"IT SAVED ME DOLLARS."

DR. G. M. COOK, Forcible Words from an Honest Man -Interesting Experience of a Millstream Blacksmith-A Happy

"If you are the boss I'd like to talk with you?" These were the words of Mr. E. I. Ellison, who called at our office yesterday, without invitation of anyone, prompted only by a thankful heart.

He addressed the manager of the Groder Co., with above words. Finding he was right he continued: "I consulted a physician for Chronic Diarrhea, from which I suffered all summer. Somehow he did not help me. Just then I saw a testimonal from a man I knew who had been cured by your remedy. We got a bottle Phought it was no good—only syrup. Well, sir, the first half bottle helped me. I kept on taking it. The medicine kept on curing. Now I'm all right; can eat, aleep, work, and enjoy life. Guess it saved me a large doctor's bill; and I know there that it has cured. I took less than three bottles, and my case was a very bad one." J. C. BOWSER, M. D.

Such words come from the heart. Such writing does good to other sufferers.

There is scarcely a doubt but the young man was a farmer's son and lived within twenty miles of Sackville and that in his statements he revealed his honest thought on the subjects about which he talked. That the thought-expressed about the institutions in Sackville is shared in by a considerable number of farmers we believe is true. That money is a fine thing to have is the settled conviction of great number of persons other than farmers, will scarcely be disputed. The money question can however be dismissed with this general statement; it is very inconvenient sometimes very unpleasant to find yourself short at your bankers. Touching the higher educational institutions and the wrong impression they have made on the minds of a number of farthers thought. It is but doing justice to the management of those institutions to say their one aim is to train the minds of all who come under their care so that they may become better, grander and nobler men and wemen.

One reason and we think the main one why the farmer does not appreciate more the college or university is in the control of the minds of all who come under their care so that they may become better, grander and nobler men and wemen.

The Temperance Meeting.

EDITOR POST:—

DEAR SIR — There is to be a public temperance neeting in the vestry of the Baptits church on Monday evening next.

The address is to be given by Rev. Geo F Dawson. There will also be music and readings. There is good evidence that the temperance sentiment in Dorchester is standily gaming ground. We expect to continue these meetings monthly, and look to oar christian friends, and temperance people generalist, to help us in this good work, by showing that their sympathy and also their influence is with us. We are trying in all just ways to drive the liquor traffic out of Dorchester, and it is the intention of the Scott Act committee to lock after the violators of the law more vigorously and earnestly than ever believe that He will not suffer his host to be defeased. The battle has raged hotly in the past but still we feel that we have wor vantage ground, and even if the memy is still quite strong we mean to march to battle as our captain gives us orders, and believe that Jesus will give the victory.

Protection and Free Trade Viewed in the Light of Experience.

In a recent speech Hon, W. H. Mongu spoke as follows: The electors of Canada are asked to bandon the protective system under which great development has been made during the past sixteen years. Fortunately for us the question of the tariff is not a new question; it is as old as the history of the world's progress. The electors of Canada need not be told that experience is always the best ceacher and that experience warns ystem of protective, defensive tariff.

The Liberal Party are asking the Canadian electors to adopt a trade system which is in vogue in only one country in the world, and that country adopted it only after 500 years of protection during which tim her industries were oroughly established and her market won in every part of the world. That country is England and even here, among the great mass of the people there is a strong feeling for a reurn to protection to England's ow narkets for her own people.

The first act of Congress voted by the new republic when it was formed was in its preamble declared to be an act "For the support of the Government for the discharge of the public debt and for the encouragement and protection of manufacturers."

Under this high duties were placed upon foreign importations. It ought to be remarked here that a very large ma jority of the members of that Congress were farmers, who saw the necessity of variety of industry.
Under this protection system, which vas continued until 1836, the country was prosperous.

It did not take very long for the prople to decide that they had made a mis-take in 1892. In the election of November 1894 they announced their repent-ance in thunder tones. Candidates in favor of free trade or tariff reform were defeated by majorities away up in the thousands all over the country : indeed hardly such a candidate was elected at all. The result of the whole election was the most p onounced victory for a defensive and protective tariff that this continent has ever seen. So decided has been the victory in favor of that principle, that the opponents of it admit freely and publicly that the people have declared, in a way that cannot be misunderstood, that protection shall be the policy of the American nation for the next quarter of a century.

The old Egyptian cemetery at Assicut is a desolate, sandy tract of land, with a desert stretching away on either hand. Each grave is furnished with double gravesiones, placed as seats for the two recording angels, Munkar and Nekir. Such as it was, however, it had a visitor in the person of an old, blind beggar. Ibrahim had not always been poor and forlorn. He had once been a prosperous dragoman wearing gorgeous apparel and earning much backsheesh by guiding English and American tourists through his native land. Now he was dependent upon the charity of those pions believers who daily distributed bread to the needy from the doors of the mosque.

Ibrahim loved the graveyard. He felt more at home there than in the town felt more at home there than in the town of the living outside its walls. So many of his old friends were here. They were all gone into the other world, some in battle with the Berbers or the Sudanee, some from old age, some by pestilence, some by famine, which ever waits to devour the fellah when, by chance. the Nile fails to give sustenance to his poor little strip of arable land. Only he was left of all his generation. He loved to wander from one stone to another. Ocwander from one stone to another. Oc-casionally he stopped to recall the past, to hold an imaginary conversation with some shade, to give some piece of news and fancy its effect upon the visionary audience. He would often go home quite cheered and refreshed by the comquite cheered and refreshed by the companionship and feeling less lonely. One only, and he the dearest, was absent. Whether he lay beneath ocean waves, or under drifting Libyan sands, or in a far-off country, Ibrahim never knew; read it through to the end. Yes, there was no doubt that he was a bad son, and, when he finally ran away with a caravan of wandering Bedawin, the bazar felt that fate had dealt kindly with lbrahim. But he himself thought otherwise, for his soul yearned after his troublesome child; and even now, after so many long years, his works of supererogation, his observance of extra hours of prayer besides the or-dained five, his visit to the Well, or tombs of saints, his offerings of cetrich eggs in the mausoleums and scraps of cloth fastened to the surrounding trees, were always performed with the hope that they might somehow benefit that son, for whose sake, when the trump of Israfil should sound, he himself would be content to fall from the raxor bridge of El-Sirat into the abyss below, provided only the soul of his boy might he borne across to rest beneath the shade of trees with the houris of Paradise. To his deceased wives, nine in all, he seldom gave a thought, but, for Ali's sake, scourged his poor worn back and stood for hours in the broiling sun; for Ali he roused himself to pray at midnight. He always made one of the blind men who walked behind a bier to chant the creed tombs of saints, his offerings of ostrich always made one of the blind men who walked behind a bier to chant the creed while the boys followed to sing the "Hashriyeh," the poem of last judgment, and the mourning women wailed behind. And he loved to listen to the burial prayer: "O, Allahi forgive our living and forgive our dead. Pardon these who are present and shoes who wait and look for you. Do good, not evil. And may Allah grant you find the way of peace."

The boy was silent a minute, and the sightless eyes could not see a certain mistings in the other pair. "I'll do

So old Ibrahim felt his way into the mud hut one baking afternoon to sit by the sufferer, to give him water, and to keep away the torturing flees. From that hour he tended him continually. There was little else to reward him. His patient was not one who had learned much from life in the lessons of unselfishness and self control. But even on him it began gradually to dawn that this oriental patience and courtesy was something surprising and beyond anything he had a right to expect.

"Tbrahim," he asked a few days later, "when you pray, what do you say?"

The old man flushed. "I speak with Allah, howadji," He answered with simple dignity.

"Oh, see here! I know you don't like to talk about your faith to unbelievers; but I'm not meaning to be impertinent. I really would like to know very

The shirt Waists This Year.

The shirt waists for the coming season do not differ very materially from those of last year. The sleeves are very large, and there is more fullness across the bust. The band around the neck and the collar higher, but the general effect is not to marked to absolutely condemn last year's stock if one must consider economy. The collars on the new shirts are made either high or turned over, with the preference for the latter. It is considered very smart to have the collars of white linen, to button on the band with gold buttons.

The fashionable sleeve no longer stands out from the shoulder in an aggressive manner. Instead, it droops. The low shoulder seam is the vogue, and "1830" slope is more to the front than ever. One of the most fashionable sleeves of the summer wil have the material gathered or tucked over the upper part of the arm and then suddenly expand into a big bell puff. This style of sleeve is more fashionable than beautiful. The fan sleeve is another novelty. It falls over the arm in a puff which assumes fan-like folds.
