the Sum of 4*d.* Part of the remaining Duty is to be applied, during the Remainder of the Term of twenty-one Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, in clearing and deepening the Haven, and keeping in Repair the Piers and Jettee, in such Manner as the Corporation of Great Yarmouth in Common Council shall direct.

If in any Year, during the Remainder of the said Term of twenty-one Years, &c. it shall appear to seven or more of the Commissioners, &c. that the said Sum of 4*d.* directed to be applied in clearing and deepening the Haven, and keeping P. 201.

11 Geo. I. C.
6 S. 1.
The Commissioners appointed to put in Execution the private Act 3 Geo. I. for the Preservation and Improvement of the River Wear and Port and Haven of Sunderland, in the County of Durham, or any seven of them, (whereof the Chairman to be one) are impowered, at any publick Meeting, to grant or charge the Duties by that Act granted, as a Security for 3500*l.* by them already borrowed, or for any further Sum to be borrowed for the Purpose in the said Act.

Ditto, S. 8 The Commissioners shall have Power to finish the Pier already begun, and also to erect Piers and other Works, for the Preservation and Improvement of the Haven, &c.

20 Geo. II.
P. 479.
P. 480.
The Preamble sets forth, that the Town of Sunderland, near the Sea, situate on the River Wear, in the County of Durham, is well inhabited by rich and able Merchants and Tradesmen, having a Port capable of containing many Hundred Ships at one Time, &c. and that by an Act of 3 Geo. I. intitled, An Act for the Preservation and Improvement of the River Wear, and Port and Haven of Sunderland in the County of Durham, certain Persons therein named, were were appointed Commissioners of the said River and Haven, and Duties granted for the effectual cleansing and preserving thereof, for the Term of twenty-one Years; and that by another Act of 13 Geo. I. for the more effectual Preservation and Improvement of the River Wear, &c. divers additional Powers were granted to the said Commissioner, who in Pursuance of the Execution thereof, before the Expiration of the Term limited, erected, at a great Charge, a Pier and a Key near the Mouth of the River on the South Side, and did other beneficial Acts for the Opening and Improving of the said River, &c. and, in Order to have more effectually cleaned and preserved the same, the Commissioners proposed to have lengthened the said Pier, and to have built other Works on the North Side of the River, but the Money arising from the Duties not being sufficient to perform such additional Works, &c. It is enacted, that the Right Reverend the Bishop of Durham, the Right Honourable Thomas, Earl of Scarborough, &c. shall be Commissioners of the said River, Port, and Haven, within the Limits herein-after set forth, and shall be so called for the Purposes herein mentioned, for the Term of twenty one Years, to commence from the 24th of June, 1747.

20 Geo. II.
P. 451.
P. 482.

The Commissioners, or seven of them, may purchase and take Leases of any Lands near the said River, for the erecting Piers or other Works, &c. and employ Workmen, Keels, &c. to remove any Rocks, Gravel, &c. below High-Water Marks, &c. provided that thereby they do not damage the Lands, Quarries, Keys, Straits, Wharfs, or Beacons, of any Person whatsoever, &c.

The Commissioners, or seven of them, may at all Times hereafter survey the said River so far as to the New Bridge, and no farther; (to which Place they may make and keep it navigable for the said Term of 21 Years) and also the Port, Haven, and Harbour of Sunderland, as far as the same extends from Souter Point, about two Miles from the Bar of Sunderland, towards the North East, and so into the Sea to five Fathoms at Low-Water, and from thence in a supposed direct Line, till it falls opposite to that Land called Rybop Dean, about two Miles towards the South, and the Impediments and Annoyances, &c. therein, and may hear and determine all such Abuses, Differences, and Things, as concern the same, &c.

P. 490.

The Commissioners, before the 24th of June, 1759, shall remove all Sands, Shoals, and other Obstructions, between Biddisford and Newbridge, and shall effectually make the said River navigable, to carry Boats, Keels, and Vessels of the Burden now used upon the said River; and shall, from Time to Time, keep it so navigable, between the said two Places, for the Residue of the said Term of 21 Years.

P. 491.

From the 24th of June, 1747, for the Term of 21 Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, every Coal-Owner, for the Time being, and their Fitters, and Coal Factors, shall severally pay for all Coals and Cinders brought to the said River, and delivered from the Staith, aboard any Ship or other Vessel, the Sums following, viz.

P. 493.

The Coal-Owners respectively, any Sum not exceeding 2d. 2q. for every Chaldron of Coals or Cinders, during the said Term of 21 Years, brought for them to the River, and delivered as aforesaid; and so in Proportion for any greater or less Quantity.

And the Fitters or Coal-Factors respectively, any Sum not exceeding 2q. during the said Term, for every Chaldron of Coals or Cinders, brought and delivered as aforesaid, to be applied as herein-after directed.

The Commissioners, or seven of them, (whereof the Chairman for the Time being to be one) at any publick Meeting by Writing under their Hands and Seals, (without any Stamp thereon) may assign over, &c. the Duties, or any Part thereof (the Charge of making such Assignment to be paid out of the Duties) for all, or any Part of the Term for which they are granted, as a Security for any Sum to be borrowed for the Purposes herein mentioned, to such Person or Persons, or their Trustees, who shall lend the same, with Interest not exceeding 5l. per Centum per Annum; out of which Monies, &c. shall be paid, in the first Place, the Charges of obtaining and endeavouring to procure this Act.

Cinders to be burnt from Coals, subject to the Duties before-mentioned, shall not pay the Duties payable for Cinders, on their being put on board any Ship or other other Vessel, in Order to their being exported or water-borne to any other Place; and no Duty shall be paid for any Coals or Cinders that shall be lost in any Keel or Boat sunk in the said River, &c. or within five Fathoms, at Low-Water, beyond the Bar of the River; or for any Coals used in making Salt, and Glafs, Glafs Bottles, Vitriol, and burning Lime-stones into Lime, within the Limits of the said River, &c. so as the Owners and Consumers thereof (being required) by the Oath of themselves, or any other Person, to the Satisfaction of the Commissioners, &c. prove that such Cinders, so exempted, were burnt from Coals, for which Duties, as aforesaid, had been paid; or that such Coals or Cinders, so exempted, were lost, as aforesaid; or that the Coals, so exempted, had been used in making Salt, &c. within the said River, Port, or Haven. And if any Staithmen, &c. (summoned to appear and to be examined on Oath, touching the Quantities of Coals and Cinders by them delivered, from Time to Time, on board) shall not appear, or refuse to be examined on Oath, they shall be charged such Sums, &c.

All Duties, Fines, and Sums of Money, to be levied by this Act, not otherwise directed to be applied, shall be paid to such Persons as the Commissioners shall appoint; and such Money, or so much as shall not be applied towards Payment of the Charges of procuring this Act, and of the Principal and Interest of the Money borrowed, and the Expence of putting this Act in Execution, shall be employed in lengthening the present Pier, and in purchasing or procuring Leases of Grounds, as aforesaid, to build any other Piers, Keys, Walls, or Jettees on, and in erecting the same, and in doing such other Works for the Improvement of, and the deepthning, cleansing, and preserving the said River, &c. as the Commissioners, &c. shall from Time to Time direct.

P. 503.

If by the Building of any Pier, or other Works, and the different Direction thereby given to the Sea and Tide flowing into the River, &c. the Keys and Grounds of any Person shall be beat down, overflowed, or otherwise damaged, the Commissioners, &c. out of the Monies arising by this Act, shall cause such Keys to be repaired, or rebuilt, and the Land to be effectually secured against such Sea and Tide, within twelve Months after any such Accident; and shall likewise cause to be paid to the Proprietors of Lands and Grounds, or to such other Persons as shall make Proof of any Damages done by them, in the Execution of this Act, such Sums as shall be assessed by a Jury, &c.

RIVER DEE at CHESTER.

- 17 Geo. II.
P. 571. By an Act made 6 Geo. II. intituled, An Act to recover and preserve the Navigation of the River Dee, in the County Palatine of Chester; Reciting that, by an Act made 11 and 12 Will. III. intituled, An Act to enable the Mayor and Citizens of Chester to recover and preserve the Navigation of the River Dee, reciting, that the said River Dee was heretofore navigable for Ships of a considerable Burden, from the Sea to the City of Chester, but, by Neglect, and for Want of sufficient Banks and Fences on the Sides thereof, against the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, the Channell was become so uncertain, that the Navigation was almost lost; the Mayor and Citizens of Chester, and their Successors, were empowered to make the said River navigable from the Sea to the said City, for Ships of one Hundred Tons or upwards; and certain Duties in the said Act mentioned were laid upon Coals, Lime, and Limestones, brought to the said City, for the Term of twenty-one Years, and the Property of the Sands, Soil, and Ground therein mentioned, was immediately, after the said River and Channell should be made navigable for such Ships to and from Chester, to be vested in the Mayor and Citizens, and their Successors, for ever; and they were at Liberty to enclose and improve the same, and receive the Profits thereof, and apply the same for maintaining and repairing the intended Works and Fences, and for making such further Works, from Time to Time, as Occasion should require, for making and keeping the said River navigable; And reciting, that several considerable Sums had been laid out pursuant to the said Act, but the River was not made navigable, the Provisions for making it so being insufficient, and the Time thereby granted, for making the same navigable was expired: And reciting, that the Sands, Soil, and Ground, not bearing Grass, commonly called the White Sands, from Chester to the Sea, and lying between the County of Chester, on the North Side, and the County of Flint on the South, are of great Breadth in most Places; and that the River's not being navigable was chiefly owing to the Breadth of the Sands, and to the Shifting of the Channell, as the Winds and Tide varied; and that the said Sands, Soil, and Ground were not, nor were likely to be, of any Benefit to any Person whatsoever, unless the River was bounded in, and made navigable by Sea Walls, which required a very great Expence, as well to erect, as to maintain and repair from Time to Time, as Occasion should require; but that yet, if the said Sands, Soil, and Ground, were recovered from the Sea, by Sea Walls, and the Channell thereby confined to one certain Course, it would not only effectually make the River navigable, but that vesting the White Sands in the Undertakers, would be a considerable Encouragement to the Undertaking thereof: And reciting, that the making the said River navigable would be a Means to advance the Trade of the City, and that a great Benefit would accrue thereby to the Inhabitants, and to the Towns and Countries adjacent, as also be a Means to increase the Number of Seamen and Watermen, and to promote the publick Good of this Kingdom; Nathaniel Kinderly, in the said Act named, his Heirs, and Assigns, and such Persons as he, &c. should appoint, were by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. appointed Undertakers of the said Navigation, and impowered at their own Charges, to make and keep the said River Dee navigable from the Sea to Wilcox Point; that there should be sixteen Feet Water in every Part of the River at a moderate Spring Tide, for Ships to come and go to and from the said City; and to that End, to make the Channell to run through the White Sands, or the common Salt Marshes adjoining, or through the Marshes of John Wright, Esq; commonly called Brewers-Hall Marsh; as they should think fit; and the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, Assigns, and Nominees, had farther Powers granted them by the said Act, as therein mentioned. And as they would necessarily be at a very considerable Expence in making the River navigable, and keeping up the same, it was by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. enacted, that immediately diately after the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, Assigns, or Nominees, should make the said River Dee navigable and passable for Ships in Manner as aforesaid, all Merchants and Proprietors of any Goods that should be brought into the said River and Channel, and that should be laden at, or shipped off, or sent from Chester, or from any other Places between the said City and Park-Gate in the County of Chester, on the North Side of the said River, and between the City of Chester and Town of Flint in the County of Flint, on the South Side of the said River, should pay to the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. the several Duties in the said Act mentioned; also certain Sands, Marshes, and Salt Grass, and other Lands therein mentioned, were, so soon as the said River was made navigable, vested in the Undertakers, for their proper Use, under the Provisions in the said Act mentioned; and Commissioners were appointed by the said Act, for settling all Matters, about which any Difference should arise between the Undertakers and Proprietors of any of the Lands adjoining to the River; and the Commissioners were thereby empowered to settle and assess Recompence to be made for Damages that might happen to any of the Lands or Fisheries, by Reason of the said Navigation: And the Undertakers were directed to invest 1000*l.* in South-Sea Annuities, or other Government Securities, in the Name of Thomas Revel, John Manley, and Benjamin Hoare, Esqrs. and John Bland, Banker, to answer the Damages last mentioned, for three Years after the Navigation should be fully completed: And it was thereby also enacted, that if the said Undertakers should not begin before the 24th Day of June, 1735, and make the said River navigable, according to the true Meaning of the Act, on or before the 24th Day of June, 1742, all and every the Powers and Interest of the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs and Nominees, should be utterly void; and that it should not be lawful for any Proprietor or Undertaker, or their Heirs, or any Persons claiming under any of them, to dispose of their Interest in the said Undertaking, or any Share thereof, until such Time as the said River should be made navigable: And the said Nathaniel Kinderley did afterwards, by an Instrument in Writing, dated the 9th Day of July, 1733, and duly executed, declare, that his Name was made use of in the said Act of 6 Geo. II. in Trust for Thomas Watts and Richard Manley, Esqrs. and such other Persons as they should appoint to be concerned in the said Undertaking; and the said Nathaniel Kinderley did afterwards duly nominate certain Persons, being forty in Number, to be Undertakers of the Navigation: And by Indenture Quadrupartite, made April 9, 1734, between Nathaniel Kinderley, of the first Part, Thomas Watts and Richard Manley, of the second Part, Joseph Davies and William Parsons of London, Gentlemen, of the third Part, and Ninety other Subscribers to the said Indenture, or to the Schedule thereof, of the fourth Part, and duly executed by all the said Parties; It was agreed, that the said Subscribers should raise a joint Stock of 40,000*l.* in the Manner and on the Trusts therein mentioned; which Trusts were, amongst other Things, to lay out the 1000*l.* to be deposited as a Fund to answer the Damages before specified; and also to lay out such Sums as should be necessary to recover and preserve the Navigation of the River Dee; and the Residue (if any) of the said 40,000*l.* was to be in Trust for the said Subscribers, in Proportion to the Sums by them respectively paid in: And it was by the said Indenture further agreed, that the Duties and Tonnage by the said Act made payable to, and the Sands, Soil, Ground, Marshes, and Salt Grass, thereby vested in the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. should remain to the Use of the said Subscribers in Proportion to the Sums by them respectively paid: It was also agreed, that the said joint Stock of 40,000*l.* should be divided into 400 Shares, each consisting of 100*l.* and that each of the Subscribers should be entitled to so many Shares as he should have subscribed and paid in 100*l.* and several Provisions were made for the Management of the Undertaking, for recovering and preserving the Navigation, and of the Affairs relating thereto. And the said Undertakers, the Assigns or Nominees of the said Nathaniel Kinderley, between the 27th of August and 9th of November, 1735, did invest 10,000*l.* in the Purchase of 9290*l.* Old South-Sea Annuities, in the Names of Thomas Revel, John Manley, Benjamin Hoare, and John Bland, as Trustees for the Purposes in the said Act mentioned; and the said Benjamin Hoare afterwards refusing to accept the said Stock in the South-Sea Company's Books, or to act in the said Trust, the Annuities were in Pursuance of a Decree of the High Court of Chancery, made the 18th Day of February, 1737, transferred into the Names of Thomas Revel, John Manley, and John Bland, upon the same Trusts: And the Undertakers began the said Undertaking before the 24th Day of June, 1735, and laid out the Monies advanced upon the said Indenture, in making the Deposit of 10,000*l.* in South-Sea Annuities, &c. and great Progress was thereby made in recovering the said Navigation; but the same not being perfected, and it being necessary to raise further Monies for that Purpose, it was by Deed-Poll, bearing Date the 17th Day of August, 1736, agreed to advance Ten per Cent. more, on each of their respective Subscriptions, for the Purposes in the said Indenture expressed concerning the said 40,000*l.* And afterwards there being a Necessity to raise further Monies for the perfecting the Navigation, by another Deed-Poll, bearing Date March the 3d, 1736, it was agreed by the Subscribers thereto, to advance 20 per Cent. more on their respective Subscriptions: And the Subscribers to the said Indenture, and to the Deeds-Poll, and Undertakers of the Navigation, having paid in 47,830*l.* the same was laid out in making the said Deposit, and in cutting a new Channel for the River Dee, through the adjacent Marshes, near ten Miles in Length; and making a Dam and Sluices cross the old Channel, and deepening thereof, and making other Works necessary for the recovering and preserving the Navigation, and the Charges necessary; attending the Undertaking; and the River was, in April, 1737, turned into the new Channel, and hath ever since continued to run through the same; and ever since Ships and Vessels of considerable Burden have sailed through the new Channel up to Wilcox Point; and the Undertakers being, by the said Act, directed and empowered to make and keep the River navigable from the Sea to the said Point; that there should be sixteen Feet Water in every Part of the River at a moderate Spring Tide, for Ships to come and go to and from the said City, several Trials and Soundings were made, to ascertain the Height the Water flowed to, at a moderate Spring Tide, and thereby the same was fixed to be level with the Height of nine Feet above the Apron of the ten Gate Sluice, Part of the Works of Navigation erected by the Undertakers; and a Pile was, in 1738, fixed in the River near the said ten Gate Sluice, on which the Height of nine Feet from the Apron of the ten Gate Sluice was marked, and set for the Standard Height of the Water at a moderate Spring Tide, and the same has since been commonly called the Standard; and the Undertakers finished the Undertaking in making the said River navigable, according to the Intent and true Meaning of the said recited Act of 6 Geo. II. before March 25, 1740, and have since that Time been at very great Expences in keeping the same navigable, according to the true Meaning of the Act; and the joint Stock of the said Undertaking having been laid out as aforesaid, and proving insufficient for securing the Works, and inclosing and improving the Sands and Grounds vested in the said Undertakers; At a general Meeting, held December 11, 1740, they did agree, that the said joint Stock should be increased to 52,000*l.* and that Application should be made to Parliament to incorporate the Undertakers: And by one other Act made 14 Geo. II. intituled, An Act for incorporating the Undertakers of the Navigation of the River Dee, it was amongst other Things enacted, That William Allix, and the several other Persons therein named, Proprietors of the Undertaking, and the Representatives of such Subscribers to the said Indenture or Deeds-Poll as were dead, their several and respective Successors, &c. should be erected into one Company for the Purposes aforesaid, and be incorporated by the Name of The Company of Proprietors of the Undertaking for recovering and preserving the Navigation of the River Dee, and have perpetual Succession, and a common Seal, and have Power to do all such Acts as the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. might have done, by Virtue of the said Act of 6 Geo. II. and to take all such Duties, Tonnage Dues, and Payments whatsoever, as the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. were empowered to do by the said Act; and to embank, inclose, improve, and apply to the Use of the said Company, the White Sands, Soil, and Ground, and other Lands whatsoever, by the said Act vested in the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. upon the Terms in the said Act mentioned, in the same Manner as the said Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c.

might have executed the same, by Virtue of the said Act, subject to the Limitations, &c. in the said Act mentioned; as by the Act of 14 Geo. II. will more fully appear: And the Tonnage Rates and Duties, which, by the said Act 6 Geo. II. are charged for all Goods brought into, or laden in the said River, are by Experience found to be too high, and a Discouragement to the Trade of the City; and the Mayor and Citizens of Chester, and the Merchants and Traders of Chester, have therefore requested the Company of Proprietors of the Undertaking to consent that the same may be repealed, and that in Lieu thereof easier Tonnage Duties may be appointed, which the said Company have consented to; the doing whereof will be an Encouragement to Trade, and for the common Good of the Undertaking, that the said Acts of 6 and 14 Geo. II. should be explained and amended, in the several other Particulars hereafter mentioned:

It is therefore enacted, that after May 20, 1744, the said several Rates of Tonnage, payable to the said Company of Proprietors, by the several Acts before recited, or either of them, shall be no longer payable; and that so much of the said Acts as relate to the Payment thereof, shall be absolutely repealed.

After May 25, 1744, there shall for ever be paid unto the said Company, and their Successors, or to their Collectors, for every Ship, Sloop, Hoy, Bark, Barge, Lighter, Boat, or other Vessel, coming into or going out of, or navigating in the River, and new Channel, with any Goods or Merchandise (Lead, Oysters, Slates, and paving Stones, excepted) by the Master or Owner of such Ship, &c. or other Vessel (every one of whom are by this Act made liable to the same) the several Rates, Tonnage, Keelage, or Duties, according to the full of their Reach and Burden, herein-after particularly described, for every Ton of Burden of such Ship, &c. or other Vessel, that is to say; For every Ship or other Vessel coming to, or going from, the City of Chester, or to, or from any other Place, between the City of Chester and Park-Gate, on the North Side of the River, and between the City of Chester and the Town of Flint, on the South Side of the River, to or from any Part of Great Britain, or Wales, or the other Places or Countries herein-after mentioned, the several Rates and Duties following; that is to say, For every Ship, Sloop, Hoy, Bark, Barge, Lighter, Boat, or other Vessel, going to, or coming from any Part of Great Britain or Wales, between the said City and St. David's Head, or Carlisle, for every Ton 2d. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from any Place between St. David's-Head and the Land's-End, or beyond Carlisle, to any Part in, or on this Side the Shetlands, or to, and from the Ile of Man for every Ton 3d. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from any Part of Ireland, for every Ton 4d. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from any Place, up the King's Channel, beyond the Land's-End, or beyond the Shetlands, for every Ton 4d. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from every Part of Norway, Denmark, Holstein, Holland, Hamburg, Flanders, or any Part of France without the Straits of Gibraltar, or the Islands of Guernsey or Jersey, for every Ton 8d. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from any Place in Newfoundland, Greenland, Russia, and within the Baltick, Portugal or Spain, without the Straits of Gibraltar, or the Islands of Guernsey, Azores, for every Ton 1s. And for every Ship, &c. going to, or coming from any Place in the West-Indies, Virginia, or any other Part of America, Africa, Europe or Asia, within the Straits, or not named before, any Part of Africa without the Straits, or Cape de Verde Isles, for every Ton 1s. and 6d. For every Sloop, Hoy, Bark, &c. carrying Goods from, or bringing Goods to, the City of Chester, or through any Part of the said new Channel, in Order to be put on board, or discharged from any Ship, &c. lying at Park-Gate, Flint, or any other Place within the Port of Chester, and below the said new Channel, made by the said Undertakers, for every Ton 2d. And so in Proportion for a greater or less Quantity than a Ton; such Duties to be paid at the Time of such Ship or other Vessel's Discharge, either inwards or outwards, at the Custom-house in the Port of Chester, so as no Ship or other Vessel shall be liable to pay the Duty but once for the said Voyage, both out and Home, notwithstanding such Ship or other Vessel may go and return back, with a Lading of any Goods or Merchandise.

And it being by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. (among other Things) provided, that if any Ship or Vessel, employed by the Cheefmongers of the City of London, in the Cheefe Trade to the City of Chester, should not go up to the City, or within any Parts of the intended Works of Navigation, but should have their lading put on board such Ship or Vessel, by Boats or Keels, 6d. per Ton, and no more, should be paid to the said Natbaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. by the Master or Owner of every such Boat or Keel, for all Cheefe or Lead, so to be put on board such Ship or Vessel, in full Satisfaction and Discharge of all Duties and Tonnage whatsoever; It is hereby further enacted, that after the 25th of May, 1744, the said Duty of 6d. per Ton, made payable by the above recited Proviso, shall cease, and be no longer payable; and that, in Lieu of the said Duty of 6d. per Ton, for such Boats or Keels, a Sum of 2d. per Ton, and no more, shall from May 25, 1744, be paid to the said Company, and their Successors, by the Master or Owner of every such Boat or Keel, carrying Cheefe, (Lead being exempted by this Act from the Payment of any Tonnage) to be put on board such Ship or Vessel, in full Satisfaction of all Duties and Tonnage whatsoever.

P. 583.

All Ships, &c. or other Vessels, coming into, or going out of the said River, and new Channel, and liable to the Payment of the Duties of Tonnage by this Act imposed, shall be measured, by taking the Length of the Keel, so much as the treads on the Ground, and the Breadth to be taken by the Midship Beam from Plank to Plank, and half that Breadth shall be accounted for the Depth of every such Ship or Vessel; then multiply the Length by the Breadth, and the Product thereof by the Depth, and divide the whole by ninety-four, and the Quotient shall give the true Contents of the Tonnage; according to which Method, all Ships, and other Vessels, shall be measured, and the several Duties of Tonnage thereby be computed, and collected accordingly.

If the Lading of any Ship, or other Vessel, which shall be liable to the Payment of the Duties of Tonnage, imposed and payable by this Act, according to the Burden of such Ship or other Vessel, by Admeasurement thereof, in Manner as before directed, shall consist partly of Lead, Oysters, Slates, or Paving Stones (which are exempted by this Act from the Payment of Tonnage) and partly of other Wares and Merchandizes, in respect whereof such Ship or Vessel will be liable to the Payment of the Duties and Tonnage by this Act imposed; in every such Case, there shall be a Deduction made from the Tonnage of every such Ship, or other Vessel, in Proportion to the Quantity of such Lead, Oysters, Slates, or Paving Stones, contained in every such Ship or other Vessel.

P. 584.

In all Cases where Skins or Wool shall be imported, such Skins or Wool shall pay the Rates of Tonnage by Weight only, and not according to the Burden of such Ship, or other Vessel by Admeasurement thereof; and where the Lading shall consist partly of Skins, or Wool, or both of them, and partly of other Wares and Merchandizes, in respect whereof such Ship or Vessel will be liable to the Payment of the Duties of Tonnage by this Act imposed, a Deduction shall be made from the Tonnage or Burden of such Ship, or other Vessel, in Proportion to the Weight of such Skins or Wool; and if any Dispute arises concerning the true Weight of such Skins or Wool; the Importer shall, at his own Costs and Charges, provide proper and convenient Weights, Beams, and Scales, for weighing the same.

P. 585.

If the Master, or other Person, taking Charge of any Sloop, Hoy, &c. carrying Goods from, or to the City of Chester, or through any Part of the said new Channel, in Order to be put on board, or discharged from any Ship or other Vessel, lying at Park-Gate, Flint, or any other Place within the said Port of Chester, and below the said new Channel, &c. or carrying any Goods from, or to the City of Chester, to, or from any Part of Wales, shall choose to pay the Duty, and Tonnage, according to the Weight and Quantity of the Goods, and not according to the Burden of the Sloop, &c. by the Admeasurement thereof; and such Master, &c. shall make such Declaration, upon entering of any such Sloop, &c. inwards or outwards; in such Case, the Duty and Tonnage shall be paid according to the Weight of the Goods, and not according to the Burden of such Sloop, &c. by Admeasurement thereof.

In

In Case any Dispute shall arise between the Collector of the Tonnage payable by this Act, and the Master or other Person having Charge of any Ship, or other Vessel, such Collector shall weigh, measure, or gauge all Goods, Wares, or Merchandizes, at the Time of the Shipping or unshipping thereof; and if such Goods shall, upon such Weighing, Measuring, or Gauging, appear to be of as great or greater Quantity than such Collector did affirm and insist the same to be, before the Weighing thereof, &c. the Master, &c. taking Charge of the said Vessel, shall pay the Costs and Charges of such Weighing, Measuring, &c.

The several Rates of Tonnage, payable by this Act, shall be paid by the Masters or Owners of every such Ship or Vessel, before they shall be cleared inwards or outwards, by any of the Officers of his Majesty's Customs, at the Port of Chester; and if any such Officer shall clear any Ship, until the Masters produce an Acquittance, or if any Master refuse, or neglect, to pay the said Duty, the Offender shall, for every Default, forfeit 20l. to the Company, &c.

The said Collectors may go on board any Ship, Hoy, &c. to take the Dimensions thereof, and to demand the Duties payable by this Act; and for Non-payment thereof, or Refusal to let such Officer take the Dimensions, he may distrain, and, after ten Days, sell the Distress, &c. P. 586.

It being provided by the Act 6 Geo. II. that Nataniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. shall make a Wet Dock for the Ships to lie in; and that there shall be paid to Nataniel Kinderley, &c. for every Ship or Vessel, laden within the said Dock, 9d. per Ton; the said Duty is hereby altered to 6d. per Ton, and no more, &c. P. 587.

The Term of three Years after completing the said Work of Navigation being expired, and the Trustees of the 10,000l. Deposit, having, by Sale of Part of the South-Sea Annuities, (in which the said 10,000l. was invested) raised and paid all the Monies that have been ordered to be paid by them, by Virtue of 6 Geo. II. and the Residue of the said Deposit, which, at present, consists of 7180l. 3s. 8d. Old South-Sea Annuity Stock, remaining in the Names of the said Thomas Revel and John Bland, the Survivors of the said Trustees (John Manley being dead;) It is enacted, that they shall, on or before the 25th Day of May, 1744, transfer to the Company and their Successors the said 7180l. 3s. 8d. remaining in their Hands or Names. P. 588.

The Tonnage Duties, arising by this Act, shall, at all Times hereafter, be liable to answer the Damages in the Act of 6 Geo. II. mentioned, under the same Regulations, and subject to be levied and applied to the same Uses, as the Duties of Tonnage, imposed by the same Act (and hereby repealed) were thereby made subject to. P. 589.

In Case the Tonnage Duties shall not be sufficient to pay such Damages, then all and singular the White Sands, and all other the Premises, by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. vested in Nataniel Kinderley, &c. and, by the said subsequent Act of 14 Geo. II. in the said Company, and their Successors, are hereby declared to be subject to the Payment, or Satisfaction, for all such Damages as shall be directed to be paid, in Pursuance of the said Act of 6 Geo. II.

The River being subject in dry Seasons to be filled up with Sand, so that, at a moderate Spring Tide, it may frequently happen, that there may not be sixteen Feet Water in every Part of the River, until the said Sands shall be removed, by the Freshes coming down the River; it is therefore enacted, that, instead of sixteen Feet Water, at a moderate Spring Tide, the said Company and their Successors shall, at all Times hereafter, maintain the said River Dee, from the Sea to Wilcox Point, that, on the Computation of a moderate Spring Tide, as marked on the Standard, there shall be fifteen Feet Water in every Part of the Channel, for Ships and Vessels to come and go, to and from the said City.

The Mayor, &c. of the City, shall appoint one proper Person, and the Company another, which Persons are hereby constituted the Supervisors of the Navigation of the River Dee, and each of them shall have full Power to sound the said River, or any Part thereof, for three successive Tides; as often as they shall be required so to do by the said Mayor, &c. or the said Company, or the Collectors appointed to receive the Tonnage; and if, upon any such Soundings so made, the Channel of any Part of the River shall appear to be choaked up, so that there would not, at a moderate Spring Tide (according to the Height marked on the Standard) be in the Channel of every Part of the River, from the Sea to Wilcox Point, fifteen Feet Water; and, in Case either of the Supervisors shall make an Affidavit thereof in Writing, before any Justice of the City or County of Chester, describing the particular Parts of the River which shall be too shallow, &c. and, if the said Company shall, for the Space of four Calendar Months, suffer the said River to continue choaked up, in that, on the Computation of a moderate Spring Tide, as marked on the said Standard, there shall not be fifteen Feet Water in the Channel, &c. as often as the said Event shall happen, the Payment of the Tonnage Rates shall be suspended, and not collected until the said Depth of fifteen Feet shall be regained; from which Time the Tonnage Duties shall be again revived, and become payable as before, and fo toties quoties.

17 Geo. II.
c. 591.

If the Company neglect to cleanse and deepen the River eight Months after the said Term of four Months shall be expired, so that, on a Computation of a moderate Spring Tide, &c. there shall not be fifteen Feet Water in the Channel, &c. the Commissioners impowered by the Act 6 Geo. II. at a Meeting to be held for that Purpose, of which twenty Days Notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and by fixing Notice in Writing on the Castle Gate of Chester, by Warrant under their Hands, shall appoint proper Persons, to enter into and upon the White Sands, Lands, &c. by this or the former Acts vested in the Company, and to take Possession thereof, and receive the Rents and Profits thereof, and to distrain for the same, as they shall see Occasion; till they have received so much Money, as shall be necessary to defray the Charges, occasioned by such Distress or Entry respectively, so as such Possession, Receipt of Rents, and Powers of Distress, shall not extend to avoid any Lease, which may hereafter be granted by the Company to any Tenant, at the improved Rent, without taking any Fine for the same, or to compel such Tenant to pay any more than the Arrears of Rent really due; and so as such Possession, Receipt of Rent, and Power of Distress, shall continue no longer than until the Depth of fifteen Feet shall be regained, and the Money expended in regaining thereof, and the Charges occasioned by such Entry, Possession, and Distress, shall be satisfied; and the Money so to be raised and received, shall be employed for those respective Purposes, as the major Part of the said Commissioners shall direct.

P. 592.

Provided, that no such Order made by the said Commissioners shall be binding, unless thirteen at least in Number shall be present at such Meeting.

The said Supervisors shall (if required) weekly sound the River, and shall make an Affidavit in Writing of the Truth of such Soundings.

The Supervisors shall, at the Expence of the Company, on or before the 29th of September, 1744, cause to be erected in such Parts of the River as they shall think fit, two or more Piles of Timber, or other durable Materials, to be therein fixed, so as the Tops thereof shall be exactly level with the Height of nine Feet above the Apron of the Ten Gate Sluice, as the same is marked on the Standard, which Piles and Standard shall for ever hereafter be kept in Repair, and renewed as Occasion shall require; and if any Person shall wilfully damage or destroy the same, they shall for every such Offence forfeit 200*l.* &c.

P. 596.

Two Ferry-Boats shall, at all Times after May 25, 1744, be constantly kept by the said Company and their Successors, at their own Expences, at such Parts of the new Channel, as the Ferry-Boats already appointed have worked at, since the making the said Navigation, with proper and sufficient Attendants, and all substantial and effectual Ropes, Tackle, and Necessaries proper thereunto, for the publick Use and Benefit of all his Majesty's Subjects, passing and re-passing in those Parts; and the Persons attending such Boats shall ferry over all Passengers; when required, without being paid any Thing for the same.

The Commissioners appointed by the Act 6 Geo. II. or any thirteen of them, at any of their Meetings, may set out one or more convenient Roads, in any Places over the Sands, Soil, and Ground, vested in the Company, lying on the North Side of the New Channel, within the Extent of the said Channel, to lead to and from the said two Ferries, or either of them, to the said City of Chester; and to the Towns of Shotwicke and Sbough-Hall, in the Hundred of Worral, in the the said County of Chester; and every such Road shall be for ever maintained and repaired at the Expence of the Company and their Successors.

If the said Company and their Successors shall neglect to maintain and repair the said Roads, or to supply such Ferry-Boats with sufficient Attendants, &c. on every such Neglect the said Commissioners, empowered by the Act of 6 Geo. II. may assess on the said Company such reasonable Penalty as they shall think fit, &c. 17 Geo. II.
P. 597.

The said Company, assembled in a general Court, shall have Power to call in from their Members proportionably, according to their respective Shares in the Capital Stock, any further Sums of Money, as by such general Court shall, from Time to Time, be judged necessary, not exceeding, with the Call of Five per Cent. already made pursuant to the said former Act, in the Whole the Sum of Forty per Cent. And if any Members, &c. who have or shall be required to pay in Money upon any Calls, &c. shall neglect to pay their Shares of the Money so called for, at the Time appointed, by Notice in the London Gazette, and on P. 598. the Royal Exchange in London, the said Company may not only stop the Share, Dividend, and Profit, which shall become payable to such Members so neglecting, and apply the same towards Payment of the Share of Money so called for, till the same shall be satisfied, but also may stop the Transfers, or Assignments of the Shares of every such Defaulter, with Interest after the Rate of Eight per Cent. per Ann. for the Money, so by them omitted to be paid, from the Time the same was appointed to be paid, until the Payment thereof; and the Shares and Stock-Shares, and Stocks of such Defaulters, shall be liable to make good the Monies so appointed to be paid, and Interest as aforesaid; and, if the Principal and Interest shall be unpaid, by the Space of three Months, then the Company, &c. shall have Power to sell and assign so much of the said Stock of such Defaulters, as will satisfy the same, rendering the Overplus (if any be) to the Proprietors; and the Money so called for and paid in, shall be deemed Capital Stock, &c.

The said Joint Stock of the said Company, created and established, in Pursuance of this and the former Act, and the Share and Interest of each particular Member thereof, shall be deemed, in all the Courts of Law and Equity, and elsewhere, to be a personal Estate to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever, and not a real Estate; and shall go to the Executors or Administrators of the Persons dying possessed thereof, interested in, or entitled thereto, and not to the Heirs of such Persons; and the Proprietors of the said Joint Stock, their Executors, &c. shall be respectively entitled to all the Benefits and Advantages by the first recited Act, vested in Nathaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. in Proportion to their respective Interests in the Joint Stock of the said Company.

The Method of assigning, transferring, and accepting of any Interest, in the said joint Stocks, shall be in the following Form, viz.

I A. B. in Consideration of paid to me by C. D. do hereby bargain, sell, assign, and transfer to the said C. D.

Which Transfer and Acceptance shall be signed in the Company's Books, to be kept for that Purpose; and it being witnessed by one Witness to the Signing thereof, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes.

Nothing in this Act, or in the Acts of 6 and 14 Geo. II. or either of them contained, shall extend to hinder or restrain Sir John Glynn, Bart. Lord of the Manor P. 600.

Manor of Hawarden in the County of Flint, his Heirs, &c. or any other Persons entitled to the right of Common thereon, from enjoying the Lands, Grounds, or Salt Marshes, lying on either Side of the Banks and Forelands of the new Channel, &c.

The new Channel, and the Banks, and Forelands on each Side thereof, and the Foreland of the Breadth of twenty Feet, next adjoining to the outside Foot of the North Bank of the new Channel, and so much more of the common Salt Marshes next adjoining to the said twenty-Foot-Foreland, as will be necessary for making a convenient Ditch or Mound, to fence and separate the said twenty-Foot-Foreland from the rest of the common Salt Marshes, and the several Pieces of Marsh Lands containing three Acres and five Acres, shall be for ever hereafter vested in the Company, &c. In consequence whereof, and as a Recompence for such Part of the Marsh-Lands, as are hereby vested in the Company, and of all other Damages done to the Common Salt Marshes, the said Company shall make good and keep in Repair the Foreland and Fences of the new Cut or Channel, so as thereby to prevent the Common Salt Marshes lying within the Manor or Parish of Hawarden, on either Side of the new Cut, from being destroyed or washed away, by the Flux or Reflux of Water through the said new Cut, or through the Gutters or other Inlets running through the Marshes; and in Case, at any Time hereafter, the Common Salt Marshes lying on either Side of the new Cut, and within the Manor or Parish of Hawarden, or any Part thereof, shall, in any one year, be so far injured or destroyed, by Reason of the said Forelands not being kept in Repair, or by Reason of the said Navigation, or of any Works to be made in Pursuance of the said Act 6 Geo. II. so that there shall be thereby, in any one Year, the Quantity of Fifty Acres or more of Land, Part of the said Salt Marshes, destroyed; from thenceforth, as often as the said Event shall happen, any fifteen or more of the Commissioners empowered by the said Act 6 Geo. II. or their Successors, who shall be present at any Meeting to be held for that Purpose, of which three Months Notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and by affixing Notice in Writing thereof on the Castle Gate of Chester, by Warrant under their Hands and Seals, may allot such Quantity of the Lands adjoining to the common Salt Marshes, by the former Act or one of them vested in the Company, as shall be equal in Value to such Part of the said Marshes, as shall have been so washed away, by way of Recompence for the same; the Lands so to be allotted to lie as near the common Salt Marshes as conveniently may be; which Determination of the Commissioners shall be final, and binding to all Parties interested, unless the Company, or the Lord of the Manor of Hawarden, or any Persons having Interest in the said Marshes, shall think themselves thereby aggrieved, and shall make Application to the next Court of great Session for the County of Flint, to have the Value of the Lands determined by a Jury; in which Case, the Justices of the said Court of great Session shall cause the Value of the Land so destroyed, and of the Lands to be given in Lieu thereof, to be settled, assessed, decreed, and ascertained by the same Rules and Methods, by which, by the Act of 6 Geo. II. they are empowered and directed to settle the Damage therein mentioned; and such Determination of the Justices of the said great Session shall not be removed, but binding and conclusive to all Intents and Purposes, &c. and the Lands so decreed in Lieu for such Part of the said common Salt Marshes, which shall, by the Means aforesaid, be destroyed, shall for ever thereafter be the Property and Inheritance of, and be enjoyed by the same Persons and their Heirs who were before entitled to a right of Common in the said Salt Marshes, under the like Limitations, and with the like Advantage as they might have held the said Marshes in Case they had not been destroyed; and, according to their respective Estates therein, discharged from the Rights of Entry and Distress, of any other Person whatsoever; but the same shall not avoid any Lease, which may be hereafter really granted by the Company to any Tenant or Occupier of any Part of the said Lands for any Term of Years not exceeding twenty-one, at the improved Rent, without taking any Fine, or to compel such Tenant to pay any more than the Rent reserved on such Lease; and, if the common Salt Marshes, which, by the Means aforesaid, shall, in any one Year, be destroyed, shall not exceed fifty Acres, the Commissioners appointed by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. or any Jury to be appointed in Pursuance of the said Act, shall decree what Recompence shall be paid by the Company, or their Successors, which Recompence shall be paid to the Lord of the Manor of Hawarden, for the Time being, the Rector of the Parish of Hawarden, for the Time being, and to Thomas Powis, &c. and shall be by them applied for the Use of the Lord of the said Manor, and the Persons having a right of Common in the common Salt Marshes, lying within the said Manor of Hawarden, as the said Commissioners; &c. with the Consent of the Lord of the said Manor, &c. shall direct or appoint; which Damages the Lord of the said Manor is hereby impowered to claim and make out accordingly; and, if the Company, or the Lord of the Manor, shall be dissatisfied with the Determination of the Commissioners, they are hereby respectively impowered to apply to the Justices at the next great Session to be held for the County of Flint, &c.

The Company shall keep five Ways, of the Breadth of twenty Feet each, and at the Distance of one Mile, or thereabouts, from each other, over the Ditch or Mound which is intended to fence the Bank and Forelands on the North Side of the River, from the rest of the Salt Marshes, for the Cattle feeding on the Salt Marshes, on the North Side of the Channel, to go to and from the said Channel to Water. 17 Geo. II.

A Survey of the Marsh Lands on the South Part of the new Cut, and of the Gutters and other Receptacles of Water therein, shall, on or before Sept. 29, 1744, be taken by two Surveyors, one to be appointed by the Company, and the other by the Lord of the Manor of Hawarden, who shall truly survey and admeasure the same, and make an exact Plan thereof, distinguishing what Parts thereof are firm Land, and what are Gutters or waste Lands; and the Surveyors shall within one Month after Sept. 29, transmit an attested Copy of such Plan, under their Hands, to the Clerk of the Peace of the County of Chester, to be kept among the Records of the said County, to which all Persons may have recourse, gratis, &c.

If any of the said Gutters or waste Land, to be described in the Survey, shall hereafter be filled up, and become firm Land and grassed over, it shall be set against the like Quantity of the Marsh Lands which shall be washed away; and the said Company shall be obliged to make a Recompence only for the Residue of the said Marsh Lands, which may be destroyed as aforesaid. P. 604

It shall not be lawful for the Company, or their Under-tenants, &c. at any Time hereafter, to build Cottages on the said Pieces of Marsh Land, containing three Acres, and five Acres, or on the Banks or Forelands on either Side of the new Cut, or on the Foreland of 20 Feet in Breadth herein-before declared to be vested in the Company, without the Licence of the Lord of the Manor within which the same shall lie, first obtained in Writing under his Hand and Seal; and the said Company, &c. shall not have any right of Common on the said common Salt Marshes, as appendant to the Soil of the new Cut, or the Banks or Forelands thereof, &c.

This Act shall not extend to prejudice the Proprietors, of any Royalties and Liberties of Fishing and Fowling upon the River, &c.

Nothing herein, or in the said Act of 6 Geo. II. contained, shall extend to hinder Sir John Glynn, Owner of the Castle and Manor of Hawarden, or his Heirs, from enjoying all such Rights and Privileges, Royalties and Jurisdictions, as he or his Ancestors might have done, in Case this or the said former Act had never been made; so that such Rights, &c. do not infringe on the Right and Powers given the Undertakers by the said Act. P. 607.

Nothing in this Act shall affect any Right or Property that John Theedam, of the Inner Temple, London, Gent. his Heirs, &c. hath or have to the White Sands, Lands, and Hereditaments in the former Act of 6 Geo. II. mentioned; but the said Rights, &c. shall remain to him, his Heirs, &c. for ever, as if this Act had never been made.

No Person shall hang any Net or other Engine in, over, or across the Channel of the said River, or fix any Stakes in the same, or on the Banks thereof, to the Prejudice of the Channel, or Hindrance of the Navigation.

Nothing in this Act contained shall take away or lessen the Powers given by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. to the Commissioners appointed in Pursuance of the said Act; but they shall have the same Powers and Authorities as they had before the making this Act; and all other Clauses and Things in the said Act of 6 and 14 Geo. II. which are not hereby repealed or varied, are ratified and confirmed.

17 Geo. II.
P. 609.

All Actions and Suits at any Time heretofore commenced or prosecuted in any Courts of Law or Equity, between the Mayor and Citizens of the said City, and the Company, or between any of the Merchants and Traders of the City, or other Persons, and the said Company, relating to any of the Matters aforesaid, and depending at the Time of passing this Act, shall immediately cease and be discontinued; and no Actions or Suits shall be hereafter commenced or carried on by the Company against the Mayor and Citizens of the said City, in Respect of the Use or Occupation, or of the Rents or Profits of such Part of the Road, as by the said Act of 6 Geo. II. was vested in Natbaniel Kinderley, his Heirs, &c. antecedent to the said 25th Day of May, 1744, or against any of the Merchants or Traders of the City of Chester, or any Persons, on Account of any Sums of Money due for any of the Duties or Tonnage made payable by the said recited Act of 6 Geo. II. and hereby repealed, as aforesaid, or upon any Security given for the same.

P. 610.

All Actions commenced for any Thing done in Pursuance of this Act shall be brought within twelve Months after the Fact committed, and laid in the County where the Cause of Action shall arise, &c.

26 Geo. II.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.
This Act recites the former, and confirms an Agreement entered into between the Company, Sir John Glynn, and others, as to Right of Common and other Affairs; and likewise as to Allowance of a certain Sum of Money to Sir John Glynn, for making a new Bank with one or more Sluices, and to keep the same in Repair; and likewise impowers the Company to make a Call not exceeding 20 per Cent. more than was allowed by the last Act.

LOYNE or LUNE, and LANCASTER.

23 Geo. II.
P. 259.

The Preamble sets forth, That the Town of Lancaster in the County Palatine of Lancaster, from its great and extensive Commerce to the West Indies, and other foreign Parts, is now become a very considerable Port, and has, for some Time past employed, and maintained great Numbers of Ships and Mariners, to the great Advancement of the Revenue, and the Improvement of the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom: And that the Navigation of the River Loyne (otherwise call'd Lune) is become very difficult and dangerous; and that the only Place near the Town, where Ships can be moored and discharged, is, by Reason of the Shoals, and other Obstructions in the Soil of the River, become very unfit and unsafe for that Purpose, insomuch that many Ships and Vessels stationed there have been overset and damaged: And it is conceived to be highly necessary for the Benefit and Improvement of the said Navigation, that a Quay or Wharf, with other conveniences, should be built on the South West Side of the River, and that Buoys should be placed at the Entrance into, and in other Parts of the River, and Land-Marks erected for directing of Ships; and that a Place of Safety should be made for the Harbouring and Protection of the Shipping, near the Mouth of the River: And that the Rev. James Fenton, L. L. D. Vicar of the Parish Church of Lancaster, is, in Right thereof, seized of divers Parcels of Land and Ground, which are commodiously situated for the Purpose aforesaid; and that the Right Rev. Samuel, Lord Bishop of Chester, the Ordinary, Edward Marton, Esq. Patron of the Advowson of the Vicarage of the said Church, and the said James Fenton, the present Incumbent, have respectively agreed, that the said Parcels of Ground shall be disposed of, for the Purposes herein-after-mentioned, subject to the Rents, Reservations, and Restrictions herein-after expressed: Wherefore, for promoting and carrying on a Design so beneficial, It is enacted that all that Parcel of Land, being Part of a certain Close, called the Bridge Field, belonging to the Church of Lancaster, and containing three Roods, and thirty-two Perches; and also that Parcel of Land, being Part of another Close, called the Hay Field, belonging also to the said Church, and containing thirty-two Perches; and also that Parcel of Land called the Summer Pasture, belonging also to the said Church, and containing about three Acres, five Roods, and thirty-two Perches, situate and contiguous to the South-West Side of the River Loyne, with their Rights, Members, and Appurtenances, shall, from and after 28 April, 1750, be vested in Abraham Rawlinson, William Butterfield, and John Bowes, Merchants of Lancaster, their Heirs and Assigns, absolutely discharged of all Claims, &c. from the said James Fenton, and his Successors, Vicars of the said Parish Church, for ever; to the Uses and Trusts herein-after mentioned, viz. to the Intent that the said James Fenton, and his Successors, Vicars of the said Church, shall enjoy, out of the same Premises, the annual Rent of 14*l.* 14*s.* free of all Deductions whatever, by four Quarterly Payments, to be made on May 1, 23 Geo. II. August 1, November 1, and February 1, in every Year, for ever; the first Payment P. 262. to be made on May 1, 1750. And, if the said annual Sum shall be unpaid for twenty Days after any of the Times before limited for Payment thereof, the said Vicar, and his Successors, may enter and distrain upon the Premises, and make Sale of the Distress, and receive the Issues, till the said Rent, and all Arrears, with the Costs and Charges, and all Damages, be fully paid.

The Parcels of Land before mentioned and described shall go to the Use of the said Abraham Rawlinson, William Butterfield, and John Bowes, their Heirs, &c. in Trust, that the same be employed as a Quay or Wharf, and for such other Purposes, and under such Directions, as are herein-after prescribed.

When any of the Trustees, in whom the Lands are vested, shall die, the Commissioners and Trustees, appointed for other Purposes of this Act, are to nominate another, &c.

The Commissioners and Trustees appointed for the Purposes herein-after mentioned, are to cause the Parcels of Ground aforesaid to be divided from the other Parts of the Vicarage Lands by a good and sufficient Stone Wall, two Yards high above the Ground, next the Church, to be built with Lime and Sand, and to extend from a Stile, to be in like Manner built and made, at their Expence, to the End of a Garden Wall (adjoining to the Town of Lancaster) now belonging to Mary Majon, Widow, through and over the Bridge Field and Hay Field, to the Fence that divides the Hay Field from the Summer Pasture; and they are to keep up and repair (as often as Occasion requires) the said Fence, Wall, and Stile, and all the Hedges, Ditches, Mounds, and Fences, separating the Lands settled by this Act from the rest of the Vicarage Lands, so as to prevent any Trespasses or Damages to be done to the said Vicar or his Successors; and they are also to cause a sufficient Watering Place, or Reservoir of Water, to be made in such convenient Part in the said Bridge Field (not settled by this Act) as the said James P. 264: Fenton shall appoint, for watering the Cattle, depasturing in the Vicarage Lands; and in Case of any Overflow thereof, the Waters are to be turned into the River Loyne, at their Expence, upon Application made to any of them for that Purpose, so as to prevent any Damage to be done to the said Lands; and upon their Refusal or Neglect so to do, the Vicar and his Successors may turn off the said Water or Watering Place into the River, by such Ways, and in such Manner, as he shall think proper.

The Occupiers of such Parts of the Vicarage Lands as are not settled by this Act, shall have the Liberty of taking Sand all along the Close called the Summer Pasture, betwixt the Banks thereof and the Low-Water Mark in the River Loyne, in order to cultivate the said Lands, with free Liberty of Ingress and Regress for that Purpose; and of driving their Cattle, depasturing in the Vicarage Lands, over the Summer Pasture, to Water; the Ways for these Purposes to be appointed by the Commissioners and Trustees, and by the Vicar; and, upon their Refusal or Neglect to comply therewith, the Vicar may appoint such Ways for the Purposes above as he shall think proper, and he and his Tenants may make Use thereof; and the Vicar (until the Division-Wall above described is built and finished) is to have the Herbage of such Parts of the said Bridge Field and Hay Field, as are above mentioned, and intended to be allotted to the Quay; and no Doors or Ways P. 265. are to be opened through the Division-Wall or Fence, without the Licence of the Vicar for the Time being.

The Mayor of Lancaster for the Time being, Francis Reynolds, Edward Marston, Esqrs. &c. are appointed Commissioners and Trustees for executing the Powers and Purposes of this Act, until the first Wednesday in May, 1755, &c.

Such

23 Geo. II.
P. 266.

Such Merchants or other Persons as shall, in his or their own Right for the Time being, be possessed of a Sixteenth, or other greater Part of any Vessel of the Burthen of fifty Tons or upwards, then actually belonging to the Town or Port of Lancaster, are impowered to meet at the Exchange on the first Wednesday in May, 1755, and so on every first Wednesday in the said Month, in every third Year, for ever, and nominate sixteen substantial Inhabitants of the Town, to be joined with the Mayor for the Time being, to be Commissioners and Trustees for building a Quay or Wharf, with all other necessary Works and Conveniences upon the Premises settled by this Act, and for letting or otherwise disposing of the same for the Advantage of the said Navigation; and for making Places of Security by erecting Piers or Moles at the Mouth of the River for the Preservation of the Shipping, and for doing all Matters and Things which they shall think requisite for improving the Navigation of the said River Loyne, and for the other Purposes of this Act.

P. 267.

From and after the 30th of April, 1750, there shall be paid unto the Commissioners and Trustees, or their Collectors, for the Term of twenty-one Years, for every Vessel coming into or going out of the River Loyne, between Lancaster Bridge and the Perch at Cockersand Abbey (Ships of War, and other Vessels in his Majesty's Service, and Ships driven in by Strefs of Weather, and not lading or unlading within the Port, and Ships laden with Coal or other Fuel, only excepted) the several Duties of Tonnage following, viz.

P. 278.

N. B. The Reason of this advanced Number is because this was put in a Schedule after the Act.

For every Ship or Vessel coming into or going out of the Port of Lancaster, and trading to or from any Port or Place in Europe within the Straits or Mediterranean Sea, or in Africa, America, or Greenland, 1s. for every Ton of the Burthen of such Ship.

For every Ship or Vessel coming into or going out of the said Port, and trading to or from any foreign Port or Place in Europe (except Ireland, the Isle of Man, and the Straits, or Mediterranean Sea) 8d. for every Ton of the Burthen of such Ship.

For every Ship, Vessel, Bark, or Lighter, coming into or going out of the said Port, and trading to or from any Port or Place in Great-Britain, situate South of Holyhead, or North of the Mull of Galloway, 6d. for every Ton of the Burthen of such Ship or Vessel.

For every Ship, Vessel, Bark, or Lighter, coming into or going out of the said Port, and trading to or from any Port or Place in Ireland, to the Isle of Man, 4d. for every Ton of the Burthen of such Ship or Vessel.

For every Ship, Vessel, Bark, or Lighter, coming into or going out of the said Port, and trading to or from any Port or Place in Great-Britain, North of Holyhead, or South of the Mull of Galloway, 2d. for every Ton of the Burthen of such Ship or Vessel.

And for every Ship, Vessel, Bark, or Lighter, coming in Ballast into the said River Loyne, and not lading or unlading within the said Port, for every Ton one fourth Part of the Rates charged on any Ship or Vessel of the same Burthen.

The Duties are to be paid at such Time and Place as the Commissioners and Trustees shall appoint; but no Vessel is liable to pay the Duties inwards and outwards for the same Voyage.

P. 268.

All Vessels, subject to the Payment of the said Duties, are to be measured according to the Rules of Admeasurement laid down in the Act of 6 Geo. I. intitled, An Act for preventing Frauds and Abuses in the publick Revenues of Excise, Customs, &c. and the Duties of Tonnage are to be computed accordingly.

After the Expiration of the Term of twenty-one Years, one Moiety of the said Duties is to cease, and the other Moiety is to be continued, and paid in the Manner aforesaid, for keeping the Quay and other Works in Repair.

P. 269.

No Officer of the Customs of the Port of Lancaster shall clear any Vessel until the Master produces a Certificate of the Payment of the Duties of this Act, &c.

The Commissioners and Trustees are impowered to make Bye-Laws, &c. and to contract bonâ fide for building the Quay, &c.

The Commissioners, &c. are impowered to borrow a Sum not exceeding 2000l. on the Duties, at 5 per Cent. per Ann. wherewith to make the new intended Quay, &c.

The Collectors are empowered to go on board any Vessel to measure her, and demand the Duties, and for Non-Payment, &c. may detain; and, after ten Days, sell the Distress, &c. 23 Geo. II. P. 272.

All Persons who shall have any Business to transact upon the said Quay or Wharf in the Mercantile Way or otherwise, and for the Benefit of lading and unloading Vessels on the South West Side of the River Loyne, may pass and repass freely through the Custom-house Yard with Carriages, and otherwise, to and from the said Quay, as need shall require.

The Commissioners, &c. for the unloading any Vessel that may come on Ground on the Seale Ford, or on the Shoals thereabouts, may open a Road out of the Summer Pasture aforesaid, over Lancaster Marsh, over which all Persons in the mercantile Way may pass and repass with Carriages, as Occasion shall require, to and from the Quay at Lancaster. P. 473;

The Commissioners, &c. may agree for the Purchase of the Weigh-house, standing in the Custom-house Yard, with the Appurtenances; and use the Site and Soil thereof, for the making the new Quay aforesaid, and dispose of the Materials for such Purposes as they shall think requisite.

The Commissioners, &c. may contract for the Purchase of the Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, which shall be adjudged necessary and convenient for the Purposes aforesaid, &c. And this Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

S O U T H W O U L D.

The Preamble sets forth, that there had been, for Time immemorial, a Sea Port or Harbour for Shipping at Southwold, in the County of Suffolk, which is situated very conveniently, not only for the Preservation of Vessels navigating in the British Seas, but also for the Importation and Exportation of many useful Commodities, and for the Benefit of Trade in general; but that the Road lying before the said Port is so obstructed with Sand, as to prevent laden Vessels, except such as are of a very small Burden, from passing into or out of the Harbour; to the End therefore the said Harbour may be opened, and made commodious for Shipping, and be of publick Utility to the Trade and Commerce of this Kingdom, It is enacted, that from the 25 of March, 1747, for the Term of twenty-one Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, there shall be paid unto the Commissioners and Trustees for the Purposes of this Act, or to such Person as seven of them shall appoint, under their Hands and Seals, the Rates and Duties herein-after mentioned, for and towards the Opening, Cleansing, Scouring, Widening, Deepening, Repairing, and Improving, &c. the said Harbour, viz. P. 432;

For every English Ship or Vessel, which shall sail into the said Harbour and shall neither lade nor unlade there, the Sum of 1*d.* 2*q.* per Ton, according to their light Bills.

For every Chaldron of Coals, Culm, and Cinders, exported or imported, laid on board of, or landed or discharged out of, any English Vessel in the Port of Southwold, the Sum of 1*s.*

For every Last of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Malt, Oats, and other Grain, exported or imported, &c. in any English Vessel, the Sum of 1*s.*

For every Ton of Rock Salt, exported or imported, &c. in any English Vessel, the Sum of 1*s.*

For every Hoghead of Wine, Brandy, Rum, or other spirituous Liquor, exported or imported, &c. in any English Vessel, the Sum of 1*s.*

For every Ton of Chalk, imported there to be burnt into Lime, for any other Purpose than that of manuring Land, the Sum of 1*d.*

For every Firkin of Butter, and for every Weigh of Cheese, exported or imported, the Sum of 1*d.*

For every Ton of Grocery Wares, and other Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes, Fish, Butter, and Cheese, only excepted exported, or imported, &c. in any English Vessel, the Sum of 1*s.* 6*d.*

For every Ton of Lead, exported or imported, &c. in any English Vessel, the Sum of 1*s.*

23 Geo. II.
P. 433.

For every greater or less Quantity of any of the said Goods or Merchandizes than what are before-mentioned, proportionably to the Prices herein-before set.

For every foreign Vessel which shall sail into the said Harbour, and shall not lade or unlade there, and for all Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes, which shall be exported or imported, laden on board of, or discharged from out of, any such Vessel in the said Port, double the Duties herein-before laid.

Which Sums shall be paid at the landing or shipping off the said Commodities; and, in Default thereof, the Collector of the said Duties may go on board and distrain such Vessel, with her Tackle and Furniture, or the Goods and Merchandizes, or any Part thereof, and make Sale of the same; and no Custom-house Officer shall clear any Vessel, till the Master produces a Certificate of having paid the Duties, &c.

P. 434.

The Monies collected, after deducting the Expences of obtaining this Act, shall be employed for the Opening, Cleaning, Scowering, &c. of the said Haven and Harbour, and for opening any Rivers or Creeks for letting in Streams of Water to drive the Sand and other Obstructions out of the Harbour, and for keeping it open, clear, and in good Repair, and shall not be diverted to any other Use, except the Charge of collecting the same, which shall not exceed 6d. in the Pound.

In Order to raise Money sufficient for the speedy cleaning, &c. the said Haven and Harbour, the Majority of the Trustees may mortgage the Profits arising by the Duties for such Sums as they shall borrow for that Purpose, &c.

P. 435.

The Bailiffs of the Borough of Southwold, for the Time being, and Sir John Rous, Sir Charles Blois, Sir Robert Kemp, Barons, &c. shall be Commissioners and Trustees for the Execution of this Act.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

BORROWSTOUNNESS.

17 Geo. II.
P. 439.

The Town of Borrowstounness, in the County of Linlithgow in Scotland, is very well situated for carrying on foreign and coasting Trade, for the Benefit of the Country thereabouts in general, and of the said Town in particular, there being many Coal and Salt Works very near, but these Advantages cannot be obtained, unless the Harbour, which is now in a ruinous Condition, be effectually repaired and made commodious for all such Persons as shall make Use of the same, which will require a very considerable Sum of Money, and the Town hath no Revenue to answer the Expence thereof; It is therefore enacted, that, after the first Day of June, 1744, for the Term of twenty-five Years, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, there shall be laid a Duty of two Pennies Scots, or one sixth Part of a Penny Sterling, over and above the Duty of Excise payable to his Majesty, &c. upon every Scots Pint of Ale and Beer, that shall be brewed, brought in, tapped, or sold within the said Town of Borrowstounness, or the Liberties thereof; and that the said Duty shall be made payable by the Brewers for Sale, or Sellers of all such Ale and Beer, to James Main, James Castles, William Muir, &c. who are hereby appointed Trustees for deepening, rebuilding, and improving the said Harbour and Piers, and also for putting in Execution all other the Powers by this Act given; and the Money so to be collected, shall be vested in the said Trustees and the Survivors of them; and shall be applied to the several Purposes aforesaid, the reasonable Charges of passing this present Act being first deducted.

P. 440.

The Trustees have a Power to mortgage the Duties for raising of Money, &c.

ELLENFOOT.

22 Geo. II.
P. 201.

The Preamble sets forth, that the Harbour of Ellenfoot, in the County of Cumberland, though situated very conveniently for the Coal Trade carried on in that County, is not, in its present Condition, capable of receiving and harbouring Vessels sufficient for that Purpose; but, in Case a new Pier and other Works were erected, it might be made a proper and sufficient Harbour for the Reception and Safeguard of Vessels navigating in those Seas; which would not only be a Means of extending the said Coal Trade; but would contribute also to the Increase of his Majesty's Customs, and the Improvement of Trade and Navigation in general; but, as a sufficient Sum of Money cannot be raised to defray the Expences thereof, without the Aid and Authority of Parliament,

It is enacted, that, from and after the 25th of March, 1749, during the Term of twenty-one Years, there shall be paid to the Commissioners and Trustees herein after named, their Collectors or Deputies, viz. Humphrey Simbous, Esq; and the Lord of the Manor of Elkinborough for the Time being, Sir Charles Windham, &c. for and towards the amending, enlarging, deepening, and cleansing the said Harbour, and erecting a Pier, and other proper Works, and maintaining and repairing the same, the Rates and Duties following, viz. By every Proprietor of Coals, his, her, or their principal Servant or Agent, employed in shipping any Coals on board any Vessel in the said Harbour 2d. for every 192 Gallons, to be paid within ten Days after such Coals are shipped; and also by every Master of any Ship that shall load or take any Coals on board there, 2d. for every 192 Gallons; and, from and after the Expiration of the said Term of twenty-one Years, 1d. for every 192 Gallons of Coals that shall be shipped there, to be paid by the Master of the Vessel; the said respective Sums of 2d. for twenty-one Years, and 1d. afterwards, for so long Time as the said Harbour and other Works provided for by this Act, shall be kept up in good Repair, to be paid by the Master of the Vessel upon reasonable Demand, after shipping the said Coals, and before such Ship goes out of the Harbour, or proceeds on her Voyage.

21 Geo. II.

From and after the 25th of March, 1749, during the Term of twenty-one Years, the Master, &c. of any Vessel, not taking on board a Lading of Coals, shall pay 6d. per Ton, according to her Tonnage, for such Ship upon her Arrival in the said Harbour, from Great-Britain or Ireland, or the Isle of Man; the Tonnage to be ascertained in the Manner described by an Act of 5 and 6 Will. and Mar. intitled, An Act for granting to their Majesties several Rates and Duties upon Tonnage of Ships and Vessels, and upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for securing certain Recompences and Advantages in the said Act mentioned, &c.

Four Pence per Ton shall be paid by the Master of every Vessel which, during the Term aforesaid, shall be driven by Strefs of Weather into the Harbour of Ellenfoot, or shall come there for Security or Preservation; and shall not take in a Lading of Coals; and, after the Expiration of the said Term of twenty-one Years, one third Part of the Duties rated upon the Tonnage of Ships shall be paid in Manner aforesaid, for so long Time as the Harbour and other Works shall be kept in good Repair. P. 206.

The Monies received shall be applied towards amending, enlarging, deepening, and cleansing the said Harbour, and keeping the same and the Pier, and other Works, continually in good Repair; and shall not be employed to any other Use, &c. P. 207.

If the Duties payable by the Proprietors, who shall ship any Coals aboard any Vessels at Ellenfoot, shall not be paid within ten Days after shipping thereof, the Collector, by Warrant from two or more Commissioners, may distrain all such Coals, &c. and sell them in three Days, deducting the Duties, &c. P. 208.

If the Collector and the Master of any Vessel, charged with the said Duties, cannot agree about and adjust the Tonnage, the Collector may, at all Times convenient and seasonable, enter into and admeasure such Ship, according to the Directions of the Act referred to, which Admeasurements shall be the Rule to charge the Vessel then, and at all Times afterwards; and if any Master, taking in Coals as aforesaid, shall not, upon reasonable Demand, pay the Duty; and if any Master of a Vessel, chargeable according to the Tonnage thereof, shall not upon like Demand, after the said Tonnage is agreed unto or ascertained, pay the Duty, the Collector may distrain any Tackle, Apparel, or Furniture, in, upon, or belonging to such Vessel, and sell the same within three Days, deducting the Duties, and Charges, &c. P. 209.

No Officer whatsoever of his Majesty's Customs shall clear any Vessel, until the Master produces a Certificate of having paid the Duties, &c. P. 210.

The Commissioners, or seven of them, may contract with any Workmen, &c. bonâ fide, for doing all other Part of the Work, and are empowered to appoint the

the Place for building the Pier, and enlarging the Harbour, upon such Ground adjoining to the River Ellen, or the South West Side nigh Ellenfoot, as they shall think most convenient and necessary, &c.

For the more speedy completing the said Works, the Commissioners, or seven of them, are impowered to borrow, at 5 per Cent. Interest, any Sum not exceeding 2000*l.* Sterling; and to assign over the Duties, by Indenture under the Hands and Seals of nine of them, as a Security for Repayment of the Principal and Interest.

21 Geo. II.

The Money so borrowed shall be applied by the Commissioners, in the first Place, for discharging so much of the Expences attending the obtaining an Act for the amending and repairing the said Pier and Harbour, as shall be deficient; and afterwards for the enlarging, cleaning, and repairing, &c. the said Pier and Harbour of Ellenfoot.

If the Duties of 2*d.* for ever, 192 Gallons of Coals, to be paid by the Proprietors, and by the Masters of Ships, and also the Duties upon Tonnage, respectively granted for twenty-one Years, shall raise the principal Money and Interest provided for, and to be borrowed on the Credit of this Act, and also the Charges of collecting the said Duties, before the End of the Term of twenty-one Years, then the said several Duties shall cease; and from thenceforth, or from the Expiration of the said Term of twenty-one Years, which shall first happen, only the Duty of 1*d.* for every 192 Gallons of Coals, as aforesaid, and one third Part of the Duties on Tonnage, shall continue as aforementioned, to be applied for repairing, cleansing, and maintaining the said Pier and Harbour, &c.

WEYMOUTH and MELCOMBE REGIS.

22 Geo. II.
P. 499.

The Preamble sets forth, that the Mayor, Aldermen, Burgesses, and Commonalty of the Borough and Town of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, in the County of Dorset, have, for Time immemorial, received, and been entitled to receive, petty Customs, or Wharfage Duties, upon the Importation and Exportation of all Goods and Merchandizes into, and out of, the Harbour of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, and also Harbour Dues and Ballast Duty, which several Duties have been constantly under the Management of the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. of the said Town, as Trustees and Managers, and have been applied for repairing the Harbour, Quays, Wharfs, and other publick Buildings and Works, within the said Borough and Town: And whereas of late Years several Persons have refused to pay the said Duties, and have been induced thereto by Means of the great Difficulties in supporting, by strict and legal Evidence, prescriptive Claims and Rights to Duties on each particular Species of Goods, and the precise Sums payable for the same; and although the said Corporation, in Support of their Right, have brought several Actions, and obtained Verdicts of Damages, by which their Right in general hath been established; yet, by the Expences in carrying on such Suits, and the many Evasions and Refusals of Payment, the Fund for repairing the said Harbour, Quays and Wharfs, and other publick Buildings and Works, hath been considerably lessened; and the said Wharfs, &c. will be entirely destroyed, if not timely prevented: For Remedy whereof, It is enacted, that, from and after the 24th of June, 1749, the respective Rates, Duties, and Customs, enumerated in the Schedules hereunto annexed, shall be paid by all Persons whatsoever, on the Importation and Exportation of all Goods, Wares, Merchandizes, and Commodities, into and out of the said Harbour of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, and for all Vessels coming into the said Harbour, to the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. of the said Town and Borough; and no other Rates whatsoever, either under the Denomination of or under a Claim to a Wheelage Duty or otherwise; and the said Schedules are to be deemed as Part of this Act; and the said Corporation are impowered to meet, from Time to Time, and to appoint, under their Hands, a Collector of the Rates, a Quay-Master, and a Treasurer, and to remove them at Pleasure; and also to appoint each of the said Officers such a reasonable Salary, as they shall think proper, out of the Rates, not exceeding 2*s.* in the Pound of the Money respectively received by them.

P. 500.

The said Magistrates shall be answerable for the Acts and Receipts of the said <sup>22</sup> Ch. II. Officers, and shall take Security of each of them, &c. P. 502.

The Collectors and Treasurers shall keep Books, and the said Magistrates shall meet yearly, on the Friday next after the 24th of June, between Eight and Twelve in the Forenoon, in the Guild-Hall of the Town of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, or oftener if they shall think fit, and shall then summon the said Officers, and audit their Accompts, &c.

The Duties and Customs imposed by this Act, upon Importation, may be demanded by the said Magistrates, their Collector, &c. either of the respective Proprietors, or from the Keeper of any Warehouse wherein the Goods shall be deposited, upon the first Landing, or to whom the same shall be delivered, or who shall take Charge thereof, or shall carry off the same from the Wharfs or Quay, at the Election of the Persons authorized to receive the same; and also the Duties and Customs upon Exportation of Goods, except for such Stone only as shall be taken out of one Vessel into another in the said Harbour, may be demanded from the Waggoner, Carter, Carrier, or other Persons bringing or delivering the same on board, at the Option of the Receiver of the said Rates: and also the Duties upon Vessels, coming into the said Harbour, and for such Stone as shall be taken out of one Vessel into another in the said Harbour, may be demanded of the Masters, or Persons having Charge of such Ships. P. 503.

On Non-payment of the Rates within twenty-four Hours after Demand, the said Magistrates are empowered to sue for and recover the same by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information, in any of the Courts of Record at Westminster, &c. P. 504.

All Masters of Vessels, coming into or going out of the said Harbour, shall, as soon as conveniently may be, deliver to the Collector, at his Request, his Wharfage Bill, or a true Account of all Goods on board, and shall permit him to take a Copy thereof, at his own Expence, under Penalty of forfeiting 5*l.* for every such Offence, &c. P. 505.

The Quay Masters, for the more commodious lading and unlading Vessels, or taking in or casting out Ballast, shall order all Masters, and other Persons having Charge of any Vessels, lying in the said Port or Harbour, to station, anchor, and moor the same, in such proper Births, near unto or adjoining the said Wharfs or Quays, as they shall appoint; and if any Master of any Vessel shall refuse to comply with such Orders, he shall forfeit 40*s.* &c.

As often as any Damage shall happen to be done to the Bridge, Wharfs, or Quays, by any Vessel breaking loose from its Moorings, through Default of the Mariners; the Mayor, &c. or any three of them, upon the same being notified to them upon Oath, shall detain such Vessel till the Damage be ascertained and adjusted by three indifferent Persons upon Oath; and, if it shall appear to them that the Damage has been done through wilful Default or Neglect, they shall liquidate the Sum payable for the same, and return their Adjudication, signed by them, unto the Mayor, &c. who shall thereupon summon the Master of such Vessel, and demand Payment; and, upon Non-payment thereof, within three Days after Demand, they shall distrain the Vessel, and all her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture; and, within three Days after, Payment not being then made, the Collector, or Quay Master, by a written Order from the Mayor, &c. shall sell the same, &c. P. 506.

All the Monies to be raised by this Act, and all Penalties and Forfeitures, shall be applied in cleansing and keeping the Harbour in Order, and for keeping the Bridge, Wharfs, Quays, and other publick Buildings and Works within the said Borough and Town in Repair, as the said Magistrates shall think requisite.

None shall be exempted from keeping such Wharfs or Quays in Repair, which they were obliged to, by Tenure or Usage, &c. before the making of this Act:

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

R A M S G A T E and S A N D W I C H.

The Preamble sets forth, that frequent Losses of the Lives and Properties of his Majesty's Subjects happen in the Downs, for Want of a Harbour between the North and South Forelands, the greatest Part of the Ships employed in the Trade of this Nation being under a Necessity, at going out upon, as well as returning from their Voyage, to pass through the Downs; and frequently, by contrary Winds, being detained there a long Time, during which they, especially the outward-bound Ships, are exposed to violent Storms and dangerous Gales of Wind, without having any sufficient Harbour to lie in or retreat into, or from whence they can receive any Assistance; and as a Harbour may be made at the Town of Ramsgate, convenient for the Reception of Ships, of and under 300 Tons Burden; and from whence larger Ships in Distress in the Downs may be supplied with Pilots, Anchors, Cables, and other Assistance and Necessaries; P. 800. and, by the smaller Ships taking Shelter in this Harbour, the larger Ships may take the Anchorage, which, at present, is occupied by the smaller, and by that Means their Anchors will be fixed in more holding Ground, and the Ships not so exposed to the Ocean: For carrying therefore a Work of such Publick Utility into Execution, It is enacted, That the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and his Deputy for the Time being, the Right Hon. Robert Lord Romney, Andrew Stone, Esq. the Hon. James Pelham, Esq. &c. shall be Trustees for the enlarging, building, and maintaining the Harbour at Ramsgate, by erecting Piers or such other Works, and doing all other Matters, as five, or more of them, at their general Meeting, shall think most proper for putting in Execution the Powers of this Act. P. 801.

The first Meeting of the Trustees shall be on the first Tuesday in July, 1742, P. 802. in the Guildhall of the City of London; and five or more of them shall meet, from Time to Time, at such Places as they shall judge most convenient for carrying on and effecting the Purposes of this Act.

Fifteen or more of the Trustees at a publick Meeting, fourteen Days' Notice whereof shall be given in the London Gazette, shall settle the several Rates and Duties herein-after mentioned, which shall commence from and after the 10th of July next ensuing, viz. Any Rate or Duty not exceeding 6d. per Ton, to be paid by every British or foreign Ship, Vessel or Crayer of 20 Tons Burden or upwards upwards, and not exceeding 300 Tons, for every lading or discharging, or Ship in Ballast within this Realm, from, to, or by Ramsgate, or coming into the Harbour there, not having a Receipt testifying the Payment thereof before on that Voyage, towards the building and maintaining of Ramsgate Harbour: And, on every Ship above 300 Tons, any Rate not exceeding 2*d.* for each Ton of the Burden of such Ship, except Ships laden with Coals, Grindstones, Purbeck, Portland, or other Stones: And on every Chaldron of Coals, or Ton of Grindstones, Purbeck, Portland, or other Stones, a Rate not exceeding 3*d.* And such Rates, when settled by the Trustees, shall be published in the London Gazette, for the Information of all Parties, and shall be paid to the Customer, or Collector of the Customs, or their Deputies, or other such Persons as shall be appointed by the Trustees to receive the same; in such Port or Place, whences such Vessels or Ships shall set forth, or where they shall arrive before their sailing from such Port, on their outward-bound Voyage, and before they unlade their Goods on their homeward-bound Voyage; the Tonnage to be ascertained according to the Rules laid down in the Act 8 Ann. intitled, An Act for making a convenient Dock or Basin at Liverpool, for the Security of all Ships trading to or from the said Port of Liverpool.

P. 173.

22 Geo. II.
P. 803.

Foreign Ships, passing or being detained in the Downs, shall be subject to the same Rates as Ships cleared out, or entered into any of the British Ports, to be levied and recovered in the same Manner as the other Rates imposed by this Act.

Where the Tonnage of any Vessel, chargeable with the said Rates, cannot otherwise be settled and adjusted, the Collector, or such Person as five Trustees shall appoint, may enter into, and admeasure such Ship, according to the Directions of this Act; and, if any Person shall obstruct the Admeasurement of such Ship, he shall forfeit 1*0*s. for every such Offence, &c.

No Vessel, outward-bound, shall be cleared at the Office of the Customs, nor shall any Vessel be allowed to enter at the said Office, on a homeward-bound Voyage, inward, without Information on Oath by the Master or Owner, of the Burden of such Vessel, &c. and after Oath made, and Payment of the Duty, and producing an Acquittance for the Receipt thereof, the Master or Owner shall be allowed, from the Merchant, for every Ton of Goods laden on board such Ship on his Account, a like Sum per Ton, as the same is charged by this Act; and the Customers, or other Officers, receiving the said Duties, shall keep an Account thereof, &c. to which all Persons may have free Access at all reasonable Times gratis. And shall, once in every Month in the Port of London, and once in every three Months in the Out-Ports, return and pay over the Sums received by them, &c.

P. 804.

If any Ship or Vessel, other than as before excepted, whether British or foreign, above 300 Tons, shall, after the Commencement of this Act, take Shelter in the Harbour of Ramsgate, she shall pay for every Ton a like Rate as Ships of or under 300 Tons, and above 19 Tons are liable to, Allowance being made to the Master or Owner for any Rate paid before by him on that Voyage, by Virtue of this Act, and such Ship shall ever after be liable to the same Rates.

No coasting Vessel or Fisherman shall pay the Rates more than once in one Year.

The Collectors, &c. may go on board any Vessel, and demand the Duties; and for Non-Payment may distrain such Vessel, Tackle, &c. and, in ten Days after, make Sale thereof, &c.

P. 806.

If any Master of any Vessel shall elude the Payment of the said Duties, the same shall be recovered, as the Fines and Penalties are herein-after directed.

Five or more Trustees and Persons employed by them, may remove any Obstructions that may be necessary to be taken away, for the enlarging, building, and maintaining the said Harbour at Ramsgate, or for the better attaining the Purposes of this Act, making Satisfaction to the Owners of the Premises.

Five or more Trustees may contract for the making or doing all or any Part of the Work or Business to be done in completing the said Harbour, and for Timber, Stones, or other Materials, which shall be used therein; and they may agree with the Owners and Occupiers of all such Buildings, Grounds, or Estates, as shall be necessary for the Execution of the Purposes of this Act.

All Bodies Politick or Corporate, whether aggregate or sole, and all Feoffees in Trust, Executors, Administrators, Guardians, or Trustees whatsoever, for, or on Behalf of, any Infants, Females Covert, or Cestique-Trufts, and all Persons seized, possessed of, or interested in any Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, which shall be judged necessary for the Purposes aforesaid, are impowered to agree with the Trustees, or five or more of them, at any of their publick Meetings appointed for the Sale thereof, and to sell and convey the same; and all Contracts and Conveyances, which shall be so made for the Purposes aforesaid, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes. 22 Geo. II.

And all Feoffees in Trust, Executors, &c. are indemnified for what they shall do by Virtue of this Act; and, if it shall happen that any Person, Body or Bodies Politick or Corporate, shall decline, or refuse to treat, or agree about the Sale of the said Lands and Tenements, five or more Trustees shall issue their Warrant to the Sheriff of the County, to summon and return a Jury of twenty-four Persons qualified to be returned for Trials of Issue, joined in any of the Courts at Westminster, to appear before them at the Time and Place appointed, and also to return Issues upon every such Persons, the Sum of 40s. which shall be duly estreated and levied; and, for Default of a sufficient Number of Jurymen appearing, the Sheriff, or his Deputy, shall return twelve indifferent Men of the Standers-by, or that can be speedily procured, to make up the Jury, who shall view the Lands and Tenements in Question, and shall, upon their Oaths, which Oaths, and also proper Oaths to such Persons as shall be examined as Witnesses, five or more of the Trustees, shall administer, enquire into the Value thereof, and assess such Damages and Recompence for the same as they shall think fit; and the Trustees shall give Judgement for the Sums to be assessed by such Jury; which Verdict, and the Determination thereupon pronounced by five or more Trustees, and the Recompence assessed, twenty Days Notice at least in Writing of the Time and Place for their Meeting being first given to every Person concerned, or left at his or her Dwelling-House, or usual Place of Abode, or with some Tenant or Occupier of some Land or Tenements of the Party near the Harbour of Ramsgate, in Case such Party cannot be found to be served with such Notice, shall be binding to all Intents and Purposes, against all Parties whatsoever; and the said Decrees shall be set down in Writing under the Hands and Seals of the Trustees, who shall make the same; and kept amongst the Records of the Sessions for the County of Kent, and the same, or Copies thereof, shall be admitted as Evidence in all Courts of Law or Equity: And, upon Payment or Tender of such Sum to the Parties, at his or their Dwelling-House, or, if they have none, at the House of some Tenant or Occupier of some Lands of the Party, near the said Harbour of Ramsgate, and, in Case of their Refusal, upon Payment of the said Sum into the Hands of such Person as five Trustees shall appoint, for the Use of the Parties interested; it shall then, and not before, be lawful for the Trustees, or their Workmen, to make Use of the said Lands as they shall think requisite for the Purposes of this Act, and they are indemnified against the said Owners and Occupiers, &c. P. 808.

If the Trustees shall build any Works relating to the said Harbour, upon any Lands or Tenements, the Property whereof is not, at or before such Time, claimed or ascertained; and, if any Person shall afterwards claim the same, and prove his Title thereto, then the Value thereof, before the Works were erected, shall be ascertained by a Jury in Manner before directed; and, upon Payment, or Tender of the Money that shall be assessed, the Property of such Person in the said Lands shall cease, and the same be vested in the Trustees. P. 809.

Fifteen, or more, Trustees may borrow any Sum not exceeding 70,000*l.* for the Purposes aforesaid, and assign over the Duties as a Security for Repayment of the same, with Interest not exceeding 5*l.* per Centum per Annum: and the same shall be applied towards the enlarging and completing the said Harbour; the Charges of passing this Act to be first paid. P. 810.

Any Persons may advance the Whole, or any Part of the said Sum of 70,000*l.* for the absolute Purchase of Annuities, to be paid for the natural Lives of such Persons as shall be nominated by the Contributors at the Time of Payment of their respective Contribution-Monies; the said Annuities not to exceed the Rate of 8*l.* 10*s.* per Annum for every 100*l.* and to be payable at the Bank of England, or at such other Place in London, as fifteen or more of the Trustees shall direct, to the Purchasers, their Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, at such Times and in such Proportions, as shall be agreed upon.

The Rates shall not be liable to the Payment of the Interest of any greater Sum than 50,000*l.* at any one Time, upon Annuities for Lives.

One or more Books shall be provided and kept by the Trustees, in which shall be entered the Names and Places of Abode of the Purchasers of any of the said Annuities, and of all Persons by whose Hands they shall pay in any Sum upon this Act, and also of the Persons for whose Lives the Annuities shall be purchased, and the Purchase-Money, and Days of Payment; to which Books the respective Purchasers, and Persons empowered by them, shall have Recourse, at all reasonable Times, gratis; and if any Doubt arises, as to the Life of any Person, on which an Annuity shall be payable, five or more Trustees may depute any Person, before each Payment, to visit such Annuitant; and, if such Person shall be refused Admittance to the said Annuitant, at any reasonable Time, the Annuity shall from such Time cease, till the Life of the said Annuitant be proved to five or more Trustees at their publick Meeting, either by his or her personal Appearance, or by the Oaths of two credible Witnesses; when the said Annuity, together with the Arrears, shall be paid.

The said Annuities shall be paid out of the Monies arising by the Duties of this Act; and the Contributors, their Executors, and Assigns, shall enjoy the Annuities, during the natural Lives of the Persons nominated by them, and shall have absolute and indefeasible Estates therein; and the same shall be free from all Taxes.

P. 812.

P. 813. The Contributors, or their Assigns, upon Payment of the Consideration-Money, or any Part thereof, unto fifteen Trustees, or to such Person as they shall appoint, shall have Receipts for the same; and, upon Payment of the Purchase-Money, shall have an Order in Parchment for Payment of the Annuity, during the natural Life of the Person nominated, in which shall be inserted, how much the Sum paid by such Contributor, together with the other Sums paid in on Annuities before that Time, do amount to, that it may be known how nearly the said Sum of 70,000*l.* is complete, and when it shall be completed; which Order shall be made by five or more Trustees at a publick Meeting, and, after signing thereof, shall be good in Law.

The Annuitants, or their Assigns, may, from Time to Time, assign over the said Annuities, or any Part thereof; and an Entry thereof shall be made gratis, in a Book to be kept by such Person as five or more of the Trustees shall appoint for that Purpose, at the Charge of the Trustees, in such Place within London as fifteen or more Trustees shall appoint.

P. 814. The Rates shall be chargeable with the Payment of the Annuities; and, upon Default of Payment thereof, within forty Days after the Times they shall be made payable, they shall vest in the Annuitants until the same be paid, with Interest, and the Charges occasioned thereby; and they shall have the same Power, &c. of collecting and levying the said Duties as the Trustees were invested with.

The Money arising by Sale of the Annuities shall be applied in the first Place, in paying off Monies borrowed at Interest, as aforesaid; and afterwards for discharging the Expences of enlarging and building the said Harbour.

The Trustees shall meet once in every Year, fourteen Days Notice whereof shall be given in the London Gazette; and they, or fifteen or more of them, at such Meeting, shall examine what Annuities have determined during the preceding Year, and shall ascertain the Rates necessary to be raised for the succeeding Year; and the same shall be levied according to the Proportions before mentioned, and shall be advertised in the London Gazette; but, if they shall continue the Rates of the succeeding Year or Years, according to the Proportion of the former Year, or shall neglect or refuse to meet for the Purposes aforesaid, then the Rates shall be levied according to the Proportion directed by the last Advertisement in the London Gazette for that Purpose, which shall be the Rule to go by, until the said Rates shall be again ascertained and published according to the Directions of this Act.

As soon as the Sum of 70,000*l.* shall be raised and paid to the Trustees, by granting Annuities, and the Interest of the several Annuitants shall cease by their Deaths, the Duties granted by this Act shall absolutely cease and determine; and if, after the Determination of the Annuities, and finishing the said Harbour, any Surplus shall remain in the Hands of the Trustees, the same shall be paid into the Chamber of London, and an Account thereof be laid before the Parliament at their then next Sitting.

Fifteen or more of the Trustees may appoint Collectors, a Surveyor, Treasurer, &c. of the Duties, and appoint them Salaries, and displace them at Pleasure. G. II. P. 815.

They are to take Security for such Officers, and meet once yearly to examine and audit their Accounts.

The Accounts so stated and signed by the Trustees shall be laid, within three P. 817. Months after, before the Mayor and Court of Aldermen in London, and such four as the Court shall appoint, not being Trustees, may summon, and examine upon Oath, every Person they shall think fit; and, finding any one guilty of Embezzlement or Misapplication of the said Money, they shall impose on him any Fine, not exceeding double the Sum embezzled.

The said Fines shall be levied by Distress, &c. and in Default of such Distress, the Offender shall be committed to the common Gaol of the County, where he shall live, until Payment, &c.

If the Trustees shall erect a Bason in the said Harbour, every Vessel before she goes into the Gates, shall take down her Sails, so that she may not go sailing in; upon Pain of forfeiting 10*l.*

If the Bason shall be so filled with Shipping, as not to admit, with Safety, P. 819. more Vessels, five or more Trustees, or such Person as they shall appoint, may remove into the Harbour such Ship or Vessel, as he or they shall think proper, the Master, within twenty-four Hours after Notice in Writing given to him, or left on board his Ship for that Purpose; neglecting to remove the same within a convenient Time; those Vessels to be first removed out of the Bason, as shall be laid up or moored, or are not upon an outward or homeward-bound Voyage; next, such as are upon an outward or homeward-bound Voyage, but which may with the least Danger be removed, and lie in the said Harbour; that Ships coming in, and less capable of taking the Ground, may have the Benefit of the Bason; and the said Master shall pay the Charges of removing such Vessel, to be levied and applied as the Fines and Penalties are directed by this Act.

If any Master, or other Person, shall obstruct the Removal of such Ship, he shall forfeit 100*l.* And if any Person, employed by the Trustees, shall wilfully abuse his Authority of removing such Ships, and shall be judged so to have done, by five or more of the Trustees, &c. they shall impose any Fine on him, not exceeding 100*l.* &c. P. 820.

If any Trustee shall die, or refuse to act, five or more of the remaining Trustees may appoint others, &c.

The Property of all the Piers, Docks, Wharfs, and other Works, and also of the Ground whereon such Works shall be erected, as well as all such Right and Property, as now appertaineth to the said Pier or Harbour of Ramsgate, shall be vested in the Trustees; and they, or five, or more of them, may bring Actions, and prefer Bills of Inciément, against any Persons who shall steal, break down, or spoil any of the Works or Materials, or do any Thing whereby P. 821. Damage may accrue to the Works or Harbour; and they may let out, for the best Rent that can be had, such Wharfs, Docks, or Lands, as are vested in them, for any Term not exceeding sixty Years, the Rent to be applied towards enlarging and completing the said Harbour; and upon the Expiration of the said Trusts, and Determination of the Leases, the Property of the said Piers, Docks, Wharfs, and other Works, and also of the said Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, shall be vested in, and disposed of by Authority of Parliament.

The

The Trustees, in the letting such Wharfs, Docks, or other Works, shall expressly mention what Sums shall be taken by the respective Tenants, of the Master of any Vessel which shall occupy the same; and, if the Tenant shall demand or take more than the Sum stipulated, he shall, for every such Offence, forfeit treble the Sum demanded, more than he shall be allowed to take by such Agreement, &c.

21 Geo. II.
F. 822.

All the Receipts, Payments, Debts, Credits, and Contracts, made with and by the Artificers and Workmen employed, and also an Account of all Monies received and borrowed, and all other Proceedings of the Trustees, shall be entered into one or more Books, &c.

No Trustee shall have any Office, or Place of Profit arising by any of the said Duties; and the Trustees shall at all their Meetings, defray their own Expences, and shall give such publick Notice of their Meetings, as shall be agreed upon by five or more of them.

From and after the first Tuesday in July, 1749, all Duties on Shipping, which may have heretofore been demanded at the Port of Ramsgate, under any Pretence whatsoever, shall absolutely cease; and no Demand shall be made of any Duty, other than what is made payable by this Act.

F. 823.

This Act shall not extend to charge with any of the said Rates or Duties, any Ship or Vessel, which shall be bound to or from the Town of Sandwich, in the County of Kent; the Master producing a Certificate verified upon Oath, under the Hand or Seal of the Mayor of Sandwich, attesting that the Inhabitants of the said Town own the Whole or major Part of such Vessel; and all such Vessels may pass in and out of the Harbour without paying Duty.

F. 824.

Out of the Money arising by the Rates, the Treasurer or Receiver shall pay 200*l.* per Annum, during the Continuance of this Act, into the Hands of the Mayor and Jurats of Sandwich, or to such Persons as they shall authorize to receive the same, by four equal quarterly Payments, viz. upon September 29, December 25, March 25, and June 24; the first Payment to be made upon the 29th of September, 1749; the said Money to be applied, in the first Place, in discharging the Expences incurred by the Corporation of Sandwich, on Account of applying for, or making this Act, or in any Manner relating thereto; and afterwards in cleansing, depthening, and preserving the said Haven, or in erecting and maintaining a Pier, or such other Works for that Purpose, as the Mayor and Jurats shall, by Writing under their Hands and Seals, direct; and, if the said Sum shall not be paid within fourteen Days after it shall become due, the Mayor and Jurats may recover the same against the said Treasurer or Receiver, together with the Damages sustained by the Non-payment, and full Costs of Suit by Action of Debt, Bill, &c.

The Receipt of the said Mayor and Jurats, or of such Person as they shall appoint to receive the said Sum, shall discharge the said Treasurer or Receiver for the Payment thereof.

F. 825.

The said Mayor and Jurats shall cause a Book or Books to be kept of the Dates and Sums of Money received and disbursed, and of all their Proceedings, in Execution of the Trust hereby reposed in them; to which Books all Persons interested shall have free Access gratis, &c.

F. 827.

From and after the 24th of June, 1749, no more than two Vessels shall lie abreast in the said Haven longer than one Tide, unless upon some unavoidable Occasion, of which the Mayor shall judge, and shall take such Order therein as he shall think reasonable; and, if the Master of any Vessel shall not obey such Order of the Mayor for removing his Ship, he shall forfeit any Sum not exceeding 40*l.* &c.

If it shall appear to the Trustees, or fifteen of them, that it will be for the Benefit of the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, to erect any Works at the Haven of Sandwich, more than the annual Sum of 200*l.* will be sufficient for; they may, at any Meeting to be held for that Purpose, fourteen Days Notice thereof being given in the London Gazette, order any Sum not exceeding 10,000*l.* out of the Duties aforesaid, to be applied to that Purpose.

All Vessels belonging to the Towns of Dover, Weymouth, and Melcombe Regis, Lyme Regis, and Great Yarmouth, shall be exempted from Payment of the the Duties aforesaid, the Masters or Owners producing a Certificate, verified upon Oath before the respective Mayors of the said Places, that the said Vessels belong thereto, and that the Inhabitants are Owners of the greatest Part of such Ships. This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

BEVERLEY BECK, and HULL.

By 13 Geo. I. several small Tolls and Duties were laid on divers Goods and Merchandizes, which, after May 1, 1727, should be laden or unladen on or from any Ship, Boat, or other Vessel, in any Part of the said Beck, or at any publick Staiths, or other Places along the said Beck, or River Hull, and payable to the Mayor, Aldermen, and capital Burgeses of Beverley, and their Successors, or to the Person by them appointed, to be applied for the Purposes in the Act mentioned; and, since passing the said Act, a considerable Sum hath been borrowed on the Tolls thereby granted; which, though applied with the Income of the Tolls and Duties, according to the Directions of the Act, is insufficient to answer the Intention; and the Beck is now in great Danger of being choaked, by the Sludge and Soil brought by the Tide, and Earth falling in from the Banks, which must be repaired and supported by Piles and other Works; and, as the cleansing, deepening, and preserving the said Creek, and amending and maintaining the Banks, Staiths, Roads, and Ways, will require more Money than can be raised by the present Duties, which are in many Respects unequal, and not duly proportioned to the Value of Goods; therefore, for better enabling the Mayor, &c. of Beverley, to perform the Things before-mentioned, It is enacted, that, after May 1, 1745, there shall be paid for the Purposes aforesaid, by every Master or other Person, having Management of any Ship, or other Vessel, passing up or down the said Beck, or River Hull, to lade or unlade Goods, at any Part of the Beck, or publick Staiths, or at Gravel, or Beck-End, or between Figgam Clow and Swinmore Clow on the River Hull, or at any Places along the said Beck or River, within the Limits of Beverley, before unloading, or having laden, before they go out of the Liberties aforesaid, over and above the Tolls payable by the former Act, these additional Duties, viz.

- For every Chaldron of Coals, Winchester Measure, 2d.
- For every Quarter of Oats, Barley, or Malt, 1q.
- For every Quarter of Wheat, Rye, Mefsledine, Peas, Peas, Rapefeed, Hempseed, Linseed, or any other Kind of Seed or Grain, 1q.
- For every Hundred Weight of Flour, 3q.
- For every Hoghead of Salt, 4d.
- For every Ton of Salt in Bulk, 2d.
- For every 3 Hogheads of Sugar, Tobacco, Melasses, or other Goods packed in Hogheads, 8d.
- For every 4 Hogheads of Wine or Rum, 1s. 8d.
- For every Hoghead of Brandy, or other Spirits, 4d.
- For every 8 Barrels of Soap, Raisins, Oil, Pitch, Tar, or packed with other dry Goods, 4d.
- For every Butt of Currants, 8d.
- For every 2 Pipes of Snyrna Raisins, 8d.
- For every 16 Bags of Nails, 4d.
- For every Ton of Iron or Lead, 8d.
- For every 32 Firkins of Butter, 4d.
- For every 20 Hundred of Cheese, 7d.
- For every Ton of Timber or Stone, 2d.
- For every 2 Bags of Hops, 8d.
- For every Quarter of Oatmeal, 2q.
- For every Hundred of Pipestaves, 1d. 2q.
- For every Dozen of Cinders or Charcoal, 2q.
- For every 20 Sheep Skins, 1q.
- For every Quarter of Bark, 1q.
- For every Pack of Wool, or other Goods, 1d.
- For every 12 Dozen of Bottles, 1d.
- For every 4 Bushels of Roots, or Fruit, 2q.

H h h

For

For every Ton of Hemp, Lime, or Flax, 7*d*.

For every Quarter of Ferne Ashes, 2*d*.

For every small Runtlett of Liquor, not exceeding 10 Gallons, 1*q*.

For every small Cask or Parcel, not exceeding 112 Pounds, 1*q*. and so in Proportion for a greater or less Quantity or Weight of any of the abovementioned Goods, &c.

And for every Ton of any other Sort of Goods or Ladings not mentioned, according to the Custom of Water Tonnage, 12*d*. And so in Proportion for any greater or less Quantity, except Cobbles or Pebbles for repairing Causeways in the Town or Liberties.

Which Tolls and Sums shall be paid to the Mayor, Aldermen, and capital Burgesses of Beverley, and their Successors, or to a Person by them appointed to receive them, and, after deducting the necessary Charges of obtaining this Act, be applied, with the Duties granted by the former Act, to pay the Debt, and cleanse and preserve the Beck, and repair and keep up the Banks, Staiths, and Roads, and to no other Use.

18 Geo. II.
P. 415.

The Powers, Provisos, Penalties, &c. in the former Act contained, relating to the Tolls thereby granted, and not hereby repealed or altered, shall be in Force from May 1, 1745, and extend to the additional Tolls hereby granted, and to every Person whom the same or this present Act may concern.

In Case any Person, having Management of any Ship or Vessel, passing up or down the River Hull or the Beck, laden or unladen, and who by the former Act is obliged to give in a true Account in Writing of the Quantity of Goods, or Number of Tons, with which he is laden, shall give in a false Account thereof, being convicted on Oath before the Mayor, or any two Justices of the said Town, shall forfeit 20*s*. &c. and shall also pay the Duties by the said Acts made payable for all such Goods as remain in such Vessels, which he shall not have given an Account of, or paid Duty for; but such Person shall not be subject to the Forfeiture of 20*s*. unless his Lading exceed three Tons more than he shall have given an Account of, or paid Duty for.

P. 416.

The Receiver or Collector, appointed by the Mayor, &c. of Beverley, may enter into any Ship or Vessel which shall pass up or down the said Beck, or River Hull, within the Liberties aforesaid, and search, and take an Account of the Lading thereof; and, for Discovery of any Goods, &c. chargeable with these Duties, and the Quantities thereof, may open, bore, gauge, weigh, and measure any Thing laden in such Vessel; and taste Liquor, measure Coals, and weigh or measure other Goods, finding proper Weights, Measures, and Instruments, for the Purposes aforesaid, and making Satisfaction for any Loss or Damage done to Goods thereby; And, for the like Discovery, to measure and mark the Portage or Tonnage of any Vessel usually passing within the said Liberties; And if any Master of such Vessel, or other Person, shall hinder such Collector, or other Person appointed to enter such Vessel, to search or take an Account of the Lading thereof, or of the Sorts or Quantities of Goods, by any Means aforesaid, or to measure or mark the Portage, &c. the Master or Person so offending shall forfeit 20*s*. &c.

P. 417.

Nothing in this Act shall take away or lessen Duties, which, before making this and the former Act, were payable to the Mayor, &c. of Beverley at the River Hull, or Beverley Beck, or otherwise; but the same shall continue to be paid on all Sorts of Goods and Merchandizes as before.

The Remainder of this Act is concerning the Roads, and cleansing the Streets, which, having no Relation to the Subject I am treating of, is omitted, &c.

P. 119.

The Town of Kirkcaldy is said to be well situated for carrying on a foreign Trade, having Coal and Salt Works near adjoining, and that an improved Trade would be very beneficial both for the Town and Country; but these Advantages cannot be had, unless the Harbour, which is very ruinous, be repaired and made commodious, which will require a larger Sum than the Revenue of the Town will answer, It is therefore enacted, that, after June 1, 1742, for the Term of twenty-five Years, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, liament, a Duty shall be paid of two Pennies Scots, or one sixth Part of a Penny Sterling, besides the Duty paid to his Majesty, on every Scots Pint of Beer or Ale, either brewed, brought in, tapped, or sold in the Town or Liberties of Kirkcaldy; the Duty to be paid by the Brewers for Sale, or the Sellers of the said Liquors, to the Magistrates and Town Council, or such Receivers as they shall appoint.

The Provost, Bailiffs, and Council, are appointed Trustees to repair and keep in Repair the said Harbour, and other publick Works, as they shall think proper, and to collect, receive, and dispose of the Money arising by the Duty, appoint proper Officers, to gauge the Vessels and Worts, which the Brewers shall permit in the same Manner as the Officers of Excise are permitted. 15 Geo. II. P. 121.

The Trustees are empowered to make Orders and give Directions for gauging, collecting, and disposing of the Money arising by the Duty as they shall think most proper for the Purposes hereby granted, and to appoint Collectors, who shall dispose of the collected Money, as the Majority of the Trustees shall direct, for repairing and maintaining the Harbour and other publick Works.

Proper Books shall be kept by Order of the Trustees, wherein the Particulars of all disbursements shall be entered; and once every Year, the first being thirty Days after the said first Day of June, 1742, and so successively every Year, the Accounts shall be fairly drawn out and stated by the Collectors, and delivered to the Majority of the Trustees on Oath, which Oath any one of the Trustees has Power to administer. P. 122.

And for the more speedily effecting the Purposes of this Act, the Majority of Trustees, by an Act of the Town-Council, may borrow Money, and assign over the Duty as a Security to the Lenders, at common Interest.

Persons not paying the Duty when demanded, may be summoned before any of the Magistrates; and, if they do not then appear, or pay the Duty, any one of the Magistrates may make an Order for the Payment; and, if they refuse to pay three Days after Notice of such Order, the Collectors may have a Warrant to distrain; and if Payment be not made ten Days after the Distress they may sell the same, and deduct for reasonable Charge, not exceeding a fifth Part of the Sum distrained for, rendering the Overplus to the Owner, if any be, and demanded. P. 123.

Any Ale or Beer brought in, or sold in the said Town and Privileges, having not paid the Duty, shall be forfeited, with the Cask for the Use of the Town.

If any Dispute arise between the Sellers and Collectors, the Differences shall be decided by the Vouchers taken by the Excise Officers; and the Excise Officers are required to give authentick Copies of the said Vouchers once in six Weeks to some of the Trustees or their Collectors, for that Purpose.

If any conceal or embezzle any Wort, Ale, or Beer, to avoid paying the Duty, the Parties convicted before any two of the Magistrates shall forfeit the Value of what shall be concealed, and ten Pounds Scots for the Court Charges, for which Distress may be made. P. 124.

The Majority of Trustees, with Consent of the Overseers after-named, may farm out the Duty for the best Price they can get, and apply the Money as this Act directs.

The Right Hon. John, Earl of Rothes, the Right Hon. James, Earl of Morton, the Right Hon. James, Earl of Murray, &c. or any three, are appointed Overseers of the Duty, and Receipts and Disbursements thereof, and shall meet on the first Wednesday in August, 1743 at Kirkcaldy, and so successively, on the first Wednesday in August yearly, and adjourn as they shall think proper, to examine the Disbursements, and the Application thereof; And, if the major Part of the said Overseers present shall find any Misapplication of the Money, or other Abuse of the Powers granted by this Act, they may adjudge the Offenders, or Embezzlers, to pay the Value of what is embezzled, with full Costs and Damages; which Sentence shall be final; and, if any of the Overseers shall die, remove, or refuse to act, any three of the remaining Overseers may chuse others in their Places. P. 125.

No Distress taken by Authority of this Act, shall any Ways affect the King's Duty of Excise; nor shall any Persons be charged with any Quantity of Wort, if it shall appear that the Duty hereby made payable has been once paid.

ANSTRUTHER-EASTER.

22 Geo. II.
P. 299.

In the Preamble it is said, that a great Trade has been carried on in the Town of Anstruther-Easter, in the County of Fife, in Scotland, particularly of Fishery, and that a Custom-house has been erected there for many Years, on Account of the Commerce of the said Town, and that the Harbour thereof is very safe and convenient for Ships, and esteemed the most commodious in that Part of the Country; and, it having been judged necessary, for the Improvement and Preservation of the said Harbour, as also for facilitating the sailing of Ships in and out with more Safety, that a cross Pier should be erected, which was accordingly begun, and some Progress made therein; but, as the completing the same will require a larger Sum than the Revenue of the Town will answer, It is therefore enacted, that after August 1, 1749, for the Term of twenty-five Years, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, a Duty of two Pennies Scots, or one sixth Part of a Penny Sterling, besides the Duty payable to his Majesty, should be laid on every Scots Pint of Ale or Beer either brewed, brought in, tapped, or sold in the Town or Liberties of Anstruther-Easter; the Duty to be paid by the Brewers for Sale, or the Sellers of the said Liquors, to the Magistrates and Town-Council, or such Collectors or Receivers as they shall appoint: And the said Magistrates and Town Council, and their Successors in Office for the Time being, are appointed Trustees to clean, deepen, rebuild, repair, and improve the said Harbour and Piers, and for executing all other Powers given by this Act; and the Money raised by the said Duty shall be vested in the Trustees, and be applied to the several Purposes aforesaid, the Charges expended in passing this Act being first deducted.

P. 300.

P. 301.

The Trustees are to appoint proper Officers to gauge the Brewers' Vessels and Worts, which the Brewers shall permit in the same Manner as the Officers of Excise are permitted.

The Trustees are empowered to make Orders, and give Directions for gauging the Vessels, and collecting and disposing of the Money arising by the Duty, as they shall think most proper for the Purposes hereby granted; and shall be paid to the Collectors appointed, who shall dispose of the collected Money as the Majority of Trustees shall direct, for the Purposes aforesaid, and to no other Use.

P. 302.

Proper Books shall be kept, by Order of the Trustees, wherein an Account of all Receipts and Disbursements shall be entered; and also for what Use the Payments were made; and once every Year, viz. within thirty Days after the said first Day of August, 1749, and so successively every Year, the Accounts shall be fairly drawn out, and stated by the Collectors, and delivered to the Majority of Trustees on Oath; which Oath any one of the Trustees is to administer.

And for the more speedily effecting the Purposes of this Act, the Majority of Trustees, by an Act of the Town-Council, may borrow Money, and assign over the Duty as a Security to the Lenders, at legal, or less Interest, the Charges thereof to be paid out of the Duty; and the Money so borrowed shall be applied in the first Place, to pay off the Charges of obtaining this Act, and then for the Purposes aforesaid:

P. 303.

Persons not paying the Duty when demanded; may be summoned before any of the Magistrates; and if they do not then appear or pay the Duty, any one of the Magistrates may make an Order for the Payment; and, if they refuse to pay, three Days after Notice of such Order, the Collectors by Warrant, may distrain, &c.

Any Ale or Beer brought in, or sold in the said Town and Privileges, having not first paid the Duty, shall be forfeited, with the Cask, for the Use of the Harbour.

P. 304.

If any Dispute arise between the Sellers and Collectors, touching the Quantity of Wort or Beer chargeable, the Difference shall be decided by the Vouchers taken by the Excise Officers, &c.

If, after August 1, 1749, any Person shall conceal or embezzle any Wort, Ale, or Beer, to avoid paying the Duty, the Offender shall forfeit the Value of what is concealed, and ten Pounds Scots, for which Distress may be made.

The Majority of the Trustees, with Consent of the Overseers after named, may farm out the Duty by Way of publick Roup, for the best Price they can get, and apply the Money as this Act directs.

Sir John Anstruther of Anstruther, Baronet, John Anstruther the Younger of <sup>22 Geo. II.</sup> Anstruther, Esq. Sir Philip Anstruther of Balkaskie, Baronet, &c. or any three, <sup>P. 305.</sup> are appointed Overseers of the Duty, &c. and shall meet on the first Wednesday in August, 1750, at Anstruther-Easter, and so successively on the first Wednesday in August yearly, and adjourn as they shall think proper, to examine the Receipts and Disbursements, and the Application thereof; and, if the major Part of the said Overseers present shall find any Misapplication of the Money, or other Abuse of the Powers granted by this Act, they may examine the Party and Witnesses, and make such an Order upon Conviction as they shall judge reasonable, and adjudge the Offenders to pay the Value of what is embezzled, with Costs, &c.

No Distress, taken by Authority of this Act, shall any Ways affect the King's Duty of Excise.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, and shall be judicially taken Notice of as such by all Persons whatsoever.

K I N G H O R N.

In the Preamble it is said, That the Harbour of the Town of Kinghorn, in <sup>22 Geo. II.</sup> the County of Fife, has not only been of great Advantage to the said Town, but <sup>P. 351.</sup> to the Whole of that Part of the united Kingdom of Great-Britain, and those Advantages cannot be continued and established unless the Harbour, which has been for some Years last past, and now is, in a ruinous Condition, be effectually repaired, and made commodious for Shipping, and all such Persons as shall make Use thereof; and as the whole Revenue of the Town, applicable towards the repairing of the said Harbour, is not near sufficient to keep the same in good Repair, It is therefore enacted, that after June 1, 1749, a Duty of two Pennies Scots, or one sixth Part of a Penny Sterling, besides the Duty of Excise payable to his Majesty, should be laid on every Scots Pint of Ale and Beer, either brewed, brought in, tapped, or sold in the Town or Liberties of Kinghorn, &c.

The Provost, Bailiffs, and Council of the Town of Kinghorn, &c. are appointed <sup>P. 352.</sup> Trustees for the re-building or amending, and keeping the said Harbour in Repair, and for collecting and disposing of the Money arising by the said Duty; and the Majority of them are empowered to appoint Officers to gauge the Brewers' Vessels, Worts, Ale, and Beer, which the Brewers shall permit to be done in the same Manner as the Officers of Excise are permitted.

The Trustees, or a Majority of them, are empowered to make Orders, and give <sup>P. 353.</sup> Directions for gauging the Vessels, and collecting and disposing of the Money arising by the Duty, as they shall think most proper for the Purposes hereby granted; and the same shall be paid to the Collectors appointed, who shall dispose of the collected Money as the Majority of Trustees shall direct, towards the Re-building or Repairing the Harbour, and for preserving the same, and other publick Works of the Town, the Charges of passing this Act being first deducted, and to no other Use.

Proper Books shall be kept by Order of the Trustees, wherein an Account of <sup>P. 354.</sup> all Receipts and Disbursements shall be entered, &c. and once every Year, viz. within thirty Days after the 1st Day of June, 1749, and so successively every Year, the Accounts shall be fairly drawn out and stated, &c.

And for the more speedily effecting the Purposes of this Act, the Majority of Trustees, by an Act of the Town Council, may borrow Money, and assign over the Duty as a Security to the Lenders, at legal or less Interest, the Charges thereof to be paid out of the Duty; and the Money so borrowed shall be applied, as the Duty arising by this Act, for the Purposes aforesaid.

Persons not paying the Duty when demanded, may be summoned before any <sup>P. 355.</sup> of the Magistrates, who may distrain for it, and sell the Distress, &c.

Any Ale or Beer brought in, or sold in the said Town, &c. having not first paid the Duty, shall be forfeited, &c.

If any Dispute arise between the Collectors and Sellers, &c. it shall be decided by the Vouchers taken by the Excise Officers, &c.

23 Geo. II.
P. 356. If, after the 1st of June, 1749, any Person shall conceal or embezzle any Wort, &c. the Offender, on Conviction, shall forfeit the Value, and ten Pounds Scots, &c.

The Majority of Trustees may farm out the Duty by Way of publick Roup, for the best Price they can get, and apply the Money as this Act directs.

John Saint Clair of Saint Clair, the Honourable Lieutenant-General James Saint Clair of Innertiel, Robert Ferguson of Reath, &c. Esqrs. or any three, are appointed Overseers of the Duty, &c. and shall meet on the first Wednesday in August, 1750, at Kinghorn, and so successively on the first Wednesday in August yearly, to examine the Receipts, &c.

P. 357. No Distress, taken by Authority of this Act, shall any Ways affect the King's Duty of Excise, &c.

P. 358. This Act shall take Place, and be in Force from and after the 1st of June, 1749, for thirty-one Years, and from thence to the End of the then next Session of Parliament.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

N. B. As this last Act is, in many Particulars, verbatim the same with the two preceding ones, I have abbreviated it wherever the Sense of it would admit; not to trouble the Reader with unnecessary Repetitions, especially where there are too many unavoidable ones already.

COLCHESTER to WIVENHOE.

23 Geo. II.
P. 379. By an Act of 9 and 10 Will. and Mary, intituled, An Act for cleansing and making navigable the Channell from the Hithe at Colchester to Wivenhoe, several Duties were granted on Goods and Merchandizes, which should be brought in and to the said Channel, and landed or shipped from Wivenhoe, or the New Hithe in Colchester, or between either of the said Places, for the Term of twenty-one Years, for the Uses and Purposes mentioned in the said Act; and several Powers

P. 380. were vested in the Mayor, Aldermen, Assistants, and Common Council of Colchester only, for appointing Collectors, &c. to receive the Duties; which Act, and all the Powers and Authorities thereby given, and one Moiety of the Duties, except upon Corn and Grain, were by an Act of 5 Geo. I. continued until the 1st of May, 1740; and further Power was thereby given, to the Mayor and Commonalty only, for recovering the said Duties; and by one other Act of 13 Geo. II. intituled, An Act for enlarging the Term granted by an Act passed the 9 and 10 Will. III. for cleansing and making navigable the Channel from the Hithe at Colchester to Wivenhoe, and for making the said Acts and another Act of 5 Geo. I. for enlarging the Term, &c. more effectual; it is enacted, that the said two former Acts, together with the additional Powers granted by the Act of 13 Geo. II. should be in Force from the 1st of May, 1740, for ever; and that the Duty on Sea Coal should, after the said 1st of May, be 3d. per Chaldron, and no more, payable for the Term of forty Years; and by the said Act it was declared, that no other Duty, except the Arrears due under the former Act, should be raised upon any other Goods or Merchandizes whatsoever; and the said Mayor and Commonalty of Colchester only were, by the last-mentioned Act, vested with further Power for suing for the

P. 381. Duties and the Arrears under the former Acts: And as a very large Lock, which has been erected several Years since in the Channel, has been found of great Use and Service to the Navigation, and is now in a decaying Condition, and much out of Repair, and the Channel in some Parts is much choaked up, so that the Navigation is greatly obstructed, which has been occasioned principally by there being great Arrears of the Duties, granted by the recited Acts, for many Years due, and still unpaid; and also a large Sum of Money remaining in the Hands of the Representatives of the late Receiver-General of the Duties, which ought to have been recovered and applied for repairing the said Lock and cleansing the Channel; but as the Power of the Mayor and Commonalty of Colchester had ceased for many Years last past, in whose Name only the said Duties were to be recovered, and Discharges given, the said Duties and Arrears cannot now be recovered and collected, for Want of Power to give Discharges for the same; and there being no other Fund to raise Money for the Purposes aforesaid, the same cannot now be done without further Provision be made for it, by Authority of Parliament; It is therefore enacted, that the several Parcels of Land severed, and lying between the present Channel, and the Place where the old Channel was, and also the present Channel, Lock, and Lock-house, and all the Powers, Matters, and Things, which, by the three former Acts before-mentioned, were vested in the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. of Colchester, or the Commissioners named for any of the Purposes therein mentioned, and not hereby altered or varied, shall, from the first of May, 1750, be in Force, and be vested in the Justices of the Peace of the East Division of the County of Essex, for the Time being, the Honourable <sup>23</sup> Richard Savage Nassau, Charles Gray, &c. who are hereby constituted Com- <sup>P. 382.</sup> missioners for putting the said several former Acts, and this Act, in Execution, and the Survivors of them, &c. for the Term of thirty Years, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, &c.

From and after the 1st of May, 1750 an additional Duty of 3d. a Chaldron <sup>P. 383:</sup> shall be paid on Sea coal, over and above the Duty of 3d. payable thereon, by Virtue of the Act of 13 Geo. II. for the Space of thirty Years, and no other Duty, except the Arrears due under the former Acts, shall be raised on any Goods or Merchandizes whatsoever, and the Commissioners are empowered to levy and recover the Duty of the said Act 13 Geo. II. and the additional Duty hereby granted; together with the Money remaining in the Hands of the Representatives of the late Receiver-General of the Duties; and also all Sums of Money due from any Persons on Account of the said Duties, or Penalties, Forfeitures, &c.

The Commissioners, after paying the Expences of this Act, may dispose of <sup>P. 384:</sup> the Monies, towards the several Uses and Purposes mentioned by the former Act, in such Manner as they shall think proper.

The Commissioners, at any of their Meetings, may borrow Money, at a legal or less Interest, on the Credit of the Duties, and assign over the same, the Charges thereof to be paid out of the Duties, for any Term during the Continuance of the last mentioned and this Act, as a Security for Re-payment thereof; and the said Money, after Payment of such of the Expences of obtaining this Act as the Sums before directed to be applied for that Purpose shall be deficient, is to be applied for the several Uses and Purposes mentioned in the present and former Acts.

Six Days Notice, exclusive of the Days of Notice and Meeting, under the Hand of the Clerk to the Commissioners, is to be fixed on the Outside of the Door of the Mootball, or on the Market-Place of the Town of Colchester, of the Meeting of the Commissioners, to borrow Money on Credit of the Duties.

All Mortgages and Assignments for Re-payment of the Monies, so to be bor- <sup>P. 385:</sup> rowed, are to be entered at Length in a Book, to be kept for that Purpose, by the Clerk of the Commissioners, which may be perused at seasonable Times, by any Persons whomsoever, on Payment of 1s. only.

The Commissioners at any of their Meetings may place out at Interest, in the Names of three or more of them, any Sums which shall not be immediately necessary to be applied for the Purposes before-mentioned, upon any real or parliamentary Securities, or the publick Funds; and may call in and apply the same, and the Interest arising thereby, from Time to Time, in the Support and Maintenance of the said Lock, and cleansing the Channel and other Purposes aforesaid.

The Commissioners, at any of their Meetings, are empowered to chuse and appoint one or more Collectors or Receivers of the Duties granted by the said Act of 13 Geo. II. and by this Act, who are to give Security to three or more Commissioners, for the Monies that shall be received by them, and for the faithful Execution of their Office; and they may also appoint a Clerk, and such other Officers and Servants, as shall be needful to be employed about the Premises; and may remove them, and elect others in their Place, in Case of Death, or such Removal;

Removal; and may allow them reasonable Salaries out of the Monies to be raised.

15 Geo. II.
7. 1766.

Thirteen Commissioners, at the least, two of which are to be Justices of the Peace of the East Division of the County of Essex, are to be present at all Meetings, for the Purpose of putting this, or the former Acts, in Execution; and three Days Notice of every such Meeting, exclusive of the Day of Meeting, under the Hand of the Clerk, is to be fixed upon the Outside of the Door of the Mootball, or on the Market-Place of the Town of Colchester.

Persons accepting of any Place of Profit, or other Trust relative to the said Duties, or farming any Key within the Limits of this Act, are made incapable of acting as Commissioners.

The Prescriptive or other Rights of the Borough of Colchester are to continue and remain the same as if this Act had not been made, in all Things not interfering with the Directions and due Execution thereof.

P. 1771.

All Suits or Actions, to be brought for any Thing done under any of the former Acts, shall be commenced within six Months after the Commencement of this Act; and, if any Action or Suit shall be brought for any Thing that shall be done in Pursuance of any of the said former Acts, or this present Act, it shall be commenced in six Months after the Fact committed, and shall be brought in the County of Essex; the Defendants may plead the general Issue, that the same was done by the Authority of the said former Acts, or this Act; and if it so appear, or if the Suit be brought in any other County, the Jury shall find for the Defendants; or if the Plaintiffs become Nonsuit, or discontinue their Action, or a Verdict pass against them, or on Demurrer, Judgment is given against them, the Defendants shall have treble Costs, on the Certificate of the Judge before whom the Cause was tried, and shall have the same Remedy as Defendants have for Costs in other Cases by Law.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, and shall be judicially taken Notice of as such by all Judges, &c. without specially pleading the same.

WHITEHAVEN.

7 Anne.

Whereas the Town of Whitehaven in the County of Cumberland is, of late Years, greatly improved in Trade and Shipping, and is yet capable of further Improvements therein, to the great Advancement of her Majesty's Revenue, the Increase of Shipping and Navigation, and the Benefit of the said Inhabitants, and of the adjacent Country, if the Harbour of the said Town can be preserved, and was enlarged and regulated in a proper Manner: And whereas the Application of the accustomed Duties, besides several very considerable Sums, are found insufficient to defray the growing Charges of maintaining the said Harbour, and of making new Works as are still necessary for securing it; to the End therefore that such Course may be for ever established as shall be effectual for the Purposes aforesaid,

S. 1.

It is enacted, That all that Precinct, included within the Limits and Bounds herein-after expressed, viz. beginning at the Wharf, on the North-West Ends of Marlborough-Street, and from thence in a Line North-East and by North, till the Middle of Louthber-Street open upon it, and from thence in a straight Line parallel to the Range of the same Street, directly to the Low-Water Mark, from thence, by the Low-Water Mark to the Rock whereon the new Mole is begun to be erected, and so along the said Rocks, by the Low-Water Mark, till it answer the Line of the said Mole, from thence along that Line till it comes up to the said Mole, and so along the said Mole, till it join upon the old Pier at the Platform, and from thence, including the said Platform, along the new Wharf, till it meet with the Wharf of the West Strand, near the House of Mary Addifon, Widow, from thence along the same Wharf by the Custom-house Key, in a straight Line to the West Side of the Timber-Yard, and so along the Wall of the said Yard, to the North-West Corner thereof, and from thence by the North-West Wall of the same Yard to the Wharf where it began, as the same has lately been set out and bounded, is, and shall be from henceforth for ever, the Harbour of Whitehaven aforesaid, and appropriated to the lying, anchoring, and mooring of all such Ships, Vessels, and Boats, as shall have Occasion,

Occasion, at any Time or Times hereafter, to make Use of the same; and to no other Use or Purpose whatsoever.

No Houses, Enclosures, or Buildings whatsoever, shall, at any Time hereafter, be made nearer the said Harbour than is hereafter limited, viz. On the West Strand, nearer than the present Houses, &c. there; on the new Wharf, between Mrs. Audison's House and the North-East Corner of Henry Walker's Ground-Plot, nearer than the Range of the said House and Ground; and from thence to the Iron Oar Steaths, nearer than forty-eight Yards at Henry Walker's drawn to forty Yards; at the said Steaths from thence to the North-East Corner of the said Steaths, nearer than the East Range of the same; and from thence to the Anchor-Smith's nearer than eighteen Yards; and from thence to the Platform, nearer than the Range of Hewson's Smithy; and from the Platform along the new Mole, to the Elbow of the said Mole, nearer than twelve Yards; and from thence to the Low-Water Mark, nearer than a Line stretching to the North-West, and along the Counter-Mole intended to be made on the North-East Side of the Harbour, nearer than the Range of the North-East Side of Lowther-Street; nor from thence to the Timber-Yard, nearer than fifteen Yards; but that all the Space aforesaid shall be left free and open for the erecting of Posts for the mooring of Ships and Vessels, and for the other Uses of common Wharfs or Quays for the Conveniency of the Shipping in Repairs or otherwise; and that nothing shall be taken or demanded, for or upon the Account of Wharfage, for the Use of any of the said Wharfs or Quays, nor for any Cranage thereon, unless James Lowther, Esq. or his Heirs, &c. and eleven or more of the Trustees hereinafter appointed, shall agree to erect or make any Crane or Cranes, or other Engine, on the said Wharfs, or any of them; which they are hereby impowered to do, as they shall think convenient, for the better lading and unlading of any Goods; in which Case a reasonable Cranage, or Recompence, shall be paid for the Uses of the said Harbour, by such Merchants or others as shall be willing to make Use of the same, and not otherwise.

Provided, that the said James Lowther, his Heirs, &c. Lords of the Manor of St. Bees in the said County of Cumberland, shall and may, from Time to Time, continue the Watch-house, and the Block-maker's Shop, and Store-Room at the End of the Pier, and repair or rebuild the same, and receive the Rents and Profits thereof to his and their own Use. 7 Ann. 3. 3.

A sufficient Way, open and free for Carts and other Carriages, shall be left along each of the said Wharfs, and along the said Pier, and through the Wharf between Henry Walker's Ground Plot and Iron Oar Steaths, from the Ground of the said James Lowther behind the same Wharf, not less than three Yards, next adjoining upon the said Steaths; any Thing in this Act contained to the contrary notwithstanding. S. 4.

And as it is found necessary to complete and finish the new Mole aforesaid, and to make a Counter-Mole and Head on the North-East Side of the said Harbour, to strengthen and repair the Pier with a new Bulwark, and other Works, and to cleanse and deepen the said Harbour; By it further enacted, that, in Lieu of the aforesaid accustomed Duties of Anchorage, which have been heretofore usually paid, all which Duties are hereby wholly and for ever taken away and discharged, there shall be paid, from and after the 25th of March, 1709, for the Term of fourteen Years then next ensuing, the several Rates and Duties herein-after mentioned, viz. One Half-penny for every Ton, computing 192 Gallons, Winchester Measure, to the Ton, for all Coals that shall be delivered to be put on board any Ship or Vessel in the said Harbour for Exportation; which Duty on Coals shall be paid by the Master, or other Person, who shall have the Rule or Command of such Ship or Vessel, after the said Coals are so shipped, and before such Ship or Vessel go out of the said Harbour, and shall be discounted with the Owner or Proprietor of the said Coals out of the Price of the same; and the said Master, &c. is hereby impowered to discount and detain the said Duty accordingly. S. 5.

There shall be paid for all Goods and Merchandize, which shall be imported and landed or discharged out of any Ship or Vessel in the said Harbour, from S. 6.

and after the said 25th of March; for and during all the Term aforesaid, the several Rates and Duties following, viz. For every Hoghead of Tobacco 3*d.* For every Hoghead of Sugar 6*d.* For every Ton of Wine, Brandy, or other exciseable Liquors, 2*s.* For every Ton of Hemp or Flax 1*s.* 6*d.* For every Hundred of Deals 8*d.* For every Last of Pitch or Tar 8*d.* For every Ton of Iron 12*d.* For every Ton or Raft of other Timber 4*d.* For every Barrel of Herrings 1*d.* For every Pack of Linen, containing two Hundred Weight; computing 112 Pounds to the Hundred Weight, 1*s.* And proportionably for every greater or less Quantity of the said Goods and Merchandizes respectively; And for all other Goods and Merchandizes so imported, 2*d.* in every 20*s.* of the Value, as they shall be rated and charged at the Custom-house; all which Sums of Money and Duties upon Importation shall be paid by the Merchant, or other Person into whose Custody or Possession, or by whose Order, the said Goods and Merchandize shall be delivered.

- 7 Ann. S. 7. From and after the said 25th of March, for and during the Term aforesaid, every Master, &c. commanding any Ship or Vessel, shall pay for every such Ship or Vessel, upon her Arrival at the said Port and Harbour from any other Port or Place in the Kingdoms of Great-Britain or Ireland, the Sum of 2*d.* per Ton; and from any Port or Place of her last Discharge in Europe, other than the Kingdoms of Great-Britain or Ireland, the Sum of 4*d.* per Ton; and from any Port or Place of her last Discharge in Asia, Africa, or America, the Sum of 8*d.* per Ton, according to the Tonnage of each Ship or Vessel so arriving there; the said Tonnage to be admeasured as is described in an Act the 5th and 6th of Will. and Mary. intituled, An Act for granting to their Majesties several Rates and Duties upon Tonnage of Ships, &c.
- S. 8. Provided, that for every Ship or Vessel, which, during the Term aforesaid, shall, by Strefs of Weather, be drove into the said Harbour of Whitehaven, or shall otherwise come into the same for Security or Preservation, the said Port or Harbour not being the Port of their Discharge or Lading, there shall be paid one fourth Part of the aforesaid Duties of Tonnage upon Shipping, according to the Ports or Place from whence they shall arrive as aforesaid respectively, and no more.
- S. 9. From and after the Expiration of the aforesaid Term of fourteen Years, one third Part of the Rates and Duties herein before charged upon the Tonnage of Ships and Vessels, and no more, shall for ever continue, and be paid in Manner aforesaid, for the perpetual repairing, cleansing, and maintaining of the said Harbour of Whitehaven.
- S. 10. And, for the better collecting and disposing of the several Sums of Money, Rates, and Duties, hereby made payable, as well after the Expiration of the said Term as during the Continuance of it, and for the making and ordering of the Works herein before enumerated, and for the perpetual good Order and Regulation of the Harbour aforesaid, Be it enacted, that the said James Lowther, his Heirs and Assigns, Lords of the Manor of St. Bees aforesaid, for the Time being, or, in his or their Absence, any Persons deputed by them, under their Hands and Seals, and six other Persons to be likewise nominated, appointed, and changed, from Time to Time, by the said James Lowther, his Heirs and Assigns aforesaid, under their Hands and Seals, and William Peryes, Clement Nicholson, Thomas Lutwidge, Robert Blacklock, Eliska Gale, &c. Merchants, until the first Friday in the Month of August, 1716; and if, during that Term, any of them happen to die or resign, then such Person and Persons, as the greater Part of the Survivors of them shall nominate and elect, during the Residue of the said Term, and from thenceforth fourteen Persons to be chosen, nominated, and appointed, every three Years, by Ballot, by the Majority of the Inhabitants of the said Town of Whitehaven, at the Time of such Election dealing, by Way of Merchandize, in the Goods subjected to the Payments and Duties aforesaid, or any of them; or being Master, or having any Part or Share, not less than one Sixteenth, of any Ship or Vessel then actually belonging to the Port of Whitehaven; the first Election to be made on the first Friday in August, 1716, aforesaid, at the Court-house in the Town of Whitehaven; and so, from Time to Time, on every first Friday of every Month of August, in every third Year

Year after the said first Election successively for ever, shall be, and are hereby constituted and appointed Trustees, for the ordering and directing the Collection, Receipt, and Disposal of the Sums of Money and Duties, which, from Time to Time, by Virtue of this Act, shall become due and payable, and for ordering and directing the Building, and making the Works in this Act before enumerated, and for deepening, cleansing, and regulating the said Harbour of Whitehaven, in such Manner as in this Act is provided.

And to the End the said Duties and Payments may be duly collected, levied, <sup>7 Ann. S. 11.</sup> and paid, according to the true Intent and Meaning of this Act, It is further enacted, that it shall be lawful for eleven or more of the said Trustees, to chuse and appoint such Collectors and Receivers of the Duties and Monies payable by this Act, and to displace them, and appoint others, as they shall think fit.

Provided, that the said Trustees take for such Collectors, &c. good and sufficient Security for the faithful Discharge of their respective Duties, &c. <sup>S. 12.</sup>

The said Collectors and Receivers shall receive for their Pains, in executing their Offices, such Sums as the Trustees shall think fit, not exceeding, for all together, 12d. in the Pound; and the Trustees are hereby impowered to meet on the first Friday in the Month of June, in every Year, or oftener if they think fit, at the Court-house in Whitehaven, to audit the said Collectors', &c. Accounts, which, with all their Proceedings relative to the Trusts, shall be fairly entered into Books provided for that Purpose. <sup>S. 13.</sup>

All the Sums of Money and Duties, collected by Virtue of this Act, shall be applied and disposed for the Uses of the said Harbour, and in such Manner as is in this Act directed, and for no other Use, Intent, or Purpose whatsoever, viz. Eleven or more of the said Trustees shall, and may, from Time to Time, direct and order the making of the aforesaid Works, and the deepening and cleansing of the said Harbour, in such Manner as they shall think most necessary and conducive to the Ends and Purposes aforesaid, according to the true Intent and Meaning of this Act; and shall likewise order and direct the fixing and erecting of Posts for Mooring, on the said Pier and Wharfs as they shall think expedient, and the perpetual repairing of the said Pier, Moles, Wharfs, and mooring Posts, and the cleansing and maintaining of the said Harbour; and shall order the Removal of all Annoyances to the said Harbour and Wharfs, and may contract with Workmen; but first repay the Charges of passing this Act, &c. <sup>S. 14.</sup>

Provided always, that no other Walls, Enclosures, or Breast-Works, but what are directed in this Act, be made within the Limits of the said Harbour, upon any Pretence whatsoever, without the Consent and Approbation of the said James Lowther, his Heirs, &c. and of seventeen, or more, of the rest of the said Trustees for the Time being. <sup>S. 15.</sup>

And be it further enacted, that no Ship shall unlade any Ballast in the said Harbour in the Night Time, nor throw any Thing into it, either of Stone, Rubbish, &c. There shall not be kept any Fire, nor any lighted Candle, except in a Lanthorn, or in Case of Necessity, on board any Ship or Vessel lying in the said Harbour, under different Penalties, &c. That, if any Ship or Vessel shall, through Mismanagement or Carelessness, run foul, or bilge upon the Pier, Moles, or new Wharf belonging to the said Harbour, whereby the same shall be any Ways damaged, the Master or Ruler of such Ship or Vessel shall, with all convenient Speed, upon Notice, repair the Damages so sustained, at the Charge of such Ship or Vessel, under the Penalty of double the Value thereof, for every such Neglect. That, for the natural Securities of the said Harbour, no Person shall Quarry, take or carry away any Stones, either below the High-Water Mark, or from the Baurgh, &c. <sup>S. 16.</sup>

Provided nevertheless, that the said James Lowther, &c. and any seventeen or more, of the rest of the Trustees, may, from Time to Time, as they shall see Occasion, explain or alter all, or any, the aforesaid Orders, in this Act particularly provided, or the Penalties of the same; and also substitute or make any further or other Orders and By-Laws, for the better Government and Regulation of the said Harbour, and the Wharfs aforesaid, and under such Penalties, not exceeding 6s. 8d. for any one Offence, as they shall judge requisite for that Purpose; and that they may also, by the like Concurrence, make any other Work or Works, in or about the said Harbour, as well for the better preserving, securing, cleansing, and deepening the same, as also for the more convenient docking, repairing, and cleansing of Ships or Boats, or for any other Uses, Improvement, or Accommodation of the said Harbour, or of the Shipping therein, as they shall find necessary or expedient; any Thing in this Act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

And for the more effectually preventing the throwing of Ashes, &c. into the Harbour, fifteen or more, of the Trustees, with the Consent of the said James Lowther, may appoint and agree with a Scavenger, within the said Town for carrying away the Dirt, &c.

S. 19.

All Penalties for any Offence committed within the Precincts of the said Harbour, after deducting the Charges of Prosecution, and Allowance to Informers, as the Trustees shall think fit, shall be applied to the Uses of the said Harbour, which Penalties may be recovered by Distress and Sale, &c.

S. 20.

In Case the Collectors and Masters of Ships cannot agree about the Tonnage, it shall be lawful for the said Collectors, at all convenient and seasonable Times, to enter into such Ships, and to admeasure the same, according to the Directions of the Act of Parliament herein-before referred unto, which Admeasurement shall be the Rule to charge such Ships, then, and at all Times afterwards; and, in Case any Master, &c. do not, upon reasonable Demand, pay the aforesaid Duty upon Coals, chargeable upon him by this Act, and to be discounted upon the Coal Owner, as aforesaid; and likewise, in Case any such Master do not, upon like reasonable Demand, after the Tonnage of the said Ship is agreed unto, pay the said Duty upon Tonnage, it shall be lawful for the Collectors to take any Tackle, &c. belonging unto such Ship or Vessel, by Way of Distress, and to sell the same, in Case Payment is delayed for three Days, &c.

S. 21.

And, in Case the Sums, appointed by this Act to be paid for any Goods or Merchandizes imported, shall not be paid by the Merchant, or Owner thereof, upon reasonable Demand made, the Collectors may distrain all, or any Part thereof, or any other Goods belonging to the said Merchants or Owners, which shall then or afterwards come to, or be found in, the Precincts of the said Harbour; and, in Case of Non-payment in three Days, may sell the same, &c.

S. 22.

The Officers of the Customs at the Port of Whitehaven, shall permit the Collectors of the Duty hereby given, without Fee, to resort unto, inspect, and take Cognizance, of any Entries which shall be made there, of any Goods or Merchandize chargeable by this Act; and the said Officers of the Customs shall not discharge any Ship outwards or inwards, until the Duties hereby granted for Tonnage on Ships and Coals shall be paid, to be proved by the Master's producing a Certificate thereof under the Collector's Hand, &c.

S. 23.

And, the better to cleanse and deepen the said Harbour, it shall be lawful for eleven or more of the Trustees, to order the digging and removing any Stones, &c. within the Precincts of the said Harbour, &c. and likewise they shall have free Liberty to dig, quarry, and take all such Stones, within the said Harbour as may be useful for walling or otherwise, and to use the same in the Works of the said Harbour, and to sell such Part of them as there shall be no Occasion for, and apply the Money arising by such Sales to the Uses of the said Harbour only; and if there be not Stones sufficient for the said Work, to be got within the Precincts of the said Harbour, they shall have Liberty to quarry and take so much more, as, together with the Stones arising within the said Harbour, shall be necessary for the Uses and Purposes of it, in any Place or Places upon the Sea Shore, within the Manor of St. Bees, beyond the aforesaid Line, drawn from the Western Points of Tombeard-Rocks to the Baurgb.

S. 24.

Eleven or more of the Trustees shall, by Writing under their Hands, appoint a Pier-Master, to continue during their Pleasure, who shall have Power to order the regular lying, anchoring, and mooring of Ships and Vessels in the said Harbour, and to determine any Difference that may happen in Relation thereto, and to cause a due Execution and Observance of the Rules in this Act, appointed, &c. and the Trustees are hereby impowered to allow such Person a Salary, not exceeding 20*l. per Annum*, &c.

And

And, for the better Security of Ships, which may have Occasion to put into the said Harbour in bad Weather, all that Part of Whitehaven-Bay, lying on the North-East of the said intended Counter-Mole, shall be always left with a free and open Beach to the full Sea; and no Walls, Wharfs, or Breast-Works, shall, at any Time, be made there, upon any Pretence whatsoever, in any such Depth of Water, as may endanger any Ship or Vessel to strike or run upon the same, without the Consent and Approbation of seventeen of the Trustees for the Time being.

Provided nevertheless, that, as the Land shall happen to gain on the Sea, on the North-East Side of the said Counter-Mole, it shall be lawful for such Persons as shall be Owners of such Lands to advance any Buildings or other Works, at their Will or Pleasure, so as not to endanger the Striking of any Ship or Vessel thereon; any Thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

And as the temporary Duties, granted by this Act, cannot of a long Time raise such a Sum of Money as may be sufficient for the aforesaid extraordinary Works, which are to be done at the said Harbour; It is therefore further enacted, that eleven or more of the said Trustees are hereby empowered by Deed or Deeds, indented under their Hands and Seals, to convey and assure all the said Duties hereby granted, or any Part of them, for all, or any Part of the said Term of fourteen Years, as they shall judge requisite, to any Person or Persons, who shall be willing to lend or advance any Sum or Sums of Money thereupon, at Interest, not exceeding the Rate of Six Pounds per Centum per Annum, which Money, so lent or advanced, shall be employed for and towards the Uses of the said Harbour, according to the true Intent and Meaning of this Act, &c.

If any Action, Suit, &c. shall be commenced, &c. against any Person, for any Thing that he shall do in Pursuance of this Act, &c. he may plead the general Issue, &c. And this Act shall be taken, and allowed in all Courts as a publick Act, &c.

The Preamble recites the Acts 7 and 10 Anne, and shews their Deficiency; and then this Act continues the said two recited Acts for twenty-one years, to commence after the 10th Day of April, 1740, except so far as either of them are by this Act enlarged, altered, or otherwise explained.

It is further enacted, that the Trustees appointed by the former, or this present Act, have Power to Mortgage all or any Part of the Duties, subject to the forementioned Debt of 938*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.* 3*q.* to any Person who shall advance Money thereon, to effect the necessary Purposes of this Act, and secure the Repayment of the Sums so advanced, with Interest for the same:

The Money directed to be borrowed by this Act shall be applied, in the first Place to discharge the Sum of 938*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.* 3*q.* borrowed by Authority of former Acts, with the Interest, and afterwards for making such new Works as may be necessary for improving the said Harbour, and keeping the same in good Repair.

After the said Sums are paid off, and the Harbour judged by the Justices of the Quarter-Sessions, to be in good Repair, the temporary Duties shall cease, and a Moiety only of the Duties on Tonnage of Vessels granted by the former Acts, shall continue, to keep the Harbour in Repair for ever.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, &c.

The rest of the preceding Act is only relative to mending the Roads, and setting up Turnpikes in the Neighbourhood of Whitehaven; and consequently, having no Affinity with the Maritime Affairs we are now treating of, its Insertion here would be superfluous and unnecessary.

GREENOCK.

The Town of Greenock, in the County of Renfrew, being advantageously situated on the River Clyde, for carrying on both foreign and coasting Trade, the Superior, with the Inhabitants thereof about the Year 1705, began to raise Money by a voluntary Subscription, for building a Harbour there, and some Progress hath been made therein, which, if completed, would be of great Advantage to the Town, and to the Trade and Navigation of those Parts; but the Produce of the Subscription has been found insufficient to answer that Purpose, and to defray the Expence of cleansing the Harbour, and of performing other Works which are absolutely necessary to be done, to render the same useful and commodious: And, as the Building of a new Church, Town-house, &c. are necessary and much wanted, but the Inhabitants are not able to raise Money to answer the Expence thereof, nor to complete the Harbour, and keep all the said Works in Repair, without the Aid of Parliament; It is enacted, that from and after June 1, 1751, for the Term of thirty-one Years, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, a Duty of two Pennies Scots, or one Sixth Part of a Penny Sterling, over and above the Duty of Excise payable to his Majesty, shall be laid upon every Scots Pint of Ale or Beer, brewed, brought in, tapped, or sold, within the Town of Greenock, and Baronies of Easter and Wester-Greenock, and Finnart, or the Liberties thereof; to be paid by the Brewers for Sale, or Venders thereof, to John Alexander, Writer, and present Bailiff, Robart Donald, Robart Rae, &c. Merchants, who are appointed Trustees for cleansing and repairing the said Harbour and Piers, and for building a new Church, &c. and for putting in Execution all other the Powers of this Act; and the Money so to be raised shall be vested in them, and be applied to the several Uses and Purposes aforesaid; the Charges of obtaining this Act being first deducted.

24 Geo. II.
P. 944.

P. 945.

The Remainder of this Act is the same as the preceding ones of Kirkcaldy, Anstruther-Easter, and Kingbarn, so excuse to insert it; and before I shut up this Article of Ports and Havens, I shall remark, that every Act concerning them, makes any Ballast, Stone, Rubbish, or any Thing else hurtful, thrown into them, Penal, in Conformity with the general Act of 19 Geo. II. before recited at Pages 146, 147 of this Work.

LEITH HARBOUR.

27 Geo. II. By this Act, Power is given to the Magistrates of Edinburgh to contribute 2000*l.* and likewise to receive Contributions from other Persons, towards improving and enlarging this Harbour, and erecting Conveniences for building, repairing, lading, unlading, and laying up of Ships and Vessels, and for the building of Warehouses, Wharfs, and Keys; but, as no Duty is laid on Shipping by this Act, we shall take no further Notice of it.

POOLE.

29 Geo. II.
Sept. 5. The Mayor, Bailiffs, Burgeses, and Collectors, &c. may demand Payment of the several Duties appointed by this Act, in Respect of Goods, &c. imported into Poole Harbour, and also of Ballast Duties and Boomage, from the Master of the Vessel wherein such Goods, &c. shall be imported, at the Time he shall make his Entry, with the Officers of the Customs, of the Cargo of such Vessel; and may also demand Payment of the Duties on Goods, &c. exported from, reladen at, or taken out of any other Vessel in the said Port or Harbour, in Order to be exported, from the Master at the Time he shall clear out.

On Non-Payment of the Duties, the Mayor, or any Justice of the Peace, of the Town of Poole, may, by Warrant, distrain or stop such Vessel till the Duties are paid, with the Costs and Charges of such Distress.

The Master to deliver to the Collector of the Duties, in Writing, an Account of all Goods on board, subject to these Duties, on Penalty of 10*l.* for every Offence.

Salt and Rice, for which the Duty shall have been paid on Importation, to be exempted.

The Master to forfeit 40*l.* if he refuses or neglects to station his Vessel in such Place as the Quay-Master shall assign for taking in or throwing out Ballast, for lading or unlading his Vessel.

All

All Goods, landing on any Quay or Wharf, shall be removed in three Days <sup>29 Geo. II.</sup> from the Landing, or the Owners forfeit 12*d.* per Ton, for every Ton of Goods <sup>sect. 16.</sup> remaining after that Time, and likewise 12*d.* per Ton for every forty-eight Hours they shall remain there.

No Person to empty any Ballast, &c. into the Harbour, on Pain of being <sup>sect. 17.</sup> deemed a publick Nuisance, and their being punished accordingly.

Twenty hundred Weight of Scale Goods, or two Hundred and fifty-two <sup>sect. 18.</sup> Gallons of Liquids, or forty Square Feet of measurable Goods, to be deemed a Ton. If any Dispute arises as to Tonnage, to be determined by the Mayor and two Justices, and four younger Brothers of the Trinity-House, or the Majority of them.

The Table or Schedule of Harbour-Duties, Quayage, or Wharfage Boomage and Ballast-Duties, chargeable on the Goods, and to be paid by the Master.

For every Ton of Goods, imported or exported, shipped or unshipped, laden or unladen, in, on, or out of, any Ship or Vessel, within the Limits of the Harbour of Poole, the Sum of 3*d.* per Ton.

Provided it shall be lawful to import or export &c. any Goods into or from the Channel, leading to Wareham, to the Westward of the South West Buoy, off the Bulwarks of Hamkey, and near the Entrance of the little Channel, leading to Poole, free of the said Duty: Neither shall any Duty be paid by open Boats, Lighters, or Barges without Decks, for bringing Goods from Wareham, or any Part of the Channel to the West of the South-West Buoy, or any Part of the Isle of Purbeck, within North-Haven Point to Poole, or from Poole to Wareham, or any Part of the Channel to the West of the said South-West Buoy, or any Part of the Isle of Purbeck, within North-Haven Point aforesaid; but if the Goods shall be imported in decked Vessels into or out of the little Channel within Poole Stakes, then the Duties to be paid.

For Boomage the following Duties shall be paid, except for Vessels employed in fishing or dredging.

Every decked Vessel of 10 Tons Burthen, or under, shall pay 6*d.*

Ditto 20 Tons, or above 10, 1*s.*

Ditto 30 Tons, or above 20, 2*s.*

Ditto 40 Tons, or above 30, 3*s.*

Ditto 50 Tons, or above 40, 4*s.*

Ditto 60 Tons, or above 50, 5*s.*

For Ballast the following Duties shall be paid: For every Ton of Ballast, shipped or unshipped within Poole Stakes, 6*d.* But it shall be lawful to ship or unship Ballast in the Channel leading to Wareham, to the Westward of the South-West Buoy, or any Part of the Isle of Purbeck, within the North-Haven Point, Duty Free. And no more than 6*d.* per Ton shall be paid for unshipping and shipping Ballast within Poole Stakes to careen.

Tobacco-pipe Clay to be exempted from all Duties.

M I L F O R D H A V E N.

In this Session of Parliament 10,000*l.* were granted towards carrying on <sup>31 Geo. I.</sup> Works for fortifying and securing the Harbour of Milford Haven, on Account of its convenient Situation for fitting out Fleets, and stationing Cruizers: but as no Duties were laid on Shipping for perfecting this useful Work, I shall omit mentioning any Thing further in relation to it.

HAVING thus given a Summary of the Laws in being relative to the Ports and Harbours of Great-Britain, with which all Masters of Ships, Owners, and Merchants should be well acquainted; the first, that they may duly conform thereto, and the two latter, that they may form a just Estimate of all the Expences to be incurred by their Ships and Merchandise in our home Ports; it will be necessary to add some Directions for the better Observance of the Laws and and Regulations of foreign Ports, British Masters of Ships being often very negligent, or wilfully obstinate upon this subject, so that in general they pay more Forfeitures or Penalties in Foreign Ports than those of any other Nation, and occasion more Trouble to their Consuls, who are often obliged to interpose their Good Offices to save them from Corporal Punishment. Indeed, it is a lamentable Truth, that they acquire such a Contempt of legal Authority from the Licentiousness of the Times at Home, that they submit to it with great Reluctance abroad, and sometimes prove refractory even to their natural Protectors. In all foreign Ports implicit Obedience, it is expected, should be paid to the Harbour or Quay-Master, his Deputy, and other Assistants. A prudent Captain will therefore take Care to moor his Ship in the Part of the Harbour or Basin assigned him by the said Officers. And his next Care should be to obtain from the Factor or Merchant to whom he is assigned, a Copy, whether printed or written, of the Regulations established by the Magistrates of the Places for the Masters of all Ships and Vessels entering their Harbour. I am particular upon this Head, because in many foreign Sea Ports, the Harbour Dues are farmed out to low People, at a Rack Rent, who intending to make the most of their Bargains, carefully conceal the said Regulations from Strangers, wishing that they should violate rather than observe them, that they may be enabled to levy Fines, and Penalties. Sometimes also, the Office of Bailie, which answers to our Sheriff, is purchased from the Prime Minister or Prince of the Country, by Men of mean rank and avaricious Principles, and the Power of convicting Offenders being vested in them, like English trading Justices of the Peace, they live by Fees for Commitments and Discharges. This happened to be the Case while the Editor was British Vice Consul at Ostend; and it was not until he had presented a strong Memorial to the Court of Brussels, that an Order was sent to the Magistrates of Ostend to print their Port Regulations, and to distribute a sufficient Number of them to the

A. D. 1781. British and Danish Consuls, the only two then resident, and also to all Masters of Ships requiring Copies.

The Emperour having just made Ostend a free Port, by which wise commercial Revolution, the Oppressions under which the Trade and Navigation of the Austrian Netherlands laboured are mostly removed, and the Port greatly resorted to by Vessels of all Nations, especially British, in the Time of War with France, Spain and Holland, we cannot do a more acceptable Service than to insert a Copy of the above mentioned Regulations, which were drawn up by an eminent Flemish Civilian, and founded upon those of other Maritime Countries.

Directions for Masters of Ships and Vessels in the Port and Key of OSTEND.

I.

IT IS FORBID to all Masters, Pilots, Sailors, Fishermen, Bilandermen, and others to make Fire on board their Ships or Vessels in the Quay or Basin, on any Pretext whatever, under a Fine of ten Guilders.

II.

To make fast either to the Piles or Posts of the Harbour, or to those serving to uphold or preserve the Key or Basin, under the same Penalty as above.

III.

To throw any Filth or Dirt whatsoever, into the Basin under the same Fine.

IV.

To come into the Key or Basin and there to take place without the Knowledge and Consent of the Key Master, under the same Penalty.

V.

To place their Ships or Vessels on the Floor, being of Oak, of the Sluice at the End of the Key, Idem.

VI.

To change Birth, or haul their Ships or Vessels, either in the Harbour or in the Key, without the Key-Master's leave, Idem.

VII. To

VII.

To incumber or stop up the Entrance of the Key or Bafon with their Ships, Veffels, and Bilanders, under three Guilders Fine.

VIII.

To land on the Key Anchors, Guns, Carriages, Masts, &c. and other fuch Articles, without the Key-Master's Knowledge, under a Penalty of three Guilders for each Piece.

IX.

To abufe by Word or Deed the Key-Master when he is performing his Duty, under a Fine of twelve Guilders, befides arbitrary Correction, often Imprifonment.

X.

It is likewife ORDERED that all Masters, Pilots, Sailors, Fishermen, Bilander-men, and others, do put a Sail betwixt the Ships and the Bilander, when they want to be ballafted in the Key or Bafon, under ten Guilders Fine.

XI.

To hawl their Ships or Veffels out of the Bafon on the very firft Order of the Key-Master, idem.

XII.

To land their Gun-powder, and get it transported to the Burgher's Magazine immediately after the Veffel is made faft in the Key or Bafon, under fifty Guilders Fine.

XIII.

To obey instantly and without Reply to the Key-Master's Command, either to go out of the Bafon, or to hawl their Ships or Veffels a-head or a-ftern, or any other Thing whatsoever, under fix Guilders Fine; and further, to indemnify the Masters of any Ships that might fuffer Delay by his Refufal, whereon Credit fhall be given to the Key-Master.

XIV.

On fuch or the like Occafions the Key-Master is authorized to take People, at the Expence of the Captains refufing, to hawl away and change their Births, to cut their Hawfers, and act as he will judge proper, without being responsible for any Damages.

XV.

Every Captain is obliged to hoift his Colours on Sundays and Holy-Days, Saints' Days innumerable, under three Guilders Fine: He muft alfo hoift his Colours at any Time the Key-Master advertifes him fo to do.

XVI.

Finally, every Ship or Veffel arriving in the Harbour laden, or in her Ballaft, pays three Stivers (Pence) per Laft for Lights, and one Stiver Key Dues; being together four Stivers per Laft.

Befides a due Attention to the Regulations of Ports, Masters of trading Veffels fhould be careful not to give Offence to the military Governors, or the Officers on Guard, in Garrifons. To avoid it, they fhould inquire what military Orders are given out with refpect to the Harbour, and oblige their Crews to obferve them. As they vary in different Places, it is impoffible to enumerate them; but one Instance may ferve to explain this Hint. Firing a Mufquet, or even a Pocket-piftol, on board a Ship or on Shore, without Leave obtained from the commanding Officer, or giving previous Notice of the Intention in firing it, is an Offence liable to Punifhment by Imprifonment. In the Month of November, 1765, a Boy on board an Englifh Collier fired at a Bird flying a-crofs the Bafon; the Officer on the Quay-Guard was alarmed, fent a File of Soldiers on board, and demanded the Boy: The Master concealed him, and, refufing to deliver him up, was himfelf carried on Shore, and kept in Cuftody till the Matter was compromised by the Interceffion of the British Vice-Conful. But it may fo happen, that no fuch Protector is on the Spot, in which Cafe great Inconveniences may arife from Ignorance of the eftablifhed Customs in Sea-Ports which are Garrifon-Towns.

Heavy

VII. To

Heavy Forfeitures and Penalties are likewise often incurred by purchasing spirituous Liquors and Wines, in retail Quantities, at improper Places, and of improper Persons. At Ostend, and in other foreign Ports, Publicans are only allowed to sell Liquors to their Guests in their own Houses; and if a Sailor carries a Bottle of Ale, Spirits, or Wine from an Inn or Ale-house, he may be fined or imprisoned for defrauding the Cantein, an Office appointed by the Magistrates for the Sale of such Liquors, in any Quantity under a Gallon, annually farmed out to the highest Bidder.

In a Word, no Care or Circumspection can be too great on the Part of Masters of trading Ships, to keep themselves and their Crews free from all Molestation in the Ports to which their Cargoes are consigned.

Of Light-Houses.

LIGHT-HOUSES.

A LIGHT-HOUSE is a Marine Term for a Tower, commonly advantageously situated on an Eminence near the Sea-Coast, or at the Entrance of some Port or River, for the Guidance of Ships in dark Nights, by the Illumination of a Fire or Candles burnt on the Top of them. The first we read of was called Pharos, from the Greek Word Phos, in Latin Lumen, Light, and Ordo, Latin Videre, to see; and this was so superb a Fabrick, as to be reckoned one of the Seven Wonders of the World, and to give a general Name to all successive ones: It was built by Ptolemy Philadelphus, on a small Island at the Mouth of the Nile, near Alexandria in Egypt, and is said to have cost that King 800 Talents. It is recorded to have been built square, upon four Pillars of Glass resembling Crabs, 300 Cubits high, on which a Fire was nightly burnt to warn approaching Pilots of those dangerous Coasts, and by this Means direct them to shun the Risks they were exposed to: But though this was so justly celebrated both for its Use and Magnificence, it was equalled, if not exceeded, in Fame by the renowned Colossus of Rhodes, which served for the same Purpose. This inanimate Monster was a brazen Statue of Apollo, set up at the Entrance of that Island's Harbour, with its Feet resting on the two Shores; it was about forty-two Yards high, and its Stride so great that the largest Ships sailed into the Port between its Legs: This gigantick Figure was dedicated to the Sun, and its prodigious Size may be ascertained by the Dimensions of its little Finger, which it is said few Men were able to embrace. It was the Work of Chares, a Disciple of the celebrated Sculptor Lysippe, who was twelve Years in perfecting it, and it is reported to have cost about 44,000*l.* Sterling; though I should imagine this to be very far short of its Value, as, when broken to Pieces, it loaded 900 Camels. It remained erect for the Space of 1360 Years, and was then thrown down by an Earthquake, in which Prostration it continued for a long Time, till the Saracens became Masters of the Isle, and sold it to a Jew, who quickly destroyed this Master-Piece of Art, to accommodate his removing it by the Means of the aforementioned Animals.

The Tower of Cordon on the River Bourdeaux, the Pharo of Messina, the Lanthorns at Genoa, Barcelona, &c. are respectively serviceable to the Ships using those Parts; as our's on Scilly, the Eddystone, Caskets, Portland, Dungeness, Forelands, Skerries, &c. besides the floating Light at the Nore, are to Navigation, in a more extensive Manner.

That on the Eddystone was begun by its ingenious Projector, Mr. Henry Winstanley, of Littlebury in the County of Essex, Gent. in the Year 1696, and, after great Labour and Expence, was finished in something more than four Years, though a much less Space of Time would have sufficed, had not the many Difficulties of Stormy Weather, Hardness of the Rock, Tides, and other Impediments he had to struggle with, protracted the Work, and rendered the first Lodgement, or Foundation of the Building, very hazardous and troublesome; however, a Person of Mr. Winstanley's enterprising Genius was not to be intimidated by the Impediments that presented to obstruct the Prosecution of his intended Fabrick; but he watched every Spurt of fair Weather, and Ebb of the the Sea, as well to commence as to carry it on, and happily ran through his Toils by concluding it in the aforesaid Time, though the Light was put up on the 14th of November, 1698, and it thenceforward was inhabited: It stood till the 27th of November, 1703; when Mr. Winstanley, unfortunately being in it, found he had been building his Tomb, as that dreadful Storm laid the Rock once more bare, and buried both him and his Works in the Sea; a plain Proof of the Deficiency of human Contrivance, and of the Insecurity of the best projected Fabricks, when Providence interferes. Its Re-building was begun in July, 1706, by John Ruyerd, Gent. a Light put up therein, and made useful, July 28, 1708, and finished completely in 1709; since which it hath withstood the Tempests it is exposed to, firm and secure.

This Light-house bears from Plymouth, or the Entrance of the Sound, S. and by W. and from Ram-head S. and half a Point Eastwardly, and is distant from the Anchoring in the aforesaid Sound four Leagues, and from Ram-Point about three Leagues and a half, this being the nearest shore to the said House; and the Isle of Maystone bears from the Light-house about N. E. and is also four Leagues distant South. All Ships, coming from the East or West to Plymouth, have much the same Advantage of the Light: All the Rocks near this House are on the Eastwardly Side, and stretching North, but most Southerly, and all are covered at High-Water; but on the West Side any Ship may sail close by the House, there being twelve or thirteen Fathoms Water, and no hidden Rock; though towards the E. and by N. about a Quarter of a Mile distant from the House, there lies one that never appears but at low Spring Tides, and is the more dangerous as it is little known.

The Sea ebbs and flows at this Rock on Spring Tides 19 Feet, and then at High-Water all the Rocks are covered, though a smooth Sea; and it is High-Water at the same Time as at Plymouth; but it runs Tide and half Tide; so that it runs East three Hours after it is High-Water, and yet the Sea falls lower; and it runs West three Hours after it is Low-Water, and yet the Sea riseth.

At low Tides, especially Spring Tides, three great Ranges of Rocks appear very high, and lie almost parallel, stretching towards the S. E. and N. W. the House standing the Westernmost of all. The afore-mentioned hidden Rock is a full Cable's Length from all these others, and lies as aforesaid.

There is always a Family living in it, to tend its Light; and the following Acts have been made for its Management and Support, viz.

From the Time of placing a Light useful for Shipping in Eddystone Light-house, there shall be paid to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of Trinity House of Deptford Strand, by the Masters and Owners of all English Ships and Barks which shall pass by the said Light-house, except Coasters, 1*d.* per Ton outward-bound, and 1*d.* per Ton inward-bound, viz. of the Merchants one Moiety, and of the Owner the other Moiety; and of all such Aliens' Ships as shall pass by the said Light-house 2*d.* for every Ton of the Burden of the Ship; and every Coaster passing by the said Light-house shall pay 2*s.* for each Time: The said Duties to be collected by such Persons as the said Master, &c. shall appoint, in such Port whence such Ship shall set forth, or where such Ship shall arrive, before they lade or unlade; the said Duties to be recovered by Action of Debt, &c.

The Duties in the Act 4 and 5 Anne, Cap. 20. directed to be paid by any Ship passing by Eddystone Light-house, shall be paid for every such Ship, as well those belonging to her Majesty's Subjects as Strangers, which shall pass by the said Light-house, from or to any Port, and shall be received of the Master of such Ship in any Part of Great-Britain or Ireland, and may be recovered in any of her Majesty's Courts of Law.

No Custom-house Officer shall make out any Cocket, or other Discharge, or take any Report outwards, for any Ship, until the Duties granted by the said Act, and payable by the Master of such Ship, shall be paid; and that such Master produces a Light-Bill, testifying the Receipt thereof.

It shall be lawful for every Person authorized by the Trinity-House to go on board any foreign Ship to receive the Duties, and, for Non-payment, to distrain any Tackle belonging to such Ship; and, in Case of any Delay in Payment, for three three Days after Distress, it shall be lawful for the Receivers of the said Duties to cause the same to be appraised by two Persons, and to sell the said Distress.

8 Geo. C. 17.
S. 4.

This Act and also the said former Act shall be publick Acts.

The following Act is concerning the Light-house built on the Island or Rock called Skerries, lying in the Sea near Holyhead, in Confirmation of Letters Patent granted to William Trench, Esq. for building it, and recovers the same Duties as the preceding one, though all the others receive but Half.

8 Geo. II.
Cap. 36. S. 1.

All the Powers and Duties granted in Letters Patent, bearing Date at Westminster the 13th of July, 13 Anne, to William Trench, Esq. deceased, for erecting a Light-house on the Island or Rock called Skerries, near Holyhead in the County of Anglesea, shall have Continuance for ever, subject to a Proviso, as to the maintaining of the Light-house in the Letters Patent contained, and to the Trust in the Act mentioned, and shall be vested in Sutton Morgan, Clerk, who married the only surviving Child of the said William Trench.

- S. 2. The said Sutton Morgan, his Heirs and Assigns, may demand of Masters and Owners of every Ship or Bottom passing, crossing, or sailing in or through St. George's Channel, by Holyhead or Wicklow, to or from any foreign Port, or which shall pass or cross the said Channel to or from any Place in Great-Britain, Southward of Holyhead, from or to Wicklow, or any Place Northward thereof in Ireland, or that shall pass, cross, or sail from any Place Northward of Holyhead, and sail between Holyhead and the Calf of Man, or any Way in St. George's Channel to the Southward of Dublin; and likewise from all Coasters passing to or from any Place in Great-Britain, North of Holyhead, from or to any Port, &c. South thereof, 1*d.* per Ton coming into, and the like Sum going out of, the said Ports in Great-Britain or Ireland, and double such Duties for any foreign Ship.
- S. 3. Ships laden with Coals in Great-Britain, North of Liverpool, for Ireland, or the greatest Part of their Lading being Coals, and passing from Great-Britain to Ireland, shall only pay one Voyage in every Year; the same to be paid the first Voyage yearly, before clearing out of the Custom-houses, either in Great-Britain or Ireland.
- S. 4. In Consideration of the Benefit the Pacquet-Boats sailing betwixt Holyhead and Dublin receive by the said Light-house, the Post-Master General shall pay to the said Sutton Morgan the annual Sum of 50*l.* without Fee, quarterly.
- S. 5. If any Person, having the Command of any Ship, shall refuse to pay the Duties; it shall be lawful for the said Sutton Morgan, his Heirs, &c. to seize any Goods of any Master or Owner of such Ship, and to keep the same till the Duties are paid; and, in Case of Delay in Payment three Days after such seizure, he may cause the same to be appraised by two sworn Appraisers; and afterwards sell the Goods.
- S. 6. Nothing herein shall charge any of his Majesty's Ships of War.
- S. 7. The said Sutton Morgan shall be freed from the Payment of 5*l.* per Annum Quit-Rent, reserved by the Letters Patent.
- S. 12. This Act shall be a publick Act.

LITTLE CUMRAY LIGHT-HOUSE.

29 Geo. II.

By this Act the Trustees are impowered to erect a Light-house on this Island, at the Mouth of the River Clyde, and to fix such Beacons, Buoys, Land or Sea Marks, on any Place in the Firth, as they shall think necessary for rendering the Navigation more safe and convenient.

The Master or Owner of every Vessel, bound outwardly on any foreign Voyage, passing the Light-house, to pay 1*d.* Sterling per Ton, and 1*d.* per Ton passing inwards from any foreign Voyage to the Northward, whether they pass by the middle Passage between the Islands of Little Cumray and Bute, or by the East Side of Little Cumray, or between the Islands of Bute and Arran, and whether they discharge in the Clyde or not: Every foreign Vessel to pay 2*d.* per Ton, inwards and outwards; every Vessel of 30 Tons or upwards, trading to or from any Part of Great-Britain or Ireland only, to pay 2*d.* per Ton every Time

Time they pass; and for every Vessel of fifteen Tons, under the same Restriction, 2*d.* per Ton per Annum; the Year to commence from June 24, and the Payment for the Current Year to be made before clearing the Port.

On Refusal to pay the Duties, the Trustees have Power to distrain any Part of the Tackle of the Ship, and sell the same, returning the Overplus.

There are also some Lighthouses erected for the Service of private Ports, as at Ijford Combe, on St. Bee's Head near Whitehaven. And large Lanthorns are ordered by the Statute, to be set up on Poles at the Heads of some Quays, such as at the Harbour of Minehead, on the River Severn, &c. and Duties are assigned for maintaining them. See 10 Anne, Cap. 24.

The Masters, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House at Deptford Strond, may at their Costs set up Beacons, and Marks for the Sea, in such Places near the Coasts, or Forelands, as to them shall seem meet.

No Steeple, Trees, or other Things standing as Sea Marks, whereof to the Owner or Occupier of the Place, where the same doth stand, before the 1st of March next, Notice shall be given by the Queen's Letters under her Signet, shall, at any Time hereafter, be taken or cut down, upon Pain that every Person, by whose Consent such Offence shall be committed, shall forfeit 100*l.* &c. and if the Persons offending be not of the Value, they shall be deemed convict of Outlawry.

And no Man may erect a Lighthouse, Beacon, &c. without lawful Warrant; and Authority.

N. B. The above-mentioned Trinity House is a Kind of College at Deptford, belonging at first to a Company or Corporation of Seamen only, with Authority, by the King's Charter, to take Knowledge of those that destroy Sea Marks, &c. but now many Gentry, and some Nobility, are made Members or elder Brothers of that Community.

Of Letters of Marque and Reprisal.

LETTERS OF MARQUE or Mart are extraordinary Commissions granted by the Lords of the Admiralty, or by the Vice-Admirals of any distant Province, to the Commanders of Merchant Ships for Reprisals, in Order to make Reparation for those Damages they have sustained, or the Goods they have been despoiled of by Strangers at Sea. Or to cruise against and make Prize of an Enemy's Ships or Vessels, either at Sea or in their Harbours.

We may therefore distinguish two Species of Letters of Marque, those which are special for the Reparation of Injuries sustained by Individuals at Sea, after all Attempts to procure legal Redress have failed; and those which are general, being issued by the Government of one State against all the Subjects of another, upon an open Rupture between them.

They seem to me always to be joined to those of Reprisal, for the Reparation of a private Injury; but, when the Hurt of an Enemy is solely intended under a declared War, the former only are granted to Privateers, as will be shewn in the subsequent Chapter.

These Commissions in the Law have other Appellations besides Reprisals or Letters of Marque, as Pignoratio, Clarigatio, and Androplegia, and though by Virtue of these any Capture they license becomes legal, yet private Authority will not justify the Proceedings, as it only can be done by the Power of that Prince or State, whose Subject the injured Person is, nor is the same grantable even by them, but where the suffering Person has Justice denied him, or illegally delayed.

This Custom of Reprisals is now become a Law by the Consent of Nations, and has been generally confirmed by an Article in almost every Treaty of Peace that has for a Century past been made in Europe, under its proper Restrictions and Limitations; as in that concluded with Spain the 13th of May, 1667, (Art. 3.) that with France the 21st of July, 1667, (Art. 16.) that with Holland of the same Date, (Art. 31.) that with Denmark the 11th of July, 1670, and almost all others made since; and it was constituted by them, grounded, according to the great Sybilian, on the Urgency of human Necessities, as without this great License would be given and tolerated for the committing of Depredations and Injuries, especially if only the Goods of Rulers were made liable, who seldom possess any Thing that the Injured can come at for Satisfaction; whereas the Effects of those private Men, whose Dealings in Trade are various, may be seized for Recompence, sometimes with the greatest Ease, and freed from Risk or Danger.

And as the Benefit of this Obligation was common to all Nations, they, which were at one Time Sufferers, would at another Time be eased by it, and Princes are not only accountable for publick Injuries, but in Prudence should endeavour to prevent private ones, and, by setting the good Example of protecting Foreigners from Wrongs, add Strength to their just Demands of Redress, whenever their own Subjects have Occasion to request it from them.

Molly de Jure

S. 5.

If therefore the injured Party cannot obtain his definitive Sentence or Judgment, within a fit Time, against the Person of whom he complains, or if there be a Judgment given against apparent Right and Law, and no Relief can be had from the Iniquity of such a Decree, the Bodies and Moveables of the Prince's Subjects, who render not Right, may be apprehended and taken.

But in the Prosecution of this there must be,

1. The Oath of the Party injured, or other sufficient Proof, touching the pretended Injury, and of the certain Loss and Damage thereby sustained.
2. A Proof of the due Prosecution for the obtaining Satisfaction in a legal Way.
3. Of the Delay or Denial of Justice.
4. A Complaint to his own Prince or State.
5. Requisition of Justice, by him, or them, made to the Supreme Head or State, where Justice in the ordinary Course was denied.
6. Persistence still in the Denial of Justice.

Mag. Chor.

ter Clause.

And all this preceding Letters of Reprisal, under such Cautions, Restrictions, and Limitations, as are consonant to the Law of Nations, and subsisting Treaties, and as the special Case shall require, may issue not only by the Jus Gentium and Civile, but by the ancient and municipal Laws of the Kingdom.

Molly de Jure
Mar. P. 29.
S. 7.

The Reprisals grantable by the Laws of England are of two Sorts, Ordinary and Extraordinary; the Ordinary are either within or without the Realm, and are always granted to English Merchants, who have suffered in their Persons or Effects, and have had their Goods spoiled, or taken from them, beyond the Sea, by Merchants-Strangers, and cannot upon Suit, or the King's demanding Justice for him, obtain Redress; in such Case the injured Person proving that he has prosecuted the Offenders in a legal Course, and had Justice delayed, or denied him, he shall have a Writ out of Chancery to arrest the Merchants-Strangers of that Nation, or their Goods here in England, the which is granted to the Subject oppressed, not as a Matter of Favour, but of common Right, by the Lord Chancellor or Keeper of England, who always in such Case hath the Approbation of the King or Council, or both, for his so doing.

Molly de Jure
Mar. P. 30.
S. 8.

The other ordinary Reprisals, granted for Reparation out of the Realm, are always under the Great Seal of England, and cannot be revoked or annulled; and the Reason is, because the Person injured hath petitioned, and hath according to Law made out by Proof his Loss, and no Regard having been paid to Letters of Request sent to the Prince of the Offender, nor Reparation made; then the Letters Patent of Reprisal, being sealed, immediately create and vest a national Debt in the Grantee, to be satisfied in such Manner, and by such Means, as the said Letters Patent do direct, out of the Goods and Estates of his Subjects, who refuses or protelates doing Right; but, though these Letters Patents are unrevocable, yet, if the supreme Power thinks the Execution of them cannot well be effected without endangering the Peace of both States, this may justly cause their Respite till a more proper Occasion; for the Statute of 4 Henry V. c. 7. does not restrain the King's Prerogative and Authority, which he had at the common Law, in judging the Conveniency and Time when they shall be executed; and as the King hath the legislative Power of Peace and War, in a publick Treaty for the Nation's Good, they may be notified and then revoked by the Great Seal, in Pursuance of that Treaty, and Princes are always cautious in the framing and composing such Letters Patent, to as they may not be reckoned a Breach of the Peace, which the granting them (for particular Satisfaction) in the ordinary Way, does not amount to.

The Extraordinary Reprisals are by Letters of Marque, for Reparation at Sea, or any Place out of the Realm, grantable by the Secretaries of State, with the like Approbation of the King or Council, or both; but they are only during the King's Pleasure, and to weaken the Enemy during the Time of War, and may, at any Time, be revoked. Mulley de Jure
S. 10.

But, before granting Letters of Marque, there gradually precede two or three Letters of Request, and, according to the Satisfaction, sufficient or insufficient, returned in Answer, Commissions are awarded or denied; and the Prince or State, whose Subject the injured Person is, should not value his Misfortune at so low a Rate, as to refuse him the former, for that would be to accumulate Injuries, but should likewise, if Justice be denied, after such Request, arm him with Power to take Satisfaction by Reprisal, Vi, Manu, & Militari. Ditto, P. 32
S. 11.

Subjects cannot by Force hinder the Execution even of an unjust Judgment, or lawfully pursue their Right by Force, by Reason of the Efficacy of the Power over them: But Foreigners have a Right to compel, which yet they cannot use lawfully, so long as they may obtain Satisfaction by Judgement; though, if that ceases then Reprisal is let in. Ditto, P. 33
S. 12.

Judgement is obtained either in the ordinary Course, by Way of Prosecution, or Suit, or Appeal from the same, after Sentence or Judgment given, to a higher Court; or else in the extraordinary Way, which is by Supplication, or Petition, to the supreme Power; but we must understand that to be when the Matter in Controversy is, tam quoad merita quam quoad modum procedendi; not doubtful; for, in doubtful Matters, the Presumption is ever for the Judge or Court. Ditto, P. 33

But the Reprisal must be grounded on wrong Judgment given, in Matters not doubtful, which might have been redressed in some Shape, either by the ordinary or extraordinary Power of the Country or Place, and the which was apparently perverted or denied: Though, if the Matter be doubtful, it is then otherwise; for in Causes dubious or difficult, there is a Presumption always, that Justice was truly administered by them who were duly elected and appointed for that Purpose.

And yet, in this latter Case, some are of Opinion, if it was dubious, and, if the Judgement was against apparent Right, the Stranger oppressed is let into his Satisfaction; and the Reason is, because the Judge's Authority is not the same over Foreigners as over Subjects, for the Motive or Cause above-mentioned. Paulus Leg.
Julia D. de
bitor.

If an English Merchant shall prosecute a Suit in the ordinary Courts of Law beyond Seas, and Sentence or Judgement shall pass against him, from which he appeals to the supreme Court, and there the first Judgement or Sentence is confirmed, though the Complaint hath received a Judgement contrary to Right and Equity, yet this will be no cause for Letters of Reprisal, though, perhaps, it may occasion Letters of Request, if the Circumstance and Reasons are strong for the same, to have a Rehearing.

But, if an Englishman shall have Right to recover a Debt there, and the Debtor is committed to the Custody of an Officer till Payment, and he wilfully lets the Prisoner escape, who then becomes insolvent, this Circumstance may occasion Letters of Reprisal.

In England, if a Foreigner bring an Action personal against I. S. and the Matter is found special or general, and the Party prays Judgement, and the Court refuses it, and then the Defendant dies, and with him the Action, the Nature of it being such, the Party is here without Remedy, and the same may occasion Letters of Reprisal, if it be accompanied with those Circumstances that evince an apparent Denial of Justice, i. e. putting it off from Term to Term without Cause.

An Englisshman prosecutes his Right in the legal Courts beyond Seas, and the military Governor opposes the Prosecution, and by Force conveys away the Debtor, and his Goods, and the Sentence or Judgment is obtained: Its ultimate End being Execution, is, by the aforementioned Means, frustrated, and may occasion Letters of Reprisal.

Molloy de Jure
S. 15.

If any Person shall be murdered, spoiled, or otherwise damaged, in hostile Manner, in the Territories or Places belonging to any King, to whom Letters of Request are issued forth; and, if no Satisfaction be made for the Injury, Letters of Reprisal may be granted, as the petitioning Parties are not in such Cases compelled to resort to the ordinary Prosecution; but the Prince of the Country, against whom the same are awarded, must repair the Damage out of his, or their Estates, who committed the Injuries; and, if that proves deficient, it must then fall as a common Debt on this Country.

Ditto.

Such Letters of Request generally allot a Time certain for Damages to be repaired, and, if not complied with, Reprisals are to issue: Thus, after the Massacre at Amboyna, and other Depredations committed by the Flemish on the English, his Majesty, in 1625, issued forth his Letters of Request to the States of Holland, for Satisfaction within eighteen Months, otherwise Letters of Reprisal should be granted; and King Charles II. issued Letters of Request to the said States, for Satisfaction to be granted to William Courten, Esq. for Depredations made by their Subjects on two of his Ships; but, not obtaining it in the limited Time, he granted to the Partners and Heirs of the said Courten his Letters of Marque, in the Form following:

CHARLES II. by the Grace of God, of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. to all Christian People to whom these Presents shall come, greeting: WHEREAS our loving Subject William Courten, Esq. deceased, and his Partners, Anno, 1643, by the Depredation and hostile Act of one Gailand, Commander in Chief of two ships belonging to the East-India Company of the Netherlands, was, between Goa and Macao, in the Strait of Malacca, deprived, and most injuriouly spoiled of a certain Ship named the Bona Esperanza, and of her Tackling, Apparel, and Furniture, and all the Goods and Lading in her, upon a very hopeful trading Voyage to China, which were carried to Batavia, and there all, de facto, without due Process of Law, confiscated. And that also in the same Year, another laden Ship of our said Subject called the Henry Bonadventure, being come on Ground near the Island Mauritius, was there, both Ship and Goods seized upon by some of the Officers and Ministers, and others under the Command of the said East India Company, and utterly detained from the right Owners. AND WHEREAS the said William Courten, and his Assigns in his Life-time, used all possible Endeavours to recover the said Ship and Goods, and to procure further Justice against the Malefactors, and yet could obtain no Restitution or Satisfaction, whereby they became to be much distressed and utterly undone in their Estates and Credit: And that thereupon, and upon the most humble Supplications and Addresses of Francis Earl of Skrewsbury, and William Courten, Esq. Grandchild and Heir of the said William, deceased, Sir John Ayton, and Sir Edmund Turner, Knights, George Carew, and Charles Whitaker, Esqrs. on the Behalf of themselves and divers others, interested in the said two Ships Bona Esperanza, and Henry Bonadventure, and in the Estates of the said William Courten, deceased, Sir Riebard Littleton, Baronet, and Sir Paul Pindar, Knight, deceased, that we would take their Case into our princely Consideration, WE, OUT OF A JUST SENSE we then had, and still have, of their unjust SUFFERINGS, in that Buiness, both by our own Letters under our SIGN MANUAL, to the States General of the United Provinces, and by Sir George Downing, Knight and Baronet, our Envoy Extraordinary, to whom we gave especial Command so to do, required Satisfaction to be made, according to the Rules of Justice, and the Amity and good Correspondence, which we then desired to conserve with them firm and inviolable there shall be taken any Ships, Goods, or Merchandizes, of any of our loving Subjects, or the Subjects of any Prince or State in good League or Amity with us, except the States General, or their Subjects as aforesaid, and the Goods therein laden, sold, and embezzled, or diminished, or the Bulk thereof broken, in any Place before they shall be adjudged to belong to the States General, or some of their Subjects, as aforesaid, then this Commission shall be of no sufficient Authority to take the said Ships, Goods, and Merchandizes, or to warrant, or to save harmless, such as shall receive, buy, or intermeddle therein; but both the Prizes so taken, and the said Ship of War, shall be confiscated to our Use.

" AND FURTHER, We do hereby declare, that it is our Will and Pleasure,

 " nistrators, and Assigns as aforesaid, for the Purposes aforesaid." AND OUR WILL and Pleasure is, and We do hereby require our Judge or Judges, of our High Court of Admiralty, for the Time being, and all other Officers of the Admiralty, and all other our Judge or Judges, Officers, Ministers, and Subjects whatsoever, to be aiding and assisting to the said Sir Edmund Turner and George Carew, their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, as aforesaid, in all Points in the due Execution of this our Royal Commission, and to proceed to Adjudications, and adjudge all Ships, Merchandizes, Monies, and Goods, by Virtue thereof to be taken, according to our Princely Intention hereby signified and favourably interpreted and construed, in all Respects, to the Benefit and best Advantage of the said Sir Edmund Turner and George Carew, their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, as aforesaid. IN WITNESS whereof; We have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the 19th Day of May, in the seventeenth Year of our Reign. BY THE KING.

It is not the Place of any Man's Nativity, but that of his Domicil and Abode, Melby de Jure Mar. P. 40. S. 16. not of his Origination, but of his Habitation, that subjects him to Reprise; the Law doth not so much consider where he was born, as where he lives; therefore if Letters of Reprise should be awarded against the Subjects of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, and a Native of Florence, but denized or naturalized in England, should have a Ship, in a Voyage to Leghorn, taken, the Capture is not lawful, nor can she be made a Prize. Yet, by the Laws of England, a natural-born Subject cannot divest himself of his Allegiance, though he happens to be comorant, or a Dweller in the Enemy's Country.

It does not appear from any Precedents, that Reprisals can be granted on Ditto, P. 41. S. 17. Misfortunes happening to Persons on their Goods, residing or being in foreign Parts in Time of War there; for, if any Misfortune happens, or is occasioned to their Effects, or to their Persons, they must contentedly sit down under their Loss; it being their own Fault that they would not fly or quit the Place, when they foresaw the Country was exposed, or would be subject, to the Spoil of Soldiers and Devastations of the Enemy.

By Right, there are many Persons exempted, and those whose Persons are Ditto, P. 41. S. 18. so privileged have also Protection for their Goods, some by the Law of Nations, some by the Civil Law, others by the Common Law; among which the Ambassadors, by the Laws of Nations, their Retinue and Goods; are exempt, coming from him who awarded Reprise; the Law of Nations not only provides for the Dignity of him that sends, but also the secure going and coming of him that is sent.

Travellers through a country, whose stay is but short, and a Merchant of another Place than that against which Reprisals are granted, although the Factor of his Goods was of that Place, are not subject to Reprisals.

When Ships are driven into Port by Storm or Strefs of Weather, they have an Ditto, P. 42. S. 19. Exemption from the Law of Reprisals, according to the Jus Commune, though by the Law of England, it is otherwise, unless expressly provided for in the Writ or Commission; but, if such Ships fly from their own Country to avoid Confiscation, or for some other Fault, and are driven in by Strefs of Weather, they may, in such Case become subject to be Prize; though it is unlawful to make Seizure in any Ports for Reprisals, but in that Prince's who awarded them, or in his against whom the same is issued; for the Ports of other Princes or States are sacred, and the Peace of them not to be violated or disturbed, but justly to be observed and maintained.

If any Ship, carrying Letters of Reprise, attacks a Vessel, and she refuses to Grav. de Jure Belli, Lib. 3. C. 2. S. 4. yield, she may be assaulted and entered; and, if it falls out, though by Accident, that some of those who resist are slain, the Fault will lie at their own Doors, for endeavouring to hinder the Execution of what is right, and which the Law both approves and warrants.

By the Law of Nations, ipso facto, the Dominion of the Things taken by Grav. Lib. 9. those to whom Letters of Marque are granted become the Captor's, till the Debt and Costs, that is, the original Damage, and subsequent Charges, are satisfied; which being done, the Residue ought to be restored. So the Christians used their Equity, having taken the Ships of Genoa: They did not spoil any of the Lading, but preserved the same very carefully till the Debt was paid, which done, an entire Restitution of the Things was made, without any Diminution.

When, perhaps, for the Fault of a few a Debt becomes national, by Reason of which the Goods of the Innocent become liable, if taken, for Satisfaction, in such such Case the Person so suffering is entitled to Contribution for his Relief, being put to the whole Burthen, where more are bound to the same Thing.

M.ley de Jure

S. 28.

Yet, when Depredations have happened to foreign Merchants, our Kings, on Complaint, have often issued Commissions to enquire of the same; and it was so done upon the Petition of some Genoese Merchants, who complained against the Inhabitants of the Isle of Guernsey, for a Depredation in taking away and detaining their Merchandize and Goods to a very great Value, out of a Ship wrecked by Tempest near that Isle, and the Commissioners were impowered to punish the Offenders, and to make Restitution and Satisfaction for the Damages.

H. V.

The like Complaint was made by the Merchants of the Duke of Bretagne, of certain Depredations committed by the Subjects of the King of England, who issued forth the like Commission, to give them Reparation and Damages for the same; so that if the Subjects of the King of England should have their Goods taken by way of Reprise for the Satisfaction of such Debt or Damage, they may have the Benefit of the like Commissions, to make themselves whole out of the Estates of the Offenders.

Of Privateers or Capers.

PPRIVATEERS and CAPERS are synonymous Terms for the same Thing, with this only Difference, that the latter are smaller Vessels than the others; they are generally esteemed private Ships of War, fitted out by Particulars in order to annoy the Enemy, though the Commission is neither so lasting nor so honourable as that given to the Commander of a King's Ship, the one being certain, and continued whilst his Behaviour is unexceptionable, the other only temporary and occasional; the one appointed by his Majesty, the other by a Subject, with the Prince's Approbation, and liable to be turned out at the Owner's Pleasure; and, though such Appointments are ancient, and very useful in a War, by distressing the Enemy, yet many esteem the Action but one Remove from Piracy; as the Undertakers are supposed to have no immediate Injury done them, nor have any other Motive but the Hopes of Gain, to animate them to the Engagement, or to induce their commencing a Trade of Rapine and Spoil on the Persons and Goods of innocent Traders; and, by these Means, to increase the Horrors and Calamities which War naturally brings with it, and inspires; but who-soever reflects, that every Individual is injured, when the Nation in general is so; and that, if this has a Right to vindicate or revenge its Wrongs, Particulars must be justified in affording their Assistance; We must conclude that, in so doing, they only comply as good Subjects, whilst their Proceedings remain directed by Authority, and their Successes against the Enemy are managed with that Humanity our own Natures and the Law of Nations enjoin.

However, leaving these Disputes to be determined by Casuists, I shall proceed to inform my Reader of the Nature and Power of such armed Vessels, and on what Footing they have generally been fitted out in the late and former Wars; and this has been under two different and distinct Commissions, as will hereafter be shewn.

The one of them is customarily granted to the Petitioners for it, after they, at their own Expence, have fitted out a Privateer; and impowers them to appropriate to their own Use whatever Prize they make, after a legal Condemnation, and the Government allows them besides 5*l.\ for every Man aboard a Man of War or Privateer taken or destroyed at the Beginning of the Engagement, and 10*l.*† for every Gun she had mounted, with Liberty of cruising where they please; and in Case we are at War with more Potentates than one, as lately with the French and Spaniards, they must have Commissions for acting against them both, otherwise a Captain carrying only one against the Spaniards, and in his Course meets with and takes a Frenchman; this Prize is not good, but would be taken from him by any Man of War he met, and could not be condemned, for him, in the Admiralty, as many experienced in the late War.

† 4 and 5 Will. and Mar.

The Manner of fitting out these Privateers has commonly been at the joint Expence of several Merchants, and is always very expensive; as warlike Stores are at all Times costly, and their Prices more especially raised on these Occasions, when the Demand for them is considerably increased.

In some of these Adventures, the Men on board go on the Terms of no Purchase no Pay; and, in this Case, the Produce of whatever is taken goes half to the Ship, for the Owners, and half to the Men, divided to them according to the Articles of Agreement; but when the Men sail for Wages the Captures appertain entirely to the Owners, except a small Part, which is commonly stipulated to be given the Sailors, extra of their Wages, in order to animate them in their Behaviour; and both Ways of arming are regulated by the Articles entered into between the Owners and Mariners, of which I shall add a Copy at the End of this Chapter, for my Reader's Information.

The other Commission afore-mentioned is granted to Privateers taken into the King's Service, which notwithstanding are fitted out at the Expence of private Persons, and then let out to the Government, who generally pay them so much per Month for their Hire, and engage to repair them, in Case of Damage, and to pay the Value agreed for, in Case of Loss.

In King William's Reign many large private Ships were engaged for in this Manner, and sent abroad as Convoys, &c. but since our Marine is so greatly increased, the Government does not so much stand in Need of the Merchants' Assistance in this Shape as they formerly did, and consequently do not so often call for it.

No Privateer may attempt any Thing against the Law of Nations, as to assault an Enemy in a Port or Haven under the Protection of any Prince or Republick, be he Friend, Ally, or Neuter; for the Peace of such Place must be kept inviolable.

And, at the Time of granting these private Commissions, great Care is always taken, by Bond, to preserve the Leagues with our Allies, Neuters, and Friends, according to the various and several Treaties subsisting between us; and it is for this Reason that Security is demanded, and given by responsible Men, not concerned in the Ship, to the Value of 1500*l.* for all Ships carrying less than 150 Men, and 3000*l.* for every Ship carrying more, that they will give full Satisfaction for any Damage or Injury that they shall commit in their Courses at Sea, contrary to and in Breach of the aforesaid Treaties, and also under the Penalties of forfeiting their Commissions, and for which their Ships are likewise made liable.

If a Suit be commenced between the Captor of a Prize and the Claimer, and there is a Sentence or Decree given for the Party reclaiming, such Sentence or Decree, upon Security given, shall be put in Execution, notwithstanding the Appeal made by him that took the Prize, which shall not be observed, in Case the Sentence shall be given against the Claimers.

And whereas the Masters of Merchant Ships, and likewise the Mariners and Passengers, do sometimes suffer many Cruelties and barbarous Usages when they are brought under the Power of Ships which take Prizes in the Time of War, the Takers in an inhuman Manner tormenting them, thereby to extort from them such Confessions as they would have to be made: It is agreed, that both his Majesty and the States General shall, by the severest Proclamations, forbid all such heinous and inhuman Offences; and as many as they shall, by lawful Proofs, find guilty of such Acts, they shall take Care that they be punished with due and just Punishment, and which may be a Terror to others; and shall command that all the Captains and Officers of Ships, who shall be proved to have committed such heinous Practices, either themselves, or by instigating others to act the same, or by conniving while they were done, shall, besides other Punishments to be inflicted proportionally to their Offences, be forthwith deprived of their Offices respectively: And every Ship brought up as a Prize, whose Mariners or Passengers shall have suffered any Torture, shall forthwith be dismissed and freed, with all her Lading, from all further Proceeding and Examinations against her, as well judicial as otherwise.

Treaty Marine with Holland, Dec. 1, 1674, Art. 1. Ships may freely sail to and trade with all Kingdoms, Countries, and Estates, which shall be in Peace, Amity, or Neutrality, with the Prince whose Flag they carry, and who is at present at Peace with us, and are not to be molested by us, on Account of any Hostilities that may at present subsist, or hereafter may happen, between his Britannick Majesty and those Estates, provided such Ships are not Bearers of contraband Goods.

Art. 1, 2. And to avoid Disputes about the understanding the Term of contraband Goods, they are expressly determined to be ONLY Arms, Pieces of Ordnance, with all Implements belonging to them, Fireballs, Powder, Matches, Bullets, Pikes, Swords, Lances, Spears, Halberds, Guns, Mortar-Pieces, Petards, Bombs, Granadoes, Fire-Crannels, Pitched Hoops, Carriages, Musquet Rests, Bandeliers, Saltpetre, Musquets, Musquet-Sbot, Helmets, Corslets, Breast-plates, Coats of Mail, and the like Kind of Armature, Soldiers, Horfes, and all Things necessary for the Furniture of Horfes; Hossers, Belts, and all other warlike Instruments whatsoever.

Treaty Marine with Ditto, Dec. 1, 1674, Art. 3. All other Goods whatsoever are, by the aforementioned Treaties, permitted freely to be carried, except to Places besieged, and therefore a Privateer has no Right to put any Hindrance thereto; but if he makes a Prize of a Ship laden entirely with the above-mentioned contraband Goods, both Ship and Lading will be condemned; and if Part be prohibited Goods, and the other Part not, the former only shall become Prize, and the Ship and the Remainder be set free; and, in Case the Captain of the Merchant-Ship will deliver to the Captor that Part of his Cargo which is prohibited, the other shall receive it, without compelling the Merchantman to go out of her Course to any Port he thinks fit; but shall forthwith dismiss her, and upon no Account hinder her from freely prosecuting her designed Voyage.

Moll. yde Jure Mar. P. 52. S. 11. If such Ships shall be attacked in order to be examined, and shall refuse submitting thereto, they may be assaulted and entered by Force; and if the Persons aboard do not yield and surrender, those that resist may be slain.

See Ditto on Reprisals, S. 20. But if any Privateer willfully commits any Spoil, Depredations, or any other Injuries, either on the Ships of Friends or Neuters, or on the Ships and Goods of their Fellow-Subjects, they will be punished, in Proportion to their Crimes, either with Death or otherwise, and their Vessels may likewise be subject to Forfeiture.

Thompson v. Smith, 1 Sid. 310. 2 Keble 158, 176. Whether a Ship taken be a lawful Prize or no., shall be tried in the Admiralty; and no Prohibition shall be granted. In the War between us and Denmark, a Scotch Privateer took a Ship as Prize, being a Danish one, and she was condemned as a lawful Prize by the Admiralty in Scotland, and brought her upon the Land; and S. libelled in the Admiralty of England, suggesting that she was not a Denmark, but a Ship of London. Per Curiam. In as much that the Matter is Prize, or not Prize, no Prohibition.

Raymond 473. Hughes v. Cornwallis & alios Turner and Cary cont. Neale, 1 Lev. 243. 1 Sid. 367; 2 Keble 360, 364. 1 Vent. 173. One who had Letters of Marque in the last Dutch War, took an Offender for a Dutch Ship, and brought her into Harbour, and libelled against her as a Prize, and the Offender libelled in the Admiralty against the Captor for Damages sustained by Hurt the Ship had received in Port; and a Prohibition was prayed, because the Suit was for Damage done in Port, for which an Action lies at the Common Law; but the Prohibition was denied, as the Original was a Caption at Sea, and the bringing her into Port, in order to have her condemned as a Prize, is but a Consequence of it, and not only the Original but also the Consequence shall be tried here.

Barbol. in Lege si quid Bello D. de Cap. Ang. & Salic. in Leg. ab Hostibus C. de Capt. Const. Gall. 20. Tit. 13. Art. 24. Conf. Maris 287. And therefore if he, who hath Letters of Marque or Reprisal, takes the Ships and Goods of that Nation against whom the same are awarded, and carries them into the Port of any Neuter Nation, the Owners may there seize her, or there the Admiral may lawfully make Restitution, as well of the Ships and Goods to the Owners as the captive Persons to their Liberty, for that the same ought first to have been brought infra Præsidia of that Prince or State by whose Subjects, and under whose Commission, the same was taken.

And this is entirely agreeable to the Common Law; for a Dunkirker, having taken a French Vessel, was driven into Weymouth, and sold her there before she was brought infra præsidia Dom. Regis Hisp. and in this Case it was ruled, that if a Ship a Ship be taken by Piracy or Letter of Marque and Reprisal, and is not brought infra præsidia of that Prince or State by whose Subjects the same was taken, it could not become a lawful Prize, nor were the Owners by such a Capture divested of their Property; but, if the Capture be by King's Ships, the Property will be immediately in the Captors, and never be divested, unless afterwards it be recovered by the former Proprietors, or be in Battle regained.

If two Ships with Letters of Marque accidentally meet with a Prize at Sea, though only one attacks and takes her, yet the other being in Sight shall have an equal Share of the Prize, though he afforded no Assistance in her Capture; because his Presence however struck a Terror in the Enemy, and made him yield, which perhaps he would not have done had his Conqueror been single; so that all Ships that are in Sight, though they cannot come up to assist in the Engagement, are entitled by the Common Law to an equal Distribution in the Spoil.

But if those to whom Letters of Marque are granted should, instead of taking the Ship and Goods appertaining to that Nation, against which the said Letters are awarded, willfully take, or spoil the Goods of another Nation in Amity, this would amount to a downright Piracy, and the Persons so offending would, for such Fault, forfeit their Vessel, and the Penalties in which their Securities are according to late Custom bound on taking out such Letters, notwithstanding their Commission; but this must be understood, where such a Capture is done in a piratical Manner; for it is made upon a strong Presumption, supported by many Circumstances and Appearances, that a Capture is just, as belonging to him against whom the Reprisals are granted, though, if on Examination it proves otherwise, and the suffering Parties have their Ship and Goods restored, yet the Captors are not liable to Punishment, though sometimes they may be to Damages. On the contrary, they are justified in endeavouring to recover their Right, or distress the Enemy, for which the Letters were granted them, though in effecting it they may be mistaken, as it is natural for the Enemy to cover their Effects in the best Manner they can. It would be impossible always to determine the Affair at Sea, therefore it is allowable to bring a dubious Capture into Port, in Order to more nice and just Scrutiny and Inspection, otherwise the Goods of an Enemy would often escape, as it frequently happened in the late War. However, to guard against unlawful Seizures, the Government have wisely directed sufficient Caution to be given, as before-mentioned, for the due Observance of the Letters according to Law, before they permit their issuing; and where there is a Breach committed, the Penalties are inflicted.

And in Order to avoid all illegal Proceedings, but to act with due Regularity and Conformity with the Tenor of the Letters granted, whenever a Prize is taken and brought infra præsidia, the Captor must exhibit all the Ship's Papers and captivated Mariners to be examined in Order to Adjudication; till when, Bulk ought not to be broken, nor may the Captain of the Captor suffer any Embezzlement of the Lading, or sell, barter, or dispose of any Part without Commission, as the subsequent Acts will shew.

The Use of this Sort of Vessels we were taught by our Neighbours, and obliged by their Example to encourage them, who, in the first long War, almost covered the Seas, and, like Locusts, devoured every Thing they could overpower; and, in the late War, we sufficiently experienced their Utility, if distressing the Enemy may be termed so, as they advantageously inculcated the Lesson of the original Teachers, and almost ruined the Trade of the first Inventors of these Annoyances, so destructive to the peaceful mercantile Employ; and that we might not be tardy in encountering the Enemy at their own Weapons, the Legislature have thought proper to encourage this Way of molesting them, in the following Acts; which I insert at Length, though a great Part being only temporary are now expired, but will, in all Probability, be revived in any future War.

The Lord High Admiral, Commissioners of the Admiralty, or any three of 13 them, or their Deputies elsewhere, shall, after the 4th Day of January, 1739, P. 132. grant Commissions, or Letters of Marque, on Request of any Owners of Vessels

13 Geo. II.
P. 133.

Vessels, on their giving the usual Security, to any Person whom such Owner shall nominate Commander, or, in Case of Death, successive Commanders of such Vessels, except only for the Payment of the Tenths of the Prizes to the Lord High Admiral, or Commissioners of the Admiralty, for the attacking and taking any Fortres by Land, or any Ship, Stores, Merchandizes, &c. possessed by the Enemy, in any Sea, Creek, Haven, or River, and that such Ship, &c. being first adjudged lawful Prize shall wholly belong to the Owners of such Privateers, and the Captors, in such Proportion as shall have been beforehand agreed on between themselves paying the Duties hereafter mentioned.

P. 134.

The Judge, &c. of such Court of Admiralty shall, if requested thereto, finish, within five Days, the usual preparatory Examination for Trial of Prizes, and the proper Monition shall be issued and executed in three Days after Request; and, in Case no Claim of such Capture shall be duly entered, and attested on Oath, giving twenty Days' Notice after the Execution of such Monition; or if there be such Claim, and the Claimants shall not, within five Days, give Security, to be approved of by such Court of Admiralty, to pay double Costs to the Captors, in Case the same be judged lawful Prize; then the Judge, &c. of such Court of Admiralty, on producing to him the Examination, or Copies thereof, and producing on Oath all Papers taken in such Capture, or on Oath made that no such Papers were found, shall immediately acquit such Capture, or condemn it as lawful Prize. And, in Case such Claim be duly entered, and Security given, and no Occasion appears to examine distant Witnesses, then such Judge, &c. shall examine the present Witnesses, and, within ten Days after Claim and Security, proceed to sentence the Capture as aforesaid. But if the Matter appears doubtful to the Judge, &c. and it be found necessary to examine Witnesses remote from such Court of Admiralty, and such Examination be desired, and an absolute Determination insisted on, on both Sides, then the Capture shall be appraised forthwith, by sworn Appraisers, on the Part of the Captor; for which Purpose the Judge shall cause the Goods found on board to be unladen and put in proper Warehouses, with separate Locks, of the Collector and Comptroller of the Customs, and, where there is no Comptroller, then of the Naval Officer, and the Agents of the Captors and Claimants; at the Charge of the Parties desiring the same, the Claimants giving Security within fourteen Days after making such Claim, to pay the Captors the full Value appraised, if adjudged lawful Prize; after which Security, the Judge shall Order the said Prize to be delivered to the Claimants, or their Agents.

P. 135.

And if the Claimants refuse to give security, the Judge shall take Security of the Captors, to be approved by the Claimants, to pay the Claimants the appraised Value, if it be adjudged not lawful Prize; and the Judge shall proceed thereupon to make an interlocutory Order, for delivering the same to the Captors or their Agents.

All Captures brought into any of our American Colonies shall stay there without breaking Bulk, under the joint Care of the Collector and Comptroller of the Customs; or where there is no Comptroller, of the Naval Officer of that Port, and the Captors and their Agents, till the same shall be cleared or condemned by final Sentence; and on Condemnation as lawful Prize, if taken by a Privateer, shall be immediately delivered to the Captors and their Agents, subject to their own Disposal.

If any Judges, or other Officers in his Majesty's Dominions abroad, neglect to perform any of the Matters to them referred, relating to discharging or condemning the Captures, as aforesaid, shall forfeit 50*l.* &c.

There shall not be paid above 10*l.* to all the Judges and Officers of any Court of Admiralty abroad, for the Condemnation of any Capture under 100 Tons Burthen, nor above 15*l.* if the Capture be of that, or any greater Burthen; and on Payment of either of the said Sums, the Judges, &c. shall be liable to all the several Penalties imposed by this Act, if they neglect to do their Duties within the respective Times limited.

If any Captors or Claimers shall not be satisfied with the Sentence given, in such Court of Admiralty abroad, they may appeal to Commissioners appointed under under the Great Seal of Great-Britain, for determining such Appeals; to be allowed as Appeals to such Commissioners as are now allowed from the Court of Admiralty in England, if it be made within fourteen Days after Sentence, and Security given to prosecute with Effect; and pay treble Costs if the Sentence be affirmed; provided the Execution of any Sentence appealed from shall not be suspended, if the Parties appellate give Security to the Court who passed Sentence to restore the Ship, &c. or the Value, to the Appellants, if the Sentence be reversed.

Any Commanders, Officers, &c. who shall embezzle any Part of the Capture; shall forfeit treble the Value of such Embezzlement; &c.

Provided that nothing in this Act contained shall exempt any Prizes from paying the usual Customs, or being subject to the Laws in being; In any of his Majesty's Dominions.

His Majesty, his Heirs, &c. are empowered to grant Charters, Commissions; &c. in this or any future War; to enable any Societies or particular Persons to join in any Adventures by Sea or Land in America, to surprize, take, or destroy any Moveables or Immoveables belonging to the Enemy, and to vest the Property of all Things so taken in any Parts of America, whether Ships, Goods, Stores of War, Settlements, Factories, Places of Strength, &c. together with all Profits and Advantages accruing from the same, in what Manner and under such Regulations as his Majesty, his Heirs, &c. shall think fit, and to confirm the said Benefits by any further Grants. 13 Geo. II.
P. 139.

Provided that no Charter, &c. shall restrain any of his Majesty's Subjects from having a free Trade to any Part of America.

There shall be paid by the Treasurer of the Navy; on Bills made for by the Commissioners, to be paid according to Course, without Fee; to the Officers, Seamen, &c. that shall have been on board such Privateers, in any Action where any Ships of War or Privateers shall be taken from the Enemy, or destroyed, 5*l.* for every Man which was living on board any Ship so taken or destroyed, at the Beginning of the Engagement between them; the Numbers to be proved by the Oaths of three or more of the chief Officers or Men belonging to such Ships of the Enemy, at the Time of their being taken or destroyed, before the Mayor; or other chief Magistrate of the Port whereto such Prize, or the Men of any Ship destroyed, shall be brought; which Oaths the said Mayor; &c. is hereby required to administer, and grant a Certificate thereof, without Fee, directed to the Commissioners of the Navy; upon producing which Certificate, with an authentick Copy of the Condemnation of such Ship so taken, or, if destroyed; on producing a Certificate from the Mayor, &c. the Commissioners or their Agents shall, within fifteen Days, make out Bills for the Amount of such Bounty, directed to the Treasurer of the Navy, payable to and to be divided among the Owners, Officers, &c. of any Privateer, as by written Agreement among themselves shall be directed. P. 140.

The Bills made out for the Bounty aforesaid shall be payable to the Agents of Owners, &c. of Privateers, to be divided as by written Contract, &c. P. 141.

All Captures, commonly called Flota Ships or Galleons, or any Register Ships, bound from Buenos Ayres or Honduras, or any Goods on board the said Ships, shall be adjudged in his Majesty's High Court of Admiralty, and not by any Court of Admiralty out of Great-Britain.

If any Ships, &c. belonging to his Majesty's Subjects, shall be taken by the Enemy, and afterwards retaken by any Men of War, or Privateers under his Majesty's Protection, the said Ships, &c. so retaken, shall be restored to their proper Owners, paying, in Lieu of Salvage, an eighth Part of the Value, after having been in Possession of the Enemy twenty-four Hours; and, if above twenty-four Hours, and under forty-eight Hours, a fifth Part; and, if above forty-eight Hours, and under ninety-six Hours, a third Part; and, if above ninety-six Hours, a Moiety thereof: All which Payments shall be made without Deduction; and if any Ship so retaken shall appear to have been set forth by the Enemy, while in their Custody, as a Man of War, the Owners of such Ship retaken shall pay a full Moiety of the real Value, without Deduction. P. 142.

If any Ship, &c. be taken by any Privateer, through Consent or Connivance, such Ship, &c. as also the Tackle, Apparel, Furniture, and Ammunition of such Privateer, shall be judged good Prize; and the Bond given by the Captain shall be forfeited to his Majesty, &c.

11 Geo. II.
P. 143.

No Privateer, touching at any of the American Plantations, shall carry from thence any Servant without Consent of the Owner, or any other Person without his Ticket of Leave to depart, but in all Cases be subject to the Laws of the Country.

17 Geo. II.
P. 691, 692.

For the Encouragement of the Officers and Seamen of his Majesty's Ships of War, and of all other British Ships having Commissions or Letters of Marque, and for inducing all British Seamen who may be in any foreign Service to return into this Kingdom, and become serviceable to his Majesty, and for the more effectually securing and extending the Trade of his Majesty's Subjects, It is enacted, [the same as the preceding Act entire, with the following Additions, viz.] that all Commanders of private Ships of War, or Merchant Ships having Letters of Marque, shall, on going into any of those Ports or Harbours, be subject to the several Directions and Forfeitures by such Laws made and provided.

P. 705.

Some Doubts having arisen upon the Construction of several Clauses in the foregoing Act of 13 Geo. II. It is therefore enacted, That, after the first Day of July, 1744, all Proceedings in any of his Majesty's Courts of Admiralty, concerning the Adjudication and Condemnation of Prizes taken from the Spaniards, shall be according to the Method directed and prescribed by this present Act.

Nothing in this Act contained shall restrain his Majesty, his Heirs and Successors, from giving such further Rules and Directions to his respective Courts of Admiralty, for the Adjudication and Condemnation of Prizes, as by his Majesty, &c. with Advice of his Privy Council, shall be thought necessary.

And as in all private Ships of War, or Merchant Ships that shall take out Letters of Marque, it is expedient, for the better Discipline and Government of such Ships, that all Persons who shall enter themselves on board should be under proper Regulations, to pay Obedience to the lawful Commands of the chief Commanders of the said Ships: It is therefore enacted, that all Offences committed by any Officer or Seaman on board any Privateer or Merchant Ship, taking Letters of Marque, during the present War with Spain or France, shall be punished in such Manner as the like Offences are punishable on board his Majesty's Ships of War.

P. 706.

All Offenders who shall be accused of such Crimes as are cognizable only by a Court-Martial, shall be confined on board such Privateer, &c. in which such Offence shall be committed, until they shall arrive in some Port in Great-Britain or Ireland, or can meet with such a Number of his Majesty's Ships of War abroad as are sufficient to make a Court-Martial; and, upon Application made by the Commander of such Privateer to the Lord High Admiral of Great-Britain, or the Commander in Chief of his Majesty's said Ships of War abroad, they are hereby authorized and required to call a Court-Martial, for trying and punishing the said Offences.

P. 487.

For Advancement of the Trade of Great-Britain to and in the several British Sugar Colonies in the West Indies in America, for the better Encouragement of his Majesty's Ships, and private Ships of War, and the annoying and diminishing the Power and Wealth of his Majesty's Enemies in those Parts, and for the Increase of Shipping and Seamen; for these and other Services, It is enacted, that no Mariner, or other Person, who shall serve, or be retained to serve, on board any Privateer, or trading Vessel that shall be employed in any of the British Sugar Colonies in the West Indies in America, &c. shall be impressed or taken away by any Officer belonging to any of his Majesty's Ships of War, unless such Mariner shall have before deserted from such Ship of War, at any Time after the 24th of June, 1746; upon Pain that the Officer so impressing, &c. contrary to the Tenor and true Meaning of this Act, shall forfeit to the Master or Owner of such Vessel, 50*l.* for every Man he shall take, with full Costs of Suit, &c.

P. 488.

Every Master or Commander of a Privateer, or trading Vessel, before he shall receive, in any of the Parts aforesaid, any Seamen, &c. to serve on board, shall endeavour, endeavour, by all the Means he reasonably can, to discover whether such Person hath deserted from any Man of War; and in Case any Commander shall receive any Mariner on board, without first having made such Endeavour towards a Discovery, or if he shall know such a one to be a Deserter, he shall forfeit 50*l.* for every Man he shall so entertain, &c.

And every Master of a Merchant Ship, or Commander of a Privateer, before <sup>10 Geo. II.</sup> he shall set sail from any Port belonging to any of the said British Sugar Colonies, <sup>P. 489.</sup> shall deliver to the chief Officer of the Customs of the Port he sails from, an exact List of all the Men belonging to such Vessel, containing their Names, Ages, and Description of their Persons, upon Pain of forfeiting 10*l.* for every Man he shall receive on board, &c.

Upon the Death or Alteration of any Seaman the List must be altered, and shewn to the Captains of Men of War; and, in Case any Man belonging to his Majesty's Ships of War shall be found on board, whose Name is not in the List, the Master or Commander shall forfeit 50*l.* for every such Man, &c.

The Preamble sets forth, that by the preceding Act of 13 Geo. II. the sole <sup>20 Geo. II.</sup> Property of all Vessels and Merchandize taken from the Spaniards, is given to the <sup>P. 591.</sup> Officers, &c. on board every Privateer, being first adjudged lawful Prize, and divers Rules are therein established for the Condemnation of such Prizes; and by the said Act a Bounty is given to the Officers and Seamen, on their taking or destroying the Enemy's Ships, and that by the foregoing Act of 17 Geo. II. it was found necessary that the same Encouragement should be given to the Captors of French Ships, &c.

All Sales, Bills of Sale, Contracts, Agreements, and Assignments of Shares <sup>P. 592.</sup> of Prizes, &c. taken from the Enemy by Ships of War, or having Letters of Marque, which shall be made at any Time after the said first of June, shall be void and of none Effect.

The Agents are to pay the respective Shares of Prizes and Bounty Money to <sup>P. 594.</sup> all Seamen, &c. as shall appear in Person, or, in their Absence, to their lawful Attornies, empowered by them, in Manner herein-after directed, or to their Executors, &c. without any Regard to Bargain or Sale whatsoever, concerning the same.

After the said 1st of June no Letter of Attorney, made by any Seaman, &c. in any Ship of War, or having Letters of Marque, or by their Executors, &c. in order to empower any Person to receive any Share of Prizes or Bounty Money, shall be valid, unless the same be made revocable, and for the Use of such Seamen, and be signed and executed before, and attested by, the Captain and one other of the signing Officers of the Ship, or the Mayor or chief Magistrate of some Corporation.

As every War produces Alterations, the following have been made since that which commenced in 1756.

If any Captor or Claimant shall not rest satisfied with the Sentence given in <sup>27 Geo. II.</sup> the Admiralty Court abroad, the Party aggrieved may appeal to the Commissioners of Appeals in Causes of Prizes in Great-Britain; the same to be allowed in like Manner as Appeals from the Court of Admiralty in this Kingdom, so as the same be made within fourteen Days after Sentence, and Security be given to prosecute such Appeals, and answer the Condemnation, and to pay treble Costs, in Case the Sentence be affirmed.

The Execution of any Sentence shall not be suspended by Reason of such Appeal, in Case the Party appellate give Security, to be approved of by the Court; to restore the Ship or Effects, or the full Value thereof, to the Appellant, in Case the Sentence shall be reversed.

If any Person, who was not a Party in the first Instance, shall interpose an Appeal from a Sentence given in any Admiralty-Court, such Person or his Agent shall at the same Time enter his Claim, otherwise such Appeals shall be null and void.

All Appraisements and Sales of Ships or Merchandizes, taken by his Majesty's Ships of War, are to be made by Agents, appointed in equal Numbers by the Flag-Officers, Captains, Officers, Ship's Company, and others entitled there-unto,

unto, viz. If the Flag Officers, or Flag Officer, of any Fleet or Squadron, which shall take any Prize, or the Majority of such Flag Officers, if more than one, shall appoint one or more Agents to sell or appraise the same, then the Captains and Commanders shall nominate the like Number to act for them, and all the other Officers shall appoint the like Number to act for them; and all the Crews of the several Ships Companies, entitled thereto, shall appoint the same Number of Agents to act on their Behalf.

But nothing herein is to extend to alter any Agreement between the Owners, Officers, and Seamen of Privateers.

All Agents for receiving the Bounty for Head-Money are to exhibit and register in the Court of Admiralty, where the Prize shall be condemned, their Letters of Attorney appointing them Agents; and if any Agent shall refuse or neglect so to do for six Months after Condemnation, he is to forfeit 500*l.* to be recovered by the Prosecutor.

If any Agent is appointed after Condemnation, he must make the same Registry under the same Penalty.

After the Sale of any Prize taken by any of his Majesty's Ships of War, publick Notice is to be given by the Agents of the Day appointed for Payment of the Shares to the Captors; after which, if any Men's Shares shall remain in their Hands, either belonging to such Men as shall be run from his Majesty's Service, or not be legally demanded in three Years, the same are to go to the Use of Greenwich Hospital.

If any Vessel shall be taken by Collusion by a Man of War, the Commander or Captain shall forfeit 1000*l.* one Moiety to the Use of his Majesty, the other to the Prosecutor; and he shall forfeit his Employment, and be incapable of any Office under his Majesty, during the Space of seven Years; and the Goods, Ship, Tackle, &c. so taken by Collusion, shall be adjudged good Prize to his Majesty.

Persons belonging to his Majesty's Service who shall run away from their Ships before Notification of the Payment of Prizes or Bounty Money, are not entitled to their Shares; but the same shall go to Greenwich Hospital.

And, if they run away after Notification given, they forfeit such Part of their Shares as shall remain in the Agent's Hands.

All Agents, &c. who shall dispose of any Prize, are, within three Months after the Day of the first Payment to the Captors, to transmit to the Treasurer of Greenwich Hospital, &c. a true State of the Produce of such Prizes, together with an Account of the Payment of the several Shares to the Captors, as shall then have been made; and all Persons authorized to receive Bounty Bills are, in like Manner, to transmit an Account of the Payment of the Shares; and all Agents, &c. who shall dispose of any Prizes taken by any of his Majesty's Ships of War, or that shall have received or disposed of any Bills for Bounty, are, within three Months after the Term of three Years, limited by this Act, to make out an exact Account of the Produce of such Prize and Bills for Bounty; as also of the Payments of the several Shares to the Captors, together with a true Account upon Oath, to be taken before the Treasurer of the said Hospital, &c. in Writing under his Hand and Seal, of all Sums then remaining in their Hands, which Money and Accounts they are at the same Time to deliver, taking an Acquittance for the same.

The Persons directed to deliver the Accounts before-mentioned, and to pay the Money within the Time before limited and appointed, on Neglect are to forfeit 100*l.* exclusive of the Money then in their Hands; one Third to his Majesty, the other two Thirds to the said Hospital, with Costs of Suit.

If any Fraud shall appear in the Accounts, every Person, his Aiders and Abettors, are to forfeit 100*l.* over and above the aforesaid Penalties; one Third to his Majesty, one Third to the Hospital, and the other to the Informer, with Costs of Suit.

No Agent may be sued by any Person who shall make a Run from his Majesty's Service, in the Lists certified of the Names of the Officers, Seamen, &c. actually on board any of his Majesty's Ships of War, at the taking of any Prize, until the End of three Months after the Expiration of the three Years limited for the claiming of Prizes and Bounty Money, unless such Person shall, before any Action brought, obtain a Certificate of his Right being taken off, and the Forfeiture of his Share of such Prize and Bounty Money discharged by the Commissioners of the Navy, who subscribed the said Lists, and shall produce such Certificates to the Agents, and unless the Agent shall refuse thereupon to pay the said Prize and Bounty Money within two Months after such Demand and Certificate produced.

The Preamble sets forth, that repeated Complaints having been made of Piracy and Robbery being committed on board small Ships and Boats being, or pretending to be, English Privateers; and that it is apprehended that most of the Acts of Piracy and Robbery have arisen from the Obligation on the Lords of the Admiralty, to grant Commissions to all Commanders of Ships or Vessels of what Burden soever, without Distinction: To remedy which Inconveniency it is enacted, that such Commissions shall be absolutely repealed and made void.

But it is further enacted, that from and after the first of June, 1759, Commissions shall be issued at the Request of any Owner or Owners, they giving such Security as is herein-after mentioned; and that all Ships, Vessels, Goods, &c. taken by any such Privateer, being first adjudged lawful Prize, shall wholly belong to the Owners and Captors, in such Manner as shall be agreed on among themselves, and neither to his Majesty, or any Admiral, Vice-Admiral, Governour, or other Person whatsoever; except as to the Customs and Duties.

No Commission shall be granted, if in Europe, except the Vessel be of 100 Tons Burden, carrying ten Carriage Guns, being three Pounders, and forty Men at least; or unless the Lords of the Admiralty, or Persons authorized by them, shall think fit to grant the same to any Vessel of inferior Force or Burden.

The Lords of the Admiralty may at any Time, by an Order in Writing, revoke any Commission.

In such Case the Secretary of the Admiralty is required with all convenient Speed, after any Commission shall be so revoked, to give Notice in Writing to the Owners, Agents, or Sureties of the Ship or Vessel, named in such Order of Revocation: And, if such Ship shall be in the Channel, the Order of Revocation shall be effectual to supersede the said Commission, at the Expiration of twenty Days from such Notice, or sooner, if the Notice shall be given to the Commander of the Vessel: If she shall be in the Northern Seas, at the Expiration of twenty Days; and if to the Southward of Cape Finisterre, or in the Mediterranean at the End of six Weeks: If in North America or the West Indies, at the Expiration of three Months; and in the East Indies, at the End of six Months: And the Person concerned may complain of such Revocation to his Majesty in Council, within thirty Days after the Notice is given, and the Determination of his Majesty in Council shall be final.

If the Order of Revocation shall be superseded; the Commission shall be deemed to have continued in Force, in the same Manner as if no such Revocation had been made.

No Person shall be liable to be punished for doing any Matter or Thing before he shall have received personal Notice of such Revocation.

Before the granting any Commission, usual Bail or Security shall be taken, each Person, being Security, making Oath before the Judge of the Admiralty, &c. that at the Time of their being sworn, they were worth more Money than the Sum for which they are then bound, exclusive of their just Debts: And the Marshal of the Court, &c. is directed to make Enquiry of the Sufficiency of such Security, and report the same to the Judge or his Surrogate, before such Commission shall be granted.

All Persons applying for Commissions are to make Application in Writing, and set forth therein a particular and exact Description of the Ship or Vessel, specifying the Burden, and the Number and the Nature of the Guns on board, to what Place belonging, and the Names of the Principal Owners, and the Number of the Men, all which Particulars are to be inserted in the Commission, and every Commander shall produce such Commission to the Collector, &c. of the Port from whence such Ship or Vessel shall be first fitted out, or to the lawful Deputy of such Collectors, &c. who are required to inspect the said Ship, without Fee or Reward, so as to ascertain the Burden, Number of Men, and Number and Nature of her Guns: And if they shall find the same to answer the Tenour of the Description in the Commission, or be of greater Force, they are immediately, upon the Request of the Commander, to give him a Certificate gratis, which shall be deemed a necessary Clearance, before such Vessel shall be permitted to sail from that Port: And if the Commander shall depart without such Certificate, or proceed upon a Cruise with a Force inferior to that mentioned in his Commission, or required by this Act, the Commission shall from thenceforth be null and void; and the Commander, being convicted before any Court of Admiralty, shall be imprisoned without Bail or Mainprize, for such Space as the Court shall direct, not exceeding one Year.

If any Collector, &c. shall grant a Certificate for any Vessel which shall not be of the Burden and Force specified in the Commission, or of greater Burden and Force than shall be mentioned therein, he shall forfeit his Office, and be for ever after incapable of holding any Office in the Customs; and shall also forfeit 100*l.* one Half to the Informer, and the other to the Corporation for the Relief of sick and disabled Seamen in the Merchant-Service; or, if the Forfeiture shall be incurred in an Outport, where there is a Corporation for Relief of Seamen, then to the Trustees of such Corporation.

The Tonnage of Vessels to be ascertained according to the Rules laid down by the Act 8 Anno, for making a Dock at Liverpool.

If the Commander of any private Ship of War shall agree to ransom any neutral Vessel, or the Cargo, or any Part thereof, after the same shall have been taken as Prize, and, in Pursuance of such Agreement, discharge such Prize without bringing the same into some Port belonging to his Majesty's Dominions, he shall be deemed guilty of Piracy, Felony, and Robbery; and upon Conviction shall suffer Pains of Death, Loss of Lands, Goods, and Chattels accordingly.

But the Commander of any private Ship of War, upon the Capture of any neutral Ship, which shall be liable only to the Forfeiture of such contraband Goods as shall be on board, may receive such Goods from such Ship, in Case the Commander thereof is willing to deliver the same, and may thereupon set such neutral Ship at Liberty; and if any Person shall purloin or embezzle any contraband Goods before condemnation, he shall suffer such Pains and Penalties as are inflicted by Law on Persons purloining or embezzling Goods out of any captured Ship.

All Books, Papers, and Writings, found in any Vessel, taken as Prize, shall be brought into the Registry of the Court of Admiralty, wherein such Vessel may be proceeded against in Order for Condemnation; but such only translated as shall be agreed or insisted upon by the Proctors of the several Parties, Captors or Claimants, or, in Case of no Claim by the Captor or Registry, to be necessary for ascertaining the Property of such Vessel and her Cargo.

No Judge, Register, or Deputy Register, Marshal or Deputy Marshal, or any other Officer belonging to any Court of Admiralty or Vice Admiralty in Great-Britain or Ireland, or the Plantations or elsewhere, nor any Advocate or Proctor shall be concerned in any Privateer, having Commission aforesaid; on Penalty of forfeiting their Office and also 100*l.* to his Majesty; and every Advocate or Proctor to be rendered incapable of practising for the future.

No Register, or Deputy Register, nor any Marshal nor Deputy Marshal, of any Admiralty or Vice Admiralty Court, shall act or be concerned; either directly or indirectly, as Advocate or Proctor in such Courts, to which they belong; or, on Non-Observance of this Clause, shall forfeit his respective Office and Employment in such Court.

If any Appeal shall be interposed from a Sentence given in an Admiralty Court in Pursuance of the Act 29 Geo. II. the Judge of such Court shall, at the Request and Charge, either of the Captor or Claimant, or of the Claimant only, in Case where the Privilege is reserved in Favour of the Claimant by any Treaty now subsisting subſiſting, make an Order to have ſuch Capture appraiſed, unleſs the Parties agree upon the Value, and an Inventory taken, and then take Security for the full Value thereof, and cauſe ſuch Capture to be delivered to the Party giving ſuch Security, in the ſame Manner as, by the former Act, ſuch Judge ought or could have done before Sentence given, notwithstanding ſuch Appeal; and if there ſhall be any Difficulty or Objection to the giving or taking Security, the Judge ſhall, at the Requeſt of either of the Parties, order ſuch Goods and Effects to be entered, landed, and ſold by publick Auction, as Prize-Goods now are, under the Care and Cuſtody of the Officers of the Cuſtoms, and under the Direction and Inſpection of ſuch Perſons as ſhall be appointed by the Claimants and Captors; the Produce to be depoſited in the Bank of England, or in ſome publick Securities, in the Names of ſuch Truſtees as the Captors and Claimants ſhall appoint, and the Court ſhall approve, for the Uſe and Benefit of the Parties who ſhall be adjudged to be entitled thereto; and, if ſuch Security ſhall be given by the Claimants, then the Judge ſhall give ſuch Capture a Paſs, to prevent its being taken again by his Maſtey's Subjects in its deſtined Voyage.

This Act to continue in Force during the preſent War with France, and no longer.

The Expence at the Admiralty-Office of a Letter of Marque, or a Commiſſion, is *1*l.* 2*s.* 6*d. and at the Commons *9*l.* 14*s.* 6*d. but Proctors, when employed, generally charge fifteen Guineas.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God King of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; TO ALL PEOPLE to whom these Presents shall come, greeting: WHEREAS We, by our Declaration of the nineteenth Day of October, in the Year of our Lord One thousand Seven hundred and Thirty-nine, for the Reasons therein contained, have declared War against Spain; AND WHEREAS We, by our Declaration of the twenty-ninth Day of March, in the Year of our Lord One thousand Seven hundred and Forty-four, for the Reasons therein contained, have declared War against France. AND WHEREAS We, by our Commission under our Great Seal of Great-Britain, bearing Date the eighteenth Day of June following, have willed, required, and authorized our High Admiral of Great-Britain and Ireland, &c. for the Time being, and our Commissioners for executing the Office of our High Admiral of Great-Britain and Ireland, &c. and the Commissioners for executing the said Office, for the Time being, or any three or more of them, to issue forth and grant Commissions to any of our loving Subjects, or others, whom our High Admiral aforesaid, or our said Commissioners for executing the said Office, and the Commissioners for executing the same for the Time being, shall deem fitly qualified in that Behalf, for the apprehending, seizing, and taking the Ships, Vessels, and Goods belonging to France and Spain, or the Vassals and Subjects of the French King or King of Spain, or either of them, or others inhabiting within any of their or either of their Countries, Territories, and Dominions, and such other Ships, Vessels, and Goods as are or shall be liable to Confiscation, pursuant to the respective Treaties between us and other Princes, States, and Potentates, and to bring the same to Judgement in our High Court of Admiralty of England, or such other Court of Admiralty as shall be lawfully authorized in that Behalf for Proceedings and Adjudications, and Condemnation to be thereupon had, according to the Course of Admiralty and Laws of Nations, and with such Clauses to be therein inserted, and in such Manner, as by our said Commission more at large appeareth. AND WHEREAS our said Commissioners for executing the Office of our High Admiral aforesaid, have thought fitly qualified, who hath equipped, furnished, and victualled a Ship called of the Burthen of about

Tons, whereof he the said is Commander. AND WHEREAS the said hath given sufficient Bail, with Sureties, to us in our said High Court of Admiralty, according to the Effect and Form set down in our Instructions made the said eighteenth Day of June, One thousand Seven hundred and Forty-four, and in the eighteenth Year of our Reign, a Copy whereof is given to the said Captain

KNOW YE THEREFORE, that We do by these Presents grant Commission to, and do license and authorize the said to set forth in warlike

Manner the said Ship called the under his own Command; and therewith, by Force of Arms, to apprehend, seize, and take the Ships, Vessels, and Goods belonging to France and Spain, or the Vassals and Subjects of the French King or King of Spain, or either of them, or others inhabiting biting within any of their or either of their Countries, Territories, and Dominions, and such other Ships, Vessels, and Goods, as are or shall be liable to Confiscation, pursuant to the respective Treaties between us and other Princes, States, and Potentates, and to bring the same to such Ports as shall be most convenient in order to have them legally adjudged in our said High Court of Admiralty of England, or before the Judges of such other Admiralty Court as shall be lawfully authorized within our Dominions; which being condemned, it shall and may be lawful for the said to sell and dispose of such Ships, Vessels, and Goods, so adjudged and condemned in such Sort or Manner as by the Course of Admiralty hath been accustomed, except in such Cases where it is otherwise directed by our said Instructions. PROVIDED always, that the said keep an exact Journal of his Proceedings, and therein particularly take Notice of all Prizes which shall be taken by him, the Nature of such Prizes, the Times and Places of their being taken, and the Values of them, as near as he can judge; as also of the Station, Motion, and Strength of the Enemies, as well as he or his Mariners can discover by the best Intelligence he can get, and also of whatsoever else shall occur unto him, or any of his Officers or Mariners, or be discovered or disclosed unto him or them, or found out by Examination or Conference with any Mariners or Passengers of, or in, any of the Ships or Vessels taken, or by any other Person or Persons, or by any other Ways and Means whatsoever, touching or concerning the Designs of the Enemies, or any of their Fleets, Vessels, or Parties, and of their Stations, Ports, and Places, and of their Intents therein, and of what Merchant Ships or Vessels of the Enemies bound out or home, or to any other Place, he or his Officers or Mariners shall hear of, and of what else material in those Cases may arrive to his or their Knowledge; of all which he shall, from Time to Time, as he shall or may have Opportunity, transmit an account to our High Admiral of Great-Britain for the Time being, or our said Commissioners for executing the Office of our High Admiral aforesaid, or the Commissioners for executing that Office for the Time being, or their Secretary, and keep a Correspondence with him or them by all Opportunities that shall present. AND FURTHER PROVIDED, that nothing be done by the said or any of his Officers, Mariners, and Company, contrary to the true Meaning of our aforesaid Instructions, but that the said Instructions shall be by them, and each and every of them, as far as they or any of them are therein concerned, in all Particulars well and duly performed and observed. AND We pray and desire all Kings, Princes, Potentates, Estates, and Republicks, being our Friends and Allies, and all others to whom it shall appertain, to give the said all Aid, Assistance, and Succour, in their Ports, with his said Ship, Company and Prizes, without doing or suffering to be done to him any Wrong, Trouble, or Hindrance; We offering to do the like when we shall be by them therunto desired. AND We will and require all our Officers whatsoever, to give him Succour and Assistance as Occasion shall require. IN WITNESS whereof we have caused the Great Seal of our High Court of Admiralty of England to be hereunto affixed. Given at London the Day of in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and forty four, and in the eighteenth Year of our Reign.

Extract from the Registry of the High Court of Admiralty of England.

GEORGE R.

INSTRUCTIONS for the Commanders of such Merchant Ships and Vessels as may have Letters of Marque, or Commissions for Private Men of War against the King of Spain, his Vassals and Subjects, or others inhabiting within any of his Countries, Territories, or Dominions, by Virtue of our Commission granted under the Great Seal of Great-Britain, bearing Date the thirtieth Day of November, 1739. Given at our Court at St. James's, the thirtieth Day of November, 1739, in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

I. THAT it shall be lawful for the said Commanders of Merchant Ships and Vessels authorized by Letters of Marque, or Commissions for private Men of War, to set upon by Force of Arms, and subdue and take the Men of War, Ships, and other Vessels whatsoever, as also the Goods, Monies, and Merchandizes belonging to the King of Spain, his Vassals and Subjects, and others inhabiting within any of his Countries, Territories, and Dominions; and such other Ships, Vessels, and Goods, as are, or shall be, liable to Confiscation, pursuant to the Treaties between us and other Princes, States, and Potentates: But so as that no Hostility be committed, nor Prize attacked, seized, or taken, within the Harbours of Princes and States in Amity with us, or in their Rivers or Roads, within Shot of their Cannon.

II. That all Ships, of what Nation soever, carrying any Soldiers, Arms, Powder, Ammunition, or any other contraband Goods, to any of the Territories, Lands, Plantations, or Countries of the King of Spain, shall be seized as Prizes.

III. That the said Commanders of such Merchant Ships and Vessels shall bring such Ships and Goods as they have seized, or shall so seize and take, to such Port of this our Realm of England, or some other Port of our Dominions as shall be most convenient for them, in order to have the same legally adjudged in our High Court of Admiralty of England, or before the Judges of such other Admiralty Court, as shall be lawfully authorized within our Dominions: But if such Prize be taken in the Mediterranean, or within the Straits of Gibraltar, then the Captor may, if he doth not think fit to bring the same to some Port of England, or other our Dominions, carry such Ship and Goods into the Ports of such Princes or States as are in Alliance or Amity with us.

IV. That after such Ship shall be taken and brought into any Port, the Taker shall be obliged to bring or send, as soon as possible may be, three or four of the principal of the Company, whereof the Master and the Pilot to be always two, of every Ship so brought into Port, before the Judge of the Admiralty of England, or his Surrogate, or before the Judge of such other Admiralty Court, within our Dominions, as shall be lawfully authorized as aforesaid, or such as shall be lawfully commissioned in that behalf, to be sworn and examined upon such Interrogatories as shall tend to the Discovery of the Truth, touching the Interest or Property of such Ship or Ships, and of the Goods and Merchandizes found therein: And the Taker shall be further obliged at the Time he produceth the Company to be examined, to bring and deliver into the Hands of the Judge of the Admiralty of England, his Surrogate, or the Judge of such other Admiralty Courts within our Dominions, as shall be lawfully authorized, or others commissioned as aforesaid, all such Passes, Sea-Briefs, Charter-parties, Bills of Lading, Cockets, Letters, and other Documents and Writings as shall be delivered up, or found on board any such Ships; the said Taker or one of his chief Officers, who was present and saw the said Papers and Writings delivered up, or otherwise found on board at the Time of the Capture, making Oath, that the said Papers and Writings are brought or delivered in, as they were received or taken, without any Fraud, Addition, Subtraction or Embezzlement.

V. That such Goods, and Merchandizes, taken by Virtue of Letters of Marque, or Commissions for private Men of War, shall be kept and preserved, and no Part of them shall be sold, spoiled, wasted, or diminished, and that the Bulk thereof shall not be broken before Judgement be given in the High Court of Admiralty of England, or some other Court of Admiralty lawfully authorized in that Behalf, that the Ships, Goods, and Merchandizes are lawful Prize; and that no Person or Persons, taken or surprized in any Ship or Vessel as aforesaid, though known to be of the Enemy's Party, shall be in cold Blood killed, maimed, or by Torture or Cruelty inhumanly treated, contrary to the common Usage and just Permission of War, and whosoever shall offend in any of the Premises, shall be severely punished.

VI. That the said Commanders of such Merchant Ships and Vessels, who shall obtain the said Letters of Marque or Commissions, as aforesaid, for private Men of War, shall not do or attempt any Thing against the true Meaning of any Article or Articles, Treaty or Treaties, depending between us and any of our Allies, touching the Freedom of Commerce in the Time of War, and the Authority of the Passports, or Certificates under a certain Form in some one of the Articles or Treaties so depending between us and our Allies, as aforesaid, when produced and shewed by any of the Subjects of our said Allies; and shall not do or attempt any Thing against our loving Subjects, or the Subjects of any Prince or State in Amity with us, nor against their Ships, Vessels or Goods, but only against the King of Spain, his Vassals and Subjects, and others inhabiting within his Countries, Territories, or Dominions, their Ships, Vessels and Goods, except as before excepted; and against such other Ships, Vessels and Goods, as are or shall be liable to Confiscation.

VII. That after Condemnation of any Prize, it shall or may be lawful for the Commanders of such Merchant Ships or Vessels, or the Owners of the same, to keep such and so many Ships, Vessels, Goods, and Merchandizes as shall be condemned to them, for lawful Prize, in their own Possession; to make Sale or dispose thereof in open Market, or otherwise, to their best Advantage, in as ample Manner as at any Time heretofore has been accustomed in Cases of Letters of Marque, or of just Prizes in Time of War; other than Wrought Silks, Bengals, and Stuffs mixed with Silk or Herba, of the Manufacture of Perfia, China, or East-India, or Callicoes painted, dyed, printed or stained there, which are to be deposited for Exportation, according to the Directions of an Act made in the eleventh year of the Reign of the late King William, entituled, An Act for the more effectual employing the Poor by encouraging the Manufactures of this Kingdom: And that it shall be lawful for all Manner of Persons as well our Subjects as others, according to Law, to buy the said Ships, Vessels, Goods, and Merchandizes, so taken and condemned for lawful Prize, without any Damage or Molestation to ensue thereupon to the said Buyers, or any of them, by Reason of the contracting or dealing for the same.

VIII. That if any Ship or Vessel, belonging to us or our Subjects, or to our Allies or their Subjects, shall be found in Distress, by being, in Fight, set upon or taken by the Enemy, the Captain, Officers, and Company, who shall have such Letters of Marque or Commission as aforesaid, shall use their best Endeavours to give Aid and Succour to all such Ship or Ships, and shall, to the utmost of their Power, labour to free the same from the Enemy.

IX. That our Subjects, and all other Persons whatsoever, who shall either in their own Persons serve, or bear any Charge, or Adventure, or in any Sort further or set forward the said Adventure, according to these Articles, shall stand and be freed by Virtue of the said Commission; and that no Person be in any wise reputed or challenged for an Offender against our Laws, but shall be freed, under our Protection, of and from all Trouble and Vexation that might in any wise grow thereby, in the same Manner as any other our Subjects ought to be by Law, in their aiding and assisting us; either in their own Persons, or otherwise, in a lawful War against our declared Enemies.

X. That

X. That the said Commanders of such Merchant Ships and Vessels, or their Owners or Agents, before the taking out Commissions, shall give notice in Writing, subscribed with their Hands, to our High Admiral of Great-Britain, for the Time being, or our Commissioners for executing the Office of our High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing that Office for the Time being, or the Lieutenant or Judge of the said High Court of Admiralty, or his Surrogate, of the Name of their Ship, and of the Tonnage and Burthen, and the Names of the Captain, Owners, or Setters out of the said Ship, with the Number of Men, and the Names of the Officers in her, and for what Time they are victualled, and also of their Ordnance, Furniture, and Ammunition, to the End the same may be registered in the said Court of Admiralty.

XI. That those Commanders of such Merchant Ships and Vessels, who shall have such Letters of Marque, or Commissions as aforesaid, shall hold and keep, and are hereby enjoined to hold and keep, a Correspondence, by all Conveniences, and upon all occasions, from Time to Time, with our High Admiral of Great-Britain for the Time being, or our Commissioners for executing the Office of our High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing that Office for the Time being, or their Secretary, so as, from Time to Time, to render and give unto him or them, not only an Account or Intelligence of their Captures or Proceedings, by Virtue of such their said Letters of Marque, or Commissions, as aforesaid; but also, of whatsoever else shall occur unto them, or be discovered and declared unto them, or found out by them, by Examination of, or Conference with, any Mariners, or Passengers of or in the Ships or Vessels taken, or by any other Ways or Means whatsoever, touching or concerning the Designs of the Enemy, or any of their Fleets, Ships, Vessels, or Parties; and of the Stations, Seas, Ports, and Places, and of their Intents therein; and of what Merchant Ships or Vessels of the Enemy, bound out or home, they shall hear of; and of what else material in these Cases may arrive to their Knowledge, to the End such Course may be thereupon taken, and such Orders given, as may be requisite.

XII. That no Commander of a Merchant Ship, or Vessel, who shall have a Letter of Marque or Commission as aforesaid, shall presume, as they will answer it at their Peril, to wear any Jack, Pendant, or any other Ensign or Colour usually borne by our Ships; but that, besides the Colours borne usually by Merchant Ships, they do wear a red Jack with the Union-Jack, described in the Canton at the upper Corner thereof near the Staff; and that one third Part of the whole Company of every such Ship or Vessel so fitted out as aforesaid, shall be Land-men.

XIII. That such Commanders of Merchant Ships and Vessels who shall obtain such Letters of Marque or Commissions, as aforesaid, shall also, from Time to Time, upon due Notice being given them, observe all such other Instructions and Orders as we shall think fit to direct, for the better carrying on of this Service.

XIV. That all Persons who shall violate these Instructions shall be severely punished, and also required to make full Reparation to Persons injured, contrary to these Instructions, for all Damages they shall sustain by any Capture, Embezzlement, Demurrage, or otherwise.

XV. That before any such Letters of Marque, or Commissions, issued under Seal, Bail, with Sureties, shall be given before the Lieutenant and Judge of our High Court of Admiralty of England, or his Surrogate, in the Sum of three thousand Pounds Sterling, if the Ship carries above one hundred and fifty Men: and, if a lesser number, in the Sum of fifteen hundred Pounds Sterling: Which Bail shall be to the Effect, and in the Form following:

WHICH Day, Time, and place personally appeared who submitting themselves to the Jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty of England

England, obliged themselves, their Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, to our Sovereign Lord the King, in the Sum of Pounds of lawful Money of Great-Britain, to this Effect; that is to say, That Whereas is authorized by Letters of Marque, or a Commission for a private Man of War, to arm, equip, and set forth to Sea, the Ship called the _____ Tons, whereof he the said

_____ goeth Captain, with Men, Ordnance, Ammunition and Victuals; to set upon by Force of Arms, and to subdue, seize, and take the Men of War, Ships, and other Vessels whatsoever, together with the Goods, Monies, and Merchandizes belonging to the King of Spain, or to any of his Vassals and Subjects, or others inhabiting within any of his Countries, Territories, or Dominions whatsoever, and such other Ships, Vessels, and Goods as are or shall be liable to Confiscation, excepting only within the Harbours or Roads within Shot of the Cannon of Princes and States in Amity with his Majesty: And Whereas he, the said _____ has a Copy of certain Instructions, approved of and passed by his Majesty in Council, delivered to him to govern himself therein, as by the Tenor of the said Commission, and of the Instructions thereto relating, more at large appeareth: If, therefore, nothing be done by the said _____ or any of his Officers, Mariners, or Company, contrary to the true Meaning of the said Instructions, but that the Commission aforesaid, and the said Instructions, shall in all Particulars be well and duly performed and observed, as far as they shall the said Ship, Captain, and Company any Way concern; And they, or any of them, shall give full Satisfaction for any Damages or Injury which shall be done by them, or any of them, to any of his Majesty's Subjects or Allies, or Neuters, or their Subjects; And also shall duly and truly pay, or cause to be paid, to his Majesty, or the Customers or Officers appointed to receive the same for his Majesty, the usual Customs due to his Majesty, of and for all Ships and Goods, so as aforesaid taken and adjudged for Prize; And moreover, if the said _____ shall not take any Ship or Vessel, or any Goods and Merchandizes, belonging to the Enemy, or otherwise liable to Confiscation through Consent, or clandestinely, or by Collusion, by Virtue, Colour, or Pretence of this said Commission, that then this Bail shall be void, and of none Effect: And unless they shall so do, they do all hereby severally consent that Execution shall issue forth against them, their Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, Goods and Chattels, wherefoever the same shall be found, to the Value of the said Sum of _____

Pounds, before-mentioned. And in Testimony of the Truth thereof, they have hereunto subscribed their Names.

By his Majesty's Command,

HARRINGTON.

High

High Mightinesses the States General of the United Netherlands, concluded at London the first of December, 1674, Old Style, and confirmed by subsequent Treaties: And they are hereby required to give Security, pursuant to the Tenth Article of the aforesaid Treaty Marine, for the due Performance thereof.

Exam. SAMUEL HILL, Register.

The following are such Articles of Agreement as were commonly entered into by the Captains of Privateers, in the late War, and their Crews; which I publish as a Copy for my Readers to have Recourſe to, in Cases wherein future Ruptures may render them useful, viz.

ARTICLES agreed between Captain A. B. Commander of the Private Man of War, called the Terrible, with twenty Guns mounted, carrying nine Pound Shot, twenty Brass Pattereroes, four Mortars, and some Wall-Pieces, manned with two hundred Men, now lying at Church-Hole, designed to cruize against the French and Spaniards, on the one Part; and the said Ship's Company on the other, witnessth:

1. That the said Captain A. B. for himself, and in Behalf of the Owners of the said Ship Terrible, shall put on board her great Guns, Swivels, Powder, Shot, and all other warlike Ammunition necessary for them; as also small Arms, and Provisions sufficient for the said Ship's Company for a six Months' Cruize at Sea, from their sailing from the Downs; in Consideration of which, the Owners or their Assigns shall be reimbursed, out of the first Prize or Prizes taken by the said Ship Terrible, before any Dividend is made thereof, the whole Charge of warlike Stores, great Guns and small Arms excepted, Victualling, Advance-Money, and the Expences the Owners are at for the Surgeon's Chest, and a Set of Musick; after which one Half of the nett Proceeds of such Prize or Prizes as shall be taken, to be for the Account of the Owners, and at the Disposition of the Managers; and the other Half of such nett Proceeds to be the sole Property of the Ship's Company; the Captain's Share of which to be 6 [in some 8] per Cent. and the Residue to be divided in the Proportions mentioned in the eleventh Article of these Presents.

2. That, for preserving Decorum on board the said private Man of War, no Man is to quit, or go out of her, on board of any other Vessel or Vessels, or on Shore, without Leave obtained of the commanding Officer on board, under the Penalty of such Punishment as shall be esteemed proper by the Captain and Officers.

3. That it shall be entirely in the Captain's Power to cruize where he shall esteem most beneficial for the Interest of the Owners and Ship's Company.

[In some, it is to cruize where the Managers, and in others, where the Owners shall direct.]

4. That if any Person be found a Ringleader of Mutiny, or causing a Disturbance on board, refuse to obey the Command of the Captain and Officers, behave with Cowardice, or get drunk in Time of Action, he or they shall forfeit his or their Share, to be divided amongst the Ship's Company; and be otherwise punished according to Law.

5. That all Clothes, Bedding, Watches, and Rings in wear, Buttons, Buckles, and what else is deemed small Plunder by Custom, is to be divided amongst the Ship's Company, according to their several Stations; the Captain not to interfere with them: The Cabin Utensils, in present Use, for the Commander.

6. That if any Person shall steal, or convert to his Use, any Part of the Prize or Prizes, or be found pilfering any Money or Goods, and be convicted thereof, he shall forfeit his Share to the Ship and Company.

7. The Captain has the Power of taking out of any Prize, or Prizes, whatever Stores he may judge necessary for the Ship Terrible, without paying for them; provided the Prize is not disabled thereby.

8. That

8. That whosoever first spies a Sail, which proves to be a Prize, shall have seven Pounds [in some only one Guinea, in others five] and the first Man proved to board a Prize before the strikes, shall have a Gratuity of ten Pounds [in some ten, and in others fifteen Guineas] for his Bravery, to be deducted out of the gross Sum of the Prize.

9. That if any private Man shall lose a Leg, Arm, or Eye, in Time of Action, or in the Ship's Service, he shall besides the Advantage of Greenwich Hospital, have a Gratuity of 25*l.* and in Proportion to the Officers, exclusive of Shares [in others only 20*l.* to a private Man, 50*l.* to the Captain, 40*l.* to the first Lieutenant, and 30*l.* to each of the other Lieutenants, Master, and Surgeon] the said Sums to be deducted out of the gross Sum of the Prize; and in Case of Mortality under Cure, the said Gratuity and Shares to be made good to the Affligns.

10. That for the further Encouragement of the said private Man of War's Company, it is agreed, that the chief Officers shall have six Guineas, the petty Officers and able Seamen five Guineas, able bodied Landmen three Guineas, and Boys one Guinea, advanced to them in the Hope. [In some, the Officers and Seamen have only five Guineas and the Landmen two.]

11. That the Half of the nett Proceeds of all Prizes, taken by the Ship Terrible which is appropriated to the Ship's Company be divided amongst them in the Manner following, after the Captain's 6 or 8 per Cent. [as shall be agreed] is taken thereout as above.

When the Captain has not the above-mentioned 6 or 8 per Cent. but divides with the Ship's Company, he commonly has 10 shares as follows, viz.

	Shares		Shares
The Captain	12	The Captain	2
The first Lieutenant	5 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6	The Master at Arms	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2
The second Lieutenant	4 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6	The Armourer	1 $\frac{1}{2}$
The third Lieutenant	3 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 5	The Midshipmen, to each	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2
The Master	3 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 5	The Quarter Masters, to each	1 $\frac{1}{2}$

The Boatswain	3	The Captain's Ditto	1 $\frac{1}{2}$
The Boatswain's Mates, to each	2	The able Seamen, to each	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1
The Purser	3	The able Landmen, to each	1 $\frac{1}{2}$
The Cooper	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 2	The Sea Boys, to each	1 or 1 $\frac{1}{2}$
The Mulick, to each of them	2	The Land Boys, to each	1 to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$

12. That on the Death of the Captain, the Command do devolve on the next Officer, and so on in Rotation; and, for the Encouragement of the able Seamen; and others, on the Loss of Officers, they are to be replaced out of the Ship's Company, according to their gallant Behaviour, as the Captain shall appoint.

13. That whoever deserts the said Ship Terrible, within the Time here- under mentioned, shall forfeit his Prize Money to the Owners and Company, to enable them to procure others in their Room.

14. All and every one or board does covenant and agree to serve on board the said Ship Terrible, the Term of six Months, beginning at the said Ship's Departure from the Dowry.

15. And lastly, for the true Performance of all, and every the aforementioned Covenants and Agreements, each and every of the said Parties do bind themselves, their Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, in the penal Sum of five hundred Pounds, lawful Money of Great-Britain, firmly by these Presents:

In

8. That

In Witness whereof the said Parties to these Presents have hereunto severally set their Hands and Seals, the _____ Day of _____ in the Year of our Lord 1746, and the Twentieth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King George the Second.

The Wording of Ransom Bills has been various, though the Substance the same; I have therefore only added here the Form of one, which I give my Reader, both in French and English, as they are commonly printed for Privateers to carry with them.

I John Stout, Commander of the private Ship of War, called the Success, by Virtue of his Britannick Majesty's Commission, dated at London, the Twenty-fourth Day of August, 1746, to seize all Subjects and Vassals, Ships, Goods, Monies and Effects whatsoever, of the French King, and King of Spain, having taken a Ship or Vessel called the Malbeureux of Nantes, whereof John Martel was Commander, Burden about two Hundred Tons, bound from the said Port to Cadix, under French Colours, laden with Wheat, in the Latitude of _____ and _____ Longitude from London; the said Ship and Cargo belonging to Messrs. La Bourdonnage & Comp. of Nantes, Subjects of the French King, which Ship and Wheat I have agreed to ransom for one Thousand eight Hundred Pounds Sterling, to be paid in London, within two Months from the Date hereof, to the Order of Mr. James Fillpurse; In Consideration whereof, I have set the said Ship and Cargo at Liberty, to proceed for the said Port of Cadix, where she shall be obliged to arrive within the Space of thirty Days from the Date hereof, after the Expiration of which Time, this Agreement shall not warrant her from being taken again by any English Ship of War or Privateer; for the true Payment of which Ransom, I have received as Hostage, Mr. Thomas Lecroy, belonging to the said Ship, who is not to be set at Liberty until the said Ransom be fully and truly paid, as abovementioned; I therefore pray and desire all Friends and Allies, to suffer the said Ship Malbeureux, to pass and proceed to the said Port of Cadix, without any Lett or Molestation within the said covenanted Time. And I the said John Martel, Commander of the said Ship the Malbeureux, as well in my own Name, as in the Name of the aforesaid Messrs. La Bourdonnage & Comp. Owners of the said Ship and Cargo, have voluntarily submitted myself to the Payment of the said Ransom of one Thousand eight Hundred Pounds Sterling, in London, as aforesaid; for which I have given the said Mr. Thomas Lecroy for Hostage, who, upon the Payment of the said Sum as agreed, shall be immediately released and set free, and at full Liberty to return to his own Country, or wheresoever he shall think proper; hereby promising not to act contrary to the Conditions of this Agreement, whereunto we have, with the said Hostage, interchangeably set our Hands, on board the said private Ship of War, this third Day of September, 1746.

Of Pirates, or Sea Rovers.

A PIRATE is a Sea-Thief, or an Enemy to human Kind, who aims at enriching himself by marine Robberies, committed either by Force, Fraud, or Surprize, on Merchants or other Traders at Sea; and the Histories of them are filled with the Barbarities they have committed on such Occasions, and the severe Usage they have given to those who have been so unhappy as to fall into their Hands.

They confine themselves to no Place, nor have any settled Residence, but are Rovers at large; though they generally cruize where most likely to meet with Prey, and in Parts where they have the greatest Probability of finding Supplies, and which afford the best Ports for their Safety: And as all these Circumstances unite in America, that Part of the World has been most pestered with them; and they being Enemies to all, all ought to be Enemies to them, and no Faith is to be kept with Villains who despise both the Laws of God and Man: They justly forfeit the Protection of their natural Sovereign, and any Prince hath Power to make War against and destroy them, though not Subjects to his Government.

Pirates, though called Enemies, are yet improperly termed so, as they are no Commonwealth, nor live by settled Laws, but Rules founded on Iniquity, and which they frequently break through, to the Destruction of one another: That Superiority which they assign to some among them, though necessary to their wicked Union, is oftentimes changed, as Humour and Caprice directs, and the strongest or most profligate becomes a Chief by mutual Consent; and as no Community can subsist without some Sort of Government, so these make a Shew and Profession of one; do sometimes comply with Agreements made, more especially with those who supply them with Necessaries: though this may reasonably be supposed to proceed more from the Motives of Self-Preservation than from any Intention of doing Right or Justice to those iniquitous Persons who carry on such a villainous and contraband Trade: It is true, all are not equally bad; for we have heard of some who have governed with more Moderation, and not entirely shook off Humanity, as the Generality of them have; but even the best of them are offensive to the fair Trader, and, by commencing Pirates, they become obnoxious to those Laws which otherwise were made to protect them.

Cap. 20. S. 40.*

There are, however, Instances where Success has made a Company of them so powerful as to induce them to settle, and form themselves into a Commonwealth: It was to this that Algiers, Tripoli, and Tunis owe their Establishment, and which they have supported for many Years, though they really still subsist by their quondam Profession, or what is very like it; and only observe the Treaties made with them so long as the Rabble will permit, and it suits their Convenience, yet they avoid quarrelling with all the European States at once, but take them by a sort of Rotation, and plunder from them what they can, one after another, for which they sometimes smart, though too seldom: However, since their becoming a State, and professing Allegiance to the Grand Signor, Princes have thought proper to treat with them, and to admit their Ambassadors on the same Footing as those from other Potentates, with Respect to their Immunities and Privileges.

It is undoubtedly both for the Honour and Interest of all Princes to suppress Pirates, and not suffer them by any Means to find Shelter or Refuge in any Part of their Dominions, but on the contrary to arm against them, and provide such Remedies as may restrain their Progress, which our Kings have always done, though it is dubious whether obliged thereto by the Civil or Common Law of this Kingdom.

Id. Raymou'd,
933. If a Master of a Ship, after making the best Defence he could, is taken by a Pirate, and for the Redemption of his Ship and Cargo willingly submits to become a Slave to his Captors, the said Ship and Cargo are, by the Law Marine, tacitly obliged to contribute to the obtaining his Freedom; but if a Pirate, by feigning himself distressed, with the usual Signals, or pretending to be stranded, leaky, or in any other Danger, shall, by these Means, allure the Master to vary his Course in order to afford his Assistance, and so he falls into the Trap the Pirate has laid for him, although he frees the Vessel and her Lading by remaining a Slave, they are no Ways obligated to contribute to his Redemption, as his Capture was occasioned by his own Folly in being so decoyed.

Ditto, 934.

A Ransom promised to a Pirate is not binding by the Civil Law, therefore no Wrong is created by not complying with it; and the Reason is, that the Law of Arms is not communicated to such, neither are they capable of enjoying that Privilege which lawful Enemies may challenge in the Caption of another: However, this hath its Limits; for a Pirate may have a lawful Possession, which he cannot be denied claiming at Law, if Injury or Wrong be done him, and this is in Consequence of his taking a legal Course; for by that he submits to the Magistrate, and pays Obedience to the Laws in his demanding Justice.

If a Pirate attacks and takes a Merchant-Ship, and afterwards redeems her, on the Master's swearing to pay him a certain Sum, at a Time and Place agreed on, if he does not comply with his Oath, he is supposed by some not to be guilty of Perjury, as a Pirate is not a determinate but a common Enemy, and with whom they think neither Faith nor Oath is to be kept; others pretend nothing can free him from a Compliance with his Vow, as it is not Men only that are concerned in it, but God also, who is certainly no Friend to Perjury. However, with humble Submission to better Judgements, I think some Distinction ought to be made in concurring Circumstances; for suppose, either at Sea or Land, a Robber claps a Pistol to the Breast of the Person he has seized, and makes him swear to do such Things as he cannot perform without great Prejudice to himself and his Dependents, as the Payment of a Sum of Money, which may distress his Circumstances and ruin his Family; I say, in such a Case, or other similar ones, I believe no one will pronounce the Oath to be binding, which the Terrors of a threatening Enemy had forcibly drawn from him that made it.

An Englishman committing Piracy on the Subjects of any Prince or State in Amity with the Crown of England, is within the Statute of 28 Hen. VIII. and so it was held where one Winterfon, Smith, and others, had robbed a Ship of one Maturine Guatier, belonging to and bound from Bourdeaux, with Wines for England, and the same was Felony by the Law Marine, and the Parties were convicted accordingly.

And so if the Subject of any other Nation or Kingdom, being in Amity with the King of England, commit Piracy on the Ships or Goods of the English, the same is Felony, and punishable by Virtue of the above Act: And it was so adjudged, where one Carelse, Captain of a French Man of War, and divers others, Rot. Adm. attacked four Merchant-Ships, going from the Port of Bristol to Caermarthen, and robbed them of about 1000*l.* for which he and the rest were arraigned, and found guilty of the Piracy. 28 Eliz. m.

But, before the 25th of Edw. III. if the Subjects of a foreign Nation and some English had combined in the committing of Piracy, it would have been Treason in the English, and Felony in the Foreigners; an Instance of which is quoted by Shard, where a Norman, being Commander of a Ship, had, together with some English, committed Robberies on the Sea, and being taken and tried, they were found guilty, the Norman of Felony, and the English of Treason, who accordingly were drawn and hanged. But at this Day, by the Laws Marine, they would both receive Judgement as Felons, without Distinction. 42 Affix p. 25. Shard. Fid. & Hen. V. Cap. 6.

If the Subjects of a Prince at Enmity with the Crown of England, shall sail aboard an English Pirate, with other English, and then a Robbery is committed by them, and they are afterwards taken, it is without doubt a Felony in the English, but not in the Foreigners; for they cannot be tried by Virtue of the Commission upon the Statute; for it was no Piracy in them, but the Depredation of an Enemy, for which they shall receive a Trial by Martial Law, and Judgement accordingly. Molloy de Jure Mar. P. 61. S. 10.

Piracies committed in the British Seas, by the Subjects of any Power in Amity with the Crown of England, are properly punishable by this Crown only; and if a Spaniard robs a Frenchman on the High Sea, their Princes being both then in Amity with the Crown of England, and the Ship is brought into a Port of this Kingdom, the Frenchman may proceed Criminaliter against the Spaniard to punish him, and Civiliter to have Restitution of his Vessel; but if the Vessel is carried infra Præsidia * of that Prince by whose Subject the same was taken, there can be no Proceedings Civiliter, and doubted if Criminaliter; but the Frenchman must resort into the Captor's or Pirate's own Country, or where he carried the Ship, and there proceed. Selden Mare Claus. Lib. 1. Cap. 27. Grav. de Jure Belli ac Pacis. C. 9. S. 16.

If a Piracy be attempted on the Ocean, and the Pirates are overcome, the Captors may immediately punish them with Death, and not be obliged to bring them into any Port, provided this occurs in Places where no legal Judgement can be obtained. Molloy de Jure Mar. P. 62. S. 12.

And therefore, if a Ship should be on a Voyage to America, or on a Discovery Ditto. of those Parts still unknown to us, and in her Way be attacked by a Pirate, whom she fortunately overcomes, in this Case, by the Laws Marine, the Vessel becomes the Captor's Property, and the Pirates may be immediately executed, without the Solemnity of Condemnation.

So likewise, if a Ship be assaulted by Pirates, and in the Attempt they are subdued and taken, and carried into the next Port, if the Judge openly rejects their Trial, or the Captors cannot wait till Judgement shall be given, without certain Peril and Loss, they may do Justice on them themselves, without further Delay or Attendance. Molloy de Jure Mar. P. 62. S. 13.

If a Pirate at Sea attacks a Ship, and in the Engagement kills a Person in her, though he has not succeeded in taking her, the Pirates are all Principals in the Murder, if the Common Law hath Jurisdiction of the Cause; but by the Law Marine they only who gave the Wound shall be Principals, if they can be known, and the rest Accessaries; and where they have Cognizance of the Principal, the Courts at Common Law will send them their Accessory, if he comes before them. Rot. Adm. 28 Eliz. m. 24.

A Dutchman, naturalized by the Duke of Savoy, and living at Villa Franca in his Dominions, procured a Commission from the States of Holland, and coming to Legborn, there rid with the Colours and Ensigns of the Duke of Savoy: The English Ship Diamond, being then in Port, took in her Lading, and proceeded on her Voyage, in which she was surprized and taken by that Caper, and carried into Villa Franca, and there condemned and sold; but afterwards returning to England, the original Proprietors, having Notice of it, made a Seizure; and upon Trial, Adjudication passed for them; for though the Ship of War and Captors were of Savoy, and carried their Prize thither, yet being taken by Virtue

Virtue of a Dutch Commission, according to the Law Marine she must be carried infra Præsidia of that Prince or State by Virtue of whose Commission she was taken; nor does such carrying of the Ensigns or Colours of the Duke of Savoy, who was then in Amity with the Crown of England, nor the Commander's being a Subject of that Prince, make him a Pirate, or subject him, or those to whom the Interest of the Prize was transferred, any ways to be questioned for the same Criminaliter; for that the Original Quoad, the Taking, was lawful *, as one Enemy might take from another; but Civiliter, the same might be, for that the Captor had not entitled himself to a firm Possession.

Grævius, Lib. 3. Cap. 9. S. 15 and 16.

And therefore, in all Cases where a Ship is taken by Letters of Marque or Piracy, if the same is not carried infra Præsidia of that Prince or State by whose Subject the same was taken, the Owners are not divested of their Property, but may re-ceive wherefoever they meet with it. *Mich. 8 Jac. in B. C. 2 Inft. 109. Lib. 8. Fol. 32.

If a Pirate attacks a Ship, and only takes away some of her Men, with an Intention to sell them for Slaves, this is Piracy by the Law Marine; and if a Bale or Pack of Merchandize be delivered to a Master to carry abroad to a certain Port, and he goes away with it to another, and there sells or disposes of it †, this is no Felony; but if he opens the Bale or Pack, and takes any thing out, animus furandi, this Act may amount to such a Larceny as he may be indicted for in the Admiralty, though it does not amount to a Reprisal; yet if the said Master should carry the Lading of this Ship to the Port appointed, and after re-take the whole Pack or Bale back again, this may amount to a Piracy; for he being in the Nature of a common Carrier, the Delivery had taken its Effect, and the Privy of the Bailment is determined.

41 Edw. III. 14. Allen, IV. 23. S. ad leg. Rhod. de Jack. L. 2.

In Case a Ship shall be attacked by a Pirate, and the Master for her Redemption shall give his Oath to pay a Sum certain; though there be no Taking, yet is the same Piracy by the Law Marine; but by the Common Law there must be an actual Taking, though it be but to the Value of a Penny, in the same Manner as it is in a Robbery on the Highway.

14 Edw. III. 115.

And if a Ship shall be riding at Anchor, with Part of the Mariners in her Boat, and the rest on Shore, so that none remain in the Ship, yet if she be attacked and robbed, the same is Piracy.

Trin. 7 Jac. in B. R. Roll. Abr. 530. Moor's Rep. 76.

A Merchant has procured Letters of Marque or Reprisal, and delivered the Commission to others to endeavour a Satisfaction; if those so commissioned commit Piracy, the Vessel is certainly forfeited; but the Merchant is no ways liable to make Satisfaction; for though the Superior by the Civil Law is answerable for the Actions of his Servants, yet as this Question must be decided by the Law of Nations, in Virtue of which such Commissions are awarded or granted, the Merchant by it will be exempted from answering for the Behaviour of those he commissioned, unless it can be proved he foreknew that they would commit such a Piracy, or Spoliation, or that he had any Way abetted or consented to the same, by which the Right may be forfeited, and the Civil Law let in, to acquire Satisfaction.

If Goods are taken by a Pirate from one Ship, and he afterwards attacks another, by whom he is subdued, he thereby becomes, according to the Law Marine, an absolute Prize to the Captor, after a legal Condemnation. And,

Though it is held by the Common Law of England, that if a Man commit Piracy upon the Subjects of another Prince, though in League with us, and brings the Goods into England, and sells them in a Market overt, the same shall bind, and the Owners are for ever excluded; and, if they should endeavour in the Admiralty to dispute the Property in Order to Restitution, they will be prohibited.

A Ship which belonged to several Owners was sent to the Indies on a trading Voyage, and upon the high Sea the Mariners committed Piracy, for which, on her Return to the River Thames, the Admiral seized her as Bona Pyratarum; but the Merchants her Owners took the Sails and Tackle out of her, and there was a Decree, that the Admiral shall not have the Goods stolen from other Men, but the Owners shall have them.

It appears by the Preamble to the Statute of 23 Hen. VIII. Cap. 15. that this Offence was not punishable by the Common Law, but the same was determined and judged by the Admiral, after the Course of the Civil Law; but by Force of the said Act the same is enquired of, heard, and determined, according to the Course of the Common Law, as if the Offence had been committed on Land.

But by Lord Hale*, the Court of King's Bench had certainly a concurrent Jurisdiction with the Admiralty, in Cases of Felony committed upon the Narrow Seas, or Coast, though it were High Sea, because within the King's Realm of England: But this Jurisdiction of the common Law Courts was interrupted by a special Order of the King and Council, 35 Edw. III. and since the 38 Edw. III. it does not appear that the Common Law Courts take Cognizance of Crimes committed upon the high Seas.

And for the Trial of Piracy, and to determine what Actions come under this Denomination, as also to encourage the Suppression of it, the following Acts have been made, viz.

All Offences of Piracy, Robbery, and Murder, done upon the Sea, or in any Haven, River, or Creek, where the Admirals pretend to have Jurisdiction, shall be inquired into, tried, heard, and determined, in such Places in this Realm, as shall be limited by the King's Commission, as if such Offences had been done upon Land; and such Commissions shall be under the great Seal, directed to the Lord Admiral, or his Lieutenant or Deputies, and other Persons named by the Lord Chancellor, to hear and determine such Offences after the common Course of Law, used for Felonies committed within the Realm.

The remaining Sections of this Act are omitted, because the Act is amended and re-enacted 28 Hen. VIII. Cap. 15. which follows.

All Treasons, Felonies, Robberies, Murders, and Confederacies, committed upon the Sea, or in any Haven, River, Creek, or Place, where the Admirals have, or pretend to have any Power or Jurisdiction, shall be enquired, heard, and determined in such Shires and Places in this Realm, as shall be limited by the King's Commission, as if such Offences had been committed upon Land, and such Commission shall be under the Great Seal, directed to the Admirals, &c. and to three or four such other Persons as shall be named by the Lord Chancellor, after the common Course of the Law used for Treason, Felonies, &c. committed upon Land, within this Realm.

Such Persons to whom such Commissions shall be directed, or four of them, shall have Power to inquire of such Offences by the Oaths of twelve lawful Inhabitants in the Shire limited in their Commission, as if such Offences had been committed upon Land within the Shire; and every Indictment found before such Commissioners, of any Treasons, Felonies, or other such Offences committed upon the Seas, or in any Haven, River, or Creek, shall be good in Law; and such Process, Judgement, and Execution, shall be had against every Person so indicted, as for Treason, Felony, or other such Offences done upon Land; and the Trial of such Offences shall be by twelve Men, inhabiting in the Shire limited within such Commission, and no Challenge to be had for the Hundred; and such as shall be convicted of any such Offences shall suffer such Pains of Death, Losses of Land and Goods, as if they had been convicted of the same Offences done upon Land.

Some Publick Notary shall be Register of the Court; and in case of his Absence, Death, or Incapacity, or for Want of a Person so qualified, the President shall appoint a Register, giving him an Oath, duly, faithfully, and impartially to execute his Office; which Register shall prepare all Warrants and Articles, and provide all Things requisite for any Trial, according to the substantial and essential Parts of Proceeding in a Court of Admiralty in the most summary Way; and shall make Minutes of the Proceedings, and enter them in a Book, and shall transmit the same, with the Copies of all Articles and Judgements, unto the High Court of Admiralty of England.

If any of his Majesty's Ships shall commit Piracy or Robbery, or any Act of Hostility, against others his Majesty's Subjects upon the Sea, under Colour of any Commission from any foreign State, or Authority from any Person whatsoever, such Offenders, and every of them, shall be adjudged Pirates, Felons, and Robbers; and being convicted, according to this Act, or 28 Hen. VIII. Cap. 15. shall suffer Pains of Death, and Loss of Lands and Goods.

Lord Mansfield said, in the Case of Goff and Witbers, that in Spain, Venice, and England, the Goods go to the Captors of a Pirate, against the Owners, as there can be no Condemnation to entitle the Pirate, and this is agreeable to Grotius de Jur. Bell. and to Locennius de Jur. Marit.

However, by the Marine Ordinance of France in 1681, the Ships and Effects of their Subjects, or of their Allies, retaken from Pirates, and reclaimed within a Year and a Day from the Declaration which shall be made of them at the Admiralty, shall be restored to the Proprietors, on paying one third of the Value of the Ships and Goods, for Charges of the Recapture. This Ordinance is accounted, by the French Writers, a great Instance of their national Generosity. But the Stipulations in Treaties of Commerce and Navigation between England and other powers go still farther, and therefore shall be recited in this place.

" For the greater Freedom of Commerce and Navigation, it is agreed and concluded, that the King of GREAT-BRITAIN and the STATES GENERAL, shall not receive into their Havens, Cities, and Towns, nor suffer that any of the Subjects of either Party do receive Pirates or Sea Rovers, or afford them any Entertainment, Assistance, or Provision, but shall endeavour that the said Pirates and Sea Rovers, or their Partners, Sharers, and Abettors, be found out, apprehended, and suffer condign Punishment, for the Terror of others: And all the Ships, Goods, and Commodities piratically taken by them, and brought into the Ports of either Party which can be found; nay, although they be sold, shall be restored to the right Owners, or Satisfaction shall be given either to the Owners, or to those who by Letters of Attorney shall challenge the same, provided the Right of their Property be made to appear in the Court of Admiralty by due Proofs according to Law. Treaty with Holland 1667. It was the Violation of this Treaty on the Part of the Dutch which contributed to the Rupture between Great-Britain and Holland, at the Close of the Year 1780. The Regency of Amsterdam had not only protected, but given every Aid in their Power to Paul Jones, a Native of Great-Britain, who, under a Commission granted to him by the Rebel Subjects of the King of Great-Britain in America, engaged and took his Majesty's Frigate the Serapis, a Sloop called the Countess of Scarborough, and two or three British Merchant-Ships, all of which he carried to the Texel, and sold the Merchant Vessels and their Cargoes, himself appearing publickly on the Exchange of Amsterdam, where he was carested by the Merchants, and the Magistrates supplied Jones with Provisions, Ammunition, &c. for refitting and putting to Sea, notwithstanding the repeated Remonstrances of Sir Joseph Yorke, the British Minister at the Hague, who demanded Restitution of the King's Ships, and the Seizure of Paul Jones the Pirate."

If any Commander, or other Officer, or Seaman of a Merchant Ship, that carries Guns and Arms, shall not fight and endeavour to defend themselves when attacked by a Pirate, or shall utter any Words to discourage the other Mariners from defending the Ship, by which Means she is taken by the Pirate, in such Case, the said Commander, &c. shall forfeit all the Wages due to him or them, to the Owner of the Ship, and suffer six Months' Imprisonment.

No Master, or Owner of any Merchant Ship, shall pay to any Seaman beyond the Seas, any Money or Effects on Account of Wages, exceeding one Moiety of the Wages due at the Time of such Payment, till such Ship shall return to Great-Britain, Ireland, or the Plantations, or to some other of his Majesty's Dominions whereto they belong, on Forfeiture of double the Money so paid, &c.

S. 27. If a Pirate enters into a Port or Haven of this Kingdom, and assaults and robs a Merchant Ship at Anchor there, this is not Piracy, because the same is not done super altum mare, upon the high Sea, but a downright Robbery at Common Law, for that the Act is infra Corpus Comitatus, and was inquirable and punishable by the Common Law before the Statute of 28 Hen. VIII. Cap. 15. An Instance of which was in Hide & Al. who robbed the Ship of one Capt. Slue of some Merchandize, appertaining to Mr. Moss, a Merchant in London, and for which they were indicted at the Common Law, and found guilty, Anno 22 Car. II. at the Old-Bailey.

18. Geo. II.
P. 659. By the recited Act of 11 Will. III. it is, amongst other Things, enacted, That all Piracies and Robberies committed on the Sea, or in any Haven or Place, where the Admirals have Power or Jurisdiction, may be examined and adjudged, according to the Directions of the Act, in any Place at Sea or Land, to be appointed by the King's Commission, And also, that if any of his Majesty's natural-born Subjects, or Denizens of this Kingdom, shall commit any Piracy or Robbery, or Act of Hostility, against others of his Majesty's Subjects on Sea, under Colour of Commission from any foreign Prince or State, or Pretence of Authority from any Person, they shall be deemed Pirates, Felons, and Robbers, and being convicted according to the said Act, or of 28 Hen. VIII. therein recited, shall suffer such Pains of Death, &c. as Pirates, &c. ought to have and suffer: And whereas, during the War with France and Spain, divers Subjects have entered into the Service of his Majesty's Enemies, on board Privateers, or other Ships, having Commissions from the Crowns of France and Spain, and committed Hostilities against his Majesty's Subjects on the Seas, in the West-Indies, &c. and as Doubts have arisen whether, as such Offenders have been guilty of High Treason, they can be guilty of Felony within the Intent of the said Act, and as such be tried by the Court of Admiralty thereby appointed; to put an End to the said Doubts, therefore, It is enacted, That all Persons, being natural-born Subjects or Denizens of his Majesty, who, during the present or any future Wars have committed, or shall commit, any Hostilities on the Sea, or in any Haven, River, Creek, or Place where the Admirals have Power of Jurisdiction, may be tried as Pirates, Felons, and Robbers, in the said Court of Admiralty, on Ship-board, or on Land, as Persons guilty of Piracy, &c. are by the said Act directed to be tried; and being convicted thereof, shall suffer such Pains of Death, Loss of Lands, Goods, and Chattels, as other Pirates, &c. by the said Act of 11 Will. III. or any other Act, ought to suffer.

P. 661.

Any Person who shall be tryed and acquitted, or convicted according to this Act, for any of the said Crimes, shall not be tried again for the same Fact, as High Treason.

Nothing in this Act shall extend to prevent any Persons, guilty of any of the said Crimes, who shall not be tried according to this Act, from being tryed for High Treason within this Realm, according to the aforesaid Act of 28 Hen. VIII.

If such a Robbery be made in a Creek or Port, in such Cases, it has by some been conceived that Clergy is allowable, upon the Statute of 28 Hen. VIII. but if it be done super altum Mare, there is no such Allowance, as was ruled by the Opinion of Sir Lyonel Jenkyns, and the rest of the Judges, upon the Piracy committed by Cusack and others, who were executed Anno 1674. And if the Robbery be committed on great Rivers, within the Realm, esteemed always as common Highways, there it has formerly been doubted, whether the Benefit of Clergy ought to be granted; however it was seemingly settled by the Judges in the aforesaid Case of Hide, and was confirmed by the following Act, viz, Divers wicked and evil-disposed Persons, being encouraged to commit Robberies and Theft upon navigable Rivers, &c. by the Privilege, as the Law now is, of being admitted to the Benefit of their Clergy; for the more effectual preventing such Felonies for the future, It is enacted, That all Persons, who shall at any Time, from and after the 24th of June, 1751, feloniously steal any Goods or Merchandize, of the Value of 40s. in any Ship, Barge, Lighter, Boat, or other Vessel or Craft, upon any navigable River, or in any Port of Entry or Discharge, or in any Creek belonging thereto, or from off any Wharf or Quay adjacent to any navigable River, Port of Entry or Discharge, within Great-Britain, or shall be present and assisting in committing any of the said Offences, being thereof convicted or attainted, or being indicted, shall of Malice stand mute, or will not directly answer to the Indictment, or shall peremptorily challenge above twenty Persons returned to be of the Jury, shall be excluded from the Benefit of Clergy.

One Cobham was arraigned in Southwark, before the Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, for a Piracy and Robbery committed on a Spaniard, and refusing to plead, it was moved by the Attorney-General, whether he ought not in this Case to have the Peine forte & dure, and it was the Opinion of the Court he should from the Words, and reasonable Intendment of the Statute 28 Hen. VIII. C. 15. and Judgement was given accordingly.

If a Man is taken on Suspicion of Piracy, and a Bill is preferred against him, and the Jury find Is noramus, and the Court of Admiralty will not discharge him, that of the King's-Bench will grant a Habeas Corpus, and if there be good Cause, discharge him, or at least admit him to Bail; but if the Court suspects that the Party is guilty, perhaps they may remand him; and therefore in all cases, where the Admiralty legally have an original or a concurrent Jurisdiction, the Courts above will be well informed before they will meddle or interfere.

Aiding or assisting the Escape of a Man in Custody for Piracy, though the Matter is an Offence at Land, yet the Admiralty having Jurisdiction to punish the Principal, has likewise Power to punish such an Offender, who is looked upon quasi an Accessary to the Piracy; but on rescuing a Prisoner from an Officer of theirs, they may examine the Cause, but they cannot proceed criminally against the Offender.

The Exemplification of the Sentence of the Court of Admiralty, under their Seal, is conclusive Evidence in a Court of Common Law.

And although the Statute of 28 Hen. VIII. C. 15, does not alter the Offence, or make it Felony, but leaves it as it was before that Statute, viz. Felony only by the Civil Law, and gives a Mean of Trial by the Common Law, and inflicted such Pains of Death, as if they had been attainted of any Felony; yet it was resolved by * all the Judges and the Rest of the Commissioners then present, that his Majesty having granted Letters of Reprisal † to Sir Edmund Turner and George Carcu, against the Subjects of the States General of the United Provinces which which Grant was afterwards called in by Proclamation, then notified in the Treaty of Breda, and finally suppressed under the Great Seal; that several having put in Execution the said Commission, under a Deputation from Carew only, without Turner, were indicted for Piracy, though they were acquitted, as it was decreed that the same was not a felonious and a piratical Spoliation in them, but a Capture in Order to an Adjudication; and though the Authority they acted under was deficient, yet not being done by the Captain and his Mariners, Animo depre-dandi, it could by no Means be made Piracy.

It has been customary to grant Commissions to the Commanders of Ships bound to the East-Indies, for the seizing of Pirates, and as I find they have always been to the same Purpose, though sometimes variously worded, I shall add the Copy of one of them taken from the Original.

A N N E, R.

“ A N N E, by the Grace of God, Queen of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. to our trusty and well-beloved A. B. Commander of the Ship Triton, Burthen four Hundred and twenty Tons, thirty Guns, and seventy Men, or to any other the Commander of the same for the Time being, GREETING; Whereas, we are informed there are several Pirates and Sea Rovers, which do infest the Seas of India, whither you are now going, We have therefore thought fit to authorise and empower, and accordingly do by these Presents authorise and empower you, to apprehend, seize, and secure the Persons of any such Pirates, Free-Booters, and Sea Rovers, being either our own Subjects, or of other Nations associated with them, as you shall meet with in any of the Ports or Places, or upon any of the Coasts or Seas of India, or in any other Seas whatsoever, together with their Ships and Vessels, and all such Merchandize, Money, Goods, and Wares, as shall be found on board, or with them, in Case they shall willingly yield themselves; but if they will not submit without fighting, then you are by Force to compel them to yield: And we do also require you to bring, or cause to be brought, such Pirates, Free-Booters, and Sea Rovers, as you shall seize or take, to a legal Trial, to the End they may be proceeded against with the utmost Severity of Law. And we do hereby enjoin you to keep an exact Journal of your Proceedings in the Execution of the Premises, and therein set down the Names of such Pirates, and of their Officers and Company, and the Names of such Ships and Vessels, as you shall, by Virtue of these Presents, seize and take, and the Quantities and Qualities of all Arms, Ammunition, Provision, and Lading of such Ships and Vessels, and the true Value of the same as near as you can judge, and also to secure and take Care of all Bills of Lading, Invoice, Cockets, Charter-Parties, and all other Papers and Writings, of what Kind soever, as shall be found on board such Ships and Vessels; and we do hereby strictly charge and command you, as you will answer the same at your utmost Peril, that you do not in any Manner offend or molest any of our Subjects, or the Subjects of our Friends and Allies, their Ships or Goods, by Colour or Pretence of these Presents, or the Authority hereby granted. In Witness whereof, We have caused our great Seal of England to be affixed to these Presents. Given at our Court at St. James's the thirteenth Day of October, 1704, in the third Year of our Reign.”

In the Admiral's Patent, he has granted to him Bona Piratarum; the proper Goods of Pirates only pass by this Grant, and not piratical Goods. So it is of a Grant de Bonis Felonum, the Grantee shall not have Goods stolen, but the true and rightful Owner: But the King shall have the Piratical Goods, if the Owner be not known.

When a Pirate is condemned and executed, he is commonly hung in Chains on a Gibbet fixed by the River Side, as an Object to deter others from following such Courses which might, sooner or later, bring them to the same unhappy End.

During the War, commenced in 1756, several Persons, Masters of Privateers, were executed for Piracy; the Facts were, that Neutral Ships, Dutch and were stripped in the Englyb Channel by small Privateers, and plundered, sometimes by the Masters and People of the Privateer disguised, at other Times more openly. This occasioned the new Act concerning Privateers; inserted under that Article.

Of Convoys and Cruizers.

THE Word CONVOY, in a mercantile Sense, means a Fleet, or any Number of Merchant-Vessels sailing together to a particular Place of Destination under Protection. And the Protection granted to them by the Marine Department of the State to which they belong, consisting of one or more Ships of War, is likewise called a CONVOY.

THE KING OF GREAT-BRITAIN in Time of War grants Convoys for the Protection of his Subjects carrying on their Commerce on the Ocean, upon Application being made by the Merchants to the Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral, who appoint such a Force as they think proportioned to the Danger they are likely to encounter from the Enemy on their Voyages; and, even in Times of Peace, Convoys are ordered by the Government to guard and defend our trading Vessels from the Assaults of Pirates, or Encroachers on our Commerce, more especially in our Fisheries, and other Parts of the West-Indies; where they may be exposed to such Attacks by commercial Intruders. The sailing of all Convoys is publickly advertised, and the Days fixed for their Departure, that Ships may get to the Rendezvous, or destined Places, from whence they are to set Sail by the Times appointed, and there receive Orders from the commanding Officer relative to their future Proceedings, which the Masters must take Care punctually to observe, otherwise they alone will be answerable for any Loss or Miscarriage that may happen through such Neglect.

In France and other Countries, Masters disobeying the Orders of the Commanders of Convoys, or departing from their Convoy, are punished by Fine and Imprisonment, besides being responsible with their Property to their Owners for the Losses that may ensue by such Conduct. In England, they are only liable to a civil Action for Damages, to indemnify the Owners and Merchants, for the Ships and Cargoes captured by their wilful Disobedience; but the Difficulties that arise in determining when the Masters have made the Insurance void are almost innumerable; and fall properly under the Head of Insurances, of which hereafter. If the Fault lies on the Commodore, he is made punishable by the subsequent Law, viz.

The Captains, Officers, and Seamen, of all Ships appointed for Convoy of <sup>13 Car. II.</sup> Merchant Ships or others, shall diligently attend upon that Charge, without <sup>St. 1. C. 93.</sup> Delay, according to their Instructions; and whosoever shall be faulty therein, <sup>S. 1. Art. 1.</sup> and shall not faithfully defend the Ships and Goods in their Convoy, or shall demand any Money, or Reward, from any Merchant or Master for convoying of such Ships belonging to his Majesty's Subjects, shall be condemned to make Reparation of the Damage, as the Court of Admiralty shall adjudge, and also be punished criminally by Pains of Death, or other Punishment, as shall be adjudged by the Court-Martial.

Confirmed by 22 Geo. II. p. 693. Art. 17.

By the Treaty with Holland in 1657, it is stipulated, that the Men of War or Convoys of either Nation, meeting or overtaking at Sea any Merchant-Ship or Ships belonging to the Subjects or Inhabitants of the other, holding the same Course, or going the same Way, shall be bound, as long as they keep one Course together, to protect and defend them against all and every one who would set upon them.

CRUIZERS are commonly the best sailing Ships, appointed by the Admiralty to cruize in some certain Latitudes, in order to meet with, and apprehend, or destroy the Enemy; they are generally of the smallest Rates, and must by no Means leave their Stations during the Time limited, except forced thereto by some Damage received, or by Strefs of Weather. By the 6 Ann. Cap. 13. it was enacted, that beside the Line of Battle Ships, forty-three others should be employed as Cruizers and Convoys for the better Preservation of trading Vessels; four of which were to be Third Rates; sixteen Fourth Rates, and the Rest of sufficient Force to guard our Commerce; they were to attend, as before-mentioned, in certain Stations, and the Commissioners of the Admiralty may direct those of the Navy, or some one or more Persons, resident at such Places as his Majesty shall appoint, to superintend and oversee every Thing relating to those Cruizers.

Several subsequent Acts have confirmed the above, and increased the Number of Cruizers as Necessity has required, to the no small Security of our Maritime Interest.

Having now described the different Modes of attacking an Enemy at Sea under proper Authority, it follows in Order, that we should treat of the Consequence of Success, under the Articles

Of Captures, Condemnations, and Appeals.

I Have already had Occasion to mention several Circumstances concerning Prizes, under the preceding Article of Letters of Marque, &c. however, shall add a few more here, and begin with the Distinctions made concerning them, which are of three Sorts, viz.

1. Ships and Goods taken by Letters of Marque, and by Jus Reprisaliarum.
2. Those taken from Pirates or Sea Rovers; and
3. Those taken from professed Enemies.

Miller P.
180. S. 17.

The first, as has been before-mentioned, belong entirely to the Captors, after a legal Condemnation, as the second does after an Account thereof is given to the Admiral, and the third were to be proceeded in, according to the Power which authorized the Capture.

9 Ann.
Cap. 2. S. 51.

It has been also granted to Companies, to appropriate the Prizes made in Consequence of an Infringement of their Charters; as to the East-India*, who have a Right to all Ships, &c. trading within their Limits, for which they may sue in any of the Courts at Westminster; as that of the South Sea may, though their Grant is yet more ample, viz. The Company shall have all Ships and Goods which shall be taken as Prize, by the Ships employed or licensed by it, within their Limits, or by such Ships of her Majesty, as she shall allow for Defense of the Trade, without any Account, save only that the Officers and Seamen on board the said Ships of her Majesty, which shall be assisting to the taking any such Ships or Goods as Prize, shall have such Share thereof as her Majesty shall direct by the Charter of Incorporation; and it shall be lawful for the Company and their Servants, and other Persons employed and licensed by them, to seize by Force of Arms, the Persons, Ships, Goods, or Effects, of any of the Subjects of her Majesty, who shall frequent, trade, or adventure into the South Seas, or other the Limits aforesaid, and to detain, to the Use of the Company, the Ships, Goods, and Effects, so seized, and to send into Great-Britain the Persons of such of the Subjects of her Majesty as shall be so seized, in Order to their being prosecuted according to Law.

13 Geo. II.
P. 133.
Sec. P. 230,
231.

It has been observed in a preceding Part of this Work, that no Prize can be disposed of, nor any of her Cargo touched, till after a legal Condemnation in the Court of Admiralty here, or elsewhere; and that no Delays be made in the Process, it is enacted, that the Judge of such Court shall, if requested thereto, finish within five Days, &c.

APPEALS from the Vice-Admiralty Courts in America, and our other Plantations and Settlements, may be brought before the Court of Admiralty in England, as being a Branch of the Lord High Admiral's Jurisdiction, though they may also be brought before the King in Council. But in Cases of Prize-Vessels taken in Time of War, in any Part of the World, and condemned in any any Court of Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty as lawful Prize, the Appeal lies to the Commissioners of Appeals, and not to Judges Delegates. And this by Virtue of divers Treaties with Foreign Nations, by which particular Courts are established in all the Maritime Countries of Europe for the Devision of this Question, Whether lawful Prize or not? For this being a Question between Subjects of different States, it belongs entirely to the Law of Nations, and not to the municipal Laws of either Country, to determine it. The original Court for deciding this Question in England is the Court of Admiralty; and the Court of Appeal is in Effect the King's Privy Council, the Members of which are, in Consequence of Treaties, commissioned under the Great Seal for this Purpose.

The Commissioners of Appeals, formerly appointed by our Sovereigns, were half their Privy Counsellors, and some others mentioned in the Appointment, to whom Appeals were to be made, both at home and abroad, as above; but as some Difficulties arose about the Commission, the following Act was made to remedy and solve them, viz.

His Majesty, in order to bring Appeals from Sentences in Causes of Prizes, <sup>22 Geo. II. C. 3. P. 127.</sup> pronounced in the Courts of Admiralty, to a speedy Determination, did, by his Commission, bearing Date the 11th of July, in the twenty-second Year of his Reign, revoke a former Commission granted to all his Majesty's then Privy Counsellors, and all other his Privy Counsellors for the Time being, during Pleasure; and did also, by the same Commission, appoint all his Privy Counsellors then being, as also Sir Thomas Parker, Knight, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; Sir Martin Wright, Sir Thomas Dennis, and Sir Michael Foster, Knights, Justices of the Court of King's-Bench; Sir Thomas Abney, Sir Thomas Burnet, <sup>P. 128.</sup> and Sir Thomas Birch, Knights, Justices of the Court of Common-Pleas; Charles Clark, Edward Clive, and Heneage Legge, Esqrs. Barons of the Court of Exchequer, and the Chief Baron of the Exchequer for the Time being, to be Commissioners, for hearing and determining such Appeals, during Pleasure, &c. and as some Objections have been raised against the last-mentioned Commission, on Account of the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, the Justices of the King's-Bench and Common-Pleas, and the Barons of the Exchequer, who were not of the Privy Council, being joined therein; It is therefore enacted, That the said Commission, and all the Powers granted therein, shall be deemed good in Law; and the Commissioners, as well the said Lord Chief Baron, and the said Justices and Barons therein named, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and the Justices of the King's-Bench and Common-Pleas, and the Barons of the Exchequer, for the Time being, although they should not be of the Privy Council, are empowered, during his Majesty's Pleasure, to receive and determine all such Appeals, and to use all other Jurisdictions, according to the true Intent of the said Commission.

No Sentence upon the Hearing of any such Appeal shall be valid, unless a Majority of the Commissioners present be of the Privy Council.

Of Bills of Health and Quarantine.

THE dreadful Ravages made by Pestilential Disorders in those Countries most subject to them, makes every Prince and State fearful of receiving the Infection, by the Admission of Goods from suspected Places; and, to avoid it, they always insist on Ships bringing Certificates from the Magistracy of the Port they last came from, declaring their Country to be free from any contagious Distemper: These are termed Bills of Health, of which Copies are annexed, and; coming in this Form, they are called clean ones, in Opposition to soil ones, which are given to Ships when they proceed from infected Places, and these always obstruct their Admittance to trade, till they have performed a Quarantine of as many Days as the Guardians of Health, where they arrive, may judge necessary, being commonly from ten to forty; on Expiration of which, it is customary abroad for Physicians to examine the Ship's Crew, and strict strict Search is made on board, by Persons appointed, to see whether the Number of Sailors corresponds with those mentioned in the Bills of Health; and, if any Difference appears, it will be difficult in any Country, and impossible in some, to obtain Admission afterwards; therefore it behoves every Captain to be very circumspect in having the exact Number of his Company inferted.

But though the Sailors are not admitted to a Communication with the Shore; till the aforementioned prudent Precautions have preceded; yet all Commodities; unsusceptible of the infectious Taint, such as Corn, &c. are permitted immediately to be landed at proper Places by the Mariners, from whence they are afterwards conveyed to those destined for their Consumption or Sale.

Several foreign States have set apart and appropriated certain Parcels of Lands for the aforementioned Purposes, which they have enclosed, and erected Buildings, both for the Reception of Goods and Passengers, to lay their Quarantine in, where the latter are comfortably accommodated, under the Vigilance of Guards, appointed to hinder any one's too near Approach to these Recluses: Such are the Lazarettos at Marfilles, Venice, &c. and the Expences vary on these Occasions, according to the Difference of Climes and Accommodations.

All Ships performing Quarantine here do it at Stungate Creek, under such Regulations as his Majesty in Council is pleased to appoint; and every Merchant who had any Goods from Italy, during the last Plague at Messina, was obliged to shew his Documents, that is, the Bills of Lading, Invoices, Letters, or any other Papers in which his Goods were mentioned, to Gentlemen in the Secretary of the Customs' Office, appointed to examine them; and the Merchandize, after lying the Time ordered, was opened, aired, and underwent the appointed Search, before it was permitted to be put into Lighters, and brought to London, &c.

But the Frequency of the Plague in different Parts of the Levant, making a Revival of those Laws necessary, the following Act was passed:

§ 2. II.

The Preamble sets forth, that whereas it is necessary some Provision be made by Parliament, for obliging Ships and Persons coming from Places infected, or frequently subject to the Plague, to perform Quarantine in such Manner as shall be ordered by his Majesty, or his Successor; and for punishing Offenders therein in a more expeditious Manner than can be done by the ordinary Methods of Law: It is therefore enacted, That all Ships and Vessels arriving, and all Persons, Goods, and Merchandizes, coming or imported into any Port or Place within Great-Britain or Ireland, the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or from any Place from whence his Majesty or his Successors, by Advice of the Privy Council, shall judge it probable that the Infection may be brought, shall be obliged to perform Quarantine in such Place, and in such Manner, as shall be directed by his Majesty or his Successors, by Order in Privy Council, and notified by Proclamation, or in the London Gazette: And that, till such Ships, &c. shall be discharged from such Quarantine, no Person, Goods, &c. shall be brought on Shore, or be put on board any other Vessel, within his Majesty's Dominions, unless by Licence, as shall be directed by Order of Council: And that all such Ships, and the Persons or Goods, coming or imported, or going or being put on board the same, and all such Ships, Vessels, Boats, and Persons, receiving any Goods or Persons out of the same, shall be subject to such Orders, Rules, and Directions, concerning Quarantine and the Prevention of Infection, as shall be made by his Majesty and his Successors in Council, and notified by Proclamation, or published in the London Gazette, as aforesaid.

If the Plague shall appear on board any Ship to the Northward of Cape Finisterre, the Master shall immediately proceed to the Harbour of New Grimby, in the Isles of Scilly; where he shall inform the Officer of the Customs there of his Case, who shall acquaint some Officer of a near Port of England thereof; who, with all possible Speed, shall send Intelligence thereof to one of his Majesty's Secretaries of State, that such Measures may be taken for for the Support of the Crew, and such Precautions used to prevent the spreading of the Infection, as the Case shall require: And the said Ships shall remain at the Islands of Scilly till his Majesty's Pleasure be known, nor shall any of the Crew go on Shore: But if the Master shall not be able to make the Islands of Scilly, or shall be forced by Strefs of Weather up either of the Channels, he shall not presume to enter into any Port, but shall remain in some open Road till he receives Orders from his Majesty, or the Privy Council; and shall take Care to prevent any of his Ship's Company from going out of his Ship, and to avoid all Intercourse with other Ships or Persons; and the said Master, or any Person on board such Ship, who shall be disobedient therein, shall be adjudged guilty of Felony, and shall suffer Death as a Felon, without Benefit of Clergy: And every such Offence shall be determined in the County where the Offence shall be committed, or where the Offender shall be apprehended.

That it may be better known whether any Ship be actually infected with the Plague, or whether such Ships, &c. are liable to any Orders touching Quarantine, It is enacted, that when any Place is infected with the Plague, or when any Order shall be made concerning Quarantine and the Prevention of Infection, as often as any Ship shall attempt to enter any Place in Great-Britain or Ireland, &c. the principal Officer of the Customs in such Place, or such Person as shall be authorized to see Quarantine performed, shall go off, or cause some other Person, appointed by him for that Purpose, to go off to such Ship; and such Officer, &c. shall, at a convenient Distance from such Ship, demand of the Master, and the Master shall, upon such Demand, give a true Account of the following Particulars; that is to say, the Name of such Ship, the Name of the Master, where the Cargo was taken in, where she touched, whether such Places were infected, how long she had been in her Voyage, how many Persons were on board when she set Sail, whether any in the Voyage had been or were then infected with the Plague, how many died in the Voyage and of what Distemper, what Ships he, or any of his Ship's Company with his Privy went on board, or had any of their Company come on board, during the Voyage, and to what Place such Ships belonged; and also the true Contents of his Lading, to the best of his Knowledge. And if it shall appear that any Person on board shall be infected with the Plague, or that such Ship is obliged to perform Quarantine, in such Case it shall be lawful for the Officers of any of his Majesty's Ships of War, or any Forts or Garrisons, and all other Officers whom it may concern, and for any other Persons whom they shall call for their Assistance, to oblige such Ship to repair to such Place as hath been appointed for Performance of Quarantine, by any Kind of Violence whatsoever. And if any such Ship shall come from an infected Place, or have any Person on board actually infected, and the Master shall conceal the same, such Master shall be adjudged guilty of Felony, and shall suffer Death: And if the Master of such Ships shall not make a true Discovery in any other of the aforesaid Particulars, such Commander shall forfeit 200*l.* one Moiety to the King, the other to the Person who shall sue for the same.

The Master of any Vessel ordered to perform Quarantine shall, after his Arrival at the Place appointed for performing Quarantine, deliver to the chief Officer there such Bills of Health and Manifest as he shall have received from any British Consul during his Voyage, together with his Log-Book and Journal, under Penalty of 500*l.* Forfeiture, in the same Manner as the last Clause.

If any Master of a Vessel liable to perform Quarantine, having Notice thereof, shall himself quit, or permit any other Person to quit such Vessel, before Quarantine shall be performed, unless by proper Licence; or in Case any Master shall not cause, within due Time after Notice given, such Vessel, and the Lading thereof, to be conveyed to the Place appointed for performing Quarantine; then, and in every such Case, the Master shall forfeit 500*l.* and the Persons quitting the Vessel shall be compelled to go back, and suffer six Months' Imprisonment, and each forfeit 200*l*. The Penalties to be recovered and divided as before.

His Majesty, with the Consent of Parliament, may erect Lazarets on any common or private Grounds; and in Case any Difference should arise about the Value of such Lands, to be settled by a Jury at the Quarter-Sessions.

The proper Officers are impowered and required to compel all Persons obliged to perform Quarantine, and Goods, to be conveyed to some Lazaret, or such other Place as shall be provided for the Reception of such Persons, Goods, &c. or for the Opening and Airing such Goods, &c. according to such Orders to be made as aforesaid.

If any Person, obliged to perform Quarantine, shall refuse or neglect to repair to the House of Lazaret, or having been placed therein, shall attempt to escape before Quarantine be fully performed; any of the Persons appointed to see Quarantine performed, may compel them to repair or return to the House, &c. appointed; and every Person so refusing, or neglecting, or escaping, shall suffer Death as a Felon.

All Persons liable to perform Quarantine, whether in Ships, Lazarets, or elsewhere, shall be subject, during such Quarantine, to such Orders as they shall receive from the proper Officers; and the said Officers are to enforce all necessary Obedience to their Orders, and may, in Case of Necessity, call in other Persons to their Assistance; and all Persons called are required to assist.

If any Person, not liable to perform Quarantine, shall enter any Lazaret, &c. whilst any Persons under Quarantine shall be therein, such Person shall be confined there to perform Quarantine by the proper Officers: And, in Case he shall escape out of the Lazaret, shall be guilty of Felony, and suffer Death accordingly.

If any Officer, appointed to execute any Orders made concerning Quarantine, shall be guilty of any wilful Breach or Neglect of his Duty, such Person shall forfeit his Employment, and one Hundred Pounds, and be incapable of holding such Office for the future.

All Goods liable to retain Infection, as shall be particularly specified in any Orders made concerning Quarantine, which shall be imported into any of his Majesty's Dominions from any foreign Country, in any Ship whatsoever, shall be liable to such Orders made concerning Quarantine.

After Quarantine shall have been duly performed, upon Proof to be made on Oath, by the Master and two other Persons belonging to the Vessel, or of two or three credible Witnesses, to be made before the Customer, Comptroller, or Collector of the Port, or the next Port, where Quarantines shall be performed, or before any of their Deputies, or any Justice of the Peace living near such Port, or, if in the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, before any two Jurats or Magistrates, that such Vessel, and all and every such Persons, are free from Infection; and after producing a Certificate, signed by the chief Officer who superintended the Quarantine of that Ship, then such Customer, &c. are required to give a Certificate thereof; and thereupon such Ship, and all Persons belonging to her, shall be liable to no further Restraint, or Detention upon the same Account for which Quarantine shall have been performed.

The Officer neither for Oath nor Certificate, shall take any Fee or Reward.

Provided nevertheless, that all Goods, Wares, and Merchandize, shall be opened and aired as shall be directed in the Order for Quarantine; and, after such Orders have been duly complied with, the Goods shall be discharged, with a proper Certificate, in the same Manner as the Ship, &c.

Any Officer that shall demand or take any Fee, to forfeit one Hundred Pounds, with treble Costs of Suit.

If any Person, appointed to see Quarantine duly performed, or placed as a Watchman upon any House, Lazaret, Ship, or other Place for Performance of Quarantine, shall desert from their Duty, or wilfully permit any Person, Ship, Goods, or Merchandizes, to depart, or be conveyed out of such House, &c. or if any Person give a false Certificate of a Ship's having duly performed her Quarantine or Airing, every such Person shall suffer Death as a Felon.

If

If any Person shall conceal from the Officers of Quarantine, or convey any Letters, Goods, Wares, or Merchandises from any Ship under Quarantine, or liable to perform Quarantine, or from any Lazaret, &c. where Goods shall be performing Quarantine, every such Person shall suffer Death.

When any Part of Great-Britain, Ireland, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or France, Spain, Portugal, or the Low Countries, shall be infected with the Plague, his Majesty, by Proclamation, may prohibit all Boats and Vessels under 20 Tons Burden, from sailing out of any Place in Great-Britain, &c. until Security be first given by the Master, to the Satisfaction of the principal Officer of the Customs, or chief Magistrate of the Place from whence such Vessel shall sail, by Bond, with sufficient Sureties, in the Penalty of 300*l.* with Condition, that if such Vessel shall not touch at any Place mentioned in the Proclamation; and if the Master, Mariners, and Passengers do not go on board any other Vessel at Sea, and if such Masters shall not permit any Persons to come on board from any other Vessel, and shall not receive any Goods, &c. out of any other Vessel, then such Bond shall be void; if any Vessel shall go before such Security be given, every such Vessel with her Tackle, Apparel, and Furniture, shall be forfeited to the King, and may be seized; And the Master and every Mariner, upon the Oath of a credible Witness before a Justice of Peace, where such Offenders shall be found, shall forfeit the Sum of twenty Pounds, one Moiety to the Informer, the other to the Poor of the Parish, where such Offenders shall be found; the same to be levied by Distress, and Sale of the Offender's Goods, by Warrant under the Hand and Seal of the Justice before whom such Offender shall be convicted: And for Want of sufficient Distress, the Offender to be sent to Prison for three Months.

By this Act, the Place of Quarantine is changed from New Grimsby, and appointed at St. Helen's Pool, between the uninhabited Islands of St. Helen's Jean and North Willbell, in the Island of Scilly, or to such other Place as his Majesty, with the Advice of his Privy Council shall appoint. 29 Geo. II.

Of Protections, Passports, and Safe-Conducts.

PASSPORTS are commonly granted to Friends, and SAFE-CONDUCTS to Enemies, though Custom has made the Meaning of those Terms to be much the same in this Place: In a military Treatise they would be differently construed; but they only signify here that Protection a Prince affords to either Ships or Men against the aforementioned Embargoes, or his granting to some Individuals a Leave to trade, denied to others, or his Permission for them to come into his Kingdom while a general Prohibition subsists, and sometimes even during a War with the State whose Subjects they are.

This has often happened in our Disputes with Spain, where our Ships went currently in the Beginning of the War commenced in 1718, and on many other Occasions, under the Protection of a Pass, which his Catholick Majesty granted to several, and which served for one Voyage: These Passes had Blanks left for the Names of Ships, Captains, &c. and at first cost about twenty Dollars; though, when a Stop was put to granting any more, their Price rose in Proportion to their Scarcity; and the few who had any remaining, made a very considerable Advantage of them: The same has been practised by many of our former Kings, and confirmed by several subsequent Acts, viz.

In all Safe-Conducts to be granted to any Persons, the Names of them, of the Ships, and of the Masters, and the Number of the Mariners, with the Portage of the Ships, shall be expressed. <sup>15 Hen. VI. C. 3.</sup>

Merchants Aliens may lade Ships of Spain, and other Parts, Adversaries and Enemies of the King, if the Masters or Merchants of such Ships have Letters Patent of the King of his Safe-Conduct, making Mention of the Name of the Ships, and of the Masters; and if any such Ship charged with such Merchandizes of such Merchants be taken upon this Sea, by the King's People, not having the King's Letters Patent within the Board of such Ships at the Day of the taking, nor that such Letters Patent be in the Chancery inrolled, the Takers may enjoy the same. <sup>18 Hen. VI. C. 8.</sup>

All Letters of Safe-Conduct to be granted to the King's Enemies, or others, shall be inrolled in Chancery, before such Letters be delivered; and all Letters of Safe-Conduct, not inrolled before Delivery, shall be void. <sup>20 Hen. VI. C. 1. S. 2.</sup>

If any Goods be taken by the Subjects of the King upon the Sea, charged in any Ship belonging to Enemies, not having Letters of Safe-Conduct inrolled, they that take the Goods shall them enjoy. <sup>S. 3.</sup>

The Subjects taking such Ships, not having Letters of Safe-Conduct within the said Ships, and bringing them within the Realm, shall not be endamaged for such taking, if they be ready to make Restitution, within reasonable Time after Knowledge is made to them of the Letters of Safe-Conduct, enrolled in Chancery before the taking. <sup>S. 4.</sup>

If any Subjects attempt to offend upon the Sea, or in any Port under the King's Obedience, against any Strangers in Amity, League, or Truce, or by Safe-Conduct, the Chancellor shall have Authority to cause such Person to be delivered, and the Goods or Ship taken to be restored, &c. <sup>31 Hen. VI.</sup>

If any Person shall, within his Majesty's Dominions, or without, falsely forge or counterfeit any Pass for any Ship, commonly called a Mediterranean Pass, or shall alter or erase any Pass made out by the Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral; or shall publish as true any forged, altered, or erased Pass, knowing the same to be forged, &c. every such Person, being convicted in Great-Britain or Ireland, or his Majesty's Plantations, where such Offence shall be committed, shall be guilty of Felony without Benefit of Clergy. <sup>4 Geo. II. C. 18. S. 1.</sup>

There was formerly appointed in these Realms a Conservator of Safe-Conducts, and as the same Person had also the Care of Truces, it naturally leads me to treat of them.

Of Leagues and Truces.

LEAGUES or TRUCES are either with Enemies, Friends, or Neuters, and those made with the former are for a limited Time, or perpetual.

Perpetual is where Peace finishes all Disputes, and restores a perfect Amity between the contracting Parties.

And Treaties for a Time are termed TRUCES, which are also general or particular.

General Truces include all the States of both Princes, in regard to their Subjects and Commerce; whilst particular ones are only for certain Places, or certain Persons, with a Limitation of their Trade, and sometimes go no farther than a bare Suspension of Arms.

A Truce, however, whether general or particular, is an Agreement on a Cessation of all Hostilities during the Time stipulated, and ought not to be infringed or broken on any Account: It frequently is a Parent of Peace, as it allows Room for Consideration, and to treat of it; and, besides, affords Opportunity for settling the jarring Interests of Princes, who are to be comprehended in it.

A general Truce is sometimes settled for so long a Term as to become equal to a Peace; and such are commonly made betwixt Princes equal in Power, who are unwilling to quit any Thing of their supposed Right by Peace; and yet desire to live quietly in their present State, and by this Medium satisfy their Point of Honour. Such Truces are likewise, from the foregoing Considerations, less subject to a Breach than a Peace that is made perpetual, as Princes, who by this latter find themselves aggrieved, will seek out plausible Reasons to forsake or evade it; but in the other, when the limited Time is expired, they have only to renew or excuse it.

Ret. Parl.
4 H. V.
Numb. 4;
Cite. 4
Indit. 156.

Some Alliances are contracted for an Enterprize, and for one sole Effect, in that Part in which the Allies are interested; and these are generally called Leagues, and have been sometimes here confirmed by Act of Parliament, and are such Agreements as are always made by the Command of the Supreme Power; and these, as well as Safe-Conduits, are to be of Record, that is, inrolled in Chancery, that the Subjects may know who are Friends, and can have Actions personal here, or who the contrary, and can have none.

4 Indit. 152.

Leagues commonly are offensive, and the ordinary Causes for which Princes and Republicks make them are either to facilitate a Conquest, or to balance the Power of an ambitious and enterprising Neighbour; such were those entered into against the Opulency and growing Greatness of the Spaniards, and since in Opposition to the Attempts of Lewis XIV. to acquire universal Monarchy.

But though Leagues are generally offensive, yet many are confined only to the defensive Part, and these entered into with the sole View of guarding against the sinister Intentions or Attempts of any vicinal Power, of which I might produce many Instances; but as what I have already said on the Subject may suffice for a Place in a Mercantile Treatise, I shall not intrude any farther on my Reader's Time or Patience by enlarging on it, but proceed to the Articles.

Of Proclamations for War and Peace.

THE proclaiming of War, or settling of Peace, is one of the Royal Prerogatives belonging to the Kings of Great-Britain; but though it has always been exercised by them, yet they have seldom failed to ask the Advice of Parliament in both Cases, and generally War or Peace are approved and confirmed by Parliament. Moreover, if the Conditions of Peace are found to be dishonourable or disadvantageous to the Nation by a Majority of the Representatives of the People in Parliament, or of the Peers, an Impeachment will lie against the Ministers who have advised them; for the King can do no Wrong. And the same Course may be taken when the Nation is improperly plunged in a War by the Mal-administration of the King's Servants. There are two Methods of engaging in a War with a foreign State; the first, and the most honourable is by a solemn Declaration publicly proclaimed, Copies of which are sent off to all the British Ambassadors, Ministers, and Consuls, residing in the different Countries, and at the Courts of all foreign Princes. This serves as a general Notice of the Rupture between the two Powers being irreconcilable by Negotiation, and prepares the Subjects of each State, so that they may regulate their commercial Concerns accordingly. This Practice is founded on the Law of Nations, and used formerly to be one of the Criteria by which we distinguished a civilized People from Barbarians.

At present, a fatal change in the System of Politicks has taken Place; and the European Powers make no Scruple of going to War, without making the usual Proclamations, to the great Injury of their Subjects, who may entertain Hopes of a Reconciliation of Differences, so long as such Declarations are suspended, and may venture their Property on the Ocean, under the Sanction of Peace, not imagining that Privateers and Ships of War will be authorized to seize them prior to a Declaration of War. No Nation can properly justify this Conduct, and Posterity will load with Reproaches the Names of those Statesmen, whether Spanish, French, or British, who first brought this foul Practice into Use.

It was usual by Declarations of War to cut off all Intercourse with the Enemies of our Country; but since the late Custom of going to War without any publick Proclamation, Intercourses have been carried on highly detrimental to publick Affairs, by those who perhaps did not look upon themselves as Traitors to their King and Country, whereas if a Proclamation had declared such Correspondence to be treasonable, they would not have carried it on.

War and Peace are always proclaimed by the Herald at Arms, accompanied by proper Notaries and a Body of the Life-Guards; and when they enter the City of London, they are joined by some of the City Officers: The Proclamation is read by the Notaries to the Herald, who repeats it, all being bare-headed, first at St. James's, then at Charing-Cross, Temple-Bar, Cheap-side, and the Royal-Exchange.

When War is proclaimed, it is customary to prohibit, though not always, all Commerce with the Enemy, by interdicting the Entrance of any of the Commodities of his Country into our's, as was done in the War with Spain in 1740, by the following Act of Parliament, viz.

The Preamble sets forth that the repeated Insults, Depredations, and Cruelties of the Spaniards had obliged his Majesty to make Use of the Power which God had given him, to vindicate the Honour of his Crown, and secure to his Subjects their undoubted Rights and Privileges of Navigation and Commerce; and in Order thereto, his Majesty, on just and honourable Grounds, had thought fit to declare War with Spain; and it being highly requisite to prohibit all Commerce between his Majesty's Subjects, and those of Spain in Europe; and to enforce such Prohibitions by severe Penalties, It is enacted, that from and after the 1st Day of June, 1740, no Goods whatever, of the Growth or Manufacture of Old Spain, lying in Europe, or of the Canary Islands, except Goods taken and condemned as lawful Prize, and ordered to be sold as perishable, during the present War with Spain, shall be imported into Great-Britain or Ireland, or the Isles of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, Man, Minorca, or the Town of Gibraltar, from any Place, mixed or unmixed with the Commodities of the Growth or Product of any other Nation, on Penalty of Forfeiture of such Goods, and treble the Value, and of the Ship or Vessel, with all her Furniture, &c.

This Act does not extend to hinder such Commodities belonging to the Kingdom of Spain, which shall be imported to Minorca or Gibraltar, on or before the 1st of May, 1740, from being imported into Great-Britain, on or before the 24th of June, 1740, in British-built Shipping, navigated according to Law, and proved on Oath before the Commissioners of the Customs, in the Port of London, or before the Collector and Comptroller in any other Port of Great-Britain, who are to give such Oath, and enquire into the Truth, whether such Goods were imported into Minorca or Gibraltar, before the 11th Day of May.

If any Dispute arise, whether the Commodities seized for having been imported as aforesaid, or any Part thereof, single or mixed, were of the Growth or Manufacture of Spain, or imported contrary to this Act; the Proof shall be made by the Importer or Claimer, and not by the Informer or Officer; and in Default of such Proof, then Judgement shall be given for Recovery of the Forfeiture, and Execution immediately granted: And if any Informer or other Person, who shall seize or prosecute any Goods or Commodities, by Virtue of this Act shall, by Fraud or Collusion, delay the said Prosecution, or the Prosecution of any Person offending against this Act, he shall forfeit 500*l.* for every Offence.

13 G. II.
P. 546.

It is further enacted, that his Majesty, at any Time during the War, may by Proclamation, or Order in Council, to be published in the London Gazette, take off the said Prohibition; and thereupon such Goods may be imported, being first duly entered, and paying the Customs.

No Person shall be admitted to enter a Claim to such Seizure, without giving 100*l.* Security, to answer all Charges of Prosecution; and in Default, the said Seizure shall be condemned.

P. 547.

No Goods seized and condemned in the said Islands of Jersey, &c. or in Gibraltar, by Virtue of this Act, shall be imported into Great-Britain or Ireland, on any Pretence whatsoever, on Penalty of forfeiting the same, and treble the Value, and also the Ship importing the same, with her Tackle, Ammunition, &c. to be divided, as if such Ships and Goods had been imported from foreign Parts, contrary to this Act, &c.

Of the Admiralty.

AS the Kingdom of Great-Britain is on all Sides surrounded by the Sea, there will ever be a Necessity for a strong Maritime Force to protect and defend it; our Wooden Walls are our Bulwarks and Redoubts, to which we owe our Safety, and the Protection of that advantageous Commerce we carry on.

4 Inst. 75.

And for transacting of Marine Affairs, the Lord High Admiral hath Courts of his own, of which that at London is principal and chief, where all Procefs and Proceedings run in his Name, and not in the King's, as they do in all the Courts of Common Law. The first Title of Admiral of England, expressly conferred upon a Subject, was given by Patent of King Richard II. to the Earl of Arundel and Surry; and it appears, that anciently he had Jurisdiction of all Causes of Merchants and Mariners, happening not only upon the Main Sea, but in all foreign Parts, within the King's Dominions, and without them, and was to judge them in a summary Way, according to the Laws of Oleron and others.

2 W. & M.
C. 2.

In the Reign of Edward III. the Court of Admiralty was established, and Rich. II. limited its Jurisdiction. Of late Times this high Office has been generally executed by Commissioners, who by Statute are impowered to use and execute the same Authorities as were formerly exercised by the Lord High Admiral.

But the Requisites are, on every new Commission being made out, resigned, by some Deed or Writing to the Crown. The Number of Commissioners is not limited by Statute, but, for many Years past, the Commissions have consisted of a first Commissioner, who presides at the Board, and six others who take Place in the Order in which they are named in the Commissions. They are stiled Lords of the Admiralty, and the First Lord, is, in Effect, Lord High Admiral, having the supreme Direction of the Board, except that no Orders or Commissions are valid when signed by him alone, it being necessary for two more to sign with him, notwithstanding which he is not to be commanded by them.

Subject to this Authority are all the Naval Officers and Shipping, and all the Marine Boards; as the Navy-Office, Victualling-Office, Sick and Wounded Offices; Deptford, Woolwich, Chatham, Sheerness, Plymouth, and Portsmouth Dock-Yards. As are also all the Ships and Vessels of War; their Admirals, Commanders, Lieutenants, Officers, and Men.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have the general Direction of the Affairs of the Navy; they determine the Number and Size of the Ships to be built, repaired, and put into Commission: But it is a vulgar Error to suppose that the First Lord has the Appointment of the Destination of Fleets in Time of War; he has only his Vote as a single Minister in the Cabinet Council, though, being at the Head of the Marine Department, his Advice may influence the Determinations of the King, and the rest of his Ministers.

The Admiralty grant their Commissions to such Person as his Majesty directs, whereby he is appointed Admiral and Commander in Chief of the Fleet, for the Expedition which is designed. And such Admiral, when out of the British Channel, appoints all Officers, as Vacancies happen, who must be, and generally are, confirmed by the Admiralty, if no very material Objection occurs.

Jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

THE Jurisdiction of the Lord High Admiral, or of the Lords Commissioners for executing the Office, is over Great-Britain, Ireland, and Wales, with the Dominions and Islands belonging to them: As also over all his Majesty's Colonies, Plantations, Factories, and other Settlements, Dominions, and Territories whatsoever in Parts beyond the Seas.

The Admiralty hath Cognizance of the Death or maiming a Man, committed in any Ship riding in great Rivers, beneath the Bridges thereof, near the Sea. <sup>15 Ric. II. C. 3. S. 2.</sup>

But if a Man be killed on any Arm of the Sea, where the Land is seen on both Sides, the Coroner is by Common Law to inquire of it, and not the Admiral; for the County may take Cognizance of it, and where a County may enquire the Lord Admiral has no Jurisdiction. <sup>3 Rep. 107.</sup>

All Ports and Havens, as has been before observed, are infra Corpus Comitatus, where the Admiral has no Jurisdiction; and, between High and Low-Water-Mark, he and the Common Law have it by Turns, one upon the Water, and the other upon the Land. <sup>3 Inst. 115.</sup>

The Admiral hath Power to arrest Ships for the Service of the King or Commonwealth; and every Commander, Officer, or Soldier of Ships of War, shall observe the Admiral's Commands, &c. on Pain of Death, or other Punishment. <sup>13 Car. II. C. 9.</sup>

The Lord Admiral hath Power to grant Commissions to inferior Admirals, &c. Ditto. to call Courts Martial for the Trial of Offences against the Articles of War, and these Courts determine by Plurality of Voices, &c.

An Admiralty Process is made out in the Admiral's Name, who has under him a Judge, commonly some learned Civilian; and though the Proceedings are according to Civil Law, and the Maritime Laws of Rhodes and Oleron, the Sea being without the Common Law, yet, by Stat. 28 Hen. VIII. Murder, Robbery, &c. at Sea, may be tried by special Commission to the Lord Admiral, &c. according to the Laws of England. <sup>See 11 and 12 W. III. C. 7.</sup>

The Admiralty is said to be no Court of Record, on Account of its proceeding by the Civil Law. <sup>4 Inst. 133.</sup>

But the Admiralty has Jurisdiction where the Common Law can give no Remedy; and all Maritime Causes, or Causes arising wholly upon the Sea, it hath Cognizance of. <sup>6 Rep.</sup>

The Admiralty hath Jurisdiction in Cases of Freight, Mariners Wages, Breach of Charter-Parties, though made within the Realm; if the Penalty be not demanded; and likewise in Case of building, mending, saving, and victualling Ships, &c. so as the Suit be against the Ship, and not only against the Parties.

1 Salk. 37.

Mariners Wages are contracted on the Credit of the Ship, and they may all join Suits in the Admiralty, whereas in Common Law they must all sever; and, on the contrary, the Master of a Ship contracts on the Owners Credit, and not the Ship's, and therefore he cannot prosecute in the Admiralty for his Wages.

Wood's Inst.
810.

It is allowed by the common Lawyers and Civilians, that the Lord Admiral has Cognizance of Seamen's Wages and Contracts, and Debts, for making Ships; also of Things done in navigable Rivers, concerning Damages to Persons, Ships, Goods, Annoyances of free Passage, &c. of Contracts, and other Things done beyond Sea, relating to Navigation and Marine Trade.

2 Bull. 322.

But if a Contract be made beyond Sea for doing of an Act, or Payment of Money within this Kingdom, or the Contract is upon the Sea, and not for a Marine Cause, it shall be tried by Jury; for where Part belongs to the Common Law, and Part to the Admiral, the Common Law shall be preferred; and Contracts made beyond Sea may be tried in B. R. and a Fact be laid to be done in any Place in England, and so tried here.

4 Leon. 257.

Where a Contract is made in England, and there is a Conversion beyond Sea, the Party may sue in the Admiralty, or at Common Law.

Hob. 11.

So where a Bond is made and delivered in France: An Obligation made at Sea, it has been held, cannot be sued in the Admiral's Court, because it takes its Course, and binds according to the Common Law.

3 Lev. 60.

The Court of Admiralty cannot hold Plea of a Matter arising from a Contract made upon the Land, though the Contract was concerning Things belonging to the Ship; but the Admiralty may hold Plea for the Seamen's Wages, &c. because they become due for Labour done on the Sea; and the Contract made upon Land is only to ascertain them.

1 Salk. 31.
See Hob. 79.

Though where there is a special Agreement in Writing, by which Seamen are to receive their Wages in any other Manner than usual; or if the Agreement at Land be under Seal, so as to be more than a Parole Contract, it is otherwise.

1 Lill. 368.

If Goods delivered on Shipboard are embezzled, all the Mariners ought to contribute to the Satisfaction of the Party who is the Sufferer, by the Marine Law, and the Cause is to be tried in the Admiralty.

March's Rep.
204.

By the Custom of the Admiralty, Goods may be attached in the Hands of a third Person, in Causa Maritima & Civilis, and they shall be delivered to the Plaintiff after Defaults, on Caution to restore them, if the Debt, &c. be disproved in a Year and a Day; and if the Party refuse to deliver them, he may be imprisoned quosque, &c.

Godh. 260.
1 Ship.
Ab. 129.
See 1 Salk. 33.

The Court of Admiralty may cause a Party to enter into a Bond, in Nature of Caution or Stipulation, like Bail at Common Law; and if he render his Body, the Sureties are discharged; and Execution shall be of the Goods, or the Body, &c. not of the Lands.

Owen 122.
Hughes Ab.
113.

Some Sailors Clothes were bought in the Parish of St. Catharine, near the Tower, London, and were delivered in the Ship: On a Suit in the Admiralty for the Money, Prohibition was granted; for this was within the County. The same of a Ship at Blackwall, &c.

1 Show. 179.

But the Admiralty may proceed against a Ship, and the Sails, and Tackle, when they are on Shore, although alledged to be detained on Land; yet upon alledging Offer of a Plea, claiming Property therein, and Refusal of the Plea, on this Suggestion a Prohibition shall be had.

4 Inst. 141.

The Admiralty Court may award Execution upon Land, though not hold Plea on any Thing arising on Land.

1 Roll's Abrid.
530.

And, upon Letters Misive or Request, the Admiralty here may award Execution, on a Judgement given beyond Sea, where an Englishman flies, or comes over hither, by Imprisonment of the Party who shall not be delivered by the Common Law.

When Sentence is given in a foreign Admiralty, the Party may libel for Execution of that Sentence here; because all Courts of Admiralty in Europe are governed by the Civil Law. Stat. 418.

Sentences of any Admiralty in another Kingdom are to be credited, that our's may be credited there, and shall not be examined at Law here; but the King may be petitioned, who may cause the Complaint to be examined; and, if he finds just Cause, may send to his Ambassador where the Sentence was given, to demand Redress; and upon Failure thereof, will grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal. Regm. 437.

If one be sued in the Admiralty, contrary to the Statutes 13 and 15 R. II. he may have a Superfedeas, to cause the Judge to stay the Proceedings, and also have Action against the Party suing. 10 Rep. 75.

A Ship being privately arrested by Admiralty Process only, and no Suit, it was adjudged a Proicution within the Meaning of the Statutes, and double Damages, &c. shall be recovered. 1 Salk. 51, 52.

And if an erroneous Judgement is given in the Admiralty, Appeal may be had to Delegates appointed by Commission out of Chancery, whose Sentence shall be final.

The Lord High Admiral of Great-Britain doth, by Virtue of his Place, appoint, in divers Parts of the Kingdom, his several Substitutes, or Vice-Admirals, with their Judges and Marshals, by Patent under the Great Seal of the High Court of Admiralty, which Vice-Admirals and Judges do exercise Jurisdiction in Maritime Affairs, within their several Limits; and in Case any Person be aggrieved by any Sentence or Interlocutory Decree that has the Force of a definitive Sentence, he may appeal to the High Court of Admiralty. Stat. 8 Eliz. C. 5.

Besides the above-mentioned Vice-Admirals, &c. the Lord High Admiral hath under him many Officers differing in Degrees and Qualities, as some are of a military and others of a civil Capacity, some judicial and others ministerial; so that the Marine Jurisdiction may justly be deemed a separate Commonwealth or Kingdom, and the Lord High Admiral be reputed as a Viceroy of it.

There is, under this Court, a Court of Equity, for determining Differences between Merchants; and in criminal Affairs, which is commonly about Piracy: The Proceeding in this Court was formerly by Accusation and Information, according to the Civil Law, by a Man's own Confession, or Eye-Witnesses, by which any one was to be proved guilty before he could be condemned; but that being found inconvenient, there were two Statutes made by Hen. VIII. that criminal Affairs should be tried by Witnesses and a Jury, and this by a special Commission of the King to the Lord Admiral, wherein some of the Judges of the Realm are ever Commissioners, and the Trial, according to the Laws of England, directed by those Statutes.

There seems to be Divisum Imperium between the Common Law of England and the Admiralty; for so far as Low-Water-Mark is observed in the Sea, is counted infra Corpus Comitatus adjacentis, and the Causes thence arising are determinable by the Common Law; yet when the Sea is full, the Admiral hath Jurisdiction here also, so long as the Sea flows, over Matters done between the Low-Water Mark and the Land, as appears in Sir Henry Constable's Case.

The Management of the Navy Royal, under the Lord High Admiral, is committed to the Care of the principal Officers and Commissioners of it; and as all the Laws, for regulating and ordering his Majesty's Navies and Forces by Sea, were in the 22 Geo. II. collected and formed into one Body, I have determined to give my Reader an Abstract of it, in hopes the inspecting so excellent a Code may afford him Pleasure. 1 Rep. Ctr. P. 137.

The Preamble sets forth, That the several Sea-Laws having been found not to be so full, clear, expedient, or consistent with each other, as they ought to be, therefore, to amend and explain the same, and to reduce them into one uniform Act, It is enacted, that from and after the 25th of December, 1749, the

When

22 Geo. II. the Articles and Orders following, as well in Time of Peace as in War, shall be
P. 699. observed and put in Execution in Manner herein after mentioned.

1. All Commanders, Captains, &c. of his Majesty's Ships of War, shall cause the publick Worship of Almighty God, according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, to be reverently performed in their respective Ships; and shall take Care that Prayers and Preaching be performed diligently, and that the Lord's Day be observed according to Law.

2. All Flag-Officers, and Persons belonging to his Majesty's Ships of War, being guilty of profane Oaths, Cursings, Execrations, Drunkenness, Unclean-ness, or other scandalous Actions, in Derogation of God's Honour, and Corruption of good Manners, shall incur such Punishment as a Court Martial shall think fit to impose, &c.

3. If any Officer or other Person of the Fleet shall give or entertain Intelligence to or with any Enemy, or Rebel, without Leave from the King or the Lord High Admiral, &c. and be thereof convicted by a Court Martial, he shall be punished with Death.

P. 690. 4. If any Letter or Message from any Enemy or Rebel be conveyed to any Officer, or any other Person in the Fleet, and such Person shall not, within twelve Hours, having Opportunity, acquaint his superior Officer with it; or if any superior Officer, being acquainted therewith, shall not in convenient Time reveal the same to the Commander in Chief, every Person so offending shall suffer Death, &c.

5. All Spies, who shall bring or deliver any seducing Letters or Messages from any Enemy or Rebel, or endeavour to corrupt any Person in the Fleet, they shall suffer Death.

6. No Person in the Fleet shall relieve an Enemy or Rebel with Money, Victuals, Powder, Shot, Arms, Ammunition, or any other Supplies, directly or indirectly, upon Pain of Death, &c.

7. All Writings whatsoever, that shall be taken or found on board Ships which shall be taken as Prize, shall be preserved, and the Originals shall, by the commanding Officer of the Ship which shall take such Prize, be sent entirely and without Fraud to the Court of Admiralty, or such other Court or Commissioners as shall be authorized to determine whether such Prize be lawful Capture, there to be viewed, made Use of, and proceeded upon, according to Law, upon Pain of forfeiting his Share of the Capture, &c.

8. No Person in or belonging to the Fleet shall take out of any Prize any Money, Plate, or Goods, unless it shall be necessary for the better securing thereof, or for the necessary Use or Service of any of his Majesty's Ships of War, before the same be adjudged lawful Prize; but the entire Account of the Whole, without Embezzlement, shall be brought in, and Judgement passed upon the Whole, without Fraud, upon Pain that every Person offending shall forfeit his Share of the Capture, &c.

9. If any Vessel shall be taken as Prize, none of the Officers or Persons on board her shall be stripped of their Cloaths, or pillaged, beaten, or evil-intreated, upon Pain that the Offender shall be punished as a Court Martial shall sentence.

10. Every Flag-Officer, Captain, and Commander in the Fleet, who, upon Signal or Order of Fight, or Sight of any Ship or Ships, which it may be his Duty to engage, or who upon Likelihood of Engagement shall not make the necessary Preparation for Fight, and shall not in his own Person, and according to his Place, encourage the inferior Officers and Men to fight courageously, shall suffer Death, or other Punishment, &c. and if any Person in the Fleet shall treacherously or cowardly yield, or cry for Quarter, on being convicted, shall suffer Death.

11. Every Person in the Fleet who shall not duly observe the Orders of the Admiral, Flag-Officer, Commander of any Squadron or Division, or other his superior Officer, for assailing, joining Battle with, or making Defence against any Fleet, Squadron, or Ship, or shall not obey the Orders of his superior Officer, in Time of Action, to the best of his Power, or shall not use all possible Endeavours Endeavours to put the same effectually in Execution, being convicted thereof, shall suffer Death, &c.

12. Every Person in the Fleet, who through Cowardice, Negligence, or Disaffection, shall, in Time of Action, withdraw or keep back, or not come into the Engagement, or shall not do his utmost to take or destroy every Ship which it shall be his Duty to engage, and to assist and relieve all and every of his Majesty's Ships, or those of his Allies, which it shall be his Duty to assist and relieve, being convicted thereof, shall suffer Death.

13. Every Person in the Fleet, who, through Cowardice, Negligence, or Disaffection, shall forbear to pursue the Chace of an Enemy, Pirate, or Rebel, beaten or flying; or shall not relieve and assist a known Friend in View, to the utmost of his Power, being convicted, shall suffer Death.

14. If any Action, or any Service shall be commanded, and any Person in the Fleet shall presume to delay or discourage the same, upon Pretence of Arrears of Wages, or any Pretence whatsoever, and be convicted thereof, he shall suffer Death, &c.

15. Every Person in, or belonging to the Fleet, who shall desert to the Enemy, Pirate, or Rebel, or run away with any of his Majesty's Ships, or any Ordnance, Ammunition, Stores, or Provision belonging thereto, to the weakening of the Service, or yield up the same cowardly or treacherously, being convicted, shall suffer Death.

16. Every Person in or belonging to the Fleet, who shall desert or entice others so to do, shall suffer Death, or such other Punishment, as the Circumstances of the Offence shall deserve, and a Court Martial shall think fit; and if any Commanding Officer of any of his Majesty's Ships of War shall receive or entertain a Defserter from any other of his Majesty's Ships, after discovering him to be such, and shall not, with all convenient Speed, give Notice to the Captain of the Ship, to which such Defserter belongs, or if the said Ships are at any considerable Distance from each other, to the Secretary of the Admiralty, or to the Commander in Chief, every Person so offending, and being convicted, &c. shall be cashiered.

17. The Officers and Seamen of all Ships appointed for Convoy of Merchant Ships, or of any other, shall diligently attend upon that Charge without Delay, according to their Instructions; and whosoever shall be faulty therein, and shall not perform their Duty, and defend the Ships and Goods in their Convoy, without either diverting to other Parts, or Occasions, or refusing, or neglecting to fight in their Defence, if they be assailed, or running away cowardly, and submitting the Convoy to Peril and Hazard, or shall demand or exact any Money or other Reward from any Merchant or Master, for convoying of any Vessels intrusted to their Care, or shall misuse the Masters or Mariners thereof, shall be condemned to make Reparation of the Damage to the Merchants, Owners, or others, as the Court of Admiralty shall adjudge, and also be punished according to the Quality of their Offences, by Death or other Punishment, according as shall be adjudged by the Court Martial.

18. If any Captain or other Officer of any of his Majesty's Ships shall receive on board, or permit to be received on board such Ship, any Goods or Merchandize, other than for the sole Use of the Ship, except Gold, Silver, or Jewels, and except the Goods and Merchandizes belonging to any Vessel which may be shipwrecked, or in imminent Danger of being shipwrecked, either on the high Seas, or in any Port, Creek, or Harbour, in order to the preserving them for their proper Owners, and except such Goods or Merchandizes as he shall be ordered to receive on board by Order of the Lord High Admiral of Great-Britain, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, and be convicted thereof, &c. he shall be cashiered, and be for ever afterwards rendered incapable to serve in any Place or Office in the Naval Service of his Majesty, &c.

19. If any Person in, or belonging to the Fleet, shall make or endeavour to make any mutinous Assembly, upon any Pretence whatsoever, and be convicted thereof, &c. he shall suffer Death: And if any Person shall utter any Words of Sedition or Mutiny he shall suffer Death, or such other Punishment as a Court Martial shall deem him to deserve: And if any Officer, Mariner, or Soldier; shall behave himself with Contempt to his superior Officer, such superior Officer being in the Execution of his Office, he shall be punished according to the Nature of his Offence by the Judgement of a Court Martial.

20. If any Person in the Fleet shall conceal any traitorous, or mutinous Practice, or Design, being convicted thereof, &c. he shall suffer Death; and if any Person shall conceal any traitorous or mutinous Words spoken by any, to the Prejudice of his Majesty or Government, or any Words, Practices, or Designs, tending to the Hindrance of the Service, and shall not forthwith reveal the same to the Commanding Officer, or being present at any Mutiny or Sedition, shall not use his utmost Endeavours to suppress the same, he shall be punished as a Court Martial thinks he deserves.

21. If any Person in the Fleet shall find a Cause of Complaint of the Unwholesomeness of the Victual, or other just Ground, he shall quietly make the same known to his Superior, or Captain, or Commander in chief, as the Occasion may deserve, that such present Remedy may be had as the Matter may require; and the said Superior, &c. shall, as far as he is able, cause the same to be presently remedied; and no Person upon such, or any other Pretence, shall attempt to stir up any Disturbance, upon Pain of such Punishment as a Court Martial shall think fit to inflict, &c.

22. If any Officer or other Person in the Fleet shall strike any of his superior Officers, or draw, or offer to draw, or lift up any Weapon against him, being in the Execution of his Office, on any Pretence whatsoever, and be convicted thereof, &c. he shall suffer Death; and if any Person shall presume to quarrel with any of his superior Officers, being in the Execution of his Office, or shall disobey any lawful Command of any of his superior Officers, and be convicted thereof, &c. he shall suffer Death, &c.

23. If any Person in the Fleet shall quarrel, or fight with any other Person in the Fleet, or use reproachful or provoking Speeches, or Gestures, tending to make any Quarrel or Disturbance, he shall, upon being convicted, suffer such Punishment as the Offence shall deserve, and a Court Martial shall impose.

24. There shall be no wasteful Expence of any Powder, Shot, Ammunition, or other Stores in the Fleet, nor any Embezzlement thereof, but the Stores and Provisions shall be carefully preserved, upon Pain of such Punishment to the Offenders, Abettors, Buyers, and Receivers, being Persons subject to Naval Discipline, as shall be by a Court Martial found just.

25. Every Person in the Fleet, who shall unlawfully burn, or set Fire to any Magazine or Store of Powder, or Ship, Boat, Ketch, Hoy, or Vessel, or Tackle, or Furniture thereunto belonging, not then appertaining to an Enemy, Pirate, or Rebel, being convicted of any such Offence, by the Sentence of a Court Martial, shall suffer Death.

26. Care shall be taken in the conducting and steering any of his Majesty's Ships, that through Wilfulness, Negligence, or other Defaults, no Ship be stranded, or run upon any Rocks or Sands, or split, or hazarded, upon Pain that such as shall be found guilty therein, be punished by Death, &c.

27. No Person in, or belonging to the Fleet, shall sleep upon his Watch, negligently perform the Duty imposed upon him, or forsake his Station upon Pain of Death, &c.

28. All Murders committed by any Person in the Fleet, shall be punished with Death, &c.

29. If any Person in the Fleet shall commit the unnatural and detestable Sin of Buggery or Sodomy, with Man or Beast, he shall be punished with Death, &c.

30. All Robbery committed by any Person in the Fleet, shall be punished with Death, &c.

31. Every Officer, or other Person in the Fleet, who shall knowingly make, or sign a false Muster, or Muster Book, or who shall command, counsel, or procure the making or signing thereof, shall, upon Proof of any such Offence, &c. be cashiered, and rendered incapable of further Employment in his Majesty's Naval Service.

32. No Provost-Marshal belonging to the Fleet shall refuse to apprehend <sup>21 Geo. II.</sup> any Criminal, whom he shall be authorized, by legal Warrant, to apprehend, <sup>P. 597.</sup> or to receive, or keep any Prisoner committed to his Charge, or wilfully suffer him to escape, being once in his Custody, or dismiss him without lawful Order, upon Pain of such Punishment as a Court Martial shall deem him to deserve; and all Officers, and others in the Fleet, shall do their Endeavour to detect, apprehend, and bring to Punishment all Offenders, and shall assist the Officers appointed for that Purpose therein, upon Pain of being proceeded against, and punished by a Court Martial, &c.

33. If any Flag Officer, Captain, or Commander, or Lieutenant belonging to the Fleet, shall be convicted before a Court Martial, of behaving in a scandalous, infamous, cruel, oppressive, or fraudulent Manner, unbecoming the Character of an Officer, he shall be dismissed from his Majesty's Service.

34. Every Person being in actual Service, and full Pay, and Part of the Crew belonging to any of his Majesty's Ships of War, who shall be guilty of Mutiny, Desertion, or Disobedience to any lawful Command, in any Part of his Majesty's Dominions on Shore, when in actual Service relative to the Fleet, shall be liable to be tried by a Court Martial, and suffer the like Punishment for every such Offence as if the same had been committed at Sea.

35. If any Person who shall be in actual Service, and full Pay in his Majesty's Ships of War, shall commit upon the Shore, in any Place out of his Majesty's Dominions, any of the Crimes punishable by these Articles and Orders, he shall be liable to be tried and punished for the same, in like Manner, as if the said Crimes had been committed at Sea.

36. All other Crimes, not capital, committed by any Person in the Fleet, which are not mentioned in this Act, or for which no Punishment is hereby directed to be inflicted, shall be punished according to the Laws and Customs in such Cases used at Sea.

No Person convicted of any Offence, shall, by the Sentence of any Court <sup>P. 699.</sup> Martial, be adjudged to be imprisoned for a longer Term than two Years.

No Court Martial shall proceed to the Punishment, or Trial of any Offence, except the Offences specified in the 5th, 34th, and 35th of the foregoing Articles and Orders, which shall not be committed upon the main Sea, or in great Rivers only, beneath the Bridges of the said Rivers nigh to the Sea, or in any Haven, River, or Creek, within the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty, and which shall not be committed by such Persons, as, at the Time of the Offence, shall be in actual Service, and full Pay in the Fleet; such Persons only excepted, and for such Offences only, as are described in the 5th and the foregoing Articles and Orders.

No Court Martial, constituted by Virtue of this Act, shall proceed to the Punishment or Trial of any Land Officer or Soldier, on board any Transport Ship, for any Offences specified in the said Articles.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, the Lord High Admiral of Great-Britain, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, are empowered to grant Commissions to the Commanders in chief of any Fleet or Squadron of Ships of War, to call and assemble Courts Martial, consisting of Commanders and Captains, and if such Commander in Chief shall die, be recalled or removed from his Command, then the Officer upon whom the said Command shall from Time to Time devolve, shall have the same Power to call and assemble Courts Martial, as the first Commander in Chief shall be invested with.

No Commander in Chief of any Fleet or Squadron of his Majesty's Ships, or <sup>P. 699.</sup> Detachment thereof, consisting of more than five Ships, shall preside at any Court Martial in foreign Parts; but the next Officer in Command shall hold such Court Martial and preside thereat.

From and after the 25th Day of December, 1749, if any Commander in Chief in foreign Parts shall detach any Part of his Fleet or Squadron, he shall by Writing, under his Hand, empower the chief Commander of the Squadron or Detachment Detachment ordered on such separate Service, and in Case of his Death or Removal, the Officer to whom the Command shall belong, to hold Courts Martial during the Time of such separate Service, or until he shall return to his Commander in Chief, or shall come under the Command of any other his superior Officer, or return to Great-Britain or Ireland.

F. 700.

Where any material Objection occurs, which may render it improper for the Person, next in Command to the senior Officer, or Commander in Chief of any Fleet or Squadron, in foreign Parts, to hold Courts Martial or preside thereat, the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, as also the Commander in Chief of such Fleet or Squadron, may appoint the third Officer in Command to preside at or hold such Court Martial.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, are empowered to direct any Flag Officer or Captain of any of his Majesty's Ships of War who shall be in any Port of Great-Britain or Ireland, to hold Courts Martial in such Port, provided such Officer be the first, second, or third in Command in such Port, as shall be found most expedient, and for the Good of the Service; and such Flag Officer or Captain shall preside thereat.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, no Court Martial shall consist of more than thirteen, or of less than five Persons, to be composed of such Flag Officers, Captains, or Commanders, then and there present, as are next in Seniority to the Officer who presides at the Court Martial.

The Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, or any Officer empowered to order or hold Courts Martial, shall not direct or ascertain the particular Number of Persons of which any Court Martial shall consist.

If any Court Martial shall be appointed to be held at any Place where there are not less than three, nor yet so many as five Officers of the Degree of a Post Captain, or of a superior Rank to be found, the Officer who is to preside shall call to his Assistance as many of the Commanders of his Majesty's Vessels under that Rank as, together with the Post Captains, will make up the Number of five, to hold such Court Martial.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, no Member of a Court Martial, after Trial is begun, shall go on Shore till Sentence be given, but remain on board the Ship in which the Court shall first assemble, except in Case of Sickness, to be judged of by the Court, upon Pain of being cashiered; nor shall the Proceedings of the Court be delayed by the Absence of any Members, provided a sufficient Number remain to compose the Court, which shall sit from Day to Day, Sunday always excepted, until Sentence be given.

From and after the said 25th of December all the Officers present, who are to constitute a Court Martial for the Trial of Offenders, shall, before they proceed to Trial, take an Oath before the Court, to be administered by the Judge Advocate or his Deputy, in the Words following, viz.

" I A. B. do swear, that I will duly administer Justice, according to the " Articles and Orders established by an Act passed in the twenty-second " Year of the Reign of his Majesty King George the Second, for amending, " explaining, and reducing into one Act of Parliament, the Laws relating " to the Government of his Majesty's Ships, Vessels, and Forces by Sea.
 " without Partiality, Favour, or Affection; and if any Case shall arise, which " is not particularly mentioned in the said Articles and Orders, I will duly " administer Justice according to my Conscience, the best of my Understanding,
 " and the Custom of the Navy in the like Cases; and I do further swear, that " I will not upon any Account, at any Time whatsoever, disclose or discover " the Vote or Opinion of any particular Member of this Court Martial, unless
 " thereunto required by Act of Parliament. So help me God."

And so soon as the said Oath shall have been administered to the respective Members, the President of the Court shall administer to the Judge Advocate, or the Person officiating as such, an Oath in the following Words:

" I. A. B. do swear, that I will not, upon any Account, at any Time whatsoever, <sup>22 Geo. II.</sup>
 " disclose or discover the Vote or Opinion of any particular Member of this <sup>P. 702.</sup>
 " Court Martial, unless thereunto required by Act of Parliament.

" So help me God."

If any Person in the Fleet, being called upon to give Evidence at any Court Martial, shall refuse to give Evidence upon Oath, or shall prevaricate, or behave with Contempt to the Court, such Court Martial is impowered to commit the Offender, for any Time not exceeding three Months, in Case of such Refusal or Prevarication, nor longer than one Month in Case of such Contempt; and every Person who shall either commit, or corruptly procure or suborn any Person to commit wilful Perjury, shall be prosecuted in the King's Bench by Indictment or Information; and every Issue joined thereon shall be tried by a Jury of Middlesex, or such other County as the said Court shall direct; and the Offender, upon Conviction, shall suffer the Pains and Penalties enacted to be inflicted for the like Offences by an Act of 5 Eliz. and 2 Geo. II. &c.

In every such Information or Indictment, it shall be sufficient to set forth the <sup>P. 703.</sup> Offences charged upon the Defendant, without setting forth the Commission for holding the Court Martial, or the particular Matter tried, or directed to be tried, before such Court.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, no Sentence of Death given by any Court Martial held within the Narrow Seas, except in Cases of Mutiny, shall be executed till after Report of the Proceedings shall have been made to the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, and his or their Direction shall have been given therein; and if the said Court shall have been held beyond the Narrow Seas, then such Sentence of Death shall not be executed but by Order of the Commander of the Fleet or Squadron wherein Sentence was passed; and where Sentence of Death shall be passed in any Squadron detached from any other Fleet or Squadron upon a separate Service, then such Sentence, except in Cases of Mutiny, shall not be executed but by Order of the Commander of the Fleet or Squadron from which such Detachment shall have been made, or of the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office; and where Sentence of Death shall be passed in any Court held by the senior Officer of five or more Ships which shall happen to meet in foreign Parts, then such Sentence, except in Cases of Mutiny, shall not be executed but by Order of the Lord High Admiral, or Commissioners for executing the said Office.

The Judge Advocate, or his Deputy, is to administer an Oath to Witnesses at <sup>P. 704.</sup> any Trial by a Court Martial; and in the Absence of the Judge Advocate, or his Deputy, the Court shall appoint any Person to execute the said Office.

From and after the 25th of December, 1749, all the Powers given by the several Articles and Orders established by this Act shall be in Force, with respect to the Crews of such of his Majesty's Ships as shall be wrecked, or be otherwise lost or destroyed; and all the Command and Authority given to the Officers shall be in Force as effectually as if such Ships, to which they did belong, were not so wrecked or destroyed, until they shall be discharged from his Majesty's further Service, or removed into some other Ship of War, or until a Court Martial be held to enquire into the Causes of the Loss of the said Ship; and if it shall appear, by the Sentence of the Court, that the said Officers or Seamen did their utmost to preserve or recover the said Ship, and since the Loss thereof have behaved obediently to their superior Officers, according to the Discipline of the Navy and the Articles aforesaid, then all the Pay and Wages of the said Officers and Seamen, or of such of them as shall have done their Duty, shall be paid to the Time of their Discharge or Death; or, if they shall be then alive, to the Time of the holding of such Court Martial, or their Removal into some other of his Majesty's Ships; and every Person who, after the Wreck or Loss of his Ship, shall act contrary to the Discipline of the Navy, and the Articles and Orders aforesaid, shall be sentenced by the said Court Martial, and punished, as if the Ship to which he did belong was not so wrecked or destroyed.

From and after the said 25th of December, all the Pay and Wages of such Officers and Seamen of any of his Majesty's Ships as are taken by the Enemy, and, upon Enquiry at a Court Martial, shall appear by the Sentence of the said Court to have done their utmost to defend the said Ship, and since the taking thereof to have behaved obediently to their superior Officers, according to the Discipline of the Navy and the Articles aforesaid, shall be paid from the Time of their being so taken to the Time of the holding of such Court Martial, or until they shall be discharged from his Majesty's Service, or removed into some other Ship of War, or, if they shall die in Captivity, or before the holding of such Court Martial, to the Time of their Death, in such Manner as if the Ship to which they did belong respectively was not so taken.

22 Geo. II.

No Person, not flying from Justice, shall be tried or punished by any Court Martial for any Offence against this Act, unless Complaint of such Offence be made in Writing to the Lord High Admiral, or to the Commissioners for executing the said Office, or any Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Squadrons or Ships empowered to hold Courts Martial; or unless a Court Martial to try such Offender shall be ordered by the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, or the said Commander in Chief, either within three Years after such Offence shall be committed, or within one Year after the Return of the Ship or Squadron, to which such Offender shall belong, into any of the Ports of Great-Britain or Ireland, or within one Year after the Return of such Offender into Great-Britain or Ireland.

P. 706. From and after the said 25th of December, if any Captain or other Officer of the Fleet shall receive, or suffer to be received on board, any Goods or Merchandizes, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of the eighteenth Article of this Act, he shall for every such Offence, over and above any Punishment inflicted by this Act, forfeit and pay the Value of such Goods and Merchandizes, or the Sum of 500*l.* at the Election of the Informers, or Person who shall sue for the same, so that no more than one of these Forfeitures shall be sued for and recovered against the same Person for one and the same Offence; one Moiety to the Informer, and the other to Greenwich Hospital, &c.

P. 707. This Act shall not extend to take away from the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the said Office, or any Vice Admiral, or Judge of the Admiralty, or his or their Deputies, or any Officers or Ministers of the Admiralty, or others having or claiming any Admiral Power or Authority within this Realm, or any other the King's Dominions, or from any Person or Court whatsoever, any Power, Right, Jurisdiction, Pre-eminence, or Authority, which any of them lawfully hath, or had, or ought to have and enjoy before the making of this Act, so as the same Person shall not be punished twice for the same Offence.

The Repeal of the before-recited Statutes, or any Thing herein contained, shall not discharge or prevent any Prosecution or Suit which is or shall be commenced against any Person, for any Offence committed on or before the said 25th of December, 1749, or to be committed against the said Statutes; but all Persons who have been, or shall, before the said 25th of December, be guilty of any such Offence, shall and may be prosecuted, condemned, and punished for the same, as well after as before the said 25th of December, as if the said Statutes had not been repealed.

Since the above Act the following was made, for the Encouragement of Seamen to enter into his Majesty's Service, during the War begun in 1756.

31 Geo. II.

The Preamble sets forth, that the Encouragement of Seamen, employed in the Royal Navy, will greatly tend to augment the Marine Force of this Realm, whereon, under the good Providence and Protection of God, the Security of these Kingdoms, and the Support and Preservation of their Commerce, do most immediately depend: And that, by an Act 1 Geo. II. and another of the same Session, several Provisions and Regulations were enacted and prescribed for the Benefit and Encouragement of Seamen employed in the Royal Navy, and for preventing Frauds and Abuses in purchasing their Wages; which Provisions and Regulations, from various Difficulties in carrying the same into Execution, have have been found in a great Measure ineffectual to answer the Purpose thereby intended: And that the establishing a regular Method for the punctual, frequent, and certain Payment of the Wages or Pay due to inferior Officers and Seamen employed in the Royal Navy; the enabling such Officers and Seamen more easily and readily to obtain such Payments, and to allot and remit any Part thereof, for the Support and Relief of their Wives and Families; and the preventing, as far as may be, the Unwary, the Ignorant, or the Necessitous, from being defrauded and injured by the Extortion and Usury of wicked and evil designing Persons, are of the utmost Consequence to the publick Service: Therefore, for effectuating these important and compassionate Purposes, It is enacted, that from and after November 1, 1758, every Volunteer, who shall enter his Name with a Commission Officer, appointed for entering Volunteers in the Royal Navy, and shall receive from him a Certificate thereof, which is to be given him gratis, is entitled to Wages from the Date thereof, including the Day of the Date, if he appears on board within fourteen Days, if the Ship is not above one hundred Miles from the Place of entering; twenty Days if above one hundred Miles; or thirty Days if above two hundred Miles; and shall be allowed the usual Conduct Money, and also two Months Wages Advance, at the first fitting out the Ship, and before the Ship proceeds to Sea.

Every supernumerary Man serving ten Days in any Ship, shall be borne for and entitled to his Wages upon the Books of such Ship, and to all other Benefits, as if he was Part of the Complement: But Men lent from one Ship to another, shall continue to be borne for the Ship from which they were lent, till discharged.

Every inferior Officer or Seaman, who shall be turned over from one Ship to another, in Case the Ship into which he is turned over, is then, or shall, come into a Port of Great-Britain, where there is a Commissioner of the Navy, shall be paid all the Wages due to him in the Ship from which he was turned over, before the Ship in which he was turned over shall proceed to Sea, unless directed otherwise by special Order from the Admiralty, in Cases of the greatest Exigency only; and if the Ship proceed to Sea, the Wages shall be paid as soon as such Ship shall come again into any Port of Great-Britain, where there is a Commissioner.

Every Officer or Seaman, who shall be turned over, shall not be rated in a lower Degree than he served in the former Ship; and above his Wages, shall receive two Months Advance before the Ship shall proceed to Sea.

As often as any Ship, which shall have been in Sea Pay twelve Months or more, shall arrive in any Port of Great-Britain, or on the Coast thereof, the Master shall cause five complete Pay-Books to be made out for the Time such Ships shall have been in Pay, except the last six Months, and transmit such Books, together with three Alphabets, and a Slop-Book to the Navy-Board: And as soon as such Ship shall arrive in any Port of Great-Britain, where there is a Commissioner, immediate Payment shall be made of the Wages due to the Officers and Seamen, their Executors, &c. deducting the Advance Money and all Defalcations, leaving always six Months' Wages unpaid and no more. And all Wages, due to any Ships, shall be paid as soon as may be, or within two Months at farthest, after the Arrival of such Ship in Port to be laid up.

If any inferior Officer or Seaman, who was absent at the Payment of his Ship, or his Captain for him, shall apply to the Navy-Board, in Case such Ship shall be in any Port of Great-Britain, where there is a Commissioner, the Pay-Lists shall be sent to such Commissioner, who shall forthwith cause the Wages to be paid to such Person.

The Commander shall make out a Ticket upon the Death of every Petty Officer or Seaman, and shall transmit the same to the Navy-Board, who are to cause the Day of Receipt to be indorsed thereon, and shall examine and sign the same for Payment within one Month after the Receipt thereof: And the same shall be delivered, and Payment thereof made, without Fee or Reward, ward, to the Executors, Administrators, or Attorney, or the Executors, &c. of such Officer or Seamen.

When any inferior Officer or Seaman shall be rendered unseviceable, the Commander shall give him a Certificate of his Discharge, and make out a Ticket for his Pay, unless the Ships shall be in some Port of Great-Britain, or on the Coast thereof, or shall belong to some Squadron from which he is not separated; in which Case he is to make a Report to the Commander in Chief, and receive his Orders thereupon, and shall send the Ticket to the Navy-Board; and deliver only to such Officer or Seaman the Certificate of his Discharge, containing an exact Copy of the Ticket, and a Description of his Person. The Commissioners of the Navy shall cause the Day when such Ticket was received, to be indorsed thereon; and, after Examination, shall assign the same for Payment, within one Month at farthest after making such Indorsement. And if any Officer or Seaman shall present such Certificate at the Navy-Office, the Commissioners are forthwith to examine such Certificate, and the Person presenting the same; and being satisfied therein, shall testify the same on the Certificate; and the Ticket shall be immediately delivered him, and the Money paid at the Pay-Office to such Officer or Seaman only, without Fee or Reward. If the Tickets shall not have been transmitted to the Navy-Office, the Money appearing to be due by the Copy, shall be paid as if the Certificate had been received. Such Officer or Seaman, being desirous to receive his Wages at any Port of Great-Britain, where a Commissioner resides, may produce his Certificate to him, who being satisfied of the Truth thereof shall sign and transmit the same to the Navy-Board; who, within four Days after receiving it, are to send the Ticket if received, otherwise a Copy of the Certificate, to the Commissioner at such Port, who shall cause immediate Payment thereof to be made, without Fee or Reward. And send such Officer or Seaman to the nearest Hospital, where he is to be received and victualled, from the Time of presenting such Certificate until Payment is made.

If such Certificate be lost or destroyed, or not presented in Person, or the Money paid before the general Payment of the Ship's Company, the Ticket shall be cancelled, and the Wages paid as if no Ticket had been made out.

When any inferior Officer or Seaman shall, by Order of the Commander, be set ashore, and be sent to any Hospital or sick Quarters, such Commander shall make out a sick Ticket for the Wages due to such Person, and transmit the same with such Officer or Seaman to such Hospital or sick Quarters; and if he shall be regularly discharged from thence as unseviceable, a Certificate of his Discharge with the sick Ticket annexed, shall be delivered to him; and if he shall present the same to a Commissioner at any Port of Great-Britain, such Commissioner, being satisfied thereof, shall sign the same on the Certificate, and transmit the Certificate and sick Ticket to the Navy-Board, who are to cause the Day it was received to be indorsed thereon, and also to cause it to be examined by the Muster-Books, if received; and then within four Days, to cause a Ticket or Pay-List to be made out for such Person's Wages, and to send the same to the Commissioner; who shall cause immediate Payment to be made of the Wages of such Seaman, without Fee or Reward; who, notwithstanding such Discharge, shall be maintained in such Hospital or sick Quarters, until the Payment be made.

The Payment of Tickets, Certificates, or Pay-Lists, shall not be delayed, though the Muster or Pay-Books shall not be regularly received at the Navy-Board; but if any Errors shall be made in any Certificate, Ticket, or Pay-List, the Loss shall be made good out of the Commander's Wages.

As often as any Ship, which shall not be in the Port of Great-Britain, or on the Coast thereof, shall have twelve Months' Wages due, the Commander shall cause the Inferior Officers and Seamen's Names to be called over, and shall do the same whenever twelve Months' Wages shall be due; and if any of them shall deliver in Writing the Name and Place of Abode of his Wife, Father, or Mother, and desire, that the Whole or any Part of such Wages then due, except the last six Months, should be paid to his said Wife; Father; or Mother; by the Receiver-General of the Land-Tax, Collector of the Customs, Collector of the Excise, or Clerk of the Cheque at any Dock-Yard, the Commander is to send a List of such Persons to the Navy-Board, who shall make out two Bills for the Payment of the Wages so allotted by each Person, one of them to be sent to the Persons respectively specified in such Lists, and the other to the Receiver, &c. And if the Person to whom any such Bill is sent, shall, within six Months of the Date thereof, produce the same to such Receiver, &c. together with a Certificate, properly authenticated of their being the Wife, Father, or Mother, of such Officer or Seaman respectively, such Receiver, &c. upon being satisfied of the Truth of such Certificate, which he is to enquire into upon the Oath of the Person producing the same, is immediately, without Fee or Reward, to pay the Sum mentioned in such Bill, taking a Receipt. Such Bill, together with the Duplicate thereof, being produced at the Navy-Office, shall be immediately assigned for Payment by the Commissioners of the Navy, and repaid by the Treasurer to such Receiver, &c. or their Orders: But if Payment of the Bill be not demanded within six Months, the Sum contained in such Bill. is to be repaid to such inferior Officer or Seaman, &c.

In like Manner when Wages shall be paid at the Pay-Office or any of the Out-Ports, any inferior Officer or Seaman, desirous to remit the Whole or any Part of his Wages to his Wife, Children, Parents, or any other Person, may have a Bill for the same, as in the last Clause.

If any Receiver, &c. shall not have in his Hands publick Money sufficient to pay any Bill tendered, and shall refuse Payment thereof, he is to indorse on the Back of the Bill the Cause of his Delay, and appoint for Payment some Day within two Months. And if any Receiver, &c. shall unnecessarily refuse Payment, or he or any Person employed under him, take any Gratuity for such Payment, any three Commissioners of the Branch of Business he is under, may fine such Person in any Sum not exceeding fifty Pounds; to be levied as are those for Offences against the Laws of Customs and Excise, and to be paid to the Informer.

The Wages, &c. earned by an indentured Apprentice, shall be paid to his Master, as hath been usual, unless such Apprentice was above eighteen Years of Age, when his Indentures were executed, or shall be rated as Servant to an Officer, to whom such Apprenticeship is not known; in which Case the Officer shall be entitled to the Pay, according to the Practice of the Navy.

Commanders of Ships are to transmit to the Navy-Board, complete Pay-Books, and Lists, and Tickets made out, and also once in two Months Muster-Books, not only for the said two Months, but from the Time the Ship shall have been in Commission, or was last paid; on Failure, the Navy-Board are not to grant them the General Certificate for their Wages, unless by particular Order from the Lords of the Admiralty, in Cases of Necessity, and its being made appear to them, that their Directions were complied with as far as the Nature of the Service would admit, and as safe Opportunities offered: And if any Commander shall not exculpate himself within twelve Months after his Arrival in Great-Britain, he shall forfeit all his Wages to the Chest at Chatbam; and be liable to such other Punishment, not extending to Life and Limb, as a Court Martial shall inflict.

No Letters of Attorney made by inferior Officers or Seamen, or their Executors, &c. shall be valid, unless declared therein revocable, and unless the same be signed before and attested by the Commander, and another of the signing Officers, or by a Clerk of the Cheque; and if made after such Person shall be discharged from the Service, then to be signed before, and attested by, the Chief Magistrate where such Seamen shall reside; or if made by Executors, &c. to be signed before, and attested by, the Minister and Churchwardens, or in Scotland, by the Minister and two Elders, of the Parish where such Executors, &c. reside.

JURISDICTION OF THE ADMIRALTY.

All Letters of Attorney, other than such as are made and attested as aforesaid, are null and void.

No more than 1*s.* shall be taken by any Ecclesiastical Court, &c. for the Probate of any Will or Letter of Administration, granted to the Widows, Children, Parents, Brothers, or Sisters, of inferior Officers, Seamen, or Mariners dying in the Service, and for attending the same, unless the Goods and Chattels are of the Value of 20*l.* nor more than 2*s.* unless the Value of 40*l.* nor more than 3*s.* unless the Value of 60*l.* nor more than 1*s.* for issuing Commissions to swear such Widows, &c. being Executors or Administrators to inferior Officers, &c. unless the Goods and Chattels are of the Value of 20*l.* nor more than 2*s.* unless of the Value of 40*l.* nor more than 3*s.* unless of the Value of 60*l.* under Penalty of 10*l.* to be paid by the Offender to the Party aggrieved, to be recovered with all Costs of Suit in any Court of Record.

Whosoever shall personate or assume the Name or Character, or procure any other, to personate or falsely to assume the Name or Character of any Officer, Seaman, or other Person, intituled to Wages, &c. for Service done in the Royal Navy, or of the Executor, Administrator, Wife, Relation, or Creditor, of any Officer, &c. in Order to receive any Wages, &c. or shall forge or counterfeit, or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any Letter of Attorney, or other Power in Order to receive any Wages, &c. or shall willingly or knowingly take a false Oath, or procure a false Oath to be taken, to obtain the Probate of a Will or Letters of Administration, in Order to receive any Wages, &c. due, or supposed to be due, shall be guilty of Felony, and suffer Death.

When the Pay-Books are closed, Tickets shall be made out, on Application to the Navy-Board, to the Seamen who shall not have received their Wages, and such Tickets shall be paid in Course once a Month.

British Governors, Ministers, and Consuls, residing at foreign Parts, or any two British Merchants, are required to provide for Seafaring Men and Boys, Subjects of Great-Britain, who shall be in foreign Parts by Shipwreck, Capture, or other unavoidable Accidents, or who shall be discharged as unseviceable from the British Navy, and subsist them at Sixpence per Diem each, and send them Home as soon as possible in any British Ships.

The Bills of their Disbursements, with Vouchers, are to be sent to the Navy-Board, who are to cause immediate Payment. And every Master of a Ship is to take so many as the said Governors, &c. shall direct, not exceeding four to every hundred Tons. Such Masters to be allowed Sixpence per Diem, for all such as shall exceed their Complement, upon producing a Certificate from the Governors, &c. of the Number taken on board, and making Affidavit of the Time they were subsisted, and that they did not want of their Complement, or how many they did want of their Complement, and for what Time.

No Volunteer shall be liable to be taken out of his Majesty's Service by any Process, except for some criminal Matter, unless for a real Debt, and unless the Plaintiff, or some other Person in his Behalf, make Affidavit that to his Knowledge, the Sum due to the Plaintiff with Costs of Suit amounts to 20*l.* at least, a Memorandum of which Oath is to be marked on the Back of the Writ or Process, for which no Fee shall be taken; and if any Person shall be arrested contrary to the Intent of this Act, any Judge of such Court may examine into the same on Oath, and discharge such Seaman without Fees, on Proof of his belonging to one of the King's Ships, and being arrested contrary to the Intent of this Act; and may award reasonable Costs, for Recovery whereof he shall have the same Remedy as the Plaintiff, if he had Judgement.

But Plaintiffs, upon Notice first given in Writing to such Seaman, or left at his last Place of Abode, may file a common Appearance, so as to entitle them to proceed to Judgement and Outlawry, and to have an Execution thereupon, except against the Bodies of such Seamen.

Persons employed to receive Seamen's Wages, Prize-Money, &c. shall take no more than Six-pence of the Pound; and if they shall take any more, to forfeit 50*l.* with full Costs of Suit, to the Prosecutor: And if such Person belong to any Office in the Navy, he shall lose his Place, and be incapable of holding any Place of Profit in any such Office.

All Persons in Offices belonging to the Navy taking Fees, contrary to this Act, are liable to the same Penalty.

Of Consuls.

OF all the Commercial Institutions established by modern Nations, for the Protection of the Rights and Privileges of Merchants, Masters of Ships, and Mariners, trading to and residing in each other's Dominions, none deserves our Attention more than that of the Appointment of Consuls, whose Office, Duties, Privileges, and Powers, will be the Subject of this Chapter. It is a high-sounding Title; but bears no Affinity to that of the Consuls of the ancient Roman Commonwealth, who were supreme Magistrates, Generals, and Legislators: Whereas the Officer we are now treating of has no Jurisdiction beyond the Limits of commercial Concerns, neither does his Authority extend to any Persons who are not the natural-born Subjects of the Prince from whom he receives his Commission.

The Institution has been found so necessary and useful, that all the Maritime Powers of Europe have adopted it. Consuls from each reside in the Sea-Port Towns, and, in some Instances, in the Capitals of the different Nations with whom they respectively carry on any considerable Commerce. In France, they have likewise a Consular Office and Jurisdiction of an especial Nature, being instituted for the internal Regulation of Trade and Commerce in their own Ports. But as these have no Relation to the general Establishment of Consuls in foreign Countries, I shall refer those, who may have any particular Interests in such a Detail, to the very long and accurate Account of the French Judge-Consuls in Poggethwayte's Universal Dictionary of Trade and Commerce, Article CONSULS; translated from the French of Monsr. SAVAÏY, Folio, 2 Vols. Fourth Edit. Lond. 1774; and shall proceed to the Appointment of British Consuls.

Our Consuls were originally elected by the British Merchants, residing in foreign Ports, from amongst their own Body; and being recommended by them to the Secretary of State for the Department in which the Ports were situated, the Secretary laid the Recommendation before the King, who confirmed the Election, and issued the Commission under his Sign Manual accordingly: This laudable Custom was founded upon clear Demonstration, that Merchants residing upon the Spot were the best Judges of the commercial Interest of their own Country, and best able to promote its Increase, and to prevent its Diminution. But, in Process of Time, the Corruption of Court Favour and Court Influence extended itself to this as well as to all other Offices held under the Crown. Ministers of State established a Claim to dispose of all Offices of Honour and Profit, subject to the Jurisdiction of their respective Departments. Their Recommendation, then, whether proceeding from Friendship or Purchase, was substituted in the Place of that of the Merchant; and Men were appointed from Home, who were so far from being qualified, that very often they had not had a commercial Education. At present the Appointment lies with the two Secretaries of State for the Southern and the Northern Provinces. The Northern Secretary appoints all the Consuls residing in the Northern Kingdoms of Europe, and the Southern all those residing in the South. Some of our commercial corporate Companies, however, still retain the Privilege of appointing their own Consuls.

One Reason assigned for a Revolution in the Mode of appointing our Consuls was, that the Office of a Consul was incompatible with that of a Merchant, and that it was impossible for him to maintain the Dignity of his Office if he carried on Trade upon his own Account; for it might induce him to act partially upon many Occasions. This is so far true, that Consuls ought not not to be suffered to trade; for, having Salaries annexed to their Office, they ought to decline all commercial Interest from the Time of their Appointment; and this Rule being observed, the Propriety of appointing Men who have been brought up in the mercantile Line still remains in full Force. The French strictly enjoin their Consuls in all foreign Countries not to carry on any Commerce whatever, under Penalty of Dismission from their Office. But the British Consuls, contrary to sound Policy, are still permitted to trade in all the Ports where it is not prohibited, as it ought to be, by the Sovereign of the Country. This Remark will be justified, when we come to the Consideration of the peculiar Duties of their Station.

The Admission of a Consul to reside and exercise his Functions in any Part of the Dominions of a foreign Power depends upon Circumstances. Where the Right of sending Consuls to reside in each other's Dominions is expressly stipulated in commercial Treaties, subsisting between the Crown of Great-Britain and the States to whom they are sent, they may object to the Person appointed, and by their Ambassador make Requisition for the Appointment of another, assigning proper Reasons for their Rejection of the first; but they cannot reject the King's Commission: Whereas those Potentates with whom we have no commercial Treaties, stipulating the Appointment of a Consul, may not only refuse the Person but the Commission itself, without Violation of the Peace and Amity subsisting between the Powers so refusing and this Country; for the Law of Nations does not include this Appointment; however, it is usual to grant Permission. Yet the Difference is essential; for the Consul, whose Residence is founded upon a Treaty, may proceed to much greater Lengths, in the Exercise of his Authority, than he who is only admitted by Permission; every Point, however clear, will be disputed with the latter by the Magistracy of the Place where he resides, jealous of their own Jurisdiction, and they will be supported by their Sovereign and his Ministers. This Distinction was not noticed in any of our commercial Works; and it is only by Experience that the Editor of this has been enabled to insert it, the British Consuls in the Austrian Netherlands being on Sufferance only. And, that we may establish this Distinction upon proper Authority, here follow the Copies of two Commissions, the first founded upon Treaty, the second on Permission only. They were formerly issued in Latin; but, since our Language has been perfectly understood in all the Courts of Europe, the Practice has been disused, and therefore it is unnecessary to give the Latin Form, as inserted in former Editions of this Work.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. to all and singular to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting. Whereas it hath been found expedient that some Person of known Probity be appointed to act as Consul in the Town of Alicant, in the Kingdom of Spain, and to take Care of the Commerce of our Subjects, who reside or commonly go there to trade; Know ye, therefore, that We, entirely confiding in the Probity, Affection, Prudence, and Experience, especially in mercantile Affairs, of our trusty and faithful Subject, Samuel Tucker, Gentleman, have nominated and appointed, and by these Presents do nominate and appoint him our Consul in the said Town of Alicant, together with all its Members and Appurtenances; giving and granting unto him full Power and Commission to aid and protect all our Subjects that inhabit or frequent the said Town, its Territories and Jurisdiction, or who do, or who shall carry on a Trade, or transact Business in those Parts, Harbour, and Coasts; advising and assisting them, agreeable to the Articles and Treaties of Peace and Alliance relating to Trade, and firmly concluded between the Crowns of Great-Britain and Spain, and their respective Dominions; and to defend our Subjects, in Case of Need, in their Trade, Goods, and whatsoever else shall appertain unto unto them, before all Judges and Magistrates; and to take Cognizance of, determine, and compose all Differences, Controversies, and Litigations, which do or may happen between them; and to defend and preserve them in every Thing relating to their Right, Liberty, and Freedom of mutual Trade and Commerce; and further, to substitute, as he shall think fit, one or more Deputies, or Vice-Consuls, to act for him in all and every of the aforesaid Places; and to do all and every Thing which may promote the Good of our Subjects, the Increase of mutual Friendship between the two Kingdoms and People, and the Freedom and Security of Commerce: And further, that he use and enjoy all and every the Rights, Honours, Immunities, Liberties, and Emoluments, which any other Consul in the aforesaid Town did or could of Right enjoy. And We earnestly intreat the most Serene and Potent Catholick King, Our Brother, and We desire all others whom it may in any wise concern, in a friendly Manner, what We strictly enjoin all Our Subjects by these Presents, that they acknowledge and admit the said Samuel Tucker as Our Consul in the aforesaid Town. In Witness whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and signed and sealed with our own Hand. Given in our Palace at St. James's the Eleventh Day of December, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Twenty-eight, and in the Second Year of our Reign.

G E O R G E, R.

G E O R G E the Third, by the Grace of God, King of Great-Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To our trusty and well-beloved Michael Hatton, Esq. Greeting. Whereas We have thought fit, for the Advancement of Trade and Commerce in the several Ports of Ostend, Nieuport, and Bruges, in the Province of Flanders, to constitute a proper Person to be our Consul in those Ports, who may, as there shall be Occasion, countenance and protect our Subjects, being Merchants there; We, in Consideration of the good Testimony We have received of your Loyalty to us, and of your Ability to serve the said Merchants, in the Execution of the Office of Consul in those Ports, do, by these Presents, constitute and appoint you, the said Michael Hatton, to be our Consul in the said Ports of Ostend, Nieuport, and Bruges, together with all their Members and Dependencies in the said Province of Flanders, and over all our Subjects who inhabit, frequent, or trade to the said Ports, their Members or Territories; to have, hold, exercise and enjoy the said Office of our Consul, by yourself, or your sufficient Deputy or Deputies, for and during our Pleasure, with all and singular the Rights, Profits, Privileges, and Immunities which you yourself have, or any other Consul heretofore hath enjoyed, or which any of our Consuls do or ought to have and enjoy, in any of the Dominions of any Princes or States where Consuls usually reside; and We do hereby enjoin and require all our Subjects dwelling in, frequenting, or trading to the said Places or Ports, to pay that Respect which is due to you as our Consul, and to your Deputy. Given at our Court at St. James's the Twentieth Day of February, 1761, in the first Year of our Reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

HOLDERNESS.

The British Consul has no Right to return Home, even for a short Space of Time, without applying for Leave of Absence to the Secretary of State; which having obtained, he is to appoint a Deputy or Deputies to take Care of the commercial Affairs of his Nation during his Absence: There are no more than temporary Deputies, and are generally Merchants of the Place. But if the Consul, holding some other Appointment from the Crown, is absent for a considerable Length of Time, or, being infirm, obtains Leave to remain in his native Country, the Deputy, appointed to reside constantly for him, may be appointed by him; but he must be presented to the Secretary of State, and being approved by him as the sufficient Deputy under the Commission, he becomes an Officer of the Crown, takes the Title of VICE-CONSUL, and carries on a Correspondence with the publick Officers, in every Respect the same as the Consul: And, though his Commission is signed by the Consul, being a Copy of his own with the requisite Alterations, he has no Power to remove the Vice-Consul, so appointed, without the Approbation of the Secretary of State. If there are any subordinate Deputyships within the Jurisdiction of the Consulship, it is the Vice-Consul, in this Case, who is to appoint Persons to act in those Stations, not the Consul, who has given up the entire Authority he held under the King's Commission.

In some Countries, as in Portugal, Spain, and Italy, where there is a Scarcity of British Subjects, it has been customary for the Consul-General to appoint Natives of such Countries to act as their Deputies at inferior Ports; but this is an unwarrantable and impolitick Practice, founded, like many others, upon avaricious Principles in our great Men, whose Salaries are amply sufficient to enable them to send for Deputies from Home.

A Consul is not, in the literal Sense of the Word, a publick Minister; but it is a Mistake to assert, that he has no State Affairs to transact; for it is expected from him, that he should correspond with the Ambassador from his Sovereign residing at the Court of the Prince within whose Dominions his consular Station lies, and send him Information of any Transactions, of what Nature soever, which may prove detrimental to the political or commercial Interests of his King and Country. And, in Case there is no Ambassador or other publick Minister residing at the said Court, he is to transmit his Intelligence directly Home to the Secretary of State, under whose Department he serves.

But though the Consul be not a publick Minister, under the Protection of the Law of Nations, he enjoys some important Privileges, annexed to his Office, which distinguish him from the private Inhabitants of the Place where he resides. These, where the Consul is admitted only by Permission from the Prince or State, are regulated generally by the customary Privileges granted to them in Countries where the Right of fixing Consuls is founded upon Treaties. The principal are, a free Entry for his Furniture and Baggage upon his first Establishment—An Exemption from the Excises, or inland Duties on Liquors, and other Articles of Consumption, for himself and Family—A Seat on the Bench with the Magistrates of the Place, when obliged to appear at their Assemblies to act as Counsel for the Subjects of his Nation, in all Cases of Dispute between them and the Natives of the Place—An Exemption from lodging the Military in his House—A Guard, when required, to aid and assist him in the Maintenance of his Authority over the Subjects of his own Country trading to the Port; which, however, does not extend to those who are constantly resident in the Place, and who, in all Cases, whether civil or criminal, as well as the Consul himself, are subject to the Jurisdiction of the Country—The Privilege of receiving a polite Message from the Magistrates, requesting his Attendance, when necessary, at their Assemblies, instead of a formal Summons or Citation, which, if he means to support the Dignity of his Sovereign, he must never obey. There are likewise some trifling personal Advantages; but, as they do not affect his Office, it is better to leave it to the good Sense of the Consul to discover, and use them with Discretion, than to mention them as Precedents in this Place, lest they should be too eagerly contended for, to the Detriment of the commercial Interests of his Country.

That the Difference between a Consul and a publick Minister may appear in the most striking Point of View, the following Case, inserted in the former Edition of this Work, is reprinted.

The

The Governor of Cadix, having once affronted and confined the Dutch Wicqueart's Consul, the States General complained thereof to the Court of Madrid, as of <sup>Rights of</sup> a Violence done to the Law of Nations, instead of urging the Non-Execution <sup>Ambassadors.</sup> P. 40. of those Treaties, from which alone they ought to have expected Safety for their pretended Minister, and not elsewhere. Some Years since, they attempted to make their Consul, who resided at Genoa, pass for a public Minister; but the Senate wrote them, that it did not acknowledge him as such, and that all which it could grant, or they expect for him, was the peaceable Fruition of those Rights and Privileges, which Custom had bestowed on this Kind of Employment: The Generality of Consuls are only Merchants, who, notwithstanding their Office of Judge in the Controversies that may arise among those of their own Nation, carry on at the same Time a Traffick, and are liable to the Laws of the Place where they reside, as well in civil as in criminal Matters, which is altogether inconsistent with the Quality of a public Minister; though where it is otherwise, and a Consul does not trade, I think a proportionable Regard and Respect ought to be paid, as due to his Character.

In the Year 1634, the Republick of Venice had almost broke with Pope Urban VIII. on Account of the Violence offered by the Governor of Ancona, to the Consul of that sage Senate, who, in State and Maritime Affairs, stands in the foremost Rank of Preceptors.

The Consul's Name was Michael Oberti, a Native of Bergamo, whose Family had discharged that Office for many Years; but the Governor suspecting his having given some Advices, that occasioned the Republick's Gallies to take some small Vessels belonging to Ragusa, for having smuggled the Duties that are paid in the Gulf, so persecuted the Consul, that he was forced on a Voyage to Venice, to acquaint the Senate therewith. He was no sooner departed, than the Governor put a Garrison in his House, and carried off his Furniture and Papers, even those which related to the Functions of his Employment; the Senate complained hereof, and demanded Reparation with so much Warmth, that the French Ambassador, apprehending they might proceed to an open Rupture with the Pope, endeavoured to adjust the Difference to the Satisfaction of the Parties offended; but before the Accommodation could be perfected, the Governor caused the Consul to be summoned, and for Contumacy condemned him to Banishment, under the Pretext, that during the Contagion which reigned, he had unladed Goods contrary to the Prohibition. There was more of Passion than Justice in this Sentence, as Oberti could prove that he had done nothing without the Magistrate's Approbation; so that this iniquitous and unjust Proceeding gave more Offence to the Senate than the first, and a Repetition of the French Ambassador's good Offices was necessary, to dispose the Minds of the jarring Parties to an Accommodation, which he at last accomplished, upon Condition, that the Governor should repeal the Outlawry and suffer Oberti's Re-establishment; and that the Senate, who should afterwards recall Oberti, should substitute in his Place whomsoever it pleased. Michael dying before all this could be executed, the Senate put his Brother in his Room; but this last was no sooner arrived at Ancona, than the Governor caused him to be imprisoned, and would not release him till he had given Security for his leaving the Town, and not returning.

The French Ministers, who had laboured in the Reconciliation, and engaged their Words for Performance of the Conditions, which, as above expressed, allowed the Venetians to nominate any other for Consul that they should think fit, were very much chagrined at this Proceeding; and the Senate, to their Resentment, refused Audience to the Nuncio, and forbade its Ambassador to ask one of the Pope, till they had received ample Satisfaction, which the Governor was forced to give.

We shall now give a general Sketch of the Functions of a British Consul residing in a foreign Port, and of the Respect and Obedience due to him from his Fellow Subjects, being Merchants, Masters of Ships, or Mariners, resorting resorting to the said Port, a Subject which has been so totally neglected by our commercial Writers, that it is high Time to supply the Deficiency.

A British Consul, in Order to be properly qualified for his Employment, should take Care to make himself Master of the Language used by the Court and the Magistracy of the Country where he resides. If the common People of the Port use another, he must acquire that also, that he may be enabled to settle little Differences, without troubling the Magistracy of the Place for the Interposition of their Authority. Such are Accidents happening in the Harbour, of the Ships of one Nation running foul of and doing Damage to each other, &c. At Ostend, the vulgar Tongue is Flemish, but publick Business with the Magistracy and with the Court of Brussels is transacted in the French Language.

At his first Establishment, he should procure a TARIFF, or Specification of the Import Duties on all Commodities arriving at his Port from Great-Britain or Ireland. Also, of the Duties on all Commodities exported from the said Port, and destined for any Port belonging to the Dominions of his Sovereign. He must take especial Notice of all Prohibitions to prevent the Export or Import of any Articles, as well on the Part of the State wherein he resides, as of the King his Master; that he may admonish all British Subjects against carrying on an illicit Commerce to the Detriment of the Revenues, and in Violation of the Laws of either. And it is the more essential, that he should attend diligently to this Part of his Duty, because there are Merchants and Factors in every Country, who for selfish Ends will encourage Smuggling, and hazard the Detention, nay, even the Confiscation of Ships, and the Imprisonment of the Masters and Mariners to the great Injury of Owners, Freighters, and other Parties concerned.

It is his Duty likewise to make himself Master of the Municipal Laws of the Country; and of all the Ordinances of the Magistracy, that his Fellow Subjects may not be involved in Difficulties and Distresses, through Ignorance, or be fined and imprisoned through the Artifices of extortionate Farmers of the Inland Excises, or mercenary Officers of the Police, resembling our trading Justices. They are to consider themselves as the lawful Protectors of all British Subjects trading to, residing in, or travelling through the Places within their Jurisdiction, but more especially of all Masters of British Ships and Mariners: They are not to suffer the Natives to offer them any Insult, or do them any Wrong, nor the Custom-house or other Officers of the Government of the Country to impose on them, illegally to detain their Persons, Ships, or Merchandize, or exact Money from them on fraudulent Pretences; and in all Cases of this Nature, when the Consuls cannot obtain Redress from the Administration on the Spot, they are to prefer their Complaint by Memorial to the British Minister, residing at the Courts on which their Consulships depend. If there is no such Minister, they are to transmit the Memorial themselves to the Court, and failing of Redress, if the Complaint be well founded and important, the same should be transmitted to his Majesty's principal Secretary of State for that Province. They have a Right to demand Audience of the Prime Minister or Ministers of the Sovereign or State wherein they reside, as Persons invested with Publick Characters, in the Absence or Non-residence of Ambassadors, or other Publick Ministers from their own Sovereign. The Editor had frequent Occasion to demand it, in the Absence of the late Sir James Porter, his Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Brussels, and he always obtained it with great Politeness from the late Count Cobentzel, Prime Minister for the Austrian Netherlands, a most accomplished Statesman—and from his late Royal Highness Prince Charles of Lorraine, Uncle to the present Emperor, Governor General of the Low Countries.

If any Insult or Outrage is offered to the Inhabitants of the Country where British Consuls reside, by British Subjects, the Magistrates before they proceed to the Punishment of the Offenders, will usually complain to the Consuls, who ought to interpose their Authority, to summon the offending Parties Parties before them, and, if they will not appear voluntarily, to compel them by an armed Force: Upon their appearing, he is to order them to make immediate Satisfaction, and, if they refuse this, he must resign them to the Civil Jurisdiction of the Magistrates, or to the Military Law of the Garrison; always persisting, however, in being present, and acting as Counsel or Advocate, upon all Trials of British Subjects, whether their Lives or Properties be at Stake. But if an Accusation is brought against them for Offences, alledged to have been committed within the Dominions or Jurisdiction at Sea of their natural Sovereign, it is the Duty of a British Consul to claim Cognizance of the Cause for his Sovereign; to insist upon the Release of the Parties, if detained in Prison by the Magistracy of the Place, on any such Accusation brought before them; and that all judicial Proceedings against them do instantly cease. He is likewise to demand the Aid of the Power of the Country, Civil and Military, to enable him to secure and put the accused Parties on board such British Ship as he shall judge fit, that they may be conveyed to Great-Britain, to be tried by their proper Judges.

A remarkable Case of this Kind happened in the Beginning of the Year 1768, at Ossend. Peter Horsfman, Master of a Merchant-Ship, was driven into that Port by Strefs of Weather, being bound for Hamburg from Seville. On his Passage he had anchored some Days off the Mother-Bank, Spithead; and during this Time his Sailors, as he alledged, had mutinied, and signed a Round Robin *. Upon coming on Shore, the British Vice-Consul, Mortimer, being absent, his Duty having called him for a few Days to Dunkirk, he laid a Charge of Mutiny against three of his Men before the Magistrates, who caused them to be arrested by their Officers, threw them into Prison, loaded them with Irons, and would have proceeded to Trial; but upon the Vice-Consul's Return he presented a Memorial, insisting that the Men should be released, and given up to him, in order to their being sent to England, consigned to the Lord Warden of the Port of Dover, to be by him detained till Orders should arrive concerning them from the Court of Admiralty, the Offence, if committed at all, having happened within the territorial Jurisdiction of the King of Great-Britain. The Magistrates of Ossend persisted in maintaining their Civil Jurisdiction over the Prisoners, and prepared without Delay for the Trial. The British Vice-Consul drew up a Memorial, and transmitted it to Sir William Gordon, his Majesty's Minister at Brussels: That Court gave evasive Answers; and the Vice-Consul, finding the Lives of British Mariners at Stake, applied to the Board of Admiralty at London, stating the Case. The Lords of the Admiralty sent the Case to their Solicitor, who gave it as his Opinion, that the Vice-Consul was perfectly in the Right; and that Lord Weymouth, Secretary of State for the Northern Department, ought to lay the Matter before the King, in such Manner that the Imperial Ambassador should be required instantly to write to Vienna, that Orders might be given to the Government of Brussels to stop all judicial Proceedings against the said Sailors, and to release them, which was done accordingly.

It is the Duty of British Consuls to recover all Wrecks, or Cables, Anchors, &c. belonging to the King's Ships, found at Sea by the Fishermen, or other Persons, and brought into the Ports where they reside; to pay the accustomary Salvage, and to inform the Navy-Board in England of his Proceedings thereon; also, to relieve all distressed British Mariners, to allow them Six-pence daily for their Support, to send them Home in the first British Vessels that sail for England, and to keep a regular Account of his Disbursements, which he is to transmit yearly, or oftener if required, to the Navy-Office, attested by two British Merchants of the Place.

He must likewise give free Passes to all poor British Subjects wishing to return Home, directed to the Captains of the King's Pacquet-Boats, or Ships of War, requiring them to take them on board.

* A Sea-Term for a mutinous Conspiracy against the Captain, in which the Persons signing the Agreement write their Names in a Circle round the Paper, so that it may not appear who was the first or Ring-leader.

No Merchant-Ship of his Nation shall leave the Port wherein a British Consul resides without his Passport, which he shall not grant till all just Demands on the Master and the Crew from the Government of the Country be satisfied; and, for this Effect, he ought to see the Governor's Pass, if a garrisoned Town, or the Burgomaster's; unless the Merchant or Factor, to whom the Ship was confined, makes himself responsible for all Consequences.

The Consul is the natural Arbitrator between the Masters of British Ships and the Freighters, being Inhabitants of the Place wherein he resides, and he must therefore attend, if required, at all Arbitrations where Property is concerned.

His Fees are regularly established in Countries where large Factories of his Nation are settled: In some Places they are regulated by the Burthen of the Ship, in others by the Length of the Voyage; but where there is no fixed Rule, they are regulated by Precedent. And it is remarkable, that the Consuls of other Nations are protected by the Sovereigns, and authorized to take the Consul's Fees; but the British have not any Authority whatever to support their Claim, where there is no commercial Treaty. If a Master refuses to pay, he cannot detain the Ship; for the Owners and Freighters would bring their Actions for Damages: But that excellent Chancellor, Lord Hardwicke, held, that the Consul might send on board, and seize any Piece of valuable Furniture belonging to the Cabin, which would not hinder the Navigation of the Ship, and detain it for his Fee.

Another Hardship upon British Consuls is, that they are often obliged to imprison disorderly Seamen, upon the Complaint of their Masters, as an indispensable Duty of their Office; yet every one of these Seamen has it in his Power to bring his Action against the Consul for false Imprisonment in the Courts of Law in England, when it is probable the Master is on a Voyage in some other Part of the World.

Therefore, it is the Duty of the Consul to be very cautious how he confines or punishes British Seamen, or Masters of Ships, upon their mutual Complaints against each other; and to keep a regular and well-attested Account, fairly written in a Book for that Purpose, of all his official Transactions, entering therein—the Date of the Arrival of every British Ship, the Master's Name, Name of the Ship, Burthen, Quality of Lading, Place from whence she came, to whom consigned, and his Departure.

British Consuls should strictly mark the Progress of the Commerce of other Nations in the Places of their Residence, study the Means of improving that of their own, and transmit Intelligence to the Secretary of State, when it is upon the Decline, assigning the Causes, and proposing suitable Remedies.

Lastly, with Respect to Religion, they are to take Care to give no Offence themselves, nor suffer any Insult or Indecency to be offered by British Subjects to the established Religion of the Country; neither are they to make a publick Profession of their own, nor to hold Assemblies for Protestant Worship in Roman Catholick Countries, unless expressly stipulated by Treaty, or permitted: But, on the other Hand, being always allowed the free Exercise thereof privately in their own Houses, they are not to be molested therein, nor are they to be prevented attending or assembling at the Houses of their Consuls for such Purposes: And the said Consuls are to take Care that no Protestant be forced to comply with any of the Rites and Ceremonies of the Religion of the Country; such as compelling Parents to send their Children to be baptized by their Priests, or to be educated in the Romish Faith. Neither are they to suffer the Seizure of any Bibles, Common Prayers, or other religious Books, in the Houses of British Subjects, though such Books are strictly prohibited by the Laws of the Country to other Inhabitants. And, as Cases of this Kind sometimes happen, it may not be improper to observe, that a Book taken out of a House, by a Priest or Friar, should be claimed as the common Property of the Owner; and the Offender should be proceeded against at Common Law, not by Memorial; the Common Law of every Country affording Relief in such Instances.

The Office of a British Consul is much more difficult in Time of WAR than in Time of PEACE; especially on Account of the great Care he must take to prevent any Violation of the Neutrality of the Port in which he resides, by the Masters of British Merchant Ships: For which Reason, and because the System of the maritime Powers of Europe has just undergone a Revolution tending to diminish and restrain that universal Empire of the Seas heretofore claimed and maintained by Great-Britain, we have thought it right to introduce a new Chapter, on the Freedom of Navigation, immediately after the present, and before that on Insurance, as they seem to be Subjects intimately connected; for it is Part of the Consul's Duty to inform the Owners or Underwriters of a Ship, if required, whether the Master has or has not made void the Policy of Insurance by violating the Freedom of Navigation, or the Neutrality of Ports.

Of Freedom of Navigation.

ALTHOUGH it cannot be expected that Merchants should study thoroughly all the Laws of Nations, yet it may be supposed that most of them know something of the Contents of the Treaties of Commerce; and that there is a Difference in the Treaties of Commerce between England and Denmark and Sweden, and between England and Holland, and England and France and Spain; and that only between the four last, the Rule "of free Ships making free Goods, though belonging to Enemies, except contraband," had been reciprocally established; however, for the Use of those who may be desirous to know what passed with Regard to Navigation in former Wars, as well as the late, I here subjoin some remarkable Passages which I have met with on this Subject, with some Observations that may considerably elucidate it.

From the Letters written by that great Statesman John de Witt, Pensionary of Holland, and others received from the Dutch Ambassadors employed at the Courts of France and England during his Ministry, which were published at the Hague 1723-24, in four Parts in 4to, it appears that this Minister, being sensible that Holland's Wealth depended chiefly upon keeping Peace, and having a free and unmolested Navigation from and to all Parts, laboured hard to obtain from England and France, by particular Treaties of Commerce, the Concession that free Ships should give Freedom to all Goods, even those belonging to Enemies, except contraband.—His Letters wrote to, and those received from, William Boreel, in 1653-54, Part I. Page 77, 78, shew that France by a provisional Treaty made in 1646, and by a Declaration of the French King in 1651, having allowed this Rule to the Dutch, was the first who deviated from it. Mr. Boreel writes, Page 66, 68, "They now say that their Enemies ought not to be protected nor served by Ships of the States, in carrying their Goods: That such Goods would be taken out of the Dutch Ships, and confiscated as good Prize." He adds, "and the French may perhaps even fall upon maintaining their old Maxim, Que la robe d'ennemi confisque celle d'ami."—His Letters wrote to, and those received from, William Nieuvoort, 1656, Part III. Page 226, 230, 332, 333, 340, 426, 427, shew that the Dutch never could obtain from England, during the Time of Oliver Cromwell, that this Rule should be allowed; and it seems that England, considering herself to be the first of the maritime Powers, thought it more political that Holland should always remain in the same Interest, and go along with her. We find in Aistma, or Aitzema, 36th Book of State Affairs and of War, Anno 1656, that upon Mr. Nieuvoort's so often repeated Solicitations about the marine Treaty, the Answer given by the English was, that the Demand of "free Ships, free Goods," and Passport to their Form, was very unjust; and the Reasons they alleged are as strong as any that have been made Use of since.

Here follow Extracts from the Letters written by the Dutch Ministers in France and England, to the Pensionary J. de Witt, at the Hague, from 1653 to 1657.—W. Boreel, the Dutch Ambassador at Paris, to the Pensionary,

December

December 26, 1653.—“ I perceive well enough that France would go farther in regard to the marine Treaty, which I am soliciting, if the War with Spain was not a Hindrance.—They now maintain the Maxim, that their Enemies must in no Manner be protected or served by any of the Ships belonging to the Subjects of their High Mightinesses, for the carrying their Goods, on Peril, that if any such Goods be met with in Dutch Ships, they shall be made good Prize, and as such be taken out and confiscated: Which however is departing from a Law they maintained in former Times, under Francis the First, and Henry the Third, which was Que la robe d'ennemi confisque celle d'ami: Whereas now in Dutch Ships the Goods belonging to their, and other neutral, Subjects shall not be confiscated. I have made all possible Endeavours to obtain, that free Ships should make free Goods, but as yet without Success.”

—From Pensionary De Witt's Answer, 8th of January, 1654.—“ I observe from your's of the 26th of December that, notwithstanding you used all your Endeavours you could not obtain that free Ships should make free Goods; whereupon I cannot but believe that the French Ministers must misapprehend the Matter, or you explain it wrong; since in the Draughts of the Treaty sent over, it stands clearly explained, that free Ships shall make free Goods; Que les navires qui traffiqueront & seront libres rendront aussi toute leur charge libre, bien qu'il y eut dedans de la marchandise, même des grains & legumes, appartenants aux ennemis.”—From Mr. Borcel's Letter, Paris, 15th of January, 1654.—“ It is true, that taking the Sense of the Words from the first Article of the provisional Treaty, together with the 18th Article of this proposed Treaty, they confirm clearly your Opinion: But they say that by the Words, a free Ship shall make free Goods, are only meant Goods of Friends, but not of Enemies: And in the same Manner they misconstrue the Declaration of the 29th of May, 1651, which the King made to me, and which is now subsisting, and must subsist till we come to a nearer Treaty of Marine and Alliance: It says, Le roi fait défense, &c. de ne point prendre ni amener dans les ports de France des navires Hollandois chargés de marchandises, quand même ils appartiendront aux ennemis, pourvu qu'ils ne transportent pas des troupes, marchandises de contrabande, &c. What can be clearer than these Words? But the People here interpret them as they please, and make Use of their Power in judging and executing, and although I complain continually, it is without Fruit and Redress.”—By these Letters it appears clear enough, that the French first began to misconstrue the Sense of the Words of free Ships making free Goods.—From Ambassador William Nieupoort's Letter, London, the 12th of May 1756, to the Pensionary De Witt.—“ I am afraid that the Gentlemen here will not admit in the Treaty of Marine, the Rule of free Ships making free Goods, and vice versa; nor agree to the Formularies of Passports proposed: However, I shall use my best Endeavours towards it, and as soon as I can obtain any Thing from them upon Paper I shall send it over.” From a Letter of the Pensionary, 23d of February 1659, to William Nieupoort, at London.—“ And I can assure you, that if, by concluding a marine Treaty, their High Mightinesses, immediately after having received the Draughts sent of a marine Treaty, gave it to the Commissaries, who, upon taking it into Consideration, quickly discovered that the principal Point whereupon this Treaty should be built, which is to prevent unjust Searches when they meet at Sea, viz. that free Ships make free Goods, was left out; and it is impracticable for the Dutch to agree to it in the Manner it is proposed: Wherefore, &c.”—From a Letter of the Pensionary, 23d of February 1657, to William Nieupoort, at London.—“ And I can assure you, that if, by concluding a marine Treaty, their High Mightinesses can only obtain the End proposed in their last Resolutions, though in what they most desire, namely, that free Ships shall make free Goods, it should remain deficient, it might take away some of the Animosity, and prevent the Persons at the Helm from hearkening to any of the Advantages made by Spain, and other Potentates, to their High Mightinesses.”— —Which is enough to shew that the Great Pensionary De Witt, whilst Cromwell governed in England, could not gain upon him his favourite Maxim, “ That free Ships should make free Goods.” However, in King Charles the Second’s Reign, this Rule was followed by the Treaty of Marine concluded the 28th of June, 1667; and on this Occasion Sir William Temple, in a Letter of the 21st of May, 1667, to my Lord Ambassador Coventry, writes, “ Mr. Godolphin assured me, “ that all Parts of the Treaty of Commerce are so much to our Desire and Advantage, that he hoped to see many a rich Man in England by it.” It would seem that Mr. Godolphin’s Maxim was, that England should have nothing so much in View as a free Navigation for her Merchants: And, indeed, this is certainly of the greatest Consequence; but the Way to have made it effectual would have been to be always watchful, and keep a Naval Power superior to that of our Neighbours, and not to suffer, at the Time of treating, Part of our Naval Strength to be surprized and burnt at Chatbam, the 15th of June, by the then vigilant and powerful Dutch Fleet: By which Action, it seems, they forwarded the Conclusion of such a Treaty of Marine and Peace as they had long desired in vain.

But, as Merchants, it is not so much our Business to enquire whether it was good Policy to make such Treaties, as to know how long they were strictly kept. —J. Meerman, one of the Dutch Ambassadors in London, in a Letter to the Pensionary, dated February the 1st, 1668, says, “ that, having complained to the King that the Privateers of Ostend, with Commissions from Spain, disturbed their Navigation, his Majesty answered, that he had also heard of it, and considered it as Acts of Pirates; and he would give Orders, if any of his Subjects should be found on board those Privateers, to have them hanged.” Mr. Meerman further says, “ It would seem as if these Privateers were not at all acquainted with the fourteenth Article of the Treaty of Marque, concluded by their High Mightinesses with the King of Spain, which says, that free Ships shall make free Goods.”—In King William’s Reign, when England and Holland were allied in a War against France, they went some Steps farther; for their Declarations and Notifications made to all Courts inform us, “ they would not permit any neutral Nation to navigate and trade with France at all.”—It doth not appear that, in the last Wars, England went farther beyond the Bounds of Neutrality than formerly. History will afford Examples enough, that whatever Power gets the better at Sea or Land, in Time of War, commonly makes the most of it: The fair Trader always suffered by the sinister Dealings of the unfair ones; and so much as one Side studied to conceal Truths, the other studied to discover them.

By an Extract from Sir Leoline Jenkins’s Memoirs, see Masqued Property, neutral Merchants will perceive, that during the War, Anno 1676, some used to behave in the same Manner, and that the same Things were practised, and the same Constructions made in our Courts then, as in the last Wars: we do not find that in France or Spain they have been dealt with much better, although they might justly have expected more Favour; since those Crowns, having hardly had any Shipping of their own left wherewith to carry on Trade, ought, in good Policy, to have set the Example of letting all neutral Shipping pass unmolested, which would have been much to their Advantage, if they who remained Masters of the Sea would have given the same Freedom. But might not those who fought the Battles ask, What signifies our being Masters at Sea, if we shall not have Liberty to stop Ships from serving our Enemy? And, when we examine to the Bottom of the Thing, it appears very evident, that Sea-Battles are not fought so much to kill People, as to be Masters of Trade, whereby People live; and, by stopping the Supplies of our Enemies, to compel them in the End to live in Friendship with us.

Ships and Vessels belonging to the Subjects of either of the Parties may not only pass, traffick, and trade from a neutral Port or Place, to a Place in Enmity with the other Party, or from a Place in Enmity to a neutral Place; but also from a Port or Place in Enmity to a Port or Place in Enmity with the other Party, whether the said Places belong to one and the same Prince or State, or to several Princes or States, with whom the other Party is at War.—Treaty with Holl. 1764.

The like Freedom of Commerce and Navigation was agreed upon by the Treaty of 1676, with Spain; and of 1676, with France; and confirmed by the subsequent and other Articles of the Treaty of Utrecht.

It shall be lawful for all and singular the Subjects of the Queen of Great-Britain and of the Most Christian King, to sail with their Ships with all Manner of Liberty and Security, no Distinction being made who are the Proprietors of the Merchandizes laden thereon, from any Port to the Places of those who are now, or shall be hereafter at Enmity with the Queen of Great-Britain or the Most Christian King: It shall likewise be lawful for the Subjects and Inhabitants aforesaid, to sail with the Ships and Merchandizes afore-mentioned, and to trade with the same Liberty and Security from the Places, Ports, and Havens of those who are Enemies of both or of either Party, without any Opposition or Disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the Places of the Enemy afore-mentioned to neutral Places, but also from one Place belonging to an Enemy to another Place belonging to an Enemy, whether they be under the Jurisdiction of the same Prince or under several. And as it is now stipulated concerning Ships and Goods, that free Ships shall also give a freedom to Goods, and that every Thing shall be deemed to be free and exempt, which shall be found on board the Ships belonging to the Subjects of either of the Confederates, although the whole Lading, or any Part thereof, should appertain to the Enemies of either of their Majesties, contraband Goods being always excepted, on the Discovery whereof, Matters shall be managed according to the Sense of the subsequent Articles: It is also agreed, in like Manner, that the same Liberty be extended to Persons who are on board a free Ship, with this Condition, that although they be Enemies to both or to either Party, they are not to be taken out of that free Ship, unless they are Soldiers, and in actual Service of Enemies.—Treaty with France, 1713.

As it appears by Art. 23, in the Treaty of 1654, with Portugal, that Oliver Cromwell agreed with the Portuguese to the Rule of "free Ships making free Goods," which he afterwards would not allow to the Dutch, it would seem that he had not yet well considered how inconsistent it was for a Nation, whose Weight chiefly lay in its Superiority of maritime Strength, to allow this Rule to any one; or else he must have more in View, viz. That the English Nation should reap the chief Benefit of the Trade from their East and West-Indies, whilst they were contesting for the Possessions thereof with the Dutch. The Portuguese in their Situation at that Time must have found it difficult to supply themselves; and therefore might well allow, Art. 11, "that the People and Inhabitants of Great-Britain might navigate and trade freely and safely from Portugal to Brazil, paying the Duties and Customs which others pay who trade into those Countries:" and "that they should have the same Freedom as had been granted by any former Treaty, or should be granted hereafter, to the Inhabitants of any other Nation in Alliance and Friendship with that Crown."—But this Freedom ceased when they had no longer Contest about their Possessions; for, as their Friends and Allies monopolized the Trade of those Places where they had been admitted, and got footing in the East and West-Indies, the Portuguese excluded them, in Return, from trading to those Settlements which they still retained.

Remarks.—The Treaty of Utrecht, with France, 1713, was not confirmed by that of Aix-la-Chapelle, 1748; a Sort of tacit Acknowledgement of that Right the French had assumed, as it suited their Interest, of rejecting the Whole of the former Treaty, as some Articles, particularly the 9th could not, by the express Tenor of them, take Place without an Act of Parliament; which, however, was never passed. The afore-mentioned Treaty with Holland of 1667, was confirmed by the Treaty of 1674; which is now the maritime Regulation between the two Powers.—By the 8th Article of this Treaty it is agreed, "that all which shall be found on board the Vessels belonging to the Subjects of either of the contracting Parties, shall be accounted clear and

"free

“ free although the whole Lading, or any Part thereof; shall by just Title of “ Property belong to the Enemies of the other, contraband Goods only excepted.”
 —Here, as in the Treaty of Utrecht, the Dispute is entirely owing to the general Terms of the Stipulation; one Side taking them in their full Extent, while the other insists upon such Restrictions and Limitations to be put upon them, as right Reason, and the Nature of Things, necessarily require; and therefore, in 1758, when the French, finding themselves unable to carry on their own Trade in their own Bottoms, resolved to employ the Dutch, and not only exempted their Vessels from the Tax of 50 Sous per Ton, but opened to them all their Ports in America, the Mischief of suffering the Rule to pass in general Terms, became notoriously manifest; and Great-Britain resolved to make Use of those Means, which God had put into her Hands to remedy it. Accordingly, great Numbers of those Dutch Vessels were taken, and some of them adjudged to be lawful Prizes by our Court of Admiralty.—The States, being extremely vexed to see the Net which they had so cunningly woven, and spread over us by the Treaty, now prove at length, upon the first Trial, too weak to hold us, and forcibly broken, did not spare to make heavy Complaints of the Breach. Similar Proceedings lately gave Rise, upon Occasion of our late War with France, to a warm Contest between the two most natural Friends in Europe.—Sir Josiah
Torke presented, on the 21st of March 1780, a very strong Memorial to the States General, in which he “ enumerates the various Points, in which they “ have violated the Treaty, by granting Convoys to naval Stores going to “ France, &c. and the absolute Silence they have kept as to the formal De“ mands of stipulated Succours from the Republic:”—But their High Mighti-nesses still giving no Answer thereto, our Court published, on the 17th of April 1780, a Declaration, “ That the Subjects of the United Provinces are hence“ forward to be considered upon the same Footing with those of other neutral “ States not privileged by Treaty; and his Majesty doth suspend, provisionally, “ till further Order, all the particular Stipulations respecting the Freedom of “ Navigation and Commerce in Time of War, of the Subjects of the States
 “ General, &c. and more particularly those contained in the Treaty of 1674.”—
 On the 3d of April 1780, however, a Memorial was presented to the States by Prince Gallitzin, on the Part of the Empress of Russia, with a Copy of a very extraordinary Declaration, which she had made to the belligerent Powers; purporting, “ That she was determined to maintain a free Trade and Navigation “ of her Subjects, and not to suffer either to be hurt by those Powers; that “ her Definition of the Limits of a free Trade is founded upon the clearest “ Notions of natural Right, and that what she called contraband, is literally “ taken from the Treaty between Russia and Great-Britain, 1734—that she “ invites the States General to make a common Cause with her; and had “ made the same Invitation to the Courts of Copenhagen, Stockholm, and Lisbon, “ in Order that by their United Endeavours a natural System, founded on “ Justice, might be established and legalized in Favour of the Trade of neutral “ Nations, and serve as a Rule for future Ages.”

Of Insurances.

INSURANCE, or ASSURANCE, is a Contract or Agreement by which one or more Particulars, called Insurers, Affurers, or Underwriters, take on them the Risque of the Value of the Things insured, in Consideration of a Premium paid by the Assured; and by this Means commodiously divide the Hazard of every Adventure, to the great Benefit of Trade, and the Ease and Advantage of every one concerned therein. Indeed, the Utility of this Species of Contract in a commercial Country, is so obvious that it could not escape the Notice and Approbation of our best writers upon commercial Subjects; and their Recommendation has not only extended, but considerably improved the Practice.
 Insurances give fresh Vigour to the active Principles of universal Commerce, and great Security to the Fortunes of private People; for by dividing amongst many that

that Loss, which would ruin an Individual, it is made to fall light and easy on the whole Society. The Risk likewise, of Importation and Exportation being thereby diminished, men will more easily be induced to engage in extensive commercial Connections, to take a Share in important Concerns, and to unite in hazardous Enterprizes, since a Failure in the Object will not be attended with those dreadful Consequences to them and their Families, which must be the Case in Countries where Insurances are unknown.

C. 13.

Mr. Molloy, in his Jure Maritimo, and Mr. Malynes, in his Lex Mercatoria, say that Suetonius, in his Life of Claudius Cæsar*, conceives that Emperor to have been the first who brought in this Custom of Insurance, though Monsieur Savary, in his Dictionnaire de Commerce, imputes it to the Jews, in the Year 1182. James Allan Park, Esq. the last excellent Writer upon Insurances, remarks, that the Origin of Insurance, like that of many other Customs, which depend rather upon traditional than written Evidence, and for the Honour of inventing and introducing which rival Nations contend, has occasioned much Doubt among the Writers upon mercantile Law. In Fact, it is involved in so much Obscurity that, after all the Researches which he had made on Occasion of his compiling his admirable System of the Law of Marine Insurances, he could not promise any very satisfactory Solution of this Doubt; but whoever was the first Contriver, or original Inventor of this useful Branch of Business, it has for many Ages been practised in this Kingdom, and supposed to have been introduced here jointly, with its Twin Brother, Exchanges, by some Italians from Lombardy, who at the same Time came to settle at Antwerp, and among us; and this being prior to the building the Royal-Exchange, they used to meet in the Place where Lombard-Street now is, at a House they had, called the Pavement-House or Lombard, for transacting Business; and as they were then the sole Negotiators in Insurances, in all Policies of Insurance to this Day, a Clause is inserted, in the following Words:—"This Writing or Policy of Insurance, shall be of as much Force and Effect, as any Writing heretofore made in Lombard-Street." which is a strong Confirmation of the general Opinion, that we are indebted for the Introduction of this great commercial Benefit into England, to the ingenious and active People above-mentioned.

6 Cal. Rep.
47. b.

And as Insurances in Time grew more general in England, and some Difficulties arose touching the Recovery of Losses, upon Actions on Assumpsits; and so little were the Judges acquainted with the Nature of the Contracts, that so late as the 30th and 31st of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, it became a Question where an Action upon a Policy of Insurance should be tried; the Policy having been effected in London, and the Ship detained in the River Soane in France. The Policy was on a Ship from Melcombe Regis in the County of Dorset, to Abbeville in France. The Plaintiff declared, that the Ship in sailing towards Abbeville, viz. in the River Soane, was arrested by the King of France. The Parties came to issue upon the Question, whether the Ship was so arrested or not; and it was tried before Lord Chief Justice Wray, in the City of London; and a Verdict was found for the Plaintiff. In Arrest of Judgment it was moved, that this Issue arising merely from a Place out of the Realm, could not be tried in London. But it was resolved by the Court, that this Issue should be tried where the Action was in this Case brought; for the Promise, which is the Ground and Foundation of the Action, was made in London; and the Arrest now in Issue, is not the Ground of the Action, which is founded on the Assumpsit, and the Arrest is the Breach of the Assumpsit. "This," says Mr. Park, "is the most ancient Case I have been able to find upon the Subject of Insurances." Subsequent Perplexities having arisen in the Courts of Judicature, the Attention of the Legislature to this national Object was awakened, and it was found necessary to pass an Act of Parliament, in which the Principles of this Species of Contract are clearly defined, and made the Basis of that legal Protection and Encouragement of the Practice, which was become essential to the Extension and Prosperity of Commerce.

The Purpose of this Statute was, to erect a particular Court for the Trial of Causes relative to Policies of Insurance, in a summary Way; and to that End it ordained, that a Commission should issue yearly, directed to the Judge of the Admiralty, the Recorder of London, two Doctors of the Civil Law, two common Lawyers, and eight Merchants, empowering any five of them to hear and determine all such Causes, arising in London; and it also gave an Appeal from their Decision, by way of Bill, to the Court of Chancery.

And in Pursuance thereof, an Office was erected and kept on the West Side of the Royal-Exchange; but this Act did not exclude others from making Insurances, in whose Policies was inserted, that they should be of as much Force as those heretofore made in Lombard-street, at the Royal-Exchange, or any where else. But there being some Defect in the aforesaid Act, touching the Power of the Commissioners, which was limited to London, its Continuance was not of long Duration.

And by a new Act of Parliament the Court was revived, and larger Powers were given to the Commissioners for carrying it into Execution; so that, in Consequence of this last Act, Insurances multiplied, and all Disputes concerning them were determined by the Commissioners; but as private Persons were not excluded thereby from carrying on this Business as before, and the Commissioners taking no Cognizance of any Policies not made in their Office, whilst the Recovery of Losses thereon were made easy at Common Law; and some Partiality having been practised by the Commissioners, and an Appeal being allowed from their Determinations to the Court of Chancery, the Business of this Court fell off, and the granting Commissions was discontinued.

After this, no Law was made in England concerning Insurances, except one to prohibit insuring on Marriages, Births, Christenings, and Service; but all was transacted by private Office-Keepers, till an Act was passed in the Year 1720, by which his Majesty was enabled to grant two Charters, for erecting two Corporations for insuring Ships and Merchandize, and lending Money on Bottomry, which are now called the Royal-Exchange Assurance, and the London Assurance; which Corporations are to have perpetual Succession, subject to Redemption, or Power of Revocation, as is here under mentioned; the Corporation to have Liberty to chuse their Governors, Directors, Officers, and Servants, as should be prescribed in the Charters: The Governors and Directors to continue for three Years; to have a Seal, and be capable to purchase Land not exceeding 1000*l.* per Ann. and may sue and be sued in their Corporate Capacity.

Each Corporation to pay into the Exchequer 300,000*l.* towards discharging the Debts of the Civil Government.

Each to raise such Sums as his Majesty should direct, not exceeding 1,500,000*l.* for paying the 600,000*l.* and to enable them to pay Losses, and lend Money on Bottomry and Government Securities, which Money is to be raised at General Courts, by taking Subscriptions, or by Calls, or otherwise, as the General Courts shall think fit or expedient, and Stock liable to Calls may be sold for that Purpose; and Proprietors refusing Calls to pay 8 per Cent. Interest; may take up Money to advance on Parliamentary Securities; Stock transferable and devisable; a personal Estate not to be taxed; Governors, Directors, &c. may be Members of Parliament, but not to be Bankrupts on Account of such Stock; to have Power to make By-Laws, as by Charters; no other Corporation or Partnership to insure Ships, or lend Money on Bottomry, on Penalty of forfeiting the Money assured, and the Policy to be void; and in Case of Bottomry, the Security to be void, and the Contract to be usurious. None to be Governors, &c. or to have Stock in both Corporations. The Parliament, at any Time within thirty-one Years from the Date of the Charters, upon three Years' Notice in the London Gazette, fixed up on the Royal-Exchange, and Payment of 300,000*l.* to each Corporation, may then, and not till then, void the said Corporations. If, after thirty-one Years, the King shall adjudge the Continuance of the said Corporation to be hurtful, or inconvenient to the Publick, he may by Letters Patent void the same, without any Inquisition, or Scire facias, in which Cases the like Power shall never be grantable again.

The South-Sea and East-India Companies may advance Money on Bottomry to their Captains, &c.

The said two Corporations, having each paid into the Exchequer 111,250*l.* in Part of the 300,000*l.* and having covenanted to pay 38,750*l.* further Part thereof in three Months, the Residue of the Sums amounting together to 300,000*l.* shall be released.

And these are all the Acts relating to Insurances in England till the following, made for the better Regulation thereof, and to prohibit them on French Effects, viz.

11 Geo. I.
C. 30.

19 Geo. II.
P. 567.

The Preamble observes, that the making Assurances, Interest or no Interest, or without further Proof of Interest than the Policy, hath been productive of many pernicious Practices, whereby great Numbers of Ships, with their Cargoes, have either been fraudulently lost and destroyed, or taken by the Enemy in Time of War; and such Assurances have encouraged the Exportation of Wool, and the carrying on many other prohibited and clandestine Trades, which by Means of such Assurances have been concealed, and the Parties concerned secured from Loss, as well to the Diminution of the publick Revenue as to the great Detriment of fair Traders; and by introducing a mischievous Kind of Gaming, or

P. 568. Wagering, under the Pretence of assuring the Risque on Shipping and fair Trade, the Institution and laudable Design of making Assurances hath been perverted; and that which was intended for the Encouragement of Trade and Navigation, has, in many Instances, become hurtful and destructive of the same. For Remedy whereof, It is enacted, That, after the 1st Day of August, 1746, no Assurance shall be made by any Person or Persons, Bodies Corporate or Politick, on Vessels belonging to his Majesty or his Subjects, or on any Goods, Merchandizes, or Effects on board the same, Interest or no Interest, or without further Proof of Interest than the Policy, or by Way of Gaming or Wagering, or without Benefit of Salvage to the Assurer, and that every such Assurance shall be null and void to all Intents and Purposes.

Assurance on private Ships of War, fitted out by his Majesty's Subjects solely to cruize against his Enemies, may be made by or for the Owners, Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage to the Assurer.

Merchandizes or Effects from any Parts in Europe or America, in the Possession of the Crowns of Spain or Portugal, may be assured in such Way and Manner as if this Act had not been made.

After the said 1st of August, all Money to be lent on Bottomry, or at Respondentia, upon Ships belonging to his Majesty's Subjects, bound to or from the East-Indies, shall be lent only on the Ship, &c.

P. 569. In all Actions, &c. brought after the said 1st of August, by Assured, upon any Policy of Assurance, the Plaintiff, or Attorney, &c. within fifteen Days after he shall be required so to do in Writing by the Defendant, &c. shall declare in Writing the Sums he hath assured, &c. in the Whole, and what Sums he hath borrowed at Respondentia, or Bottomry, for the Voyage, or any Part of the Voyage, in Question.

P. 570. After the said 1st of August, any Person, &c. sued in an Action of Debt, or Covenant, &c. on Policy of Assurance, may bring the Money into Court; and if the Plaintiff shall refuse to receive the same, with Costs to be taxed in full Discharge of such Action, and shall afterwards proceed to Trial, and the Jury shall not assess him Damages exceeding the Sum so brought, the Plaintiff, on every such Action, shall pay to the Defendant Costs, to be taxed.

This Act shall not extend to, or be in Force against, Persons residing in any Part of Europe, out of his Majesty's Dominions, for whose Account Assurance shall be made before the 29th of September, 1746; nor against Persons residing in any Parts of Turkey, Asia, Africa, or America, for whom Assurances shall be made before the 29th of March, 1747.

21 Geo. II.
and 78.

Insurance on Ships or Goods appertaining to the Crown and Subjects of France, or lending them Money on Bottomry, is prohibited by this Act; though, as it was only temporary, and its Duration limited to that of the then War, it expired, and became void.

This Branch of Business at first was confined to Maritime Affairs solely, though at present it is extended to the insuring not only Shipping and Merchandizes, but also Houses, Furniture, Lives, Liberties, &c. according to the different Agreements Agreements for that Purpose. These Contracts are called Policies, from the Spanish Word Poliza, and that originally from the Latin Pollicitatio, or Promise, and are now made either at the publick or private Offices. Of the former, we have only the two before-mentioned in England established by Charters; though of the private ones, we have many in this City, and of late Years in some others, as Bristol, Exeter, Liverpool, Hull, Newcastle, and Glasgow, where great Business is transacted, and I believe on as fair a Footing as in any Part of the World; though Policies having been filled up in such various Terms, and such unprecedented Expressions inserted, according to the different Conceptions, Fancies, or Exigencies of the Insured, it has naturally occasioned many Disputes, and consequently brought on many remarkable Trials, and wise Decisions of the utmost Importance to the Mercantile World; for which Reason all the modern Cases are added in this Edition to the more remote, and classed under several distinct Heads, that they may be more readily referred to, when similar Cases shall induce Merchants and Lawyers to search for Precedents, to determine their own Line of Conduct, &c. I shall also take Occasion to mention the Method and Obligation of Insurances made in France and Holland, in order to give full Satisfaction on this Head, and render my Book as complete as possible.

ASSURANCES, as I have before observed, are of various Kinds, both in regard of the Marine and Terrene Property; of the first, some being on Ships, or Parts of Ships only; others on Merchandize singly; and others on Ships and Goods jointly; and these are again branched out to run either by the Month, or for a Time stipulated, or to one single Port, or out and home, with Liberty to touch at the different Places mentioned in the Policy, or for a Trading Voyage.

Although Policies of Assurance are not to be ranked with specialty Contracts, Stow. 34. not being under Seal, yet they have always been held as sacred Agreements, and of the first Credit; so much so, that, when once they are underwritten, they can never be altered by any Authority whatever, because it would open a Door to an infinite Variety of Frauds, and introduce Uncertainty into a Species of Contract, of which Certainty and Precision are the most essential Requisites.

In a Case before Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, this Doctrine was admitted in its full Extent. The Plaintiff had insured a Ship at and from London to Ostend, from thence to Rotterdam, and from thence to the Canaries, warranted an Ostend Ship, which Ship was afterwards taken. The Bill was brought to have the Policy rectified, for that the Intention of the Parties was mistaken therein; which was, that the Warranty was too general; and that the Voyage should have been stated to take place from Ostend only, and not from London. His Lordship, as there was no Evidence to vary the Contract from the written Words, ordered the Bill to be dismissed. Hinckle v. the Royal-Exchange Assurance Comp. 1 Ves. 317.

But there are some Exceptions to the foregoing general Rule. For Instance, after signing, Policies are frequently altered by Consent of the Parties; and such Policies are good, agreeably to the Maxim Consensus tollit Error in.

Enumeration of Causes which make Policies null and void.

THOSE made on Houses, Lives, or Liberties, must be paid according to the Tenour of the Agreement, in the full Sum assured, as these Sort of Policies admit of no Average; and for the first, often with their Furniture, against Fire, several Offices are erected in London, with the Limitation to this Branch only.

Assurances may likewise be made on Goods sent by Land, or by Hoys, &c. on Rivers; and this is often done, more especially on Jewels, &c.

They may likewise be made on Ships and Goods, lost or not lost, which is commonly done when a Ship hath been long missing; and these Words being inserted in the Policy, oblige the Underwriters to pay, although the Ship was lost at the Time of making such Insurance, except the Assured saw the Ship wrecked, or had had then certain Knowledge of her being so; in which Case the Subscription shall not oblige, as this is accounted a mere Fraud.

So likewise, if the Assured shall, on a rotten Vessel, get insured more than she is worth, with the villainous Design to destroy her, and shall afterwards give Directions to have his roguish Intentions put in Execution, this fraudulent Act will not oblige the Insurers, but expose the Perpetrators of it to condign Punishment for their Knavery.

28 Geo. III.
Ch. 56.

It shall not be lawful, from and after the passing of this Act, for any Person or Persons to make or effect, or cause to be made or effected, any Policy of Assurance on any Ship or Vessel, or upon any Goods, Merchandizes, or Effects, or Property whatever, without first inserting, or causing to be inserted, in such Policy, the Name or Names, or the usual Stile and Firm of Dealing, of one or more of the Persons interested in such Assurance; or without, instead thereof, first inserting the Name or Names, or the usual Stile and Firm of Dealing, of the Confignor or Confignors, Consignee or Consignees, of the Goods or Property so to be insured; or the Name or Names, or the usual Stile and Firm of Dealing, of the Person or Persons residing in Great-Britain, who shall receive the Order for and effect such Policy, or of the Person or Persons who shall give the Order or Directions, the Agent or Agents immediately employed to negotiate or effect such Policy. The Statute further declares, That every Policy made or underwrote, contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of this Act, shall be null and void to all Intents and Purposes.

Molloy,
P. 292. S. 9.

If a Ship be insured from the Port of London to Cadiz, and before she breaks Ground is burnt, Insurers not liable; but if the Words are, at or from the Port of London, they are liable in such Case.

Ditto, P. 295.
S. 14.

An Insurance from London to void for Uncertainty, though private Instructions for the Port; yet the Blank in the Policy will not bind the Insurer, Policies being now generally made free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage, many Disputes on these Heads are avoided.

Ditto, P. 296.
S. 15.

An Insurance made on prohibited Goods not binding, unless they were prohibited after the Insurance made; as on Wool, Leather, &c. for such Insurances would tend to destroy Commerce, which is directly to thwart the true Intention of all Policies.

28 Geo. III.
C. 38.

Persons who, by Way of Insurance or otherwise, shall undertake or agree that any Sheep, Wool, or any other of the enumerated Articles in the Statute, shall be carried or conveyed to any Parts beyond the Seas, from any Port or Place whatsoever within this Kingdom, or, in Pursuance of such Undertaking or Agreement, shall deliver, or cause or procure to be delivered, any Sheep, Wool, &c. in Parts beyond the Seas, such Person or Persons, their Aiders and Abettors, shall, upon Conviction, be liable to the same Punishments as the Exporters. The like Penalty follows, upon the Person or Persons paying any Premium for such Insurances, Sect. 48.

All Policies of Insurance which shall be made on Goods and Merchandize, laden or to be laden on any Ship or Vessel bound from Great-Britain to foreign Parts, which shall afterwards appear to be Wool, Woollen or Worsted Yarn, &c. shall be deemed and taken to be null and void, notwithstanding any Words or Agreement whatsoever which shall be inserted in such Policy of Insurance; and nothing shall be recovered by the Assured from the Insurer for Loss or Damage, or for the Premium which shall have been given for such Insurance. This Clause liberates the Underwriters in Cases, which frequently happen, of insuring Merchandize on board, without specifying to them the Species of Commodity insured.

Under the Head of prohibited Goods must be comprehended all Commodities prohibited to be exported or imported by positive Statutes, or by the King's Proclamation, in Time of War; or which from the Nature of the Commodity, and by the Law of Nations, must necessarily be contraband; and the Policies insuring any such are absolutely null and void.

Legendra,
Carib. 216;
3 Lev. 320;
1 Show. 323;
2 Salk. 443.

Where the Words of the Policy are, the Ship warranted to depart with Convoy, it shall be intended she shall keep with Convoy during the Voyage, if possible; and if she depart wilfully from the Convoy, it is a Fraud; but if having departed with Convoy, by Strefs of Weather she loses the Convoy, and is taken, Insurers are liable.

If

If there be Thieves on Shipboard among themselves, the Master of the Ship is Lex Mercator to answer for that, and not the Insurer; though the Words of the Policy insure against Losses by Thieves, yet they are to be construed to mean affailing Thieves.

Suppressio veri aut Allegatio falsi is sufficient to discharge the Policy: It is a general Rule, that the Insured shall inform the Insurer of all material Circumstances which have come to his Knowledge or Information, at the Time of making the Policy, in order that the Contract may be fairly adjusted; which being a Contract upon Chance, cannot be valid, if one Party knows more than the other: Equality in Contracts, by the Law-Merchant, is essential. Therefore, all Misrepresentation whatever, though it happened by Mistake, if in a material Point, will affect the Policy, and render it null as much as actual Fraud. A Decision was given, which confirms this Proposition, in the following Case.

This was an Action on a Policy of Insurance on the Ship Mary and Hannah, from New-York to Philadelphia. At the Time when the Insurance was made, which was in London on the 30th of January, the Broker represented the Situation of the Ship to the Underwriter, Frazer, as follows: "The Mary and Hannah, a tight Vessel, sailed with several armed Ships, and was seen safe in the Delaware on the 11th of December, by a Ship which arrived at New-York." In Fact, the Ship was lost on the 9th of December, by running against a Cheveau de Frise placed across the River. The Cause came on to be tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall. The Defence was founded on the Misrepresentation as to the Time when the Ship was seen; and the Representation and the Day of the Loss being proved, the Jury found for the Defendant. A Rule was obtained to shew Cause why a new Trial should not be had; and, after Arguments at the Bar, Lord Mansfield said, "There was no Evidence of actual Fraud in the present Case, and no Question of that Sort seemed to be made. But there was a positive Averment that the Ship was seen in the Delaware on the 11th of December. The Underwriter was deceived as to that Fact, and entered into the Contract under that Deception. In Insurances upon Ships at a great Distance, their being safe up to a certain Day is always considered as a very important Circumstance. I am of Opinion, that the Representation concerning the Day was very material." The other Judges delivering the same Opinion nearly in the same Words, except adding, "That the Safety of the Ship is the most material Fact of any, in Cases of Insurance," the Court discharged the Rule for a new Trial, and the Verdict of the Jury which had voided the Policy was confirmed. And it was further ratified by the House of Lords, on the 8th of April, 1785, in the Case of Stewart and others, against Dunlop and others; briefly this: The Clerk of the Plaintiff made Insurance, by his Master's Orders, on a Ship which the Clerk knew to be taken by the Enemy, from a Conversation he had with the Master of a Ship arrived at Greenock; and though it appeared in Evidence, that the Plaintiff knew nothing of the Conversation, nor consequently of the Loss of the Peggy, at the Time he insured her, yet the Lords of Session in Scotland decreed, That the Insurance made by the Plaintiff would not have been made, if the Brigantine Hunrietta had not arrived in the Road of Greenock the Day preceding, and brought Intelligence that the Ship Peggy was taken; and, therefore, that the Policy was void. On the Appeal from this Decree, the House of Lords affirmed the Decree. And this is the strongest Case, with respect to Misrepresentation without Fraud, that could well happen; for here the Master suffered for the Concealment of a material Circumstance by his Clerk, who was considered as his Agent; and who, unknown to him, had been enjoined Secrecy by the Person who informed him the Peggy was captured. Let this, then, be considered as a general Admonition, inserted here expressly to point out the great Care and Attention that ought to be given by Owners and Masters of Ships, when insuring them, to give a true and exact Representation of every material Circumstance respecting them, and to instruct their Agents or Clerks to do the same.

A Person having received a Letter that his Ship sailed from Carolina, in Company with another Ship, and that the other Ship lost Sight of this Ship in the Night; that the Captain informed the Person who wrote the Letter, that she was leaky in such a Latitude; and that, after they lost Sight of the Ship, there had been a hard Gale for twenty-four Hours: After this Letter received by the Merchant's Agent, he made Insurance without producing it. The Ship was afterwards taken near the Land's End by a Spanijh Privateer, and carried back into St. Sebastian's. This, though the Ship was not lost by the Leak or the Storm, was adjudged sufficient to avoid the Policy; because if the Insurer had known what the Insured did, at the Time of making the Insurance, he would not have done it, or at least not on the same Terms.

The foregoing Cases may properly be considered as doubtful with Respect to intentional Fraud, and may pass under the Denomination of Deceptious; but while the Sums that are recoverable on Policies of Insurance are of such Amount, as to tempt Sharppers and Rogues by Profession, to cheat honest and respectable Merchants, it becomes our Duty to lay before them some Cases of absolute Fraud of late Date; that Underwriters may be put upon their Guard, and carefully examine every Document and Evidence upon the Subject of Losses, before they pay the Sums they have respectively underwritten; and they should keep up a good Understanding and Harmony with each other.

Woolmar v. Muilman, 1 Blackstone's Rep. 427.

This was an Action brought for the Recovery of a total Loss, on a Policy of Insurance made on Goods and Merchandize on board the Bona Fortuna, at and from North Bergen to any Ports or Places whatsoever, until her safe Arrival in London. It was underwritten thus:—"Warranted neutral Ship and Property." The Cause was tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall, when it was admitted that the Plaintiff had Goods on Board to the Amount of the Sum insured; and it appeared that the Ship on her Voyage was by the Force of Winds and stormy Weather, wrecked, cast away, and sunk in the Seas, whereby the said Goods and Merchandize were totally lost. But it was likewise proved, that the Ship or Vessel the Bona Fortuna, and the Property on Board, at and before the Time she was lost, were not neutral Property, as warranted by the said Policy. Lord Mansfield and the Rest of the Court, were of Opinion, that it was too clear a Case to bear an Argument. This was no Contract; for there was a Falseness in the Warranty, in Respect to the Condition of the Things insured; the Plaintiff insured neutral Property, and this was not neutral Property.

Fernandes v. Da Costa, Sittings after Hil. 4 Geo. III.

A short time after the Decision of Woolmar against Muilman, another Cause similar to it, was tried before the same learned Judge. The Insurance had been made on Goods on board a Ship warranted Portuguese; and it was made during the French War, when the Premium would have been much higher on an English Ship. The Plaintiff gave partial Evidence of her being Portuguese; and that she was obliged, on Account of Perils of the Sea, to put into a French Port, by which the Cargo was spoiled. This was admitted by the Defendant, but he contended that during her Stay at the French Port, she was libelled, and condemned as not being Portuguese, and that although the Goods were lost by a different Peril, yet, in Fact, the Ship was not Portuguese, though insured as such, and that this vitiated the Policy ab initio. Verdict for the Defendant, the Underwriter.

Ketchie, and another, v. Shoolbred, Sittings after Trin. 1780.

This was an Action to recover on a Policy of Assurance on Goods on board the Matty and Betty, at and from the Coast of Africa to her last discharging Port in the British West-Indies. The Objection made to paying the Loss was, that there had been a material Concealment, or Misrepresentation of the true State or Situation of the Ship and Voyage at the Time of underwriting the Policy. The Ship had been sent out to trade on the Coast of Africa, with Directions to proceed from thence to the British West-Indies, and to stop at Barbadoes, if she could get a Sale; if not, to proceed to Montego-Bay. On the 2d of October she sailed from St. Thomas's on the Coast of Africa, with a Cargo of Slaves, and was taken on the 6th of December following by an American Privateer. A Letter was received by a House at Liverpool on the 21st of February following, mentioning that the Ship was well, and had sailed from St. Thomas's on the 2d of October. This Information was communicated next Day to the Plaintiffs, who wrote the same Evening to two different Brokers, to get a new Insurance on the Ship, (there having been one before) and another on the Cargo, which last was the Subject of the present Action. In the Instructions to the Brokers, the Plaintiffs say nothing of the Ship from the Time of her first Sailing;

Sailing; but to one of the Brokers, they wrote thus: "We should be glad, if you would get us 600*l.* more on the Ship, as she is rather long; and we think it not prudent to run so large a Risk at so critical a Time. We expect to hear soon of her." It had afterwards occurred, that the Policy might be effected, if Intimation was not given of the Letter which had been received. The Broker, therefore, by Direction of the Plaintiffs, added to the Instructions; "the above Ship was on the Coast the 2d of October," but said nothing of her having failed from St. Thomas's. The Policy was dated the 21st of March.

Lord Mansfield said, the Insured is bound to represent to the Underwriter all the material Circumstances of the Ship and Voyage. If he do not, though by Accident only, or Neglect, the Underwriters are not liable—à fortiori, that is, with much stronger Reason, if he suppress or misrepresent from Fraud. The Question is, Whether this be one of those Cases which is affected by Misrepresentation or Concealment. If the Plaintiffs concealed any material Part of the Information they received, it is a Fraud, and the Insurers are not liable. The Jury found for the Defendant, agreeably to his Lordship's Direction.

The Policy, in this Case, was on the Brig Richard, at and from Plymouth to Fillis v. Bristol. Several Letters passed between the Plaintiff and the Broker, who effected the Policy, as to the Premium at which the Insurance could be obtained: At Bristol 1 last, it was underwritten at four Guineas per Cent. The Broker's Instructions stated, the Ship ready to sail on the 24th of December. The Broker represented to the Underwriter, that the Ship was in Port, when, in Fact, she had failed the 23d of December. Sittings after Hil. 1782.

Lord Mansfield said, this was a material Concealment and Misrepresentation; the Jury, however, hesitated: His Lordship then laid down the following as general Principles.—In all Insurances it is essential to the Contract, that the Assured should represent the true State of the Ship, to the best of his Knowledge; on that Information, the Underwriters engage. If he states that as a Fact, which he does not know to be true, but only believes it, it is the same as a Warranty. He is bound to tell the Underwriters the Truth. In the present Instance, the only material Point is this: Had the Ship failed, or was she in Port? Upon this, the Jury found for the Underwriter.

But, before we take Leave of this important Subject, it is essential to notice, that there are Exceptions to the general Rule against Concealment, which the Insured should be apprized of. Aliud est celare, aliud tacere: There are many Matters, as to which the Insured may be innocently silent. First, as to what the Insurer knows, however he came by that Knowledge. Secondly, as to what he ought to know. Thirdly, as to what lessens the Risk. An Underwriter, for Instance, is bound to know political Perils, as to the State of War and Peace. If he insures a Privateer, he needs not be told her Destination. And as Men reason differently from the same Facts, he needs not be told another's Conclusions from known Facts. See Park's System of the Law of Marine Insurance, p. 183, where these Exceptions are stated from Blackstone's Reports.

DEVIATION is understood to mean a voluntary Departure, without Necessity, or any reasonable Cause, from the regular and usual Course of the specific Voyage insured.

This Cause was tried before Mr. Justice Yates. The Plaintiff insured Goods For v. Black 2 in a Vessel bound from Dartmouth to Liverpool: The Ship failed from Dartmouth, Exeter Aliens, and put into Loo; a Place she must of Necessity pass by, in the Course of the insured Voyage. But as she had no Liberty given her by the Policy to go into Loo, although no Accident befel her in going into or coming out of Loo, for she was lost after she got out to Sea again, yet the Judge held this to be a Deviation without Necessity; and a Verdict was accordingly found for the Underwriter.

The Action was brought to recover upon a Policy on Goods, and other Merchandize, laden on board the Ship called the Charming Nancy, from Dunkirk v. Townson v. Leghorn. The Ship came to Dover, to procure a Mediterranean Pass, and was afterwards lost. Lord Mansfield was of Opinion, that the calling at Dover was a Deviation, voiding the Policy; and the Plaintiff was nonsuited. This appears to be a hard Case, as the Deviation was for the Benefit of the Insurer, in in protecting his Property from Pirates by the Mediterranean Pass. It must have turned upon express Words in the Policy.

Park, p. 295, 298. If the Master of a Vessel put into a Port not usual, or stay an unusual Time, it is a Deviation; and if the Deviation be but for a single Night, or an Hour, it is fatal.

Cock v. Townson. The Ship George was bound from Cork to Jamaica, with a Convoy, in the Course of a War: The Captain, in Concert with two other Vessels, took Advantage of the Night, and, being Ships of Force, cruised, and thereby deviated out of the direct Course of their Voyage, in Hopes of meeting with a Prize.

Lord Camden, then Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, before whom the Cause was tried, clearly held, and a Special Jury of Merchants, agreeably to his Directions, determined, That from the Moment the George deserted, or deviated from the direct Voyage to Jamaica, the Policy was discharged.

In a modern Case, however, it seemed to be the general Opinion of Lord Mansfield and a Special Jury, That if a Merchant-Ship carry Letters of Marque she may chase an Enemy, though she may not cruise, without being guilty of a Deviation.

Jelly v. Walker, Esq. 1781. On an Insurance of the Mary, at and from London to Cork and the West-Indies, the Question was, Whether a Ship, having Letters of Marque, could chase an Enemy's Ship without being said to have deviated. The Facts were, that in the Night the Mary had descried a Spanish Sail; and, after chasing, lost Sight of her for six Hours, till the Morning, when they engaged. The Mary did not make a Prize of the Spanish Ship; but proceeded on her Voyage, and was afterwards captured. It was agreed on all Hands, that a Ship in such Circumstances might not cruise; but several Witnesses spoke to the Usage and Practice of Ships, which carried Letters of Marque, chasing an Enemy. It was admitted, on the Part of the Insurers, that, if an Enemy came in the Way, the Ship must defend or engage; but contended, that, if the Letter of Marque lost Sight of the Enemy, it was no longer chasing but cruising. Lord Mansfield left it, upon the Evidence, to the Jury, who found for the Plaintiff, thereby deciding the Question in the Affirmative.

2 Saik. 444. Green v. Young; Lord Raymond, 840. Deviation discharges a Policy from that Time only; therefore Damage happening before a Deviation, may be recovered, notwithstanding there be afterwards a Deviation.

In Case of Deviation, the Insurers are not bound to return the Premium, because they have begun to run a Risk.

But though the Consequences of a voluntary Deviation are thus fatal to the Validity of the Contract of Insurance, yet, whenever the Deviation arises from Necessity and a just Cause, the Underwriters remain liable. The Necessities and Causes, most generally known and admitted, we shall briefly state; and only observe, that their Validity has been determined in a Variety of Cases, in our Courts of Judicature.

The first Ground of Necessity that justifies a Deviation is going into Port to repair.

The next Excuse for quitting the direct Course is, Strefs of Weather. Upon this Subject one leading Principle runs through all the Cases—that whatever happens by the Act of God, shall not be imputed to Man. Besides, it should seem that great Latitude ought to be given, in the Construction of the Law, to Deviations which have for their Object the Preservation of Ship and Cargo for the Benefit of the Underwriters, who, if there had been no Deviation on Account of Strefs of Weather, might have suffered by a partial or total Loss.

A Deviation may also be justified to avoid an Enemy, or seek for Convoy; because, upon the Principle just advanced, it ought not to be deemed a guilty Deviation to go out of the Course of the Voyage to avoid Danger, or to obtain a Protection against it. Many other Circumstances may occur, which will have precisely the same Consequences: For, wherever the Master of a Ship does that which is for the general Benefit of all Parties, the Act is as much within the Intention and Spirit of the Policy, and consequently as much protected by it, as if expressed in Words.

If any of the Circumstances above stated do really and bona fide happen, so as <sup>Part.</sup> to render a Deviation absolutely necessary, the Ship must pursue such Voyage of Necessity in the direct Course, and in the shortest Time possible, otherwise the Underwriters will be discharged; because a Voyage super-added by Necessity, ought to be subject to the same Qualifications, and entitled only to the same Sort of Latitude, as the original Voyage, it having become by Operation of Law a Part, as it were, of that original Voyage.

A Ship in her Voyage was seized by the Government, and turned into a Fire-Ship; the Question was, whether the Insurers were liable. Holt thought it was within the Word Detention; but the Cause was referred.

And formerly, if one had no Interest, though the Policy ran, Interest or no Interest, the Insurance was void; and the Reason was, because Insurances were made for the Benefit of Trade, and not that Persons unconcerned therein, or uninterested in the Ship, should profit by it; and in this Case, if the Ship survived the Time limited in the Bottomry Bond, and was lost within the Time limited in the Policy, if Insurance good, the Defendant might be intitled to Money on the Bond, and Policy also; but since this, Insurances have been constantly adjudged good, on Interest or no Interest, all the afore-mentioned Act of 19 *Geo. Richard Hill & al. v. Adam Spenser, tried at Guildhall, by a special Jury, at the Sitting after Hill, Term, 1745.

The Snow Tryal, William Jefferys, Master, was taken up by the Government of Carolina, as a Flag of Truce, to go to the Havanna, with Pretence to bring from thence some Palatines, lately taken and carried in there on board an English Ship, the Lydia, Captain Abercrombie; and by this Occasion several Carolina Merchants laded Goods aboard her, to a very considerable Value, and directed their Friend, Mr. James Crockatt of London, to get 10,000*l.* insured on them; and at the same time, to inform the Underwriters of every Circumstance of the Voyage; that the Cargo consisted of eighty or ninety Negroes, and the rest Manufactures of Great-Britain and Germany, all which was to be regularly cleared out for Providence, where the Vessel was to have Liberty to call, in her Way down, for a Pilot: The Assured also mentioned the Probability, that one Master of the Spanish Language might be cloathed with the Character of Captain of the Flag, by the aforesaid Government, and Jefferys only appear as Pilot, though this latter was to sign all Bills of Lading; and the same Insurance was ordered from the Havanna to Carolina, as was made to the Havanna. Mr. Crockatt got the 10,000*l.* insured at four private Offices, at and from South Carolina to the Havanna, and at and from thence back to South Carolina, with Liberty to touch at Providence, outward and homeward bound, upon any Kind of Goods, laden or to be laden aboard the Ship called the Tryal, a Flag of Truce Ship, William Jefferys, Master, beginning the Adventure from, and immediately following the Lading thereof aboard the said Ship at South Carolina, and so to continue until the said Ship, with the Goods whatsoever, shall be arrived at the Havanna, and so shall further continue till arrived back at South Carolina, and the same there safely landed; and it shall be lawful for the said Ship, in this Voyage, to stop and stay at any Ports or Places whatsoever, more especially at Providence.

At the Foot of some of the Policies are these Words, viz. Warranted a Flag of Truce for the Voyage; and in the others, after describing the Voyage, the Ship being a Flag of Truce for the Voyage.

The Tryal sailed from South Carolina to the Island of Providence, after the Captain had received his Credentials from the Governor as Commander of a Flag of Truce Ship, where she arrived, and disposed of Part of her Cargo, and then sailed directly towards the Havanna; and being arrived near the Entrance of the Harbour, was seized by a Spanish Ship of War, and carried into the said Place, where her Lading was condemned and sold, and the Ship, Officers, and Sailors, detained near five Months; at the Expiration of which time, the Governor of the Havanna permitted them to return, with some English that had been made Prisoners, but without the Palatines they went to reclaim; and the Governor gave the Captain a Protection, to screen him in his Return from being molested by Men of War or Privateers.

Mr. Crockatt, on receiving Advice of the above-mentioned Loss, demanded it of the Insurers; who, thinking they had Reason to deny the Payment, suffered themselves to be sued for it; and Mr. Crockatt, to support his Demand, offered to produce the Invoice, Bill of Lading, Credential Letters, and an Affidavit under the Seal of the Province of Carolina, attesting, that the Goods contained in the Invoice were shipped, and Witnesses who were ready to prove, visà Voce, the Capture and Sale of the Goods at the Havanna, the Detention of the Mariners, and that the Ship returned as a Flag of Truce, with forty nine English Prisoners, to Carolina.

Invoice

On the other Hand, the Underwriters, to invalidate the Insurance, pretended that this was an illicit Trade; that the Ship was not a Flag of Truce, or, if she was so, that the Assured, by warranting her to be so, did, in Effect, engage that the Goods should be exempt from Seizure; that, to entitle the Plaintiffs to a Recovery, it was incumbent on them to shew the Condemnation, and the Reasons of the Confiscations at the Havanna, and many other Arguments were used to set aside the Policy; but the Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiffs.

The Mary, Captain Wilson, was hired at London to carry Goods to Dublin, Hussy v. He. sit, tried at Guildhall, after Michaelmas Term, 1747. and an Insurance was made on Ship and Freight; but in her Passage she ran ashore on the Sands called Artelew Grounds, and was there deserted by the Captain and Sailors, who went ashore to save their Lives, supposing the Ship irretrievably lost; but some Fishermen, hearing of the Wreck the Night before, went out after her, and early in the Morning spied a Sail off Meyenbead, near Artelew in the County of Wicklow, and about thirty Miles from Dublin, lying afloat in about ten or eleven Fathom of Water, and about a Mile and a half from Shore, which proved to be the aforesaid Ship Mary; and on coming up with her, in the last Quarter-Ebb, they found the Ship lying-to, with her Gib-Sail hauled to windward, and her Mizzen-Sail set, and, on boarding her, found her entirely deserted, without one Person therein.

After the Fishermen had got in, they founded the Pumps, and found so little Water in her, that two Hands cleared her in an Hour's Time, after which she leaked but very little; and some few Hours after, the Fishermen meeting with a Pilot, agreed with him for Half a Guinea to carry her into Polebegg, which is a Place where Ships bound for Dublin, that draw much Water, are unladed and discharged, where she was delivered to Captain Wilson, who took her in Charge, and was afterwards moored, and all her Cargo delivered safe and undamaged, and the Freight accordingly paid for the same.

The Ship was, after her Discharge, removed from Polebegg to the Bank Side, and there laid on the Ground, to search if she had received any Damage; and it was found that nine or ten Feet of her Sheathing was rubbed off, and about the same Quantity of her false Keel broke, and the Ship strained very much, so that they were forced to carry her back to Polebegg, and there moor again.

The Plaintiff demanded the whole Insurance, which was 700*l.* on a supposed Proof of the Ship's being rendered unfit for any future Service, by her being run ashore as afore-mentioned; and the Defendant tried to invalidate his Claim, by first endeavouring to prove, that she could not be of near the Value insured, as she was an old New-England built Ship, and sold a little before, to be broke up, for 150*l.* but the Purchaser resold her to another, who sold the Moiety thereof to the Plaintiff, as he asserts, for 400*l.* the Truth of which Sale the Defendant suspects, as well upon Account of the Lowness of the first Purchase, as an Erafure upon which the Concern was wrote; and he likewise offers some Reasons to suppose that the Ship was wilfully run ashore, and not undesignedly, as the Captain asserts; and to support these Allegations, he refers to the Manner in which she was found, with little or no Damage, as aforesaid, more than what was occasioned by her lying aground; that the Captain had a very bad Character, and it was suspected he made large Insurances, which induced him wilfully to lose the Ship; more especially as the Mate had declared, that if the Captain would have left him two Boys he would not have quitted the Ship, and several other Things to the said Purpose; but these not appearing so plain to the Jury, they found a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Westerwyk's Arms, Captain Richard Horner, a Swedish Ship and Com- Bahn v. Snow, Mich. Term, 1748.
mander, was chartered at Hamburg, by Mr. Jacob Bosanquet, a Merchant there, to to sail for London, and there to take in such Goods as he or his Correspondents should put on board her, and carry them to such Parts of Italy as he should be directed.

A large Quantity of Goods were laden aboard her, to the Value of 30 or 40,000*l.* and among the Shippers the Plaintiff was one, who took this Opportunity of sending his Friends Woollens to the Import of 1367*l.* 12*s.* 7*d.* consigned to one Mr. Anthony Damiani, a Merchant at Legborn, for the Use of several Persons in Italy, by whose Orders they were shipped; though with the Circumstance, that the Property was not to be vested in them, neither were they to pay for them, till the Goods were arrived and delivered according to the Bill of Lading, and consequently remained the Plaintiff's Property, till the afore-mentioned Particulars were complied with, which induced him to get 1000*l.* insured on them; and it was mentioned in the Policy, that the Goods were warranted to be inserted in the Bills of Lading, for neutral Account. This was a Custom during a War, in order to screen Goods from the Enemy's Seizure; and the Captains of neutral Ships would not sign Bills of Lading without this Insertion, which was Mr. Boehm's Motive for filling up his accordingly; and the same occurred with the other Gentlemen on shipping their Goods, as the said Warranty and Declaration were inserted in all the Policies and Bills of Lading.

This Ship in her Voyage was taken by a Spanish Privateer, and carried into Ceuta, a Spanish Port on the Coast of Barbary, where the Goods were condemned as lawful Prize, as appears by a Copy and Translation of the Sentence of Condemnation, though the Ship was set at Liberty; and the Captain, after fruitlessly soliciting the Release of his Cargo at Ceuta, went to Cadix to reclaim it, where, notwithstanding he was joined in Solicitations by the Swedish Consul, and both asserted the Honour of the Flag, and the neutral Property of the Merchandize, they could prevail nothing towards altering of the Sentence, which stood confirmed; though, whilst this was transacting, Mr. Boehm demanded his Insurance of the Underwriters, who, being convinced of the Justice thereof, came to the Agreement of paying him 50*l.* per Cent. and accordingly endorsed the Policy in the following Manner, viz.

WE, whose Names are hereunto subscribed, do agree to pay unto the Assured 50*l.* per Cent. on our several Subscriptions on this Policy, in a Month from the Date hereof; but in Case the Goods are restored in Safety, and are discharged according to the Tenour of the Policy, the said 50*l.* per Cent. are to be repaid to us by the Assured, we engaging to make good any Average or Damages that may ensue by the Detention of the said Goods.

Signed by all the Underwriters.

And afterwards there was likewise indorsed the following Words, viz. "Whereas the within-mentioned Ship, the Westerwyk's Arms, Captain Horner, from London to Legborn, was taken by the Spaniards in July, 1746, and forcibly carried into Ceuta, where she has been detained with her Cargo ever since; and, notwithstanding all the Application and Endeavours that have been made Use of by the Assured and his Agents for their Release, they have hitherto proved fruitless, and without Success; therefore We, the Underwriters on this Policy, do agree to pay Mr. Thomas Boehm, the Assured, the remaining 48 per Cent. in one Month from the Date hereof, which the said Mr. Thomas Boehm obliges himself to refund and pay back again, in Case his said Goods should be hereafter released, and arrive safe at Legborn, according to the Tenor of this Policy, we engaging ourselves to make good any Average or Damage that may ensue in this Adventure; and the Assured promises and obliges himself to continue his utmost Endeavours that his said Goods may be restored and discharged."

The present Defendant only signed the first of these Agreements, but never paid the Money pursuant thereto; though all the rest of the Underwriters signed both, and have paid their Money long ago.

The Plaintiff proved, that the Defendant was acquainted, when he underwrote the Policy, with the Reasons for inserting the Words, that the Goods should be warranted to be inserted in the Bills of Lading for neutral Account: He also proved his Interest, and that the Goods were his, till delivered; that all the Underwriters on this Ship have paid their Losses, to the afore-mentioned Value of between 30, and 40,000*l.* and that even the Defendant himself had paid one on her: He also proved by a Person, videlicet, who had seen the Ship at Cadix, and heard the Captain and Swedish Consul discourse about their Solicitations for freeing the Goods, which, joined to the before-mentioned Copy of her Condemnation, he thought sufficient Proofs of the Loss; but the Defendant being of a contrary Opinion, and not satisfied therewith, stood a Trial, when the Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Dartmouth Galley being fitted out as a Privateer, sailed (in Company Johabert and Novels, Jonathan Collier, jun. Trinity Term, 1745, at Guildhall with the Fortune) in October, 1744, on a Cruize, and the Plaintiffs being concerned therein, got Insurance made on their Part for one Calendar Month, of which the Defendant underwrote 200*l.* and the said Ships, after being out two Days, fell in with two French Men of War, with whom the Dartmouth engaged, and after a gallant Defence was taken by them, though not till the Captain and two more were killed, and several wounded, when the Lieutenant seeing the Inequality of the Combat, ordered the Colours to be struck, and surrendered, on which the Conquerors ordered the Dartmouth's People to hoist out their Barge, and go as many as could on board the Man of War, but the Dartmouth's Men finding an Opportunity failed away, and got off; their Enemies pursuing and overtaking them, they were obliged finally to submit, and the Men of War sent a Lieutenant, with a sufficient Power, to take Possession of the Dartmouth, in whose Custody she continued only about an Hour and a Half or two Hours; for the Lieutenant and his Company perceiving she was leaky, by one of the Men of War running foul of her, and starting a Plank, during the Engagement, called to his Commanders to send a Boat for them, as they feared sinking, which they immediately complied with, and the Lieutenant of the Dartmouth, and about ninety of her men were carried into France, and the Boatswain being left on board with about twenty more (including nine wounded ones) searched for, and in a great Measure stopped her Leaks, and taking Advantage of the Frenchmen's Fears and the Night, in two Days after got safe again into Dartmouth; and soon after her Arrival there, was refitted by the Owners, and sailed on another Cruize.

After this the said Ship was kept insured from Month to Month, and the Defendant underwrote several subsequent Policies on her, being always told by the Office-Keeper that he was of the first Policy, and neither he nor the Plaintiff ever pretended to demand any Thing of him on Account thereof.

In about six Months after the Expiration of the afore-said Policy, the Defendant paid the Plaintiffs a Loss on her, having continued to insure her Monthly, from the Policy in Question, and the Plaintiffs when they received it, never so much as insinuated, or pretended they had any Right to the first Insurance; however, the Plaintiffs have now claimed it, as the taking of the Ship, and carrying of her Men away, entirely over-set the Cruize, and she could not be refitted and sail on another before the expiration of the Month for which she was insured, and consequently this proved an entire Loss to the Assured; but in Support of the contrary, it is alledged by the Defendant, and confirmed by the Opinion of several very considerable Merchants, that this could not be counted a total Loss, more especially as it is not on a Cruize, the Words of the Policy being, to be insured lost or not lost, to any Ports or Places, for one Calendar Month, but no mention at all made of any Cruize; on which Account the Defendant supposes there could be no Interruption to a Thing never guarded against; and besides the Ship was so far from being a total Loss to the Owners on the first Risque, that she afterwards met with great Success by taking a very rich Prize.

And if this Doctrine offered by the Plaintiffs had taken Place with Respect to Insurances made for Time, every Collier might bring this as a Plea, as they are always insured on those Terms, though it was never apprehended, that every little Accident which happened within the Times and obliged them to refit, was deemed a total Loss.

The Plaintiff's were nonsuited, because unprepared to shew the Impossibility of her being fitted out again before the Expiration of the Insurance.

*Benjamin
Morgan De
Sylla v. Pan-cetta.*

The Plaintiff caused Insurance to be made for himself or others, lost or not lost, on the good Ship L'Heureux, Capt. Beatrix, from Bayonne to Martinico, the Adventure beginning at and from Bayonne to Martinico, and Cape François in St. Domingo, with Liberty to touch and stay at any Ports or Places whatsoever, without Prejudice to the Insurance, and without other Proof of Interest in Case of Loss, than the present Policy, and the French and American Livres to be valued Eleven-Pence each, without further Account to be given; and for this the Assured paid thirty Guineas per Cent. to have twelve Guineas per Cent. returned, in Case the Ship should depart with Convoy from Bayonne or L'Isle D'Aix.

The said Ship sailed two Days after in Prosecution of the aforesaid Voyage, and was taken, brought to London, and condemned; on which the Assured demanded of the Defendant his Subscription, which he refused to pay for different Reasons, as will be hereafter mentioned.

Several Merchants in France, particularly at Bordeaux and Bayonne, after the Commencement of the French War of 1744, fitted out a great Number of Ships under a Pretence and Appearance of sending them to the French Settlements in America, &c. and got them insured to their full Value at Marseilles, and other Places in that Country; and as the Laws of France prohibit every Person from making larger Insurance than what their Interest is, they, without discovering what they had done in their own Country, requested several Gentlemen here to get Insurance made for them, often to three or four Times more than their real Interest was; and the said Ships being generally taken or lost, the Underwriters, without suspecting any Fraud, paid their Subscription, by which Means the French, concerned in these Practices, got more than they would have done by any fair Adventures.

These Sorts of Transactions became at last so notorious in France, that Monf. the Count de Maurepas, Director of the Marine in that Country, about May, 1747, took Notice of it, and sent a Letter to a Merchant at Nantes desiring him to enquire of his Correspondent in England, into the Valuations of the several Ships and Cargoes mentioned in the Letter (and amongst them of the Heureux, Capt. Beatrix, before-mentioned) with the Amount of the Insurances made thereon, declaring in the said Letter, that there were great Frauds committed by Persons of Bayonne and Bordeaux, in fitting out Ships and making large Insurances thereon, and then putting those Ships in the Way of being taken by the English. This Gentleman sent a Copy of the above-mentioned Letter to Mr. Henry Leubier, a Merchant of this City, who generously communicated the same to several of the principal Underwriters; and they in Consequence of this Advice, chose a few Gentlemen from among themselves as a Committee to enquire into these Frauds; and they found that several Gentlemen in England had procured Insurances to be made on French Ships from Bordeaux and Bayonne to the West Indies, either upon the Terms of Interest or no Interest, or without further Proof of Interest than the Policy, to the Amount of 100,000*l.* of which near the Half was disputable Losses, by there being great Reason to believe, that these Insurances were fraudulent, and among others the Ship in Question; upon which a Bill in Chancery was filed, and an Injunction obtained, but on the Plaintiff's swearing he knew no Fraud, the Injunction was dissolved.

The Committee sent an Answer to Mr. Maurepas' Letter, authenticated by a Notary Publick, whereby it appeared, that the Ship and Cargo in Dispute were sold in England for 788*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* viz. the Cargo for 388*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* and the Ship for 400*l.* and there was insured on her in England, 2790*l.* and at Marseilles, it was found, upon Inquiry, that 12,000 Livres had been insured, which (reckoning a Livre at 11*d.*) amounts to 550*l.*

The

The preceding Circumstances were offered to the Court in order to discharge the Defendant from paying the Insurance, but it not being in his Power to prove them, though he supposed them Matters of Fact, and it appearing plainly that the Plaintiff had not in the least been guilty of any Fraud, and the Policy being expressly valued, and that in Case of Loss, the Assured should not be obliged to prove his Interest by any other Means whatsoever, save by the present Policy, as is mentioned in the Beginning of this Case, and had paid an adequate Premium to the Risque, which to the Underwriters was rather less than would have been on an Interest to be proved; as in this latter Case they are liable to Averages, which on Policies like this in Question of Interest or no Interest, they are solely answerable for a total Loss; and the Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The same was tried on three other Ships under the same Circumstances, on which large Sums had been insured, and had the same Determination.

The Plaintiff, being concerned in the Salamander Privateer, made Insurance Pand. v. King. on her, as well in his own Name, as for and in the Name and Names of all and every other Person or Persons to whom the same did, might, or should appertain, in Part or in all, lost or not lost, at and from the Downs, or elsewhere, to any Ports or Places whatsoever, for and during the Space of three Calendar Months, to commence from the 21st of December, 1744, upon the Body, Tackle, &c. of the said Ship; and to continue until the said Ship, with her Tackle, &c. should be arrived at, as above-mentioned, and there had moored at Anchor twenty-four Hours in good Safety; and it should be lawful for the said Ship in that Voyage, to proceed and sail to, and touch, and stay at, any Ports or Places whatsoever, without Prejudice to that Insurance; the said Ship, &c. for so much as concerned the Assured, was and should be valued at, Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage to the Assurers, touching the Adventure, &c. which they, the Assurers, are contented to bear, and did take upon them in that Voyage, &c. and in Case the said Ship should not be heard of in twelve Months after the Expiration of the above-mentioned three Months, the Assurers agreed to pay the Loss, and the Assured to repay the same, if afterwards the said Ship shall be heard of in Safety. The Defendant underwrote two different hundred Pounds at separate Times, on the aforesaid Policy, and the Ship proceeded on her Voyage, on the 21st of December as above-mentioned, and was taken by the French, on the 2d of February following, after an Engagement of more than an Hour with a much superiour Force, and after several of her Men were killed and wounded; and being thus conquered, 117 of her Men, including the Captain and all the Officers, most of her small Arms, and the Commission were removed into the Enemy's Ship, and carried into France, leaving only seventeen English on Board the Salamander, of which five soon after died of their wounds, and two French Officers with twenty-four of their Men; and the said Ship was in Possession of these their Adversaries, from four of the Clock in the Afternoon of the said 2d Day of February, until five of the Clock in the Afternoon of the 5th Day of the same Month, during all which Time she was absolutely in the Power of the Enemy, and was, at the last mentioned Period, retaken by the Hunter Privateer, Capt. Richard Veale, who put thirty of his Men and two Officers on board her, and kept her cruising with him for eight Days, when the said Captain Veale engaged, and took a French Ship, with which, together with his own Ship and the Salamander, he endeavoured to gain some Port in England or Ireland, but the Wind and Weather not permitting, he carried them all to Lisbon, a neutral Port, where he lay a considerable Time; during which Captain Veale took out of the Salamander two Carriage Guns, and thirty hundred Weight of Bread for his Ship's Use; and the Captain of the Durley Privateer, being in Partnership with the Hunter, also took out two Carriage Guns for the Use of his Ship; of all which Captain Veale made a Manifest, and sent to his Owners, that they might be accountable for them where they ought.

Captain Veale levied and instituted a Cause or Suit in the Vice Admiralty Court at Gibraltar, against the said Ship, the Salamander, &c. and on the 29th of April, April, 1745, obtained a Decree from the Judge thereof, that the said Ship, &c. should be restored to her rightful Owners, they paying, in Lieu of Salvage, one third Part of the full, true, and real Value thereof, free and clear from all Charges and Deductions whatsoever; but as her Capture had intirely overfet her Voyage before the Expiration of the three Months, for which she was insured, the Plaintiff demanded the Insurance of the Defendant, which being denied, he sued him for the same; and on the Trial at Guildhall, the Jury brought in their Verdict special, which occasioned its being argued before the Judges of the King's Bench in Hilary Term, 1746, and the Dispute in Question seemed to turn on this Point, viz. whether a Policy made free of Average can affect the Insurer but by a total Loss. This was strongly urged in Favour of the Defendant, whose Counsel supposed that the Recapture prevented the total Loss which would have happened, had the Enemy carried her into France; and that he was freed by the Policy from Payment of the Average order'd to be paid in Lieu of Salvage, so that consequently the Plaintiff's Demand on him was ill founded and unjust; but the Arguments on the contrary Side being strong and conclusive, I shall transcribe the greatest Part of them; and the Questions now upon the special Verdict are two, one to be considered upon the first, the other on the second Count in the Declaration.

1st. Whether the Property of the Prize was divested by the Taking; and 2dly. Whether, as it is found that the Voyage was totally broke, and the Purpose thereof defeated by the Capture, and no Restitution made to the Owners, there is not a Breach of the Policy, sufficient to give the Plaintiff a Right of Action, notwithstanding the Recapture, and though the Property be not changed, and the Insurance be made free of Average.

1st. It is found that the Ship was taken by the Enemies as a Prize, and that a Hundred and seventeen Men, including the Captain and Officers, with the greatest Part of the small Arms, Commission, &c. were carried into France, and only seventeen Men were left on board, all of which, except three, were wounded, and five of them died soon after, so that they were not able to navigate the Ship: but two French Officers and twenty-four Men were put aboard, and the said Ship so conquered remained in the Possession of the Enemy, from the 2d to the 5th of February, and during all that Time, was absolutely in their Power; and that thereby the Voyage insured was totally prevented.

These Facts, according to the Laws of France, Spain, Holland, Sweden, and other European Nations, are sufficient to divest the Property of the Prize; but according to the Opinion of some Writers, who draw their Notions from the Rule of the Civil Law, the Property of a Ship taken at Sea, is not divested till the Prize is brought Infra Fines, or Infra Presidia Capitulum.

If the Question therefore is to be determined by the present Law of Nations, it is with the Plaintiff; for thereby the Property of a Prize is changed, By a firm Possession of twenty-four Hours.

But if by the Opinion of certain Doctors of the Civil Law, it is against the Plaintiff;

The Prize not being brought Infra Fines Hostium.

It seems to be agreed by all the contending Writers upon this Question, that the legal Principle, which vests the Property of a Prize, is Such a Taking as enables the Captor to retain and defend the Possession, but their Dispute is concerning what Circumstance is declarative of such Ability, and upon this Head it is that a Variety of Difficulties have arose.

Van Rykershock, speaking to this, says,

“Quando autem ita adepti videamur Possessionem, ut retinere, vel non retinere possimus, Causarum Varietas definire non permittit.”

They all likewise agree, that when the Spes probabilis recuperandi is lost, or the Parties may be said deposuisse Animum recuperandi, the Property becomes the Captor's.

But they cannot settle what shall be Evidence thereof, though they confess it would be beneficial to the Publick, and reasonable in itself, to put an End to an Infinity of Litigation, by reducing the Question to a Certainty; yet, notwithstanding so necessary an End is fully agreed upon, the Means leading to it are not: the Doctors, adhering zealously to the Rules of the Civil Law, contend, that the Criterion for determining the Question, shall be a bringing the Prize Infrà Præfidia; the Law of Nations regarding the general Interest and Convenience of the Subjects, and to give all possible Encouragement in the Time of War for the retaking of Prizes from the Enemy, hath ordained that a Possession of twenty-four Hours shall be sufficient.

And now it is for the Judgement of the Court, to which Side they will pay the Deference; that is, whether to the Opinion of such Doctors, as Alber. Gent. Petrinus Bellus, and Van Bykerkboock, or to the Law and constant Practice used in other Nations.

If they adhere to the Doctors, the Question is not finally settled amongst them, for some contend, that there must be a bringing Infrà Fines Capientium, others only Infrà Classem, and some into a neutral Port, &c. and some go so far as to say, that after a bringing Infrà Præfidia, there must be a Sailing to a new Destination.

But by the Law of Nations, of modern or later Institution, the Certainty sought for is definitive, viz. a Possession of twenty-four Hours; and the Authorities to prove the Law of Nations on this Question, are,

1. "Recentiori Jure Gentium inter Europæos Populos introductum videmus ut talia Capta censeantur, ubi per Horas viginti quatuor in Potestate Hostium fuerint. Gro. L. 3. Cap. 6. S. 4.

2. "La Coutume vient des anciennes Loix D'Allemagne, & elle a etablie Limitation de l'Espace de 24 Heures qu'elles limitèrent non sans Raison. Barb. Notes on Grotius, L. 3. Cap. 6.

3. "La même Chose se pratique en Angleterre, & dans le Royaume de Castille, Idem.

4. "Sed hodie Naves ab Hoste captæ communi inter Christianos & Europæos Populos,—sive Jure, sive Consuetudine postliminio—non recipiuntur si Hostis eas non eodem Die navali Pugnâ iterum amiserit, sed si per viginti quatuor Horas in Potestate Victoris fuerint tunc enim verè captæ, & proprii Juris factæ censentur. Locenius de Jure Maritimo, &c. I. 2. C. 4. S. 14. Zonch de Jure Fœdali, Part 2. S. 8. 21.

5. "Quicquid verò clarissimi Interpretes disputent de Prædâ prius in Præfidia deducendâ, quàm fiat possidentis, aliud tamen Consuetudine & Moribus Europæorum hodie observatur, ut nimirum Præda Capientium fiat, & præsertim Naves Hostium de quibus hic Sermo est, si a Victore per Diem & Noctem possessâ fuerint. Loc. L. 2. C. 4. S. 8.

6. "Si aucun Navire de nos Sujets est repris sur nos Ennemis après qu'il aura demeuré entre leur Mains pendant 24 Heures, la Prise en sera bonne, & si elle est faite avant les 24 Heures, il sera restitué au Propriétaire. Ordon. touchant la Marine, Tit. Prizes, Art. 8.

7. "Simon Greenewegen, an Authour frequently quoted as an Authority by the best Writers, and who was a celebrated Lawyer * in the last Century, • Diâ. Mor. and of a Family that had for a long Course of Years sat at the Helm of the Government, proves that the Law requiring a Ship to be brought Infrà Præfidia is abrogated, and puts it down as such in his Treatise De Legibus abrogatis, & inusitatis in Hollandiâ, vicinisque Regionibus, where he distinguishes what shall be said to be Prizes by the Civil Law, and what by the Law of Nations; to which End, in Lib. 49. Tit. 15. de Captivis, &c. he makes several Divisions and Subdivisions of the Subject, and has two Subdivisions de Navibus, viz. First Capta, quæ dicuntur jure Civili; Secondly, Gertium; and, under this Head Gertium quotes the Passage aforesaid from Grotius and adds, that now in Holland a Prize may be good, Nullò habito Respectu Temporis, quo Navis in Hostium Potestate fuerit, dum tamen infrà Præfidia perducta non fuit. Sim. Grec. De Leg. Abr. P. 353.

As by the Law of other Nations a Possession of twenty-four Hours undoubtedly divests the Property of a Prize, one might conclude that, as this Question has not been judicially determined by this Court, it would be reasonable to put the Subjects of England upon the same Footing with those of France, Spain, Holland, Sweden, &c. especially in mercantile Contracts, which ought to have the same Construction in one trading Country as another, and more especially as this Kind of Insurance, Interest or not, is a Branch of Trade peculiar to us: But if this will not do, the Question upon the second Count is to be considered, which is, 2d Quest. Whether, upon this Count, there hath not been a Breach of the Policy, or Contract of Insurance, sufficient to give the Plaintiff a Right of Action, upon Interest or not?

It is found that the Prize was fitted out to cruize against the King's Enemies; that all her Men, except seventeen, as aforesaid, were taken and carried into France, and those left, not able to navigate the Ship, and that the Voyage described in the Policy was thereby totally prevented; and that, at the Time of the Verdict, the Ship remained at Lisbon, not restored to the Owners.

This seems to be a Breach, taking the Policy either upon the Ground of A CONTRACT or a WAGER.

Considering it as a Contract, the Agreement is, that the Ship shall not be prevented in the Voyage, by any of the Perils or Risques in the Policy, amongst which are all Surprisals at Sea, Arrests, Restraints, and Detainments of all Kings, Princes, and People whatsoever; and here has been a Surprisal at Sea, and a Detention, whereby the whole Voyage insured was totally broke, as is found by the Verdict; and this is a much stronger Case than Depaiba and Ludlow, where the Court, for very good Reasons, determined unanionously for the Plaintiff, as appears by the Judgement of Lord Chief Justice King, delivered as the Opinion of the whole Court; whereby it also appears, that a total Loss is not necessary in all Cases to give the Plaintiff a Right of Action upon a Policy, Interest or not.

The Defendant's Counsel insisted in his Argument, that as the Policy was made free of Average, nothing could affect the Insurer but a total Loss, because all other Losses are included within the Import of Average, by the Words of the Contract.

This is a Mistake, and appears to be so from the Words of the Policy, which immediately follow, viz. and without Benefit of Salvage to the Insurer.

If nothing but a Loss could affect the Insurer, is it not consistent that he should renounce the Benefit of Salvage; for what could he have to do with Salvage, in Case he was chargeable if any Thing was saved?

This therefore is a Construction not warrantable, being absolutely inconsistent with the express Words of the Policy, which are free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage to the Assurer.

And as such a Construction is inconsistent, another is to be sought, which is not so repugnant, and which may permit the Words before-mentioned to stand with more Propriety, and this may be done by confining the Import of Average to a Limitation; and the Definition of Average in the first Article of the Ordinance of Fontainbleau, touchant la Marine, Titre Avarie, establishes such a Limitation of the Import of this Word as will give it a consistent Place, as it stands in a Policy of Insurance: It is by the said Ordon. defined thus;

“ Toute Depense extraordinaire qui se fera pour les Navires et Marchandises “ conjointment ou séparément, et tout Dommage qui leur arrivera depuis “ leur Charge et Départ, jusques à leur Retour et Décharge, seront
“ réputés Avaries. Ordon. of 1681, Tit. 7. des Avaries.”

And it is certain, the true Import of the Word Average is, such Damages as happen to the Ship or Cargo during the Voyage, as the Loss of Anchors, Masts, Cables, &c. but that which breaks up the Voyage, as, in this Case, a Capture by Enemies, whereby the whole End, Purpose, and Design of the Cruize was absolutely defeated, by the actual Taking of all the Men, Arms,

Provisions,

Provisions, Commission-Officers, &c. cannot, from the obvious Nature, Circumstances, and Reason of the Thing, and the Authority of the Case of Depaiba and Ludlow, be esteemed barely as an Average to which the Insurer is not liable, but must be considered as a total Breach of the Contract of Insurance to which he is liable.

If the Construction contended for by the Defendant was to prevail, the Insurer would rather be indemnified from than subjected to the Perils insured against; for if a taking happens at the Beginning of a Voyage, insured from one Port to another, or for Time only, and the Voyage be thereby broke up, or the Time elapsed, the Recovery of the Ship will ruin the Insured, and be a general Release to the Insurer, who will also be thereby indemnified from all the Risks in the Policy; whereby, if no such Capture had happened, the Ship might have been lost, and a Capture and Detention breaking up the Voyage insured, might put the Insurer in a better Condition than if there had been no Capture at all, which cannot be the Meaning of the Parties, being inconsistent with the apparent Design of an Insurance.

Besides, in this Case, the Ship insured is not to this Hour, as appears by the Verdict, restored to the Owners; neither was it * worth their while to pay Salvage and Charges, and raise Men to bring her home; and suppose they had, and she had been taken again by the Enemy, the Time of Insurance was expired, and the Insurer in such Case would have said he was not liable.—Therefore must be considered as a total Breach of the Policy, and not as a bare Average.

* Hartley v. Prince; held by T. Chancellor, that the Insured might abandon.

1st, Here was a Taking and a Detention.

2dly, All the Men, Commission-Officers, &c. taken and carried into France, and never retaken.

3dly, Though Ship retaken, not restored, and possibly never may.

4thly, If restored, her Men, Arms, Provisions, &c. being taken, could not pursue the Purpose of the Voyage, and therefore the Insured may abandon the Benefit of the Salvage.

5thly, The Verdict has found the Voyage was thereby totally defeated, and that is sufficient.

There are many Cases where the Plaintiff on a Policy, Interest or not, has recovered, though no total Loss of the Ship, but because by the Perils in the Policy, she was rendered unable to perform the Voyage, as in the Case of the Ludlow Castle, and the Case of the Providence, between Carter and Barrel, where the Ship came into St. Ives, bound for London, but being leaky, the Cargo was unladed, and the Ship sold at St. Ives; though it was proved she might, at a considerable Expence, have been made fit to perform the Voyage, yet, as without it, the Voyage could not be performed, the Plaintiff recovered, though no Loss at all of the Ship.

So, in the present Case, if the Ship had been retaken in an Hour, she could not have pursued the Voyage; for all the Men, &c. were taken and carried into France, and therefore she could not navigate herself, neither could she have performed the Voyage insured.

But, taking it upon the Footing of a Wager, as put by the Defendant's Counsel; What is the Wager? It is, that such a Ship, for and notwithstanding any Arrests, Restraints, &c. will sail from London to Jamaica, or sail for three Calendar Months upon a Cruise, as the Adventure may be. If, therefore, by any Arrest, Taking, Detention, &c. the Ship is totally prevented from proceeding in the Voyage, is not the Wager lost? Has not the Contingency insured against happened?

Upon this Case, for the Reasons aforesaid, and many others arising upon the Nature of the Contract of Assurance, and particularly upon the Authority and Reason in Depaiba and Ludlow, the Plaintiff hoped for the Judgement of the Court in his Favour, which accordingly was given; and the Judges were unanimous in their Opinion.

I HAVE enlarged considerably on this Case, more than on any others, as it is that which settled definitively this Nature of Insurance, which before was almost always contested, when any little Difficulty happened; and though the late Act

Act

Act prohibits the Continuance of a Business it deems hurtful to the Publick, yet this Decision may be a Government for Disputes in other Parts where it is permitted, or in Case the aforesaid Act should ever be repealed.

Cases of Warranty to sail with Convoy.

A SPECIES of Warranty, which most frequently occurs in Policies of Insurance, in Time of War, is that of sailing under the Protection of Convoy; that is, certain Ships of Force, appointed by Government, to sail with Merchantmen from their Port of Discharge to the Place of their Destination. When the Nature of a Convoy is considered, it is highly reasonable that the Policy should be forfeited, if the Insured fail to comply with so material a Condition; because the Risque which the Underwriter takes upon himself is very considerably increased, in Time of War, by the Want of Convoy. Accordingly, by the Laws of this, and of all other Maritime Powers, if the Insured warrant that the Vessel shall depart with Convoy, and it do not, the Policy is defeated, and the Underwriter is not responsible.

We have already seen, that every Warranty must be strictly and literally complied with, and that a liberal and substantial Performance, merely, will not be sufficient. Hence, in a Warranty to sail with Convoy, it becomes material to consider what shall be deemed a Convoy, within such a Condition. Upon this Point it has been solemnly settled by the Court of King's Bench—"That it is not every single Man of War, which chuses to take a Merchant-Ship under its Protection, that will constitute such a Convoy as the Warranty means; but it must be a naval Force, under the Command of a Person appointed by the Government of the Country to which they belong." The Reason of such a Decision is wise, because Government must be supposed to be better informed of the Designs and Strength of the Enemy, and what Degree of Force will be sufficient to repel their Attempts. But let it be observed, that a single Man of War, Frigate, or Sloop may be deemed sufficient to protect one or more Merchantmen; and if the Captain has received his Orders to protect them, though his Force may prove insufficient, and the Ships are captured, this is to be considered as sailing with Convoy according to the Warranty in the Policy.

Piggot, B. R.
Lofft, 1783.*

The Case, in which the above Points were settled, came before the Court upon a Rule to shew Cause why the Verdict, which the Defendant had obtained, should not be set aside, and a new Trial had. It was an Action to recover upon a Policy of Insurance on the Ship Arundel, Captain Mann, at and from Jamaica to London, warranted to depart with Convoy. The Facts appearing, on the Report of Lord Mansfield, who tried the Cause, are these: On the 25th of July, the Arundel sailed from Morant Harbour to Kingston, where she met the Glorieux Man of War, Captain Cadogan, who was likewise on his Way to join Admiral Graves at Bluefields. Lord Rodney had appointed Admiral Graves to rendezvous at Bluefields, in order to take the Fleet of Merchant-Ships, which were to sail from thence upon the 1st of August, under his Command, and to convoy them to Great-Britain. Captain Mann, upon their meeting in Kingston Harbour, asked for Sailing-Orders from Captain Cadogan, who said he had none, not having himself at that Time joined the Admiral; but he was sure that Admiral Graves would not sail from Bluefields till the Glorieux joined him: However, if he should have sailed, he, Captain Cadogan, would give Captain Mann Sailing-Orders, and take every Care of the Arundel in his Power. They proceeded together, and arrived at Bluefields, on the 28th of July; but they found that Admiral Graves had sailed two Days before. The Glorieux and Arundel then sailed from Bluefields, the former firing Guns, giving Signals, and behaving in every Respect like a Convoy. Upon the 5th of August a Signal was made that the Fleet was in Sight, and on the seventh they joined it off Cape Antonis. The Arundel was lost in September in a dreadful Storm, which dispersed the whole Fleet, and in which a vast Number of the Ships perished. Upon this Evidence, the Jury were of Opinion, under the Direction of the Chief Justice, that the Terms of the Warranty had not been performed; performed; and they therefore found a Verdict for the Underwriters, Defendants in the Cause. After this Question had been fully argued at the Bar, the three Judges, Mr. Justice Ashurst being at that Time one of the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal, delivered their Opinions severally.

Earl Mansfield—"Though the Underwriters and Insured are equally innocent, yet I cannot help saying, that now, as well as at the Trial, my Inclination led me to wish, that the Plaintiffs were in the Right. But the more it is argued, the less it is liable to dispute. There are hypothetical Contracts, and conditional Contracts. In the former, the Contract depends upon an Event taking Place; there is no Latitude, no Equity; the only Question is, Has that Event ever happened?" Then going over the Particulars of the Case, and amongst other Things referring to the Usage of Merchants, as to what is esteemed a Convoy by them, that a Convoy is a naval Force, under the Command of that Person whom Government has appointed, he applies it to the Facts given in Evidence at the Trial; and decides, that at the Time of sailing from Bluefields, where the Risk of the Voyage commenced, the Glorieux was no Part of the Convoy, and therefore the Warranty was not complied with.

Mr. Justice Willes differed in Opinion from Lord Mansfield: He went upon this Ground, that the Terms of the Policy had been liberally and substantially complied with. "When Captain Mann found that the Fleet was gone, he did every Thing in his Power for the Security of the Ship; for he put himself under the Protection of the Glorieux, which was appointed by Lord Rodney to make a Part of the Convoy. The Loss of the Arundel happened long subsequent to her joining the Fleet; I am therefore of Opinion, that the Warranty in this Policy has been substantially performed."

Mr. Justice Buller—"In deciding this Case, it is not necessary to say, whether Sailing-Orders are essential or not. The present Question is simply this: Did the Arundel sail with Convoy? This is a Condition which must be literally complied with, as all the Cases agree. As to the Question itself, it is a Question of Fact; and the Facts of the Case seem to me to prove, that the Glorieux was no Part of the Convoy. Admiral Graves had sailed before they arrived, and that Circumstance which Lord Mansfield stated seems very material, that no Orders were left behind for the Glorieux. I say, that, on this Evidence, she was no Part of the Convoy; for, in order to make her so, it must appear that she was under the Orders of Graves. Did he leave her behind to take Care of the Ships that remained? If so, it would alter the Case very materially. But there was no such Idea; for, if there had, the Glorieux would have remained at Bluefields for the rest of the Ships until the first of August: On the contrary, Captain Cadogan, finding that Admiral Graves was gone, immediately followed; for his sole Object was to join that Admiral. Ships must sail under the Convoy appointed by the Government of the Country, who proportion the Strength of it to the Necessity of the Times. To what End would this Care be taken, if Merchantmen were to sail under the Protection of single Ships, which they may happen to meet? I am therefore of Opinion, that if a Ship do not sail with the Convoy appointed by Government, it is not a Sailing with Convoy, within the Terms of the Policy." The Rule for a new Trial was then discharged.

Although the Decisions of the Court of King's Bench require no additional Authority to support them, yet it will be proper, by Way of Illustration, to point out to the Reader in what Cases the Opinions of foreign Writers agree with the Determinations of the English Courts of Justice. Monsieur D'Emerigon, a very distinguished Writer upon this Branch of Jurisprudence, puts this Case: "On avoit fait des Assurances sur une navire, de sortie de Marjeilles jusqu'aux detroits de Gibraltar; et dans la Police il étoit dit, que le navire partirait de Marjeilles sous l'escorte d'un bâtiment de Roi; autrement, Assurance nulle. Une Frigate, chargée de munitions de guerre pour Algeras, se trouvoit à l'Estague. Le navire assuré mit à la voile sous les auspices de cette Frigate qui lui accorda protection, et qui partit en meme temps. Consulté sur ce cas, je fus d'avis qui si le navire étoit pris par les ennemis, les Assureurs seroient fondés à refuser le paiement de la perte: car une chose est d'être sous l'escorte d'un bâtiment de Roi, et autre chose est de naviguer simplement sous ses auspices."

Having now seen what shall not, and what shall be deemed a Convoy, let us proceed to investigate and confirm, by Cases, what shall be considered as a Departure with Convoy, within the Meaning of a Warranty in the Policy to depart with Convoy. The Rule in this Case is short and clear, that such a Warranty implies that the Ship shall go with Convoy from the usual Places of Rendezvous, at which the Ships have been accustomed to assemble; as Spithead or the Downs for the Port of London, and Blusfields for all the Ports in Jamaica. And that such Warranty does not limit the Ship to depart with Convoy, from her Port of Lading or Discharge, but protects her by the Assurance, while on her Way from such Port to the usual Rendezvous to join the Convoy. This Doctrine was admitted, and has been made a Precedent ever since, in the following remarkable Case.

Gordon and Murray v. Meloy, Esq; at the sittings after Mich. Term, 1746, at Guildhall.

The Plaintiffs being Merchants residing at Gibraltar, and one of them coming to London, to purchase Goods fit for that Place, bought to near the Value of 3000*l.* and, in order to forward them to the aforesaid Place, he took Freight on the Ship Ranger, Captain Taylor, which he saw put up, as customary, at the Royal-Exchange and Portugal Coffee-House, with a Declaration inserted in the said Advertisement, that the Ship was to sail with the first Convoy; and in Consequence thereof he shipped his Merchandize, and made Insurance thereon, to the Amount of 2830*l.* inserting in the Policy the Words, Warranted to depart with Convoy, in Conformity with the above-mentioned Placart of the Captain.

The Ship, when laden, sailed from Gravesend the 4th of May, 1746, on her Voyage, and arrived in the Downs the 7th, where she continued to the 12th, in Company with the Otter Sloop of War, some English Merchant-Ships, and three Dutch East-India Ships.

Captain Taylor, whilst he lay in the Downs, having received Intelligence that the Convoy at Spithead was ready to sail, went on board the Otter Sloop, in order to solicit the Commander's taking him under his Protection to Spithead; but this the said Gentleman informed him was not in his Power to comply with, as he was ordered on a Cruise over to the Coast of France; whereupon Captain Taylor went on board the Commodore of the Dutch East-India Ships, who promised to take the Ranger under Convoy to Spithead.

On the said 12th of May, the Otter Sloop, the Dutch, and the Ranger weighed Anchor, as did also some English Ships, for the Benefit of that Convoy; and a few Hours after they were under Sail, the Otter Sloop parted from them on her Cruise, and the Ranger proceeded and kept Company with the three Dutch Ships till between four and five o'Clock the next Afternoon, being the 13th; when, in her direct Course to Spithead, she was attacked by a French Privateer, called the Resource, within three Miles of the Dutch East-India Men, and eighteen of Spithead, where she was to join the Convoy for Gibraltar, and, after some Resistance, she was taken and carried into Havre de Grace, and there regularly condemned.

The Plaintiff, on the aforesaid Capture, applied to the respective Underwriters, and among them to the Defendant, requiring Satisfaction for his Loss; but they absolutely refused paying any Thing, insisting, that the Ship had not sailed according to the Terms of the Policy, viz. at and from London to Gibraltar, warranted to depart with Convoy; but as she departed without Convoy, which she ought not to have done, and was taken in Consequence thereof, the Insurers are not held to satisfy a Loss, which they never obliged themselves to be answerable for; that the Ship ought to have staid till a Convoy had offered, and not gone to seek one at such a Distance, as evidently exposed her to be taken in getting thither.

On the contrary, the Plaintiffs pleaded, that they had complied with the Tenour of the Policy; that the Defendant misconceived the natural Construction of the Words, warranted to depart with Convoy, as they did not imply, that the Ship ought to have departed with Convoy from the Port of London, as the Rendezvous for Ships bound to Gibraltar and the Straits is generally at Spithead, where they join the Convoy; and although there may possibly be an Instance or two of a Convoy sailing from the Nore and the Downs to Gibraltar, yet this is an uncommon accidental Thing, and was not to have been expected on this Occasion; on the contrary, it was then known that the Convoy for those Parts was to be at Spithead, and many Ships went there from London to take the Benefit of it, so that the Warranty could only be understood from Spithead, as it was from the Convoy there the Captain was to take his Sailing Orders; besides, as it was unsafe to lie in the Downs without a Man of War, the Plaintiff conceives the Ranger would have run a much greater Risk, in continuing there after the Otter's Departure, than she did in sailing with her and the Dutch Ships, though they were no regular Convoy; and the Plaintiff paid the same Premium for his Insurance as given on several Ships at the same Time, with a Warranty to depart from any Port of the Channel; and it was the Opinion of several Merchants, that Ships, sailing with Convoy, are to make the best of their Way to the Convoy, and not to stay for any intermediate one.

A similar Decision was made in the Year 1781, by the Admiralty of France, which is reported in the Work of Emerigon. Upon this Kind of Warranty, however, it is to be observed, that although the Words commonly used are, to depart with Convoy, or to sail with Convoy; yet they extend to sailing with Convoy throughout the whole of the Voyage, as much as if those Words were inserted. Indeed to suppose the contrary would introduce a Variety of Frauds; as a Ship would sail out of Harbour with the Convoy, continue with it for an Hour or two, then leave it, and run every Peril, at the Risque of the Underwriter. Therefore, a Ship warranted to sail with Convoy to her destined Port of Delivery, and putting herself under the Protection of a Convoy designed to go only Part of the Voyage with her, and then to take under its Charge Merchantmen for some other Destination, though she could find no other Convoy in the Port of her Departure, is not justified in sailing with such a Convoy.

This was decided in an Action brought for Money had and received by an Underwriter, for a Return of Premium. The Policy was on the Ship the Parker Galley, "at and from Venice to the Currant Islands, and at and from thence to London, at a Premium of 5 Guineas per Cent. to return 2 per Cent. if the Ship sailed with Convoy from Gibraltar, and arrived." The Ship touched at Gibraltar on her Way home, and sailed from thence under Convoy of the Zephyr Sloop of War; but the Convoy was destined only to go to a certain Latitude, about as far as Cape Finisferre, being ordered on the Lisbon Station; and accordingly, the Ship and Convoy separated, and the Ship arrived safe at London. The only Question in the Cause was, Whether, by the Terms of the Policy, the Condition for the Return of Premium was, a Departure from Gibraltar with such Convoy as could be met with, for whatever Part of the Voyage that might happen to be, or a Departure with Convoy for the Voyage. The Trial came on before Lord Mansfield and a common Jury, when a Verdict was found for the Plaintiff.

This Verdict gave great Dissatisfaction to the Merchants in the City, and more especially to the Underwriters; and a Rule was obtained to shew Cause why there should not be a new Trial. The Evidence, from his Lordship's Report, appeared to be this: The Plaintiff had called Witnesses, one of whom was Mr. Gorman, an eminent Merchant, to prove that for some Years past, when Convoy for the Voyage, or the whole Voyage, was intended, those explanatory Words had been added; and that, by this Usage, the Expressions of sailing with Convoy, and sailing with Convoy for the Voyage, had received distinct technical Meanings; with Convoy, signifying, whatever Convoy the Ship should depart with, whether for a greater or less Part of the Voyage. Several Policies were also produced, which had been filled up at the Office of the same Broker who had prepared that which had given Occasion to this Cause, in which the Words for the Voyage, or for England, were added. The Captain proved, that at the Time when he left Gibraltar no other Convoy was to be had. The Witnesses for the Defendant swore, that they understood the Words with Convoy to mean Convoy for the Voyage; and the Broker said, that at the Time this Policy was signed, he understood, and apprehended it was so understood by all the Parties, that the Convoy was to be for the Voyage, and that the Return was such as was usual, when Convoy for the Voyage was meant.

The

The Case being fully argued at the Bar, Lord Mansfield afterwards gave his Opinion in Favour of making the Rule absolute for a new Trial. His Lordship took Notice, that, on the Words, he was strongly of Opinion that the Policy meant a Departure with Convoy intended for the Voyage; yet he thought that the Evidence was properly admitted at the Trial, because the Sense contended for by the Plaintiff was not inconsistent with the Words of the Policy, and therefore it was material to see what was the Usage. His Lordship further said, that he laid great Stress on Mr. Gorman's Testimony, whom he did not consider as a common Witness; and concluded with this memorable Observation, of the first Importance to the Mercantile World, and which we cannot but wish the Lawyers would adopt: "Certainly critical Niceties ought not to be encouraged in commercial Concerns; and wherever you render additional Words necessary, and multiply them, you also multiply Doubts and Criticisms. It may be hard, because Words have been added in some Instances, to force a Construction in this Case, from the Omission of them." On these Grounds the Court granted a new Trial, which came on before Lord Mansfield at the Sittings after Trinity Term, 1779, when a Verdict was found for the Defendant, the Underwriter.

But although it has been settled, that a Ship must depart with Convoy for the whole Voyage, yet in the last Case it was truly said by Lord Mansfield, that an unforeseen Separation is an Accident to which the Underwriter is liable. And the first Decision upon this Subject was such, that it never has been departed from in any one Instance.

Assumpsit on a Policy of Insurance, made in the usual Form, "from London to Cadiz, warranted to depart with Convoy." Upon the general Issue pleaded, the Jury found a Special Verdict; stating, that the Ship did depart from the Port of London in Company of the Convoy intended, and sailed together as far as the Ile of Wight, in Pursuance of the Voyage towards Cadiz, and there they were separated by Strefs of Weather; that the Convoy put into Torbay, and the insured Ship into the Port of Fowey in Cornwall: That three Days afterwards, the Wind setting right to bring the Convoy down the Channel, the Master of the insured Ship failed out of Fowey, on purpose to meet the Convoy; but it did not come: And then the insured Ship was seized with another Storm, so that she could not return from whence she came, but was driven upon the French Coast, and there taken by the Enemy.

After several Arguments on this Special Verdict, the Plaintiff had Judgement, per totam Curiam, for the whole Loss; and the principal Reason was, because there was no Manner of Neglect, or other Default, found in the Master of the Ship; but it appeared he had done all in his Power to keep in Company of the Convoy. It is found expressly, that he departed with Convoy from his first Port, which answers the Words of the Policy: But it would have been otherwise, if any Fraud or Neglect had been found in the Master of the insured Ship after her Departure, notwithstanding he departed out of the first Port with Convoy; for the Meaning of the Words; "warranted to depart with Convoy," is, that the insured Ship should keep Company with the Convoy during the whole Voyage, if possible.

Park.

Even where the Ship has by tempestuous Weather been prevented from joining the Convoy at all, at least of receiving the Orders of the Commander of the Ships of War, if she do every Thing in her Power to effect it, it shall be deemed a sailing with Convoy, within the Terms of the Warranty.

Warin v. Clow,
2 Stran. 1250.

The Plaintiff had insured on Goods in the John and Jane, from Gottenburg to London, with a Warranty to depart with Convoy from Fleckery. In July, 1744, the Ship sailed from Gottenburg to Fleckery, and there she waited for Convoy two Months. On the 21st of September, at Nine in the Morning, three Men of War, who had one hundred Merchant-Ships in Convoy, stood off Fleckery, and made a Signal for the Ships there to come out, and likewise sent in a Yawl to order them out. There were fourteen Ships waiting, and the John and Jane got out by Twelve o'Clock, and one of the first; the Convoy having sailed gently on, and being two Leagues a-head. It was a hard Gale; and by Six in the Afternoon, the Ship came up with the Fleet; but could not get to either of the Men of War for Sailing Orders. It was stormy all Night, and at Day-break the Ship in question was in the Middle of the Fleet; but the Weather was so bad, that no Boat could be sent for Sailing Orders. A French Privateer had failed amongst them all Night; and, it being foggy on the 22d, attacked the John and Jane about Two, who kept a running Fight til Dark, which was renewed the next Morning, when she was taken. For the Defendant, the Underwriter, it was insisted, that this Ship was never under Convoy, nor are Ships ever considered so, till they have received Sailing Orders; and, if the Weather would not permit the Captain to get them, he should have gone back.

But the Chief Justice Sir William Lee and the Jury were of Opinion, that, as the Captain had done every Thing in his Power, "it was a departing with Convoy:" And those Agreements are never confined to precise Words; as in the Case of departing with Convoy from London, when the Place of Rendezvous is Spithead, a Loss in going thither is within the Policy. Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Plaintiff having underwrote the William and Anne, Captain Stracban, at Heath v. Flexney, at Guilball, the Sittings after Easter Term, 1746. and from Virginia or Maryland to London, had a Mind to reinsure himself, and accordingly ordered Mr. Alexander Hopkins, a Broker, to get it done; who having complied with the Commission, certified on the Policy, that the Interest was in the Plaintiff.

The Insurance was made, Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage; but under the Policy was this Clause, in Case of Retain, the Assurers to have Benefit of Salvage, and pay Average, the same as if wrote on Interest.

The Ship sailed from Virginia on her Voyage to London; and being about two hundred and fifteen Leagues to the Westward of Cape Clear, after a Voyage of three Weeks, she was taken by two French Privateers, and carried into a Place in Newfoundland, called by that Nation Cape de Grate, and commonly occupied by them in the Fishing Season, where she continued in the Enemy's Possession and Power forty-one Days; during which Time, the Enemy took out of her a great Part of her Cargo; and after so rifling her; and in their Way condemning her, the Captain agreed to ransom her with what remained of her Lading; and the Ransom-Bill being signed, and his Mate left as an Hostage, they permitted him to pursue his Voyage to London, where he afterwards arrived.

Soon after the Ship's Arrival, the Merchants who were concerned in the Cargo, and had been insured, applied to their Underwriters for Satisfaction; when most of them settled the Average, for what was pillaged, at fifty per Cent. one at forty, and the present Plaintiff paid his Quota thereon, and afterwards applied to the Defendant, who had re-insured him, to settle his Policy; and it was agreed between them, that it should be on the same Footing as the major Part of the aforesaid Underwriters on Interest had done, which the Broker, in this Insurance, understanding was done at fifty per Cent: he endorsed on the Back of the Policy these Words,

"Adjusted this Loss at fifty Pounds per Cent. to pay in one Month, London, 12 December, 1745; and signed by the Defendant, Daniel Flexney."

Though at the Time the Defendant signed the above-mentioned Note, he told the Plaintiff, that some of the Underwriters, on the original Policies, had paid an Average only of forty per Cent: and therefore he would pay no more; and at the same Time, with his Pen drew a Line through the Word fifty, and above it wrote forty, which occasioned some Dispute between them; but the Indorsement so signed by the Defendant remained uncanceled.

The Defendant afterwards refused making any Satisfaction, under a Supposition of his having no Obligation thereto, for which his principal Reasons were, viz.

1st, That although he had signed such an Adjustment at forty per Cent. yet he is not bound by it, because the Plaintiff objected to it at the Time of signing, and insisted on fifty.

zdy, That although the Ship was in the Enemy's Possession, and carried into Cape de Grate, yet she afterwards proceeded on the same Voyage, and arrived safe in London, therefore there could be no Loss, so as to recover under a Policy Interest or no Interest.

To the first of which Objections, the Plaintiff admits that he did find Fault with the Defendant for striking out the Word fifty, and inserting forty, yet as the Defendant did not then think proper to cancel the said Adjustment, but permitted it to remain on the Back of the Policy, the Plaintiff apprehended he had a Right to recover under the said Adjustment.

As to the Defendant's second Objection, the Plaintiff supposes, that as the Ship was carried in by the Enemy to Cape de Grate, and detained till ransomed, that this will amount to a total Divestiture or Alteration of the Property, and he deemed such a Loss as will entitle him to recover; this Case seeming to be of a quite different Nature from a Recapture before the Ship is carried into an Enemy's Port.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Borley v. Esberingore.
Sittings after
Term, Term,
1747, at Gouldhall.

The Plaintiff having caused himself to be insured 50*l.* Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage, on the Prosperous Esber, Capt. Miln, from and immediately following her last Arrival at Mariland or Virginia, and to continue till her Arrival at London; and not caring to appear in it, he directed his Broker, Mr. Hart, to get the Policy made in his Name, which was accordingly done, and as she was deemed a missing Ship, the Premium was after the Rate of sixty Guineas per Cent.

The Ship failed on her Voyage from Virginia, and in forty Days after was taken by a French Privateer, about a Hundred Leagues to the Westward of the Land's End, and was detained by the Enemy six Days at Sea, and then both Ship and Cargo ransomed for 3500*l.* but Captain Miln, instead of coming directly to London, where he was bound, on Pretence of bad Weather, put into Isfracomb in Devonshire, from whence he wrote to his Owner, Mr. Dick, of London; but the said Gentleman's Affairs being then unhappily situated, and he having, prior to his Misfortunes, assigned the Ship and two Policies of Insurance thereon to Mr. Alexander Black, who apprehending by what Captain Miln wrote, that the Ship and Cargo was much damaged since the Capture, and therefore that the Value might fall short of a Sufficiency to pay the Ransom Bill, and incident Charges, he rather chose to come upon the Insurers for his Money, than to have the trouble of taking the Ship and Cargo under his Care, and therefore abandoned the whole to Captain Miln, to enable him to pay the Ransom Bill.

And thereupon Mess. Simonds of London, Merchants, Agents for the Captors, ordered Captain Miln to carry the Ship and Cargo to Bristol, there to be disposed of, instead of bringing her to London, which was accordingly done; and after paying the Captain and Sailors their Wages, amounting to upwards of 300*l.* the nett Proceeds fell short of the Ransom Bill, owing to the Damage she received in her Voyage after the Capture.

The Defendant supposes this was a Gaming Policy, though the Plaintiff insists upon its being a Reinsurance; and having applied to the Defendant, after Underwriting, for his Consent to have it declared so, he absolutely refused to admit it.

The Plaintiff seemed to lay a good deal of Stress on a supposed Indiscretion in the Captain, by paying more for the Ship and Cargo than they were worth; but had they escaped the Damages subsequent to the Ransom, they would undoubtedly have sold for more than they cost freeing, and never have been abandoned by the Owners.

The Plaintiff likewise insists, that the Ship failed from Virginia, but never arrived at London, according to the Terms of the Policy, and therefore the Insurance was due; but the Defendant, in Reply, pretends, that the Ship's putting into Isfracomb, was a Deviation, and consequently not within the Risk of the Policy; and besides, he thinks this is not to be considered as a total Loss, in the Case of Interest or no Interest, as it is a mere Wager, whether the Ship arrives or not; the Ship did arrive in England, and is now in being, and this was a Ransom at Sea, only for the Benefit of the Concerned, but the Defendant could reap no Advantage by it, whether it was prudently done or not; and it might occasionally have been more for his Interest, if the Ship had continued at Sea in the Enemy's Possession, as there was a Chance of her being re-taken, before she had been carried Infra Præsidia, and if she had, and arrived safe, there would have been no loss within the Terms of the Policy; as he presumes there is no Room to claim a Loss in Cases of a Recapture: Several Merchants, Insurers, and Brokers, being of Opinion that on a Policy, Interest or no Interest, a Capture at Sea is never considered as a total Loss, unless the Prize is afterwards carried into the Enemy's Port, and that the abandoning the Ship and Cargo by the Owners, after her Arrival, will not alter the Case.

The Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Broomsfield was insured, at and from the Leeward Islands to Bristol, Danbury v. Read, sittings after Mich. Term, 1750, at Guildhall. Interest or no Interest, free of Average Loss, and without Benefit of Salvage, and among other Underwriters, the Defendant subscribed; the Ship in her Passage Home was taken by a Spaniard, who took out four of her Men and the Captain, and put nine of his Men aboard, and ordered them to carry her to Bilboa, for which Place her Course was directed; and on her Voyage there, after having been in Possession of the Enemy thirty-nine Hours, she was re-taken by the Terrible Privateer belonging to Liverpool, and carried into Waterford, from whence some Proposals were made to the Owners of the Terrible, in Order to her Release and Permission to prosecute her intended Voyage to Bristol; but not being agreed to, she was brought to Liverpool, and after a Commission of Appraisement had issued out of the Admiralty, she and her Cargo were sold, to pay the Salvage due to the Re-captors, as by Act of Parliament.

One of her quondam Owners now bought the Whole, and afterwards parcelled her out among several Gentlemen at Bristol, who became Copartners with him, to which Place she was ordered, and where she arrived; though, as the Plaintiff supposes this could not be an Arrival agreeable to, or within the Intent and Meaning of the Policy in Question, under the Circumstances above stated, viz. of her Capture, Recapture, Appraisement, and Sale, and with an entire new Set of Owners, he thinks he is entitled to a total Loss.

The Defendant, on the contrary, urges that this was no more than a bare Capture and Recapture, which he says has never been deemed a total Loss; in Reply to which the Plaintiff affirms, that this was still more, for the Ship after being retaken, was carried into Waterford by the Privateer, kept some considerable Time there, afterwards was carried into Liverpool, and there, as above-mentioned, with the Cargo, appraised and sold to pay the Salvage, and a new Set of Owners engaged before she set out for Bristol, by which the whole Voyage was altered and lost.

And to justify this Plea, he quoted my Lord Chief Justice Lee's Sentiments, when he gave Judgment in the Case of the Salamander, viz.

"We must not judge this Cause by the Rules of the Civil Law, but we must judge it by the Rules of the Common Law, and determine on this Policy as an Agreement and Contract between the Parties, whose Intention and Meaning, when they enter into it, must govern; and although in the Civil Law, to make a Forfeiture of an Insurance there must be a total Loss of Property, that is not a Reason why it should be required in this Case, because here the Policy by the Words of it extends to Accident, where there may be no Loss of Property, as taken by Pirates, Enemies, Men of War, &c. And this his Lordship declared, as taken Notice of by Lord King, in the Case of De Paiba and Ludlow, where there was no Alteration of Property by that Capture, as Sweden was not at War with England, and yet that was deemed a total Loss; but in the present Case, here was a Capture by an "Enemy,

"Enemy; and his Lordship further said, that the Question on the Salamander, was not, Whether the Property of the Privateer was lost by this Capture, but whether the Capture was such a Peril as is insured against? The Judges were unanimously of that Opinion, and Judgement was given for the Plaintiff."

Verdict for the Defendant.

H. g. v. Gould, 837, sitting at the Guildhall, after Trinity Term, 1745. This Action was brought by the Plaintiff against the Defendant, on a Policy of Insurance, which the latter underwrote so long ago as in November, 1743, on the Ship George and Henry, Captain Bower, at and from Jamaica to London, Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage to the Insurers, with a Warranty annexed to the Policy, viz. Warranted the said Ship to sail from Jamaica, with the Fleet that came out under Convoy of the Ludlow-Castle Man of War.

The said Ship did sail accordingly, with the Fleet under the aforesaid Convoy; but in a great Storm that happened some Time after their sailing, wherein many Ships were lost, the George and Henry received so much Damage as obliged her to bear away for Charles Town in South Carolina, where she put in, and upon Examination, was found quite unfit to put to Sea again; whereupon her Cargo was taken out and laden aboard other Ships for London, and the condemned and broke up.

In Consequence of which the Plaintiff demanded his Insurance; and all the Underwriters, being satisfied of the Truth of the aforementioned Facts, paid their Lois, except the Defendant, who went so far as to settle it, and according to Custom, underwrote the Policy in the following Words and Figures,

"Adjusted the Loss on this Policy, at ninety-eight Pounds per Cent. which I do agree to pay one Month after Date, London, 5 July, 1745.

Henry Gouldney."

When this Note became due, he thought himself no Way bound by it, but insisted on fuller Proof; particularly of the Ship's sailing under Convoy, as warranted, and of her Condemnation at Carolina; but it having been always the Custom that after such Adjustments as above, with Promise of Payment at a certain Day, are made between the Insured and Insurer, no further Evidence is ever required, but the Loss constantly paid; it was upon this Account, that

The Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiff.

And my Lord Chief Justice, considering it as a Note of Hand, declared that the Plaintiff had no Occasion to enter into the Proof of the Loss.

Arnold v. Goddard, 837, sitting at the Guildhall, after Trinity Term, 1747. The Tiger, Captain Harrison, being bound from London to Gibraltar, the Plaintiff got an Insurance made on her, Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage to the Insurers; and at the Foot of the Policy there was a Warranty, that the Ship should depart with Convoy, from some Port in the Channel.

The said Ship proceeded on her Voyage as far as the Downs, and failed from thence under Convoy, as warranted; but soon after her Departure she received a very considerable Damage, which obliged her to Return to Dover Pier to refit; and after the necessary repairs were finished, she failed again, in Prosecution of her Voyage, and for her Security therein, to join the Convoy at Spithead; but having got as far as the Isle of Wight, she proved so leaky as obliged her to a second Return, and she once more arrived at Dover, to search for her Leaks.

Her Owners, on this, thought it advisable to have her surveyed by Men of Skill and Judgement, and thereupon two Ship Carpenters, and two Masters of Ships having examined her, declared that they had surveyed both Sides from Stem to Stern above the Wales, and the Tranion, after the Planks were ripped off, and found the Timbers to be very rotten, and in so bad a condition that except all her upper Works were pulled down and new built, they did not judge her

her in a fit Condition to proceed on her intended Voyage; and that if she was so repaired, the Charges would come to more than she would be worth, with all belonging to her.

The Plaintiff insists that she was a very good Ship when she set out on her Voyage, and she was only rendered otherwise by the bad Weather she had met with, which at last not only rendered her unfit for her Voyage, but occasioned her proving a total Loss to the Owners; that she would have weathered the Storm, in all Probability, unhurt, had not the Swift Privateer drove foul of her; that when her first Hurt was repaired, the Builder supposed her stronger than before the Storm; though when she was laid open, her Transom, as before-mentioned, and most of her long Timbers were found rotten, so that notwithstanding it is possible she might have performed her Voyage, yet had her Defects been known, no body would have cared to venture in her.

Mr. Burton, who fitted her out in the Thames, declares she was in very good Condition, and fit for any Voyage; though he did not examine her Timbers, but only caulked her, and mended her Outside and Floor Timbers; but it is natural to suppose, that if her Timbers were found in October, when these Repairs were done, they could not have been rotten in January, when she received her Damage.

And the Defendant grounds his Reasons for not paying the said Insurance, first, on that Part of the Policy's Contents, which asserts the Ship to be tight, staunch, and strong, and, barring future Accidents, able to go through the Voyage; whereas he supposes this Vessel not to have been so, as he thinks is clear, from the preceding Affidavit, and from the verbal Evidence of one of the Surveyors; to which he adds, in Order to make the Proof of her Defects the stronger, that on her first setting out she belonged to two Jews, who, on her Return to Dover Pier the first Time, sold her to Mr. Richard Glover, a considerable Merchant of this City, who ordered her to be repaired, and actually laid out upon her 150*l.* though as it appears, it was in a Manner thrown away, as on her second Return she was condemned, broke up, and sold in Parcels; and her Incapacity to proceed on her Voyage having been so apparent, from the foregoing Survey as to induce Mr. Glover to desire the Shippers to take their Goods out, and though he had got 300*l.* insured on her, he seemed so sensible of the deceitful Bargain with the Jews, in selling him an old rotten Ship, that he never demanded one Farthing of the said Insurance from the Underwriters.

That the Plaintiff had no Interest in the Vessel, and therefore this was only a Gaming Policy; and as it is a general Rule in all Cases of Interest or no Interest, that there must be total Loss before the Insured can recover, and the Insurer by this Policy being free from Average, or a partial Loss, it seems to be the principal Question in this Case, whether the Ship brought into Dover Pier, there condemned as being rotten, divided into Lots, and sold, will be considered in the Agreement or Wager, as a total Loss? And to enforce to the contrary, the Defendant remarks, that there was no Loss at Sea, no Capture, but a deliberate Act done by the Owner, upon a regular Survey, which occasioned her being broke up, not by Reason of the Damage she had received, but from the Rottenness of the principal Parts of her Works.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Agreeably to this Decision, Earl Mansfield in delivering his Opinion, in a late Case concerning Neutral Property, by Way of Illustration of his Argument, referred to a similar Point of Law; the Question being, Whether a Ship warranted in the Policy, to be Neutral Property, is deemed to be continued so during the whole Voyage. Which was determined in the Negative. "So, added his Lordship, by an implied Warranty every Ship must be tight, staunch and strong; but it is sufficient if she be so at the Time of her sailing. She may cease to be so in twenty-four Hours after her Departure, and yet the Underwriters will still continue liable. The Warranty is that Things stand so at the Time, not that they shall continue."

Lane and Caswell v. Jones, Colger, Jun. Sittings after 1st Term, 1745, at Guildhall.

The Plaintiffs having received Orders from Mr. John Jones, of Boston in New-England, to make some Insurance for him on the Reprisal, Captain Coven, and also on her Goods and Freight, at and from Cape Fare, in North Carolina, to Bristol; underneath the Policy for the Ship only was inserted the subsequent Words or Declaration, viz. The following Insurance is on the Ship only, valued at the Sum injured, on which Part the Defendant underwrote 100l.

The Ship sailed from Cape Fare, with a Cargo of Pitch, Tar, &c. in Prosecution of her Voyage for Bristol, and got within one Hundred and Fifty Leagues to the Westward of Cape Clear in Ireland, where she was attacked and taken by three French Ships; bound for Newfoundland, where they carried her and her Cargo to a French Port, called Carpoon, after having first taken out all her Men, and dispersed them aboard their own Ships.

On their Arrival at the aforesaid Port, the Captors took out all her Pitch, being two Hundred and Three Barrels, some Tar, what Rice was aboard, &c. and after detaining her about three or four Weeks in the said Port, the Captors offered Captain Coven his Ship, and remaining Cargo, for 9500 Livres, about 425*l.* Sterling, which he accepted, and became the Purchaser thereof on those Terms, leaving his Son as an Hostage for the Payment of the Ransom.

The Ship departed from Carpoon for Bristol, and on her Voyage met with very bad Weather, which broke her Rudder, and was forced to put into Appledore in Devonshire, the first Port they could make with Safety; where the Captain, first and second Mates, Boatswain, and a Foremast-man, made a Protest on their Oaths, giving such an Account as the preceding.

The Captain having purchased the Ship and Cargo, as before-mentioned, on his Arrival at Appledore applied to Mr. Perkins of Bristol, to whom he was consigned by Jones, the Owner, who refused to pay the Ransom-Money, or have any Thing to do with Ship or Cargo; and then the Captain came to London to the Insurers; and those on the Goods impowered and desired him to sell the Cargo for what he could, in order, that, if it produced more than the Ransom, they might have the Benefit; but the Insurers on the Ship would not intermeddle, or give any Direction about it.

The Captain returned to the Ship, and sold that and the Cargo jointly, for above 100*l.* less than the Redemption-Money; after deducting Charges; and he has been obliged to pay, or give Security for the Remainder, to procure his Son's Liberty.

The Ship being thus taken and carried into an Enemy's Port, where she was detained a considerable Time, and had great Part of her Cargo taken out by the Captors, and afterwards meeting with other Misfortunes, occasioned her producing less than the Ransom-Money, and consequently to prove a total Loss, to be made good by the Insurer.

The preceding is a State of the Case, and of the Plaintiffs' Demands, who think themselves entitled to a total Loss, as the Policy was valued; but the Defendant, on the contrary, pretends that, as Part both of the Ship and Goods were saved, he is entitled to an Average, and not subject to an entire Loss; but

The Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiffs.

Jenkins v. Mackenzie; Sittings after Mich. Term, 1749, at Guildhall.

The Plaintiff made an Insurance in London, on the Tryal Privateer, fitted out at Bristol, for two Calendar Months, where the Ship might then be, on a Cruise, or in any Port or Place whatsoever or wheresoever; the said Ship to be valued at Interest or no Interest, free of Average, and without Benefit of Salvage.

The said Privateer being fitted for a Cruise, sailed from Bristol on the 29th of May, 1746; and some Days after she was met by a French Privateer of a superior Force, who attacked, and, after a brave Defence, took her.

She had been in the Enemy's Hands about eight Hours, without their removing any of her Men or Stores, when Admiral Martin, with his whole Fleet, appearing, retook the Tryal; and, hearing of the gallant Behaviour both of the Captain and Crew; they unanimously agreed to give up their Salvage to them, and accordingly drew up and signed an Instrument for that Purpose; and the Admiral ordered her to be furnished with all Necessaries, and sent a Man of War Sloop to see her safe into Brijtol, where she arrived the latter End of June, being between three or four Weeks before the Insurance expired.

These Circumstances, the Plaintiff thinks, entitles him to a total Loss, as the Voyage was overfet, and the Policy being on Interest or not, will admit of no Average.

The Defendant agrees to the last Assertion; but, for that very Reason insists, he has no Loss to pay, as he is free from a partial one, and there can be no total one where the Ship is arrived, and, as he insists, might have been fitted out again before the limited Term of the two Months expired, had the Owners not determined the contrary; and besides, though the Ship was taken, yet as she was never carried infra Presidia of the Enemy, or was so taken as to be beyond a Possibility of a Re-capture, and having returned to Brijtol so long Time before the two Months expired as was sufficient to refit her in, the Defendant supposes that the Neglect of the Owners ought not to be imputed to the Underwriters, more especially as several Ship-Builders attended to prove there was Time enough, as several Merchants did to give their Opinion with regard to the Loss.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Plaintiff was Owner of the Ship Love and Unity, which he let out to Freight to one Bateman Humphrys, for a Voyage to Lisbon and back again; and the Freight was by Charter-party obliged to victual and man her, which he did accordingly, putting in the Master and Crew, and, embarking himself, proceeded on his Voyage, and arrived safe at Lisbon: He delivered the outward-bound Cargo, and put the Ship up for London, in Hopes of getting a Freight home; on Advice of which, the Owner and Plaintiff got her insured, at and from Lisbon to Gravesend, warranted to sail with the Convoy.

The Freight, being at Lisbon, meditated a Fraud; which iniquitous Scheme he perpetrated in the following Manner, viz. He made up Rolls of Lead about the Size of Moidores, Six and Thirties, and Three Pound Twelves, packed up, and sealed, as such Monies are usually packed up and sealed, and made Packages likewise in Imitation of those of Diamonds, and then sent them on board. He took Bills of Lading from the Captain, as for real Money and Diamonds, sent those Bills of Lading home to different Merchants, and drew considerable Sums upon the Credit of them, as well as made large Insurance, in order, as is supposed, to have lost the Ship in the Voyage home, and make the Insurers pay as though such Effects had actually been on board; but the Captain, as it is imagined, suspecting something of the Fraud before the Ship sailed, opened one or more of the Packages, and discovered the Cheat, finding nothing but Lead and Glass, instead of Gold and Diamonds; of which he giving Information to the English Consul there, the Freight ran away, and the Captain and Crew left the Ship, the Captain coming to England.

The Plaintiff, on knowing what had occurred, by the Master's Arrival, immediately applied to the Insurers, and desired them to send to Lisbon for the Ship, or furnish him with Money to go and fetch her; but they were of Opinion, and accordingly acquainted him so, that as the Ship was at the Port she was insured from, and had not proceeded on her Voyage, it was the Business of the Owner, not the Insurers, to find Master and Mariners to navigate her; the Consequence of which was, that the Ship lay there neglected till she was broke to Pieces, whereupon the Plaintiff brought this Action for the Recovery of a total Loss.

The Defendant thinks himself not obliged, as he presumes the Words in the Policy, at and from, can only mean to give the Ship Leave to stay at the Port a reasonable Time to procure a Lading, and take it in, and not to lie there till she rots, without attempting the Voyage; as this would be to make the Insurer at all Events liable, sooner or later, whereas he supposed he undertook a Risk of two or three Months only.

But,

But, I presume, the Underwriters would be obliged by the Barretty of the Master and Sailors, as I imagine the act of deserting the Ship would be construed, and therefore, abstracted from all other Arguments, would on this Point only be condemned.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

Elton v. Brogden; Sitting after Hilary Term, 1746, at Guildhall. The Plaintiff in the present Case brought an Action against the Defendant, for an Insurance this latter underwrote on the Mediterranean, at and from Bristol to Newfoundland, the Ship valued at the Sum insured, without further Proof of Interest than the Policy.

It appeared upon the Trial of this Cause, that the Plaintiffs, who were Merchants at Bristol, were Owners of the Ship in Question, and had sent her out upon a Voyage from thence to Newfoundland; that she carried with her a Letter of Marque, and in her Voyage met and took a French Ship, which she brought back to Bristol; that she soon set out again upon the same Voyage, and took another Prize, which she also returned with.

Upon the Ship's coming back, the Plaintiffs applied to the Insurers for a Return of Part of the Premium, which was ten Guineas per Cent. in Regard they had not run so much Risk as if the Ship had proceeded the whole Voyage, and the Insurers returned three per Cent.

A new Policy was made for the Voyage now under Consideration, in the same Manner and on the same Terms as the last, and the Ship set out on her Voyage, and took another Prize.—The Captain, who was the Plaintiff's only Witness, said, their Directions to him for the preceding Voyages were, that in Case he took any Thing to return with it to Bristol, or not, as he should think proper; but in this last Voyage their Directions were, if he took any Thing, to send it home by Part of the Crew, and with the other Part to proceed on the Voyage; and that he would have done so, but the Sailors, after the Capture, would not proceed on the Voyage, but would return to take Care of her to Bristol; and that all the Crew, except the Mate, Surgeon, and one other, were of this Mind, and swore if the Captain would not go back, they would not touch a Rope, nor do the least Thing towards navigating the Ship; on which the Captain was forced to comply, and set his Ship homeward, as Guard or Convoy to the Prize; that in going back to Bristol, the Mediterranean was taken, though the Prize got in safe, and for this Loss the Plaintiffs brought their Action.

On the Part of the Defendant it was insisted, that this was a Deviation for the Benefit of the Assured, and that the Insurers were therefore discharged.

It appeared on the Captain's Evidence, that the Plaintiffs had given a Part of all Prizes to the Captain and Ship's Crew; and that it was for the Care and Protection of this Prize, which made the Sailors insist to go back with her, which was the first Cause and Ground for the Deviation, and therefore, and for that the Plaintiffs were likewise themselves to be greatly benefited by the Prize, the Defendant insisted he should not pay.

But it appearing also from the Evidence of the Captain, that his Orders for this Voyage were positively to proceed, notwithstanding any Capture he should make, and that he would have done so, if he could have prevailed on the Sailors, and that his returning was wholly owing to their Refusal to proceed, and his Incapacity to go on without them, the Lord Chief Justice and the Jury were of Opinion with the Plaintiffs, and the Jury brought in their Verdict accordingly.

Pelly v. Govern and Comp. of the Royal Exch. Appr. 1 Barrow, 341, at Guildhall, 23 May, 1757. The Plaintiff being part Owner of the Ship Onslow, an East-India Ship, then lying in the Tbames, and bound on a Voyage to Ckna, and back again to London, insured it at and from London to any Ports and Places beyond the Cape of Good Hope, and back to London; free from Average under ten per Cent. upon the Body, Tackle, Apparel, Ordnance, Ammunition, Artillery, Boat, and other Furniture of and in the said Ship: Beginning the Adventure upon the said Ship, from and immediately following the Date of the Policy; and so to continue and endure until the said Ship, with all her Ordnance, Tackle, and Appatel, shall arrive as above, and hath there moored at Anchor twenty-four Hours in good Safety. And it shall be lawful for the said Ship, in this Voyage, to proceed, and sail to, and touch, and stay at any Ports or Places whatsoever, without Prejudice to this Assurance. The Perils mentioned in the Policy are the common Perils, viz. of the Seas, Men of War, Fire, Enemies, Pirates, &c. and all other Perils, Losses, and Misfortunes.

The Ship failed, and arrived in the River Canton in China, where she was to stay, to clean and refit, and for other Purposes. Upon her Arrival there, the Sails, Yards, Tackle, Cables, Rigging, Apparel, and other Furniture, were by the Captain's Order taken out of her, and put into a Ware-house or Store-house, called a Bank-Saul, built for that Purpose on a Sand-Bank, or small Island, lying in the said River, near one of the Banks called Bank-Saul Island, about 200 or 220 Yards in Length, and forty or fifty Yards in Breadth, in order to be there repaired, kept dry, and preserved till the Ship should be keeled, cleaned, and refitted. Some Time after this, a Fire accidentally broke out in the Bank-Saul belonging to a Swedish Ship, and communicated itself to another Bank-Saul, and from thence to the Bank-Saul belonging to the Onslow, and consumed the same, with all the Sails, Yards, Tackle, Cables, Rigging, Apparel, and other Furniture belonging to the Onslow, which were therein.

The Question in this Case was, Whether the Insurers were liable to answer for this Loss, so happening upon this Bank-Saul, within the Intent and Meaning of this Policy? It was stated, that it was the universal and well-known Usage, and had been so for a great Number of Years, for all European Ships which go a China Voyage, when they arrive near this Bank-Saul Island in the River, to unrig the Ship, &c. and to act in every Respect as Captain Pelly had done; and that the so doing was prudent, and for the common Benefit of the Owners of the Ship, the Insurers and Insured, and all Persons concerned in the Safety of the Ship. It was objected, that this was not a Loss by Sea, but at Land. But it was answered, that the Loss being upon a Sand-Bank in the River, and in the only Port where the English can clean and refit their Ships, it was a Loss at Sea, and the Policy expressing an Insurance from Fire, it was to all Intents within the Meaning thereof; and a Verdict was given for the Plaintiff, subject to the Opinion of the Court of King's-Bench; and Lord Mansfield afterwards delivered the Opinion of the Court, confirming the said Verdict.

Of Re-Assurance and Double Insurance.

RE-ASSURANCE, as understood by the Law of England, may be said to be a Contract, which the first Insurer enters into, in order to relieve himself from those Risks which he has incautiously undertaken; by throwing them upon other Underwriters, who are called Re-Assurers. This Species of Contract has obtained a Place in most of the commercial Systems of the trading Countries of Europe; and it is allowed by them, at this Day, to be politick and legal: And the Law of England adopted this Regulation, and permitted the Underwriters upon Policies to insure themselves against those Risks for which they had inadvertently engaged to indemnify the Insured; or where, perhaps, they had involved themselves to a greater Amount than their Ability would enable them to discharge. But though such a Contract seems perfectly fair and reasonable in itself, and might be productive of very beneficial Consequences to those concerned in this important Branch of Trade, yet, like many other useful Institutions, it was so much abused, and turned to Purposes so pernicious to a commercial Nation, and so destructive of those very Benefits it was originally intended to promote and encourage, that the Legislature was at last obliged to interpose, and by a positive Law to cut off all Opportunity of practising those Frauds in future, which were become glaring and enormous.

Accordingly it was enacted, That it should not be lawful to make Re-<sup>19</sup> Assurance, unless the Assurer should be insolvent, become a Bankrupt, or die; <sup>C. 37. S. 4.</sup> in either of which Cases, such Assurer, his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, might make Re-assurance, to the Amount before by him assured, provided it should be expressed in the Policy to be a Re-assurance.

From this Act, says Park, it is apparent that all Kinds of Re-assurance are not prohibited; but wherever such a Contract tends to the Advancement of Commerce, or to the real Benefit of an Individual, in such Cases it shall be permitted. Thus, in Case of Insolvency or Bankruptcy, it is advantageous to the Creditors in general, as well as to the Individual, that a Re-assurance should be made: For by these Means, the Fund of the Bankrupt's Estate is not diminished in Case of Loss, and the Insured has a better Security for the Payment of the Amount of his Damages, or at least a Proportion of it. If the Insurer die, it is no less necessary and beneficial to his Successors than it was in the former Case of a Bankruptcy; because it will provide Assets to satisfy the Insured, in Case a Loss should happen, and thus secure the Estate of the Deceased for the Benefit of his Heirs.

Andres v. Fletcher;
2 Term Rep.
161.

The Statute is worded in such express Terms, excluding every Species of Re-assurance, except in the three Instances of Death, Bankruptcy, or Insolvency, that a Doubt, as it should seem, could hardly be founded upon it. But as it was held, that the first Clause prohibiting Insurance, Interest or no Interest, did not extend to foreign Ships, so it was argued, that Re-assurance made here on the Ships of Foreigners did not fall within the Act. This Point, therefore, came on to be considered by the Court of King's-Bench in the Year 1787, in the Form of a Special Case; stating, that a Re-assurance was made by the Defendant on a French Vessel, first insured by a French Underwriter at Marseilles, and who, at the Time of subscribing the second Policy, was solvent. The Court were unanimously of Opinion, that this Policy of Re-assurance was void; and that every Re-assurance in this Country, either by British Subjects or Foreigners, on British or Foreign Ships, is void by the Statute, unless the first Assurer be insolvent, become a Bankrupt, or die.

But there is another Kind of Assurance, which is called Double Insurance, and which has been not unfrequently confounded with Re-assurance, by Merchants and commercial Writers; it is for this Reason, that we shall state the Difference accurately in this Place.

A Double Insurance is, where the same Man is to receive two Sums instead of one, or the same Sum twice over, for the same Loss, by reason of his having made two Insurances upon the same Goods, or the same Ship. The first Distinction between these two Contracts is, that a Re-assurance is a Contract made by the first Underwriter, his Executors or Assigns, to secure himself, or his Estate; whereas a Double Insurance is entered into by the Insured. A Re-assurance, except in the Cases provided for by the Statute, is absolutely void: A Double Insurance is not void; but still the Insured shall recover only one Satisfaction for his Loss. This requires Explanation.

Where a Man has made a Double Insurance, he may recover his Loss, against which of the Underwriters he pleases; but he can recover no more than the Amount of his Loss. This depends upon the Nature of Insurance, and the great Principles of Justice and good Faith. An Insurance being merely a Contract of Indemnity, in Case of Loss, it follows as a necessary Consequence, that a Man shall not recover more than he has lost, or receive Satisfaction greater than the Injury he has sustained. It being thus settled, that the Insured shall recover but one Satisfaction, and that in Case of a Double Insurance he may fix upon which of the Underwriters he will for the Payment of his Loss, it is a Principle of natural Justice, that the several Insurers should all of them contribute, in their several Proportions, to satisfy that Loss against which they have all insured. These Principles have been fully declared to be Law in several Cases.

First, in the Year 1763, it was ruled by Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice, and agreed to be the Courte of Practice, that upon a Double Insurance, though the Insured is not intitled to two Satisfactions, yet upon the first Action he may recover the whole Sum insured, and may leave the Defendant therein, to recover a rateable Satisfaction from the other Insurers. See 1 Blackstone's Reports, p. 416.

Rogers v. Davis; Mich. Sittings, 17 Geo. III. before Lord Mansfield.

Thus also it was determined in another Cause at Guilddhall, many Years after. It was an Action to recover on a Policy of Insurance on a Ship from Newfoundland to Dominica, and from thence to the Port of Discharge in the West-Indies. It was a valued Policy on the Ship and Freight, and on the Goods as Interest should should appear. The Ship sailed from St. John's the 17th of December, 1775, and the Plaintiff declared as for a total Loss. The Defendant underwrote for 200*l.* and paid into Court 124*l.* This Sum was paid on a Supposition, that the Underwriters on a former Policy should bear a Share of the Loss. The Plaintiff had originally insured at Liverpool, on a Voyage from Newfoundland to Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands, with an Exception of American Captures: But the Plaintiff afterwards, for the Purpose of securing himself against Captures, and having altered the Course of his Voyage, made the present Insurance. The Plaintiff insisted he was intitled to receive the full Amount of his Insurance from the Defendant, and not any Part from the Liverpool Underwriters, because the Voyage last insured was different from that insured at Liverpool. A Verdict was given for the Plaintiff for his full Demand, with Liberty for the Defendant to bring an Action against the Liverpool Underwriters, if he thought fit.

Accordingly, in the Easter Term following, an Action was brought for Money had and received to the Use of the Plaintiff, who was the Defendant in the first Cause, in order to recover a Contribution for the Loss which he had been obliged to pay. The Plaintiff had paid 200*l.* Loss, and 47*l.* Costs. The Question was, Whether the Defendant, one of the Liverpool Underwriters of the first Policy, was liable to contribute any Thing, and what? It was insisted by the Counsel for the Defendant, that the Insurance in London was an illegal Re-assurance; and therefore the Plaintiff might have made a good Defence on that Ground, as Defendant in the Action brought against him; and, if so, he could not now recover against the present Defendant. Lord Mansfield said—"The Question seems to be, whether the Insured has not two Securities for the Loss that has happened; If so, can there be a Doubt that he may bring his Action against either? It is like the Case of two common Securities for Money, where, if all the Money be recovered against one of them, he may recover a Proportion from the other. Then, this would bring it to the Question, Whether the second Insurance is void as a Re-assurance? But a Re-assurance is a Contract made by the Insurer to secure himself; and this is only a Double Insurance." Upon this Direction, the Jury found for the Plaintiff.

Of Bottomry and Respondentia-Bonds, as connected with Cases of Insurance.

BOTTOMRY is a Contract, by which the Owner of a Ship borrows Money to enable him to carry on the Voyage, and pledges the Keel or Bottom of the Ship, as a Security for the Re-payment. If the Ship be lost, the Lender also loses his whole Money; but if not, he shall receive his Principal, and the stipulated Interest, however it exceed the legal Rate.

When the Loan is not made upon the Vessel, but upon the Goods, then the Borrower only is personally bound to answer the Contract, who is said to take up Money at RESPONDENTIA. In this consists the chief Difference between Bottomry and Respondentia; in most other Respects they are the same.

The Borrower, on Respondentia, can only insure the surplus Value of the Goods, over and above the Money borrowed.

The Lender alone can make Insurance on the Money lent.

Bottomry and Respondentia may be insured, provided it be specified to be such Interest, in the Policy.

When a Person insures a Bottomry Interest, and recovers upon the Bond, he cannot also recover upon the Policy.

This was an Action on the Case, upon a Policy of Insurance made on Goods and Merchandizes, laden or to be laden on board the good Ship or Vessel called the Denbam, whereof was Master Captain William Tryon, "at and from Bengal to any Ports or Places whatsoever in the East-Indies, until her safe Arrival in London," which Policy was underwritten by the Defendant for 200*l.* for a Premium of 10*l.* per Cent. The Plaintiff declared for a total Loss. The Defendant pleaded the general Issue.

The

The Cause came on to be tried at Guilddhall, London, on the 1st of December 1762, before Lord Mansfield; It appeared in evidence, that the Defendant underwrote the Policy and received the Premium as stated in the Declaration; that before the underwriting of the Policy, the Plaintiff had lent to William Tryon, the Master of the Ship, upon the Goods then laden and to be laden on board the said Ship, on Account of the said William Tryon, the Sum of 76*l.* on Respondentia, for which a Respondentia Bond was executed by Captain Tryon and one Joseph Bussol, to the Plaintiff.

The Bond was in the common Form; and recited, "That the above named Alphonfus Glover, had, on the Day of the Date, lent and advanced to the above bounden William Tryon, the Sum of 76*l.* upon the Merchandizes and Effects laden and to be laden upon the Account of the said William Tryon, on board the good Ship or Vessel called the Denbam, of the Burthen of 409 Tons or thereabouts, now in the River Tbames, whereof he the said William Tryon is the Commander." And the Condition was, "That if the said Ship should, with all convenient Speed, proceed and sail from and out of the said River Tbames on a Voyage to any Parts or Places in the East Indies, China, Persia, or elsewhere beyond the Cape of Good Hope, and from thence should sail and return into the said River Tbames at or before the End or Expiration of thirty-six Calendar Months to be accounted from the Day of these Presents, and that, without Deviation, the Dangers and Casualties of the Seas excepted; and if the above bound William Tryon, and Joseph Bussol, or either of them, their or either of their Heirs, Executors, or Administrators should, within thirty Days next after the said Ship or Vessel should be arrived in the said River Tbames from the said Voyage, or at the End and Expiration of the said thirty-six Calendar Months, to be accounted as aforesaid, which of the said Times should first or next happen, well and truly pay, or cause to be paid, unto the said Alphonfus Glover, his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, the Sum of 100*l.* and 9*s.* of lawful Money of Great-Britain, together with 12*d.* and 4*s.* of like lawful Money by the Month, and so in Proportion for a greater or lesser Time than a Month, for all such Time and so many Months as should be elapsed and run out of the said thirty-six Months, over and above twenty Months to be accounted from the Date of these Presents; or if in the said Voyage, and within the said thirty-six Months to be accounted as aforesaid, an utter Loss of the said Ship by Fire, Enemies, Men of War, or any other Casualty should unavoidably happen; and the said William Tryon and Joseph Bussol, or either of them, their or either of their Heirs, Executors, or Administrators, should, within thirty-six Calendar Months next after such Loss, pay and satisfy unto the said Alphonfus Glover, his Executors, Administrators or Assigns, a just and proportionable Average on all Goods and Effects of the said William Tryon, carried from England on board the said Ship, and on all other Goods and Effects which the said William Tryon should acquire during the said Voyage, and should not be unavoidably lost, then the above-written Obligation to be void, or else to be and stand in full Force, "Virtue and Effect." That on the 31st of March, 1760, the said Ship Denbam was at Fort Marlborough in the East Indies, within the Limits insured; and had there and at the Time of the Loss hereafter-mentioned, divers Goods and Merchandizes on board her, which were the Property of the said William Tryon and of greater Value than all the Money he had borrowed. That on the said 31st March 1760, the said Ship, with her Lading on board her, was burnt at Fort Marlborough aforesaid; and thereby all the Goods and Merchandizes aforesaid of the said William Tryon were totally consumed and lost.

This Proof being given of the Plaintiff's Interest, the Jury found a Verdict for the Plaintiff, subject to the Opinion of the Court, "Whether, on this Evidence the Plaintiff was intitled to recover on this Policy?" For by the Stat. of 15 Geo. II. C. 37. Sect. 5. it is enacted, "That all Money to be lent on Bottomree, or at Respondentia, upon any Ships belonging to any of his Majesty's Subjects bound to or from the East Indies, shall be lent only on the Ship, or on the Merchandizes or Effects on board of such Ship; and shall be so expressed "in the Bond. And the Benefit of Salvage shall be allowed to the Lender, his

Agents

" Agents or Assigns; who alone shall have a Right to make Assurance on the Money so lent. And no Borrower of Money on Bottomree or at Respondentia shall recover more on any Assurance than the Value of his Interest on the Ship, or in the Merchandizes, or Effects on Board, exclusive of the Money so borrowed. And in Case it shall appear that the Value of his Share in the Ship, or in the Effects on board, doth not amount to the full Sum or Sums he hath borrowed, such Borrower shall be responsible to the Lender for so much of the Money borrowed, as he hath not laid out in the Ship, or Merchandizes laden thereon, with lawful Interest for the same, together with the Assurance and all other Charges thereon, in the Proportion the Money not laid out shall be to the whole Money lent; notwithstanding the Ship and Merchandizes be totally lost.

The Counsel for the Defendant insisted, that the Lender of the Money upon Respondentia has no Interest at all in the Goods that the Borrower either carries out, or may acquire in India, and consequently he cannot insure them. This was in Answer to the Counsel for the Plaintiff, who maintained, that the Lender of this Money had an Interest in the Goods, though they were the Property of the Borrower: The Lender is the Trader against the Risk of the Sea. Respondentia, they said is an Interest that may be insured, and it is not necessary to specify in the Policy, that it was a Respondentia Interest only, which is insured. But to this it was objected, on Behalf of the Defendant, that there is a settled known Form of insuring the Respondentia and the Bottomry Interest specifically and Nominatim. And the Custom of all Insurances is to mention the Thing insured precisely. The Question therefore ultimately turned upon this Point-- Whether the Words Respondentia and Bottomry must be mentioned and specified in the Policy of Insurance? And the Court declared that the Words ought to be inserted, it being the established Law and Custom of Merchants—and Lord Mansfield owned that at the Trial, and also since, upon the Arguments before the Court, he did lean to support this Insurance. And his Reason for so doing, was, that he was satisfied of its being a fair Insurance, and that the Doubt which had arisen upon it was only occasioned by a Slip in omitting to specify, as it was intended to have been done, " That this was a Respondentia Interest." This Slip however could not be rectified, for the Court after taking some Time to consider the Case, nonsuited the Plaintiff solely for the Omission. This Case being thereby rendered highly interesting to caution Merchants in Respect to the careful wording of Policies, we having given the substance, and for the entire Arguments of the eminent Counsel concerned on both Sides, we refer the Gentlemen of the Law, or Merchants having similar Cases at Issue, to Parker's Laws of Shipping and Infurance, with a Digest of adjudged Cases, 4to. Lond. 1775.

There were nine Causes in all, upon the several Insurances of the East-India Ship the Winchelsea, Captain Howe Commander; they had been tried by special Juries at different Times; the Charter-Party, bearing Date the 20th of August 1761, was according to a printed Form which had been long in Use, in which, among many other Provisions, a Stipulation was made for 20l. 3s. 4d. a Day, Demurrage, for so long a Time as she shall be detained in India, Cbina, or elsewhere within the said Limits, in the Service and Employment of the said Company; March the 25th 1762, the Ship failed; September 19th, she arrived at Bombay; November the 4th, she left Bombay the first Time; March 5th, 1763, she arrived at Calcutta. On the 28th the Presidency and Council of Bengal, entered into a new Agreement with the Captain, reciting, " that the Charter-Party, would expire on the 11th of February, 1764, but that the President and Council, finding it expedient to detain the Ship in India, and desirous of having the Time limited in the Charter-Party prolonged, &c. the Indenture therefore witnesseth, that the Captain lets the Ship to Freight for one whole Year from the said 11th of February 1764." &c.

In July 1763, the Ship arrived at Bombay, the second Time. The Beginning of 1764, she arrived at Bengal; March 19th, she left Bengal to go to Bombay; and and on the 21st, she was lost. A Copy of the new Agreement had been sent to London by the Captain, whose Letter was received and publicly read in a Coffee-House, in the Month of April, 1763; and other Insurances were made upon the Ship after this new Agreement was thus publickly known. The Underwriters insisted, that the Policies were void, because at the Time of underwriting, they were not expressly told of the new Agreement "to detain the Ship in India for a Year longer than the enlarged Time provided for by the Charter-Party, which expired on the 11th of February 1764."

The Causes were tried at first with different Success: But all the nine Verdicts were at last uniform for the Plaintiffs, the insured, against the Underwriters. The Reasons that governed the Court were, that the Underwriters are bound and presumed to know the Course of the East-India Trade, the Times of the Charter-Party, and the Destination of the India Ships, which are under the Direction of the Company, and not of the Owners. That the Charter-Party is a printed Form of a very long standing—That, besides the Liberty thereby given, to prolong the Ship's Stay for one Year, it is very common, by a new Agreement, to detain her a Year longer, for no Ship comes Home in Ballast, and the longer a Ship is kept, the more beneficial it is to the Owners. That the Words of the Policy are adapted to this Usage, being without Limitation of Time or Place, and without any Reference to the first Voyage particularly mentioned in the Charter-Party. The Terms of the Policy precisely describe the Risk, in its utmost Latitude; and necessarily extend to every Prolongation of Stay, and every Country Voyage—That any of the Defendants might have learned at the India-House all that was to be known. That the Chance of her Stay is one of the Risks Insured—Finally, that this Ship was Insured at the same Premium, after the Prolongation of her Stay in India was known.

Upon the whole, the ultimate Decision of the Court upon these Causes establishes the following Rule for the Information of Underwriters and all Persons making Insurance upon East-India Ships, "That Policies of Insurance upon East-India Ships, include the Chance of their being detained in INDIA, and "the Risk of their Country Voyages there."

Miscellaneous Observations and singular Circumstances respecting Insurances.

A Circumstance which rarely happens must be noticed in this Place; because it vacates and annuls, ab initio, the Contract of Insurance. It is this; whenever an Insurance is made on a Voyage, expressly prohibited by the common, statute, or maritime Law of the Country, the Policy is of no Effect. The principle, upon which such a Regulation is founded, is not peculiar to this Kind of Contract; for it is nothing more than that which destroys all Contracts whatsoever; that it can never be presumed that Men will make an Agreement forbidden by the Laws; but if they should attempt such a Thing, it is invalid, and will not receive the Assistance of a Court of Justice to carry it into Execution.

The most material Case upon this Point is, that of Johnson and Sutton, which came on to be argued in the Year 1779, and received the solemn Opinion of the Court of King's Bench.

Park, p. 232.
2 Edit.

It was an Action on a Policy of Insurance on Goods on board the Ship Venus, "lost or not lost, at and from London to New-York, warranted to depart with Convoy from the Channel for the Voyage." The Cause was tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall, and a Verdict was found for the Plaintiff. The Defendant obtained a Rule to shew Cause why there should not be a new Trial.

The facts, upon his Lordship's Report, appeared to be these: The Ship was cleared for Hullfax and New-York. She had Provisions on Board, which she had a License to carry to New-York, under a Proviso in the prohibitory Act of 16 Geo. III. Cap. 5. But one half of the Cargo, including the Goods which were the Subject of this Insurance, was not licenced, and was not calculated for the Hallifax Market, but for New-York. There had been a Proclamation by Sir William Howe, to allow the Entry of unlicenced Goods at New-York; and though there were Bends usually given at the Custom-house here, by which the Captain engaged to carry the Goods to Hallifax, those Bonds were afterwards cancelled, on producing a Certificate from an Officer appointed for that Purpose at New-York, declaring that they were landed there. The Commander in Chief had no Authority under the Act of Parliament to issue such Proclamation, or to permit the Exportation of unlicenced Goods. The Venus was taken in her Passage to New-York by an American Privateer. The first Section of the Statute prohibits all Commerce with the Province of New-York, amongst others, and confiscates all Ships and their Cargoes which shall be found trading, or going to, or coming from trading with them. In Section the second, there is a Proviso excepting Ships laden with Provisions for the Use of his Majesty's Garrisons or Fleets, or for the Inhabitants of any Town possessed by his Majesty's Troops, provided the Master shall produce a Licence specifying the Voyage, &c. and the Quantity and Species of Provisions; but by the same Proviso it is declared, that Goods not licenced, found on board such Ships, shall be forfeited.

After Argument upon the Motion for a new Trial, Lord Mansfield said—
 "The Whole of the Plaintiff's Case goes on an established Practice, directly against an Act of Parliament. If the Defendant did not know that the Goods were unlicenced, the Objection is fair as between the Parties. If he did, he would not deserve to be favoured. But, however that may be, it was illegal to send the Goods to New-York, and, in pari delicto, potior est conditio defendentis. It is impossible to bring this within the Cases cited, (Cases of Insurance on Ships trading contrary to the Revenue Laws of foreign Countries) because here there was a direct Contravention of the Law of the Land." The Rule for a new Trial was made absolute.

If a Ship, though neutral, be insured on a Voyage prohibited by an Embargo, Park, p. 231: laid on in Time of War by the Prince of the Country, in whose Ports the Ship happens to be, such an Insurance is also void. This depends upon the Power of an Embargo, the Right of laying on which by the Sovereign of Great-Britain, in Time of War, is undoubted; although, in a Time of Peace, it may be a different Question. The Right being admitted, it follows of Course, that any Act done in Contravention of a Proclamation of this Nature is illegal and criminal, because it is equally binding as an Act of Parliament, and a Contract founded on such illicit Proceedings is consequently void.

By the Laws of almost all Countries, the Exportation and Importation of certain Commodities are declared to be illegal: To act contrary to that Prohibition is clearly a Contempt of legal Authority, and consequently a moral Wrong. If the Act itself be illegal, the Insurance to protect such an Act must also be contrary to Law, and therefore void. Agreeably to this Principle, it seems to have been laid down by the Writers upon the Subject, as a general and universal Proposition—that an Insurance being made, although in general Terms, does not comprehend prohibited Goods; and therefore, when the Insured shall procure such Commodities to be shipped, by means of which the Ship and Cargo are confiscated, the Insurance is discharged; but they made the following Exception, the Underwriter being ignorant of it; a Distinction which our Courts of Law will not admit; and accordingly all the modern Cases have been decided against the Insured, even though the Underwriter knew the Goods were prohibited, because the Act itself being unlawful, and the Lader knowing it at the Time of the Lading, such Assurance cannot oblige the Insurer to answer the Loss; for the same is not such an Assurance as the Law supports.

ABANDONMENT, as it regards Contracts of Insurance, is understood to be a Cession and Abandonment, on the Part of the Insured to the Insurer, of his Right to all the Property that may happen to be recovered from Shipwreck, Capture, or any other Peril stated in the Policy, before he can demand a Recompence from the latter for a total Loss: For, by a total Loss, we do not always mean, that the thing insured is absolutely lost and destroyed; but that, by some of the usual Perils, it is become of so little Value as to intitle the Insured to call upon upon the Underwriter to accept of what is saved, and to pay the full Amount of his Insurance, as if a total Loss had actually happened.

System of Marine Law,
P. 143.

Indeed, the Word Abandonment conveys the Idea, that the whole Property is not lost; for it is impossible to cede or abandon that which does not exist. When the Underwriter has discharged his Insurance, the Abandonment being made, he stands in the Place of the Insured, and is intitled to all the Advantages resulting from that Situation.

The Doctrine of Abandonment has obtained a Place in the Laws of all the Maritime Nations in the World, where Insurance has been known. There is no Difference in the Definition of the Word; and they all agree, that when an Abandonment is made, it must be a total, not a partial one; that is, one Part of the Property insured shall not be retained, and the other abandoned; a Regulation certainly founded in Justice.

But, with respect to the Cases and Circumstances in which the Insured is intitled to exercise this Power, the Regulations of some foreign Countries vary from the Decisions of our Courts of Law: However, as the Principles of Abandonment in our Country have been more accurately defined than in England, and that not in the speculative Opinions of private Writers, but by the solemn and deliberate Judgement of that great modern Luminary of the British Law, Earl Mansfield, and other grave and learned Judges of the Land, we may venture to affirm, that the Decisions of our Courts, founded upon those Principles, are established upon the best and permanent Basis of Reason and Equity, consequently are to be considered as of the first Authority.

From these Decisions we may collect, that the Right to abandon must arise upon the Object of the Insured being so far defeated, that it is not worth his while to pursue it. For Instance, if the Voyage be lost, or not worth pursuing; if the Salvage be very high, suppose a Half; if further Expence be necessary; if the Insurer will not engage at all Events to bear that Expence, though it should exceed the Value, or fail of Success: Under these and many other similar Circumstances, the Insured may disentangle himself, and abandon, notwithstanding there has been a Re-capture.

It is material to observe, that the Right to abandon must depend upon the Nature of the Case at the Time of the Action brought, or at the Time of the Offer to abandon: A Determination founded on the Equity of the Contract between the Parties; because an Insurer ought never to pay less, upon a Contract of Indemnity, than the Value of the Loss, and the Insured ought never to gain more.

But it is evident, that there may be Circumstances in which it would be contrary to every Principle of Justice to suffer the Insured to abandon: Suppose a Ship to be taken, and escape immediately, which would be no Hindrance to the Voyage, or another to be captured and instantly ransomed, which would amount only to a partial Loss; in these Cases, the Insured could not be allowed to demand a Recompence for a total Loss.

Ord. of Lewis
XIV. Insurance, Art. 48.

In many of the Maritime Countries on the Continent of Europe, the Time, within which the Abandonment must be made, is fixed by positive Regulations. Thus, in France, it is ordained, that all Cessions or Abandonments, as well as Demands in Virtue of the Policy, shall be made as follows: In six Weeks, for Losses happening on the Coasts of the Country where the Insurance was made: In three Months, in other Provinces of the Kingdom: In four Months, on the Coast of Holland, Flanders, and England: In a Year, in Spain, Italy, Portugal, Barbary, Muscovy, Norway; and in two Years, for the Coasts of America, the Brazils, Guinea, and other distant Countries. When these Terms are elapsed, the Demands of the Assured shall not afterwards be admitted.

Part, p. 172.

In the Law of England, till lately, we had no Limitation of Time, with respect to Abandonment. But in a very modern Decision it has been held, by the Court of King's-Bench, that as soon as the Insured receive Accounts of such a Loss as intitles them to abandon, they must, in the first Instance, make their Election whether they will abandon or not; and, if they abandon, they must give the Underwriters Notice in a reasonable Time, otherwise they forego their Right to abandon, and can never afterwards recover for a total Loss.

But if the Insured, hearing that his Ship is much disabled, and has put into Port to repair, expresses his Desire to the Underwriters to abandon, and be dissuaded from it by them, and they order the Repairs to be made, they are liable to the Insured for all the subsequent Damage occasioned by that Refusal, though it should amount to the whole Sum insured: Because the Reason why Notice of Abandonment is deemed necessary is, to prevent Surprize, or Fraud, upon the Underwriter; but, in the Case put, they have, by their own Act, superseeded the Necessity of Notice.

It is of the utmost Consequence to all Persons concerned in Insurances in England to know, &c. where the Sentences of foreign Courts, in Causes of Insurance, have not differed materially from our Laws, or from the Law and Custom of Merchants, the Decision of the foreign Judicatures has been held conclusive in our own, in numerous Cases tried before Lord Mansfield; and others which, upon Motions for new Trials, received the solemn Decision of all the Judges of the Court of King's-Bench.

Nor is this all; for, even where the Laws of other Countries differ from those of England, if the Contract of Insurance regards a Ship belonging to such Countries, though the Underwriter be a British Subject, the Decision in our Courts will follow that of the foreign Tribunal, if any has been had, or will proceed upon the Ground of established Usage amongst Merchants in those Countries. This very lately appeared in a Cause tried in the King's-Bench at Guildhall, before Lord Kenyon, the present Chief Justice.

It was an Action on a Policy of Insurance upon a Respondentia Bond on Ship Walspole v. Ever and Goods, at and from B. to C. The Ship was Danish, and an Average Loss was sustained upon the Goods to the Amount of 6l. 15s. per Cent. The Plaintiff, as Holder of a Respondentia Bond, had been called upon to contribute; and now brought his Action against the English Underwriters for the Amount of that Contribution. Sittings after Trin. Term, 1789.

Lord Chief Justice Kenyon said—"By the Laws of England, a Holder upon Respondentia is not liable to Average Losses; but is intitled to receive the whole Sum advanced, provided the Ship and Cargo arrive at the Port of Destination. The Plaintiff contends, that as, by the Laws of Denmark, such Holders upon Respondentia are liable to Average, and bound to contribute according to the Amount of their Interest, the Insurer must answer to them. The Danish Consul has proved that he received a Judgement of the Court of Copenhagen, the decretal Part of which proves the Law of Denmark to be as the Plaintiff has stated it. The Opinions of several Men of Eminence in that Country have been offered on each Side; but I reject them, because the solemn Decision of a Court of competent Jurisdiction is of much greater Weight than the Opinions of Advocates, however eminent, or even than the extra-judicial Opinions of the most able Judges. It seems as if, in this Case, the Underwriters were bound by the Law of the Country, to which the Contract relates." Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The above is not the only Case in which the Insurers have been held liable to indemnify; the Insured having been obliged, by the Law of a foreign Country, to pay a larger Sum than by the Laws of England could have been demanded; and, in the following Case, the learned Judge seems to have relied chiefly on the Usage of Merchants which had been proved.

It was an Action on a Policy, upon a Cargo of Fish from Newfoundland to Newman v. Cazali any Port of Spain, Portugal, or Italy. The Ship met with bad Weather, and put into Alicant and Leghorn to repair. The Captain, being Owner, presented a Petition to the Commercial Court of Pisa to adjust the general Average, as he had put in for the general Benefit of all concerned. The Court, according to its usual Course, which appears to be a very extraordinary one, adjusted the Loss by charging the Cargo at its full Value; but the Ship only at one Half, and the Freight at one Third: And they also charged, as a Part of the general Average, the Seamen's Wages and Provisions, while in Port. The Defendant, as Underwriter, had paid into Court as much as would cover the Average, if adjusted according to the Memorandum in the Policy, and the Law and Usage of England. The Question was, Whether the Plaintiff having been compelled to pay beyond that Sum, according to the Calculation of the Sentence of the Court of Pisa, it Sittings at Guildhall, after Hill, 1789.

was conclusive upon the Defendant, and the Plaintiff was intitled to recover his Average by the same Standard. The Plaintiff called several Brokers, who said, that in repeated Instances they had adjusted Averages under similar Sentences of the Court of Pisa; and the Underwriters, though with Reluctance, had always paid them.

Mr. Justice Buller—"On the general Law, the Plaintiff would fail; but in all Matters of Trade, Usage is a sacred Thing. I do not like these foreign Settlements of Average, which make Underwriters liable for more than the Standard of English Law. But if you are satisfied it has been the Usage, upon the Evidence given, it ought not to be shaken." The Plaintiff had a Verdict accordingly.

OF A RETURN OF PREMIUM it is needless to cite any Cases, as the Principle, upon which the Whole of this Doctrine depends, is simple and plain, admitting of no Doubt or Ambiguity. The Risk or Peril is the Consideration for which the Premium is paid: If the Risk be not run, the Consideration for the Premium fails; and Equity implies a Condition, that the Insurer shall not receive the Price of running a Risk, if, in Fact, he runs none. It is just like the Contract of Bargain and Sale; for if the Thing sold be not delivered, the Party who agreed to buy is not liable to pay. Thus, to whatever Cause it be owing that the Risk is not run, as the Money was put into the Hands of the Insurer merely for the Risk of indemnifying the Insured, the Purpose having failed, he cannot have a Right to retain the Sum so deposited for a special Cause. The Causes tried and decided upon this Principle are accurately reported by Park, p. 368, and sequel.

The two following Cases are of so singular a Nature, that they cannot properly be classed under any general Rule, or common Instances.

Policy of Insurance, to warrant a Ship for twelve Months. The Ship did not perish within the Time of twelve Months, accounted according to the Solar Months of January, February, &c. but within twelve Lunar Months of twenty-eight Days to the Month; and it was resolved, that the Policy was not forfeited.

After citing a Clause in the Statute of 6 Geo. I. C. 18, which prohibits any other Society or Partnership whatsoever from making Insurances, or lending Money on Bottomry, except the two Corporations established by that Act, viz. the Royal Exchange and the London Assurance Offices, our Author relates, that upon this Clause, a Question lately arose at Guildhall.

Sullivan v.
Green et al.
Sittings after
East. Term,
1789.

This was an Action brought against the Defendant, to recover a Sum of Money received by him from one Brijlow to the Plaintiff's Use. The Plaintiff was an Underwriter, and the Defendant was a Broker; and a Loss having happened upon a Policy underwritten by the Plaintiff, he had been obliged to pay it: But Brijlow, having agreed to take Half the Plaintiff's Risk, had paid his Moiety of the Loss into the Hands of the Defendant; to recover it from whom this Action was brought.

Lord Chief Justice Kenyon—"I am of Opinion that the Plaintiff cannot recover; for this is clearly a Partnership within the Act of Parliament. If a single Name appears upon the Policy, as in this Case, the Insurer shall never be allowed if a Loss happen, to defeat a bonâ Fide Insurance, by saying to an innocent Person, there was a secret Partnership between another and myself, and therefore the Policy is void. But here, the Plaintiff is himself the Underwriter, who comes to enforce an illegal Contract: It is a Partnership pro hac Vice; and this Party cannot apply to a Court of Justice to enforce a Contract founded in a Breach of the Law."

No Motion was ever made to set aside the Non-suit: But, two or three Days after, Lord Kenyon took Occasion to mention to the Counsellors at the Bar, that he had stated the Case to the other Judges of the Court of King's-Bench, who were unanimously of the same Opinion with his Lordship.

To the great Variety of new Cases of Insurance introduced in the present Edition, we have only to add the following just Observations from Weslett's Complete Digest of the Theory, Laws, and Practice of Insurance, a Work of great Merit, Fol. London. 1781:—"As there are in England but very few express Laws and Regulations

"concerning

“ concerning Insurance, nor any distinct Court, Commissioners, or other Persons, appointed particularly, as in other Countries, for the Decision and Adjustment of Losses, Average, Salvages, Recaptures, and the almost infinite Variety of Matters and Differences that arise therefrom, the only Resort in Cases of Dispute being to our common Law Courts, with enormous Expence, Trouble, and Uncertainty; it is the more needful for an Insurer to be well acquainted with Commercial and Maritime Affairs in general, and the Doctrines, Laws, Usages, and Practice concerning them, as well abroad as at home; since all those various and sometimes intricate Transactions, Accounts, Documents, &c. which occur amongst Merchants, Mariners, and other Persons in the Course of foreign Traffick; and other Events may occasionally come under his Cognizance, especially in Time of War, and require the Exercise of a suitable Judgment upon them; which, if he is unable to do for himself, he must necessarily be subject to, and his Fortune chiefly depend upon the Deceit, Imposition, and Fraud, or at least the Ignorance of many of the Persons he has to deal with.”

Having mentioned the various Branches of Insurance engaged in by our Under-writers, it is proper in this Place to give the Copy of a Policy on Goods, those on Ships and Goods, or Ships only, and this again either outwards or homewards, or out and home, or to one certain Port, only differing in the aforesaid Circumstances.

IN the Name of God, Amen.

As well in his own Name, as for and in the Name and Names of all and every other Person or Persons to whom the same doth, may, or shall appertain, in Part or in all, doth make Assurance, and causeth himself and them, and every of them to be insured, lost or not lost, at or from upon any Kind of Goods and Merchandizes whatsoever, laden or to be laden aboard the good Ship or Vessel, called the whereof is Master, under God, for this present Voyage, or whosoever else shall go for Master in the said Ship, or by whatsoever other Name or Names the same Ship, or the Master thereof, is or shall be named or called; beginning the Adventure upon the said Goods and Merchandizes, from, and immediately following the Lading thereof aboard the said Ship and so shall continue and endure, until the said Ship, with the said Goods and Merchandizes whatsoever, shall be arrived at and the same there safely landed; and it shall be lawful for the said Ship, in this Voyage, to stop and stay at any Port or Places whatsoever without Prejudice to this Insurance; the said Goods and Merchandises, by Agreement, are and shall be valued at without further Account to be given by the Assured for the same. Touching the Adventures and Perils which we the Assurers are contented to bear, and do take upon us in this Voyage; they are of the Seas, Men of War, Fire, Enemies, Pirates, Rovers, Thieves, Jettisons, Letters of Mart and Counter Mart, Surprisals, Taking at Sea, Arrest, Restraint, and Detinments of all Kings, Princes, and People, of what Nation, Condition, or Quality soever; Barretty of the Master and Mariners, and of all other Perils, Losses, and Misfortunes, that have or shall come to the Hurt, Detriment or Damage of the said Goods and Merchandizes, or any Part thereof. And in Case of any Loss or Misfortune, it shall be lawful to the Assured, their Factors, Servants, and Assigns, to sue, labour, and travel for, in and about the Defence, Safe-guard, and Recovery of the said Goods and Merchandizes, or any Part thereof, without Prejudice to this Insurance; to the Charges whereof we the Assurers will contribute each one according to the Rate and Quantity of his Sum herein insured. And it is agreed by us the Insurers, that this Writing or Policy of Assurance shall be of as much Force and Effect as the surest Writing or Policy of Assurance heretofore made in Lombard-Street, or in the Royal Exchange, or elsewhere in London. And so we the Assurers are contented, and do hereby promise and bind ourselves, each one for his own Part, our Heirs, Executors, and Goods, to the Assured, their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, for the true Performance of the the Premises, confessing ourselves paid the Consideration due unto us for this Assurance by the Assured at and after the Rate of per Cent. And in Case of Loss, which God forbid, the Assureds to abate Pounds per Cent.

In Witness whereof, we the Assurers have subscribed our Names and Sums assured in London.

Part. Appen.
No. 1.

N, B, Corn, Fish, Salt, Fruit, Flour, and Seed, are warranted free from Average, unless general, or the Ship be stranded. Sugar, Tobacco, Flax, Hemp, Hides, and Skins, are warranted free from Average, under five Pounds per Cent. And all other Goods, also the Ship and Freight are warranted free from Average under three per Cent., unless general, or the Ship be stranded.

The written Clauses or Words inserted in the usual printed forms of Policies, in Order to express the Meaning of the Parties to the Contract, which from some particular Circumstances, the printed form may not sufficiently explain, are equally binding with the printed Clauses, and in many Cases may control them.

Of Foreign Insurances.

INSURANCES made in France and Holland, being the only Countries where any Thing considerable is transacted in this Species of Business, out of our own, I shall begin with the latter, as superior to the other in Point of Commerce, and more largely concerned with the Merchants of Great-Britain than any other maritime Power on the Continent of Europe.

It is generally believed, and by many affirmed, that more Insurances are made at Amsterdam than with us, or indeed in any other Part of the World; their extensive Commerce by Sea, and the extraordinary Number of Vessels continually sailing from thence, naturally occasions many to follow the Practice of insuring; but what has yet augmented this Business, and multiplied the Policies of Insurance almost to Infinity, has been that Honour and Integrity with which their Underwriters were formerly characterized, as their Policies were then only subscribed by Men of large Fortunes; but whether great Losses, or a subsidizing of that Courage, before so conspicuous in the very small Number of the Rich, then constituting the Body of Underwriters, for Mr. Savary and Mr. Ricard say, they did not exceed fifty or sixty, occasioned their withdrawing from Business, I shall not pretend to determine; but it is certain, their Number in the present Century, has greatly increased, and their Chicaneries are at least equal to those of their Neighbours and Contemporaries; and had they not admitted Business on worse Terms than here, that is at lower Premiums, there would not have been that Recourse to their City, as the many Failures amongst the Insurers plainly demonstrated they had changed their set, and that many of less Credit and Fortune were admitted to subscribe, than the wealthy few abovementioned.

The first Ordinance in that City, which regulated the Policies of Insurance, was about the End of the sixteenth Century; it was originally digested into thirty-six Articles, but many of these have since been reformed, new-modelled, or explained by twelve subsequent Ordinances, of which the principal ones are those of the Years 1600, 1601, 1606, 1607, 1614, 1626, and 1688, and it is by this last, that the Policies of Insurance may be said to remain fixed, though some few Alterations have been made since.

274.

But Mons. Jean Pierre Ricard, in his Book, Le Negoce d'Amsterdam, having given an Account of the Articles made at the several Times abovementioned, with his Remarks on them; I shall translate as much of them as I judge may be worth my Reader's Regard, and in doing it shall follow the Author's Method.

No. I.

1st Article, "Declares all Contracts of Insurance null and void, which are made in this City contrary to Law, by any Stipulations, Conditions, or Words they shall contain."

Remark.

Remark. This Article is not always strictly followed; for many Insurances are made which are not exactly conformable to the Ordinance, and others directly contrary to it, as will be seen in the following Remarks; but when this happens, a Clause should be inserted in the Policy, by which the Insurers expressly renounce all the Laws, Ordinances, and Pleas, which are against such an Insurance; and in Case of a Loss, and that the Insurers will not settle it amicably, the Assured may cite them before the Sheriffs, or the Court of Holland, to bring them to Reason, and not before the Chamber of Assurances, because the Renunciation made by the Insurers includes an Exclusion from this Court, which can only determine in Conformity with the Ordinance.

2d Article, " Prohibits the making Insurance on Goods for more than  $\frac{1}{2}$  of their clear Cost abroad, when it does not exceed 12000 Guilders; but permits the Surplus of that Sum to be insured, provided the Assured runs the Risk of the  $\frac{1}{10}$  of the 12000 Guilders."

Remark. This Article is very rarely observed, and there is hardly any one Policy which does not contain these Words, And the Assured may cause himself to be insured the Whole, without risking the Tenth, we taking on us the entire Value, even with the Premium included; and I do not see what Occasion the Assured has to run a Risk of the Tenth, as the Difference of 1200 Guilders on an Insurance of 30 or 40,000 is but trifling to the Underwriters: However, notwithstanding it is so inserted in the Policy, that the Whole is insured, yet if the Insurer disputes Payment in Case of a Loss, and is cited before the Commissioners, they will have no Regard to this Clause; but, on finding that the Assured has not run the Risk of the Tenth of the 12000 Guilders, they will make him run it, by obliging him to return the Premium of what exceeds the Tenth, or by adding it to that Part of the Loss, which the Assured ought to bear.

3d Article ordains, " That the Policies contain the Name of the Ship and of the Captain, that of the Places where she is to lade, and go to, under Penalty of the Policy's being void, if the Fault is in the Assured; but if it comes from the Broker he shall be answerable for it."

Remark. It is very necessary to observe this Article, in all its Contents nicely, because the Assured not only have an Opening to deceive the Insurers by wilfully omitting the Name of Ship or Master in the Policy, but many Disputes may happen, and the Underwriters may, by having already insured a very large Sum on the same Ship, be rendered scrupulous of signing such Policies.

However, there are Cases where it is impossible to know upon what Vessel there will be an Interest, by Reason of the Distance of the Place from whence Goods and Effects are expected; as, for Example, from Curacao, Surinam, Archangel, or other remote Parts, from whence Effects, and the Advice of their Lading, are frequently received together; and as it would be very hard for a Merchant, who expects Effects from those Parts, to find that he is unable to get himself insured, only for Want of the Name of the Ship and Captain, it may be remedied by inserting in the Policy, that the Insurance is on Goods, to be laden by such a one, on one of the first Ships that shall come from thence.

The Spaniards frequently get insured at Amsterdam, on any Vessel or Vessels which have laded Goods at La Vera Cruz, or elsewhere in the Spanish West-Indies, to their Address; but there is found such Deceit in these Contracts, by the Concerned sending false Declarations, that they had not received any Thing upon any Ship of the Flota or Flotilla when they had, and returning the Premium, as has made the greatest Part of the Insurers resolve not to underwrite to those Gentlemen, but on Condition to make no Returns, although the Assured should have no Interest in the Fleet.

4th Article ordains, " That the Insurance on Goods shall begin from the Moment they are brought on the Key, to be carried on board the Ship destined to transport them, and shall endure till they are arrived at the Place of their Consignment, and are unladed in Safety, and free from Damage."

Remark. There are some who imagine they have no Right to be insured till the Goods are laded, and Bills of Lading signed; and others, who receiving Advice from abroad, of Freight being taken on a Ship and Captain named, believe they ought not to insure, till they receive Advice of the Departure of the Ship, or at least till they have got the Bill of Lading and Invoice, in which they greatly err; for, besides that the Policy expresses on Goods laden or to be laden, the Article before-mentioned seems to suppose the Insurance made before the embarking; but it is not to be imagined, that if the Merchandize has suffered in going on board, and is afterwards insured, that the Insurer is obliged to pay the Damage, on Pretext that it is said in the Policy, that the Insurance shall commence from the Moment that the Goods are upon the Key, &c. This would be very unjust, therefore it ought to be understood only, when the Assurance is made before the Goods are taken out of the Warehouse, or before they are sent aboard; for besides the Risk which the Assured runs in shipping them, which is greater in some Places than in others, he likewise exposes himself to pay a higher Premium than if he had insured sooner, because the more Insurances there are made on a Ship, the higher Premiums the Insurers demand; and it is further to be remarked on this Article, that although the Risk is not finished till the Goods are unladen and safe, that, as at Amsterdam, they are frequently left in the Lighters for five or six Days, or more, the Insurers are not obliged for any Damage that may happen to them, only for the first Day.

5th Article says, "That if in a Year and a Day, after the Insurance made, or after the Ship's Departure, if it is for any Part of Europe or Barbary, there is no News of her at the Place from whence she sailed, nor at that she was bound to, she shall be esteemed as lost, and the Assured may demand Payment from the Insurers in three Months; but for Places more distant, the Term shall be that of two Years."

Remark. It too often happens that Ships founder at Sea, so that no Person escapes to tell the Story, and our Underwriters do not postpone Payment according to the preceding Terms, as this would oblige them to a total Loss, that is Cent. per Cent. but in order to lessen it something, when they see the Assured has no Advice of the Ship, and when she stays two or three times longer than she should, so that there is no Room to suppose her safe, they themselves endeavour to agree with the Assured, and commonly pay ninety-six per Cent. on such Occasions.

6th Article declares, "Those Assurances to be null and invalid which are made three Months after the Departure of the Ship destined for the Coast of Europe, Barbary, and the adjacent Parts, or those made in six Months after the Ship's Departure for more distant Places, if the Assured does not advertise the Insurers thereof, and if he does not get himself insured, on good and bad News; that is, lost or not lost."

Remark. That as the Articles 20 and 21 have an Affinity with the foregoing, I shall remark on them all together.

20th Article imports, "That it is permitted to insure Ships, Merchandize, and Effects that are lost, pillaged, or damaged, even after the Loss, &c. has happened, provided that the Assured has no Advice of the Loss, &c."

21st Article says, "That the Assured shall be supposed to have known of the Loss, &c. if he has omitted to make Insurance, till after he can have received Advice either by Land or Sea, counting three Leagues of Way, or two Hours of Time; and that then the Assurance shall be void, notwithstanding, or maugre, all the Proofs of Ignorance the Assured may be able to give; unless he is insured on good or bad News, and that he can swear that when he made the Insurance he had not the least Account of the Loss, &c."

Remark. By these three Articles, which seem to be made in Favour of the Insurers, they are notwithstanding exposed sometimes to the Cheats of People, who make no Conscience of a false Oath, provided it brings Gain, and therefore the Insurers seldom underwrite in these Cases to unknown Persons, or at least in Prudence they should not; and what may be gathered from the said third Article, is, that the Ignorance of the Assured, in Regard of the Ship, or touching the good or bad Advices concerning her, are the two only Conditions which can render the Insurance valid, and therefore the Oath is very necessarily ordained in these Cases; for what would be more unjust than to insure a Thing known to be lost, which could never enter the Thoughts of an honest Man; but as these Articles permit an Insurance to be made, whilst the Loss, Pillage, or Damage remains unknown, consequently it may be done on a Vessel suspected to be lost after a Storm, or feared to be taken by an Enemy, from some confused flying Reports about her, though without learning any Thing certain; for Example, suppose a Storm to happen, with many Ships in the Texas, and that several of them were seen to drive, and, among others, such and such a one, and that it is feared they may be lost; in which Case, the Concerned, knowing that there will at least be large Averages, and that there is no Room to suspect a total Loss, if no Advice is received in two or three Days; yet as this is uncertain, and cannot possibly be known, the interested Person may make Insurance, if he can find those that will underwrite, after the Advices above-mentioned, on Payment of a Premium proportionable to the Risk: It is the same with Respect to a Ship which is said to be taken by the Enemy, though the Report is unconfirmed, and all other similar Cases, in which the Insurance will stand good, provided it is inserted in the Policy the last News there was of the Vessel, and that the Insurance is upon good and bad Advices, of which the Assured can swear that he knows of no others at the Time of making the said Insurance.

7th Article declares, "That the Insurance shall be null, if the Assured makes his Ship to touch at any other Ports than those mentioned in the Policy; but if this is done by the Master, either through Choice or Necessity, without the Assured's Order, it shall not hurt the Insurance."

Remark. This Article, though so very clear as to explain itself, is notwithstanding very often the Occasion of many Disputes between the Assurers and Assured; the former endeavouring to make the first Part of it serve as a just Plea for Non-payment of a Loss or Average happening in any Port not mentioned in the Policy, if a Declaration of the Captain and Crew is not very express, that he was obliged to go into it through Necessity; in which Case the Insurers have nothing to reply, because the Affidavit of the Master and his Men is credited, and the Underwriters are condemned without the least Difficulty; but as it frequently happens that a Ship goes into some Port by Order of the Owner, or principal Freighter, unknown to the other Ladgers, it is very important to remark the Sense of this Article, and to distinguish him who knew that the Vessel would touch at certain Ports, from him who laded only for one, and did not know that she was to call at others: For Example, Ships are daily set up at Amsterdam for Bordeaux, and the Merchants lade aboard them, without inquiring or imagining that they are to stay at any Place by the Way, and make their Insurances directly for that Place; nevertheless it happens that some one has a considerable Parcel of Goods to ship for Rochelle, and not finding a Ship ready to depart for that Port, he agrees with the Master lading for Bordeaux to take his Goods for Rochelle, and obliges him to deliver them before he proceeds to Bordeaux; if this is transacted without the Knowledge of him who makes Insurance for Bordeaux only, and any Mischance happens to the Ship at Rochelle, this shall not occasion a Nullity in the Policy of him who was ignorant that the Vessel must call at the latter; but there will be one in the Policy of an Owner of such a Ship, who has got Insurance made on her directly for Bordeaux; because, according to this Article, he could not direct her going into any other Port but that mentioned in the Policy, and that it is supposed he knew, when he made his Assurance, that the Ship was to touch at Rochelle; for if he did not know it till after his Policy was signed, he ought to have got a Clause inserted therein, that the Ship should have Liberty to call there.

It every Day happens, that Vessels which are lading for Marseilles, Genoa, and Leghorn, take in Goods for Cadix, Seville, Barcelona, and other Ports in their Way, without its being known to those who shipped for the first three Places, and who only got their Interest insured to that of one of them, where the Merchandize went consigned, without inserting in the Policy, a Liberty for the Ship to touch by the Way at the aforesaid Ports, and the Insurers do not use to make any Dispute about it with the Shippers who were ignorant of it, because they know well enough that it is customary for such Ships to take in Merchandize for different Places; but an Owner who insures, for Example, from Amsterdam to Leghorn, without putting in the Policy, that the Ship may touch at, or go into all Ports that are in her Route, his Insurance shall be discharged, if the Vessel is lost in any one of the Ports in which he shall have entered, &c.

8th Article, "Limits the Assured to six Months for abandoning any Ship or Effects to the Insurers, which some foreign Power has stopped and retains, when the Retention is on the Coasts, or within the Limits of Europe or Barbary; and one Year if it is in any more remote Place, counting from the Day that the Brokers shall have advertised the Insurers thereof, by Directions from the Assured; and it permits these latter, within the Times so limited, to take their Precautions against the Underwriters, by Securities, Pawns, or otherwise, as they shall think proper; permitting them besides, or their Agents, to lade the Merchandize reclaimed and released, upon other Ships, to be carried to the Place they were designed for; and if the Assured omit it, the Insurers may do it; in which Case, these latter shall only be obliged to defray the Expence of Lading and Freight, and to pay for any Damage the Goods may have suffered, during their Embargo."

9th Article, makes an Exception in the before-mentioned Time, in Respect of perishable Commodities, such as Wines, Fruits, Grains, &c. in Regard of which, "The Assured shall not be obliged to wait the Expiration of the said six Months, but may endeavour to obtain their Release in the Manner he deems best, though he must make the Insurers acquainted with the Condition the Merchandize is in."

Remark. In the two preceding Cases of a Detention or an Arrest, the Insurers leave the Care of reclaiming what shall be so stopped to the Assured: But these should not fail to be well and duly authorized by the Insurers, which Authorization is invalid, except made by the Huissier, an Officer, of the Chamber of Insurances; and therefore it imports the Assured not to neglect having it made by him that may effectually serve them, in Case the Insurers should make any Wrangling about the Charges of reclaiming, &c. as these commonly are exorbitant, and frequently occasion great Disputes; to avoid which the Assured should absolutely do nothing without the Consent of the Underwriters; and when the Sum is pretty heavy, it will be advisable to engage one or two of them to act in Concert with the Assured, at least in obtaining the Release of the embargoed Effects.

If the Merchandizes reclaimed are released, and laden on some other Ship, in order to finish the Voyage, the Assured should not fail to make the Insurers declare it by a Clause at the Bottom of the Policy, by which they acknowledge to be advised that the Ship, upon which the Merchandize insured was laden, having been embargoed, it was shipped on board such other Vessel, and that they continued the same Risk, as they ran on the first Ship, to their destined Port.

10th Article, "Prohibits the making Insurance on the Body of the Ship, Guns, and warlike Stores, for above two Thirds of their Value, and to insure in any Manner whatsoever the Freight, Stores, Powder, Balls, Victuals, or such like consumable Things."

Remark. This Article was too burthensome to Owners of Ships, in obliging them not to insure above 24000 Guilders, upon an Interest of more than 35 or 36000; so that their Risks were reduced to an eighth Part of the Value of Ships, by the first Article of the Ordinance of the 26th of January, 1693, as will be seen hereafter.

11th Article, "Prohibits Masters of Ships, Mates, Sailors, Men at Arms, and all others who serve aboard, to insure their Salaries, or any Thing that belongs to them, except they have Goods with them above the Import of their Wages."

Remark. This Article is founded on substantial Reasons, of which the principal is, as I imagine, that as the Owners are not obliged to pay the Mariners after loosing their Ship, these latter commonly endeavour all they can to save her, when in Danger, in Order to secure their Pay; and it is certain that they would not act on such Occasions with so much Zeal, if their Wages were insured.

12th and 13th Articles, "Limits the Time in which the Assured are obliged to bring their Action of Damage or Average against the Insurers, viz. a Year and a Half, if the Loss or Damage has happened on the Coasts of Europe or Barbary, and in three Years, if it has happened in more distant Regions; to be reckoned from the Time of the Ship's entire Discharge, or from the Time in which the Loss has happened."

Remark. The Case very seldom happens, that the Assured wait so long a Time to demand their Loss or Average from the Insurers or at least to let them know that they have one to settle, which is sufficient for commencing an Action against them in Case of a Refusal, even when they cannot know till a long Time after, what the said Loss or Average will amount to.

14th Article says, "That all the preceding Orders are to be understood for Assurances made on every Thing that goes by Sea, &c."

15th Article, "Regards the Insurances made on Goods, carried by Land, or Rivers, the which the Merchants may contract among themselves, as they shall think proper, except that the Assured shall run the Risk of the  $\frac{1}{2}$  as in the Second Article of this Ordinance, and that the Carters and Waggoners shall not inture above Half the Value of their Carts, Waggon, or Horses, and Nothing of their Wages."

Remark. There are very few of these Sorts of Insurances made at Amsterdam, therefore I shall not make any Observations on this, or the subsequent Article 16, which is only "To allow the Assured a Year's Time to demand from the Insurers, the Recovery of the Loss or Average which has happened to the Goods, going by Land or River."

17th Article ordains, "That if Insurance is made upon Grains, Fruits, Wines, Oils, Salt, Herrings, Sugar, Quicksilver, Tallow, Butter, Cheese, Hops, Syrup, Honey, seeds round or flat, and such like Things as are subject to Corruption: upon Ammunition, and upon Silver coined and uncoined; they shall be specified in the Policy, upon Penalty of its being otherwise null and void."

Remark. The Alteration of this Article will be seen in what follows, at Number 3.

18th Article, "Permits the contracting Parties in Assurances, to make them before Notaries, Registers, or other publick Officers, or by private Notes of particular Persons, or before creditable Witnesses."

Remark. As this Ordinance was made on the 31st of January 1598, it appears that but few Insurances were made then, and they were permitted to be under a private Firm, and upon common Paper; but the Number of them having considerably increased since that Time, it was necessary, as will be seen in the Sequel, to ordain a set Form, and to have it marked by the Secretary of the Chamber. For a long time, all Sorts of Policies were drawn up indifferently, under the twelve Stiver Seals; but by the Regulation made by the States of Holland and West-Frisland, upon the Duty of the final Seal, of the 28th of August, 1716, in the 58th Article, "It is ordained, that all the Policies for Sums under 500 Guilders, shall for the future be made under the twelve Stiver Seals; those of 500 Guilders, and less than 10,000, under the twenty-four Stiver Seals; and those of 10,000 and upwards, under the forty-eight Stiver Seals."

But as it would be imprudent in the Brokers to hazard a sealed Policy, when their Employers order them to get a Sum insured at a limited Price, or on such Conditions, as they doubt will not be complied with, they have small Policies on common Paper, which they often get the Underwriters to sign, and afterwards to transfer their Firms to such as are ordained by Law, when the Insurance is completed.

19th Article, "Orders all those concerned in Policies, to make them out according to the Ordinance, and to keep a Copy, Verbatim, of all the Hand-writing therein.

Remark. This is so much the more necessary, as the Assured may happen to tear or lose a Policy, or some Knave who has got himself insured, may alter something therein to his Benefit, and the Disadvantage of the Insurers; in which Case, and in other similar ones, the Copy which the Broker keeps, may serve for a Proof and Testimonial.

I have already noticed the Articles 20 and 21, under the 6th.

22d Article, "Permits the Assured to demand a Return of Premium from the Insurers, except  $\frac{1}{4}$  per Cent. if he does not lade the Goods, or those are not shipped for him, on which the Insurance was made, or if he has insured more than the Value of the Merchandize he has shipped, or is shipped for him."

Remark. When a Return of Premium is demanded, it should be done as soon as possible, to remove all suspicion from the Insurers, of an intention to cheat them in Case of Damage; and if the Insurance is made on a Ship coming from a distant Port, in the Expectation of having some Goods by her, which on her Arrival is found to be otherwise, the Assured should shew the Underwriter, when he demands the Return, the Letters he may have received, with the Advice that his Correspondents could not send him any Thing by that Occasion; or at least a Declaration from the Captain, attesting, that he brought Nothing for the Assured; for without this, he will not be unlike those People, who finding their Merchandize safe arrived, are so dishonest to affirm they had nothing aboard, in Order to procure a Return.

23d Article, "Ordains, that the last Underwriters shall participate in the Insurance, as much as the first, either in Profit or Loss."

Remark. With Regard to Profit or Loss, one Insurer may have more than another in the same Insurance; for when a very large Sum is to be insured, and a good Part of it is done at a certain Price; for Example, at three per Cent. but a Sufficiency to complete it is not to be obtained on these Terms, the Premium is raised to four per Cent. in which Case the last Underwriters gain one per Cent. more than the first, if the Adventure arrives safe, and lose one per Cent. less than the others, in Case it does not; but it is not in this Respect, that this Article is to be understood, for it only ordains, that each Insurer shall partake of the Profit or Loss, in Proportion to the Sum he has signed for, viz. if one Insurer, who has underwrote at three per Cent. gains the Premium, he that has underwrote for four or five per Cent. gains it also; and if he that has signed for three per Cent. pays fifty or sixty per Cent. Loss or Average, he that has by his Firm obtained four or five per Cent. shall pay neither less nor more than the other.

24th Article, "Orders upon Pain of Nullity, not to make Insurance upon the Life of any one, nor upon any Wager of a Voyage, nor any such Interventions."

Remark. As there is no Point of Practice, or Subtlety in the World, either to gain or preserve Money, which has not been found out or invented at Amsterdam, this Article is not always religiously observed, and there are People, who having a Post, which, for Example, may bring them in 3000 Guilders per Ann. get that Sum insured on their Life for a certain Number of Years, that if they die, their Family may enjoy the Revenue, for the Remainder of the Term insured; but these are very ticklish Insurances.

25th Article imports, "That the Assured having abandoned in Form to the Insurers, the latter shall have three Months Time allowed to pay the Sum they have Underwrote for."

Remark. The Insurers are obliged to pay the Sum insured, entire, without any Deduction, in Case they take the above-mentioned three Months to do it in; but the common Custom is for them to have two per Cent. abated in Case of prompt Payment on Losses well proved, for if the Proofs are insufficient, the Insurers endeavour to take Advantage of this Circumstance, to pay as little as possible, possible, and the assured must get as much as they can, or wait till they have procured Proofs of the Loss, in all the Forms by Law required.

26th Article, " Says, that if the gross Average does not exceed one per Cent the Insurers shall not be obliged to pay it."

Remark. Averages of two or three per Cent. happen so often, that the Insurers find no Advantage in this Article, and therefore they have for a long Time agreed to sign no Policy which does not free them from any Average under three per Cent. as also to be free from the Expence of Jours de Planche, which are those Days a Ship is to lie, by Custom or Charterparty, more than what is necessary to lade or unlade her Cargo, and as they are frequently obliged to pay Averages upon Wools, Flax, and Hemp, they have for some Years past agreed among themselves, not to insure on these three Sorts of Merchandize, except free of Average under ten per Cent.

Nevertheless, when the Insurers are sued, the Commissioners of the Chamber have no Regard to these Clauses, but condemn the Underwriters to pay all Averages that exceed the one per Cent. in Conformity to the Ordinance.

27th Article, " Frees the Insurers from paying the Damage or Loss, upon Things that corrupt and spoil from their own imperfect Nature, when some foreign Cause or Mischance has not contributed to it."

Remark. If the Grain, Fruits, or other such Merchandize, happens to heat, or the Wine, Brandy, Oils, and other Liquors, are spilt and leaked, without any Thing's contributing to it, the Damage is the Assured's; but if it is occasioned by the Sea-Water in a Storm, or by a Shock of the Ship against some Bank of Sand, or any similar Cause, the Damage is for the Insurer's Account.

28th Article, " Obliges the Assured to advertise the Insurers of the Advices they receive, of the Mischances, Embargoes, and Damages, which happen to the Ships or Effects insured, and that Brokers, or other publick Persons, do make Minutes of such Advertisements."

Remark. The Assured are so much the more obliged to give this Notice to their Insurers, as it is they who must pay the Damage, in Case of a Disaster; and if the Assured does the least Thing unknown to the Underwriters, and without their Consent or Authority, and that what the Assured shall have done to prevent a greater Ill, turns out the Reverse of what he expected, there are many Cases in which the Insurers would not be obliged for the Damage, and others in which they may have room to wrangle a great deal, to lessen their Loss.

29th Article, " Imports, that this Ordinance ought to be understood generally, for all the Insurances which shall be made in this City, as well by the Subjects of this Country as by Strangers, and upon all Sorts of Merchandize and Effects, going and coming, both by Sea and Land; and if they are contrary to the Ordinance, they shall be null and invalid, as is mentioned in the first Article."

Remark. I have already observed on the first Article, that many Insurances were made, which are not entirely conformable to the Ordinance; and I have nothing more to add here, but that Use and Custom have introduced many Things which are contrary, but he ought to be extremely sedulous, on making any Insurance contrary to the Ordinance, in taking care what Insurers underwrite the Policy, and to insert all such Clauses, as may leave no Room for Dispute, or to have them annulled by the Chamber of Insurances, or by the other Courts of Justice, in Case of being obliged to come before them, which will in a great Measure depend on the Ability and Forecast of the Broker.

30th Article, " Forbids the Commissioners of the Chamber of Assurances, their Secretary and Clerk, and all Insurance Brokers, to insure or to be insured, directly or indirectly."

Remark. It may be seen, that this Prohibition, with Respect to the Commissioners and Secretary, is taken away by the Ordinance Numb. 4. But in Regard to the Sworn-Brokers, as they take an Oath not to do any Business for their own Account, when they are admitted, they can neither insure nor be insured without contravening contravening or breaking their Oath; nevertheless there are many who have Ships and Parts, which they every Day get insured.

31st Article, "Orders to punish exemplarily all those who shall use any Fraud, Misdemeanour, or Cheat in Assurances.

Remark. Insurances were invented and introduced, purely with the Design to relieve Merchants in Case of a Loss, by sharing as much as they thought proper to get insured; therefore, it would be acting very unjustly, to aim at gaining or enriching one's self, by making the Insurers lose, as has happened more than once, by Thieves and Knaves, who have insured large Sums on Ships aboard which they had nothing, or Things of a very small Value, which they have in Concert with the Captains procured to be lost, or by some such other Tricks: It is therefore of the utmost Importance to the Insurers, that this Article be pursued to the greatest Rigour, and it may be seen in the Ordinance Numb. VII. Art. 2. that these Sorts of Cases are reserved to be judged by the Lords Echevins, or Sheriffs,

32d Article, "Ordains, that all Accidents of Insurance, shall be brought in the first Instance before the Commissioners of the Chamber, which they shall judge upon the Footing of the Ordinance; and for their Employ, they shall have jointly with the Secretary One-third per Cent. on the Sums brought for their Determination, payable by the Plaintiff."

33d Article, "Authorizes the Commissioners of the Chamber to order a Delivery of the Money demanded, wholly, or partly, if they think proper, after the Verification of the Policies and Proofs, and that it appears to them, that the Notification of the Loss to the Insurers was made three Months before, permitting those who have obtained the Possession, to remain with the Money, under a sufficient Security, to return it with Interest, after the Rate of twelve per Cent. per Ann. if the Commissioners find afterwards that it ought to be returned."

34th Article, "Permits an Appeal from the Sentence of the Commissioners, to the Echevins, or Sheriffs, of the City."

35th Article, "Ordains, that the Execution of the Sentences given by the Commissioners, shall be performed in the same Manner, as that of the Sentences given by the Seigneurs Echevins."

36th, and last Article of the Ordinance, No. I. "Directs those who appeal to the Seigneurs Echevins, from the Sentence of the Commissioners, to do it in ten Days, and to give in their Articles in ten Days after, paying at the first Audience twelve Guilders as a Mulet, if the Sentence of the Commissioners is confirmed by the said Seigneurs."

Remark. I shall content myself with giving the Sense of these four last Articles just as they are, without entering into a Detail of the Cases that may happen, when obliged to litigate them with the Insurers, because that there is an Infinity, which almost all differ one from another, in the whole, or in Part, and which the Solicitors, who plead these Sort of Affairs often, know so well how to embroil, that the Process may last longer than it ought; I shall only remark on this Subject, a Passage in the Treatise of Averages, wrote by the famous Quintyn Wyfjen, which is so very often cited in Justice, upon the Matter of Averages and Insurances, where he says, that the Insurer is regarded by all as a Popul; that is to say, they are protected in Justice as Orphans, and that they are never condemned to the utmost Rigour, as it may be done in a Cause between Particulars; and it is for this same Reason, that I advise all those, who have any Difference with the Insurers, to agree it amicably, as well as they can, and avoid a Suit, as they may be certain they will often get more by a friendly Adjustment than by a Litigation; for the Insurers had rather grant something than be prosecuted, because this makes them decried as Wranglers; but it must at the same Time be confessed, that if too much is demanded of them under this Belief, they rather choose to go to Law, in which they are not quite wrong.

And as in Process of Time some new Cases have happened, not mentioned in the Ordinance, the Magistrates of this City have, from Time to Time, made Additions and Amplifications, and changed those Articles which they found not to be essential. The Additions are contained in the eleven Regulations, or Ordinances following, which I shall mark from No. II. to XII. to follow the Order in which they are couched in The Manner of Proceeding before the Justices of Amsterdam, from whence I have taken them.

No. II.

The 30th of January 1626, "The Lords Justices, willing to amplify the second Article of the preceding Ordinance, have ordained, that when any one is insured, and the Insurer fails and becomes insolvent, the Assured may set aside the Insurance, by his notifying it to him, by a Notary and two Witnesses, at the Place of his last Habitation, or to his Assignee; leaving however the Premium, which he cannot reclaim, and afterwards he may get himself insured by another Underwriter, on good and bad Advices."

This Amplification was undoubtedly made to prevent the Difficulties which might result, from what the Article 2, where it is spoke of, ordains, that the Assured shall run the Risk of  $\frac{1}{2}$  for all under 12,000 Guilders, according to which, a Man, who has got 10,800 Guilders insured on Goods worth 12,000, cannot insure any more; and one of the Insurers happening to fail, and the Assured being desirous to get some other to underwrite in his Room, it would seem by the Policy, that he should have got himself insured for more than he was permitted, if he had not given it over, in the Forms directed in this Amplification, which may serve him for Proof in Case of Need; but as I have mentioned under the second Article, that any one might get himself insured entirely, I shall only observe here, that if an Insurer happens to fail, the Assured should by no Means omit desisting from his Insurance, in the Forms prescribed by this Amplification.

No. III.

The 9th of May, 1614, "Our Lords of Justice having examined 17th Article of this Ordinance, and found that great Abuses have resulted from it they thought proper to alter it; and to ordain, that, hereafter, all Sorts of Merchandizes and Effects whatsoever, shall be comprehended under the general name of Merchandize or Effects, corruptible or incorruptible; but that he that would insure upon Gold, Silver, coined or uncoined, precious Stones, or Jewels, and Ammunition, shall be obliged to have it expressed in the Policy, on Penalty of its being nullified."

The 17th Article above-mentioned orders to specify in the Policy, the Merchandizes which are subject to perish through their own Nature; which was quite needless, because the 27th Article of the same Ordinance exempts the Insurers from paying the Damage which shall happen without any foreign Cause; and whether these Sorts of Merchandize are named in the Policy or not, when any Damage happens, the Question is, to know what Cause produced it; but with Regard to Gold, Silver, Jewels, and warlike Stores, the 17th Article remains in its full Force.

No. IV.

In February, 1600, and in the Month of June 1601, "Our Lords of Justice ordered that the Commissioners of the Chamber of Insurances, and their Secretary, might be insured."

The 30th Article of the first Ordinance had prohibited it, as may be seen in the said Article.

No. V.

"This Ordinance provides, that all the different Accidents which arise from Averages, shall be carried, in the first Instance, before the Commissioners of the Chamber of Insurances, to be by them regulated and decided, in the Manner established with respect to Insurances, in the last Articles of the first Ordinance, and that the Execution of the Sentences shall be performed according thereto."

4 Z

No. VI.

No. VI.

" The first Part of this Ordinance provides, that they shall every three Days proceed against those, who being cited before the Chamber, shall not appear; and that for the first, second, third, and fourth Fault of Non-appearance, they shall be condemned upon a second Omision, in a Mulct of six Stivers; on the third in twelve stivers; and at the fourth, eighteen Stivers; and that the Commissioners may condemn or absolve for the Principal at the fourth Neglect; however, without decreeing a Security in Virtue of the said Fault, unless the Commissioners see, by the Deduction of the Cause, that it is disposed so that he ought to be ordained to give it, instead of a definitive Sentence in Virtue of the fourth Fault.

" The second Part ordains, that the Decay or Ruin of the Ships that go from hence to the Indies, whether it happens going or coming, shall be on Account of the Insurers, unless these Vessels happen to be employed in an extraordinary Manner in the said Indies, for the trade thereof; and that all the Merchants shall be obliged to place their Merchandize, upon which the Averages ought to be regulated, according to their true Value; and that this may be done with the greater Honesty, the Effects brought under Contribution shall be put into the Hands of the Commissioners, to the End that they may be enabled to determine equitably."

This Ordinance was made the 20th of June, 1606, before the Establishment of the India Company, and regards more the Particulars who traded there, than the Company, who never insure that I know of; but since that it charges the Insurers with the perishing of Ships in a Country so distant, there is much stronger Reason that they should be answerable for the same Misfortunes in those Seas which are a great deal nearer, in which the Insurers would certainly be greatly to be pitied, if the Commissioners had not some Regard to them, which is left to their Discretion in the Ordinance, No. XI.

To commit the Effects put under Contribution of an Average into the Commissioners hands, that they may judge equitably, is very often impossible, and when it is otherwise the thing would be equally troublesome to the Commissioners and Merchants; therefore, in such Cases, the Commissioners themselves have the Ships taxed that lie before the City, and order the Merchants, who have an Interest in the lading, to bring in an Account of the just Value of their Goods to the Chamber, and as this is often done after the Goods are sold, those who have disposed of theirs insert the Produce in their Accounts, and those that are still unsold they pass according to the Price current; and, upon the Taxation of the Ship, these different Accounts of the Merchants, and the Estimation of the Damage happened, the Commissioners regulate the Average, and decree the Repartition in their Sentence.

No. VII.

This Ordinance, made the 14th of June, 1607, contains five Articles; of which the 1st Article ordains, " That the Fines proceeding from the Faults obtained before the Chamber, shall be exacted by the Huissier of the Chamber; of which he shall have the third for his Trouble, and if he cannot recover them, they may be exacted by the Serjeant of Monsieur the Officer."

2d Article, " Directs the Commissioners to send before the Lords Echevins all those Causes of Insurance in which they have found any Fraud." This is properly a Confirmation and Amplification of that which is said in the first Ordinance, Article 31.

3d Article decrees, " That when in any Danger, some gross Goods shall have been thrown overboard from between Decks on Ships coming from the Levant, they shall be brought into an Average on Ship and Cargo."

This is a Law generally received by all Europe, to bring into a gross Average all that is thrown into the Sea, all that is cut away, broken, or lost in the Danger, to save that which remains aboard; which makes me believe, that this Article was only made to stop the Mouths of some Wranglers, who it is probable would maintain, that what is put between Decks, being thrown overboard in the Danger, ought not to be brought into an Average.

4th Article, " Authorizes the Commissioners to condemn the Parties, in all " or half of the Expences, or to decide them as they shall think proper."

5th Article, " Enjoins the Commissioners not to carry to the Insurer's Account, when they regulate any Average, only what they shall find ought to " be carried to Averages."

To understand this Article aright, it must be observed that Averages are frequently regulated in one Manner between the Proprietors of the Ship and those interested in the Cargo, and in a different one, with Regard to the Insurers, who are not obliged generally to pay all that is brought into an Average upon Ship and Goods, but only certain Articles, according to the Circumstances of the Case, which would be too long to deduce here:

No. VIII.

This Ordinance also contains five Articles, of which the 1st Article, " Decrees, that all the Premiums of Insurance, which do not " exceed 7 per Cent. shall be paid in ready Money; without deducting them from " the Damage in these Causes, which shall be brought before the Chamber, but " they shall be counted and held as paid."

2d Article, " Ordains, that the Premiums exceeding 7 per Cent. shall be paid " in six Months after signing the Policy; but if the Premiums on going and " coming amount to more than the 7 per Cent. and to 14 per Cent. inclusive, " the Half shall be paid down, and the other Half in six Months after, with " the Interest of 12 per Cent. per Ann. after the Expiration of the said six " Months, to the time of Payment.

In Obedience to the first of these Articles, or both of them, the Insurers never sign a Policy, that they do not insert at the same Time, that they have received the Premium, although they do not receive it till two or three Months after, and sometimes never, because they have an open Account with every Broker, and if a Loss happens, they draw upon him, without having enjoyed the Premiums. It is true they may recover of him directly, and it were to be wished, for their Sakes, that they gave less Credit to some Brokers, who use the Premiums to pay every thing else but them; if they gave so much less Credit to the Brokers, the Insurers would not suffer, as they often do, when any one of the former becomes insolvent; for if the Merchants, by employing the Brokers, give them an Opportunity of gaining their Brokerage, they are only answerable to the Insurers for the Premiums; and if those were paid in ready Money, the Brokers would not be exposed to this Risk.

In Regard to the Premiums in going and coming, the Custom observed for a long time, has been in the same Manner as above, but the Broker will not engage with the Insurers only for the Premium out: And when the Ship is arrived, or is upon her way Home, the Insurer assigns the Premium of her Return on the Assured; but as it frequently happens, that some of the Assured sail during the Interval of the Voyage, by which the Underwriters lose the Premium on the Ship's Return, it is now some Years since they have obliged the Brokers to be answerable for both, in which I think they have acted very prudently.

3d Article, " Ordains, that when the Chamber of Assurances has made a " Repartition of the Average or Damage, the Insurers shall be obliged to pay " it directly, and in Default thereof, they shall pay the Assured an Interest on " the Sum in which they have been condemned, after the Rate of 12 per Cent. " per Ann. to be reckoned from the Day the Repartition is made, till the Time " of its Discharge."

This Case occurs so rarely, that I have never seen an Example of it; but on the contrary, a Loss or an Average is no sooner regulated by the Chamber, than the Insurers are the first who desire to pay, unless they think themselves unjustly dealt by, and have an Intent to appeal.

4th Article, " Directs the Commissioners not to make any Repartition of " total Losses, till the three Months of Abandoning be expired, according to the " 25th Article of the first Ordinance."

I have

I have remarked upon the said 25th Article, that in such Case, the Insurers ought to pay the entire Loss, but in agreeing it amicably, they only pay 98 per Cent. which is better both for one and the other, than to go to Law, for many Reasons.

5th Article, "Orders that the Brokerage on Insurances shall not exceed  $\frac{1}{2}$  per Cent. as well on going and coming, as on going or coming only; to be paid Half by the Insurers, and the other Half by the Assured."

The Custom is, that the Insurers only pay the Brokerage at  $\frac{1}{2}$  either going or coming, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  per Cent. Outwards and Homewards; and if this is not agreed to, as the Brokerage for going or coming singly is  $\frac{1}{2}$  per Cent. the Brokers may with Reason, first make the Insurance Outwards, and some Days after make that Homeward, in Order to get double Brokerage; and I do not doubt of their having done so, since the making of this Ordinance, &c.

No. IX.

It is ordained by this Amplification of the preceding Ordinance, No. VIII. "That all the Premiums of Insurance, at whatever per Cent. they may be, and let them be what they will, shall be paid immediately on signing the Policy, under Penalty of their being null; provided that on those which are made for going and coming, the Premiums for going shall be paid directly, and the Premiums for returning shall be paid on the Arrival of the Vessels; and of all the Insurances which are made by the Month, the Premiums shall be paid down for as many Months as shall be stipulated in the Policy."

No. X.

As the foregoing Ordinance does not very clearly explain itself in saying, that the Premiums on the homeward bound Voyage shall be paid on the Ship's Arrival, this Article is added, and imports, that the Premiums on her coming back, shall be paid when the Vessel shall be returned, and the Voyage finished.

It may be seen by these two Articles, what I have said under the second Article of No. VIII.

No. XI.

In Reply to the Advice which the Commissioners of the Chamber requested of the Burgomasters, how they should regulate the Damage upon Woad, Sugar, and other Merchandizes, which came from the Azores Islands; as a very great difference is found in the Price, between those bought with ready Money, and those taken in Barter; and also upon what the said Commissioners represent, that in long Voyages, where the Assured gain largely, the Vessels decay considerably, and if they are lost, the Insurers pay a great deal more than the Ships would have sold for, if they had arrived in Safety,

"Our Lords of Justice ordained, that the Woad should be reckoned, till further Order, upon the footing of 800 Rees the Quintal, unless the Concerned can prove in eight Months, that the Woad was bought in the said Isles, at a higher or lower Price; and with Respect to Sugars and other Merchandize, the Commissioners may value them as they shall think proper."

"And touching the Ships, which, by the Length of their Voyages, are worn out, worm-eaten, or become unnavigable, the Commissioners were authorized to act according to their Discretion."

It is very just to have Regard to the Price of the Goods which are to contribute to an Average, when the Calculation is to be made, more especially when some Part of them have been taken in Barter, and the other paid for with Ready-Money; in which Case those that are received in Barter, would cost a good deal more if passed at the Price they were taken at in Barter, than those purchased with Ready-Money, and would not however be any thing better, and notwithstanding they would pay considerably more than they ought towards the Average. For Example, A Quintal of Woad shall have been taken in Barter for 1200 Rees, and a Quintal of the same bought for 600, with Ready-Money; and if the Average is regulated on the footing of these two Purchases, the Quintal taken in Exchange will pay double the Average that the Quintal bought with ready Money will, which would be visibly contrary to Reason, and to the Ordinance No. VI. which directs, that things should be put at their true Value.

In Respect to the Decay of Ships, it is certainly very equitable, that it should be regulated, as well in the Regulation of Losses as in that of Averages; for it is certain, that on many Occasions the Insurers lose, and pay the Damage which happens to Ships, whilst the Proprietors gain a great deal above it.

No. XII.

This Amplification decrees, " That henceforward any Abandon, Registering, or Authorization, in Matters of Insurance, shall not be done but by the Secretary or Huissier of the Chamber of Insurances, who are sufficiently authorized for it by this Ordinance, which prohibits all Notaries, Brokers, and other Persons to undertake the doing any Act, under Penalty of its being null."

If the Assured judge that the Insurers have any Room to make a Dispute, they ought not to fail making the Abandon, Registering, or Authorization, as it is ordered here above, because all that they get done by their Brokers is null and invalid, if the Affair comes before the Chamber, and that these Pieces must absolutely be drawn up there, and signed by the Huissier to be valid.

The 5th of March, 1688, the following Ordinance was published:

" Those who would get Insurance made on Ships or Effects already departed from the Place of their lading, shall be obliged to declare it on the Policy, and to note the time of their Departure, except they are ignorant of it; and if they are so, they are expressly to declare it in the Policies, on Penalty of its being null."

As this Article has a Relation to or Affinity with the Articles 6, 20, or 21, of the first Ordinance, Reference may be made to what I have said under the 6th.

The same Day, 5th of March, 1688, the subsequent Order was also published:

The Lords of Justice having been advised, as well by many Merchants as Insurers, that divers Changes were daily made in the Print of Policies, and that almost every Broker added some Novelty, which obliged both the Merchants and Insurers to read, as well what was printed as wrote in them, and that this was a troublesome Practice, by reason of the many Affairs they had to transact at the Bourfe and elsewhere, from whence proceeded a great Number of Frauds, bad Tricks, &c. the which the said Lords willing to prevent, have enacted and ordained, that henceforward no one shall print or offer any Policy which does not contain, Word for Word, the same as those that follow; and they must be marked by the Secretary of the Chamber of Insurances, who shall have three Stivers as his Due for each; and no Policy shall be made which is not marked by him, in Want of which, they shall be invalid; and the Brokers who offer any Policies, with other Contents than what is in the subsequent Forms, shall pay, for each, fifty Guilders Mult.

A new Amplification of the Ordinance of the Chamber of Assurances, and Averages, of the City of Amsterdam.

THE Lords of Justice of the City of Amsterdam, having seen and examined the Request of many considerable Merchants of the said City, presented to them To-day, beseeching that there may be some Alteration and Redress made in Matter of Insurances; and after having heard the Advice of the Commissioners of the Chamber of Insurances and Averages, have thought proper to enact and ordain, as they do by these Presents;

1st Article, "That henceforward Insurance may be made on the Body and Tackle of Ships for seven-eighths of their true Value; however, without Permission to make any on their Freight, Powder, Ball, Victuals, or such like Things which are consumed; and the Assured shall be obliged to run Risk of the One-eighth, as well for what is above, as under two Thousand Livres de Gros, derogating and altering in this Respect the 10th Article of the Ordinance of the Chamber of Insurances."

The 10th Article of the first Ordinance altered by this, forbids the insuring Ships for above Two-thirds of their Value, which was sufficient to discourage all those who should have a Design to build Ships, it obliging them to run the Risk of One-third of their Value, which might not suit every one; so that it is with Reason they have changed the said 10th Article of which we are speaking; and it is even very much wished, that they had not obliged the Owners of Ships by this Article, to run the Risk of the One-eighth; for, besides its causing many Disputes, there is not naturally any Necessity to oblige a Man to run a Risk, which an Insurer would take on him for the Premium he receives: There is even, if I may be permitted to say so, a wide Door opened to Chicanery in this Amplification, which only speaks of the Body of the Ship, without making mention of the Apparel and Appurtenances, which are very often worth as much, or half as much, as the Body of the Ship; I, however, very well know, that when the Commissioners of the Chamber have a Ship taxed, it is taxed with all its Apparel and Appurtenances, and without Contradiction from the Insurers; but I do not know what would happen if some one amongst them would stick to the Letter of the Ordinance, which only gives Commission to insure the Body; it may be said, that a Ship cannot go to Sea without Sails, Masts, &c. so that her Apparel and Appurtenances being absolutely necessary to perform the Voyage, they may be, and effectually are, comprehended with the Body of the Ship; however, this would not shut the Mouths of some Wranglers, if they were in such a Case. But not to extend my Criticism any farther, I shall only say, that when an Insurance is made on the Body of a Ship, it is very necessary to value it in the Policy, and to insert that it is with all its Appurtenances and Dependencies, and such other Clauses as an expert Broker should find à propos to put in it, according to the Cases and Circumstances.

2d Article of this Amplification says, "That in like Manner it shall be permitted to insure the single Ransom, or Redemption of Captains and Sailors, who run a Risk of being taken by Corsairs; and that upon Policies, of which the Plan shall be given herewith, the which ought to be marked by the Secretary of the Chamber, who shall have three Stivers for each, as for other Policies; upon Penalty, that if they are not marked by the said Secretary, they shall not be valid, and that the Brokers, who shall make any Policies in a different Manner shall pay fifty Guilders Mulct for each, &c."

The 24th Article of the first Ordinance, prohibits the making Insurance on any Lives whatsoever; and many People confound Liberty with Life, imagining that insuring the one was not more lawful than the other, which occasioned many Difficulties between the Owners of Ships, and their Captains bound to the Mediterranean and the adjacent Parts, where they run the Risk of being taken by the Turks, when at War with them, and it was undoubtedly for that, that this Article was made; and on the least Rupture that we now have with any one of the States of Barbary, the Captains designed for the Mediterranean will by no Means fail, till their Owners have insured 3 or 4000 Guilders upon their Liberty, in order to redeem them with this Money, in Case they are so unfortunate as to be taken.

3d Article of the said Amplification, "Decrees, that any Insurance made upon Money given à la Grosse, a Term used in Holland for lending Money at a large Interest like Bottomry, upon Goods, shall not be valid, unless it be expressly mentioned by all the Bills of Lading of the Goods, how the Money was taken up, with the Date of the Day and the Place, from whom it was taken, and to whom it was delivered, and for whose Account; but the Assurance being made from a Place, where no Bill of Lading was signed, it must be proved by the Contract de Grosse, or Bottomry, &c."

The 4th and 5th Articles, authorize the Commissioners to condemn, from the second Non-appearance, those whom the Insurers have cited before the Chamber for the Payment of Premiums, and to proceed to other Causes every two Days, and to condemn upon the third Default.

The Form of a Policy of Insurance upon the Liberty of a Person.

WE, the Underwriters, insure you _____ or to whom it may appertain, viz. Each for the Sum here under signed, to _____ on Condition to go every Way, during the whole Voyage, and with Liberty to touch in all Places and in all Countries in the Way; to advance, retreat, get into Port, unlade and lade, at the Will of the Captain or Mate, whether it is with the Liking and Consent of the Assured or his Deputy or not; and that upon the Body and Person of _____ bound for _____ upon the Ship, which God preserve, called _____ and in Case that the said Ship should happen to be lost, and not accomplish her Voyage, we run the same Risk on the Ship or Ships upon which the said _____ may embark, to pursue and finish his aforesaid Voyage, be it either by Sea or Land; and we only run the Risk of his being taken, by any Nation whatsoever, whether Turk, Moor, or Barbarian, or other Infidel Pirates, from whom in Case that the said _____ happens to be taken, and ransomed, which God avert, we promise to pay immediately to the Assured, or to the Bearer of these these Presents, without any Abatement, each the Sum by us insured for his Redemption, with the other Charges that this Affair may occasion; and that as soon as the Advice shall be received, and that it shall appear to us that he is released, or his Ransom paid, and that the Bills of Exchange have been accepted; but the Sums by us insured must be employed only in his Ransom and concurrent Expences, and for nothing else; and for the Accomplishment of the above, we engage our Persons and Effects, present and to come, submitting them to all Laws and Tribunals of Justice, the Whole sincerely without Fraud or Deceit; and we have agreed for the Premium.

So done in Amsterdam, &c.

Policies of Insurance in France, are generally drawn up in the Registry Office of Insurance, in those Places where one is established; and in those Places where there are none, the Policies may be made either before a Notary Publick, or under a private Firm.

D. de C. Pag.
219. Word
ASSURANCE.

In foreign Places where French Consuls are settled, the Policies of Insurance may be entered in the Chancery of the Consulate, before two Witnesses; and all these Policies must mention the Name and Place of Abode of the Insured, his Condition, whether Proprietor or Agent, and the Goods or Effects on which the Insurance is made: They must likewise contain the Name of the Ship and Master, the Place from whence the Goods are or must be laded, of the Haven or Port from whence the Ship is to sail, or shall have sailed, of the Ports where she is to lade and unlade, and of all those where she is to touch: They must also express the Time when the Risks are to begin and finish, the Sums that are insured, the Premium given, the Submission of the contracting Parties to Arbitration in Case of Dispute, and all other Clauses in general on which they are agreed, according to the Use and Customs of the Sea; about all which, his Most Christian Majesty published an Ordinance in the Month of August, 1681, where, at Titre 6, du Livre 3, every Part of Insurance is fully directed.

Besides the Insurances we have hitherto mentioned, others are made in France, called Secret or Anonymous ones, which are performed by Correspondence with Foreigners, even in Time of War.

It is inserted in the Policies of this Sort of Insurance, that it is for a Friend's Account, whosoever he may be, without naming the Person; and in Case the Ship or Merchandizes so insured happen to be lost, the Assured must notify it, and his abandoning the Insurance, by an Act in Form, either by the Register, a Notary, or Bailiff, demanding Payment of the Sums insured, in Consequence of his relinquishing, in the Time agreed by the Policy.

Insurances are made in many Parts of France, particularly in most of the maritime Towns; and in the Beginning of the Year 1770, a Chamber of Insurance was established at Paris, with a Fund of twelve Millions of Livres, in which some Alterations were made about ten Months after; but as the Articles in their Policies differ very little from the Dutch, to avoid Repetitions, I shall not enlarge on them.

An Office for Insurances was likewise established about the latter End of the same Year at Stockholm; and another about six Month after at Naples, with a Capital of 100,000 Crowns. And a Company has been long settled at Copenhagen for this Purpose; besides which, large Insurances are made in Norway, and the Terms generally the same as in Holland.

All Policies must be made on stamped Paper, and no Insurance permitted on Life, Wages, Provision, Ammunition, or Materials; only on Ship and Goods, and on these no more than Nine-tenths of their real Value.

The Insurers pay no Average, on Demurrage, or Losses under 3 per Cent. nor on Wool, Hemp, Flax, Sugar, and Stock-fish, under 10 per Cent. And the Laws are so rigorous, that if the Insurance is made for above Nine-tenths of the real Value, as afore-mentioned, the Premium is sunk, and the Perpetrators suffer Death.

When a Policy on Goods is signed, the Underwriters are answerable for all Damages they may receive, from the time of their carrying from the Shore, until their their being duly delivered on Shore again; and if Credit is given on the Premium, it bears half per Cent. Interest per Month.

On a Loss of Ship or Goods, the Assured may have it notified to the Insurers, with full Proofs; and if the latter do not pay the Loss within three Months, he must pay the Assured half per Cent. Monthly, from the Time of the Loss being notified to him, until its Discharge.

A Ship bound to any Part of Europe, and no News heard of her within a Year and a Day, the Insurance is due; and if the Voyage is to any other Part of the World, two Years are allowed; and it is to be noted that a Year and a Day, in Law, is understood to be a Year and six Weeks.

If the Voyage is altered, and Premium returned, half per Cent. is allowed the Underwriters, as in other Parts; and the Insurance in this Country is void, and the Capital confiscate, if not made on stamped Paper.

Venice, Leghorn, Genoa, Pisa, Hamburg, and many other maritime Cities, have their Underwriters, and pretty considerable Insurances are sometimes made there; but those I have before mentioned are the principal Places where large Sums are underwrote for, with the greatest Security.

Of Arbitrators, Arbitraments, Arbitration Bonds, and Awards.

AN ARBITRATOR is an extraordinary private Judge, between Party and Party, chosen by their mutual Consent, to determine Controversies between them.

And he is so called either from Arbitrium, Free Will, as some derive it; or because he has an arbitrary Power, as is supposed by others; for if Arbitrators observe the Submission, and keep within due Bounds, their Sentences are definitive, from which there lies no Appeal.

The Power of Arbitrators is to be regulated by the Contracts between the Parties, as to what concerns the Differences which they are to determine, and whatever they decree beyond that is of no Effect.

The Award of Arbitrators is definitive, and, being chosen by the Parties, they are not tied to such Formalities of Law as Judges in other Cases are, and yet they have as great Power as other Judges to determine the Matters in Variance; but their Determination must be certain, and it is to be according to the express Condition of the Bond, by which the Parties submit themselves to their Judgement.

After a definitive Sentence is given, the Functions of Arbitrators cease, and they have not Power to retract or alter it.

No Matters wherein the Publick is concerned, or besides those of a private Nature, which regard Property between Person and Person, can be submitted to the Decision of Arbitrators. The Differences arising between Merchants, relating to their Commerce, and between Parties, in relation to their Partnerships, and also Accounts of Guardianships, and other Administrations, are proper Subjects for Arbitration. Therefore all Articles of Partnership should contain a Clause, by which the Partners bind themselves to submit to Arbitrators in the Disputes that may arise between them. And if the same was done in the Contract, and Policies of Assurance, it might prevent many Suits at Law.

It has been a Custom to chuse two, one by each of the contending Parties, with a Liberty for them to chuse an Umpire in Case of Disagreement; but as this Method has on many Occasions exposed the Arbitrators to some Disgusts, from those whose Differences they were labouring to reconcile, it has been a Practice for some Time past to nominate three in the Bond, by which Means their different Opinions remain secret, and consequently unknown to the Concerned, who are too apt ungenerously to reflect on a Determination, which will naturally differ from the Opinion at least of one of the Parties, and excite in an uncandid manner a Censure, where at least their Thanks are due.

Chanc. Rep.
1 Vern. 21.

The Chancery will not give Relief against the Award of the Arbitrators, except it be for Corruption, &c. and where their Award is not strictly binding by the Rules of Law, the Court of Equity can decree a Performance.

26 Hen. VI.
52.
39 Hen. VI.
12.

When the Arbitrators make an Award upon one Day, they cannot make another between the Parties on any other Day; nor can they do it Part at one Time and Part at another, although the Times are within the Submission.

47 Edw. III.
21.

Though the Arbitrators may agree upon a Thing one Day, and on another Thing at another Time, and at last make an Award of the Whole.

Arbitrators are to award what is equal between the Parties, and not on one Side only, and the Performance of it must be lawful and possible; and the Award must be final.

2 Saund. 122.
2 Lill. 169.
1 Salk. 71.

If the Arbitrators make an Award of Money to be paid to a Stranger, &c. unless the Parties have Benefit by it, it will be void.

And a Party is not to be made a Judge in his own Cause by Award.

For it is a general Rule in Equity, that when it appears that any one of the Arbitrators was any way interested in the Matters in Controversy referred to them, the Award is to be set aside.

Mod. Caf. 33.

Where a Thing is to be done on Payment of Money, a Tender of the Money is as much as an actual Payment.

Browl. 55.

Action of Debt may be brought for Money adjudged to be paid by Arbitrators, declaring on the Award; and also Action of Debt upon the Bond, for not performing the Award.

8 Rep. 98.

When there is but one Arbitrator, which happens where the Matter is referred to two, or they cannot agree, but leave it to be determined by a third Person, it is called an Umpirage.

1 Lill. Abr.
170.

But the Arbitrators are to refuse, and declare they will make no Award before the Umpire shall proceed; though an Umpire's Award shall be good, where the Arbitrators make a void Award, which is no Award.

1 Mod. Rep.
15.

It is said an Umpirage cannot be made till the Arbitrators' Time is out, and if any other Power be given to the Umpire, it is not good; for two Persons cannot have a several Jurisdiction at one Time.

But this seems to be contradicted by the Practice afore-mentioned, of nominating three Arbitrators in the Bond, except the Distinction consists in Sounds only, as neither of the three is termed an Umpire.

An Arbitration is generally an Effect of Moderation in the contending Parties, who think it more safe to refer the Matter in Dispute to the Determination of Friends, than to venture a Trial at Law, more especially as the one is costly, and the other transacted gratis; and although there is no particular Obligation to oblige Parties in England to refer their Differences to Arbitrators, as is the Custom in France, yet our Statutes recommend these References to the Subjects, and more particularly to Merchants and Traders, as an useful Expedient to end their Disputes with the greater Ease and Expedition.

The Civilians make a Difference between Arbiter and Arbitrator; an Arbiter being tied to proceed and judge according to Law, mingled with Equity; but an Arbitrator is wholly at his own Discretion, without Solemnity of Process, or Course of Judgement, to hear and determine the Controversy referred to him, so as it be Juxta Arbitrium boni Viri.

Cowel.

Arbitrators should give their Award without entering into Particulars, or assigning their Reasons for it, as this might expose them to a Chancery Suit from a dissatisfied Party, and it should be in Writing, and within the Time limited by the Arbitration Bonds.

There should be appointed by the Award some reciprocal Act, to be done by each Party to the other, which the Law requireth to be quid pro quo, although it be never so small, and reciprocal Acquittances should be directed, either general or particular ones, according as the Nature of the Decision shall require.

The Arbitrators are not to award any Thing, whereby any Matter already determined by a Decree in Chancery, or a Judgement at Common Law, or any Sentence judicially given in the Cause, be infringed or meddled with; for Sentences of judicial Courts of Record are always of a higher Nature than Arbitrators' Awards, and justly challenge both Obedience and Respect; though Civilians themselves do frequently call Merchants in to their Assistance, when the Matter in Dispute is relative to Trade, and sometimes recommend the Decision of a mercantile Point to a Trader, after they have long and curiously debated it, without bringing it to a Conclusion.

ARBITRAMENT (in Latin Arbitrium) is the Sentence or Determination, <sup>8 Rep. 98.</sup> pronounced by Arbitrators, and published when they have heard all Parties, and this is either general, of Actions, Demands, Quarrels, &c. or special, of some certain Matters in Controversy: it may be also absolute or conditional.

To every Arbitrament, five Things are incident, viz. First, Matter of Con- <sup>Hard. 44.</sup> troversy. Secondly, Submission. Thirdly, Parties to the Submission. Fourthly, Arbitrators. And, Fifthly, giving up the Arbitrament.

Arbitrators cannot refer Arbitraments to others, if the Submission be not so; <sup>Jenk. Cent. 129.</sup> but an Arbitrament that one shall release to another, by Advice of a certain Person, is good, because it is a Reference only for the Execution of it.

Submissions to Arbitraments are usually by Bond, and the Parties who bind <sup>Davv. Abr. 513.</sup> themselves, are obliged to take Notice of the Award, at their Peril; but Things <sup>9 Rep. 78.</sup> relating to a Freehold, Debts due on Bond, or on certain Contract, Criminal <sup>1 Roll. Abr. 244, 342.</sup> Offences, &c. are not arbitrable.

For ending Suits by Arbitrament, the following Act is the only one made in any late Reign, viz.

After the 11th of May 1698, all Merchants and Traders, and others desiring <sup>9 and 10 Will. III. C. 15. Sect. 1.</sup> to end any Controversy, Suit, or Quarrel, for which there is no other Remedy, but by a personal Action or Suit in Equity, by Arbitrament, may agree, that their Submission of the Suit to the Award, or Umpirage, of any Person or Persons, shall be made a Rule of any of his Majesty's Courts of Record, which the Parties shall choose, and may insert such their Agreement in their Submission, or the Condition of the Bond of Promise; and upon producing an Affidavit of such Agreement, and upon reading and filing such Affidavit in the Court so chosen, the same may be entered of Record in such Court, and a Rule of Court shall be thereupon made that the Parties shall submit to, and finally be concluded by such Arbitration or Umpirage: And in Case of Disobedience thereto, the Party neglecting, or refusing, shall be subject to all the Penalties of contemning a Rule of Court, and Process shall issue accordingly, which shall not be stopped or delayed by any Order, &c. of any other Court, either of Law or Equity, unless it appear on Oath, that the Arbitrators or Umpire misbehaved themselves, and that such Award was corruptly or unduly procured.

Any Arbitration or Umpirage, procured by Corruption or undue Means, shall <sup>Sect. 2.</sup> be void, and set aside by any Court of Law or Equity, so as such Corruption or undue Practice be complained of, in the Court where the Rule is made for such Arbitration, before the last Day of the next Term, after such Arbitration made and published to the Parties.

In Consequence of this Statute, it is now become a considerable Part of the Business of the superior Courts, to set aside such Awards as are partially or illegally made; or to enforce their Execution when legal, by the same Process of Contempt, as is awarded for Disobedience to such Rules and Orders as are issued by the Courts themselves. Blackstone's Comment. Vol. III.

An ARBITRATION BOND.

KNOW ALL MEN by these Presents, that I A. B. of the Parish, &c. in the County, &c. Merchant, am held and firmly obliged to C. D. of, &c. in the County aforesaid, Esq. in — Pounds of good and lawful Money of Great-Britain, to be paid to the said C. D. or his certain Attorney, his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, to which Payment, well and truly to be made, I oblige myself, my Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, firmly by these Presents, sealed with my seal, dated at _____ on the _____ Day of _____ in the Twenty-fourth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King George

George II. and in the Year of our Lord God, one Thousand seven Hundred and fifty-one.

The Condition of this Obligation is such, that if the above bound A. B. his Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, for his and their Parts, and Behalfs, do in all Things well and truly stand to, obey, abide by, perform, fulfil, and keep the Award, Ord., Arbitrament, final End, and Determination of E. F. and G. H. Arbitrators indifferently named, elected, and chosen, as well on the Part and Behalf of the above bounden A. B. as of the above-named C. D. to arbitrate, award, order, judge, and determine, of and concerning all, and all Manner of Action and Actions, Cause and Causes of Actions, Suits, Bills, Bonds, Specialties, Judgements, Executions, Extents, Quarrels, Controversies, Trespases, Damages, and Demands whatsoever, at any Time or Times, heretofore had, made, moved, brought, commenced, sued, prosecuted, done, suffered, committed, or depending by or between the said Parties, so as the said Award be made, and given up in Writing, under their Hands and Seals, ready to be delivered to the said Parties on or before the next ensuing the Date above-mentioned: But if the said Arbitrators do not make such their Award of, and concerning the Premises by the Time aforesaid, that then if the said A. B. his Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, for his and their Part and Behalf, do in all Things well and truly stand to, obey, abide by, perform, fulfil and keep the Award, Order, Arbitrament, Umpirage, final End, and Determination of J. K. Umpire, indifferently chosen between the said Parties, of, and concerning the Premises, so as the said Umpirage do make his Award or Umpire of, and concerning the Premises, and deliver the same in Writing under his Hand and Seal, to the said Parties, on or before the next ensuing the Date above-said, then this Obligation to be void, or otherwise to be, and remain in full Force and Virtue.

Signed, sealed, and delivered, in the Presence of
L. M.
N. O.

Note, if there is no Umpire, the latter Part must be omitted from, but if the said Arbitrators.

Though I have before observed, it is now customary to choose three Arbitrators, and have them nominated in the Bonds.

The aforesaid Bond must be mutual between the Parties, and the following Clause may be added at the End of the Condition, as the Agreement mentioned in the preceding Act of Parliament, viz.

And the above-mentioned A. B. doth agree and desire, that this his Submission to the Award above-mentioned, be made a Rule of his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, or any other Court of Record, pursuant to the late Act of Parliament for this Purpose provided, and the like for the other Party submitted to such Award.

AWARD is the Judgement and Arbitration of one or more Persons, at the Request of two Parties who are at Variance, for ending the Matter in Dispute, without publick Authority; and may be called an Award, because it is imposed on both Parties to be observed by them Dictum, quod ad Custodiendum, seu Observandum, Partibus imponitur.

Spelm.

1 Davv. Abt.
515.

An Award may be by Word or in Writing, but it is usually given in the latter, and must be exactly according to the Submission. If an Award be according to the Submission by Bond, though it is void in Law, if it be not observed, the Obligation will be forfeited.

Cro. Eliz.

Where Arbitrators award a Thing against Law, it is void; if more is awarded than submitted, the Award will be void; but when an Award seems to extend to more than in the Submission, the Words de & super præmissis, restrain it to the Thing submitted.

An

An Award may be void in some Part, and good in another Part, if it makes <sup>10 Rep. 31.</sup> an End of all the Differences submitted; and if an Award be good in Part, <sup>2 Saund. 293.</sup> and void in Part, the good shall be performed.

An Award without a Deed of Submission will be good, in bar of a Trespass. <sup>Davo. 549.</sup>
But the Delivery of the Award in Writing, under Hand and Seal, &c. must <sup>Dyer, 243.</sup> be pleaded, and be exactly replied to by the Plaintiff, in Action of Debt on an <sup>2 Mod. 77, 78.</sup> Award, or it will be ill on Demurrer. <sup>269.</sup>

The Submission to an Award may be by Bond, Covenant, or by an Assumpsit <sup>10 Rep. 131.</sup> or Promise; or without all this, by a bare Agreement, to refer the Matter to <sup>Dyer, 270.</sup> such a Person or Persons.

A Husband may submit to an Award, for himself and his Wife, for her <sup>Plowd. 189.</sup> Goods and Chattles, to bind her; but an Infant may not make any Submission to an Award, or any other for him, for it will be void.

If several Persons do a Wrong to a Man, and one of these, and he to whom <sup>7 H. IV. 31</sup> the Wrong is done, submit to an Award; the other Persons, who were no Parties to the Submission, may take Advantage of it, to extinguish the Wrong.

And where the Award of Recompence for a Wrong done is performed, that <sup>Dyer, 183.</sup> Wrong is altogether determined; also the Award of a Personal Chattel doth alter the Property of it, and give it to the Party to whom awarded, that he may have Detinue for it.

A Submission is of all Actions and Demands, &c. though there be but one <sup>Dyer, 216.</sup> Cause or Matter between them; an Award may be made for this; And where <sup>2 Cr. 130.</sup> two Things are submitted, and the Award but one, it is good, if the Arbitrators have no further Notice of the other; though if it be of three Things, or some Particulars with a general Clause of all other Matters, in that Case they must make the Award for the Things particularly named, without any other <sup>Godd. 146.</sup> Notice given.

If the Submission be by divers Persons, and the Arbitrators award between <sup>8 Rep. 79.</sup> some of them only, this is good, but if a Submission is of certain Things in <sup>Hib. 49.</sup> Special, with a Provisò in the Condition, that the Award be made of the Premises, &c. by such a Day, there the Award must be made of all, or it will be void.

An Award of all Actions, Real, when the Submission is of Actions Personal, <sup>Plowd. 306.</sup> is not good. <sup>10 Rep. 132.</sup>

Yet if the Submission be of Things Personal, and the Award is, that one of <sup>Dyer, 216.</sup> the Parties shall do an Act Real, in Satisfaction of a personal Injury, &c. or a Submission be of one Thing, and the Award made of something incident to, or necessarily depending upon it; or if the Submission is of all Actions real and personal, and the Award only of Matters personal, &c. it will be good in these Cases, if nothing else is notified to the Arbitrators.

An Award made only on one Side, without any Thing on the other, is void <sup>8 Rep. 72.</sup> in Law; as, that one shall pay or give Bond for Money to the other Party, and he do nothing for it; but if it be to give Bond to pay, or to pay a Debt, and that the other shall be discharged of the Debt, &c. this is good; so where it is that one Party shall pay Money to the other, and then the other shall release all Actions to him.

If divers Trespasses be referred to Arbitrament, and the Award is, that one <sup>5 Rep. Marc 6.</sup> of the Parties shall make the other Parties Amends, or give Release, and say <sup>18.</sup> not what Amends, or what Release, &c. it is void for Uncertainty.

Award was, that each Party should give to the other a general Release of all <sup>1 Cr. 638.</sup> Demands, provided, that if either of them dislike the Award, within twenty Days after made, and within that Time pay 10 s. the Arbitrament to be void; it was held, that the first Part of the Award was good, and the Provisò repugnant and void.

Arbitrators are to make their Award Secundum allegata & probata (according <sup>4 Rep. 82.</sup> to what is alleged and proved) but they may not enjoin any Oath to the Witnesses; the Award ought to be published; and no one is bound to perform, <sup>Broc. 311.</sup> till he can know what the Award is.

A Submission to Award may be revoked and countermanded before the Award <sup>8 Rep. 78.</sup> made, where there is no Specialty to abide the Award of J. S. &c. <sup>81.</sup>

Salk. 72.
Pl. 8.

A Submission was to an Award by Bond, and at the End of the Condition of the Bond was this Clause, and if the Obligor shall consent that this Submission shall be made a Rule of Court, that then, &c. Upon Motion to make this Submission a Rule of Court, it was opposed, because these Words do not imply his Consent; but if he would forfeit his Bond, he need not let it be made a Rule of Court; yet because this Clause could be inserted for no other Purpose, the Court took the conditional Words to be a sufficient Indication of Consent and made the Award a Rule of Court.

Salk. 73.
Pl. 10.
Farrley, 8.

A Matter was referred, by Consent of Nisi Prius, to the three Foremen of the Jury; and before the Award was made, one of the Parties served the Arbitrators with Subpoena out of Chancery, which hindered their Proceedings to make the Award. And the Court held this a Breach of the Rule, and granted an Attachment Nisi Causa.

Salk. 73.
Pl. 11.

Upon a Submission to the Award of the three Foremen of the Jury, who made their Award, the Defendant moved to set it aside; because they went on without giving him Time to be heard, or to produce a Witness; and Holt, Chief Justice, said, the Arbitrators being Judges of the Party's own choosing, the Party shall not come and say, they have not done him Justice; and put the Court to examine it; Aliter, where they exceed their Authority; however the Award was examined and confirmed, and the Plaintiff moved for an Attachment for not performing it; and the Court held, that the Non-performance, while the Matter was sub Judice, was no Contempt; then the Plaintiff moved for his Costs, and that was denied; upon which Powell, Justice, said, that seeing they could not give the Party any Costs, he should never be for examining into Awards again.

Salk. 73.
Pl. 12.

H. bound himself in a Bond, to stand to the Award of I. S. which Submission was made a Rule of Court. The Party, for whose Benefit the Award was made, moved the Court for an Attachment for Non-performance, which was granted; pending that, he brought an Action of Debt upon the Bond; upon this Serjeant Darnell moved, that he might not proceed both Ways, and likened it to the Cases, where the Court stays Actions on Attornies Bills, while the Matter is under Reference before the Master: Sed per Curiam, the Motion was denied, and this Difference taken; where the Court relieves the Party by Way of Amends in a summary Way, as in the Case cited, there it is reasonable; otherwise here, where the Plaintiff has no Satisfaction upon the Attachment; and the Defendant was put to answer Interrogatories.

Salk. 87.
Pl. 1.

Attachment lies not, for not performing an Award made upon a Rule of Court without a personal Demand. Holt, Chief Justice, remembered the first Attachment of this Kind was in Sir John Humble's Case in Keyling's Time, in which, and ever since, a personal Demand has been thought necessary. In such Cases of Award, though they be not legally good, an Attachment lies for Non-performance; Aliter, if impossible; but the Party is excused as to that Part which is impossible only.

1 Cr. 211.

Debt on Obligation to perform an Award, which was, that the Defendant should enjoy a House, of which the Plaintiff was Lessee for Years, during the Term, paying to the Plaintiff 20s. yearly; and for Non-payment of this, the Action was brought; and it was held to lie.

The Form of an Award made by two Arbitrators on a Submission.

TO ALL PEOPLE to whom this present Writing indented of Award shall come. We E. F. of Ec. and G. H. of, Ec. send greeting. Whereas there are several Accounts depending, and divers Controversies and Disputes, have lately arisen between A. B. of Ec. of the one Part, and C. D. of, Ec. of the other Part, touching and concerning, Ec. And whereas for putting an End to the said Differences and Disputes, they the said A. B. and C. D. by their several Bonds or Obligations, bearing Date, Ec. are reciprocally bound each to the other, in the penal Sum of, Ec. to stand to, abide by, perform, and keep the Award, Order, and final Determination of us, the said E. F. and G. H. Arbitrators, indifferently chosen, between the said Parties, to arbitrate, Ec.

[as in the Bond] so as the said Award be made in Writing, under our Hands and Seals, and ready to be delivered to the Parties in Difference, on or before, &c. next, as by the said in Part recited Bonds or Obligations, with the Conditions thereunder written, may appear. Now, know ye, that we the said Arbitrators, whose Names are hereunto subscribed, and Seals affixed, taking upon us the Burden of the said Award, and having fully examined, and duly considered the Proofs and Allegations of both the said Parties, do, for the settling Amity and Friendship between them, make and publish this our Award, by and between the said Parties, in Manner following; that is to say, first, We do award and order, that all Actions, Suits, Quarrels, and Controversies whatsoever had, moved, arisen, or depending between the said Parties, in Law or Equity, for any Manner or Cause whatsoever, touching the said Premises, to the Day of the Date hereof, shall cease and be no farther prosecuted; and that each of the said Parties shall bear and pay his own Costs and Charges, in any wise relating to, or concerning the said Premises; and we do also award and order, that the said A. B. shall pay, or cause to be paid to the said C. D. the Sum of, &c. within the Space of, &c. And further, we do hereby award and order, that the said C. D. shall, on before, &c. pay or cause to be paid to the said A. B. the Sum of, &c. or give sufficient Security for the same to the said A. B. And lastly, we do Award and order, that the said A. B. and C. D. on the Receipt of the several Sums of, &c. shall in due Form of Law, execute each to the other of them, or to the other's Use, general Releases, sufficient in Law, for the Releasing, by each to the other of them, his Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, of all Actions, Suits, Arrests, Quarrels, Controversies, and Demands whatsoever, touching or concerning the Premises aforesaid, or any Matter or Thing thereunto relating, from the Beginning of the World to the Day of the Date, &c. [here mention the Date of the Arbitration Bonds] last past. In Witness whereof we have hereunto set our Hands and Seals, the, &c. in the Year, &c.

An Umpirage, for Want of a Determination by Arbitrators chosen.

TO ALL, &c. I, I. K. of, &c. send greeting. Whereas there are several Accounts depending, &c. [here go on as in the former Award, until you come to] to stand to, &c. the Award, Order, and final Determination of E. F. of, &c. and G. H. of, &c. Arbitrators indifferently chosen, between the said Parties, to arbitrate, &c. [as in Condition of the Bonds] so as the said Award was made in Writing under the Hands and Seals of the said Arbitrators, and ready to be delivered to the Parties in Difference, on or before, &c. last past; and if the said Arbitrators did not draw up the said Award in Writing, and deliver the same as aforesaid, on or before the said &c. then the said Parties were to stand to, abide, observe, perform, and keep the Award, Umpirage, final End and Judgement of me, the said I. K. Umpire indifferently chosen, between the said Parties, for the composing and ending of Differences aforesaid; so as my said Award, Umpirage, and Determination be made in Writing, under my Hand and Seal, and ready to be delivered to the said Parties, on or before, &c. as by the said in Part recited Bonds or Obligations, with the Conditions thereunder written may appear. And whereas the said E. F. and G. H. did not make up their said Award between the said Parties, within the Time limited by the said in Part recited Bonds or Obligations, as aforesaid; whereby, and on which Account, the compassing, ending, and determining of the said Differences and Matters in Dispute now depends wholly upon me: Now, know ye, that I, the said I. K. having taken upon me, the Business and Charge of the said Award and Umpirage, and being willing to set the said Parties at Peace and Concord, by making a final End of the Controversies between them; and having deliberately, and at large, heard, examined, and duly considered the Grievances, Allegations, Titles, Vouchers, and Evidences of both the said Parties, in Relation to the said Premises in Dispute, do make, publish, and declare, and deliver this my Award or Umpirage, in the Manner following, that is to say, First, I arbitrate, award, judge, order, and determine, that, &c. BE it remembered, that A. B. of, &c. and C. D. of, &c. being desirous finally to end and determine divers Controversies, Suits, and Quarrels that have lately arisen between them, did on, &c. agree to submit and refer all the said Controversies, Suits, and Quarrels, to the Award and Determination of E. F. of, &c. and G. H. of, &c. Arbitrators, for that End indifferently chosen, by the said Parties; which said Award is to be made in Writing, under the Hands and Seals of the said Arbitrators, and ready to be delivered to the said Parties, on or before, &c. And the said Parties did mutually promise and oblige themselves, that they would obey, perform, and execute such Award as the said Arbitrators should make in the Premises. Now the said Parties do further agree, that the said Submission shall be made a Rule in his Majesty's Court of, &c. at Westminster, and that they will be finally concluded by the Arbitration that shall be made in the Premises by the said Arbitrators, pursuant to such Submission. Witness, &c.

I shall add to the preceding Specimens, the Form of a general Release as Part of an Award; and with it close this Chapter.

KNOW all Men by these Presents, that I A. B. have remised, released, and for ever quit-claimed, and by these Presents, do, for me, my Heirs, Executors, and Administrators, remise, release, and for ever quit-claim, unto C. of

Of Aliens, Naturalization, and Denization.

AN ALIEN is one born in a strange Country, out of the Allegiance of the King, being quite contrary to a Denizen or natural Subject; though a Man born out of the Land, provided the place of his Nativity be in any of his Majesty's Dominions beyond Sea, or born of English Parents, out of the Obedience of the King, if the Parents at the Time of his Birth were of such Obedience, is no Alien.

And if one born out of the King's Obedience, come and reside in England, 7 Rep. his Children, begotten and born here, are not Aliens, but Denizens.

All Persons, being the King's natural-born Subjects, may inherit, as Heirs, 11 and 12 Will. III. C. 6. though their Ancestors were Aliens.

If an Ambassador, or any other British Minister, or Person invested with any publick Character, under a Commission from the King of Great-Britain, or of a Commercial Company, enjoying Rights and Privileges under an Act of Parliament, or by Letters Patent from the Crown, have any Children in a foreign Country, by a Wife, who is an English Woman, they are by the Common Law natural-born Subjects, and not Aliens.

And if an English Merchant, residing beyond Sea, marries a Woman of the Country, by whom he has a Child, and then dies, this Child is born a Denizen, and shall be Heir to him, notwithstanding the Wife be an Alien.

Those which are born in the English Plantations, are Subjects born, as are those likewise born on the King of England's Seas.

There are two Incidents that are regularly necessary to make one a Subject born: First, that his Parents, at the Time of his Birth, be under the actual Obedience of the King; or, Secondly, that the Place of his Birth be within the King's Dominions.

It is the Place of Birth that makes the Disability of an Alien to have Lands, &c. The Blood is not the Disability, but the Place where born.

An Alien can hold no Land by Descent or Purchase, or be Tenant by the Courtsey, or in Dower.

An Alien can have no real or personal Action for or concerning Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, to him and his Heirs; albeit he can have no Heir, yet he is of Capacity to take a Fee-Simple, but not to hold; for the King, upon Office found, shall have it by his Prerogative.

A Devise of Lands to an Alien is void.

And if a Man be bound to an Alien Enemy in an Obligation, the Bond is void to him, but the King will have it.

Aliens may obtain Goods, and personal Estate, by Trade, &c. and may maintain Actions for the same; they may also have Action of Assault and Battery, and for Support of their Credit.

But they cannot bring any real Action, though he may a personal, unless it be for a House, for a necessary Habitation, being for the Benefit of Trade.

And an Alien Enemy cannot maintain any Action whatsoever, nor get any Thing lawfully within this Realm.

Aliens, living under the Protection of the King, may have the Benefit of a general Pardon.

No Alien shall be returned on any Jury, nor be sworn for Trial of Issues between Subject and Subject, &c. but where an Alien is Party in a Cause depending, the Inquest of Jurors are to be half Denizens, and half Aliens; but in Cases of High Treason this is not allowed.

An Alien shall not have any Vote in the Choice of Knights of the Shire, or Burgesses to Parliament.

And all Aliens are incapable of being Members of Parliament, enjoying public Offices, &c.

If an Action is brought against an Alien, and there is a Verdict and Judgement against him, yet he may bring a Writ of Error, and be Plaintiff there, and that such Plea is not good in that Case.

Galiffor, fol. 29. Mich. 30. Elix. Cak. 5. Parr. Page's Cafe, fol. 52. Though an Alien may purchase and take that which he cannot keep or retain, yet the Law hath provided a Mean of Enquiry before he can be divested of the same; for until some Office be found, the Freehold is in him.

And this Office, which is to gain the King a Fee, or Freehold, must be under the Great Seal of England; for a Commission under the Exchequer Seal is not sufficient to entitle the King to the Lands of an Alien born, for the Commission, is what gives the King a Title, for before that he hath none.

An Alien cannot purchase Lands for his own Benefit, but he may for that of the Crown; therefore if Land be devised to an Alien, the Crown shall have it; yet if an Alien, Tenant in Tail, suffers a common Recovery before Office found, the Recovery is good.

If an Alien and a Subject born, purchase Lands to them and their Heirs, they are Joint Tenants, and shall join in Assize, and the Survivor shall hold Place till Office found.

By the finding of this Office, the Party is out of Possession, if the same be of Houfe or Lards, or such Things as do lie in Livery; but of Rents, Common, Advowsons, and other Inheritances incorporeal, which lie in Grant, the Alien is not out of Possession, be they Appendant or in Gros; therefore if an Information or an Action be brought for the same, the Party may reverse the Office in that Court where the Action or Information is brought for the King.

And if the King obtains not the Possession within the Year after the Office found, he cannot seize * without a Scire Facias.

An Alien Infant, under the Age of twenty-one Years, cannot be a Merchant Trader within this Realm, nor can he enter any Goods in his own Name at the Custom-house.

If an Englishman shall go beyond Sea, and shall there swear Allegiance to any foreign Prince or State, he shall be esteemed an Alien, and shall pay the same Duties as they; but, if he returns and lives in England, he shall be restored to his Liberties.

An Alien Enemy commorant here by the King's Licence, and under his Protection, may maintain Debt upon Bond, although he came not with Safe-Conduct.

The eldest Son of an Alien, being also an Alien, cannot inherit; but the Land shall descend to the younger Brother, if a Denizen: As, for Instance, if there be three Brothers, of which the eldest is an Alien, the other two naturalized, and the middle Brother purchases, and dies without Issue, the younger Brother shall have the Land.

Concerning the Rule of Descent, a Proximity of Blood is not so much to be regarded as the Municipal Laws of the Country in which the Question ariseth; for the several Laws of divers Kingdoms have variously disposed the Manner of Descents, even in the same Line and Degree of Nearness: For Instance, the Father certainly is as near of Kin to the Son, as the Son is to the Father, and is nearer in Proximity than a Brother, and therefore shall be preferred as next of Kin in Administration of the Son's Estate.

According to the Laws of England, the Son's dying without Issue, or Brothers or Sisters, the Father cannot succeed, but it descends to the Uncle.

There are two Kinds of Descent, according to the Common Law of this Realm, viz.

1st, Lineal, from the Father, or Grandfather to the Son, or Grandson; and 2dly, Collateral or Transversed; as from Brother to Sister, Uncle to Nephew, and è converso: And both these again are of two Sorts.

1st, Immediate, as in Lineals, from Father to Son.

2dly, Mediate, as in Lineals, from Grandfather to Grandchild; where the Father dying in the Life-time of the Grandfather, is the Medium Differens of the Descent; Collateral, as in the Lineal, from Uncle to Nephew, or è converso.

And this is mediate Descent, or mediate Ancestor, though to many Purposes it may be immediate; for the Father dying in the Life-time of the Grandfather, the Son succeeds in Point of Descent in the Lands immediately to the Grandfather; and in Writ of Entry shall be supposed to be in the Grandfather, and not in the post & cui.

This is called a mediate Descent, because the Father is the Medium through whom the Son derives his Title to the Grandfather.

In Immediate Descents there can be no Impediment, but what arises in the Parties themselves; for Instance, the Father seized of Lands, the Impediment that hinders the Descent must be in the Father or Son, as if either of them be an Alien.

In Mediate Descents, the Disability of being an Alien, in him that is called the Medius Antecessor, will disable a Person to take by Descent, though he himself have no such Disability.

In Lineal Descents, if the Father be an Alien, and hath Issue a Denizen born, and die in the Life-time of the Grandfather; the Grandfather dies seized, the Son shall not take, but the Land shall escheat.

In Collateral Descents, A. and B. Brothers: A. is an Alien, and has Issue C. a Denizen born; B. purchases Lands, and dies without Issue; C. shall not inherit, because A. which was the Medius Antecessor, or Medium Differens, is incapable. Dyer, 274; Grey's Case.

But in any Descents, the Impediment in an Ancestor, who is not Medius Antecessor, from whom, and to whom, will not impede the Descent.

As for Instance; the Grandfather and Grandmother, being both Aliens, have Issue, the Father, a Denizen, who hath Issue the Son, a natural-born Subject; the Father purchases Lands, and dies, the Son shall be Heir to the Father, notwithstanding the Disability of the Grandfather, and yet all the Blood that the Father hath is derived from the disabled Parents; for they are not Medii Antecessores, between the Father and the Son, but paramount. Courtney's Case.
Com. Pleas,
Coron. Fol.
141.

The Law does not hinder, but that an Alien is of the same Degree and Relation of Consanguinity as natural-born Subjects, or Denizens born, the Son, the Father, and Brother, though Aliens; the Son, Father, and Brother, our Law takes Notice of as well as natural-born Subjects; and so it was adjudged; for he shall be preferred in Administration, though an Alien, as next of Kin. Cro. Car. 8, 9.
Garrow's Case.

But in Cases of Inheritance, the Law takes no Notice of him, and therefore, as he shall not take by Descent, so he shall not impede the Descent to the younger Brother; as, for Instance, A. an Alien, B. and C. naturalized by Act of Parliament, all Brothers; B. purchases Lands, and dies, sine Prole, without Issue, C. shall inherit, and not A. 29 Ed. III.
Tit. Cozeu-age, 5.

A. an Alien, B. and C. his Brothers, both naturalized by Act of Parliament; B. purchases Lands, and dies without Issue, the same shall not come to A. nor to his Issue, though a Denizen, but shall come to C. and his Issue; the Law taking no Notice of A. as to impede the Succession of C. or his Issue, though it work a consequential Disability, to bar the Issue of A. parallel to what the Law calls Corruption of Blood, which is a Consequent of Attainder. Ramsey's Case, 15 Car. 11.
in Com. Ban.

Again, in a Lineal Descent, if there be a Grandfather, a natural-born Subject, the Father of an Alien, and the Son a natural-born Subject; the Father is made a Denizen, yet he shall not inherit the Grandfather; and if the Father dies in the Life of the Grandfather, the Grandchild, though born after the Denization, doth not remove either the personal, or the consequential Impediments, or Incapacity of the Father.

In Collateral Descents, the Father, a natural-born Subject, has Issue two Sons Aliens, who are both made Denizens; one dies without Issue, the other shall not inherit him. Godfrey and Dixon's Case.
God. 275.

A. an Alien, marries an English Woman, who is seized of Lands, and has Issue; the Father and Mother die, yet the Issue may inherit the Mother, non obstante the Incapacity of the Father being an Alien. Cro. Jac. 539.
2 R. II's Rep.
Vaughan 235.

The Statute de Natis ultra Mare, declares the Issue, born of an English Man upon an English Woman, shall be a Denizen; and the Construction has been, though an English Merchant marries a Foreigner, and has Issue by her born beyond the Seas, that Issue is a natural-born Subject. Levinz, 59.
25 Edw. III.
Cro. Car. 601.

But if an English Woman goes beyond the Sea, and there marries an Alien, and has Issue beyond the Sea, that Issue are Aliens. Cro. Car. 601.
Bacon's Case.

Yet if an English Woman marries an Alien beyond the Seas, and then comes into England, and has Issue, they are not Aliens, but may inherit. Proud's Case

12 Car. II.
S. 18. S. 2.

No Alien, or Persons not born within the Allegiance of the King, or naturalized, or made a free Denizen, shall exercise the Occupation of a Merchant, or Factor, in any of his Majesty's Plantations or Territories in Asia, Africa, or America, upon Pain of Forfeiture of all his Goods, which are in his Possession, &c.

9 Ann. C. 21.
S. 53.

All such Persons as shall be born on Board any of the Ships employed about the Trade of the South-Sea Company, or in any of the Places which shall be discovered or possessed by the Company, shall be deemed natural-born Subjects.

1 Inf. S. 129.

NATURALIZATION is the making an Alien the King's natural Subject by Act of Parliament, whereby he becomes as much a Subject, to all Intents and Purposes, as if he was born so; for by Naturalization, a Person's Issue, before the Naturalization, shall inherit.

A Stranger, naturalized by Act of Parliament, may have Lands by Descent, as Heir at Law, as well as have them by Purchase; but until he is naturalized, or made Denizen, a Stranger is not generally under the King's Protection, to have the Benefit of the Laws.

7 Jac. I. C. 2.

No Person of the Age of eighteen Years, or above, shall be naturalized, unless he have received the Lord's Supper within one Month before any Bill exhibited for that Purpose, and also shall take the Oath of Supremacy and Allegiance in the Parliament-House, before his Bill be twice read; and the Lord Chancellor, if the Bill begin in the Upper House, and the Speaker of the Commons House, if the Bill begin there, shall have Authority during the Session to administer such Oaths.

1 Geo. I. C. 4.
S. 1.

The Clause in the Act 12 Will. III. Cap. 2. whereby it is enacted, that no Person born out of these Kingdoms, though he be naturalized, except such as are born of English Parents, should be capable to be of the Privy Council, &c. shall not extend to disabie any Person, who, before his Majesty's Accession to the Crown, was naturalized.

S. 2.

No Person shall be naturalized, unless in the Bill exhibited for that Purpose there be a Clause to declare, that such Person shall not be enabled to be of the Privy Council, or a Member of either House of Parliament, or enjoy any Office of Trust, or have any Grant from the Crown; and no Bill of Naturalization shall be received without such Clause.

4 Geo. I.
C. 21. S. 1.

Children born out of the Allegiance of the Crown of Great-Britain, whose Fathers shall be natural-born Subjects, shall, by Virtue of the Act 7 Ann. Cap. 5. and of this Act, be natural-born Subjects.

S. 2.

Provided that nothing in 7 Ann. Cap. 5. or this Act, shall make any Children, born out of the Liegeance of the Crown, to be natural-born Subjects, whose Fathers, at the Time of the Birth of such Children, were, or shall be attainted of High Treason, either in this Kingdom, or in Ireland, or were liable to the Penalties of High Treason or Felony in Case of their returning into this Kingdom or Ireland, without Licence of his Majesty; or were, or shall be in the Service of any foreign State, then in Enmity with the Crown of Great-Britain.

S. 3.

If any Child, whose Father, at the Time of the Birth of such Child, was attainted of High Treason, or liable to the Penalties of High Treason or Felony in Case of returning without Licence, or was in the Service of any foreign State in Enmity with the Crown, excepting all Children of such Persons who went out of Ireland in Pursuance of the Articles of Limerick, hath come into Great-Britain or Ireland, or any other of the Dominions of Great-Britain, and hath continued to reside within the Dominions aforesaid for two Years, at any Time between the 16th of November, 1708, and the 25th of March, 1731, and during such Residence hath professed the Protestant Religion, or hath come into Great-Britain, &c. and professed the Protestant Religion, and died within Great-Britain, &c. at any Time between the 16th of November, 1708, and the 15th of March, 1731, or hath continued in the actual Possession or Receipt of the Rents of any Lands in Great-Britain, &c. for one Year, at any Time between the said 16th of November, 1708, and the 25th of March, 1731; or hath, bona Fide, sold or settled any Lands in Great-Britain or Ireland, and any Person claiming Title thereto, under such Sale or Settlement, hath been in actual Possession or Receipt of the Rents thereof for six Months, between the said 16th of November, 1708, and the 25th of March, 1731, every such Child shall be deemed a natural-born Subject of the Crown of Great-Britain.

And for the better encouraging foreign Seamen to serve on board British Ships, <sup>13 Geo. II. P. 125.</sup> it is further enacted, that every such foreign Seaman who shall, after the first Day of January, 1739, have served during the War, on board any British Man of War, Merchant-Ship, or Privateer for two Years, shall be deemed a natural-born Subject of Great-Britain, and shall enjoy all the Privileges, &c. as an actual Native of Great-Britain.

Provided that no Person, thus naturalized, shall be of the Privy Council, a Member of either House of Parliament, or have any Place of Trust, civil or military, or have any Grant of Lands, &c. from the Crown.

ENACTED, that after the 1st Day of June, 1740, all Foreigners, who have P. 167, 169. inhabited or shall inhabit for seven Years, or more, in any of our American Colonies, and shall not be absent from some of the said Colonies more than two Months, at any one Time, during the said seven Years; and shall take and subscribe the Oaths, and make, repeat, and subscribe the Declaration appointed by the Act of 1 Geo. I. or, being a Quaker, shall make and subscribe the Declaration of Fidelity, and take and affirm the Effect of the Abjuration Oath, appointed by the Act 8 Geo. I. and also make and subscribe the Profession of his Christian Belief, appointed by the Act 1 W. and M. before any one of the Judges of the Colony, wherein such Persons have inhabited, or shall inhabit, shall be adjudged to be his Majesty's natural-born Subjects of this Kingdom, to all Intents and Purposes, as if they had been really born in the same; that the said Judges shall give the said Oaths, &c. in open Court, between the Hours of Nine and Twelve in the Forenoon, which shall be entered in the same Court, and also in the Secretary's Office of the Colony wherein such Person shall so inhabit; for doing whereof two Shillings shall be paid at such respective Place, under the Penalty of 10*l.* for every Neglect: Every Secretary is also required to make such Entry, in P. 169. a Book to be kept for that Purpose in his Office, on Notification by a Judge of the same Colony, under the like Penalty.

All Persons duly qualifying themselves to be naturalized, except Quakers or Jews, shall receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in some Protestant Congregation in Great-Britain, or in some of the American Colonies, within three Months next before their taking and subscribing the said Oaths and Declaration; and shall at the Time of taking and subscribing the said Oaths, &c. produce a Certificate, signed by the Person administering the said Sacrament, and attested by two credible Witnesses, whereof an Entry shall be made in the Secretary's Office of the Colony wherein they shall inhabit, as also in the Court where the said Oaths shall be taken, without Fee or Reward.

Whenever a Jew presents himself to take the Oaths pursuant to this Act, the P. 170. Words, upon the true Faith of a Christian, shall be omitted in administering the same; and the taking the said Oaths, without those Words, as the Jews were permitted to take the Oath of Abjuration by the Act of 10 Geo. I. shall be deemed a sufficient taking according to this Act.

A Certificate, under the Seal of any of the said Colonies, of any Person's having conformed in the several Particulars required by this Act, shall be deemed a sufficient Testimony thereof, and of his being a natural-born Subject of Great-Britain, to all Intents and Purposes, in every Court within the King's Dominions.

The Secretary of every respective Colony shall send over to the Commissioners P. 171. of Trade at London, at the End of every Year, to be computed from the 1st of June, 1740, exact Lists of the Names of all Persons who have that Year entitled themselves to the Benefit of this Act, under Penalty of 50*l.* for every Neglect; all which Lists shall be entered in a Book, by the said Commissioners, to be kept at the Office for publick View.

Foreign Protestants who have served in the Royal American Regiment, or as <sup>2 Geo. III. C. 25. S. 1.</sup> Engineers in America for two Years, and shall take the Oaths, &c. appointed by 1 Geo. I. C. 13. and shall produce Certificates of their having received the Sacrament in some Protestant Church, within six Months of the Time of their taking the Oaths, &c. shall be deemed natural-born Subjects.

Provided that no such naturalized Person shall be of the Privy Council, or a Member of either House of Parliament, or capable of enjoying any Place of Trust in Great-Britain or Ireland, civil or military, or of taking any Grant from the Crown to himself, or any in Trust for him, of any Lands, &c. in Great-Britain or Ireland.

20 Geo. II.
P. 935, 936,

After reciting the before-mentioned Act, it adds, and as many of the People of the Congregation called the Moravian Brethren, and other foreign Protestants, not Quakers, who scruple the taking of an Oath, are settled in his Majesty's Colonies in America, and demean themselves there as a sober, quiet, and industrious People, and many others of the like Persuasion, are desirous to transport themselves thither; and if the Benefit of the said Act of 13 Geo. II. were extended to them, they who are now there, would thereby be encouraged to continue their Residence, and others would resort thither in greater Numbers; whereby the said Colonies would be improved, their Strength increased, and their Trade extended; It is therefore enacted, that from and after the 25th of December, 1747, all foreign Protestants, who conscientiously scruple the taking of an Oath, and who are born of the Liegance of his Majesty, who have or shall reside for seven Years in any of his Majesty's Colonies in America, and shall not have been absent out of some of them longer than two Months at any one Time during the said Term, and shall qualify themselves, as by the recited Act of 1 W. and M. and 8 Geo. I. is directed, before the Chief or other Judge of the Colony, wherein they respectively have or shall so reside, shall be deemed to be his Majesty's natural born Subjects, to all Intents and Purposes, as if they had been born within this Kingdom; which said Affirmation and Subscription of the said Declarations, the said Chief, or other Judge, is to administer and take, and the same shall be done in every respect, as in the said recited Act of 13 Geo. II. is set forth and directed, and Lists shall be transmitted, &c.

P. 937.

No Person shall be naturalized by Virtue of this Act, unless he shall have received the Sacrament, &c.

The Provisions contained in the Act of 13 Geo. II. &c. shall extend to foreign Protestants, who conscientiously scruple the taking of an Oath, and who shall be qualified as aforesaid.

The said foreign Protestants shall enjoy the Privileges of natural-born Subjects, and all the Benefits of this Act, and the said Act of 13 Geo. II.

No Person who shall become a natural born Subject of this Kingdom by Virtue of this Act, shall be of the Privy Council, &c.

Nothing in this Act, or in the recited Act of 13 Geo. II. shall extend to naturalize any Person who by Virtue of an Act of 4 Geo. II. intituled an Act to explain a Clause in 7 Anne, &c. is declared not to be intitled to the Benefit of the said Act of 7 Anne, but all such Persons shall remain in the same State and Condition to all Intents and Purposes, as they would have been in, if the said recited Act of 13 Geo. II. or this Act had never been made.

1 Inst. 129.

According to Law, no one can be naturalized but by Act of Parliament, and that cures the Defect as if they had been born in England; and Acts of this Nature may be so penned, as to cure Defects in the Father or Ancestor, as well as in the Parties themselves, which it will not do except express Words to that Purpose are inserted.

enjoy any Office or Dignity; and when he is thus enfranchised, he is said to be under the King's Protection, or esse ad Fidem Regis Angliæ; before which Time he can possess nothing legally, in England. But notwithstanding this, it is of Naturalization; for a Stranger naturalized may inherit Land by Descent, which a Denizen cannot; and in the Charter, whereby a Person is made a Denizen, there is commonly contained some Clause that expressly abridges him of that full Benefit which natural Subjects enjoy.

When the King makes a Denizen by Letters Patent, he may purchase Lands, and his Issue, born afterwards, may inherit them; but those he had before shall not: And though a Denizen is enabled to purchase, he cannot inherit the Lands of his Ancestors, but as a Purchaser he may enjoy them; and he may take Lands by Devise.

Aliens made Denizens are incapable of Offices in the Government, to be Members of Parliament, &c.

It is so high a Prerogative to make Aliens Denizens, that the King cannot grant his Power over to any other.

Of Banks and Bankers.

A BANK is a public Office for keeping and circulating Money, to be employed in Exchanges, Discounts, Government-Loans, &c. or to be otherwise disposed of for the Profit of the Proprietors.

In other Words, a Bank may be denominated a common Repository, where many Persons agree to keep their Cash, to be always ready at their Call, or subject to their Directions.

The Word Ban is derived from the Italian, Banca or Banco, as those of that Nation used formerly to exercise the Function of Exchangers, or Bankers, in all the Publick Places, or Bourses of their trading Cities, seated on Forms with Benches to count their Cash, write their Letters and draw their Bills of Exchange on; and some Authors add, that when any of them had the Misfortune to fail, his Bench was broke, either as a Mark of Infamy, or to put another in its Place, and from this Occurrence they pretend the Word Bankrupt, in French Banqueroute, is derived.

And from which Circumstance, we may see that this Business was originally confined to private Persons; but the Advantages arising from it to Commerce being very diffusive and general, several States thought proper to incorporate some of the most considerable of their Subjects for the Purposes of carrying it on with a greater Security to the concerned; whilst other Potentates retain the Protection and Management in their own Hands.

Before we proceed to an Illustration of the Constitutions of the most reputable Banks now existing, in most of the capital Cities of Europe, which will be done according to the Order of Time in which they were instituted; it will be necessary just to mention the different Kinds of Banks, as they differ widely from each other in their Principles and Practice.

Some are instituted wholly on the publick Account, and put under the Direction of the Magistrates, who are obliged to take such Care of the Management, that the Money or Bullion deposited therein, shall always be kept for the Use of the Proprietors, and shall never be let out for Profit or Advantage; of this Kind is the famous Bank of Amsterdam, which is administered with so great a Strictness and Fidelity, that it is said, a Magistrate, who was one of the Directors of it, was sentenced to Death, for making Use of a Sum of Money but for one Day, though he paid it in the next. Wherefore, from an Opinion the Proprietors entertain of the Equity of its Administration, they judge themselves so secure that their Money lies always ready to answer their Demands, that they seldom draw out large Sums, but make their mutual Payments by transferring the Sums from one Man's Account to another's; and from this great Ease and Convenience it is come to pass, that Payments made by Assignments on this Bank are valued at from 3 to 5 and 6 per Cent. above the Payment of Money,

Money, which Difference between the Bank and current Money is called the Agio.

A second Sort of Banks is such as consist of a Company of monied Men, who being duly established and incorporated by the Laws of their Country, agree to deposit a considerable Fund or joint Stock, to be employed for the Profit and Advantage of the whole Society, in all those Ways which are compatible with the Nature of such an Undertaking; as borrowing upon their own Credit; and lending Money upon good Securities; buying and selling Bullion, Gold and Silver, and foreign Specie; discounting of Bills of Exchange, or other secure Debts; receiving and paying the Cash of other Persons; and of this Kind is the Bank of England.

A third Sort is the Banks of private Men, of which we shall treat distinctly in a separate Chapter.

As to the first Kind, it is certain, that nothing can be so infallibly safe, as where the Value is kept always ready in Specie; and here also the Ease and Security of Traders are effectually provided for, in the Receipts and Payments of their Money; but yet this Kind of Bank is so much the less useful to the Publick, as it can neither be helpful to Government on Emergencies, nor to Traders, in accommodating them with Money.

The Security of the second Kind consists in the certain Knowledge of its Fund or Stock, the Solidity of its Institution, and the incorruptible Fidelity of its Management; wherein it is always the Interest of the concerned to give the Publick the utmost Satisfaction: And in this Respect the Bank of England must be secure beyond all Apprehension to the contrary, as well on Account of the great Sums they have lent to Government, upon the Faith of the British Parliament, which is sufficient always to keep them above all Suspicion of Failure, as from the known skilful and profitable Management of those who have been successively concerned in the Direction. Besides, as an incorporated Body, they are not, like private Men, subject to Death. And as this Kind of Bank has all the Conveniences of the former, it has also this beyond it, that its Capacity of lending Money is an invaluable Accommodation to the Community, since it will always have a Tendency to keeping the Interest of Money Low, and be an effectual and permanent Check to Usury, which is the greatest Bane to Trade and Navigation.

Of the Bank of GENOA.

THE most considerable corporate Body in the Republick of Genoa, is that which is called St. George's Bank, the most ancient Establishment of the Kind in Europe, though the Date of its Institution is not certainly known: But we may be assured it is of much greater Antiquity than that of Venice, the Republick of Genoa being founded A. D. 950. The Fund was constituted from such Branches of the publick Revenue as were set apart by the Government, and such Sums as should be borrowed during the Exigencies of the Commonwealth; which Fund hath never been violated, under the greatest Troubles and Perplexities of the State. The Administration of this Bank being for Life, and partly in the Hands of the Citizens, gives this Body a great Authority in the State, and a powerful Influence over the People. This Bank is generally considered as a great Load to the State, and as a Kind of Inferior Senate, which breaks the Uniformity of their Aristocratic Government. The People however, receive no small Advantage from it, both as it is a Check to their Aristocracy, and distributes the Power among more private Members of the Republick; and while the State kept itself clear of the Quarrels of the great belligerent Powers of Europe, this Bank maintained a Circulation for the Support of publick Credit and Commerce; but having unhappily taken Part in their Wars in the last and the present Century, they exhausted their publick Treasure, their Commerce declined, and with it their publick Credit, and the Reputation of St. George's Bank, which will never recover its original Importance.

Of the Bank of VENICE.

THIS is commonly called Banco del Geró, on Account of the continual Rotation of its Cash, and is properly a Receptacle, or Office, for publick Deposits, or a general and perpetual Cash currency for all Merchants and Traders.

It was established by a solemn Edict of the Republick, which ordains, that all Payments, as well of large Purchases, as Bills of Exchange, shall be only made in Bank; and that all Debtors and Creditors shall be obliged to pay and receive their Money there, which is effected by a single Transfer from the Accounts of the one to that of the other; so that the Credit and Debit only change Names, without any real or effective Money being paid.

However, Payments are sometimes made in Cash, particularly for the Retail Business; or when Strangers insist on Ready Money, or some Persons are better pleased to have their Funds in their own keeping; and the Necessity of sometimes making these effective Payments, was the Occasion of opening a Ready-Money Office, for those who required it; and it has been experienced, that this Current Cash has not caused any sensible Diminution in the Funds of the Bank; but, on the Contrary, the Liberty of withdrawing the Money at the Proprietor's Pleasure, has rather increased than lessened them.

By this Means the Republick, without restraining the Liberty of Trade, and without paying any Interest, makes herself Mistress of five Millions of Ducats, at which the Funds of this Bank are fixed, and at the same Time supplies the Necessities of State, without being obliged to have Recourse to extraordinary Impositions; and the good Order always observed in the Bank's Administration, for which the Republick is Security, has rendered its Establishment so solid, that there is Room to judge it will last as long as the Government itself.

In this Bank the Writings are kept, in Liras, Soldi, and Denari de Grossi, of which one Lira is worth ten Ducats de Banco, or two hundred and forty Grossi, the Ducat being composed of twenty-four Grossi.

The Money of Exchange, is always understood to be Bank Ducats, which are imaginary, and a Hundred of these make a Hundred and twenty Ducats current, so that the Difference between Bank and Current Ducats is twenty per Cent. the Brokers being prohibited to negotiate at a higher Price.

The Bank is shut up four Times a Year, viz. the 20th of March, 20th of June, 20th of September, and the 20th of December; and it remains shut each Time for the Space of twenty Days: However, this does not prevent their Negotiations, as well in Ready-Money as Bank, to be wrote off at its Opening.

The Bank is likewise shut upon extraordinary Occasions, viz. eight or ten Days at the Carnival, and as long for Passion Week; it is likewise shut every Friday, when there is no Holiday, to make their Balance.

The Bills of Exchange drawn for the Fairs, or otherwise, must all be payable in Bank, and a Seller cannot refuse Payment of his Goods in the same Manner, except by an Agreement to the contrary.

Bills of Exchange here have six Days Grace, and in Default of Payment, the Protest must be made on the sixth Day, otherwise the Holder stands to the Damage; but from the Moment the Bank is shut, a Debtor cannot be forced to the Payment of Bills, neither in Ready-Money nor otherwise, nor can be protested against for it, till on the sixth Day after the Bank opens, except when there is a Failure, in which Case every one may use their Diligencies, provided their Bills are fallen due.

Of the Bank of AMSTERDAM.

THIS Bank, formerly supposed to be the most considerable and richest in Europe; was established on the 31st of January, 1609, by the Authority of the States General, under the Direction of the Burgomasters of this City, who are Security for the same, and constituted themselves perpetual Cashiers for its Inhabitants, tants, to whom it is of the greatest Conveniency and Service, as Millions may be paid in a Day, by the simple Assignations of a Draught on it, without the Intervention of any real Cash.

The Funds of this Bank are related to be so great as is hardly credible, many Authors quoting their Value to be, at least, that of three thousand Tons of Gold, and these rated at a Hundred Thousand Guilders per Ton, make, at only thirty-five Schillings per Pound Sterling, the prodigious Sum of 58,571,406*l.* but as this Value is unascertained, I shall give Sir William Temple's Opinion of it instead of my own, who speaking of this Bank, in his Remarks on the State of the United Provinces, says, "In the City of Amsterdam is the Bank, "so celebrated in all the World, on Account of the Greatness of its Treasure, which exceeds that of all others hitherto known, real or imaginary: The "Place where it is lodged is a great Vault under the Town-House, provided with Doors, Locks, and every other Security necessary for its Safety "and Preservation; and it is certain, that when any one goes to see the Bank, "he will find there a very great Treasure in Bars and Ingots of Silver, in Plate, "and an incredible Quantity of Sacks full of Metal, said to be Gold and "Silver, as I believe, in effect they are; though as there are none but the "Burgomasters who have any Direction in this Bank, and as there is no one "who keeps any Account of what is brought in or carried out at different "Times, it is impossible to know, or even guess with any Exactness, the Proportion there is between the real and imaginary Treasure of it; as it does not "solely consist in the effective Gold and Silver, but also in the Credit of the "City, and of the State, of which the Funds and Revenues are as great as "that of some Kingdoms, and it is obliged to be answerable for all the Money "brought in: The greatest Payments made between the Merchants of this "City, are in Bank Bills, so that it may be said, that this Bank is properly "the general Chest, in which every one incloses his Money, because they deem "it there to be in greater Security, both for paying and receiving, than if "they had it in their own Coffers; and the Bank is so far from being obliged "to pay an Interest on the Money deposited in it, that what is there is worth "more than the current Money, in which small Payments are handily made, "because it neither admits nor receives any Cash, but of the best and most "valuable Species, and those that are most current, as well in Germany as in the "Low Countries."

By its Establishment, it is ordained, that the Payment of Bills of Exchange, and wholesale Goods, shall be only in Bank, except the Sum be under three hundred Guilders, and nothing less than this can be wrote into Bank, without paying six Stivers, except it be by the East and West India Companies, who are exempt from this Duty, and may write in what small Sums they please, so that the Debtor is obliged to carry his Money in there, and the Creditor from thence to receive it.

The Payments are made by a simple Transfer, or Assignation of one to the other, so that he that was Creditor on the Bank Books before, becomes Debtor from the Moment he has assigned any Sum to another, who is wrote down as Creditor in his Room.

Although the Bank of Amsterdam has no Account of current Cash open like that of Venice, this does not hinder, notwithstanding its Regulation, but that it sometimes makes Payments in Ready-Money; and there are particular Cashiers without the Bank, who make the Payments for an Eighth per Cent. that is to say, two Stivers and a half for a hundred Guilders.

This Contravention is tolerated as beneficial to Trade, forasmuch as sometimes one is obliged to make a Payment in effective Money, more especially in retail Affairs; and it often happens that some Persons are better pleased to have their Cash ready for Use elsewhere, than in the publick Bank, either for Negotiations or to pay Bills of Exchange, when their Express Tenor is to be paid not in Bank, but in ready current Money.

It is by this Bank, that the City of Amsterdam is supported in so much Splendor and Magnificence, and without interrupting Commerce, possesses the greatest Part of the Cash of its inhabitants, who are not less rich for having their

the Bank, Purpose by their Fortunes in the Bank, as these they may convert into Ready-Money whenever they please, and again bring them into Bank when it shall be agreeable.

And to carry on this Sort of Business or Exchange, an Application need only be made to certain Merchants, or particular Cashiers, who are commonly to be met with between ten and eleven o'Clock at the Dam, or before the Town-House or Bank with whom the Negotiation may be adjusted for an Agio, which they endeavour to effect on the highest Terms when they are Sellers, and on the lowest they possibly can when they buy.

The Difference between buying and selling, is ordinarily from a Sixteenth to an Eighth per Cent. and the Agio varies from three to six per Cent. sometime more, and at other Times less, according to the Difference in Exchange or the Scarceness of the Specie.

When a Payment is made in Ducatoons, or Rixdollars, and not in a small Kind of Money, less is given for the Agio, because the large Coins are received at the Bank.

These money Negotiations are likewise made at the Bourse, or at Home, between Merchant and Merchant, with or without the Intervention of Brokers, who have one per Mil. for their Pains, paid equally between the Buyer and Seller.

To have an Account opened for a Person in the Bank, he must pay ten Guilders for once only.

The Bank only receives Ducats of Gold, Ducatoons, Rixdollars, old Louis-d'ors, and other such-like Species, and they have reduced the Ducatoons to sixty Stivers instead of sixty-three, as they passed in ready or current Money; the Rixdollar to be forty-eight from fifty, and other Sorts of Coins in Proportion.

The Bank never engages for the Specie it receives, but on the Footing of five per Cent. under their common Value in current Money, viz. the Ducatoon at the Value just now mentioned, which is the true Original of the Agio, and which consequently must be five per Cent.

Ingots of Gold, and Bars of Silver are likewise deposited there, of which the Price is regulated according to their Value after the Assay, which is made by the City Assayer, and all Sorts of Money, and Species of Gold and Silver are also deposited, and principally Dollars, for which the Bank gives its Receipts, called Receipts of Mexican Dollars, and which are commonly negotiated at Change.

Those who have Cash in Bank may draw it out whenever they please, on paying a Sixteenth per Cent. for the Care of it; and if at the Time of taking it out, the Agio should be under five per Cent. the Treasurer will pay the Difference, forasmuch as that when it was received, there was charged on it the five per Cent.

The Books of the Bank are kept in Guilders, Stivers, and Pennings, of which twenty Stivers make a Guilder, and sixteen Pennings or Deniers a Stiver.

Any one drawing on the Bank more than he has there, incurs a Penalty of three per Cent. on the Sum he overdraws.

The Bank is shut up twice a Year, viz. in January or February, and in July or August, and remains so eight, ten, or fifteen Days, during which Time the Books are balancing.

It is shut up besides, on the Feasts of Easter, the Ascension, and Christmas, and on Fast Days, and about the 22d of September, when the Fair begins.

If the six of Days Grace, which are allowed on Bills of Exchange, happen to expire whilst the Bank is shut, the Bearer of them is in Time to protest them, in Case of Non-payment, the second or third Day after its Opening.

When any one who has an open Account with the Bank, happens to die, his Heirs must prove by a good title, the Right they have to demand the passing the Sums to their Credit, which were due to the deceased.

Whenever any Difference happens between Merchants and Tradesmen about the Bank, it shall be summarily settled by the Commissioners named for this Purpose by the Magistracy of Amsterdam.

There are some certain Days in the Year, when the Money may be disposed of the very Moment it is brought in, which is often improved by vain and designing Men, who, without having a Farthing Property in that Fund, get large Sums credited on their Account, though the Debtor Side Cancels them immediately, yet by this Game they either flatter their Pride or advance their Credit, as the Debit Spunge is not seen by many.

The Bank makes no negotiable Bills, but, as before-mentioned, gives Receipts for Effects deposited, which may be sold; for Example, a Person having one Thousand Louis d'ors of the Sun, which are commonly from Guild. 11 8/ to 11 14/ current Money, and wanting ready Cash, endeavours to sell the Gold, for which he is only offered Guild. 11 8/ but resolving not to sell at this low Price, in Hopes of a speedy Rise, he carries them to the Bank, which takes them on the Footing of Guild. 10 14/ each, making Guild. 10,700 Bank Money, which he may dispose of at an half per Cent. less than he must allow for six Month's Care of it, as accustomed; and if during that Time, the Louis are in Demand, he withdraws them, or sells his Receipt, as he thinks proper: But if on the contrary they still keep low, though with an Appearance of soon rising, he carries his Receipt to the Bank, where they debit his Account in the proper Office, Guild. 53: 10/ for the half per Cent. mentioned in the Receipt, and on these Terms he may prolong the Deposit to the Time it suits him to withdraw it, paying every six Months the aforesaid Sum; and this is the only Case in which the Bank gives Receipts that are negotiable; and if the aforesaid one is sold, the Buyer, before he can make Use of its Value, must restore to the Bank the 10,700 Guild. advanced, and the half per Cent.

No Seizure can be made of Money in the Bank, and whenever a Sum is to be entered, in which there is Pennings, it is never wrote in with more nor less than 8, so that if there be 7, 9, 10, 11, or 12, 8 only are inserted; but if there be above 12, then there is wrote in a Stiver.

There were formerly only four Book-keepers in the said Bank, and as many Comptrollers, but since, some have been added, and every one in their Turn, receives the Notes that have been entered in the Books, to distribute to others according to their Number; for Example, the first Book contains four or five Hundred Leaves, and the four Books only make an End of the Year, and are put on the Archives after balancing.

If a Man wants to know what has been wrote in on his Account, he must go to the Bank between seven and eight in the Morning, and if he lets this Time relapse, he must pay two Stivers, and if he delays it till after nine, he must pay six Stivers.

The Officers of the Bank are paid by the City, and all that is received for correcting Accounts, Retardation of Hours, and Forfeits, is for the Poor, as the Fractions of the Stiver are for the Comptrollers.

After opening the Bank from the Time of balancing, all those who have open Accounts ought to make a Note of what remains due to them, and therein they should mark the Folio of the Bank Book, in which their Account is, how many Sums they have got written, if any, since the preceding Account, their Name and Surname, and then ask the Commissioners who have the Page of their Account, whether that Remainder or Balance agrees with the Bank Books, which he tells them, and also whether the Folio is continued or changed; if the Sum disagree, he also informs them of it, and in this Case, he must make an Extract of the Bank Account as it stands in your Book, to examine it, and see from whence the Error or Difference of the Sums proceeds, for which Verification twelve Stivers are generally paid, a little more or less: The Account being thus examined, they return it when asked for, and if they find it does not agree with that stated in the Bank Book, on finding the Mistakes, they note them, if otherwise, they put at the Foot of the said Account, seen, or else, agrees with Book-keepers, and afterwards they put the Name and Surname of him to whom it belongs, with the exact Balance, deducting one Stiver for every Sum, which he has written to the Credit of his new Account, which he ought to note conformably in his own Books. This Verification is made twice a Year, under Penalty of twenty-five Guilders Guilders Mulst; and although it has not been possible to examine the Account which they have in Bank, they may however, at the opening of it, get the Sums wrote to the Beaters of Bills of Exchange, and for Merchandizes bought of the India Companies, provided that it be entered as some Part, and if they have got too much wrote, they will be subject to the Fine of three per Cent. as aforesaid; but this Privilege is only for that Day; for in Regard of other Days, if you are sure that you have Cash wrote on to the Credit of your Account, it may be disposed of the same Day, and wrote off to another and another.

When Traders or Merchants, who have Accounts with the Bank, cannot go themselves to get them examined as aforesaid, they may send some other in their Room, with a Power, made in the same Manner as is before directed, for those Persons carrying the Notes to be wrote on.

When a Person's Bank Account is full, and the Book-keepers are obliged to open another, from the Time of his being advertised thereof, he ought to take Care to go to see whether the Articles agree, as he does at the opening of the Bank.

The Book-keepers send daily to those who desire it, a Note of the Sums that have been wrote in to their Credit; and for which they are paid six, eight, or ten Ducatoons per Ann. from each Merchant or Banker, who has this Advice given him, which is divided among the said Book-keepers, after deducting the Expence of a Servant they keep for this Purpose.

The Bank observes the following Rules, which it is necessary for those who keep Cash there to be apprized of.

1st. No one can dispose of his Money paid in till the next Day, except he pays half per Cent. upon the Sum he desires to draw out the same Day; for Example, If I have got wrote in 6000 Guilders, and have a Mind to draw out 4000 of them, the same Day, my Note will not pass, neither then, the subsequent Day, nor afterwards, till I have paid twenty Guilders for the said half per Cent.

2dly. There are, however, commonly three Days in the Year, as has been just hinted before, on which the Money may be disposed of that is brought in the same Day; viz. the second Day after opening the Bank, when it has been shut for balancing; and at the Feast of Pentecost.

3dly. If any more is disposed of than is in Bank, the Penalty of three per Cent. and the Overdraft must be paid before any Note.

4thly. As the Bank shuts up twice a Year, all who have Accounts open must balance with it, in six Weeks after opening, on Penalty of twenty-five Guilders.

5thly. When an Account is once opened in the Bank, whatever enters to its Credit costs nothing; and formerly only a Stiver was charged for every Sum that went out, or was paid to another; but as Business was considerably augmented in the Year 1714, and occasioned a great Number of Clerks to be added to the Bank, for the Dispatch of the Notes, brought in to be wrote, it was ordained, that instead of one Stiver, two should be paid from the first of February, 1715, which has continued ever since, and is always charged the first Article in a new Account.

When it happens that, through Mistake or Forgetfulness, a Man writes off a Sum to one he is not indebted to, instead of to him he is owing to, although he immediately gives Advice of the Error, and that the Sum is not yet entered in the Bank Books, he cannot withdraw his Note from the Bank by acknowledging he was mistaken, not even though he carries the Person with him in whose Favour the Note is wrote, to declare that the Drawer does not owe him any Thing, the Book-keepers will say that he must pay, as it is wrote in the Books, and that, if he has made a Mistake, the Person in whose Favour the Error was committed, has only to return it the next Day, wrote in on the Account.

All those who have any Thing to write in Bank, are obliged to carry their Notes themselves, in the same Manner as those who have Accounts are to go, and demand the Balance; or if they will save themselves the Trouble, they must empower one of their Counting-house to act for them, which will authorize their doing the one and the other; this Procuration, as has been observed before, costs thirty-two Stivers, which is paid for down, and must be renewed at the End of a Year and six Weeks; and if it should happen, that a Man is obliged to make a pretty long Voyage, and has given an authenticated Procuration to his Wife, or some other Person, to make all Sorts of Payments, without having left a proportional Number of Bank Notes, signed in Blank, to the Sum he imagines he may have to pay during his Voyage, if the Person to whom he has given the said Power, signs the Bank Notes, without having the Letter of Attorney registered there, none of them will pass; and in this Case, the Person so authorized must carry and leave an authentick Copy of his Power at the Bank, and that he signs all the Notes with his Name, adding, by Procuration of such a one; and the noting the said Power costs fifty Stivers, which is paid out of Hand.

The Time of writing in Bank, is from seven or eight in the Morning to eleven, but after eleven to three, every Note carried in, will cost six Stivers, and after three, none are admitted.

When a Man who has an Account with the Bank is ill, and unable to sign his Draughts, or to go there to sign a Power, the Person who transacts his Affairs ought to inform the Bank of his Disorder, and Incapacity to attend there, for either of these Purposes, though he is desirous of paying what he owes; in which Case, a Declaration drawn out by a Notary, and signed by the Physician, and one or two of his nearest Neighbours or Relations, should be carried to the Bank, which on Receipt of it, sends a Servant to see in what Condition the sick Person is, and if he finds him really as is declared, his Agent is authorized to sign the Draught, in the same Manner as if he had signed the Letter of Attorney at the Bank; but if the Infirm is in a Condition to sign, he that is impowered may request the Book-keepers to draw out a Procuration for that Purpose, and to send it with him to be signed, which they do, accompanied by a Servant of the Bank, who carries the Book of Procurations with him to the sick Man, who signs that drawn out for him in the Book, in the Presence of the Bearer, and from the Time that a Power is thus executed, he that it is made to, may sign and carry the Notes to the Bank, although he has not yet got the Extract of the Power, which oftentimes is not delivered in eight or ten Days; but when once the Bank has delivered it, he is obliged always to shew it when he carries the Draught there, or demands a Balance; if the sick Man dies after executing the Power, and before it is delivered to him in whose Favour it is made, it will not be delivered to him at all, because the Person being dead, his Procuration is of no Effect.

When any one who has an Account in the Bank is dead, after having made a Will, his Heirs, or the Guardians he has appointed, must carry to the Bank an authenticated Copy of the said Will, paying fifty Stivers down for noting it; at the same Time they desire to know the Balance of the Deceased's Accounts, to see whether that of his Books corresponds with the Bank, and they may have the Balance transported to a fresh Account, either in the Name of the Widow, Heirs, their Guardians, or the Executors, without its costing them the ten Guilders, which is always paid for opening a new one.

But if one who keeps Cash at the Bank dies intestate, those who pretend to be his Heirs, or meddle with the Succession, must first be authorized by the proper Judges, and bring a Copy of the Sentence to the Bank, before they will be permitted to dispose of the Deceased's Balance.

The Agio has been always fluctuating, ever since the Bank's Establishment, though not in so great a Degree of late Years as formerly; in the Year 1693, it was up to twelve and thirteen per Cent. on Account of the bad Schillings of six Stivers which were reduced to five and a half; and at the Beginning of the Month of April, in that Year, after the Diminution, it returned to two and a half, and as high as six per Cent. it afterwards fell and rose till the Year 1703, when it was down to one and a half and two per Cent. but since then it has got up again, and commonly passes now from four to five per Cent.

During the Height of the War between France and the United Provinces, in the Year 1672, many who had Cash in the Bank were eager to withdraw it, believing that if the French King, already Master of Utrecht, should become so of Amsterdam, they would lose it all; and this Money was refused to none: But some impatient ones, imagining that the Funds would not be sufficient to pay such a great Number of Creditors, found People who falved or cured this imaginary Ill, by giving them ready Money for four or five per Cent. Loss, which occasioned the Bank Money to become on a Par with the current, and even under; but Affairs were afterwards settled in the Manner as at present.

I have already mentioned that the Bank's receiving none but the finest Coin, and these at about five per Cent. under their current Value, is the Occasion of the Agio, or more properly the Agio itself; and as this Difference is readily to be found by Præctice, or the common Rule of Three, I judge my enlarging thereon would only be superfluous.

Of the Bank of ROTTERDAM.

THIS Bank is not so considerable as that of Amsterdam, of which we have been speaking, though the Difference in its Government is very little. It was established the 18th of April, 1635, and keeps Accounts with those Merchants who chuse it, both in Bank and current Money; the first to pay all foreign Bills, which are in Bank Money, and the second for the Discharge of Negotiations made at Rotterdam on foreign Parts, which are always in current Money.

The Bank daily regulates the Agio on its Cash, which is constantly fixed to a Pillar of the Bourse, that every one may know it; and as the rest of its Regulations are similar to the last Bank treated of, I shall not detain the Reader longer upon this.

Of the Bank of HAMBURGH.

ALTHOUGH the Funds of this Bank are not near so considerable as those of that of Amsterdam, the Integrity and Exactness with which every thing is managed has given it a great Reputation over all Europe, and more particularly in the North.

The Citizens and Corporation are the Sureties for this Bank, in which the Senate has no Inspection; and the Directors, being four in Number, are chose by Plurality of Votes from among the principal of the Freemen.

Their Duty is to see that the Regulations be punctually observed, and to furnish the Cashiers with Money when any Payments are to be made, which however is done without touching the Treasure, the Directors taking Care to provide it from other Funds.

In regard to the Capital of this Treasure, it is supposed to be very considerable; but as the Book-keepers take an Oath not to disclose the Entries and Extracts of the Bank, nor what each Particular deposits, it is very difficult to conclude any thing with Certainty; and this Obligation to Secrecy hinders a Creditor from knowing what any one has in the Bank, so that no Seizure can be made there.

The Book-keepers, who, like the Directors, are four in Number, are obligated to give the Comptrollers two Balances weekly; and none but Citizens are permitted to have an Account in the Bank, and from such only it will receive any Cash by way of Deposit, without any Interest; and it is by these Notes on the Bank that they have the Conveniency of paying their Bills of Exchange, and for the Purchase of many Sorts of Merchandize, by only making a Transfer of their Value.

Nothing less than an hundred Mark Lubs can be wrote into Bank, and two Schillings are paid for every Sum not exceeding three hundred Marks; but whatever is above this may be wrote in gratis.

There are certain Hours in the Day appointed for writing into Bank, viz. from Seven to Ten in the Morning; but if any one has a Mind to write in from Ten to One, and from Three to Five in the Afternoon, he may do it by paying two two Schillings for each Sum; and it is also in the same Morning Hours that a Person may inform himself, whether the Sums due to him have been entered, which he may also do from Ten to One, on paying two Schillings Lubs to the Book-keeper; to avoid which, there are many Merchants who agree with the Bank for a yearly Stipend, to have the Liberty of writing into the Bank at any Hour they please from Seven to One, which is commonly from twenty to forty Mark Lubs, according to the Extent of the Merchant's Business, and the Quantity of Affairs he has to transact.

When any one has a Mind to open an Account with the Bank, he must pay fifty Rixdollars of three Marks, or forty-eight Schillings Lubs.

The Bank is shut every Year from the last of December to the fifteenth of January following, and the Species that are commonly received in it are Rixdollars, with their Parts of Halves, Quarters, and Eights, which are generally worth an Eighth, often a Quarter, and even sometimes a Half per Cent. more than the Money which is wrote by Notes into Bank; that is, if there is a Want of Rixdollars in Specie, an Eighth, Quarter, and as far as a Half, must be wrote into Bank more than the Money received; but on the contrary, if one has Cash in Specie to put in, the Bank only makes good an Eighth, and sometimes a Quarter per Cent. Benefit.

The Bank-Books and Writings are kept in Marks, Schillings, and Deniers Lubs; and it is to be observed, that the Fractions are never wrote under one Schilling or six Deniers.

Those who have Effects in Jewels, precious Stones, Silver, &c. and want to raise Money on them, may carry them to the Bank, where they are exactly inventoried, a Loan is advanced at a very moderate Interest, and they remain deposited as a Security for the Payment of Principal and Interest in six Months, which, if not complied with, the Things are sold at the Bar of the Bank to the highest Bidder, after having advertised the Day of their Sale and Delivery.

Of the BANK of ENGLAND.

WHEN we consider the vast Extent, great Variety, and national Importance of the Business of the BANK of ENGLAND; the Solidity, Permanency, and Universality of its domestic and foreign Credit; the known Magnitude of its Capital; the reputed Stores of Wealth in Gold and Silver Specie, and Bullion, deposited within its Walls; and the discreet Administration of the Whole; we may boldly affirm, that no Bank of any other Nation in the known World, can be placed in Competition with this noble Institution.

It was originally founded on a Charter granted by William III. of glorious and immortal Memory; was ingrafted into the restored Constitution of our Country by an Act of Parliament, passed in the 5th Year of the Reign of that illustrious Monarch and his good Queen Mary, and improved and extended by divers subsequent Acts of the Legislature. The Substance of which Acts, in order that all the Powers, Rights, and Privileges vested in the Corporate Body, and all the Business transacted by, or to be transacted with the Company, may be clearly understood—is given correctly in this, and the following Pages.

Every Year, beginning from the 1st of June, 1694, the Sum of 140,000*l.* out of Monies to arise by Duties of Tonnage, since expired, and by an Excise on Beer, &c. hereby granted, being a Moiety of the Rates granted by 2 Will. and Mary, St. 2. Cap. 10. shall be a yearly Fund for the Annuities in the Act mentioned, and for the Purposes hereafter expressed, and any Deficiencies to be supplied out of the unappropriated Revenues.

s. 18. For raising 1,200,000*l.* Part of 1,500,000*l.* granted by the Act, the yearly Sum of 140,000*l.* shall be kept apart in the Receipt of Exchequer, and paid as in the Act is directed.

s. 19. Their Majesties, by Commission under the Great Seal, may appoint Persons to take Subscriptions on or before the first Day of August, 1694, by any Persons, Natives or Foreigners, &c. for raising and paying into the Receipt of the Exchequer 1,200,000*l.* Part of the Sum of 1,500,000*l.* and the yearly Sum of 100,000*l.* Part of the said yearly Sum of 140,000*l.* shall be applied to the Use

Their Majesties, by Letters Patent, may appoint in what Manner the said Sum of 1,200,000*l.* and the said yearly Sum of 100,000*l.* or any Part thereof, may be transferred to such Persons as shall accept of the same, and incorporate such Subscribers, to be one Body Corporate, by the Name of The Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and they shall be capable to purchase and retain Lands, &c.

The Commissioners of the Treasury, &c. are required, without further Warrant, to direct their Warrants yearly, for the Payment of the said 100,000*l.* to the Contributors of the said 1,200,000*l.* and the Auditor of Receipt of the Exchequer, and all other Officers of the Exchequer, are enjoined to issue the said Monies without Fee, and under the Penalties inflicted upon any Officer for diverting any Money appropriated by this Act.

The Corporation so to be made, shall not borrow, under their Common Seal, any further Sum than 1,200,000*l.* so that they shall not, at any one Time, owe more, unless by Act of Parliament, upon Funds agreed in Parliament; and if any more shall be borrowed under the Common Seal, every Member of the said Corporation shall, in their private Capacities, be liable in Proportion to their several Shares to the Repayment of such Monies; with Interest; and in such Case, an Action of Debt may be maintained in any of the Courts of Record at Westminster, by the Creditors, to whom any such Security, under the Common Seal of the Corporation, shall be made, against all, or any of the Members of the Corporation, in Proportion to their Shares, wherein Judgement may be recovered, as if Security were given in their private Capacities, any Agreement to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Corporation shall not trade, or suffer any Person in Trust for them to trade, with any of the Effects of the Corporation, in the buying or selling of any Merchandize or Goods; and every Person so trading, or by whose Order such Trading shall be made, shall forfeit treble the Value of the Goods and Merchandize traded for, to such Person as will sue for the same in the Courts of Record at Westminster.

But the Corporation may deal in Bills of Exchange, and in buying or selling Bullion Gold or Silver, or in selling Goods mortgaged to them, and not redeemed within three Months after the Time, or such Goods as shall be the Produce of Lands purchased by the Corporation.

All Bills obligatory and upon Credit, under the Seal of the Corporation, may, by Endorsement thereon under the Hands of the Proprietors, be assigned, and the Assignee may sue in his own Name.

If the Governor, or other Members of the Corporation to be established, shall upon Account of the Corporation, purchase any Lands or Revenues belonging to the Crown, or lend to their Majesties, their Heirs, or Successors, any Money by way of Anticipation on any Part of the Revenue, other than such Part only on which a Credit of Loan shall be granted by Parliament, then the said Governor or Members so consenting to lend, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall forfeit treble the Value of such Sum so lent, whereof one fifth Part shall be to the Informer, to be recovered in any Court of Record at Westminster, and the Residue to be disposed of by Parliament.

Amerciaments, Fines, and Issues against the said Corporation, upon Account of any Suits to be brought against them, shall not be pardoned; and if such be estreated into the Exchequer, the Officers of the Exchequer, who are to pay the yearly Sum of a hundred thousand Pounds, may, out of that, detain so much as the said Amerciements, Fines, or Issues amount unto.

If any Person shall obtain a Judgement against the Corporation, and shall bring Execution thereupon unto the Officers of the Exchequer, then the said Officers are required to pay the Sum in the Execution mentioned to the Plaintiffs, or their Assigns; and the said Officers may detain so much of the yearly Sum of a hundred thousand Pounds as the Debt shall amount unto.

- S. 33. Any Member of the House of Commons may be a Member of this Corporation, notwithstanding Stat. 5 and 6 Will. and Mar. Cap. 7.
- S. and 9 Will. III. Cap. 20. S. 20. The present Stock of the Bank of England shall be enlarged by new Subscriptions.
- S. 21. Before such Enlargement, the Stock shall be computed by seven of the present Members, and seven of the new Subscribers; and if the clear Stock amount not to one Million two hundred thousand Pounds, the old Members to make it up in Tallies, Orders, Bank-Bills, or Notes; but if it exceed one Million two hundred thousand Pounds, then the Surplus to be divided among the old Members.
- S. 22. Seven Commissioners, appointed by his Majesty for that Purpose, shall take such new Subscriptions before the 24th of June, 1697.
- S. 23. Four-fifths of each Subscription shall be, at the Time of subscribing, answered by Tallies and Orders, upon the first, third, or fourth Aid of four Shillings per Pound, the quarterly Poll, Three-fourths of the Customs, the Salt Act, Two-thirds of the additional Excise, the additional Imposition, the Stamp Act, the Three hundred thousand Pounds per Ann. on Tonnage and Poundage, the Duties on Marriages, Births, Burials, &c. on Wines, Vinegar, and Tobacco, &c. and Joint Stocks, &c. on Low Wines, &c. on the Six thousand Pounds per Week out of the Excise, or the Five hundred Pounds per Week out of the Post-Office; and the other fifth Part in Bank-Bills or Notes.
- S. 24. After the 24th of June, 1697, Interest of eight per Cent. per Ann. shall be allowed for the Tallies and Orders so subscribed, out of the Funds granted by this Act, viz. the Tonnage and Poundage; the Duties on Wine and Vinegar, granted by Stat. 1 Jac. II. Cap. 3. the Duties on Tobacco and Sugar, by 1 Jac. II. Cap. 4. the additional Impositions on Goods and Merchandizes, by 2 Will. and Mar. Stat. 2. Cap. 4. and 4 and 5 Will. and Mar. Cap. 5. the Stamp Act, 5 and 6 Will. and Mar. Cap. 21. and the Duty on Houses, by 7 and 8 Will. Cap. 18.
- S. 25. The Interest payable to the Bank upon so many Tallies or Orders as the Bank is already possessed of, whereof the Principal shall be equal to the said fifth Part subscribed in Bank-Bills or Notes, shall be likewise augmented to eight per Cent.
- S. 26. The new Subscribers shall, after the said 24th of June, be Members of, and united to, the Bank of England.
- S. 28. During the Continuance of this Bank, no other Bank, or Fellowship in Nature of a Bank, shall be erected, or permitted by Act of Parliament.
- S. 29. The Interest due on Tallies and Orders, subscribed into the Bank, shall be accepted as so much principal Money.
- S. 30. The Bank may borrow by Bills, over and above the one Million two hundred thousand Pounds, to which they were at first limited, any Sum not exceeding the Sum subscribed, under an Obligation of paying the said Bills in Money upon Demand; and in Default thereof, on Demand made at the Bank between nine and twelve in the Forenoon, and the Default proved by Affidavit in Writing before one of the Barons of the Exchequer, the said Bills to be paid at the Exchequer, out of the first Money due unto the Bank, other than the Fund of a hundred thousand Pounds per Annum; but these Bills shall be distinguished from the Debts contained within the said one Million two hundred thousand Pounds, and expressed to be made by Virtue of this Act.
- S. 31. The Capital Stock and Fund of the said Bank shall be exempt from Taxes.
- S. 32. After completing the said Subscriptions, the Interest of all Tallies and Orders subscribed, together with the said hundred thousand Pounds per Ann. shall be applied to the Use of the Members of the Bank, proportionably to each Member's Share therein.
- S. 33. The Stock of the Bank shall be accounted a personal, and not a real Estate, and shall go to Executors, and not to Heirs.
- S. 34. No Contract or Agreement, either by Word or in Writing, for buying or selling of Bank Stock, shall be good in Law or Equity, unless it be registered in the the Books of the Bank within seven Days, and the Stock be transferred within fourteen Days.

No Act of the Bank shall forfeit the Stock thereof, but the same shall be <sup>8 and 9 Will.</sup> subject to their Debts. <sup>III. Cap. 20.</sup>

It shall be Felony without Benefit of the Clergy, to forge or counterfeit the common Seal of the Bank, or any sealed Bank Bill, or any Bank Note, or to alter or erase any such Bills or Notes. <sup>S. 35.</sup>

The Officers of the Exchequer shall keep Account of all Monies appropriated <sup>S. 37.</sup> to the Bank, either upon the Fund of a hundred thousand Pounds per Ann. or any other Parliamentary Funds, or for Tallies belonging to the Bank; and shall duly direct, record, and make Payment thereof, under the Penalty of Loss of Place, Incapacity, and double Damages.

The Monies arising by the Continuation of the Subsidy of Tonnage and <sup>S. 33.</sup> Poundage, &c. of Wines, Vinegar, and Tobacco, &c. by the additional Impositions on Goods and Merchandizes; by stamped Vellum, &c. by Marriages, &c. and by the Duties on Houses, from the Times that the said Duties are severally continued as aforesaid, till the first of August, 1706; and by the Surplus of the Duties on Wine, Vinegar, and Tobacco, &c. over and above the one Million five hundred thousand Pounds Credit given thereupon, and the Interest thereof arising by the Act 7 and 8 Will. III. Cap. 10. continued till the 29th of September, 1701; and also on Houses, after the Repayment of seven thousand three hundred and eighty-two Pounds, eleven Shillings, and four Pence, borrowed thereon, by 7 and 8 Will. Cap. 18. and the Interest thereof; and of all the Bills signed at the Mints for the Six-pence per Ounce upon Plate, brought in between the 4th of May, 1696, and the 4th of November, 1696, granted for seven Years, from the 25th of March, 1696; and upon Salt, &c. after the Repayment of one Million seven hundred and twenty-four thousand Pounds, borrowed thereon, and the Interest thereof, arising by the Act 7 and 8 Will. III. Cap. 31. shall be the general Fund for making good the particular Funds in this Act expressed, and shall be applied accordingly.

The Monies arising by the said general Fund, after the 28th of June, 1693, as <sup>S. 41.</sup> well by the said Duties on Houses, and additional Impositions, as for the said Duties on Vellum, &c. continued from the 28th of June, 1693, to the first of August, 1706, and for Tonnage and Poundage, &c. continued from the 25th of December, 1699, to the 1st of August, 1706, and for Marriages, &c. and for Wines, Vinegar, Tobacco, &c. continued from the 28th of September, 1701, to the 1st of August, 1706, and by the said Surplus on Wines, Vinegar, and Tobacco, &c. and on Salt, &c. shall be applied towards Principal and Interest of the said first, third, and fourth Aids of four Shillings per Pound; the quarterly Poll; the Three-fourths of the Customs; the Duties on Salt, &c. the Two-thirds of the additional Excise; the additional Impositions; the Duties on Vellum, &c. on Marriages, &c. on Wines, Vinegar, and Tobacco, &c. and the three hundred thousand Pounds per Ann. out of Tonnage and Poundage, in Proportion to the respective Deficiencies, as computed in this Act. And every twenty-eight Days, an Account shall be made up at the Treasury of all the Monies brought in, applicable to the said deficient Funds, which shall be applied proportionably, as well to the Bank of England, as other Persons intitled to Principal and Interest thereon.

Out of the said general Fund the Interest due to the Bank shall be made up <sup>S. 43.</sup> eight Pounds per Cent.

Where any Revenue is appropriated by Parliament for Repayments in Course, <sup>S. 44.</sup> the same shall be paid accordingly; but the new Funds in this Act shall be applied as hereby prescribed.

In Case of Judgement of Forfeiture given against the Bank, the yearly Pay- <sup>S. 45.</sup> ments out of the Exchequer, and all the Estate belonging to the Bank, shall be vested for three Years in twenty-four Persons, to be chosen by the Bank, who shall have Power to receive the Monies due to the Bank, as if no such Judgement had been given; and to pay and discharge the Debts and Contracts, due at the Time of such Judgement; after which, the Surplus shall be divided amongst the several Members; and then the said yearly Payments shall be vested in the particular particular Members, in Proportion to a List thereof, to be made up by the said Trustees, and shall be assignable in a Book to be kept by the Auditor of the Receipt.

- 8 and 9 Will. III. Cap. 20. S. 46. The Bank may employ a Clerk to copy the Docquets of any Extents, Judgements, &c. in any of the Offices of Record at Westminster, paying as for a Search only.
- S. 47. No Member of the Bank shall be adjudged a Bankrupt, by Reason of his Stock in the Bank, nor shall the Stock be subject to foreign Attachment.
- S. 48. The Monies received out of the Exchequer for the Bank, shall be divided among the Members proportionably, for their particular Use.
- S. 49. The Debts of the Bank shall never exceed their capital Stock, under Penalty of subjecting the several Members, so far as their Dividends received will extend, to satisfy the Debts to any Person, who may recover the same with treble Costs.
- S. 50. If the said Funds for Interest shall appear insufficient, they shall be made up of such Aids, &c. as shall be granted in the then next Session of Parliament; and if upon the first of August, 1706, or within three Months after, the Produce of the several Aids, &c. shall not be sufficient to discharge the Principal and Interest intended to be discharged by this Act, the same shall be supplied out of such Aids, &c. as shall be granted the next Session of Parliament.
- S. 52. In all future Elections, not above two-thirds of the Directors of the preceding Year shall be chosen.
- 9 and 10 Will. III. Cap. 3. S. 4. The Bank of England shall make Dividends of the Monies which shall be received by them, by Virtue of the Tallies and Orders which have been subscribed into their Stock, pursuant to the above Act 8 and 9 Will. III. Cap. 20. once in every six Calendar Months at least.
- 12 and 13 Will. III. Cap. 12. S. 14. The Governor and Company of the Bank of England, until they shall be repaid all Monies which they shall lend upon this Act, for or in Part of 420,000*l.* being the last Part of 820,000*l.* authorised to be borrowed on the weekly Payment of 3,700*l.* out of certain Branches of Excise, which Interest for such 420,000*l.* after the Rate of seven per Cent. shall not be obliged to make Dividends of the Monies to be received by them, by Virtue of any Tallies or Orders subscribed into their Stock, in Pursuance of the above Act 8 and 9 Will. III. Cap. 20. but at such Times only as shall be ordered by a general Court.
- 6 Ann. Cap. 22. S. 9. During the Continuance of the Bank of England, it shall not be lawful for any other Body Corporate, or for other Persons united in Partnership, exceeding the Number of six, in England, to borrow Money on Bills or Notes payable at Demand, or at less Time than six Months. This Clause is repeated in Stat. 7. Ann. Cap. 7, S. 61. and Stat. 3. Geo. I. Cap. 8. S. 44. and therefore the said Sections are omitted in the said Acts here following.
- 7 Ann. Cap. 7. S. 1. Recites that by an Act 5 Will. and Mar. Cap. 20. the Bank of England was erected, 1,200,000*l.* was lent to their Majesties, for which there is payable to the Governor and Company, the yearly Sum of 100,000*l.* out of the Duties of Excise, redeemable by Parliament; reciting another Act made 8 and 9 Will. III. Cap. 20. For making good the Deficiencies of several Funds and for enlarging the Capital Stock of the Bank.
- And another Act made 5 Ann. Cap. 13. for continuing Duties on Houses, to secure a yearly Fund for circulating Exchequer Bills, now expired, reciting also, that the Governor and Company did lately admit new Subscriptions for doubling their Stock of 2,201,171*l.* 10*s.* at the Rate of 11*s.* to be paid for every 100*l.* subscribed; and that Subscriptions have been made for that Sum; It is enacted, that 2,201,171*l.* 10*s.* be added to the Stock of the Bank, which before such Additions, consisted only of the like Sum; so that the whole capital Stock now shall amount to 4,402,343*l.* and the new subscribers shall be incorporated with the present Members of the Bank, and be taken to be one Body Politick and Corporate, by the Name of The Governor and Company of the Bank of England.
- S. 2. The said Capital Stock shall be assignable in the same Manner as the original capital Stock.
- S. 3. The Bank is to pay into the Exchequer 400,000*l.* before the 25th of August 1709.

The Bank of England, thus enlarged, shall for ever be a Body Corporate, and 7 Ann. Cap.
enjoy the yearly Fund of 100,000*l.* out of the Excise. 7. S. 5.

The Stock and Funds of the Bank, and the Interest of every Member therein, S. 62. shall be exempted from Taxes, and shall be deemed a personal Estate, and shall go to Executors and not to Heirs, and shall not be liable to foreign Attachment.

The original Fund of 100,000*l.* per Ann. and all Profits for the Management S. 63. of the Corporation, shall be applied to the Use of the Members of the Corporation ratably.

It shall be lawful for the Bank at any Time to reduce their capital Stock, S. 65.
increased as aforesaid, by Dividends; taking care that the Total of their Debts do not exceed the Value of their Capital: And in case the Governor and Company by any Dividend, shall reduce their Capital without proportionably reducing the Total of the Debts, so that the Value of their Capital shall not be sufficient to answer their Debts; in such Case, the particular Members who shall receive such Dividend, shall be severally liable, so far as the Shares by them received will extend, to pay the Debts which shall remain due to any Persons, who may sue for the same, besides treble Costs, by Action of Debt or upon the Case, &c.

It shall be lawful for the said Governor and Company to call in any Sums of S. 72.
Money, which they in a general Court shall think necessary, to be paid by their Members proportionably, which shall have before been divided, out of the said Capital of 4,402,343*l.* and in Case any Member shall neglect to pay his Share, at the Times appointed, by Notice in the London Gazette, and fixed up on the Royal Exchange, it shall be lawful for the Governor and Company to stop the Dividends of such Members, and also to stop the Transfers of their Shares, and to charge the Defaulters with Interest at six per Cent. and in Case the Principal and Interest be not paid in three Months, they shall have Power to sell the Stock of such Defaulters, to pay the same.

Every Person who shall be elected Governor, Deputy-Governor, or Director 9 Ann. Cap. 7. of the Bank of England, shall, during that Year, be incapable of being chosen S. 111.
Director for the management of the Affairs of the united Company of Merchants of England, trading to the East-Indies, and vice versa.

The Bank shall continue a Body Corporate, and enjoy their yearly Fund of 12 Ann. Stat.
100,000*l.* subject to the following Power of Redemption: 1. Cap. 11.

Upon twelve Months' Notice, after the 1st of August, 1742, upon Repayment S. 24.
by Parliament to the Bank of 1,600,000*l.* and all Arrears of the said 100,000*l.*
per Ann. and of all Money owing to them upon Tallies, Exchequer Orders, or Parliamentary Funds, such Funds, for Redemption whereof other Provision is made, excepted, the said yearly Fund of 100,000*l.* shall cease.

After such Redemption the Corporation shall cease. S. 25.

It shall be lawful, as well for the Bank as for any others, to lend Money to 12 Ann. Stat.
the Treasurer of the Navy, &c. upon South-Sea Stock, pursuant to the Stat. 10 S. 16.
Ann. Cap. 19. S. 185.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England, being willing to deliver 3 Geo. I. Cap. up to be cancelled, as many Exchequer Bills as amount to 2,000,000*l.* in prin- 8. S. 1.
cipal Money, and to accept an Annuity of 100,000*l.* being five per Cent.
for the same, to commence from Christmas, 1717, redeemable upon one Year's Notice.

The Bank shall, before Christmas 1717, deliver up as many Exchequer Bills as S. 5. shall amount to 2,000,000*l.* in principal Money, to be cancelled.

After Christmas 1717, the Bank shall for ever have one Annuity, of 100,000*l.* S. 6.
being five per Cent. computed on the said Sum of 2,000,000*l.* which yearly Sum shall be paid out of the Aggregate Fund, and Duties on Houses, and shall be paid to the Bank for ever, at the four usual Feasts.

Upon one Year's Notice to be given at Christmas 1717, or at any quarterly Feast S. 7.
after, and upon Repayment to the Bank of the 2,000,000*l.* and of all Arrears of the said yearly Sum of 100,000*l.* the said yearly Sum shall cease.

For the better Payment of the Annuity of 100,000*l.* standing Orders shall S. 13.
be signed by the Treasury.

- 3 Gen. I. Cap. As the several Duties chargeable with the Payment of the said Annuity shall
8. S. 14. be brought into the Exchequer, such Money shall be issued upon such Orders, weekly or otherwise, towards discharging the several Annuities thereon charged, to grow due at the End of the Quarter of a Year, so as such weekly Payments exceed not the Sums of the several Quarterly Payments, which shall grow due at the End of each Quarter.
- S. 16. The said Annuity of 100,000*l.* shall be deemed personal Estate; and the same and the Stocks which the Bank now have, and those they shall be entitled unto by Virtue of this Act, and the Sums payable to them in respect of any such Stock, shall be free from all Taxes, and not liable to foreign Attachment.
- S. 17. The said Duties on Houses, Aggregate Fund, and other Duties, shall be continued to his Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors for ever, and shall be raised, &c. by such Methods, &c. as are prescribed by the respected Acts now in Force.
- S. 18. The Monies of the said Duties, &c. which shall be brought into the Exchequer for Purposes in this Act, except the Charges for raising, &c. the same, are appropriated for discharging the growing Payment on the said Annuity of 100,000*l.* which Payments are to be satisfied without Charge, but subject to Redemption. And in Case any Officer of the Exchequer shall misapply any of the Monies, or shall not keep Books, and do all other Things by this Act required, he shall forfeit his Office, and be incapable to serve his Majesty in any Employment of Trust or Profit, and be liable to pay double the Sum misapplied, with Costs to the Party grieved; to be recovered in any of the Courts at Westminster.
- S. 22. The annual Sum of 100,000*l.* shall be preferred in Payment before the yearly Sum of 120,000*l.* to the Civil List.
- S. 23. After satisfying the Payment aforesaid, the Deficiencies on the original Fund of 100,000*l.* per Ann. payable to the Bank out of five-seventh Parts of certain Duties of Excise, see 5 and 6 Will. and Mar. Cap. 20. S. 19. before recited, shall be satisfied out of the Monies by this Act appropriated; after which the yearly Sum of 4000*l.* shall be issued to the Sheriffs.
- S. 24. The Surplus of the Duties, &c. hereby appropriated at the End of any Quarter, shall attend the Disposition of Parliament.
- S. 25. In Case the Produce of the said Duties, &c. shall be deficient, such Deficiency shall be made good out of the Produce of the said Duties, &c. in any subsequent Quarter.
- S. 26. If such Deficiency shall happen at the End of any Year, reckoning each Year to end at Michaelmas, such Deficiency shall be made good out of the next Aids to be granted in Parliament.
- S. 38. It shall be lawful for the Bank, from Time to Time, as they shall see Cause, to call for, from their Members, in Proportion to their respective Interests in the capital Stock, any Sums of Money, as in a general Court shall be judged necessary; and all Executors, &c. shall be indemnified in paying the same; and if any Member shall neglect to pay his Share of the Money so called for, at the Time appointed, by Notice in the London Gazette, and fixed upon the Royal Exchange, it shall be lawful for the Bank not only to stop the Dividend of such Member, and to apply the same towards Payment of the Money so called for, but also to stop the Transfers of the Share of every such Defaulter, and to charge him with an Interest of five per Cent. per Ann. for the Monies so by him omitted to be paid, till Payment thereof: and if the Principal and Interest shall be three Months unpaid, the Bank shall have Power to sell so much of such Defaulter's Stock as will satisfy the same, rendering the Overplus to the Proprietors; and the Bank may, in a general Court, when they shall adjudge their Affairs will admit thereof, cause any Sum of Money so called in, to be divided amongst the then Members, in Proportion to their respective Shares in the capital Stock.
- S. 33. The Bank may borrow Money on any Contracts, &c. under their common Seal, or upon Credit of their capital Stock, at such Interest as they shall think fit, though it exceed the Interest allowed by Law, and give such Security as shall be to the Satisfaction of the Lenders; and they may contract with any Persons, upon such Terms as they shall find necessary, for the better enabling them to perform perform such Things as they are to do in Pursuance of this Act, and take Subscriptions from such Persons for that Purpose; and such Contract, &c. shall not be chargeable with Stamp Duties.

No Member of the Bank, for any Thing in this Act contained, shall be disabled from being a Parliament Man, or adjudged liable to be a Bankrupt. 3 Geo. I. Cap. 8. S. 43.

The Bank may in a general Court make such Addition to their capital Stock, in Regard of their undertaking to discharge Exchequer Bills, as they shall think fit; and so much as shall be so declared, shall be deemed capital Stock, and the Members of the Bank, who shall have a Share in such Stock, may transfer the same in Method, &c. prescribed by any Statute or Charter now in Force for Assignments.

The Bank shall continue a Corporation, and enjoy the said several Annuities, till all the said Annuities shall be redeemed, according to the Provisos in this Act. S. 49.

For Encouragement of such Persons as are willing to advance Monies for paying of the Principal Sums amounting to 8,762,625*l.* upon the Lottery Acts of 9 and 10 Ann. for redeeming Annuities on an Act 12 and 13 Will. III. Cap. 12. to Patentees, out of the weekly Sum of 3,700*l.* out of the Excise, for which the Persons advancing the same, are to have Annuities of five per Cent. redeemable by Parliament: It is enacted, that till the Annuities of five per Cent. shall be redeemed by the Parliament, the Bank shall employ two Persons within their Office of London, one to be their chief Cashier, the other their Accountant General; and the Monies coming into the Exchequer for the Payment of such Annuities, shall be paid quarterly to the said Cashier, by way of Imprest and on Account, and the Accountant-General shall inspect the Receipts and Payments of the Cashier, and the Vouchers relating thereto; and all the Monies to be advanced for such Annuities shall be one capital or Joint-Stock, on which the said Annuities shall be attending; and all Persons in Proportion to the Monies they shall advance, shall have a Share in such Stock, and in the Annuity attending the same; and such Shares shall be transferrable and adviseable as is prescribed by the Act 1 Geo. I. Cap. 19. and no Stamp Duties shall be chargeable on such Transfers: And the Bank, notwithstanding the Redemption of any of their own Funds or Annuities, shall continue a Corporation, relating to the receiving, &c. the Annuities last mentioned, till the same be redeemed by Parliament; and no Fees shall be taken for paying the said Annuities, or for such Transfers. Nevertheless the Treasury may allow out of the Monies to be imprested as aforesaid, Salaries to the Cashier and Accountant general. S. 50.

Transfers of Bank Stock shall not hereafter be made liable to any higher Duties than are now payable for the same. S. 51.

The Bank may, under their common Seal, assign the said Annuities of 100,000*l.* or any Part thereof, and also such Annuities of five per Cent. per Ann. to any Persons whatsoever, and so toties quoties; which Assignments shall not be subject to any Tax, so as an Entry be made of such Assignments in the Office of the Auditor of the Receipt. S. 53.

Nothing in this Act shall hinder the making good any Deficiency in the yearly Fund of 1,16,573*l.* 12*s.* mentioned in the Act 1 Geo. I. Cap. 2. S. 54.

Any Vote of the House of Commons signified by their Speaker in Writing, and delivered at the Office of the Bank, shall be deemed a sufficient Notice within this Act. S. 55.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England having agreed, that from the Feast Day of St. John Baptist, 1727, their Annuity of 100,000*l.* upon the Sum of 2,000,000*l.* See 3 Geo. I. Cap. 8. S. 6. before recited, shall be reduced to four per Cent. It is enacted that after the Nativity of St. John Baptist, 1727, the said Annuity shall cease, and the Governor and Company of the Bank, subject to the Proviso of Redemption in this Act contained, shall have in Lieu thereof, one Annuity of 80,000*l.* which shall be payable out of the Duties on Houses, and the Aggregate Fund; and shall be paid to the said Governor and Company, and their Successors for ever, from Midsummer, 1727, at the four usual Feasts, in such Manner and on such Conditions. as in the former Act 3 Geo. I. Cap. 8. in Relation to the said Annuity of 100,000*l.* 21 Geo. I. Cap. 9. S. 1.

21 Geo. I.
S. 2.

On Repayment by Parliament to the Bank of England, of the Principal Sum of 2,000,000*l.* and of all Arrears of the said Annuity, the Annuity shall cease.

S. 3.

If at any Time Payment be made of any Sum, not less than 500,000*l.* in Part for the principal Sum, and of all Arrearages; then so much of the said Annuity as shall bear Proportion to the Monies so paid in Part of the Principal shall cease.

S. 4.

The Annuity shall be deemed personal Estate; and the same and the Stock which the said Company now have, or may be entitled unto, by Virtue of this Act; and all the principal Sums and Annuities payable to the Company in Respect of any such Stock, shall be free from Taxes, and shall not be liable to foreign Attachments.

S. 5.

The former Acts, and all the Powers, &c. therein contained, such Alterations as are made by this Act excepted, shall continue to be used, &c. and the Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall continue a Corporation, and shall enjoy these Annuities till they shall be redeemed, &c.

S. 6.

If any Person shall alter, forge, or counterfeit any Bank Bill, or Bank Note, made for Payment of Money, by, or for the said Governor and Company, or any Bank Note, or shall erase any such Bill or Note, or any Endorsement thereupon, or shall tender in Payment, utter, &c. any such altered, forged, or counterfeited Bill or Note, or any erased or altered Bill or Note, or the Endorsement thereupon, &c. knowing such Bill or Note, or Endorsement, to be altered, forged, counterfeited, or erased, and with Intention to defraud the said Governor and Company, or any other Person; every such Person shall be adjudged a Felon.

1 Geo. II.
Stat. 2. Cap.
8, S. 1.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England having agreed to pay into the Exchequer 1,750,000*l.* for the Purchase of an Annuity of 70,000*l.* subject to Redemption; It is enacted, that every Year after the Feast Day of St. John Baptist, 1728, a yearly Fund of 70,000*l.* being four per Cent. for the Sum of 1,750,000*l.* shall be payable in Manner herein expressed, for the Satisfying the Annuities to be purchased in Pursuance of this Act, till Redemption thereof by Parliament.

S. 2.

The said yearly Fund of 70,000*l.* shall be payable out of the Monies, which after the said Feast of St. John Baptist, 1728, shall arise into the Exchequer for the Duties on Coals and Culm, granted by 9 Ann. Cap. 22. continued by 5 Geo. I. Cap. 9. and made perpetual by 6 Geo. I. Cap. 4.

S. 3.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall advance into the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer, the Sum of 1,750,000*l.* by the 24th of July, 1728.

S. 5.

On Payment by the Bank, of the said Sum of 1,750,000*l.* in Manner aforesaid, the Governor and Company, and their Successors and Assigns, shall be intitled to receive at the Receipt of the Exchequer, out of the said yearly Fund, one Annuity of 70,000*l.* to commence from the 24th of June, 1728, and to be paid by half-yearly Payments, at Christmas and Midsummer, till Redemption thereof by Parliament, and the said Annuity of 70,000*l.* shall be free from Taxes.

S. 6.

An Order shall be signed by the Treasury for Payment of the said Annuity, and the same shall not be determined by the Death or Removal of any of the Commissioners of the Treasury, &c.

S. 7.

As the Money of the said Duties shall be brought into the Exchequer, the same shall be issued upon the said Orders towards discharging the said Annuity, to grow due at the End of the Half Year in which such Payment shall be made; so as such Payment do not exceed the half-yearly Payment which shall grow due.

S. 8.

The said Annuity shall be a personal, and not a real Estate, and shall not be liable to foreign Attachment.

S. 9.

If after the 24th of June, 1728, the Produce of the said Imposition on Coals and Culm shall be so deficient, as that the Monies arising therefrom shall not be sufficient to discharge the half Year's Annuity then due, then the Deficiency of such half Year shall be supplied out of the overplus Monies of the said Duties arising arising in any subsequent half Year; and if at any Time after the 25th of December, 1728, such Produce shall be so deficient, at the End of any one Year, computing the same to begin at Christmas yearly, as that the same shall not be sufficient to discharge the whole Year's Annuity then due, every such yearly Deficiency shall be made good out of the first Supplies which shall be granted in Parliament; and if no such Supplies shall be granted within six Months, then the same shall be made good out of any Monies which shall be in the Receipt of the Exchequer of the Sinking Fund, except such Monies of that Fund as are appropriated to particular Uses.

Whatever Monies shall be so issued out of the Sinking Fund, shall be replaced out of the first Supplies to be granted in Parliament. <sup>1 Geo. II. Stat. 2. C. 8. S. 10.</sup>

If there should be any surplus Monies arising by the said Duties at the End of any Year, computing the same to end at Christmas yearly, after the said Annuity of 70,000*l.* and all Arrears thereof are satisfied, &c. such Surplus shall be reserved for the Disposition of Parliament.

Upon Repayment by Parliament to the Bank of England, of the said 1,750,000*l.* and of all Arrears, the said Annuity shall cease; and after such Redemption, the Monies arising by the said Duties shall not be applied but as shall be directed by future Acts of Parliament.

If at any Time after the 25th of December, 1729, Payment be made to the Bank of any Sum, not less than 500,000*l.* in Part of the principal Sum, at which the Annuity is redeemable, and also of all Arrears of the said Annuity, then so much of the Annuity, as shall bear Proportion to the Monies so paid in Part, shall cease.

The Bank shall continue a Corporation till the Redemption of the whole Annuity of 70,000*l.*

All former Powers granted to the Bank for assigning any Annuities or Capital Stock, formerly purchased by them, and now belonging to them, shall be revived; and the Governor and Company are empowered to transfer the said Annuity of 70,000*l.* as they shall think proper; subject, nevertheless, to Redemption by Parliament, and without Power to enlarge their Capital Stock out of the same.

After reciting the Act of 12th Ann. Sess. 2. Cap. 9, for laying additional Duties on Soap and Paper, and on certain Linens, Silks, Calicoes and Stuffs, and upon Starcb, and exported Coals, and upon stamped Vellum, Parchment, and Paper, &c. and that the Governor and Company of the Bank of England have agreed to pay into the Exchequer 1,250,000*l.* for the Purchase of an Annuity of 50,000*l.* subject to Redemption by Parliament, to be charged on the surplus Monies to arise from the said additional Duties; it is enacted, that yearly, from the Feast of St. John Baptist, 1729, a yearly Fund of 50,000*l.* being after the Rate of four per Cent. for the Sum of 1,250,000*l.* be settled for satisfying the Annuities to be purchased in Pursuance of this Act, till Redemption thereof by Parliament.

The said yearly Sum of 50,000*l.* shall be payable out of the overplus Monies of the said additional Duties, which shall remain after satisfying, &c. so much as shall be due to the South-Sea Company, on their Annuity and additional Allowance for Charges of Management, granted by the Act 6 Geo. I. Cap. 4. and the Treasury shall quarterly, in every Year, after the Feast of St. John Baptist, 1729, at the four usual Feasts, or within six Days after, cause the overplus Monies of the said additional Duties to be computed, and applied towards making good the said yearly Sum of 50,000*l.* without diverting any of the Monies which by the said Act 6 Geo. I. Cap. 4. ought to be reserved for satisfying the said Annuity to the South-Sea Company.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall pay into the Exchequer 1,250,000*l.* before the 6th of October, 1729.

On Payment of the said 1,250,000*l.* the Company shall be intitled to one Annuity of 50,000*l.* from the 24th of June, 1729, to be paid by quarterly Payments till Redemption thereof by Parliament; and the said Annuity of 50,000*l.* shall be free from Taxes.

Orders shall be signed by the Treasury for Payment of the said Annuity, &c. as per 1 Geo. II. Stat. 2. Cap. 8. S. 6.

- Geo. II. C. 3. S. 7.* The said Annuity shall be a personal Estate, and shall not be liable to foreign Attachment.
- S. 8.* If the overplus Monies of the said additional Duties shall be deficient, &c. the Deficiency shall be supplied, as in the preceding Act of 1 Geo. II. Stat. 2. Cap. 8. S. 9, 10, and 11.
- S. 11.* Upon Repayment by Parliament to the Bank of England, of the said Sum of 1,250,000*l.* and of all Arrears of the said Annuity of 50,000*l.* the said Annuity shall cease, and the Monies arising by the Surpluses of the said additional Duty shall not be issued, or applied to any other Use, but as shall be directed by future Acts of Parliament.
- S. 12.* If Payment be made to the Bank of any Sums, not being less than 500,000*l.* at a Time, in Part of the said principal Sum, and if Payment be then also made of all Arrears of the said Annuity, then so much thereof as shall bear Proportion to the Monies so paid in Part of the said principal Sum, shall cease.
- S. 13.* The Bank shall continue a Corporation till Redemption of the said Annuity of 50,000*l.*
- S. 14.* The Bank may assign the said Annuity of 50,000*l.* or any Part thereof, but subject to such Redemption by Parliament.
- S. 16.* Out of the Sinking Fund there shall be paid to the Bank, 500,000*l.* for redeeming a proportionable Part of the Annuity of 80,000*l.* granted to them by Stat. 11 Geo. I. Cap. 9.
- 11 Geo. II. C. 27. S. 16.* At the Feast of St. Michael, 1738, there shall be issued to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, the Sum of 1,000,000*l.* out of any of the Aids granted in this Session of Parliament, for redeeming the Annuity of 40,000*l.* Part of the Annuity of 60,000*l.* in further Part of the principal Sum of 2,000,000*l.* being the Amount of Exchequer Bills, delivered up by the Bank according to the Directions of the Act, 3 Geo. I. Cap. 8. and in respect whereof, an Annuity of 80,000*l.* was payable to the Bank by Act 11 Geo. I. Cap. 9. and of which an Annuity of 20,000*l.* was redeemed by Payment of 500,000*l.* pursuant to the Act 2 Geo. II. Cap. 3.
- 15 Geo. II. Pages 527, 528, 529, 530, 531.* Reciting the several Acts of 7 and 12 Ann. made concerning the Bank, which continued the Governor and Company an Incorporation till 1742, subject, however, to Powers of Redemption, as therein mentioned.
- And the Time of the said two former Acts being expired, the Company, by this Act, are engaged to supply the Government with the further Sum of 1,600,000*l.* before December 25, 1742, at different Payments, as demanded by the Treasury, each Payment not to be more than 400,000*l.* and at a Month's Notice.
- P. 532.* The said Sums to bear an Interest of three per Cent. till August 1, 1743, and on any Default, the said Company may be sued in any of his Majesty's Courts at Westminster, and shall forfeit twelve per Cent. Damages, and full Costs, for which their Stock and Funds shall be liable.
- P. 533.* The several Provisoes contained in the recited Acts of 7 and 12 Ann. and all Provisoes in any other Acts for determining the said Fund of 100,000*l.* per Ann. are hereby repealed; and the said Company, and their Successors, shall continue to enjoy the said entire yearly Fund, to be paid out of the Duties of Excise, with perpetual Succession, and Privilege of exclusive Banking, and all other Abilities, &c. granted to them, by any Acts of Parliaments, Grants, or Charters; subject nevertheless to such Restrictions, and other Agreements, as are prescribed by any Acts and Charters now in Force; as also to the Power of Redemption, as in this Act is hereafter contained.
- P. 534.* At any Time, twelve Months after August 1, 1764, on Repayment of all Monies lent by the Bank, with Interest, &c. the said yearly Fund of 100,000*l.* shall determine.

The Governor and Company may enlarge their Capital with any further Sum, not exceeding 1,600,000*l.* additional Stock, and may take in Subscriptions from such Persons, and at such Times, as they shall think proper; and all such Subscribers, whether Natives or Foreigners, having paid the Money subscribed for, shall be united to, and incorporated with, the said Governor and Company, and adjudged to be one Body Politick and Corporate, by the Name of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England; subject to the same Regulations, and intitled to the same Privileges and Advantages with the present Members of the said Corporation.

The Capital Stock, increased as aforesaid, shall be assignable and transferrable in the same Manner as the original Capital Stock was, before the making this Act; and, together with the Produce, shall be free from all Manner of Taxes, Charges, or Impositions whatever; and the Transfers of the additional Stock shall not be chargeable with any other Stamps or Duties than were used in transferring the former Stock.

No Person concerned in the Stock of this Company, whether as Governor, Deputy-Governor, Director, Manager, or Member, shall be disabled from serving as a Member of Parliament, or be liable to any Penalty, or Disability, prescribed by any Acts of Parliament, for not qualifying themselves to execute any Trust with respect to Affairs of this Corporation, as Persons, who execute any Office or Place of Profit or Trust, are liable to, by any Law now in Force, or liable to be a Bankrupt within the Meaning of any Statutes of Bankruptcy.

It is the true Intent and Meaning of this Act, that the Governor and Company, and their Successors, shall enjoy the said Annuity of 100,000*l.* in respect of their original Capital Stock of 1,600,000*l.* till August 1, 1743, besides the Interest of the 1,600,000*l.* to be advanced as aforesaid, which Interest the said Governor and Company are to receive back by Way of Discount.

Any Vote or Resolution of the House of Commons, signified by the Speaker in Writing, and delivered at the publick Office of the said Governor and Company, and their Successors, shall be deemed a sufficient Notice within the Meaning of this Act.

Any Persons who shall forge, counterfeit, or alter, any Bank Note, Bill of Exchange, Dividend Warrant, or any Bond or Obligation under the Common Seal, or any Endorsement thereon; or shall offer to dispose of the same, or demand any Money, pretended to be due thereon, of the said Company, or any of their Officers or Servants, knowing such Note, &c. to be forged, &c. with an Intent to defraud the said Company, or their Successors, or any other Persons whatever; the Offenders being duly convicted, shall be deemed guilty of Felony, and suffer Death as Felons, without Benefit of Clergy.

If any Officer, or Servant of the Company, being intrusted with any Note, &c. belonging to the Company, shall embezzle any such Note, &c. the Offender, being duly convicted, shall be deemed guilty of Felony, and shall suffer Death without Benefit of Clergy.

By the Charter it is ordained, that there shall be for ever, of the Members of the Company, a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Directors; which said Governor, Deputy-Governor, and Directors, or any thirteen, or more, the Governor or Deputy-Governor to be always one, shall be a Court of Directors, for managing the Affairs of the Corporation; but as this Limitation, by the unavoidable Absence, or otherwise, of the Governor and Deputy-Governor, may be of great Hindrance to the Business of the Corporation, it is therefore enacted, that whenever a Court of Directors is met, if the Governor and Deputy shall be absent for the Space of two Hours, after the usual Time of proceeding to Business, the

Directors

Directors then met, being not less than thirteen, may chuse a Chairman by majority, and proceed to Business; and all Acts done by them shall be as valid, as if the Governor or Deputy had been present.

This Act shall be deemed a publick Act, and judicially taken Notice of as such by all Judges, &c. without specially pleading the same.

I. upon all Victuallers, and Retailers of Beer, within the Cities of London and Westminster, and the weekly Bills of Mortality, should thenceforth cease; and that, after the said twenty-fourth of June, 1743, the principal Sum of 481,400*l.* in Exchequer Bills (Part of the Sum of 500,000*l.* advanced to his Majesty's Exchequer by the Bank of England, upon Credit of the said Duties, at three per Cent. per Annum Interest) made forth in Pursuance of the said Act of 12 Geo. I. which then remained unsatisfied, with the Interest thereon, and the Charges of circulating the same, should be transferred from the Duties then charged therewith, and be charged (together with the Sum of 5,18,600*l.* to be raised by the before recited Act of 16 Geo. II. towards the Supply for 1743) upon the Duties payable to his Majesty by another Act of the said 16 Geo. II. intitled, An Act for repealing certain Duties upon spirituous Liquors, &c. and in Pursuance of the first recited

P. 157.

Act of Geo. II. the said Sum of 4,81,400*l.* in Exchequer Bills, as also the said further Sum of 5,18,600*l.* were charged upon the said Duties, arising by Licences, at an Interest of three per Cent. per Annum. And whereas the Bank is willing that the said Sum of 9,86,800*l.* in Exchequer Bills, remaining unsatisfied, on the aforesaid Duties, may be cancelled and discharged, and in Lieu thereof to accept of an Annuity of 39,472*l.* being the Interest on the said Sum at four per Cent. to be charged on the same Securities; and also are willing to advance unto his Majesty's Exchequer, towards the Supply granted for the Service of the Year 1746, the Sum of 1,000,000*l.* upon the Credit of the Duties arising by the Malt and Land Tax for 1746, at four per Cent. per Annum. for Exchequer Bills to be issued for that Purpose, provided they may have a Power to create and dispose of the said Sum of 9,86,800*l.* of Bank Stock (to be joined and incorporated with their present Capital) in such Manner, and at such Times, as they shall think proper; with such further Powers, Privileges, and Advantages, as have usually been granted by former Acts on that Occasion. The Parliament, thinking it will be of Advantage to the Public to accept the said Proposal of the Bank, have enacted, that the Bank of England, by the 25th of March, 1746, shall deliver up unto Persons nominated by the Treasury, all the said Exchequer Bills charged upon the Duties aforesaid, amounting to 9,86,800*l.* to be discharged and cancelled as the Treasury shall think fit, without issuing again the same, or any of them.

All the Interest due on the said Exchequer Bills to be delivered up to be cancelled, with the Charges of circulating the same, shall be paid off.

P. 159.

In Lieu of the said Sum of 9,86,800*l.* in Exchequer Bills to be delivered up to be cancelled, the Bank, from the 25th of March, 1746, shall receive from the Exchequer an Annuity of 39,472*l.* being four per Cent. Interest on the said Sum of 9,86,800*l.* until Redemption thereof by Parliament.

The said Annuity shall be paid from Time to Time, with Preference to all other Payments whatsoever, out of the Monies that shall arise into the Exchequer, from the Duties for Licences to sell Spirituous Liquors and Strong Waters by Retail, in Pursuance of the Act of 16 Geo. II.

The said Annuity shall be paid at four quarterly Payments, viz. on the Feasts of St. John Baptisti, St. Michael, Christmas-Day, and Lady-Day; the first Payment to be made on St. John's Day, 1746; subject nevertheless to Redemption, as provided for by this Act; and the said Annuity of 39,472*l.* shall be free from all Taxes and Charges.

For the better and more regular Payment of the said Annuity, Orders shall be signed by the Treasury for the Payment thereof, which shall be valid in Law, and shall not be determinable by the Death or Removal of any of the Commissioners of the Treasury, or Determination of their Power and Offices, nor shall the Treasury revoke or countermand any Orders so signed.

And for the more speedy Payment of the said Annuity, it is enacted, that weekly, or otherwise, as the Monies arising by the said Duties shall be paid into the Exchequer, the same shall be issued upon the Orders for discharging the quarterly Annuity, so as such weekly Payments do not exceed the Sum which shall be due at the End of every Quarter.

The said Annuity shall be adjudged to be a personal, and not a real Estate, and shall not be liable to any foreign Attachment.

If at any Time after the 25th of March, 1746, the Produce of the Duties arising by Licences aforesaid, at the End of any Quarter shall be insufficient to pay the Quarter's Annuity, in every such case, the Deficiency shall be supplied out of the overplus Monies of the said Duties, which shall be in any subsequent Quarter; and if at the End of any one Year, computing the same to end at Lady-Day yearly, the Produce shall not be sufficient to pay off the whole Year's Annuity then due, the Deficiency shall be made good out of the first Supplies; and if no Supplies be granted within six Months after, then to be paid out of the Sinking Fund, such Monies therein excepted, as by former Acts are appropriated to other Uses.

Whatever Money shall be issued out of the Sinking Fund, shall be replaced out of the first Supplies granted by Parliament.

Upon Repayment by Parliament to the Bank of the said principal Sum of 986,800*l.* in full without Deduction, &c. and of all Arrears of the said yearly Sum of 39,472*l.* then, and not till then, the said Annuity shall cease, and be accounted redeemed; and after such Redemption, the Monies, arising from the said Duties for Licences, shall be applied as any future Act shall direct.

If, at any Time after the 25th of March, 1746, Payment be made to the Bank of any Sums not less than one Moiety of the said 986,800*l.* at any one Time, and also of all the Arrears of the Annuity, then so much of the Annuity, as shall bear Proportion to the Monies paid in Part of the whole principal Sum, shall cease, and be understood to be redeemed.

The Company of the Bank may admit, and take in by Sale, Call, or Subscription, or by such other Methods as they shall judge proper, from such Persons, upon such Terms, and at such Times, as they shall approve, for enlarging their present Capital to a Sum not exceeding the further Sum of 986,800*l.* additional Stock, over and above what they are impowered to create, by any former Act in that Behalf, and from Time to Time, in a general Court, and from such Times as they shall direct, to order the same, or any Part thereof, to be added to the present Capital of the Bank; from which Time such Monies shall be deemed as Part of the said capital Stock, and shall be proportionably enlarged thereby; and all Persons on whose Account any Monies shall be paid in, as directed towards the said Sum, they, their Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, shall be deemed Members of, and incorporated with, the Company; and shall with the other Members of the Corporation, be taken to be one Body Politic and Corporate, by the Name of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, subject to the same Rules, and enjoying the same Privileges, with the present Members of the Corporation; and all Executors, Administrators, Guardians, and Trustees, shall be indemnified in making Payments upon such Calls, &c. as aforesaid.

The Capital of the Bank so increased shall be transferrable, in the same Manner as the original Stock was before this Act, and, together with the Produce thereof, shall be free from all Taxes, &c. whatsoever; and the Transfers and Assignments of Stock in the Company's Books shall be liable to no higher Stamp, or other Duties, than are now payable for the same.

The Company of the Bank, and their Successors, shall continue a Corporation, and enjoy all the Privileges, &c. belonging thereto, until the complete Redemption of the said Annuity of 39,472*l.* in as full Manner as the same are specified specified in an Act of 15 Geo. II. intituled, An Act for establishing an Agreement with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, for advancing the Sum of one Million six hundred thousand Pounds, &c. or in any other Act relating to the said Corporation.

- P. 165. The Bank shall advance to the Exchequer, towards the Supply for the Service of the Year 1746, 1,000,000*l.* upon the Credit of the Duties arising from the Land-Tax and Malt Act, for the said Year, to be paid at such Times, and in such Proportions, as the Treasury shall direct; so that they be obliged to pay no more than 250,000*l.* at any Time, nor without fourteen Days' Notice before each Payment.

Upon Payment of the said Million, or any Part thereof, by the Bank, the Treasury shall make out Exchequer Bills for the same, payable out of the Duties granted by the said two Acts, together with an Interest of four per Cent. per Ann. until Repayment of the Principal aforesaid; and the said Bills shall be subject to the Rules prescribed in the last recited Acts which relate to Exchequer Bills thereby authorized to be made forth.

- P. 166. In Case the Bank shall make Failure in any of the said Payments, appointed by this Act to be made into the Exchequer, at or before the Times limited in that Behalf, the same shall be recovered to his Majesty's Use by Action of Debt, or on the Case, &c. in any of the Courts of Westminster, &c. in which Suit, &c. the Governor and Company of the Bank of England may be declared indebted to his Majesty, the Monies of which they shall have made Default in Payment, &c. which shall be sufficient; and upon such Action, &c. there shall be further recovered, Damages after the Rate of ten per Cent. for the Monies so unpaid, besides full Costs of Suit.

The Bank is to continue a Corporation until the several Annuities established by Parliament are redeemed. 4 Geo. II. C. 9. S. 33.—15 Geo. II. C. 19. S. 13. 16 Geo. II. C. 13. S. 32.—17 Geo. II. And by several subsequent Acts for new Loans, to the present Time. It being one of the Clauses of every Bill for raising Money by Annuities payable at the Bank.

In the first Session of the fifteenth Parliament of Great-Britain, and in the Month of June, 1781, the last Act of Parliament was passed for renewing the Charter of the Bank, upon condition that the Company should lend to Government 2,000,000*l.* at 3 per Cent. for three Years, to enable Administration to pay off the like Sum of the Navy Debt. Having now finished what relates to the Stock, I shall describe the Nature of the mercantile Money Transactions at the Bank.

And, first, whoever has a Mind to keep Cash with the Bank, must give a Specimen of his Firm, in a Book kept for this Purpose, and apply to the first Clerk of these Accounts, commonly called the Drawing Accounts, who will give him a Book, wherein his Account is opened, which Book he takes away with him, and for which it is customary to give Half a Crown; the Person will likewise receive a Parcel of Checks, of whose Numbers an Account is taken by him that delivers them out, on which he is to draw on the Bank, as he shall have Occasion.

In the Books, which are of several Sizes, different Columns are adapted for the Entry of Cash, paid and received; and also, for the Entry of Bills deposited till due, when they become Cash to be passed forward, which is done the first time the Book is carried to the Bank, after they are received.

Whenever you have any Cash to pay in, you carry it to the Bank, with your Book, in which you have Credit immediately given for it; and on the contrary when you want to pay, you draw the Sum on one of your Checks, in the following Manner.

August the 21st, 1790.

PAY to Mr. A. B. or Bearer, on Demand, two hundred Pounds, ten Shillings, and two Pence; for Account of C. D.

£. 200 : 10 : 2.

Which is immediately complied with, and your Account debited in the Bank Books; and whenever you are desirous of having your Account examined, you carry your Book, and leave it for a Day or two in the Accountant's Office; and on your taking it again, you will find every Draught you have made, entered, and your Checks returned you, cancelled: And no Money will be paid, either to yourself or your Order, without such a Draught, or what is called a Write off, which are printed Slips of Paper, with Blanks left for the Sums wanted, and are always laying, with Pens and Ink, at a Desk in the great Hall, for every one to make Use of at Pleasure. and when filled up are as follows:

August the 21st, 1790.

WRITE off from my Bank Book, one hundred and fifty-seven Pounds, ten Shillings, and Six-pence. S. T.

£. 157 : 10 : 6.

Which you give to any one of the Clerks sitting on the left Hand going into the Hall for that Purpose, with your Book, and he debits you the Sum therein desired, and gives you Money or Notes for it, which you please; reserving the Write-off as a Voucher.

If you have any accepted Bills payable in London, and, to save yourself the trouble, have a mind that the Bank should receive them, you must endorse, and carry them with your Book to the Bank, and have them entered by the proper Clerks, who sit at one End of the great Hall; and after this Deposit, the value will be carefully received, or the Bills duly protested; if the former, their Import will be credited in your Account; if the latter, the Bills will be returned, and the Charges of protesting debited to you.

If you would have the Bank pay any Bills that are drawn on you, you may accept them payable at the Bank; and in this case, you must, before they fall due, give the Bank an Order to pay them when presented, advising their Contents, from whence, and by whom drawn, &c. or you may, at the Time of Acceptance, write an Order on them to the Cashiers, as a Draught, to pay them when due, though, besides this, a separate Order must be left there for their Discharge.

The Bank will discount Bills for any Sum, if the Holders and Acceptors are to the Directors' Satisfaction; the foreign ones after the Rate of four, and Inland at five per Cent. per Ann. and in Order to get this Transaction effected, you must describe the Bills on a Slip of Paper, with your's and the Acceptor's Names, and deliver it, with the Bills, to a Clerk who attends for this Purpose in the same Office where the Checks are delivered, and he carries it to the Committee, who either accept or reject the Proposal, without assigning any Reason for their Behaviour; if the former, the Money is immediately paid you by the proper Clerk, with a Deduction of the Discount.

The Bank will receive by Way of Deposit, from any Person keeping Cash with them, Bullion, foreign Specie, Jewels or any such Effects that are not bulky, and take Care of them till called for; but they will give no Receipt with them, nor otherwise oblige themselves to be answerable for their Safety; as they charge nothing for their Clerks' Attendance, either at their Receipt or Delivery, nor for the Deposit; but they are sealed up, and ticketed with the Name of their Owners, &c. who may receive them in the same Form they were delivered whenever they think proper.

No Body is obliged to pay a personal Attendance for any Transaction with the Bank, but may send another with their Book for Entries, &c. as most Merchants do their Clerks; and all possible Dispatch is given to every one in their Turn.

The Bank, besides discounting Bills, will advance Money on Government Securities, or on a Deposit of foreign Specie, or Bullion, but never on Jewels or Estates; and they will likewise buy Gold and Silver Bullion, after assaying, Spanish Dollars, &c. though seldom at so high a Price as private Purchasers, these latter often buying for their own use, but the Bank by Way of Merchandise, on which a Profit is expected.

The Business of this Corporation was for many Years carried on at Grocers-Hall in the Poultry, though the first Subscription was taken at the Mercers in Cheapside, whilst the other was getting ready, till they erected the spacious Pile they at present occupy, in Threadneedle-Street, where Offices are appropriated for every Branch of their Employment; their Cash, Notes, and every Thing of Value, are preserved in the subterraneous Vaults, to guard them from Fire, and the whole Building secured by very strong substantial Fastenings; and since the dreadful Riot in the Month of June 1780, when an Attempt was actually made to break in and rob the Bank, a military Guard has been appointed to do duty Day and Night, as regularly as in a Garrison; the Church adjoining to the Bank, called St. Christopher le Stocks, having been purchased under a special Act of Parliament, and pulled down, for the Purpose of enlarging the Building, and erecting a Guard-house and Barracks for the Military night guard; which Works have been completed in a superb Manner; and in the best Style of modern Architecture.

Here it may be proper to observe, that the publick Creditors of the Nation, whose Accounts are kept in Books at the Bank, need not be under any future Apprehension of Loss or Confusion arising in their respective Accounts from Accidents happening to them at the Bank. For, as the Directors of the Bank only undertake the Management of the publick Funds, that is to say, the Transfers, paying of Interest, &c. for Government, at their Office, for the Convenience of the publick; duplicates of all the Books are deposited in his Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster.

The Corporation is under the Management of a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Directors; of which latter, three attend from ten o'Clock till twelve, Sundays and Holidays excepted, for fourteen Days together, and are then succeeded by the like Number for the same Term, till the whole have taken their rotation; and Thursday being their Court Day, the Governor, Deputy, and all the Directors meet, except such as are out of Town, or are hindered by Sickness, as they are very punctual and exact in their Attendance on the Business of the Corporation; for which the Governor has 200*l.* the Deputy 200*l.* and each of the Directors 150*l. per Ann.* They are chosen yearly by a general Court, out of the principal Proprietors of Bank Stock, and are always gentlemen of large Fortunes, but more respected and esteemed for their strict Adherence to Integrity and Honour.

The Qualification of the Governor is 4000*l.* of the Deputy-Governor 3000*l.* and for the Directors 2000*l.* Bank Stock, and that a Person may be privileged to vote at their Election, he must possess 500*l.* of the said Stock.

As for the Clerks, the Regularity of their Attendance is secured by excellent Rules; amongst others, they are obliged to enter their Appearance, at nine o'Clock every Morning, in a Book kept in the great Hall for that Purpose, which Book is carried into the Parlour to the sitting Directors every Day, and if any are found missing, Enquiry is made if they are absent the whole Day, or any Part of it, and if proper Reasons are not assigned for the Failure of an Hour's Attendance, a Fine is imposed. Sufficient Security to the Amount of 1000*l.* is likewise taken for their Fidelity; and in Justice to those Gentlemen, it ought to be recorded, that their Celerity and Exactness in the Dispatch of Business, cannot be equalled by any Set of Men of the same Denomination in any of the other publick Banks in Europe.

From the preceding Account of the Bank's Establishment and Direction, it will readily be seen how much easier Affairs are transacted here than in any one of those established in foreign Countries; in ours, no Fines are extorted, no personal Attendance required, nor any Delays occasioned by shuttings-up, or Non-Attendance in the Afternoon, as the Bank of England is never shut but three Days in a Year, Sundays excepted, and transacts Business from nine in the Morning to three in the Afternoon, when that of the Day ends, as to the Receipt and Payment of Money; though the Clerks have still about half, or three quarters of an Hours Employ to balance the Transactions of the Day, which after the aforesaid Hours, they immediately apply themselves to perform. Here is no Obligation laid on any one to pay in Bank Money, or to be satisfied with Bank Notes; but every one is at Liberty to insist on Payment in the current Coin of the Kingdom: Yet, as the former are the readiest Payment, and a few Minutes may convert them into Cash, they are commonly preferred, especially for any large Sum; so that our Bank, compared with the most celebrated and best of the foreign ones, must in every Shape be preferred by the Mercantile Part of Mankind, as well as by those Gentlemen whose large personal Estates would make them at a Loss sometimes for a Place of security, if there were no Bank subsisting to serve them. And if the Comparison with the best abroad places our's in so advantageous a Light, what shall we say, when we reflect on the shocking Consequences of those unstable and disreputable Banks, particularly the Caisse d'Escompte erected of late in France, where the fatal Effects are felt to this very Day? How ought every Englishman to thank Providence for his Lot, in being a Native of a Country secured by the most wholesome Laws, under the Government of the best of Kings, and where every individual enjoys his property unmolested!

Of Bankers.

THIS is an employment of great Antiquity, for there was a Species of it among the Romans, though very different in the Exercise of it from what the Practice is at present; in that famous Empire, they were deemed publick Officers, who as one may say, united the Offices of Exchangers, Brokers, Commissioners, and Notaries, all in one; negotiating Exchanges, undertaking Trusts, intervening in Purchases and Sales, and dextrously managing all the necessary Acts and Writings of so many different Functions.

The Bankers of the present Times differ very widely from the above description, as those in foreign Parts do even now from the English. However, it must be acknowledged that the Bank of England does not, in all Respects, correspond with the Idea of a national Bank; if it did we should have no Occasion for the Business of private Banking, of which we are to treat in this Chapter. The discretionary Power lodged in the Hands of the Directors of the Bank of England, admits a Possibility of Partiality in the great Business of discounting, which may limit its Utility, and cramp mercantile Credit; and this should never be the Case in a commercial Country. Upon some occasions they have even suspended discounting for a Time, whereas a general national Bank ought to lay no Restraint whatever, if the Bills offered are good; that is to say, drawn by a known responsible Man on Persons of like Responsibility, and endorsed by one or more of the same Description. The only Argument that can be brought against making the Bank of England, a general national Bank, to answer all the Purposes of Banking is, the Multiplicity of Business they are already engaged in for Government, on Account of the national Debt, in Addition to the common Business in the Circulation of Cash and Notes. And certain it is, that by using proper Precautions, the following Class of Men may be made nearly as useful as a national Bank. In France, Holland, &c. they may more properly be termed Remitters, as the principal Part of their Business consists in negotiating Exchanges; Mr. Savary calls them Merchants, Traders, or Dealers in Money, who make Contracts, and Remittances thereof, and confine themselves to such Transactions only: We have also some Gentlemen of great Fortune, who act on the same Footing here in England; but when we speak of an English Banker, he is always to be understood as one acting in a different Character and Manner from those last mentioned; as these limit their Traffick to what may properly be called Banking; their Dealings being similar to the Bank's, and their Advantages arising from the same Negotiations, only in a more limited Degree; for their Shops are the Depositories or Receptacles of their Customer's Money, which is paid in and drawn out by the Proprietors, as in the Bank, at their Pleasure; and the Bankers will also discount Bills, and advance Money on such Securities as the Bank does, from which their Business differs not materially, and though they have no publick Stock as the Bank has, the Profits arising from their Negotiations are their own.

Bankers are generally Gentlemen of large Estates and monied property, and though some have unhappily failed, it is an uncommon Catastrophe, the Business being certainly as lucrative as it is genteel.

The Denomination was in England first given to some monied Goldsmiths, in the Reign of King Charles the second, as will appear by the following Paragraph in an Act of Parliament made the 22d and 23d of that Prince's Reign, viz. Whereas several Persons being Goldsmiths, and others, by taking up or borrowing great Sums of Money, and lending out the same again for extraordinary Hire and Profit, have gained and acquired to themselves the Reputation and Name of Bankers, &c. and their Business, as has already been said, is copied by the Banks in all Parts, though with very considerable Additions and Improvements.

By 6 Anne, C. 22. S. 9. during the Continuance of the Bank of England, no Company of private Bankers are to exceed six in Partnership.

The Business of private Banking having increased considerably of late Years, and the Lists of Bankers not only in London, but in every capital City and Town in Great-Britain, amounting to four Times the Number that subsisted when the last Edition of this Work was published, it is our indispensable Duty to enlarge a little on so interesting a Subject.

The Principle upon which the publick Credit of Great-Britain has been enlarged and supported, has been the free Circulation of Paper-money; whether consisting of Credit given in Books of Account for Annuities of various Denominations in Consideration or Sums of Money in Specie paid for them; or in Exchequer, Navy, or other Bills, Bonds, &c. being Government Securities. Also in maintaining and encouraging the Acceptance of Bank Notes as equal in Value to their Amount in the current Coin of the Nation; thereby making such Paper-money, as much the Medium of our Exchanges with each other, and even with some foreign Countries, as Gold and Silver.

Private Persons, availing themselves of the same principle, have been enabled to throw into the commercial Circulation of the Kingdom, their own Notes, Bills, and other Paper Securities, and on this Basis a great Number of Banking Houses have of late Years been established; a certain Quantity of Specie however, proportioned to the Extent of their Paper Credit is requisite for each House, that they may be ready to answer all Demands for Specie, where it is required to be given in Exchange for Bills become due; for their own Notes issued payable on Demand; or for the Draughts of their Customers who have deposited Cash in their Hands. We therefore plainly perceive in the first Instance, that Bankers ought to be Men of considerable Property.

Now let us state their great Utility to Merchants, Shopkeepers, and many other Classes of the People. In the first Place, they will frequently discount Bills for Merchants and Tradefmen, their Customers, which the Bank from the Smallness of the Sums, or from the Security not being generally known or acknowledged, will reject. If the Banker is satisfied that his Customer for whom he discounts is a Man of considerable Property, it is a secondary Object only with him, whether the Bills are drawn upon or accepted by Persons equally responsible. And as the Banker's Profit consists in making as much Interest of the Monies laying in his Hands uncalled for, as possible, without Loss of Time; discounting of course must constitute a great Part of his Business. And, if there were not a great Number of Bankers always ready to discount the Bills that are circulated in Trade, commercial Credit would be stagnated, stagnated, and the trading Part of the Nation would be thrown into a State of Anarchy.

In many Trades, great Part of the Business is transacted by Notes or Bills drawn to become due at remote Periods—three, six, nine, and twelve Months after Date. If the Holder of these could not convert them into Cash, it would be impossible for him to go on, because his Workmen must be paid weekly in Cash. To exemplify this in one Instance—A Bookseller employs a Printer and pays him with his Note of Hand at three Months after Date; he is perfectly satisfied with this Transaction; but, if he receives Payments chiefly in this Manner, he must have an immense Fortune indeed to be able to pay all his Workmen weekly in Cash. But by discounting, the Matter is easily settled, and the Interest he pays for the Advance of the Money must be computed and deducted from his Profit, which however will always bear a Proportion to this Circumstance.

But there is another Superstructure of private Credit, built upon the Principle of publick Credit.—What is become of the immense Sums raised by Three and Four per Cent. consolidated Bank Annuities and other Government Securities?—expended long since in our Wars; but while the annual Interest of the nominal Capitals is regularly paid, and that a Price can be had at Market for the principal itself, through the Medium of Transfer-books; publick Credit supplies the Place of Non-Payment of the Principal in Specie. Thus a Number of Persons in different Parts of the Kingdom, or even in different Parts of so large a Metropolis of London, agreeing to draw upon each at distant Dates; and having a certain Degree of commercial Credit, may, by the Means of Discount, raise astonishing Sums of Money, to answer temporary Purposes, and provided that from the Profits of Commerce, or even the Sale of Merchandizes arising from foreign Countries within the given Time, they can be answerable in Specie for each other's Draughts, all will be well, and this System of Credit may be not only strictly just, but necessary and expedient for the support of Commerce under certain Circumstances. For Instance a Merchant may be in Expectation of valuable Cargoes from a distant Country, and in Time of War the Delay of Convoys, and other Incidents, may impede their Arrival till some Months after the Time he had rationally calculated. In the Interval pressing Demands come upon him from the Manufacturers of Goods he has exported to the Country from which he expects his Return with Profits in valuable Imports. If a Friend lends him his Paper for three Months, that is to say, allows him to draw upon him, and that Friend is a Man of established Credit, whose Paper his Banker will discount—here is a Difficulty removed—perhaps the Failure of a good Man prevented.

So far, no Mischief has arisen, but on the contrary a Benefit has been conferred, [to which no solid Objection can be made. But unhappily this Circulation of good Paper, upon justifiable Emergencies, has opened a Door to an extensive Circulation of bad Paper, upon the worst Principles; and as Bankers of all other Persons are most liable to be imposed on, and, if they are dishonest, to impose upon others, an Explanation of this Species of spurious Credit, properly belonged to this Chapter.

But as accommodation Bills to a considerable Amount have lately occasioned some remarkable Law-suits, and embarrassed the Courts of Justice to such a Degree; that their Decisions are likely to become the Subjects of Appeal to the supreme Tribunal of the British Empire, the House of Lords, for whose final deliberation and Determination a Case is preparing by the Judges; we shall enlarge upon this Species of Bills of Exchange, under that Head.

Taking it for granted that the Bankers, being Men of great Experience, will take as much Care of themselves as possible, we shall only mention, for the Information of the Publick at large, that Detractions have been made of late Years of Persons who have subsisted entirely upon the Circulation of Paper Money, by drawing upon each other, and converting Part of the Money so raised, by discounting or passing their Bills with Tradesmen, to their own Use; and when their Credit has failed, which must inevitably be the Case sooner or later, they have absconded. To leave no Doubt upon the Mind of any Person whom this may hereafter concern, it is necessary to explain, that by increasing the Sums drawn for, they have been enabled to live upon Part of the Spoils for one, two, or three Years, and at the Close, when perhaps they have escaped to the Continent, it is a general Sweep of the whole Amount of the said Bills they could get discounted.

With Respect to the Power of Bankers to commit Frauds of this Nature, we shall state it only as a Power, which they certainly may, but we do not know that any of them have ever exercised, and which we hope they never will. A Combination of a Banker with one or more of his Customers, or with some Country Bank; may enable him to raise Money upon Bills drawn upon him to a considerable Amount. It should, therefore, be a Rule with all Persons, keeping large Sums in the Hands of Bankers, to enquire, first into the Solidity of their Capital. Secondly, how they employ the Balances that remain with them—that is to say, the Difference between their Receipts and Disbursements—for it will readily be perceived that if the former did not exceed the latter considerably, they could not subsist. If these Balances are vested in Government or other good Securities, readily convertible into Cash, at a short Notice, to answer extraordinary Calls, such Bankers may be confided in; but, if they are liable to be paid away to settle Losses in Stock-jobbing Accounts, their Customers are in great Jeopardy.

The last Conveniency I shall mention of private Bankers, is, that Tradesmen sleep in Security, without the Dread of Fire or Thieves, who lodge their Money, above their petty Cash, in their Hands, which some do every Evening. The Houses and Vaults of Bankers being secured in an extraordinary Manner, and properly guarded, which cannot be the Case generally, with the Habitations of private Citizens.

Bankers will lend Money on Plate, Jewels, Title Deeds of Houses and Lands, and other similar Securities, such as the Receipts for Subscriptions to Government Loans, &c. when they are well acquainted with the Owners.

Of Usury.

3 Inst. 151. IT is literally defined to be Money given for the Use of Money, or the Gain of any Thing by Contract, above the Principal, or that which was lent exacted in Consideration of the Loan, whether it be of Money or any other Thing.

Some declare Usury to be an Exaction of Profit for a Loan made to a Person in Want and Distress; and Mr. Malynes in his Lex Mercatoria terms it a Biting, from the Etymology of the Hebrew Word Nesbech, by Mr. Humphreys in his Annotations on Nesbech, which he supposes a general one for Usury; but after all, it properly consists in extorting an unreasonable Rate for Money, beyond what is allowable by Law.

3 Inst. 151, 152. The letting Money out at Interest, or upon Usury, these being formerly regarded as synonymous Terms, was against the Common Law; and in Times past, if any one after his Death was found to have been an Usurer, all his Goods and Chattles were forfeited to the King, &c. and according to several ancient Statutes, all Usury was unlawful; but now, neither the Common nor Statute Law absolutely forbid it.

On the contrary, a reasonable, that is a lawful, Interest may be taken for Money. And how can it possibly be otherwise, when Government itself pays several Rates of Interest, half-yearly, to publick Bodies of Men; and private Individuals, for immense principal Sums borrowed at various Times, from the Publick at large, for the exigencies of the State, in Times of War. The Stat. 27 Hen. VIII. Cap. 9. allowed ten per Cent. for Money lent on Mortgages, &c. which was revived by 13 Eliz. Cap. 8. and 21 Jac. I. Cap. 17. ordained eight per Cent. The 12 Car. II. Cap. 13. lowered Interest to six per Cent. and 12 Ann. Cap. 16. to five per Cent. at which it has remained fixed ever since.

Stat. 256. It hath been adjudged on this last Statute, that a Contract for six per Cent. made before the Statute, is not within the Meaning of it; and therefore that it was still

And if a Man, when Interest was at six per Cent. lent Money at that Rate, and after the Statute comes and sinks the Interest to five per Cent. if he continues the old Interest on that Bond, the Bond shall not be void as usurious, but it is said the Party shall be liable to forfeit treble Value.

The Receipt of higher Interest than the Law allows, by Virtue of an Agreement subsequent to the first Contract, doth not void an Assurance fairly made; and a Bond made to secure a just Debt, payable with lawful Interest, shall not be avoided by a corrupt usurious Agreement between others, to which the Obligee was no Ways privy; nor shall Mistakes in drawing Writings make void any fair Agreement.

If the original Contract be not usurious, nothing done afterwards can make it so; and a counter Bond, to save one harmless against a Bond made upon a corrupt Agreement, will not be void by the Statutes; but if the original Agreement be corrupt between all the Parties, and so within the Statutes, no Colour will exempt it from the Danger of the Statutes against Usury.

A Fine levied, or Judgement suffered, as a Security for Money, in Pursuance of an usurious Contract, may be avoided by an Averment of the corrupt Agreement, as well as any common Specialty, or parole Contract. And it is not material whether the Payment of the principal and the usurious Interest be secured by the same, or by different Conveyances; for all Writings whatsoever, for the strengthening such a Contract, are void. Also a Contract reserving to the Lender a greater Advantage than allowed, is usurious, if the whole is allowed by Way of Interest, or in Part under that Name, and in Part only by Way of Rent for a House let at a Rent plainly exceeding the known Value; so where Part is taken before the End of the Time, that the Borrower hath not the Profit of the whole principal Money, &c.

By Holt C. J. If A. owes B. 100*l.* who demands his Money, which A. acquaints him he hath not ready, but is both willing and desirous to pay it, if B. can procure the Loan from any other Person; and thereupon B. having present Occasion for his Money, contracts with C. that if he will lend A. 100*l.* he will give him 10*l.* on which C. lends the Money, with which the Debt is paid to B. this is a good and lawful Contract, and not usurious, between B. and C.

It is not Usury if there be not a corrupt Agreement for more than Statute Interest; and the Defendant shall not be punished, unless he receive some Part of the Money, in Affirmance of the usurious Agreement.

There can be no Usury without a Loan; and the Court hath distinguished between a Bargain and a Loan.

If a Man lend another 100*l.* for two Years, to pay for the Loan 30*l.* but if he pays the Principal at the Year's End, he shall pay nothing for Interest; this is not Usury, because the Party may pay it at the Year's End, and so discharge himself.

And it is the same, where a Person by special Agreement, is to pay double the Sum borrowed, &c. by Way of Penalty for Non-payment of the principal Debt; the Penalty being in Lieu of Damages, and the Borrower might repay the Principal at the Time agreed, and avoid the Penalty.

A Man surrenders a Copyhold Estate to another, upon Condition that if he pays 50*l.* at a certain Day, then the Surrender shall be void; and after it is agreed between them, that the Money shall not be paid, but that the Surrenderer shall forfeit, &c. in Consideration whereof the Surrenderer promises to pay to the Surrenderer, on a certain Day, 60*l.* or 6*l.* per Annum, from the said Day, pro usu & interesse damnorum, and not lucri, and but limited as a Penalty for Non-payment of the 60*l.* as a Nomine Pene, &c.

On a Loan of 100*l.* or other Sum of Money for a Year, the Lender may agree to take his Interest half-yearly or quarterly, or to receive the Profits of a Manor or Lands, &c. and be no Usury, though such Profits be rendered every Day.

If a Grant of Rent, or Lease for 20*l.* a Year of Land which is worth 100*l.* per Annum, be made for 100*l.* it is not usurious, if there be not an Agreement

- that this Grant or Lease shall be void upon Payment of the Principal and Arrears, &c.
- <sup>1</sup> Crr. 27. But if two Men speak together, and one desires the other to lend him 100*l.* and for the Loan of it he will give more than legal Interest; and to evade the Statute, he grants to him 30*l.* per Annum, out of his Land, for ten Years; or makes a Lease for one hundred Years to him, and the Lessee regrants it, upon Condition that he shall pay 30*l.* yearly for the ten Years; in this Case it is Usury, though the Lender never have his own 100*l.* again.
- <sup>4</sup> Sh-p. Abr. A Man granted a large Rent for Years, for a small Sum of Money; the Statute of Usury was pleaded; and it was adjudged, that if it had been laid to be upon a Loan of Money, it had been usurious; though it is otherwise if it be a Contract for an Annuity.
- <sup>3</sup> Nels. 510. If one hath a Rent-Charge of 30*l.* a Year, and another asketh what he shall give for it, and they agree for 100*l.* this is a plain Contract for the Rent-Charge and no Usury.
- Crr.* Jac. 253. The Grant of an Annuity for Lives, not only exceeding the Rate allowed for Interest, but also the Proportion for Contracts of this Kind, in Consideration of a certain Sum of Money, is not within the Statutes against Usury; and so, of a Grant of an Annuity on Condition, &c.
- <sup>2</sup> Cro. 208. Where Interest exceeds 5*l.* per Cent. per Annum on a Bond, if possibly the Principal and Interest are in Hazard, upon a Contingency or Casualty, or if there is a Hazard that one may have less than his Principal, as when a Bond is to pay Money upon a Return of a Ship from Sea, &c. these are not Usury.
- <sup>1</sup> Cro. 27. <sup>1</sup> Sh-w. 8. Though where B. lends to D. 300*l.* on Bond, upon an Adventure during the Life of E. for such a Time; if therefore D. pays to B. 20*l.* in three Months, and at the End of six Months the principal Sum, with a further Premium at the Rate of 6*d.* per Pound a Month; or if before the Time mentioned E. dies, then the Bond to be void; this, differing from the Hazard of a Bottomry Bond, was adjudged as an usurious Contract.
- <sup>3</sup> Salk. 391. One Hundred Pounds is lent to have 120*l.* at the Year's End, upon a Casualty; if the Casualty goes to the Interest only, and not the Principal, it is Usury: The Difference in the Books is, that where the Principal and Interest are both in Danger of being lost, then the Contract for extraordinary Interest is not usurious; but when the Principal is well secured, it is otherwise.
- <sup>2</sup> Cro. 509. A Person secures the Interest and Principal: If it be at the Will of the Party who is to pay it, it is no Usury.
- <sup>2</sup> Cro. 677. And a Lender accepting a voluntary Gratuity from the Borrower, on Payment of Principal and Interest, or receiving the Interest before due, &c. without any corrupt Agreement, shall not be within the Statutes against Usury. Yet, this is a shameful Encouragement to monied Sharpers, who may receive, by Way of Douceur, a fourth Part of the Amount of the Principal lent; from extravagant Youth, under the Pressure of extreme Want, and the immediate Dread of a Gaol.
- <sup>4</sup> Leen. 43. And if one gives an usurious Bond, and tenders the whole Money, yet if the Party will take only legal Interest, he shall not forfeit the treble Value by Statute.
- Raym.* 191. On an Information upon the Statute of Usury, he who borrows the Money may be a Witness after he hath paid the Money.
- Lutw.* 466. In Action for Usury the Statute against Usury must be pleaded, and a corrupt Agreement set forth: It is not sufficient to plead the Statute, and say that for the lending of 20*l.* the Defendant took more than 5*l.* per Cent. without setting forth a corrupt Agreement or Contract.
- <sup>12</sup> Lill. 672. <sup>3</sup> Nels. 514. And in pleading an usurious Contract by Way of Bar to an Action, the whole Matter is to be set forth specially, because it lay within the Party's own Privy; but in an Information on the Statute, for making such a Contract it is enough to mention the corrupt Bargain generally, by reason Matters of this Kind are supposed to be privily transacted; and such Information may be brought by a Stranger.

Publ. 6 W. and M. B. R.

The Word Corruptive is necessary in a Declaration for Usury, &c.

Usury has been decried in all Ages, both by Jews and Christians; the former were by their Laws prohibited to take it of their Brethren, though Moses, as Sir Josiah Child supposes, for a political Reason, permitted them to receive it from Strangers, as a sure Means of enriching the Hebrews; and though any Share of Interest, or Usury was ill thought of by the Fathers and others, in the first Ages of Christianity, it has for some Time past been esteemed rather an Advantage than a Detriment to a trading People, and consequently been encouraged, though with proper Limitations, by the Legislature; a lawful Interest has therefore now lost the Name of Usury, which is only continued to those illegal Exactions that are the Ruin of many, when Extortioners find Means to evade the wholesome Laws subsisting between them, and prey upon the Necessities of their poor Neighbours: These may justly be said greedily to drink up the Widows' and Orphans' Tears; and we have too many of such Miscreants among us, who being lost to all Sense, not only of Religion, but even of Humanity improve the Opportunity of the pressing Necessities of others, to their own Advantage, and grow rich and opulent upon the Spoils and Destruction of their fellow Creatures.

All the Exertions of the British Legislature have hitherto been ineffectual to suppress the Practice of exorbitant usurious Contracts, for the Loan of Money to distressed Individuals. Various Stratagems are contrived by the Money Lenders, who advertise in the publick Newspapers, to take Advantage of the Prodigal and the Unfortunate. The most common Method, which we introduce here as a Caution, is to stipulate for a Premium, which they will oblige the Borrower to pay back on the Instant, together with a year's Interest in Advance, and then they take the Security, whether Bill, Bonds, or Assignments of Land or Houses, for the specifick Sum lent. Thus, if you apply to them for the Loan of 100*l.* for a Year, they will demand a Premium or Consideration, and if the Security is only personal, you will hardly obtain it under 20*l.* Having agreed to this exorbitant Demand, and your Bond or Note for 100*l.* being prepared, that Sum is laid before you, and you are directed by the Money-Lender, or his Agent, to return 20*l.* and 5*l.* for the Year's Interest, this being done, you deliver the Security for 100*l.* and carry away only 75*l.* If you are not ready to discharge the Debt at the Expiration of the Year, it is possible, by granting a fresh Note or Bond for 120*l.* you may obtain the Loan of the original Sum you have received, viz. 75*l.* for another Year, at the End of which, you will have to pay 125*l.* including the last Year's Interest, which is exactly 50*l.* for the Use of 75*l.* for two Years.

Extravagant as the above Contract may appear, it falls infinitely short of some Cases which within these few Years have come before the Courts in Westminster-Hall, for Recovery of the Securities given for Money so lent. For in some, very large Sums were lent to young Gentlemen of Rank and Fortune, and the greatest Part was to be taken in Goods, the Lender not having so much Cash in Hand; the Goods were taken up of a Friend of the Lender, and as a young Nobleman could not know what to do with Linens, Silks, Drugs, China, &c. a third Person in the Confederacy, was recommended to buy them of him, perhaps thirty per Cent. under the Estimate at which they were delivered to him in Lieu of Cash. In one Instance, it appeared that a young Baronet had received no more than 900*l.* in Cash, Part of it being the Produce of Goods, Estimated at 1000*l.* and Sold for his Account at 700*l.*; for a landed Security, to repay 2000*l.* the Premium and the Loss upon the Goods absorbing the Remainder.

It is necessary, however, in this Place, to inform those numerous Cormorants who prey upon the Necessities of Mankind, that under a Statute of Bankruptcy a strict Scrutiny will be made into the Nature of the Contracts, by which they claim as Creditors, and that our present discerning and upright Chancellor will not suffer their Debts to be proved, if it appears that they are founded on usurious Contracts.

A Debt

Ex parte Skip-
217. 49.

A Debt made void by Statute ought not to be permitted to be proved, as a Debt on an usurious Contract; and though the Rule of the Court of Chancery, is, upon a Bill to be relieved against Demands of usurious Interest, not to make void the whole Debt, but to make the Party pay what is really due; in a Commission of Bankruptcy, the Assignees have a Right to insist that the whole Debt is void, as an usurious Contract. And unless the Assignees and other Creditors submit to pay what is really due, the Lord Chancellor has not Power to order it, and Applications of this Nature have been frequently refused.

Ex parte Thom- son, 1 Atk. 125.

Accordingly, where A. gave a Note of Hand without Consideration, payable to B. two Months from the Date for 100*l.* B. indorses it over to Thompson, allowing a Discount of a Guinea and a Half, being at the Rate of 9 per Cent. When the Note became Due, Thompson took a joint Bond from the Drawer and Indorser for the 100*l.* though he paid only 98*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* The Commissioners had admitted him as a Creditor under a Commission against the Drawer, but finding out this Fact afterwards, they ordered his Dividend to be stopped. The Lord Chancellor, upon his Petition would not direct him to be admitted to his Dividend, but ordered an Issue at Law, to try whether the Bond was usurious.

But whatever might be the Event of the Issue directed by the Court in this Case, it should seem that if the Contract was originally usurious, it is void, and cannot be proved ever in the Hands of an innocent Indorsee; for upon an Action brought on such a Note, the Defendant's Plea of Usury would be a complete Bar. Cook's Bankrupt Laws, 2d. Edit. London, 1788.

Having now seen how the Law stands in our own Country, let us take a concise View of the Regulations established on the Continent, to prevent the pernicious Consequences to Society of this selfish Vice.

Usury is strictly prohibited in all Christian Countries, and in many, Banks have been set up, with Funds to let out on Pawns, for those whose Necessities required such Assistance, and to prevent by this Means the prevailing iniquitous Practice of Usurers; of this Number was our ill-conducted Charitable Corporation here, and that still subsisting at Amsterdam, under the Title of the Lombard, as being first instituted by those People, or Bank of Loans, which is a spacious Building erected for a Warehouse, in 1550, by the Overseers of the Poor, who assigned it in 1614 to the City, for the Purposes afore-mentioned; where every one who is in want of Cash may have it, on any Pawns he shall bring there, as none are refused, though never so vile or valuable, provided they are saleable; so that every Thing will be received, from Jewels of a great Price, to the least Particular of Cloaths or Furniture; and the Interest on the Loan is paid in the following Manner, viz.

For what is under 100 Guilders, a Penning per Guilder is paid Weekly, which is after the Rate of 16 1-4th per Cent. per Annum.

From 100 to 500, is paid an Interest of 6 per Cent. per Annum.

From 500 to 3000, there is paid 5 per Cent. per Annum.

And from 3000 to 10,000, or above, only 4 per Cent. per Annum is paid.

Whoever have brought in their Effects may retrieve them whenever they please, on returning the Sum they have received, with the Interest to the Day of their taking them back; though with this Exception, that as the Interest is to be paid Monthly, that of the Month entered on must be satisfied; but to avoid this, the Debtor must take Care to free his Goods exactly at the Month's End.

If those, who have brought in their Pawns, neglect to free them at the Expiration of a Year and six Weeks, or that they do not prolong the Time of Payment, by satisfying the Interest of the past Year, the Lombard sells them by Auction, and reserves what they produce more than the Sum lent, Charges and Interest deducted, at the Disposition of the Proprietors; but if they do not reclaim the said Surplus in a Year after, it is given to the Poor Houses, and cannot then by any Means be regained.

For the Convenience of those who are desirous of being unknown, and therefore do not Care to carry their Effects themselves to the Lombard, there are several small Offices established in the City, with this Inscription before the Door—Hier gaatmen in de Bank van Leeninge; that is, Here they go to the Lombard, or Bank. The People established in these Offices take an Oath to the Lombard, and are obliged to carry in there daily, the Effects that are brought to them, under Penalty of Cassation and being fined; the Lombard pays them eight Stivers per every 100 Guilders that it lends on the Effects that they bring in: These People take Care to carry the Goods to the Lombard, where they pawn them in their own Names, and deliver the Money to him who brought them to them, with a Note from the Lombard, that contains the Name of the Commissary, the Quality of the Thing upon which the Money is taken, and the Sum advanced on it.

If this Note happens to be lost, and the Proprietor would reclaim his Goods, and restore the Sum borrowed, he is not believed on his bare Word, nor will the Effects be delivered to him, without his giving good Security to return them, if it is found that the Note has been made over to another, who comes afterwards to demand them; but if, on the Note's being lost, any one finds it, or even if it is stole from the Owner, and he that has found it, or stole it, carries it, and demands the Effects, and pays the Loan before the Proprietor perceives that he has lost it, the Lombard always delivers them to the Bearer, without Enquiry whether he is the real Proprietor or not; and the true one has forfeited the Right he had to reclaim his Effects from the Bank.

The publick Sales made in this House, are made during three Days in every Week. All Sorts of Persons are admitted to the Auction; and those which are known, have three Months' Credit, particularly for Diamonds and other Jewels.

If it happens, as in Effect it does very often, that the Goods, Merchandise, or Jewels, brought to the Bank, have been stolen, and their Owners have discovered it, they may reclaim them, on proving the Theft, giving Security for their Value, and returning the Sum that has been lent on them.

All the Lombard's Officers are paid by the City, of which some are established to controul and value Clothes or Furniture, others upon Merchandise, and others upon Jewels and Plate, for the Reception of which there are three Warehouses, and the Appraisers are answerable for the Price at which they have valued the Things that are brought in; in Case they are sold for less than the Valuation, which they have put on them.

The Sums that the Lombard have Occasion for, are drawn from the Money Bank, and all the Profit it produces is destined for the Support of all, or the greatest Part of the Hospitals, by which Method the Bank's Cash, which would otherwise lie usefess, is of great Benefit to the Poor, without the publick Security being in any respect concerned.

Of these Lombards there were some established formerly in many Parts of the Low Countries, and one particularly at Bruges in Flanders, where Money was lent on Pawns without any Interest at all; and in several Cities of Italy, there were, and still are, several Banks of Charity, called Montes Pietatis, where Cash is lent on Pledges, for which only an Interest of three or four per Cent. per Annum is required, to pay the Salaries, &c. of the Assistants, and whose Funds have been settled by the charitable Donations of many, who have contributed largely to the Poor's Relief in this Shape; and these different Ways and Means have been thought of, and carried into Execution, purely to prevent that execrable Sin of Usury, and common Pawn-broking; and to prevent the Calamities the Indigent suffered from it.

Of Contracts, Bonds, and Promissory Notes.

A CONTRACT, in Latin, Contractus, is a Covenant, or Agreement between two or more Persons, with a lawful Consideration or Cause, as when a Man makes the Sale of any thing to another, for a Sum of Money, or covenants, in Consideration of Fifty Pounds, to make him a Lease of a Farm, &c.

These are good Contracts, because there is a Quid pro Quo, or one Thing for another; but, if a Person promises me Twenty Shillings, and that he will be Debtor to me for it, and after, when I demand the Completion of his Promise, he refuses me, I cannot have any Action for its Recovery, because this Promise was no Contract, but a bare Promise, or Nudum Pactum, though if any Thing had been given for the Twenty Shillings, even to the Value of a Penny, then it had been a good Contract. Every Contract doth imply in itself, an Assumpsit in Law for its Performance; for a Contract would be to no Purpose, if there were not Means to enforce the Performance thereof.

1 Lill. Abr.
520.

Where an Action is brought upon a Contract, and the Plaintiff mistakes the Sum agreed on, he will fail in his Action: But, if he brings this Action on the Promise in Law, which arises from the Debt, then although he mistakes the Sum, he shall recover.

A. 2. 92.

There is a Diversity, where a Day of Payment is limited on a Contract, and where not; for where it is limited, the Contract is good presently, and an Action lies upon it, without Payment, but in the other not; if a Man buys twenty Yards of Cloth, &c. the Contract is void if he do not pay the Money presently; but if Day of Payment be given, there the Seller may have an Action for the Money, and the Buyer Trover for the Cloth.

29. 30. 293.

If a Man Contract to buy a Horse, or any Thing else, but no Money is paid or Earnest given, nor a Day set for Payment thereof, nor the Purchase is delivered; in these Cases no Action will lie for the Money, or the Thing sold, but it may be sold to another.

All Contracts are to be certain, perfect, and complete: For an Agreement to give so much for a Thing, as it shall be reasonably worth, is void for Uncertainty; so a Promise to pay Money in a short Time, &c. or to give so much if he likes the Thing when he sees it.

Dyer 91.
1 Bul. 92.

But if I contract with another to give him ten Pounds for such a Thing, if I like it on seeing it; this Bargain is said to be perfect at my Pleasure, though I may not take the Thing before I have paid the Money; If I do, the Seller may have Trespass against me; and if he sell it to another, I may bring Action of the Case against him.

29. 104.

If a Person agree with another to give so much for his Horse as A. B. shall judge him to be worth; when he hath judged it, the Contract is complete, and an Action will lie on it, and the Buyer shall have a reasonable Time to demand the Judgement of A. B. but, if he dies before his Judgement is given, the Contract is determined.

Perk. Sect.
Shep. Abr.
294.

In Contracts, the Time is to be regarded, in and from which the Contract is made: The Words shall be taken, in the common usual Sense, as they are taken in that Place where spoken; and the Law doth not so much look upon the Form of Words, as on the Substance and Minds of the Parties therein.

5 Rep. 81.
1 Bull. 175.

A Contract for Goods may be made as well by Word of Mouth, as by Deed in Writing; and where it is in Writing only, not sealed and delivered, it is the same as by Word; but if the Contract be by Writing, sealed and delivered, and so turned into a Deed, then it is of another Nature, and in this Case generally the Action on the verbal Contract is gone, and some other Action lies for Breach thereof.

Flind. 130.
Dyer. 90.

Contracts, not to be performed in a Year, are to be in Writing signed by the Party, &c. or no Action may be brought on them; but, if no Day is set, or the Time is uncertain, they may be good without it.

29 Car. II.
23<sup>o</sup>.

And by the same Statute, no Contract for the Sale of Goods, for ten Pounds or upwards, shall be good, unless the Buyer receive Part of the Goods sold, or gives something in Earnest to bind the Contract, or some Note thereof be made in Writing, signed by the Person charged with the Contract, &c.

Med. Caf.

If two Persons come to a Draper, and one says, Let this Man have so much Cloth, and I will see you paid, there the Sale is to the Undertaker only, though the Delivery is to another by his Appointment: but, if a Contract be made with A. B. and the Vender scruples to let the Goods go without Money, and C. D. comes to him, and desires him to let A. B. have the Goods, and undertakes that he shall pay him for them, that will be a Promise within the Stat. 29 Car. II. and ought to be in Writing.

answer the Intent of the Parties; otherwise a Person, by obscure Wording of his Contract, might find Means to evade and elude the Force of it. Hence it is a general Rule, that all Promises shall be taken most strong against the Promiser, and are not to be rejected, if they can by any Means be reduced to a Certainty. 1. New Abridg. of Cases in Equity, 168.—But Promises are not valid, if the Consideration be against Law: And where there are Frauds in Contracts, an Action on the Case will lie. Clarke's Epit. of Com. Law.

CONTRACTS and AGREEMENTS are in many Cases of the same Signification, as this latter in its Latin Derivation, Agreementum, or Aggregatio Mentium, seems to express, signifying a joining together of two or more Minds, in any Thing done, or to be done; and BONDS are Deeds, or obligatory Instruments in Writing, whereby one doth bind himself to another, to pay a Sum of Money, or do some other Act; as to make a Release, surrender an Estate for quiet Enjoyment, to stand to an Award, save harmless, perform a Will, &c. It contains an Obligation with a Penalty; and a Condition, which expressly mentions what Money is to be paid, or other Thing to be performed, and the limited Time for the Performance thereof, for which the Obligation is peremptorily binding; it may be made on Parchment or Paper, duly stamped, though it is usually on the latter, and be either in the first, or third Person; and the Condition may be either in the same Deed, or in another, and sometimes it is included within, and sometimes endorsed upon the Obligation, though it is commonly at the Foot of it.

A Memorandum on the Back of a Bond may restrain the same, by Way of Mare 675. Exception.

A Bond may be by any Words, in a Writing sealed and delivered, wherein a Man doth declare himself to have another Man's Money, or to be indebted to him; but the best Form of making it, is that which is most used.

If a Bond be thus, Know all Men by these presents, that I A. B. am bound to C. D. in the Sum of, &c. for Payment of which I give full Power to him to levy the same upon the Profits of such Lands yearly, till it be paid: In this Case, the Oblige may sue upon the Obligation, or levy the Money according to the said Clause.

Where a Bond is made, obligo me, &c. leaving out the Words, Heirs, Executors, et Administratores, this is good, and the Executors and Administrators shall be bound thereby.

An Obligation made to one, to the Use of A. B. will be good for him in Equity.

The Condition of a Bond must be to do a Thing lawful; wherefore Bonds, not to use Trades, till or sow Grounds, &c. are unlawful, as they are against the publick Good, and the Liberty of a Freeman, and therefore void: And a Condition of a Bond to do any Act, Malum in se, as to kill a Person, &c. is void: So also Bonds made by Durety, by Infants, Feme Coverts, &c. And if a Woman through Threats, or Flattery, be prevailed upon to enter into a Bond, she may be relieved in Chancery.

If an Infant, that is, a Person under twenty-one Years of Age, seal a Bond, and be sued thereon, he is not to plead, Non est Factum, but must avoid the Bond by special Pleading; for this Bond is only voidable, and not in itself void.

But if a Bond be made by a Feme Covert, she may plead her Coverture, and conclude Non est factum, &c. her Bond being void.

If a Bond depends upon some other Deed, and the Deed becomes void, the Bond is also void. A Bond made with Condition not to give Evidence against a Felon, &c. is void; but the Defendant must plead the special Matter.

Condition of a Bond to indemnify any Person from any legal Prosecution, is against Law, and void.

And if a Sheriff takes a Bond as a Reward for doing of a Thing, it is void.

Conditions of Bonds are to be not only lawful, but possible; and when the Matter or Thing to be done, or not to be done by a Condition, is unlawful or impossible, or the Condition itself repugnant, insensible, or uncertain, the Condition is void, and in some Cases the Obligation also.

2 Mod. 285. But sometimes the Obligation may be single to pay the Money, where the Condition is impossible, repugnant, &c.

1 Med. Rep. 265. If a Thing be possible at the Time of entering into the Bond, and afterwards becomes impossible by the Act of God, the Act of the Law, or of the Obligee, it is become void; as if a Man be bound to appear next Term, and dies before, the Obligation is saved. A Condition of a Bond was, that A. B. should pay such a Sum on the 25th of December, or appear in Hilary Term after in the Court of B. R. he died after the 25th of December, and before Hilary Term, and had paid nothing: In this Case, the Condition was not broken for Non-Payment, and the other Part is become impossible by the Act of God.

Dyer 51. And when a Condition is doubtful, it is always taken most favourably for the Obligor, and against the Obligee, but so as a reasonable Construction be made as near as can be, according to the Intention of the Parties.

1 Brookl. 33. If no Time is limited in a Bond for Payment of the Money, it is due presently, and payable on Demand.

Jones 140. But the Judges have sometimes appointed a convenient Time for Payment, having Regard to the Distance of Place, and the Time wherein the Thing may be performed; and if a Condition be made impossible, in Respect to Time, as to make Payment of Money on the 30th of February, &c. it shall be paid presently; and here the Obligation stands single.

1 Lees 101. Though if a Man be bound in a Bond with Condition to deliver so much Corn upon the 20th Day of February next following, and that Month had then but twenty-eight Days, it has been held that the Obligor is not obliged to perform the Condition till there comes a Leap-Year.

2 Bulst. 149. Where one is bound to do an Act to the Obligee himself, the doing it to a Stranger, by Appointment of the Obligee, will not be a Performance of the Condition.

1 Inst. 210. When no Place is mentioned for Performance of a Condition, the Obligor is obliged to find out the Person of the Obligee, if he be in England, and tender the Money, otherwise the Bond will be forfeited. But when a Place is appointed, he need seek no farther.

2 E. IV. And if, where no Place is limited for Payment of Money due on a Bond, the Obligor, at, or after the Day of Payment, meets with the Obligee, and tenders him the Money, but he goes away to prevent it, the Obligor shall be excused.

Co. Litt. 208. The Obligor, or his Servant, &c. may tender the Money to save the Forfeiture of the Bond, and it shall be a good Performance of the Condition, if made to the Obligee, though refused by him; yet, if the Obligor be afterwards sued, he must plead that he is still ready to pay it, and tender the Money in Court.

3 Bulst. 148. The Condition of a Bond being for Payment of Money, it may be performed by giving any other Thing in Satisfaction, because the Value of Money is certain, and therefore may be satisfied by a collateral Thing, if the Obligee accepts it; but if the Condition is to do a collateral Thing, there it is otherwise, and paying Money is no good Satisfaction.

Fieb. 68. The Acceptance of a new Bond will not discharge the old one, as a Judgment may.

1 Med. 221. One Bond cannot be given in Satisfaction of another, but this is where given by the Obligor himself, for it may be by others.

Key's Max. 15. If a Bond be to pay Money at such a Time, &c. it is no Plea for the Obligor to say, that he did pay it; he must shew at what Time, or else it may be taken, that the Performance was after the Time limited.

Med. Ca. 22. If a Bond be of twenty Years standing, and no Demand be proved thereon, or good Cause of so long Forbearance shewn to the Court, upon pleading Solvit ad Diem, it shall be intended paid.

Dyer 25. Payment of Money without Acquittance, is an ill Plea to Action of Debt upon a single Bill; but it is otherwise upon a Bond, with Condition.

1 Id. 292. If several Days are mentioned for Payment of Money on a Bond, the Obligation is not forfeited, nor can be sued until all the Days are past: But in some Cases, the Obligee may prosecute for the Money due by the Bond presently, though it be not forfeit; and by special wording the Condition, the Obligee may be able to sue the Penalty on the first Default.

In a Bond where several are bound severally, the Obligee is at his Election, Dyer 19, 310. to sue all the Obligors together, or all of them apart, and have several Judgements and Executions; but he shall have Satisfaction at once; for if it be of one only, that shall discharge the rest. If an obligation be joint and not several, all the Obligors must be sued that are bound; and if one be prosecuted, he is not obliged to answer, unless the rest are sued likewise.

Where two or more are bound in a joint Bond, and only one is sued, he must plead in Abatement, that two more sealed the Bond, &c. and aver that they are living, and so pray Judgement de Billis, &c. and not demur to the Declaration. Sid. 420.

If a Bond is made to three to pay Money to one of them, they must all join in the Action, because they are but as one Obligee. Yelv. 177.

If Action be brought upon a Bond, against two joint and several Obligors jointly, and both are taken by Capias, here the Death or Escape of one shall not release the other; but the same Kind of Execution must be taken forth against them; it is otherwise when they are sued severally. 11ob. 59.

When the Condition of a Bond is to do two Things, or has divers Points, and the Obligee, supposing a Breach of one of them, doth sue the Obligor; if, Issue being joined upon that, it is found against him, and he is barred, the whole Obligation is discharged: And so long as that Judgement is in Force, he can never prosecute upon any other Point. Dyer 371. 2 Shep. Abr. 487.

If a drunken Man gives his Bond, it binds him; and a Bond without Consideration is obligatory, and no Relief shall be had against it, for it is voluntary, and as a Gift. Jenk. Cent. 169.

A Person enters voluntarily into a Bond, though there was not any Consideration for it; if there be no Fraud used in obtaining the same, the Bond shall not be relieved against in Equity. But a voluntary Bond may not be paid in a Course of Administration, so as to take Place of real Debts, even by simple Contract; yet it shall be paid before Legacies. 1 Chan. Caf. 157.

An Heir is not bound, unless he be named expressly in the Bond, though the Executors and Administrators are. And if an Obligation be made to a Man, his Heirs or Successors, the Executors and Administrators shall have the Advantage of it, and not the Heir or Successor, by Reason it is a Chattel. Dyer 14, 271.

A Declaration need not be according to the Letter of the Bond, where there is any Omission, &c. but according to the Operation of Law upon it. Mod. Caf. 228.

In Bonds to save harmless, the Defendant being prosecuted, is to plead Non damnificatus, &c. A Bond may be from one to one, one to two, three, or more Persons; or from two or more Persons to one, two, three, &c. and the Name of the Obligor subscribed, it is said, is sufficient, though there is a Blank for his Christian Name in the Bond. 2 Cro. 226.

But where another Christian Name is in the Bond, and the Bond signed by the right Name, though the Jury find it to be his Deed, the Obligee cannot have Judgement, for the Name subscribed is no Part of the Obligation. 2 Cro. 558. Mod. 157.

In these Cases, though there be a Verdict, there shall not be Judgement. Where an Obligor's Name is omitted to be inserted in the Bond, and yet he signs and seals it, the Court of Chancery may make good such an Accident; and in Case a Person take away a Bond fraudulently, and cancels it, the Obligee shall have as much Benefit thereby as if not cancelled. 3 Chan. Rep. 99. 184.

If a Bond has no Date, or a false Date, if it be sealed and delivered, it is good. A Plaintiff may suggest a Date in a Bond, where there is none, or it is impossible, &c. where the Parties and Sum are sufficiently expressed. 5 Mod. 282.

A Bond dated on the same Day on which a Release is made of all Things, Ujque Diem datus, &c. is not thereby discharged. 2 Roll Rep. 255.

And where a Bond is made to another's Use, it must be so laid in the Obligation, or he cannot release it, &c. Jenk. Cent. 225.

A Person shall not be charged by a Bond, though signed and sealed, without Delivery, or Words, or other Thing amounting to a Delivery. 1 Leon. 140.

A Bond may be good, though it contains false Latin, or false English, if the Intent appears, for they do not make the Bond void. 2 Roll. Abr. 146.

By the Condition of a Bond, the Intent of what Sum was in the Obligation may be more easily known and explained. Moer 864. 2 Roll. 146.

Letw. 422. And the Condition of the Bond may be recorded, and then the Plaintiff demur, &c.

1 Inst. 108, 209. Likewise the Conditions of Bonds may expound to whom an Obligor is bound to pay Money; as if A. binds himself to B. to be paid to A. whereas it should be to B. which Obligation is good, and the Sekendum void.

1 Nelj. Abr. 391. Interlineation in a Bond, in a Place not material, will not make the Bond void; but if it be altered in a Part material, it shall be void.

5 Rep. 23. And a Bond may be void by Rasure, &c. as where the Date, &c. is rased after Delivery, which goes through the Whole.

1 Saund. 66. Such Words, whereby the Intention of the Parties may appear, are sufficient to make the Condition of a Bond good, though they are not proper; and it shall not be construed against the express Words.

If the Words in a Bond, at the End of the Condition, That then this Obligation to be void, are omitted, the Condition will be void, but not the Obligation: But if the Words, or else shall stand in Force, be left out, it has no Effect to hurt either the Condition or Obligation. The stealing of any Bond or Bill, &c. for Money, being the Property of any one, is made Felony, as if the Offenders had taken other Goods of the like Value.

The Form of a Bond for Payment of Money, with an Obligation from one to one.

And the Conditions are the same from three or more to one, or when the Obligors, as well as the Obligees, are in the Plural; as they are vice versa, when the Obligors and Obligees, vary in the Reverse to the afore-mentioned; and I think what I have quoted is sufficiently clear, to enable every one to fill up a Bond suitable to his Occasion; which I have done with a View more for the Service of my Country Readers, than those in this Metropolis, as these latter may readily furnish themselves with printed Bonds of all Sorts, which is not the Case with the others, though this Want they may supply by a Draught themselves on stamped Paper, where they have not an Opportunity to get it done by an Attorney, which however I would always recommend when to be effected, at least if the Case is any Thing more than Common.

A Penal Bill for Payment of Money.

KNOW all Men by these Presents, that I, A. B. of, &c. do owe unto C. D. of, &c. the Sum of one hundred Pounds, of lawful Money of Great-Britain, to be paid unto the said C. In Witness whereof I have hereunto set my Hand and Seal, the, &c. in the Year of, &c. sealed, &c.

A single Bill for Payment of Money, that is, a Bill without a Penalty.

KNOW all Men by these Presents, that I, A. B. of, &c. do owe and am indebted to C. D. of, &c. the Sum of one hundred Pounds, of lawful Money of Great-Britain, to be paid to the said C. D. his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, on or before, &c. In Witness, &c.

PROMISSORY NOTES being obligatory like Bonds, &c. I have thought it proper to insert them in the same Chapter, though they are in many Respects very different; these Notes are, like a Bill of Exchange, assignable by Indorsement, and in Case a Time of Payment be therein ascertained, they will bear an Interest, provided they are protested within three Days after becoming due; so that it is best in all Cases to insert a certain Time of Payment, except where the Solvency of the Drawer or Debtor is doubted: The Indorser becomes equally liable with the Drawer of these Notes; and when once an indorsable one, that is, payable to Order, is transferred to a third Person, it is no longer in the Power of the Indorser to acquit or free the Drawer from being liable, either by Release, or other Instrument in Writing, as the Property the Indorser before had in the Note is entirely removed by his Indorsement; in which it differs from a Bond or Obligatory Bill; for there the Obligee, after having assigned the same to a third Person, may, by Release or other Speciality, destroy the Validity of the Obligation, and consequently free the Obligor from the Burden thereof.

The Form of a Promissory Note, commonly called a Note of Hand.

THREE Months after Date, or on Demand, I promise to pay to Mr Richard Thomas, or Order, one hundred and fifty Pounds, for Value received, in London, the 23<sup>d</sup> of December, 1790.

£. 150.

A. B.

The Indorsement should be the same as on a Bill of Exchange; and as there are some Acts of Parliament in Force, which have altered the Quality of these Notes and inland Bills, from what they were formerly, I shall give an Abstract of them there, without separating what relates to the one from that concerning the other, as I deem this Method the most proper; more especially as I shall soon proceed to treat of Inland Bills.

<sup>S. 1.</sup> All Bills of Exchange drawn in, or dated from any Place in England, &c. for the Sum of 5l. or upwards, upon any Person in London, or any other Place, in which Bills the Value shall be expressed to be received, drawn payable at a certain Number of Days, &c. after the Date thereof, may after Acceptance, which shall be by Underwriting under the Party's Hand, and the Expiration of three Days after the same shall be due, be protested by a Notary Publick, or, in Default of such Notary Publick, by any other substantial Person of the Place, before two Witnesses, Refusal or Neglect being first made of due Payment; which Protest shall be made under a Copy of the said Bill, in the Form following:

KNOW all Men, that I A. B. on the _____ Day of _____ at _____ the usual Place of Abode of the said _____ have demanded Payment of the Bill, of which the above is the Copy, which the said _____ did not pay; wherefore I, the said _____ do hereby protest the said Bill.
Dated at _____ this _____ Day of _____

Which Protest shall be notified within fourteen Days after, to the Party from whom the Bills were received, who, upon producing such Protest, is to repay the said Bill, with Interest and Charges from the protesting; for which Protest there shall not be paid above Six-pence; and in Default of such Protest; or due Notice within the Days limited, the Person so failing shall be liable to all Costs, Damages, and Interest.

<sup>S. 7.</sup> If any such Inland Bills be lost or miscarry within the Time limited for Payment of the same, the Drawer of the said Bills shall give other Bills of the same Tenor, Security being given, if demanded, to indemnify him, in Case the said Bills so lost or miscarried, be found again.

<sup>Cap. 9. S. 1.</sup> All Notes signed by any Person or Persons, Body Politick or Corporate, or by the Servant or Agent of any Corporation, Banker, Goldsmith, Merchant, or Trader, who is usually intrusted by them to sign such Promissory Notes for them, whereby such Persons, &c. shall promise to pay any other Person, &c. or Order, or Bearer, the Money mentioned in such Note, shall be construed to be, by Virtue thereof, due and payable to such Person, &c. to whom the same is made payable. And also such Note payable to such Person, &c. or Order, shall be assignable over in Manner as Inland Bills of Exchange are, by Custom of Merchants; and the Person, &c. to whom such Money is payable, may maintain an Action for the same, as they might upon such Bills of Exchange. And the Person, &c. to whom such Note so payable to Order is assigned or indorsed, may maintain an Action against the Person, &c. who signed, or any who indorsed the same, as in Cases of Inland Bills, and recover Damages and Costs of Suit; and in Case of Nonsuit, or Verdict against the Plaintiff, the Defendant shall recover Costs.

<sup>S. 2.</sup> Such Actions shall be brought within the Time appointed for bringing Actions, per 21 Jac. I. Cap. 16. for Limitation of Actions.

<sup>S. 4.</sup> In Case the Party, on whom an Inland Bill of Exchange shall be drawn, shall refuse to accept the same, by underwriting the same, the Party to whom payable shall cause such Bill to be protested for Non-acceptance, as in Case of foreign Bills, for which Protest shall be paid 2s. and no more.

<sup>S. 5.</sup> No Acceptance of such Inland Bill shall charge any Person, unless underwritten or indorsed; and if not so underwritten or indorsed, no Drawer to pay Costs, Damages, or Interest, unless Protest be made for Non-Acceptance, and, within fourteen Days after Protest, the same be sent, or Notice thereof given, to the Party from whom such Bill was received, or left in Writing at his usual Place of Abode. Made perpetual by 7 Ann. Cap. 25.

STAT. 15 Geo. III. Chap. 51. After reciting, that various Notes, Bills of Exchange, and Draughts for Money for very small Sums, had for some Time past been circulated or negotiated in Lieu of Cash, in England, to the great prejudice of Trade and publick Credit; and many of such Bills and Draughts being payable under certain Terms and Restrictions, which the poorer Sort of Manufacturers, Artificers, Labourers, and others could not comply with, without being subject to great Extortion and Abuse, Enacts—

SECT. 1. That all Notes, Bills, Draughts, or Undertakings being negotiable for Payment of any Money, less than 20 Shillings, shall be void.

SECT. 2. If any Person, by any Means whatever, publish or negotiate any such Notes, &c. or on which less than 20*s.* shall be due, he shall pay 20*l.* or not less than 5*l.*

STAT. 17 Geo. III. Chap. 30. After reciting the above Act of 15 Geo. III. Chap. 51. and that the same had been attended with very salutary Effects; and that in Case the Provisions thereof were extended to a farther Sum, the good Purposes of it would be further advanced, Enacts—

SECT. 1. That all Notes, &c. negotiable for 20*s.* or above, and less than 5*l.* that shall remain undischarged, and made within England, after 1 Jan. 1778, shall specify the Names and Places of Abode of the respective Persons, to whom, or to whose Order, the same shall be made payable, and shall be dated before, or when drawn, and not on any subsequent Day, and be payable within 21 Days after their Date, and not negotiable after the Time of Payment; and every Indorsement shall be before Time of Payment, and be dated at, or not before the Time of making thereof; and shall specify the Name and Place of Abode of the Person to whom, or to whose Order, the Money is to be paid; and that the signing of every such Note, &c. and Indorsement shall be attested by a Witness, and drawn as follows:

Leeds, 20 Nov. 1777.

Twenty Days after Date, I promise to pay James Hatley, of Fleet-Street, London, Hosier, or his Order, the Sum of four Pounds ten Shillings, for Value received by £. 4 10 0.

Witness

Richard Bunn.

And the Indorsement Toties Quoties.

Norwich, 31 May, 1778.

Twenty-one Days after Date, pay to John Trott, of Fetter-Lane, London, or his Order, the Sum of Two Pounds and Two Shillings, Value received, as advised by William Holt.

To Matthew Wilks, of Shoreditch, in the County of Middlesex.

Jobu Trott.
Christopher Cowper.

And that all Notes, &c. as before, or in which 20s. or above, and less than 5*l.* shall be undischarged, and issued within England, at the Time aforesaid, in any other Manner, and also every Indorsement shall be void.

Sect. 2. Publishing or negotiating in England, any Note, &c. of or under the above Value, made in any other Manner than hereby permitted; and also negotiating such last mentioned Note, &c. after the Time aforesaid, is prohibited under the like Penalties and Forfeitures, and to be recovered and applied as by 15 Geo. III. Chap. 51. Sect. 3, &c. is directed. *

Sect. 2. That all Notes, &c. issued before 1 Jan. 1778, to be payable within England on Demand; and recoverable as directed by the Act with Respect to Notes, &c. issued before 24 June, 1775, and all Matters contained in 15 Geo. III. are to be in Force in England as to Notes, &c. issued after 1 Jan. 1778, and previous thereto.

Sect. 3. Both Acts are to continue not only for the Residue of five Years, in the former Act, but also for the farther Time of five Years.

Of Bills of Exchange; and concerning the cross ones of Europe, known to Foreigners under the Denomination of Arbitrations of Exchange.

THE original Traffick of Mankind, by Way of Barter, becoming troublesome, Necessity led them to the Invention of some more easy Manner of continuing their Commerce; and nothing being found so commodious a Medium as Money, this was many ages since adopted to carry on their Commercial Transactions, first by the Hebrews, then by the Romans, and since continued and improved by almost every civilized Nation; and for the still greater Conveniency of foreign Trade, they made Coins of the most valuable Metals, that might answer the Intention of an easy carriage, by being less bulky and heavy than baser ones; and this Method being generally approved of and practised by most trading People, they by Degrees fell into an Improvement even of this, and substituted Remittances and Exchanges by Bills, to save the Expence, Risque, and Trouble, which the Transport of Money from one Kingdom to another occasioned. The Jews, banished France in the Reigns of Philip August and Philip le Long, are supposed by some, to have been the original Inventors of it: whilst others, with greater Appearance of Probability, assign the Contrivance to the Gibelins, on their being expelled Italy by the Faction of the Guelfs; though the Motives given for both are the same, viz. their Endeavours to withdraw their absconded Effects with the Secrecy necessary to prevent their Confiscation; and to this Purpose they gave Bills on their private Friends to foreign Merchants on the Sums agreed on, and these were regulated by the different Value of the Coins exchanged; and as many of these Bills came back unpaid, it gave Birth to the Charge of Re-Exchange, first begun by the aforesaid Lombards, and these, after different Modifications, fixed it into a Branch of Business, They retired, on their first Expulsion from Italy, to Lyon in France, and from thence spread themselves into many other trading Cities of that, and other Kingdoms of Europe; and there is still a Street in Paris bearing their Name, from its having been a Quarter where the greatest Part of them resided, for carrying on their Banking Business; and it is owing to the same Reason, and to perpetuate the Memory of the great Business exercised there by these People.

People, and by them taught to the Dutch, that the Place where the Exchange stands at Amsterdam was at first, and still continues to be, called after them, as does a Street in London from the same Motive, so that it was these People who first sowed the seeds of these Negotiations in the Minds of the Belgick Merchants, who duly cultivated and spread them all over Europe for the easier conducting mercantile Affairs, and at the same Time to prevent the Exportation of their current Coin in Lieu of these Paper ones, if I may so term them; and this was found so beneficial and advantageous to trading Kingdoms as to merit and engage the Protection of several Princes for its Encouragement and Increase; among which some of our former Kings made several Regulations concerning it; Edward III. caused certain Tables to be set up at Dover and other Parts of the Realm, declaring the Value of the sundry Species of Coins current in the Countries trading with his Subjects, and the Allowance Merchants were to give to be accommodated with Remittances; as may be seen in the many good Laws of his Reign. These Tables and Exchanges were subject to the Direction of the King's Mint-Master, who made them Par pro Pari, or Value for Value, with a reasonable Allowance to those who were appointed to interfere as Exchangers, for their Trouble; and many Acts have been passed since by succeeding Princes concerning them.

But as Commerce varied, so did Exchanges, though they were generally reduced to four, viz. Cambio Commune, Cambio Real, Cambio Sicco, and Cambio Fictitio.

Cambio Commune, in England, was that which was constituted by the several Kings, who having received Monies in England, would remit by Exchange the like Sums to be paid in another Kingdom, according to the Regulation of the above-mentioned Tables.

Cambio Real, was when Monies were paid to the Exchanger, and Bills were drawn without naming the Species, but according to the Value of the several Coins, and indeed was no more than the Payment of Money in England with a Proviso to be repaid the just Value in Specie in another Country, according to the Price agreed on between the Exchanger and Deliverer, to allow or pay for the Exchange of the Money and the Loss of Time.

Cambio Sicco, or dry Exchange, is when a Merchant hath Occasion for 500*l.* for a certain Time, and would willingly pay Interest for the same, but the usurious Lender being desirous to take more than the Statute allows, and yet willing to avoid its Penalty, offers the 500*l.* by Exchange for Cadix, whereunto the Merchant agrees; but having no Correspondence there, the Lender desires him to draw his Bill on the said Place, payable at double or treble Usance, by any feigned Person, as the Exchange shall then govern, with which the Merchant complies; and on Receipt of the Bill, the Banker pays the Money, and remits the Bill to some Friend of his at Cadix to procure a Protest there for Non-acceptance, the Charge of which with the Exchange and Interest, the Merchant is to pay his Creditor; and these Expenses formerly were very considerable.

Cambio Fictitio, is when a Merchant hath Occasion for Goods, but cannot well spare Money for their Payment; and the Owner of them, to secure his Advantage, and avoid the Penalty of the Law, acts as the Usurer in the former Case, and obliges the Buyer to defray the Expenses of Re-exchange, &c.

These two last Methods of raising Money for the Necessitous were prohibited by an Act of Parliament in the 3d and 4th of Henry VII. but on Account of the base Monies coined by Henry VIII. at the Siege of Bologne, Exchanges were discontinued, and the aforesaid Pressures and Abuses became again current in the Reign of Edward VI. which occasioned all Exchanges to be prohibited for a short Time, but this being found of great Inconvenience and Detriment to Trade, it was again restored; though almost quite neglected, and the illegal Part of it connived at in the succeeding Reign of Queen Mary.

The just and true Exchange for Monies that is at this Day used both in England and other Countries, by Bills, is Par pro Pari, or Value for Value; so that the English Exchange, being grounded on the Weight and Fineness of our own Money, and the Weight and Fineness of those of each other Country, according to their several Standards, proportionable in their Valuation, which being truly and justly made, ascertains and reduces the Price of Exchange to a Sum certain for the Exchange of Monies to any Nation or Country whatsoever.

As Money is the common Measure of Things between Man and Man within the Realm, so is Exchange between Merchant and Merchant within and without the Realm, the which is properly made by Bills, when Money is delivered simply in England, and Bills received for the Re-payment of the same in some other Country either within or without the Realm, at a Price certain, and agreed upon between the Merchant and the Deliverer; for there is not at this Day any peculiar or proper Money to be found in Specie whercupon outland Exchanges can be grounded, therefore all foreign Coins are called Imaginary.

Having thus far premised and shewn the Original and Nature of Exchanges, I shall descend to Particulars, and endeavour, in the clearest Manner I can, to inform my Reader of every Circumstance necessary to be known in the Circulation of Bills; and of all Steps to be taken towards their Recovery; of their Form, current Courses, and the Laws concerning them, both here and in every other Part of Europe; that this nice Branch of Commerce may be rendered more intelligible, and be better understood than it commonly is, or can be, except duly explained: As Customs in their Formation, Times of running, and falling due, Days of Grace, &c. are almost as various as each European Nation is from another; and as I consider this to be the most intricate Part of mercantile Literature, I shall be as extensive in my Sentiments and Quotations about it as the Nature of the Thing requires, without fearing the Censure of my Readers for Prolixity, which however I shall endeavour to avoid incurring, and be as concise as my Capacity will permit, without curtailing what is necessary to be said on so important a Subject.

Marini's Advice, Pag. 3.

A Bill of Exchange is commonly drawn on a small Piece of Paper, and comprised in two or three Lines, being so noble and excellent, that though it cannot properly, as is conceived, be called a Speciality, because it wanteth those Formalities, which by the common Law of England are thereunto required, as Seal, Delivery, and Witnesses; yet it is equivalent thereunto, if not beyond, or exceeding any Speciality or Bond in its Punctuality and Precise Payment; for if once accepted, it must be paid when due, otherwise the Acceptor loses his Credit.

There are ordinarily four Persons requisite in making an Exchange, besides the Broker, viz. two at the Place where the Money is taken up, and two where it is payable; as 1st, the Deliverer, Giver, Remitter, or Negotiator, being the Person who delivers the Money—2dly, the Taker or Drawer, who receives or takes up the Money by Exchange—3dly, the Party who is to pay the Money in Virtue of the Bill drawn on him, commonly termed the Acceptant—4thly, the Person to whom the Bill is made payable, and is to receive it, called the Possessor or Holder of it.

But sometimes only three are concerned in an Exchange, viz. the Drawer, the Deliverer, who has the Bill made payable to himself or Order, and Value of him, and the Party that is to pay it, the Deliverer carrying it himself and receiving it.

Ditto, P. 4. There is likewise another Way, wherein only three are necessary, as 1st, the and 3. Drawer, 2dly, the Party on whom it is drawn, and 3dly he to whom it is payable; for the Drawer having Money in his Hands belonging to the Person in whose Favour the Bill is drawn, confesses Value received in his own Hands, and charges it to his Friend or Factor, payable to his Creditor.

And there is yet one Way more, wherein Monies may be remitted only with the Intervention of three Persons, 1st, the Taker, 2dly, the Deliverer, and 3dly, the Party to whom payable, as thus: If I was at Exon, and intended London, I would take up Money there, and give Bills of Exchange for the same, drawn on myself, payable to whom the Deliverer should appoint in A OWN.

Money may likewise be exchanged between two Persons only, viz. the Drawer and he on whom it is drawn; the Drawer making a Bill of Exchange payable to himself or Order for Value in himself, subscribes the Bill, and directs it to the Party that owes him Money, and is to pay it by Exchange; by which Bill, when he on whom it is drawn hath accepted it, he becometh Debtor to the Drawer, and this latter, before the Bill falls due, doth negociate it with another Man, and by this Means draws the Money in at the Place of his Residence, and makes only an Assignment on the Bill, payable to him of whom he hath received the Value.

All these Methods of Exchanges are termed real Exchange, and some or all of them will naturally occur to a Man in Business; therefore the better to conduct my Reader to a perfect Understanding of them, he ought to be acquainted, that as the Monies and Species of almost every Nation differ, not only in their current Prices, but in their intrinsic Value, there is a just and certain Par established between them, according to the real and effective worth of each Species, without any Regard had to their currency in the Countries where they are coined; and the Par is by some Authors supposed to be of two Sorts, vis. the one of real Monies, and the other of Exchanges, or imaginary Species, though both seem to be the same Thing, as having a necessary Dependence upon each other.

By the Par of real Monies is to be understood, The Equality of the intrinsic Value of the real Species of any Country with those of another; and by that of Exchanges, the Proportion that the imaginary Monies of any Country bear to those of another. So that the Rise and Fall of an Exchange must be attributed either to the current Price of the Coins of any Country, or to an extraordinary Demand in one Place for Money in another, or sometimes it is owing to both; and I think it may easily be proved from the very Etymology of the Word Exchange, that the variation of the current Coins or Monies of any Country in a Manner constitutes and gives it Being, at least has a very great Influence on it, as it is only, according to the aforesaid Definition; a Bartering or Exchanging the Money of one Kingdom with that of another, which is always effected by the Intervention of two or three Lines of Writing on a Slip of Paper, as I have mentioned before; and I shall now proceed to shew what the Obligation of every one is who may be concerned in it:

1. And 1st, of the Drawer, who in treating about, or negotiating a Bill of Exchange, must have a strict Regard to his Credit, and never give his Draughts at an Under-Exchange, as this is a certain Indication of his Want both of Cash and Credit, though without an Impeachment of either he may do his Business, although something under the very Height of the Course, as this cannot always be obtained by every one; therefore when a Drawer is not notoriously under the Mark, he will transact his Affairs with Reputation; and if his sole View in drawing proceeds from a Prospect of Advantage, without any Mixture of Necessity, he may watch his Juncture for succeeding in his Designs by regulating his Draughts or Remittances according to the Plenty or Scarcity of Money or Bills.

2. If, in negotiating a Bill of Exchange, only the Price is mentioned without any other Conditions, they shall in this Case be construed to be such as the Customs of the Place to which the Bill is directed ordinarily allow of, in all Respects.

3. A Drawer ought to observe before he subscribes a Bill, and the Remitter before he sends it away, that it be well and truly made, with all the necessary Requisites fully expressed in it, which I shall here hint for their Government; and 1st, it ought to have its Date rightly and clearly expressed—2<sup>dly</sup>, that it names the Place where it was made and concluded on—3<sup>dly</sup>, that the Sum be expressed so distinctly both in Words and Figures, that no Exceptions can be taken against it—4<sup>thly</sup>, that the Payment thereof be ordered and commanded—5<sup>thly</sup>, that the Time of Payment be not dubiously expressed, neq sooner or later than has been agreed on—6<sup>thly</sup>, the Remitter must especialy observe that the Name of the Person to whom Payment is to be made, be well and truly spelled; or if it be made to his Order, that those Words be clearly written—7<sup>thly</sup> and 8<sup>thly</sup>, he must also observe if his Name be therein, and the Value of him received be expressed—6thly, he must observe that the Bill be subscribed by the Drawer—7thly, the Drawer must principally look to the Direction of the Bill, that it be true and directed to the right Person—8thly, they must both observe, that the Place wherein the Payment must be made, and the Coin, or Species wherein it must be paid, be fully expressed in the Superfcription or Body of the Bill: And if a Drawer draws upon one who lives not at the Place where the Bill is intended to be paid, then the Remitter must observe, that as well the Place where the Person lives that is to pay, as the Place where the Payment must be made, be expressed.

4. A Drawer acts imprudently when he gives more Bills than one for the same Sum, to the same Person, and under the same Date, as this may be an Occasion of Mistakes; therefore if two Bills for one thousand Dollars are agreed for, it is better to make them for unequal Sums, than five hundred each.

5. It is a Custom in England for the Drawer to deliver only the first Bill on the Day of Agreement, and to recover on the 2d and 3d, which are sent to the Remitter for Payment before the next Post goes out; and a Drawer should always observe to note how many Bills he gives, lest by a repeated Loss he should be led into an Error through forgetfulness, and give the Duplicate of one he had given before.

J. Marins,
l. 22.

6. Generally, in all Bills of Exchange, the Drawer is bound to the Person from whom the Value is received; as the Acceptor is to him to whom it is made payable; for although the Drawer and Acceptor are both bound in the Bill, and both equally liable for the Payment thereof, yet they are not commonly both bound to one Man; I say commonly, for if the Taker of the Bill be Servant to the Party to whom the Bill is payable, then indeed the Drawer may be said to be bound to the Party to whom it is payable, as well as the Acceptor; or if he who pays the Value be the Principal, and he remits his own Money by Exchange, payable to his Agent, in this Case likewise, both Drawer and Acceptor may be said to be bound to the Purchaser of the Bill; but for the generality, in Sums remitted and drawn between Merchant and Merchant, it is otherwise, as the Drawer is properly bound to one, and the Acceptor to another, though both of them are liable till the Bill be satisfied; so that if the accepted Bill be not paid at the Time, and Protest made for Non-Payment, and there be Occasion to commence a Suit in Law against the Drawer, it must be entered in the Name of the Party from whom the Value was received; and in like Manner, if a Suit be commenced against the Acceptor, it must be made and prosecuted in the Name of him to whom the Bill is made payable; for probably the Drawer takes no great Notice to whom it is made payable, being directed therein by the Person that takes the Bill; neither doth he who accepts the Bill much regard the Purchaser of it, but only regarding the Party who drew it, with whom he corresponds, and him to whom it is made payable, to whom by his Acceptance he binds himself for the Payment; and so likewise where there are any Assignments on Bills negotiated, always the Party that receives the Value is directly bound to him of whom he hath received it, and the Acceptor to the last assigned.

7. If a Merchant after accepting a Bill of Exchange, becomes insolvent, or hath done or suffered any thing publickly against his Credit, in the Interim before the Bill under his Acceptance falls due, the Holder, on hearing such a Report, should by a Notary demand of the Acceptor a better Security, and on not obtaining it, cause a Protest to be made for Want thereof, and send it away by the very next Post, that the Remitter may have an immediate Opportunity to demand and procure Security from the Drawer; and when the Bill is due, if it is not paid, another Protest must be made for Non-payment, and forwarded as the other; for which Protests the Drawer must be answerable, and pay the Charge of them jointly with those of Postage, Re-exchange, if the Money be redrawn, Commission, and Brokage.

8. When any Protest is received either for Want of Acceptance, or better Security, the Person to whom it is sent must presently repair with it to the Drawer or Indorser of the Bill, and upon sight thereof, he must give a satisfactory Security, Security if his own is not satisfactory, for Repayment of the Money received, with Re-exchange and Charges, if it is not paid when due; and it is customary in such Cases to make a Deposit suitable to the Value, or to procure some Person of unexceptionable Credit to be bound for its punctual Discharge.

9. It is customary, as I have observed before, for a Drawer in London to deliver his first Bill to the Person agreed with, on the Day of its Negotiation, and to recover on the second or third Bill, retained till the succeeding Post, so that it has sometimes happened through Misfortunes, though oftener with Design, that the Remitter has absconded or failed before Payment, so that the Bill arriving before the Advice of the Failure or Knavery, is accepted and must be paid, though Equity would certainly give Relief to the Party aggrieved, in Case of Fraud, provided the Deceiver could be found.

10. And if the Acceptor of such a Bill becomes insolvent, or refuses to pay it when due, the Drawer is obliged for its Discharge, with Re-exchange, Provision, &c. although he has not received its Value.

11. If a Merchant draws a Bill of Exchange for his own Account, and remits his Correspondents others, or Cash to discharge it, or orders him to revalue for its Amount, and in this last Case, the Re-draughts are accepted; though the Factor becomes insolvent, or retires with the Money, whilst the Bill is running on him, the Merchant shall be obliged to pay the Bill returned protested, with all charges of Re-exchange, &c. by which Means he furnishes not only these, but the Value of the Bill twice, so that a more than common Regard should be had to the Character of the Person employed in such Transactions.

12. If a Drawer fails before receiving Value for his Bill given, and the Remitter hath the Bill still in his Hands, he should restore it to the Creditors or Trustees of the Drawer's Effects; but if they refuse to admit it and insist on his performing his Contract, he is obliged to a Compliance, and must demand Acceptance, and endeavour to procure Payment of the same, though not till the Creditors or Trustees who urge him thereto have given him satisfactory Security, for the Payment of Re-exchange and incident Charges, in Case this Negotiation should return with Protest; and till they do this, they cannot oblige him to pay them the Value of the Bill.

13. When a Bill of Exchange is accepted, and not punctually paid when due, a Protest for Non-payment is so far from releasing the Acceptor, as some have formerly erroneously thought, that it exposes him to the Payment of more than he was before liable; as by Acceptance he only obliges himself to the Discharge of the Sum mentioned in the Bill, but under Protest must pay all Costs, Damages, Interests, &c. and for which he becomes liable to an Action on the Case, as soon as the Protest for Non-payment hath been made, and he may be arrested for the same accordingly.

14. In Case of a Remitter's failing, before he has paid the Value, and the Person to whom the Bill is drawn gets Advice of this Occurrence before Acceptance, and therefore refuses to accept it; the Bill on its returning protested, shall be paid, notwithstanding, with all Charges by the Drawer, under Proof from the Possessor, that he negotiated the said Bill, and paid a just Value for it: But if the Bill be directly forwarded to the Person to whom it is made payable; and sent him by the Remitter in Payment of a Debt he was owing him; then it is dubious whether the Drawer be obliged, as he has received no Value, nor the Possessor in any other Shape made the same good. And though the Drawer in such a Case is obliged to pay extra of what the Remitter owes him for the Value, the Re-exchange and Charges, yet the said Remitter stands indebted for no more than the bare Import of the Bill; nor can any Thing more be recovered of him.

15. When a Drawer acts simply for another's Account without engaging as Surety for the Negotiation, if the Value by any Casualty is not received, the Loss will fall on him for whose Account the Bills were given, unless the Drawer give the Remitter a Time for Payment, without advising his Principal thereof, or that he has neglected to demand the Money in the customary Time, or that that the Remitter was at the Time of transacting the Affair known to be insolvent, or apparently declining in his Circumstances; in any of which, or similar Cases, the Drawer shall suffer the Loss, whether he received any Benefit or not thereby, as it was occasioned by his crediting the Remitter.

16. If, through the Negligence of a Negotiator or Possessor of a Bill, the demanding Acceptance has been omitted or postponed till the Drawer has failed, and the Person it is drawn on, being ignorant of what has happened, accepts the same when presented, his Acceptance shall oblige him to the Payment, though procured after the Drawer's Insolvency; but if the Remitter or Possessor hath neglected to demand Acceptance, before the Drawer's Failure, and the Person to whom it is directed hath Advice thereof, he cannot be compelled to accept the Draught, though previous to the Knowledge of the Drawer's Misfortunes he hath acquainted him with his Intention to honour his Bill, and even afterwards confesses that he should have done it, had it been presented, and the Acceptance demanded, before the Advice of the Drawer's Failure reached him.

17. It is customary, in London, for the Possessor of a Bill to send it, on Receipt, to the Merchant's House, on whom it is drawn, for Acceptance, and leave it there, if desired, till the next Day, except the Post goes out the same Day it is received, which often happens from the unavoidable Irregularity of its Arrival, in which Case it should be accepted, or protested. And in Case a Bill so left should happen to be lost, or mislaid, either by the Person on whom it is drawn, or by any of his Servants to whom it was delivered, so that it cannot be returned to him who left it, neither accepted nor unaccepted, in this Case he who lost the Bill, if he intended to accept, or if he had accepted it, should give a Note under his Hand and Seal for the Payment of the Sum mentioned, and to the Party directed in the Bill, at the Time limited, or to his Order, upon Delivery of the Second, if it come in Time, or if not upon that Note, which is in all respects and Cases to have the Law Privilege of a Bill of Exchange, as it is but just and reasonable that he who hath lost another's Specialty, should make it good by some Means equivalent thereto; and in Case of the said Note being refused, Protest should be immediately made for Non-acceptance, and forwarded to the Remitter, as that for Non-payment should be, though there is neither Bill nor Note to demand it on, if the Contents of the lost Bill are not satisfied at the Time limited for Payment.

18. When any Person has Bills sent him to procure their Acceptance, with Directions to return them or hold them at the Orders of the Seconds, &c. and the Person to whom they are so sent either forgets or neglects to demand Acceptance, or if he suffers the Party on whom they are drawn to delay their Acceptance, and the Drawers in the Interim fail, he is certainly very blameworthy for his Carelessness and Disregard of complying with his Obligation, though this will not subject him to a Payment of their Value; but if he should be urged and pressed to procure Acceptance and Payment to a Bill sent him, and should protract or refer the getting it done, and the Acceptant, being ignorant of the Drawer's Circumstances, declares he would have accepted it, had it been timely presented, the Person guilty of this Neglect will be obliged to make good the Loss, that has happened to his Correspondent, purely through his Omission and Carelessness.

19. If an Acceptor has heard that a Drawer has failed, he ought not to accept any of his Draughts afterwards, although he may, whilst ignorant of the Drawer's Circumstances, have promised Honour to his Bills; as his so doing may either prejudice himself, or a third Person, which he should carefully avoid, and not engage his Firm without a sufficient Security against all Claims and Demands, that may be made either by the Drawer himself, or any other in his Right.

20. And the Reasons are equally good against accepting any Bill from a Bankrupt Drawer, though it should bear Date before the Time of his Failure, and equal therein with the letter of Advice, as fraudulent Dealings are always to be feared in such Cases, and consequently to be guarded against; besides it is not safe to accept a Bill under these Circumstances, I mean in Point of Law; therefore every prudent Man will be cautious to secure himself.

21. If any one be drawn upon, on the Account of a third Person, and before accepting, has Advice of the Drawer's Failing, he ought not to accept the Draught, though he has promised the Drawer he would, as his Acceptance may be prejudicial to him; for if he has not Effects in his Hands, the Person for whose Account it is drawn, will naturally and reasonably scruple the satisfying the Value, or if he should, it will be a Detriment and Loss to him, if the other has not a sufficiency in Hand to answer the Bills. And he ought more especially to refuse Acceptance to any Bills of a Drawer who has failed, if the Person, for whose Account the same is drawn, advises of the Drawer's Insolvency, or on Suspicion of its Approach, hath forbidden the Acceptant to accept any of the Drawer's Bills for his Account, although he may have directed the Acceptance of them before.

22. When any Drawer fails, the Acceptor is not obliged to give better Security for Payment, but the Possessor must have Patience till the Bill falls due, before he has any Demand on the Acceptor; but then the Acceptor is obliged to pay, though he accepted for the Drawer's Account, and without any Effects in Hand.

23. But if an Acceptor, on a Drawer's having failed, denies Payment of a Bill, the Holder is not obliged to return it with Protest to the Place from whence it was drawn, as it is apparent that the Re-Exchanges and Charges are not recoverable from the Drawer, who must therefore, after Protests made, be proceeded against without Delay by Attachment, &c.

24. If an Acceptant fails, or absents himself, the Possessor is obliged, as soon as he has Notice of the truth thereof, to get a Protest made by a Notary Publick in due Time, and to send the same, with the Bill, to the Remitter, that he may procure Satisfaction from the Drawer; and Advice should not only be immediately given to him, but even to the last Indorser, that every one concerned may be acquainted with the Occurrence, and the Drawer thereby impowered to order some other to pay his Bill if he pleases, and thereby prevent the Losses which Re-exchanges bring with them.

25. If the Holder of a Bill, either through Negligence, Ignorance of the Custom, or of the Acceptor's Failure, or that because the Bill did not come to Hand till after it was due, or from any other Cause or Motive, did not, or could not, have it protested by a Notary Publick, nor send it away either before, or after it was due, till probably after the last Respite Day; yet this Negligence or Ignorance doth not hinder the Possessor's having Redress on the Drawer and Indorser, although the Acceptant failed before it came due.

26. When an Acceptor fails before the Day of Payment, and the Bill is made payable to Order, the Possessor should, as soon as possible, get a Protest made, and sent to the first Remitter, though he must retain the Bill till it falls due, that in Case the Drawer should think proper to order the Payment of his Bill by any other, the Possessor may be ready to receive it.

27. If when an Acceptor has failed, any other offers to accept and pay the Bill for the Honour of the Drawers or of any Indorser, the Possessor is not obliged to admit the Offer, if he has any Reason to suspect the Circumstances of the Person who makes it; but if he has not, or if the said Person will give sufficient Security for his Compliance, the Holder cannot refuse it.

28. Though it should be remembered that it is not safe to accept a Bill, whose first Acceptor has failed, but under Protest declarative of the Motives to it, which Protest should be immediately sent to the Drawer, or to him for whose Account it is accepted, with the Notary's Attestation of its being accepted for his Honour.

29. Though the Failure of an Acceptor be certainly known, and even acknowledged by the Drawer himself, yet this latter is not obliged to give any Satisfaction or Security to the Remitter till he produces the Protest; but if this is sent without the Bills, or the Bills without that, or both Bills and Protest are returned together, and these, or either of them shewn to the Drawer, he is obliged obliged to give immediate Satisfaction, or Caution for the Payment of Re-exchange and Charges; though it would be imprudent in a Drawer to make Restitution of the Value received, or of the Re-exchange and Charges, only upon producing a Protest for the Acceptor's Insolvency; but upon producing this, and a Requisition thereto, he should give Security for the Payment thereof, at the Place where it is made payable, provided it can be done in Time; if not, for the Re-exchange, when the Bill that was accepted by the insolvent Person shall be produced; and till the said Bill be produced, he need not restore nor repay any Thing, without sufficient Security to deliver the Bill, and a full Discharge from all future Demands; and to make Restitution thereof with Interest, in Case the said Bill be paid to any Person, supra Protest. But if there is not Time enough to order the Bill's Discharge at the Place it was drawn on, the Drawer must give the Remitter Security to pay it at that it was drawn from, as soon as it becomes due.

30. The Drawer or Indorser is as much obliged to the Possessor of a Bill, protested for an Acceptor's Insolvency, as they would be if the Bill was protested for Non-acceptance.

31. When a Person is drawn upon and remitted to, in Bills payable to himself, and hath advised that he has accepted the Draught, if he fails before the Bills become due, the Loss must fall upon the Drawer, or upon him for whose Account he drew, and he will be obliged to make good the Re-exchange and Charges, though it be not protested in due Form and Course; but if he fails on the Day of Payment, or after, then the Bill is considered as paid, and the Loss must be borne by him for whose Account it was drawn, though it should be protested within the Days of Respite.

32. When a Bill is drawn for the Account of a third Person, and is accepted according to its Tenor for his Account, and he fails without making Provision for its Payment, the Acceptor is obliged to discharge his accepted Draught, without having any Redress against the Drawer.

33. If a Person on whom a Bill is drawn scruples the accepting of it for the Account of him it is advised to be drawn for, or if through Want of Advice he is ignorant for whose Account it is drawn, he may accept the same, supra Protest, if he pleases, for the Account and Honour of the Drawer.

34. When a Bill is made payable to Order, and indorsed by a substantial Man, before Acceptance be demanded, and the Acceptor scruples to accept it for Account of the Drawer, or for the Account of him it is drawn for, he may, if he thinks proper, do it supra Protest, for the Honour of the Indorser; and in this Case, he must first have a formal Protest made for Non-acceptance, and should send it without Delay to the said Indorser, for whose Honour and Account he hath accepted the Bill.

35. An Acceptance, supra Protest, obliges the Acceptor as absolutely to the Payment, as if no Protest had intervened; it being indifferent to the Possessor of a Bill for whose Account the same is accepted, and he hath his Redress and Remedy as sufficiently as ever against all the Indorsers and Drawers, if the Payment be not punctually made by the Acceptor at the Time of its falling due.

36. The Possessor of a Bill must be satisfied and content with an Acceptance supra Protest, if offered by a responsible Person, as it is of no Importance to him whether it is accepted simply or under a Protest, as the Acceptor pays the Charges, except he had Orders from the Remitter, not to admit of such an Acceptance, in which Case he should and ought to protest, if a simple Acceptance is refused.

37. When a Bill is accepted, supra Protest, and the Holder is not satisfied therewith, but by the Notary Publick and Witnesses demands a simple Acceptance, and, upon Refusal, makes a Protest; the Acceptor, if he continues resolved not to accept simply and freely, should renounce the Acceptance he had made, and insist that it be so inserted in the Protest; and be considered as null and void, as if it had never been done, otherwise he will act imprudently, and may suffer for it.

38. Neither the Possessor of a Bill, nor he that may demand Acceptance, nor any third Person whatsoever, may accept a Bill of Exchange previous to a Refusal from him it is drawn on, or that he cannot be found; and hath left no Order for the Acceptance; in any of which Cases, either the Possessor himself, or any other, may accept it, under Protest, after causing it to be protested for Non-acceptance; and the Method of accepting supra Protest is as follows, viz. the Acceptor must personally appear before a Notary Publick with Witnesses, whether the same that protested the Bill or not is of no Importance, and declare that he doth accept such protested Bill in Honour of the Drawer, or Indorser, &c. and that he will satisfy the same at the appointed Time; and then he must subscribe the Bill with his own Hand, thus, Accepted supra Protest, in Honour of L. B. &c.

39. An Acceptance, supra Protest, may be so worded, that though it be intended for the Honour of the Drawer, yet it may equally oblige the Indorser, and in such Case it must be sent to the latter; but such an Acceptance tends rather to the Discredit than Honour of the Drawer.

40. When the Possessor of a Bill hath admitted of a third Person's Acceptance, supra Protest, in Honour of the Drawer, then the Drawer is freed from any Obligation to give a further Satisfaction to the Remitter; but if the Acceptance be made in Honour of the Indorser only, the Bill is as absolutely protested in Respect to the Drawer, and he is as much obliged to give Satisfaction, either to the Indorser, for whose Honour it was accepted, or to the Remitter, as if the Acceptance, under Protest, had never been made.

41. If a Bill be protested for Non-acceptance, and after being accepted, supra Protest, by a third Person, the intended Acceptant, on receiving fresh Advices and Orders, determines to accept and pay it: the Acceptor, under Protest, may suffer it, though the Possessor cannot be obliged to free him from his Acceptance; and in Case the two Acceptors agree, he that was originally designed such, is obliged to pay him who has accepted supra Protest, his Commission, Charges, &c. as it was by his Acceptance that the Bill was prevented from being returned protested.

42. Any Man that will, may, supra Protest, accept a protested Bill for the Honour of the Drawer, or any particular Drawer, that was before accepted, supra Protest, in Honour also of some one particular, but later Indorser, and the first Acceptor is obliged to allow of the same, and yet remain obliged for his first Acceptance; but the last Acceptor is obliged to pay and allow Provision and Charges to the first, for the Reasons assigned in the preceding Case.

43. He that accepts a Bill supra Protest, puts himself absolutely in the stead of the first designed Acceptor, and is obliged to make the Payment without any Exception; and the Possessor hath the same Right and Law against such an Acceptor, as he would have had against the first intended one, if he had accepted.

44. When any one accepts a Bill supra Protest, he may lawfully demand a Recompence for the Credit given him, for whose Honour he accepted it, at least his Commission, Postage, and other Charges; and in Case he should be forced to take his Reimbursement by Re-draughts on the Persons for whose Account he accepted and pays, his Bill ought to meet with a just and ready Compliance, besides a grateful Acknowledgement of the Favour.

45. No one should accept a Bill under Protest for the Drawer's Honour, till he has first learned the Reasons from the intended Acceptor, for his suffering it to be protested; but if the Acceptance be in Honour of an Indorser, such an Enquiry is needless.

46. Though the Drawer of a Bill, under Protest for Non-acceptance, and his Hand-Writing, be ever so well known, yet every one should be cautious in accepting it supra Protest for his Honour, provided the Person for whose Account it was drawn, be unknown, and cannot be found.

47. Any one accepting a Bill supra Protest, either for the Honour of the Drawer or an Indorser, though it be done without their Orders, or Knowledge, yet hath his Redress and Remedy on the Person for whose Honour he accepted cepted it, who is obliged to indemnify him, as if he had acted entirely by his Directions.

48. If the Acceptor of a Bill, under Protest, for the Honour of a Drawer or Indorser, receive his Approbation of the Acceptance made, the Acceptor may freely pay the Bill, without any Protest for Non-payment; but if the Person, for whose Honour the Bill was accepted, returns no Answer to the Advice, or replies with a Disapproval thereof, unthankfully remarking that it was done without Orders; in this Case the Acceptor, supra Protest, must cause a formal one to be drawn up for Non-payment, against him to whom the Bill was directed, and on his continuing to refuse Payment, and he that has accepted it, is obliged to do it for him; he should engage the Possessor to transfer all his Action, Right, and Law of the Bill to him; for though this is not absolutely necessary, yet it will corroborate his Demands, when he comes to have recourse against the Person for whose Honour he accepted it (whether Drawer or Indorser) or any of the former Indorsers.

49. He that accepts a Bill in Honour of the Drawer, hath no Remedy against any of the Indorsers, because he obligeth himself only for the Drawer; and he that accepts for the Honour of an Indorser, can have no Advantage from any one, subsequent to him for whose Honour he accepted; but he and all that were before him, the Drawer included, are obliged to make the Acceptor Satisfaction.

50. When a Bill is protested for Non-Payment, any Man may pay the same, under Protest, for the Drawer's or Indorser's Honour, ever he that made, or he that suffered the Protest.

51. A Man after having freely and willingly accepted a Bill, cannot satisfy the same under Protest, in Honour of an Indorser, because he as Acceptor, is already obliged to him; but an intended Acceptor, not having yet accepted the Bills, may discharge them for the Honour of the Indorser or Drawer, as if he was a third Person unconcerned.

52. When a Person has Bills passed on him for the Drawer's Account, who, having made no Provision for the Payment thereof, gives the Acceptor Room to fear he shall have some Difficulty in obtaining a Reimbursement; in such Case, this latter, may suffer them to be protested when due, and afterwards either pay them himself, or some other for him, under Protest causing the Right and Title to be transferred to him, to enable him to prosecute the Drawer in Case of Need, or by this Means the more easily to prevail on him to refund the Value he received, when probably it would be difficult to persuade him to reimburse what the Acceptor has paid for him.

53. No Man must pay a Bill under Protest for Non-Payment, till he has declared before a Notary Publick, for whose Honour he discharges it, whereof the Notary must give an Account to the Parties concerned, either jointly with the Protest, or in a separate Instrument, or A&.

54. He that pays a Bill supra Protest, immediately succeeds the Possessor in the Right and Title thereof, though there be no formal Transfer made, nor no Cessio Actionis from the Holder to the Payer; yet to prevent all Disputes, it may be more adviseable, especially in some Cases, to have this Cession made in Form, and to this the Possessor is obliged whenever it is demanded of him.

55. The Possessor of a Bill, protested for Non-payment, is not obliged to admit of its Discharge from a third Person, supra Protest, either in Honour of the Drawer or any Indorser, unless he declare and prove that the Honour of that Bill was particularly recommended to him; in which Case, the Holder is absolutely obliged to admit the Payment from him, as if the intended Acceptor had discharged it.

56. But if the protested Bill be indorsed by the Possessor's Correspondent, and was remitted by him, then the Possessor, if he acts circumspectly will not admit of any Payment in Honour of the Indorsements, but under the express Condition that the Payer shall have no Redress or Remedy against the said Correspondent.

57. He that discharges a Bill protested for Non-payment, in Honour of the Drawer, hath no Remedy against the Indorsers; though he that honours a Bill, protested for Non-payment, for an Indorser, hath his Remedy not only against the said Indorser, but against all that were before him, including the Drawer, though he hath no Action, Law, or Right against the Indorsers that follow him, for whose Account the Payer was willing to discharge the Bill; as has been mentioned about accepting Bills, Sec. 49.

58. When several Persons offer to honour a Bill protested for Non-payment, he that proffers to do it in Honour of the Drawer should first be admitted, and then, he that intends the same for the earliest Indorser.

59. When a Bill is paid under Protest, in Honour of an Indorser, and the Acceptor adviseth the Payer that there is another, or that he himself, will discharge it for the Honour of an earlier Indorser, or of the Drawer, and this before he that paid hath reimbursed himself by redrawing, then he is obliged to admit of it from the second, and to transfer his Right to him, though the second Payer will be obliged to refund to the first, not only his Charges, but half Commission also.

60. Men should be very circumspect and cautious in accepting or paying Bills for the Honour of the Drawers, and still more so, when they do it for the Honour of an Indorser; and ought to be very well acquainted with the Character and Circumstances of the Person for whom they engage their Firm, or pay their Money; and this Precaution is more especially to be observed, when a solvent Acceptor suffers a Protest for Non-payment, and his Reasons for so doing are strictly to be enquired into, previous to a Payment for the Honour of any one concerned, as they may be such as might dissuade any other from paying them supra Protest, though if they are intirely satisfied of the Ability of the Acceptor, they may with less fear pay the Bill, as he is obliged for its Discharge, in Case the Drawer or Indorsers refuse.

61. If the Protest for Non-payment be sent away, it is undaviseable to offer Payment under Protest, though the Bill be still retained, unless the Possessor will give sufficient Security to make Restitution, in Case the Drawer or Indorser should have repaid the Value and Charges, or otherwise agreed with the Remitters.

62. A more than ordinary Circumspection is likewise required in the Payment of Bills, under Protest, that are made payable to Order, and at some Days Sight, when there hath been any Neglect in the procuring Acceptance; and, above all, Men should be fearful to meddle with Bills that were not duly and timely protested.

63. When a Bill is paid, supra Protest, in Honour of the Drawer or Indorser, the Payer usually, if he has no Effects in his Hands, redraws the same directly on him for whose Account he paid it. with the Addition to the Sum mentioned in the Bill, of the Charges of Protest, Brokerage, Postage, and Commission.

64. And when he that pays under Protest hath revalued for his Advance, he ought, with his Advice of his Draughts, to send the Protest with the protested, and by him discharged, Bills of Exchange, jointly with the Instrument of his tendered Payment and its Acquittance, to his Correspondent, that they may be shewn to the Person, for whose Honour he paid, at the Time of demanding Acceptance of his Bills for Reimbursement, which ought in Gratitude to be punctually complied with; though if it should not, and the Person drawn on refuses Acceptance and Payment, he may be compelled thereto, as well as to defray all the Drawer's Charges and Damages, the Right being now in him, either by or without a Transfer of it from the first Possessor, as has been before explained.

65. If a Drawer make any Dispute, and alledge that his Bill was accepted, and therefore the Remitter must seek his Redreis from the Acceptor, &c. he should be informed that he must primarily be applied to before it can be sued for from the Acceptor; and if a Drawer has any suspicion that his Bill, though accepted, will not be paid, he should recommend the Care of it to some other Person for his own Credit, who may afterwards have recourse against the Acceptor, as this latter's refusing Payment exposes him to immediate Execution.

66. In Case of a Person's refusing Payment of his accepted Bills when due, they ought to be protested, and sent with the Protest to the Remitter or Drawer, which of the two it was that forwarded them, except they should order their Correspondent to detain the Bill, with a Prospect of obtaining their Discharge from the Acceptor.

67. The Possessor of an indorsed accepted Bill, protested for Non-payment, and not discharged supra Protest, hath his Redress on the Drawer and all the Indorsers; and therefore it is usual for the Possessor of such a Bill to redraw for its Value, &c. on him from whom he received it, whether he be the first Remitter, or any other Indorser; but if he is not to be found, or has failed, or if it is more for the Possessor's Conveniency, or to comply with the Request of a later Indorser, he may draw upon some earlier Indorser, and demand of him or the Drawer, Restitution of the Value and Charges, and, in Case of Refusal, compel him to it; still, however, the Person from whom he received, or with whom he negotiated the Bill, is obliged to refund, and he again hath his Redress on the Acceptor, Drawer, or any other earlier Indorser.

68. The Possessor of such a Bill must not directly demand Restitution from the Drawer, before he has given Notice of the Non-payment and Protest to the Indorsers, lest he lose his Redress on them; and he should, as well in Case of Protest for Non-acceptance as for Non-payment, advise the Remitter thereof without Delay, and send him a Copy of the Protest, that he may get Security from the Drawer.

69. No Bills of Exchange, protested or to be protested, can be attached in the Notary's Hands, except only when an Acceptor can demonstrate that he hath fully paid their Contents, and in this Case the Attachment will lie; otherwise it is of no Force or Validity; and the Notary may, may must when demanded, restore the Bill and Protest to him from whom he received it, to act therewith as he shall judge convenient.

70. No Person can be compelled to pay a Bill which has not been accepted; nor the Drawer or Indorser to the making Restitution, unless the Bill be returned with Protest for Non-payment; but if it is, and the Protest is in all Circumstances rightly made, he that gave or negotiated the Bill must make immediate and punctual Satisfaction for the Value, Re-exchange, Commission, Brokerage, Postage, and Protest.

71. The Drawer of a Bill payable to Order, is no further obliged, though the protested Bill was indorsed in several Places, and returned the same Ways, than for Payment of the Redraught made from the Place where the Bill was to be discharged directly to that where it was drawn, and at such a Course of Exchange as then governed; and the Indorsers are likewise no further obliged than for the Revaluing from the Place intended for its Payment directly to that where it was respectively indorsed by them.

72. When a Bill is in the same Place successively indorsed by several Persons, and is returned by Protest to the last Indorser, he is obliged instantly to make Satisfaction, either by himself or by some other Indorser before him or for him; and if he pay, and satisfy it himself, he is not then to demand Provision or Charges of the other Indorsers or Drawer in the same Place, more than what he has actually paid.

73. The Remitter or Possessor of a Bill protested for Non-payment, is not precisely obliged to solicit Restitution from the Drawer or Indorser, if he had rather seek his Redress from the Acceptor; and on the contrary he need not regard the Acceptor, if he prefers seeking Satisfaction from the Drawer or Indorser, nor is he obliged to allow them any Time for the Payment, but may, if it be not punctually complied with, proceed against which of them he pleases.

74. No Drawer or Indorser is obliged to make Restitution on Sight of the Protest alone, nor on Sight of the Protest and the unaccepted Bill, when one of them hath been accepted; but he is obliged to give a satisfactory Security to the

If a Person who has accepted a Bill, refuses Payment when it is due, and the Bill, on being returned with Protest that the Drawer may satisfy it, meets with a Refusal from him also, and is sent back again to the Possessor, this latter in such Case has as much Right and Law against the Acceptor as against the Drawer, and may force either of them to a Compliance.

76. Though the Possessor of an accepted Bill hath no Redress against the Drawer, if he omits to protest it for Non-Payment, till the Days of Grace are expired, yet if the Drawer be still in Credit, he must send to him with the Protest, as till this is done, and they are returned, he cannot compel the Acceptor to discharge it.

77. When a Bill is made payable for the Drawer's own Account, and is not discharged when due, but protested for Non-payment, the Possessor need not return it on the Drawer, but may instantly compel him to make Satisfaction whenever he is found.

78. The Acceptor of an indorsed Bill, protested for Non-payment, cannot be proceeded against by Arrest or Attachment, though any one or all the Indorsers refuse to make Satisfaction, unless the Drawer also refuse to do it, and this be proved by good Evidence; and the Acceptor of a Bill returned to the Drawer with Protest for Non-payment, and sent back undischarged by him, is only obliged to pay the Exchange and Re-exchange, Provisions, and Postage, without other Charges.

79. And the Exchange is reckoned according to the Course at Sight, at that Time and Place where the Protest is made, to the Place where the Payment should be made by the Drawer; but if it is not complied with there, then the Sum is again increased, by the Commission and Postage being added, and the Course is now reckoned upon the whole Sum, according as it shall govern at that Time and Place upon Sight, to the Place where the Bill is to be paid, and the Acceptor is obliged to pay the Re-exchange and all the Charges, although the Parcel was not effectually negotiated and redrawn, i. e. Rechange, Provision, and Postage must be twice paid, &c. as Provision twice for the Exchange and Re-exchange; the Charges being only for Postage, and Protests, unless the Acceptor, by Delays and Excuses, forces the Possessor upon some necessary Charges to recover, which the Acceptor is obliged to pay; but no extraordinary ones, such as travelling, &c. will be allowed.

80. And if the Acceptor under the afore-mentioned Circumstances refuse immediate Payment to the returned Bill, a legal Interest may be charged him, from the Day that the Bill was due to the Time of its Discharge; though he shall not be obliged to make good any other Losses or Damage than those before-mentioned, notwithstanding the Expressions used in the Protest, as these are not to be construed as obligatory on the Acceptor to satisfy any Loss or Damage which the Possessor may pretend he has suffered from a Want of punctual Payment, and by this Means frustrating his Designs of some beneficial Engagement, or a Loss of a convenient Opportunity for advantageously employing the Sum detained.

81. When a Drawer is not of an established Credit in the Commerce of the Place he is settled at, it is common for some Merchant, who inclines to forward and protect, at first to indorse his Bills, till Time and Opportunity have rendered him and his Dealings better known; but if any such Friend excuses to indorse his Bills, and yet has a Mind to serve him, it is frequent on such Occasions for that Friend to subscribe the second or third Bill, which is done by the sole setting his Name under that of the Drawer, without adding a single Syllable thereto, as this doth as fully and amply oblige him as it does the Drawer, though the Obligation only extends to the Bill so subscribed, for which the Underwriter is answerable to the Remitter, or any other this latter negotiates it with; but if the Remitter keeps the subscribed Bill himself, and the Possessor of the other two unsubscribed would seek any Redress against the Security, he cannot for Want of the Bill that is subscribed; but as such Negotiations are only practised practised for the Safety and Satisfaction of the Deliverer, without an Intention in any Shape to discredit the Drawer, they are usually concealed, and the subscribed Bill seldom sent away.

82. And when such subscribed Bills are satisfied, they should be returned to the principal Drawer, as he in the first Bill acknowledges to have received the Value, and the Remitter would be very imprudent if he paid it to the Subscriber though he contracted with him, and regards his Firm more than that of the Drawer's; but the Subscriber should take Care to enquire of the Remitter or Possessor, whether the Bill was punctually complied with when due, that he may for his Security have that which bears his Firm cancelled.

83. Exchange is made in the Name, and for the Account of a third Person, when any one acts therein by the Order, full Power and Authority of another, which is commonly called Procurator; and these Bills may be drawn, subscribed, indorsed, accepted, and negotiated, not in the Name or for the Account of the Manager or Transfacter of any or all of these Branches of Remittances, but in the Name and for the Account of the Person who authorized him.

84. And as such an unlimited Power, if abused, may be of the most fatal Consequence to the Giver of it, who certainly puts his Welfare and Fortune in his Procurator's Hands, it ought not lightly to be granted, nor till the most sedate Reflections and thorough Knowledge of the Person will justify the Step, and bring it within the Limits of Prudence; therefore a discreet Man will not hazard his Substance by such a Substitution, except through mere Necessity, and then will act with all the Circumspection possible in his Choice; and when he has passed his Nomination, and authentically substituted his Agent, he must advise those Correspondents on whom his Procurator may occasionally want to draw, &c. with his having given such a Power, and desire them to honour the Firm of his Substitute, whenever made use of for his Account.

85. And he that by such a Procurator does either negotiate, draw, indorse, subscribe, or accept Bills of Exchange, by subscribing his own Name and Quality, that is, the Attorney of his Employer, does thereby as effectually oblige his Principal as if he himself affirmed, whilst the Procurator is not in the least obligated; but if any one, under the Pretence of having a full Power from a Person of Credit, transacts any Business for his own Account, he is not only obliged to perform all that he hath negotiated in the Name of another Person, but is likewise liable to be punished severely for the Deceit; and such a Pretence no Way obliges the Person whose Name is made Use of therein.

86. It will therefore be prudent in every Remitter or Possessor of Bills to refuse any Drawings or Acceptance by the Wife, Servant, &c. of those they pretend to represent, unless they first produce the Power they say they act under, and this be in every Respect full and satisfactory, and neither antiquated, recalled, or cancelled; and it is asserted by Marius and others, that a Merchant's Letter to his Wife, Friend, Servant, or any other, to accept Bills of Exchange, is not sufficient without a Power of Attorney in Form; though if there should be no such Instrument made to either of the aforementioned Persons, yet if either of them have formerly in the Principal's Absence usually accepted his Bills, and he approved thereof at his return, I believe, on Proof of this, it would always be construed as his Intention, and be as valid and binding as a legal and formal Instrument.

87. In Negotiations of Bills, the Procurator should, before he concludes any, advise the Person treating with him of the Quality in which he acts, that he may be satisfied of the Validity of his Deputations; for if without mentioning any Thing thereof previous to his contracting, either by himself or a Broker, the other Party is not obliged to stand to the Agreement, or pay him any Money if he has acted as a Drawer, but may refuse to have any Thing to do with him; though, on the contrary, the Possessor of a Bill must admit the Acceptance of a Procurator, provided his Letter of Attorney be general, or expressly declaring that all Bills by him accepted, are for Account of the Principal, or limited only to the Acceptance of those Bills that the Possessor has; but, if the Procurator

88. When Bills of Exchange are drawn on one Place, and made payable in another, the Intention of such a Draught should be mentioned at the Time of Agreement, otherwise it is not binding; and when Bills are drawn in this Manner, it is customary for the Acceptor to mention the House they are to be paid at. As for Example; A. B. of London draws 500 Dollars on C. D. of Bilboa, payable at Madrid, which the Remitter sends to his Correspondent there, and he to his at Bilboa, where being presented to the said C. D. he accepts it to be paid by E. F. [or in the House of E. F.] of Madrid, and takes Care to furnish the necessary Fund in Time for its Discharge, otherwise the Bill will be protested for Non-payment in Madrid, as E. F. lies under no Obligation to pay it, if he has not Effects of the Acceptor's in his Hands, neither is he obliged to declare whether he will pay it or not, before it is due.

89. It is sometimes customary in Cases like the above, for the Remitter, if he has no Correspondent at the Place the Bill is drawn on, to desire the Drawer to send the first for Acceptance, and to return it accepted to him, or elsewhere as he shall direct, which the Drawer cannot well refuse, though he is not strictly obliged to a Compliance; however when once consented to, and he does not return the Bill accepted in a convenient Time to the Remitter, or forward it according to his Order, this latter should send the second Bill to some other Person to procure Acceptance, as he cannot oblige the Drawer to give him any further Satisfaction, in Case this has not been done to the first, and if refused, to enter a Protest.

90. If the Acceptor of a Bill does not live in the Place where it is payable, as in the foregoing Cases, and in Order to discharge it, remits the Holder other Bills due at the same Time as his, the said Holder is not obliged to admit them in Payment, and if he consents to it may justly demand his Commission on them, as he has a double Trouble in the Recovery of his Money; and on the contrary, if the Possessor desires the Acceptor to send him the Value of the Bill in others, or in Specie, the Acceptor is under no Obligation to comply, unless he has an Allowance of a Provision for his Pains.

91. If the Person to whom the Bill is addressed will not accept it, a Protest must be entered against him for Non-acceptance, but that for Non-payment is properly made, as before observed, at the Place where the Bill is payable; and though the Possessor is under no Obligation to seek elsewhere for Payment, yet he may, in Case of its not being punctually discharged, proceed against the Acceptor wherever he finds him.

92. Besides the afore-mentioned Method of drawing on one Place and paying in another, there is yet a different Manner of executing such Negotiations, as when Bills are not made payable or remitted to the Place directly where the Money is, but to some other Place, from whence the Value is to be redrawn or remitted to the Place where the Payment must be made. As for Example: A Person has Money lying at London, which he would willingly have at Dantzick, but as the Dantsicker cannot draw directly on London, he first passes his Bill on Hamburg, or Amsterdam, and orders his Correspondent there, to reimburse himself on London; and the Motives to this Sort of exchanging are either, first, because there is no Course settled directly; or else, secondly, where there is, it may be more advantageous not to make Use of it, but to negotiate otherwise.

93. When any one draws by Commission, it must be either for the Account of him on whom he draws, or else for that of a third Person; if for the former, the Drawer should punctually advise him of the Sum drawn, and distinctly in how many Bills, what Date, to whom, and when payable, from whom the Value, and at what Exchange, and indeed the same exactness should be always observed in Regard to advising whenever Bills are drawn, and no Draughts should be passed for the Account of a third Person without special Order from him; and it is customary on such Occasions for the Acceptor to advise that he will honour such Draughts, whenever they appear, previous to the Drawer's making them; and the Drawer on his Part should give punctual Advice both to his Principal and the Acceptor, whenever he executes his Commission; and it is usual in such Cases for the Drawer to mention in the Bill for whom he draws, by concluding it with these Words, and place it to the Account of A. B. as per Advice from, naming the Person, or the two initial Letters of his Name, which may prevent and obviate an Exception sometimes made by an Acceptor, that he did not accept nor satisfy the Bills for such an Account, but on the Drawer's only.

94. Bills may be, and many Times are, drawn upon a third Person's Account, who yet remains incog. to the Acceptor. As for Example: A. B. is straitened for Cash, and C. D. his Friend has none to spare him, yet willing to serve him, he makes his Credit supply what his Purse denies, and passes his Bill on E. F. of Amsterdam for the Sum that A. B. wants, with Orders to redraw the same on him [C. D.] which A. B. pays in due Time. And sometimes Bills are drawn for Account of a third, by Order of a fourth, viz. A. B. of Antwerp receives Orders from C. D. of Madrid, to draw for his Account on E. F. of Hamburg, but A. B. finding no Opportunity of effecting it, directs G. H. of Amsterdam to value for the Sum ordered on Hamburg for the Account of C. D. of Madrid, and to remit it towards him the said A. B. Or else A. draws on B. with Orders to discharge himself by Draughts on C. for the Account of D. but B. should remit such Commission, unless A. be his Security; and when he draws on C. he ought to advise him that he draws by Order of A. for the Account of D. and also give Advice to A. with all the Particulars of the Negotiation, though it is unnecessary to correspond with D. about it, this being A's Obligation.

95. He that hath Orders to draw on one Place, and remit to another, or vice versa, for the Account of a third Person, should not remit before he knows he can draw, nor draw before he knows he can remit, as by the doing one he may be in Disburse, and by the other have his Principal's Cash lie by longer than may be pleasing; and when he hath an Opportunity to do both, he should, before concluding, make his Calculation whether he can execute his Commission within Limits, if limited, according to the Terms and Exchanges offered him.

96. When a Remitter by Commission hath sent his Bill to a third Person by Order of his Principal, and in his Letter of Advice hath clearly expressed for whose Account it is, then neither he nor his Employer can alter or recall the same, to the Prejudice of him to whom the Remittances are made.

97. If a Remitter in Commission stands del credere, as Creditor, for the Remittances, he acts indiscreetly if he has the Bills made payable to himself or Order that he may indorse them; for though this is frequently practised by the chief Bankers and Exchangers, with a View to conceal from the Drawer the Person to whom they remit it, it does not take off from the Imprudence of the Action, as the following Reason will evince, viz.

1st, The Indorser may be forgotten, and from this Omission may arise endless Disputes and Contests; 2dly, the Remitter by this Means makes himself liable not only to answer all Damages, &c. to his Principal, but also to every Possessor and Indorser of the Bill after him; for, 3dly, By indorsing the Bill, he makes it his own Bill, and obliges himself on the Account of his Principal, not only for the Value by him received, but for all other Charges and Re-exchanges.

98. And though a Remitter by Commission does not stand del credere, he acts with equal Imprudence, in having the Bills, as aforesaid, made payable to himself or Order, and then indorsing them, for thereby he effectually engages himself to stand del credere, without reaping any Advantage therefrom.

99. Any Remitter on Commission that stands del credere, may, upon the Return of a Bill for Non-acceptance, contract with the Drawer for the Re-exchange and Charges, and on his receiving Satisfaction, not only be compelled to remit, if he hath not indorsed the Bill, the same Value for a timely Discharge, but also to give his Principal the Advance of the Re-exchange, &c. but in Case he hath indorsed the Bill, he may absolutely refuse to give away those Advantages, as by his Indorsement he made it his own Bill, and he, as well as any other Drawer or Indorser, may have the Bill discharged when due, and appropriate the Gains of Re-exchange to himself.

100. A Remitter by Commission that stands del credere is not obliged to make good to his Principal any more than the Value he paid for the Bill, in Case it should be returned with Protest, and the Drawer is not able to make Satisfaction, as the Re-exchange and Charges must be the Principal's Loss, if they are lost, because the Remitter had Provision only on the Value paid; but if he obtain Satisfaction from the Drawer for the Re-exchange and Charges, he is obliged to make the same good to his Principal, though the Commissions he receives from the Drawer are his own, unless the just Sum, with the Provision and Charges, be effectually redrawn on him; and in this Case, he may place a Commission to his Principal's Account, for the Trouble of accepting and paying the Bill.

101. And a Remitter by Commission with del credere is obliged, on a Bill's being returned with Protest for Non-payment, immediately to make good its Value, or to suffer it to be drawn on him, because his standing del credere obliges him not only for the Drawer's Sufficiency, but for its punctual Discharge; though in this Case the Interest, Re-exchange, &c. is all for his own Benefit, notwithstanding the Drawer, incapable to make present Payment, should yet give Security to make a future Satisfaction; and the Remitter if he gives Orders for the Payment of the Bill, may charge his Employer with what he effectually pays more than the Bill was for, or what his Disbursements exceed the Value he paid, provided he remits the Principal to recover the Loss and Charges he sustains from the Drawer.

102. When a Remitter in Commission, standing Security, has made Bills payable to the Order of his Principal, or any other Person, that are returned protested, and they have been indorsed several Times in different Places, and consequently the Advice of the Protest must be for a considerable Time retarded in reaching the Remitter, he is notwithstanding obliged to make good to his Principal the Value by him paid, and that though the Drawer was for a considerable Time in Credit after the Advice thereof might have come to his Hands, if it had been sent directly. And in Case any one under the above Circumstances executes his Commission on his own Bills, and they return protested, he is then obliged, both as Drawer and Security, to make good to his Principal the Re-exchange and Charges, as if he had not been the Drawer himself, but a Stranger.

103. If any one remitting by Commission with del credere, makes the Bills for the Account of him to whom he remits, then the Risk of standing Security finishes with the Day of Payment: so that in Case the Acceptor, supposing him to be the Person to whom the Remittance was made, should fail the very next Day after the Bills became due, and though a formal Protest for Non-payment be not entered, the Loss will fall on the Principal, and not on him that remits by Commission; but if the Acceptor fails before the Day of Payment, or does timely protest against himself for Non-payment, then the Loss is the Remitter's, because he also is the Drawer to him, for whose Account the Draught was made.

104. When a Remitter by Commission hath Orders from his Employer to make Remittances to some of his Correspondents, that he supposes to be substantial Men, under the Remitter's Security, and there to wait the Principal's Directions, if the said Remitter advise him that he has complied with his Orders, and mentions to whom he remitted, and the exact Sums he paid, he is not obliged to his Principal, though the Remitted should fail, because the del credere hath only Respect to the Goodness of the Bills, and not to the Solvency of him to whom they are sent; as the Money, from the Moment of his receiving it, was at the Order and Disposal of the Principal, and this latter, if he trusted the other with it, it was a Matter of Choice, and at his own Risk.

105. If a Factor has Orders to draw on one Place, and remit to another with his del credere, and cannot recover for his Draughts, he must suffer the Loss, as his Security is for the whole Negotiation, and not for the Remittances only; and if the Bills a Remitter takes be returned with Protest, and he cannot procure immediate Satisfaction from the Drawer, he may charge him an Interest on the Money advanced, although he then gives him Security for the Payment.

106. It is the Duty of every one drawn on by Commission to advise the Drawer, immediately on hearing of the Draught, whether he will accept it or not, on the Conditions, and for the Account of him for whom it was made; and if the Bill be for the Account of a third Person, the Acceptor must give him Advice also of the Drawer and Sum passed on him for his Account, and add when it falls due, and whether he will honour it or not.

107. He that is drawn upon for the Account of a third Person, from whom he has received no Orders for accepting, nor is in Cash for him, neither hath Directions to revalue on the Principal, acts prudently if he suffers the Bill to be protested for Non-acceptance, unless he knows the Drawer to be a responsible Man, and this inclines him to accept, supra Protest, for his Honour, which he may do if he pleases, and oblige the Drawer afterwards to make him Satisfaction; but in this Case, he ought immediately to advise the Drawer of such his Acceptance under Protest.

108. He that is drawn on for the Drawer's Account, or that of a third Person, and scruples to accept it for the one or the other, either freely or under Protest, may accept the same in Honour of any Indorser, supra Protest, that he thinks proper to trust, and is then obliged to give the Drawer, and the Person for whose Account it is, and also the Indorser for whose Honour he accepts, Advice thereof; and to send the Protest, with the Instrument of Acceptance, to the Indorser, that he may use it against the Drawer.

109. When the Acceptor hath accepted a Bill, supra Protest, in Honour of the Drawer or any Indorser, for Want of Advice, Order, or Provision, from him for whose Account the Bill is drawn, and he afterwards receives both Orders and Effects, he is then obliged to free the Drawer and Indorser from their Obligations, and to advise them that he will pay the Draught for his Account for whose it was drawn, and that he therefore discharges them.

110. If any one accepts a Bill with the Drawer's Obligation, he must at the Day of Payment advise the Drawer, whether he for whose Account the Bill was drawn, had made Provision for it, or otherwise disposed its Payment, and if this was done, he in Consequence discharges the Drawer from his Obligation.

111. When any one is drawn on for the Account of a third, by another with whom the Acceptor never had any Correspondence, and consequently must be ignorant of his Firm, he ought to be deliberate in his Acceptance, though he has Orders from his Principal to honour such Draughts, and should rather wait for the Drawer's Advice, that he may compare his Letter and Bill, than be precipitate in his Acceptance.

112. He that verbally or by Letter has promised to accept any Bills drawn on him for a third Person's Account, and he to whom the Promise was made, does, in Consequence thereof, give the third Person Credit, relying on a punctual Compliance; in this Case, he that has engaged his Word is obliged to fulfil it, or be answerable for all Damages that shall proceed from a Breach thereof, and though he cannot by Law be compelled to an immediate Satisfaction, a regular Process will oblige him to pay at last.

113. If a Factor has Orders from his Principal to accept a certain Sum drawn by a third for his, the Principal's Account at Usance, and the Drawer having no Opportunity of complying therewith at the Time, passes his Bills payable at Sight; in such Case, the Factor should not accept them simply, but if he has a Mind, may, under Protest, accept them for the Honour of the Drawer, and revalue the same on him, if he continues without Orders from his Principal how to reimburse himself; but if the Drawer should find Occasion to draw at half Usance, when the other half is expired, in such Case he is obliged to accept the Draughts freely and without Reserve.

114. If any one be drawn on by Commission, and ordered to redraw the Value on some other Place, which he cannot comply with, either from no Money's offering, or that the Exchange is not within his Limits, and it does not suit his Convenience to be in Disburse, he may in such Case revalue directly on the Drawer, or on any other Place, even above the limited Course, if he cannot do otherwise, though on the best Terms he possibly can for his Principal's Advantage.

115. When any Person drawn on by Commission hath accepted the Bill, and the Payment is not demanded when due, he must, notwithstanding, debit the Principal for its Value, because he is always obliged to pay it whenever it is asked for.

116. The Acceptor of a Bill on Commission, drawn on him at Time, may, and must demand on the Drawer his accepted Bill, if this latter should think proper against the Time of Payment to call it in, and pay its Import himself, and the Drawer is obliged to restore it; but he should, before he parts with it, clearly express in Writing upon it, that he himself called in the Bill and satisfied it, and he is obliged to allow the Acceptor at least half Commission.

117. It is incumbent on him to whom a Bill is remitted in Commission, 1st, to endeavour to procure Acceptance; 2dly, on Refusal, to protest, if not forbidden, though not expressly ordered; 3dly, to advise the Remitter of the Receipt, Acceptance, or protesting it, and in Case of the latter, to send the Protest to him; and 4thly, to advise any third Person, that is or may be concerned in it; and all this by the Post's Return, without further Delay.

118. He that has Bills remitted to him for the Account of a third Person, or to be at his Disposal, cannot place the said Bills either to his own, the Remitter's, nor to any other's Account, but is obliged to observe the Order of him only for whose Account and at whose Disposal they were remitted.

119. If a Bill, remitted for the Account, or to be at the Disposal of a third Person, is indorsed or made payable at first to the Receiver thereof, or to his Order, he that receives the Bill, if he has advised the Person for whose Account or at whose Disposal it was directed to be, that he hath received such a Bill for his Account, &c. cannot revoke his Word to please the Remitter, but must attend the Order of the said third Person; though, if he hath not written nor advised him thereof, he then may at the Request of the Remitter, or the Remitter at the Instance of the Possessor, observe the last Order, to wait for further ones.

120. When divers Bills are remitted for Account of several Persons, and previous to the Possessor's advising the exact Sum appertaining to each particular, one of the Remittances should be protested for Non-payment, he may, if it suits him, revalue the same on the Remitter; and in Case he cannot get Satisfaction there, the Loss will then fall on all the Bills, to be proportionably divided pro Rato, on the Sums recoverable of the said Remittance; and if the Remitter stood del credere for any, he must lose pro Rato with the Rest.

121. When any one is drawn on for the Account of a third Person, and accepts the Bill, under Protest, for that of the Drawer, advising him expressly thereof by the Post's Return, then the Acceptor may, if he cannot obtain sufficient Provision from the Principal, or the necessary Orders for his Reimbursement before the Draught falls due, revalue upon the Drawer, without being obliged to seek his Redress first from the third Person for whose Account the Bill was; but if the Acceptance, supra Protest, was with the Obligation of the Drawer, then the Acceptor must, if the Drawer require it, have Recourse first for Satisfaction to the said third Person, though without being further obliged than to revalue on him; and if his Bill be protested, and not accepted or paid, then he hath his Redress upon the Drawer, who in this Case must duly discharge the same.

122. And when Provision for such a Bill, protested with the Obligation of the Drawer, is not timely made by the Person for whose Account it was drawn, but instead thereof he gives Orders to revalue for the same, either by him directly or on some other Place, the Acceptor must in such Case, before Compliance, consult the Drawer, as he is obliged to Satisfaction at all Events, and hold him bound till the Sum to be revalued shall be punctually discharged; and if it is not, but the said Redraughts return protested, then the Acceptor who paid the original original Bills, and must now satisfy those come back with Protest, may revalue the Sum, with the Charges, Commissions, and Protest, on the first Drawer, who continued obliged to satisfy the same.

123. When a Bill is accepted supra Protest, for the Account, or with the Obligation of the Drawer, and the Acceptor repents of the Steps he has taken, as suspicious of the Drawer's Compliance with his Redraughts, he should in such Case suffer the Bills to remain protested for Non-payment, after having first advised him of his Intentions, that the Drawer may take new Measures for their Discharge.

124. If any one be drawn on for the Account of a third Person, and accepts the Bill freely, the Acceptor in such Case hath no Redress on the Drawer, who is freed from the Obligation of accepting any Redraught on him, as the Acceptor has discharged him by his free Acceptance, and has only Recourse for his Reimbursement on the third Person, for whose Account he accepted.

125. When a Factor hath Occasion to redraw for the Principal's Account, to reimburse Draughts, first drawn on him, he may pass his Bills not only according to Order and within Limits, but may exceed the Order and Limits set him; and if he hath no Order, may redraw without it, or even expressly against it in Case of need, as he is under no Obligation to be in Disburse; and in Case the Principal will not accept his Factor's Bills so drawn, under Pretence that they are without, above, or against Order, the Acceptor must proceed against him in Law, and will undoubtedly recover both Principal, Charges, and Damages.

126. In all the Exchanges hitherto mentioned, the Drawer receives Cash from the Remitter, for Bills given him, whose Import he obliges himself shall be paid in ready Money, at the Time and according to the Conditions therein agreed on. But there is yet another Sort, called mixt, or debt Exchanges, wherein the Drawer receives no Money, but gives Bills in Payment of a Debt; and in such Negotiations the Creditor is deemed the Remitter.

127. And such Bills are made either for the Recovery of an old Debt, or to assure the Payment of a new one, contracted for Goods bought on Trust; and whether the Debtor makes the Bills payable by himself or another, and whether the Debtor and Creditor settle the Course or not, the Debt now changes its Nature; and he that gives a Bill of Exchange becomes thereby liable to the Laws concerning them, and may, upon Failure, be prosecuted in a different Manner than he could be for a Book Debt; and therefore a prudent Creditor will, on receiving such a Bill, make an absolute Agreement with the Debtor concerning the Course; and upon Receipt thereof, credit his Account of Goods, and debit his Account current for the Value.

128. It is unnecessary in most Countries to express whether the Value of Bills was paid in Monies or in any other Commodities, and I think France is the only Exception to this Rule, if the Debtor do but effectually receive it; and he that gives a Bill for the Payment of an old Debt, or for Goods then purchased, should demand an Acquittance from his Creditor, acknowledging to have received Satisfaction for such a Debt, or for such Goods, in such and such a Bill of Exchange, or so much of the Debt as the Bill of Exchange amounts to; and on the contrary, the Creditor must demand a Receipt from the Drawer, wherein he confesses to have received the Value of such a Bill, either in an old Debt, or Goods bought, and for full Payment, or in Part.

129. When a Creditor hath received such a Bill from his Debtor in full or in Part of his Debt, and it is not complied with when due, he must not be persuaded by his Debtor to neglect following the strict Course and Law of Exchange, by protesting, &c. nor should give the Acceptor longer Time, though solicited thereto, unless the Debtor engages under his Hand that it shall in no Shape be a Prejudice to him, nor annul or lessen the Law subsisting against himself, but that the Possessor's Rights shall be preserved as entire as if he had actually protested in due Form and Course; for without this the Debtor might disown any such Order or Request, and defy his Creditor, after he had neglected to secure the Payment by the Means the Law afforded him.

130. When a Bill is drawn by Order, and for Account of a third Person and after being duly accepted, the Acceptor fails, the Drawer must make good the Re-exchange and Charges; but if he hath his Redress on him for whose Account he drew, and may charge his Account therewith, though the said Person hath already made a sufficient Provision for it to the Acceptor or hath honoured his Redraughts; and if both the Acceptor and the Person drawn for fail, the Drawer hath an Action on them separately to recover Satisfaction.

131. If a Bill be drawn, and accepted for the Account of a third Person, and he on whom it is drawn fails before the said third Person hath made him a sufficient Provision for its Discharge, and if the Drawer also fails, then he for whose Account the Draught was made, is freed from any Obligation to pay it, though drawn for his Account, unless the Possessor will give him a satisfactory Security to save him harmless both from the Drawer and Acceptor, or any of their Creditors, Assignees, &c. or unless it appears to him that the Possessor is satisfied by the Acceptor or some others for him, and doth relinquish all Pretences to both the Acceptor and Drawer's Effects.

132. When the Possessor of a Bill, payable to his Order, fails, and, to defraud his Creditors, indorseth it to another, who negotiates it, and effectually receives the Value, indorsing it again to a third, &c. and though the Creditors, having discovered the Fraud, oppose it, yet the Acceptor must pay it to him who comes to receive it, on Proof that he paid the real Value for it; but, if the insolvent Possessor has made it payable to any other directly, he might probably be allowed a Provision; but previous to his recovering the Principal, he must clearly prove how and when he paid the Value; and must swear, that before the Failure of the Indorser was known, the said Bill was, without any Collusion or Deceit, purchased by and delivered to him; and if he refuses to perform this, on an Opposition from the Creditors, he cannot legally receive a Farthing; and in Case he has recovered, he must refund it for the common Benefit of the Creditors, and must also draw and indorse the Bill that he received from the Bankrupt Possessor with an Intent to defraud them.

133. When a Bill is made or indorsed payable to any Person, who, unknown to the Acceptor, is become insolvent before the Day of Payment, if he, ignorant of the Possessor's Failure, discharge the same, such Payment is good and valid; but if he pay to any other upon the Possessor's Order, after knowing of his Insolvency, he exposes himself to the Hazard of paying twice, and justly merits such a pecuniary Punishment for his indifereet and unfair Proceedings.

134. When the Possessor of a Bill fails, and the Acceptor can demonstratively prove that it was remitted for the former's Account, or upon Account of a Debt due to the Possessor, either from the Remitter or from any other on whose Account the Remittance was made, in this Case the Possessor is the true Owner and Principal of the Bill, and the Acceptor may pay it to him, and he must credit the Value to the Person for whose Account it is; but if the Bill be for the Account of a third, or for the Drawer's own Account, and neither of them have received any valuable consideration, from the Possessor, for it, then it ought to be paid to him, as the insolvent Possessor is not the true Owner of the Bill, but merely a Demander of Satisfaction; and the Acceptor should be obliged, when due, to pay the same to the next Order of the Remitter, or the true Owner of the Bill for whose Account it is.

135. If a suspected Possessor of a Bill should fraudulently twice draw effectually the same Bill, and give the first to one Man, with Directions where to find the second accepted; and the second to another, with Directions where to find the first accepted; in this Case he only hath Right and Title to the Money that first procures Acceptance, he not finding any accepted Bill as he was directed, whether it be to the first or second, it makes no Difference, nor whether it was first or last negociated by the fraudulent Indorser.

136. When the Possessor of a Bill is become a Bankrupt, and in Order to defraud his Creditors, or others, conceals the Bill, which they have good Reason to conclude must still remain in his Hands, the Acceptor is obliged to declare whether he hath accepted such a Draught, and if he answer in the Affirmative, Affirmative, the Creditors, or any other interested Persons, may prohibit the Acceptor's paying it without their Knowledge and Consent; and if any one appear at the Day of Payment, to recover, he must declare and prove, that he is the true Possessor of the Bill; and if none appear, the Acceptor is obliged to pay the Import of it to the Creditors or Assignees of the Bankrupt Possessor, they giving Security that the Acceptor shall be no Ways prejudiced thereby; or if he scruple doing it on their Security, he may deposit it in the Hands of Justice, for Account of the true Owners thereof; and if the Acceptor refuse Compliance, both with one and the other, the Creditors or their Assignees may protest against him for Non-payment, and send the same to the Remitter to procure Satisfaction of the Drawer, and if he makes none, they may compel the Acceptor thereto.

137. When a Bill is made payable to the Order of any Person who has failed before it reach him, and he, notwithstanding, on Receipt, indorses it, and makes it payable to some other, who demands Acceptance thereof, and the Acceptor, being ignorant of the Failure of the first Possessor, duly honours the same; in such Case the Acceptor, getting Knowledge of the Bankruptcy of the first Possessor, and that this preceded his Indorsement thereof, may refuse Payment of the Value to his Order, as the insolvent Possessor had no Faculty or Power, after his Failure to indorse a Bill of Exchange; and therefore it would be honest and prudent in the Acceptor, under such Circumstances, to offer Payment thereof to the Creditors, provided they give him a sufficient Security for his Indemnification, though if they refuse this, he should suffer the Bill to be returned with Protest.

138. It affords a just Suspicion of Fraud, when the Debtor of a Bankrupt pretends a Demand on the latter's Effects for having accepted and paid a third Bill, at the Insolvent's Request, to some of his Creditors, whilst his Reputation stood yet unimpeached; or that the Bill, whose third he subscribed, was protested, and he forced to pay the Re-exchange and Charges; as the Debtor and Creditor or Possessor of such a Bill may, by an undertaking between them, make many such Bills to the great Detriment of the Bankrupt's Creditors.

139. When the Possessor of a Bill hath neglected to procure Acceptance in Time, and the Person on whom it is drawn refuses it afterwards upon Account of the Drawer's Failure, the Possessor has no greater Privilege or Preference to the Drawer's Effects in the Acceptor's Hands than the other Creditors have, though the Drawer drew merely on those Effects, and the Draught would have been duly honoured if it had been presented, and Acceptance demanded, before the Failure of the Drawer was known.

140. Though the Possessor of a Bill, whose Acceptor fails before it becomes due, hath an open Account with him, and is his Debtor for a greater Sum than the Bill imports, and may now set off its Value, yet it would be more prudent in him to protest the Bill for Non-payment, and suffer it to be returned.

141. If the Drawer, or the Party for whose Account a Bill is drawn, fails before Provision is made to the Acceptor, then this latter paying at the Time, or if not accepted or not paid, but returned with Protest, the Drawer is entitled to a Preference, before all other Creditors, upon any of the Effects of the Insolvent that may be in their Hands.

142. When the Acceptor of a Bill hath Remittances made him to discharge it, by the Person for whose Account he accepts, and he, after receiving such Remittances, and before Payment of the Draught on him, fails, then the Principal must answer the Re-exchange and Charges, and be content to come in with the rest of the Acceptor's Creditors; but if upon the Acceptor's Failure the Remittances are found in his Possession unreceived, then the Principal, who made them, has a Right to their Return, and they must be paid to his Order; and in Case the other Creditors have recovered their Import since the Acceptor became insolvent, they are obliged to repay the same.

143. The Possessor of a Bill protested for Non-acceptance or Non-payment, whose Drawer and Acceptor are both failed, must concur with the rest of the Creditors, not only for the Value that was paid, but also for the Re-exchange and Charges, and for the Sum that the Drawer or Acceptor should have paid if they had continued solvent.

144. If both the Drawer and Acceptor fail, the Possessor hath a just Right and Title to demand Payment of both their Effects; and it is in his Option to begin with which he pleases first, and where the Appearances are greatest for a speedy Recovery; and if one of their Effects are not sufficient for Satisfaction, he may then get as much as he can of the other's, as they are both obliged.

145. And the same Right that he hath to the Effects or any Thing else appertaining to the insolvent Drawer, or Acceptor, till he hath received Satisfaction, he has likewise against any or all the Indorsers, if the Bill be returned unaccepted, and they fail; and if the Bill be accepted, and the Acceptor, Drawer, and Indorsers shall all fail, he may come upon all their Effects for Satisfaction.

146. The Possessor may demand the full Sum, with all Charges, out of the Goods and Effects of that Insolvent Drawer, Acceptor, or Indorser, where he shall think proper first to make his Claim; and what he receives there, he must place to account in Part of Payment of his Demands; and if he does not receive full Satisfaction, he cannot demand the whole again from another, but only the Remainder, and so from one to another till he be entirely satisfied.

147. If the Possessor of a Bill, whose Drawer, Acceptor, and Indorsers are all failed, receives something in Part of Payment, and the Bankrupt's Trustees do thereupon demand an Acquittance, with the Cession of the Action to him or them, the Possessor should not acquit nor transfer more of his Right to them than for the Value that he hath received.

148. When the Possessor hath received from one of the Bankrupts Part of his Demands, and applies to another of them for the Payment of the Remainder, he cannot cede or transfer his Right of Action against the Person from whom he has recovered Part, because he was therefore admitted into the Concourse of Creditors for his whole Demand, and accordingly received his Proportion; so that though a Possessor enter into such a Concourse, and receives as much of his Debt as he can get from one of the failed Parties, and thereupon doth absolutely discharge him, yet for the Remainder he may come upon the other Indorsers or Drawer, till his Bill be fully satisfied, only he cannot transfer his Action against him whom he hath discharged.

149. When the Possessor of a Bill, whose Drawer, Acceptor, and Indorsers are all failed, does first receive in Part of his Demands from one of the Bankrupts for whose Account the Bill was drawn, but had either drawn, indorsed, or accepted the Bill for that of another, without having any Effects in Hand; then the Possessor must enter into an Agreement with him who paid in Part, jointly to demand of the others (or any one of them) that failed, the remaining Sum, with Charges.

150. If the Possessor of an accepted Bill dies without leaving Executors, or any one to act in his Affairs, so that no one hath Authority to demand Payment of it, or to give a satisfactory Discharge, and yet some pretending hereto, apply for its Recovery when due, and on Refusal protest for Non-payment; in this Case the Acceptor must advise the Drawer of all the Circumstances, and his Motives for Non-compliance, who must on his Part consult with the Remitter to give further Orders, or he may deposite the Sum in the Hands of Justice, to be reserved for the true Owners.

151. If the Possessor of a Bill accepted should agree and compound with the Acceptor, and the Drawer be the Acceptor's Debtor for the Sum he accepted, though the Drawer be thereby discharged from the Remitter and Possessor, and also from the said Acceptor, yet the Acceptor can debit the Drawer for no more of that Bill than he effectually paid, according to the Composition.

152. But if the Possessor hath made this Composition with the Acceptor, without the Remitter's Order or Consent, the Remittance being for the Remitter's Account, the Possessor will be liable to answer the whole Sum to him.

153. If the Drawer or Indorsers, being insolvent, deny that the Bills they have drawn and indorsed, and the Acceptor has accepted, were for Effects of their's which the Acceptor had in his Hand, or that they have since or before Acceptance made Provision for the discharge thereof, they must at the Instance of their Creditors prove the same.

154. Besides the different Species of Bills beforementioned there are others, called CONDITIONAL EXCHANGES, being such as the Drawer doth not therein absolutely oblige himself to Payment, but on certain Terms agreed on; and in these Bills, the Condition must be clearly expressed, and on that the Acceptor should accept and pay, else not; wherefore if the Condition be not clearly expressed, these Kinds of Bills are like Bonds, liable to great Disputes and Contests.

Vid. Doug.

If the Acceptance be in Writing, and the Drawer intend that it shall be only conditional, he must be careful to express the Condition in Writing, as well as the Acceptance; for if the Acceptance should, on the Face of it, appear to be absolute, he cannot take Advantage of any verbal Condition annexed to it, if the Bill should be negotiated, and come to the Hands of a Person unacquainted with the Condition; and even against the Person to whom the verbal Condition was expressed, the Burthen of the Proof will be on the Acceptor. But,

A conditional Acceptance, when the Conditions on which it depends are performed, becomes absolute.

155. The accepting a conditional Bill obliges the Acceptor (whether he be the Drawer himself, or any other) absolutely to the Payment, if the Condition agreed upon be performed, or the Possessor will oblige himself to the Performance. So an Acceptance, on Account of the Ship Tberis, when in Cash for the said Ship's Cargo, is sufficient to bind the Acceptor. See Kydd's Treatise on the Law of Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes. London, 1790.

156. Though the Possessor of such a Bill is sometimes obliged to perform the Condition, and sometimes not; as Exchanges grounded on impossible, unlawful, or indecent Conditions, are ipso facto null and void.

157. When the Possessor is absolutely obliged to the Performance of the Condition it is not enough for him to mortify or destroy the Bill, excusing to demand Payment thereof, but he is obliged to make good to the Acceptor the Loss and Interest that he, or any other concerned, is like to suffer from the Non-performance of the Condition.

158. And on the contrary, when the Possessor is not absolutely obliged, then if any Thing happens without the Possessor's Fault, that may hinder him from performing the Condition, it does not always free and discharge the Drawer or Acceptor, but he is in such Case obliged to pay the Bill, though the Possessor do not perform the Condition, if he will but make good the Loss to the Acceptor or Drawer.

As for Example.—A. of London contracts with B. of Leghorn, to provide for him a Bale of Says, on the most reasonable Terms, and to send them to Leghorn at his own (A.'s) Risk, charging B. so much per Cent. (as shall be agreed) for his Commission, Risk, and Disburse, in the Invoice, whose Import B. shall be obliged to pay in eight Days after the Arrival of the said Goods at Leghorn; which Agreement being carried into Execution, and the Says shipped, and Invoice sent, A. draws the Amount on B. in the Manner following, viz.

London, January the 7th, 1791.

And, if a Merchant undertake to accept Bills to a certain Amount, on Condition that a Cargo of an equal Value be consigned to him, and an Order given for Insurance. If the Cargo consigned do not equal the Value, he is not bound to accept. Kyd's Law of Bills of Exchange, p. 53.

A small Matter will frequently amount to an Acceptance, according to the Circumstances of the Case: Thus, if a Merchant say, "Leave the Bill with me, I will look over my Books and Accounts between the Drawer and me, call to-morrow, and accordingly the Bill shall be accepted; this is no complete Acceptance, because it depends on the Balance of the Account, and on the Merchant's having Effects in his Hands to answer it, so that he gives no absolute Credit to the Bill. Ibid. p. 53.

But if he say, "Leave the Bill with me, and to-morrow I will accept it;" this is an Acceptance, for it gives Credit to the Bill, and prevents the Holder from taking the necessary Steps against the Drawer.

What shall be considered as an absolute, or conditional Acceptance is a Question of Law, to be determined by the Court, and is not to be left to the Jury. Term Rep. 184.

159. AMONG Conditional Exchanges may also be reckoned those Bills that are given upon Account of any Wager, or for the Assurance of Things dubious. And those made upon Account of a Wager, &c. are either single or reciprocal and mutual. The single ones are such as follow—a Person's giving a Sum of Money to another, who in Return gives him a Bill of Exchange, payable for a larger Sum than he received at the Day of Marriage, Surrender of such a besieged Town, or any other contingent or uncertain Event; as also to secure a Requital for some Favour or Service done, when the Bill may be made as follows, viz.

London, March 7th, 1791.

FOURTEEN Days after I am nominated a Commissioner of the Excise (or after I have obtained such a Suit of Law, &c.) I promise to pay to A. B. the Sum of one thousand Pounds, &c.

C. D.

N. B. This I think is rather a Promissory Note of Hand than Bill of Exchange; however, as it is termed this latter by some good Authors, I shall not presume to new name it.

160. When a Conditional Bill is not accepted, or if accepted, not paid, the Possessor must protest, and seek his Redress and Satisfaction from the Drawer; taking Care to insert in the said Protest, and also to prove that the Condition was performed, or that he was ready and willing to perform it, otherwise the Protest is of no Value.

161. In Case the Possessor of a Conditional Bill, who is absolutely obliged to the Performance of its Contents, would mortify the Sum, and not demand Payment to avoid performing the Condition, in such Case the Acceptor may compel him thereto, by depositing the Money, and protesting against the Possessor for Non-performance of Conditions and all Damages occasioned thereby, and then proceed against him according to the Law and Custom of Exchanges; and the Reason is, because he, the Possessor, would have acted in like Manner against the Acceptor, if he had been tardy.

162. If a Condition whereon an Exchange Contract is grounded, was once possible, after the Possessor had procured Acceptance, if the Possessor was obliged to perform it, or after the Remitter received the Bill from the Drawer, provided the former obliged himself to a Performance, and it should afterwards be morally impossible, their neglecting the Opportunity makes them liable to satisfy all the Damage and Loss that the Drawer, Acceptor, or any other concerned shall prove they have suffered and sustained in it, because his Condition was the Cause of the Contr.

163. A Condition may be said to be performed, though it be not actually performed by the Professor, if another acts for him and does it by his Order, or if another concerned in it acknowledge it as quasi performed, and this will oblige the Acceptor to pay. As thus, if A. pay to B. then pay to C. &c. or if A. and B. discount, or B. confesses himself satisfied, the Condition is performed.

164. As Pro Forma Exchanges are frequently practised, I shall mention some Particulars concerning them in this general Treatise of all the different Species of Bills; and shall first observe, that when any one would draw on his Debtor, and avoid the Risk of having his Bill returned, he may make his Draught payable to a Friend, or some Dependent, and for the greater Formality, insert Value of some one, though he has received none, and another Person's Name may be used, as a Remitter, with or without his Knowledge and Consent, or a feigned Name may be inserted instead thereof, though this must only be done when the Bill is made payable to a third, or any other Person, or his Order, for if the Bill be made payable to the Person whose Name is used as a Remitter, or his Order, it must be with his Consent and Approbation.

165. When a feigned Name is used, or any true Name unrequired, and only pro forma, the Drawer must necessarily advise the Person to whom or to whose Order it is payable, that the Value is only set pro forma, and the Name feigned or used without the Person's Knowledge; but if any Man's Name is inserted with his Consent, the Bills are usually made payable to his Order, who is the Remitter pro forma, demanding Acceptance and Payment in his own Name, by which Means the Correspondent need not know but that the Bill is real, otherwise he must be acquainted with the Truth, and that the Bill was only made pro forma.

166. A Man ought to be very circumspect in lending his Name to a pro forma Bill made payable to his Order, as such Bills cannot be drawn in, nor will be paid without his Indorsement; and this, though it be only to pleasure the Drawer, and for Form Sake, will oblige the Indorser to the Possessor really and absolutely, and not formally only.

167. When a Bill, wherein a Person's Name is used pro forma, is made payable to his Order, and drawn in or negotiated and indorsed by him, the Possessor must make good the Value to him, and not to the Drawer, though he knew certainly that the Indorser's Name is only used pro forma; except the Indorser, by an Order under his Hand, direct the Holder to make it good to the Drawer, or unless the Indorser, at the Request of the Drawer, had indorsed it in Blank, in which Case the Drawer, however, is obliged to indemnify the Possessor from all Damage or Claims that the Indorser might justly make.

168. He that, to pleasure his Friend, suffers himself to be made the Remitter of a pro forma Bill, and does draw in and indorse it, whether he receives the Value himself, or pays, or assigns it to the Drawer, he ought, though he has no Interest in the whole Negotiation, to make a Minute thereof in his Books, at least to enter it in his Waste-Book, as a Memorandum; and to receive the Value himself is most prudent, as the Drawer's Assignment on him for it afterwards, will be his Acquittance.

169. When any one draws upon his Debtor, and to prevent Loss by protest, makes the Bill payable to the Order of some Person, who, after Acceptance procured, will draw it in, or direct his Correspondent to receive it, and for Form makes the Value received; he should be very cautious whose Name he makes Use of, and to whom he sends the Bill, that in Case the said Remitter should happen to draw it in, and it should be protested for Non-payment, and the Indorser prove insolvent, he, the Drawer, may not be obliged to satisfy the Re-exchange to the Possessor of his Bill, without having received any Thing for it, or if the same should be paid, he do not barter a bad Debt for a worse, and quite lose his Money.

170. When a Drawer dares not draw in the Bill, whose Value he hath made received pro forma, fearing lest the Person it is addressed to should not accept it, or not pay it if he did, and therefore makes it directly payable to one living at the same Place with his Debtor, advising his Correspondent that for some particular Reasons the Value is made received, though only pro forma; in this Case, the Possessor should act with Prudence and Caution, in paying the Amount of the Bill after receiving it, which ought not to be to the Drawer, without an express Order from the Remitter, or the Person whose Name is used as such, for his so doing; or unless the Drawer give him a sufficient Satisfaction, and he knows him to be both a solvent and honest Man.

171. Among pro forma Exchanges, those Bills must be reckoned which are drawn on a Debtor, and remitted to a Creditor of the Drawer's; to be paid to his Order, Value of the same, pro forma, and without agreeing to any Course, only requesting from him to procure Payment, and place it, when received, to his Account.

172. A Debtor, on giving such a Bill to his Creditor, should demand a Receipt from him for the Bill, with an Acknowledgement that his Name as Remitter is only used pro forma, and obliging himself when paid, either to remit or credit it to the Drawer, according to the then current Course of Exchange; but, if he cannot recover the Bill, he must excuse putting the Drawer to any further Charge for Protests, &c.

173. And when a Creditor admits of such a Bill from his Debtor, he should take from him an Order under his Hand, to send the said Bill to his Correspondent, or to demand himself Acceptance and Payment, that in Case the Money should be received by his Correspondent, but not remitted to him, or being remitted, the Remittances are not paid, or that Protests not being made in due Form, &c. the Debtor may have no Room to complain of his Creditor, who will by this Means avoid exposing himself to the Loss that may accrue from the Correspondent's Mismanagement, which, had he acted without Orders, he would be liable to pay.

174. And if in such a Case the Debtor fixes his Course with his Creditor, whether before or after the Acceptance is procured, and does credit his Account current with the Sum; or else when another, whose Name is used pro forma agrees for the Course with the Drawer, and pays him the Value, then his Exchange loses its pro forma Nature, and becomes actual and real; and in Case of Protest, the Drawer is obliged to make good the Re-exchange and Charges.

175. When such a Bill, at the Request of the Debtor, is by the Creditor drawn in, and the Value is made him good in Account current, the Loss by Re-exchange and Charges appertains to the Debtor; but, if the Creditor draws in the Bill without the Drawer's Order, the Loss must be his, if any happen.

Of the Loss of Bills of Exchange, &c.

176. BILLS of EXCHANGE are often lost by being mislaid, the Post's Mis carriage, or various other Accidents; it is therefore customary to give three of the same Tenor or Date, as has been before observed, and sometimes four or more, concerning which I shall mention some particulars, for my Reader's Government and Information.

177. When a Remitter declares to the Drawer, that the Bills he received are lost, or so mislaid that he cannot find them, and desires him to repay their Value, under a satisfactory Indemnification from any future Prejudice or Demands about them; the Drawer in this Case, is not obliged to comply, though the Negotiation was for his own Account; only, he must give other Bills, and take Care that these be exactly the same with the former, differing in nothing, but that, if he had given the first, second, or third before, he now adds the fourth and fifth, though this should not be done neither, after the Bills are fallen due, unless the Remitter give the Drawer sufficient Security to bear him harmless.

178. It is the Duty of all Possessors of Bills to have a special Care of them, that they may escape the aforementioned Accidents; and it would be prudent in every Merchant to fill up blank Indorsements, as soon as he conveniently can, after Receipt, lest he should lose them, and the Finder do it for him.

179. Whenever a Possessor discovers that he hath lost a Bill, he ought instantly, or at least before the Day of Payment, to advise the Acceptor thereof, with the Precaution not to pay it to any other than him, or his Order, and in Case another come to recover, to stop it, and advise him thereof.

180. If the accepted Bill be the first, and is made payable to the Order of one at the Place of its Discharge, and he in whose Favour it is, intends to draw in the second, but has lost the first that was accepted, and has no third or fourth, nor cannot procure them, as the Drawer is dead, or absent, &c. he may yet draw in and negotiate the Sum, if the Indorser, in Case his Firm be unknown to the Acceptor, sends a full Power, by Letter of Attorney, to him he would have it paid to, for receiving it; but if the Indorser's Hand be well known, and himself in good Credit, then a written Order to the Acceptor for its Payment, with an Indemnification, will be sufficient.

181. But it should likewise be remarked as an Act of Imprudence in an Acceptor, to satisfy a Bill made payable to Order, though by him accepted, if that, or another of the same Tenor and Date, be not indorsed in due Form, and delivered up to him, with the accepted one, at the Time of Payment, though demanded by the Person whom the Remitter or Indorser hath impowered for that Purpose; but when the accepted Bill is lost, and the second, unaccepted, is regularly indorsed till it come to him to whom it is payable, the Acceptor, in such Case, is obliged to pay the same when due, upon a sufficient Security given him to deliver up the accepted Bill if it again appeared, or to indemnify him from any future Demands for its Value.

182. When any one misses his accepted Bill, whether payable directly to the Possessor or to his Order, or if such a one receive Advice from his Correspondent that he has remitted him such a Sum, in such and such a Bill, &c. though on opening his Letter he finds the Bill is not inclosed, or if the Letter and Bill have miscarried, of whose forwarding he has Advice by the succeeding Post, and finds that the Day of Payment draws so near, as to hinder his getting other Bills in Room of the lost one, he may when it comes due, demand Payment upon his Letter of Advice, with the Tender of Security to free and discharge the Acceptor from any future Demands of that Sum, by Virtue of the lost Bill; and if the Acceptor will not pay on those Terms, he may be protested against for Re-exchange and Charges.

183. When an accepted Bill, protested for Non-payment, is lost, the Drawer is not obliged to make good the Re-exchange and Charges, unless he obtain sufficient Security to indemnify and free him from all future Demands, and engage a Restoration of the Sum with Interest, which he shall have paid for the Re-exchange and Charges, in Case it should appear that the Bill, pretended to be lost, should afterwards be paid by the Acceptor or any other supra Protest.

184. When an accepted Bill is lost or mislaid, the Remitter or Possessor cannot have immediate Satisfaction from either the Acceptor or Drawer, but must proceed against them in the ordinary Course of Law, as if it was for some other Kind of Debt, as a Protest cannot be made but upon an accepted Bill, or the refused Offers of Indemnity.

185. Marius advises, that as soon as the Possessor of a Bill misses it, he should have immediate Recourse to the Acceptor, and in the Presence of a Notary and two Witnesses, acquaint him with its being lost; and signify to him, that at his Peril, he pay it to none but those with his Order; and he adds, that no one should refuse Payment of a Bill he has accepted because it is missing: As he asserts, that Protest being made for Non-payment, upon the Offer of a sufficient Security and Indemnification, will oblige the Acceptor to make good all Losses, Re-exchange and Charges, as he wilfully occasioned them*.

So, by the Statute of 9 Will. III. Sect. 3. "It is provided, that in Case, any such inland Bill or Bills of Exchange, as mentioned in the former Part of the Act, shall happen to be lost or miscarried within the Time before limited for the Payment of the same, then the Drawer of the said Bill or Bills, is and shall be obliged to give another Bill or Bills of the same Tenor with these first given, the Person or Persons to whom they are or shall be so delivered giving Security, if demanded, to the said Drawer, to indemnify him against all Persons whatsoever, in Case the said Bill or Bills of Exchange, so alledged to be lost or miscarried, shall be found again."

186. If the first accepted lost Bill was made payable to him that lost it, and the second, unaccepted, should be made payable to another Man, then if the Money be really paid when due to him, to whom the first accepted, though lost Bill was payable, such Payment is warrantable and good, and the Possessor of the second can have no Demand on the Acceptor.
