CARD.

A directory has been a long felt want in our fast prospering city, not only with the daily increasing number of strangers who visit Sherbrooke, but also, and particularly with the business community of the city.

At the urgent request of many, we undertake to supply this want, trusting that our efforts will prove satisfactory to the public at large and be rewarded by an ample patronage.

We take the opportunity here offered, to thank the advertisers who assure the success of our work, and to express the hope that the public will remunerate their generosity. If it can be an encouragement to them as well as to future advertisers (for it is the publisher's intention to make this volume an annual publication), we guarantee them that no effort will be spared to secure it a wide circulation and bring their cards into general notice. Arrangements being made to have copies left for general use at every public place.

Besides the advertisements, the book affords extensive information concerning the city, its different institutions, public and private.

The names of the inhabitants of the city are arranged alphabetically as regards the whole population as well as regards the residents on each street.

Respectfully,

J. P. ROYER.

SHERBROOKE IN 1887.

We read in a book of travels, published in the French language, by an adventurer who explored the Eastern township to a certain extent, that the site of what has since become the city of Sherbrooke was destined to become a place of importance. Time has proved his prophecy a true one; and to-day we can speak of our city of Sherbrooke with legitimate pride. It is everywhere spoken of as an enterprising and thriving city, bound to become one of the great centers of the Province.

This is no place to enter into a description of the picturesque beauty of the city. Let it only be said that it ranks next to none in that direction; cut as it is by the broken and foaming waters of the Magog river, as they rush past the many mills they feed, and over the obstacles put in their way by nature and man's work, finding at last rest in the quieter waters of the Saint Francis river, which meets the Magog immediately under the Grand Trunk railway bridge. The Magog river offers to manufacturers the most desirable water power, in its descent of 120 feet, within a distance of half a mile. This power while powerful has the merit of being permanent and easily controlled.

The Saint Francis river although not procuring the city advantages equal to those of the Magog, is not to be despised, it greatly enhances the beauty of its surroundings and secures to those fond of boating a smooth stretch of some 5 or 6 miles.

The population of Sherbrooke numbers close on to 8,500 inhabitants, composed chiefly of people of English and French origin. The Irish, we must not forget to say, form an important element in our population.

Sherbrooke is already a railway center; the Grand Trunk's locomotives were the first to awaken the echoes of the valley of the Saint Francis, at a time when nothing louder than the notes of the church bells reverberated from hill to hill had disturbed its stillness. It connects Sherbrooke with the east and west, branching off at Richmond to Quebec, where an easy connection is made for the Maritime Provinces.

In addition to the Grand Trunk the following railways centre in Sherbrooke: the Boston and Lowell connecting directly with New York and Boston, the Central Vermont, the Quebec Central and the International, now part of the Canadian Pacific. All these railroads besides enlivening the city and providing work for hundreds, render access to the great business centers easy and open the surrounding country, thus giving every branch of industry a chance to flourish. Added to this Sherbrooke will soon have the advantage of direct communication with the eastern and western extremities of the continent, by means of the so-called Short Line.

Sherbrooke is neatly built and very few are the structures that are not an ornament to the city. First come the Eastern Townships Bank and the new Post Office, which are rich and imposing granite buildings; the Roman Catholic Cathedral, which crowns the top of Sherbrooke's highest hill. The Roman Catholic College, the Convent buildings and the Bishop's Palace crowd around the cathedral like so many respectful attendants and add to the beauty and elegance of its surroundings. The first objects which attract the eye as you near the city from any direction whatever, are the shooting spires of these edifices. The Protestant churches are also fine and imposing buildings; particularly the new Methodist Church, which is certainly a gem of architecture, and the Church of England draped in climbing vines and shaded by far spreading trees. Most of the other places of worship are no less worthy of mention. Through the enterprise and generosity of a few public spirited citizens, Sherbrooke has been within the last year embellished and enriched of a monument which will immortalize its founders. The Art and Library Building is certainly an object of pride for our city and one which gains, not only for its noble minded founders, but for the whole community the praise and admiration of every one visiting the city. It is an ornament; and a source of education and refinement for our population. Let us hope that this commendable institution will meet with all possible encouragement, and keep progressing and doing good as in the past.

Pages could be written about Sherbrooke's many other buildings both public and private, but space and circumstances will not admit of it here. Speaking generally, we feel that we can honestly and safely say, that: ours is as pretty and neat a little city as can be seen in the Province. It is healthy and orderly, well protected against fire and other calamities, by efficient and active fire and police organizations. Its streets are wide, well kept and pretty generally lined with handsome trees. Most of the residences have their beautiful gardens; and the scenery around the city is grand. From any position you take, the eye will, in whatever direction you may look, meet with well wooded hills, green valleys and rich fields.

Many noted lakes and places of amusements lie within a short distance from the city and can be easily reached. The city is well provided with good, in fact, first class schools.

The Roman Catholics have a large and complete seminary, where commercial and classical studies are taught in all their branches, with great success, if we can judge from the number of business and professional men already ranking favorably in their different callings, who have come out of the institution.

The girls' school, under the direction of the nuns of Notre-Dame, is also a favorite resort for both Catholic and Protestant lady students. The reputation of this convent has spread not only over the whole Province, but every year brings within its walls a fair number of pupils from different cities in the United States.

The Friars have also large and well attended schools.

Among the Protestant schools, we find the High school, where are also taught the commercial and classical branches with marked success. This is no doubt one of the best schools of its kind in the Province. We notice also the Central school; and the young ladies' Academy standing on the prettiest spot in the whole city.

From its windows, looking east and west, we have the finest view imaginable of the river Saint Francis and of the mountains and hills which flank the city on the east side of Sherbrooke. The city is well supplied with banks and newspapers.

A word must be said of Sherbrooke's numerous and prosperous manufacturing establishments. At the head of the list come the Paton mills, manufacturing woollen goods and tweeds. They give employment to some 600 hands, paying them handsome and encouraging salaries.

Lomas & Son's woollen mills, and the British American Land Company's saw mills, which annually dispose of some five million feet of timber.

McFarlane's flour mills, Symmes Bros' paper pulp mills, the E. T. corset factory and a great many other large concerns all go towards building up for Sherbrooke a trade which will secure it success and prosperity.

ESTABLISHED 1878.

“ THE WEEKLY EXAMINER ”

SHERBROOKE, P. Q.

The Examiner is published every Friday at the office on Wellington street, opposite the City Hall. It contains a large amount of “local” news, in addition to a budget of the latest foreign news of the week, literary selections, market reports, &c. Enjoying a large circulation the Examiner is a most desirable medium for advertisers, rates of which can be had on application.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE $1.00 per year.

W. A. MOREHOUSE & Co. Publishers.

JOB PRINTING DEPARTEMENT.

Our office being furnished with all the latest styles of type and borders as well as with swift presses, and employing skilled workmen, we are enabled to turn out.

THE VERY BEST CLASS OF WORK

At reasonable prices. We use only the best stock and do not care to turn out what is known as cheap work. All orders given us will be executed promptly, and at a fair advance on the cost ; we are confident we can give satisfaction. We do a finer class of work than is usually done outside the large cities, and this fact being known, we receive orders from places many miles distant which come to us unsolicited.

W. A. MOREHOUSE,
