SOUTH AFRICA

Being Purchased in Large Numbers by British Government.

Capt. Maudslay, Purchasing Agent, Tells What Kind of Horses Are Needed-Chances for a Remount Station.

Capt. E. R. Maudslay, of England, a retired officer of the 16th Queen's Lancers, is in the city, accompanied by Veterinary Major Rowe. Their mission is the inspection and buying of remounts for the British forces in South Africa. Capt. Maudslay is the agent of the purchasing commission for the government. He looks over the horses offered and judges of their general fitness for army purposes, while Major Rowe examines them and certifies to their physical soundness.

Capt. Maudslay was seen by an Advertiser reporter at the Tecumseh House, and asked, among other things, what probability there is of the British government establishing a remount station in this district, or in any part of Canada. In answer to the question, Capt.

Maudslay said: "The matter rests entirely with the home government, and so far no move has been made. I have no authority to say that a remount station will be here or anywhere in Canada "Would London be a good site for the station?" "It is a good horse district, and has provided many fine remounts. It is as good a place as I have yet visited."

"What kind of horses does the government want?" asked the reporter.
"Medium-sized, clean-limbed, sound, active horses, between the ages of 5 and 10, preferably broken to saddle They must be strong, as they have a considerable weight to carry. dinary soldier, with his rifle, 60 rounds of ammunition and his kit, is no small load. The horses are divided into three classes-cavalry, artillery and cobs, the latter for the mounted infantry. The breeders are beginning to know what class of horses we want now. At first they did not show quite the proper requirements." "How many horses are you commissioned to buy, captain?" "I have no orders to stop buying and as long as they send me transports to fill I will keep on buying. The horses are shipped direct to South Africa. "How many horses have you bought, so far?'

"I have bought about 1,800 myself," said the captain. "The remainder those shipped have been bought by Col. Dent, who was in London some weeks ago. We shipped 830 on July 6, on the transport Rembrandt, and on July 20, 1,000 followed on the Indian. There were two previous shipments. The next is on Aug. 14, when 800 or 900 horses will be shipped. Of these about 200 will have been bought by Col. Dent, who is now at Calgary. I accepted 112 horses today, and have many more to examine tomorrow.' "Have the Canadian horses sent to South Africa given satisfaction?" "I cannot say from personal knowledge," replied Capt. Maudslay, "but I understand they have been found quite suitable." "At what places have you been buying horses, in addition to London? was the reporter's last query. "Montreal, Ottawa, Paris, Goderich, Toronto and other places. I go from here to Listowel, and then back through Toronto and Napanee to Monhere to Listowel, treal. I do not know whether I will be back to London soon, or whether

I will try a fresh district."

Venezuela and Columbia May Be Embroiled in a Conflict.

Mail advices received here from Venezuela at Colombia say the censored cablegrams which the Venezuelan Government allows press correspondents to forward from Caracas are inaccurate. President Castro's army, it is added, does not exceed 3,000 soldiers. Gen. Uribe is reported to be on the march from Bogota, the capital of Colombia, which has less than 3,000 men. Battles are said to be imminent. The Venezuelan revolutionists were at San Cristobal and the Colombian revolutionists were at Cucuta when the mail advices were forwarded.

The idea of milk venders should be to supply milk to their patrons in as nearly as possible the same condition as when it left the cow. The formalin, boracic or salicylic acid, etc., or sterilizing and pasteurizing, should not be necessary. The trouble with the milk vendors is that they do not understand the care necessary in every part of the handling of the milk, until it reaches the customer, to insure pure and uncontaminated milk. Before the city board of health licenses milkmen, it should be necessary for the applicant to show a certificate of attendance at one of the short courses of the dairy school. The courses run from four weeks to three months; six weeks is about the average time, and in that time the student would have some idea of the care necessary to prevent milk from becoming contaminated. The student is taught the common diseases to which cows are subject at the same time. There are three schools in this province, one at Kingston, one at Guelph and one at Strathroy, and each is doing a good work. If we compare the bacterial flora of milk with that of sewage, a fluid that is popularly and rightly supposed to be teeming with germ life, it will almost always be observed that milk, when it is consumed, is richer in bacteria or germs by far than the sewage of our large cities.

Jacobi says as to one of the ques-tions connected with the employment of sterilized and pasteurized milk is this, whether the milk to be used for a child ought to be prepared at home, or whether the milk supply may be procured from an establishment where large quantities of milk believed to sale. In regard to this problem Fligge plaintively expresses his regrets that we have allowed ourselves to be guided by people who are neither hygienists nor physicians, but chemists, farmers or apothecaries, and whose actions have been based on three false beliefs: first, that boiling for three-quarters of an hour destroys the germs; second, whatever bacteria undestroyed are innocuous, and third that proliferating bacteria can always be recognized by the symptoms of decomposition. Give an Exhibition of Fancy and Swift Swimming That Was Very Interesting.

A good crowd was present last night at the Y. M. G. A. pond, where the art of swimming in both useful and ornamental branches, was exemplified, by Harry Brooks, of Cheshire, England, and Chris. Butterworth, of this city. The exhibition was pronounced by those competent to judge matters of this kind as the best they had ever witnessed. It was Mr. Brooks' intention to compete in the long distance swim at the Pan, but unfortunately he arrived too late to enter. As he holds the amateur championship of Liverpool, and finishe! fourth in the 1,000 yard contest for the championship of England last year against eleven other competitors, it is safe to place him among the phenoend of the 40-foot plunge in an average of eleven seconds per trip.

Miss Carson's Stay in London Has Awakened Interest.

Summerholm Is Popular-Association Entertainments and Announcements.

The friends of the Association, who were looking forward to the lawn fete and the appearance of the renowned Peak sisters, of Alaska, last Tuesday evening, were not disappointed. The heavens, to all appearances, had been spending days weeping proval on the auspicious night. At 8:30 the sisters arrived, not bag and haggage, but cap and bandbox. How they had managed to come so far with so much luggage, and their equipages in such good repair, puzzled the brain of more than one small boy, who had been anxious about them. During the performance a peal of laughter from one wee chap indicated the fact that he had discovered a striking resemblance in one of the Peak sisters to a fond aunt, who had mysteriously disappeared, and the mystery was solved. With all due solemnity and precision the sisters were introduced to the audience, and their various accomplishments dilated upon by the inexperienced but eldest of the family. From the green-goggled blue-stocking of Boston to the high soprano, who sang the soul-stir ring strains of "Mary Had a Little Lamb" in a key beyond description, the Peaks' entertainment was an unparalleled success. Even the deaf and dumb member sang her part with emphasis and precision, and the selec tion from the comb band in full chorus was executed with expression and fervor. The audience enjoyed a good laugh, and the only disappointment seemed to come from the fact that the sisters were obliged to leave on an early train for parts unknown. Refreshments were served on the lawn, during which time the audience enjoyed hearing Miss Pickard and Miss Fowler sing. Miss May Fox also played informally during refreshments. A good many lingered in the rooms after "God Save the King" was sung, talking about the ment, and catching farewell glimpses of the Peak sisters in various stages of metamorphoses into ordinary Canadian sisters of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Those who had the entertainment in hand were very much gratified at the splendid attendance of those who showed their interest in the work of the association. Much of the success of the programme is due to the untiring energy of Miss Carson, and the girls feel grateful for the interest she took and the help she gave them knowing as they do the many demands which have been made constantly upon Miss Carson's time Those who believe that organization is the basis of good government cannot but appreciate the work which has been done in the past few weeks by Miss Carson, who left Thursday for her helidays before continuing her Dominion work in the city associations. She has been indefatigable in her determination to place the Canadian associations upon a scientific basis, in order that they may obtain the dignity which should belong to them, and command the respect of the communities in which they are placed. Because of her wide practical experience with the work in the States, there is perhaps no one better qualifled than she to speak with authority on the best methods of conducting an association. Those who know her recognize the broadmindedness and consecrated common sense with which views the possibilities of ork in Canada; and the association London has reason to be grateful the Dominion executive for the vilege of having Miss Carson with em for such a length of time. LANGUID AND DEPRESSED BY ITHERING SUMMER WEATHER

In these hot summer months, when weary muscles and shattered nerves make you feel so tired, depressed and worn out that you can hardly put one foot before the other, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will lift you from that horrid, overpowering weakness and ever-present languor worse than pain. It makes you feel well because it creates the new, vigorous tissue that quickens you into enjoyable life.

The Broken Health of Busy Men.

Muskoka, or on the shores of the great lakes, many a man finds it necessary to plod on day after day and week after week at his desk, in the workshop or at the factory, and the strain of the toil and worry, combined with the enervating and debilitating effects of the summer heat, is usually almost more than he can bear.

What wonder that so many suffer from nervous headache, nervous dyspepsia and brain fag, and find it difficult to remember and to concentrate their thoughts! The regular use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food entirely overcomes these symptoms of a breaking down nervous system, and revitalizes the body and mind. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food contains in condensed form the most effective tonics of nature. It builds up the system and wards off disease.

Mr. A. R. Fawcett, the well-known editor and proprietor of the Leader and Recorder, Toronto Junction, writes: "It is very seldom that I need medicine of any description, but this spring I got so badly run down and out of sorts generally that I became somewhat alarmed. Chancing to read a testimonial about the results derived from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food from a gentleman whose case seemed to be identical with my own, I purchased a box and commenced using it. "The result was simply marvelous. I was benefited from the first, and soon restored to my usual good health. I never felt better in my life than I do now. To tell the simple truth, I did not have very great faith in any medicine until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, but now I have no hesitation in strongly recommending this great remedy to others

Summer Sufferings of Women.

It requires an enormous amount of vitality to withstand the weakening and trying effects of the withering summer weather, to overcome the languid, wornout feelings and to fight off the fevers and dreadful fatal diseases which are especially prevalent in the summer time, and ever ready to attack those in a low state of health.

There is nothing so trying on the system as the hot summer weather, and none who suffer more from the heat than the woman with the cares of a family on her hands, requiring work in the hot kitchen and over the stove. Many a worn-out, despondent woman who could scarcely drag herself about the kitchen has been restored to health and strength by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills), the great blood builder and nerve

Mrs. M. A. McCrea, Tory Hill, Ont., writes: "My system was all run down when I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was weak and very nervous, and felt so tired and worn out that I could scarcely drag myself about the house. It seemed impossible for me to get rest or sleep at night, and I felt that I was gradually growing weaker and more nervous and irritable. Since beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel altogether different. It has gradually strengthened my nerves and built up my system wonderfully. I sleep well now, and am being thoroughly restored to health and strength. I believe it is the best medicine to be had for the nerves." Mrs. S. Memorial Church Boys' Brigade Have Pleasant Outing.

Were Inspected During Camp and Highly Praise! by Lieut. Uniacke-Results of Sports.

The boys of the Memorial Brigade returned yesterday from Port Stanley, where for the past ten days they have been enjoying themselves immensely. Through the kindness of Mr. Stanton they camped just east of Orchard Beach. Mr. R. B. McElheran, of the Memorial Church, was in charge of the camp, accompanied at different times by Mr. J. S. Robinson, Dr. Reason, Dr. Archibald Treleaven and Mr. J. Nichols. The military part of the camp was in charge of Sergt .- !nstructor Price, Wolseley Barracks, assisted by Pte. Permanency of Cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Sam Derrochers Cured of Diabetes in 1898 - Had It for Over Five Years-His Recent Letter Proves That His Cure Still Holds Good.

Quebec, Aug. 2. - (Special.) - Sam. Derrochers, of the Fortress City was cured of Diabetes by Dodd's Kidney Pills, in 1898. His case is well known here, it having been published in the papers at the time, and a great deal of attention was drawn to Dodd's Kidney Pills on its account. Diabetes, however, is known to be an incurable disease, and many of the more skeptical of Quebec citizens expressed doubt as to the permanency of the cure. These doubts may now be set at rest. Mr. Derrochers himself attests that in three years he has had no sign of Diabetes return. In May, 28, 1898, Mr Sam. Derrochers published the following letter in Quebec papers: "I have been a victim to Diabetes for over five years, with terrible pains around my neys. My feet were always cold, and my thirst could not be quenched, no matter what I drank. I tried remedy after remedy but received no he purchased one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and found immediate relief.

Now to clear away all possible doubt that Mr. Derrochers was not cured, o show beyond question that Dodd's Kidney Pills did not merely relieve the time, but actually cured him of Diabetes, and cured him to stay

London, Aug. 3.-Mr. Chamberlain's declaration on behalf of the government in the House of Commons that greater severity will be used hereafter in dealing with Cape rebels, and that cers shooting captured blacks will, if taken, be executed, coupled with the assurance that a considerable number of troops will be brought home at the end of September are treated by the morning papers as the beginning of the third period of the war. The Standard says: "The pestilent activity of a small section is keeping the whole vast area in a state of tumult, throwing an enormous cost on the imperial treasury and postponing the resumption of peaceful industry. The time is clearly at hand, if we rightly construe Mr. Chamberlain's words, when Lord Kitchener will be instructed not to treat as prisoners of war British subjects captured with arms in their hands. It is a stage which every guerilla conflict ultimately reaches, and it is to be deplored, since it may mean terrible deeds leading to terrible reprisals on both sides; but the brigandage into which the campaign has degenerated must be

THE PRICE OF PEACE. Paris, Aug. 3.-In the course of an interview with Mr. Kruger, published in the Figaro today, the ex-president of the Transvaal said:

"We have already once proposed peace directly to Great Britain, and we will not renew the propositions. All we are willing to give for peace is money, if Great Britain asks it; and no price is too dear to obtain independence and the right to live as a free nation."

A YELLOW JOURNAL YARN. New York, Aug. 5.—General Baden-Powell asserts that Mrs. Kruger, after President Kruger left South for Europe until her death, had been in receipt of £250 a month from the British Government, and that she has also had the free use of a government carriage and government horses.

The dispatch from London to the Journal and Advertiser, containing this statement, goes on: "The Mafeking hero also states that Mrs. Steyn, wife of president Steyn, of the late Orange Free State, was paid $100 a by the government, and likewise had the use of a carriage and horses.

"This latter statement is said to be confirmed by a letter from Mrs. Steyn to a niece in Scotland, in which she 'I never lived so well in my wrote: life.'

A "GENTLEMEN'S CORPS." London, Aug. 2.-The war office employs peculiar means toward the furtherance of the recruiting of a gentlemen's corps for the Imperial Yeomanry, under the secretary of state for war's defense scheme. In the recruiting office for the proposed corps the placards announcing that "endeavors will be made to obtain a prominent position for this regiment in the coronation ceremonies." week saw close on a thousand applicants, but not many of them went away from the dreary recruiting office with the satisfaction that their names adorned the recruiting sergeant's book. Most of them would have to put in a claim for a distinction before they would be termed gentlemen by the casual observer, and many were undeniably veterans in the army of the great unwashed. The best movement the war office could make-better than advertisement of promises of special official efforts for special privileges for a special corps-would be the prompt payment of men who have already borne arms in South Africa. Until it does so, recruits for the Gentlemen's Corps will continue to The cold-blooded Boer atrocities re- wary of war office promises.

Midnight Signaling—Novel Trials Carried Out on Salisbury Plain-Shippers Ask Damages for Seizure of Boer Supplies.

BRITAIN SHORT OF WHEAT. London, Aug. 3.-The wheat harvest in the United Kingdom has been in full swing for a week, and the Mark Lane Express calculates that, although the quality is fine, the yield in the most important counties will be four quarters to the acre, against the usual five quarters. Barley likewise is of good quality, but the quantity is below the average, and oats are too thin to make a big crop.

The yield of English and Scotch potatoes will be fully up to the average, while Ireland promises the best yield since 1895, which was a grand year. LIBERIA'S REQUEST.

NOVEL EXPERIMENTS. London, Aug. 2.-Assisted by chosen party from the Newbury Guild-hall Club, Rev. J. M. Bacon was en-gaged recently in carrying out on Salisbury Plain, some novel signaling trials, such as would be of value in any campaign where telegraphy, wire-less or otherwise is impracticable. The apparatus used was such as could be readily carried by one man, cycling, or on foot. The trials began with the conveyance of messages along a line of scouts by word of mouth, as Kaffirs and others are credited with doing. This was accomplished across mile intervals. Then followed sound signal adapted to the More code over gaps ranging up to seven miles. Distant flash signalling, unnoticeable outside the line of transmission, was the next experiment, the apparatus used consisting principally of an acetylene lamp and an arrangement of condensing lenses. This could be observed over a distance of eighteen miles. To call attention a form of magnesium light was testified, to be used from a high flying kite. This has the advantage over the rocket that it can display a larger flash and give its sig-nal from a greater height. These long distance signals traveled from a beacon hill in Wiltshire to another in Hampshire, and thence passed on to distant beacon in Berkshire. The trials will shortly be transferred to the neighborhood of London in conjunction with Mr. Bacon's captive balloon

On her arrival at Algoa, Bay she was seized by the British cruiser Partridge. The Cape Town supreme court rendered a decision releasing vessel, but ordering the confiscation of part of the cargo. Finally, according to a report received from Col. Stowe, the American consul-general at Cape Town, part of the confiscated cargo was sold here at a profit and the British Government agreed to take the remainder at 10 per cent over the invoice valuation.

The department councils have ested in vain against the incursions nto their territory of automobilary fanatics, and have adopted ordinances also in vain, intended to restrict the speed of the machines to reasonable rates. Now the national government has taken the matter in hand, and a law will soon be in force providing that any motor carriage capable of making more than eight miles an hour will carry in front and behind a large identifying number, visible by night as well as by day, so that if the driver breaks the law he shall not be able to escape identification. the alarm-horn hereafter is to be confined to announcing proach of the vehicle at dangerous points so as to avoid accidents. present the horn is chiefly employed as a warning to everybody to get out of the road, a usurpation resented by the peasants, who see no reason why their carts and wagons should not enjoy the same right of way as the vehicles driven by masked men with goggle-eyes.

Ah, there!
Good morning;
Got the blues this morning?
Yes?
Well, now, confess;

Do you try to smile Meanwhile? Do you try to make The mulligrubs take To the tall timber To the tall timber And climb a tree to where The sunshine is fair?

Or, say!
Do you lay
Right down in the road As if your load Were too heavy to bear, And the care And the worry of life, And its strife Were to many for you?

What if the cup
Is bitter? Do you meet
Anybody who is everlastingly sweet?
Don't you know You've got a show As long as you're alive? When you're dead, You'll have something els

To think about. You're stuck In hard luck, Perhaps:

And the snaps
Aren't coming your way;
But, say! Whining won't bring them, It's easier to sing them Into line; And nine Times in ten
You can sing if you try.
What's the good of a sign

For everyday That's actual abuse Of what Should not Be used except when you Anything else.

Gee whiz!
Don't you know what courage is?
Don't you know it's good to grope
Through the night
For the glory of the morning light!
Don't you know
It's good to climb
The high, hard hills to stand
Overlooking the sea and the land? Overlooking the sea and the land? Don't you know
It's good to fight
With all your might,
And that the scars
Will be stars
In your crown of triumph?
Do you suppose

Do you suppose Loses its fragrance Because it grows In stony soil What's toil, But something that Makes you know where you're really at When you get there?

What's trouble
But something to double
The joys that are bound come around And give it a thump When it starts to slump? You ought to get gay,
With the luck when its tough.

And give it a cuff Or two, As a reminder that you Are not to be fooled with The Lord helps them, Who help themselves, If they don't.
So watch for the Rainbow of Promise, One color is blue in the lot; But don't you forget, When you're caught in the wet, That six of them there are not,

And five is a good working majority
In a total vote of seven.
Now fire the blue,
And take the tricks
With the other six. And what a snap it is! "How does your little boy like the rum I gave him for his birthday? liked it very much for a little

The Greatest Medical and Surgiical Advances Due to Anglo-Saxon Genius.

We have heard so much during recent years respecting German research and scholarship, that some might think the English-speaking people not exactly up-to-date. There is a tendency for such a view to be strengthened by the worldwide attention recently deservedly directed to the important utterances of Dr. Koch, the great German, at the recent Tuberculosis Congress. We are disposed to give every possible credit and honor to such eminent men of forformer a German, the latter a Frenchfor the opening up of serum therapeutics belongs chiefly to Behring, of Ber- to the realization of these projects.

Lister's discovery and application of aseptic and antiseptic methods. "Listerism," as it is sometimes fondly called, is said truly to have saved more lives than all modern wars put together have destroyed. At the time of the American Civil War, and before Lister's great discovery, sixty-nine per cent of the wounded in field hospitals died; whereas in the late Cuban war. where Lister's principles were applied, only nine per cent of the wounded in the field and other hospitals, died; and in the present South African war, where, of course, Lister's antiseptic method is in use, the average mortality in field and other hospitals has been reduced to five per cent. Lord Lister is of English birth. He was educated in an Irish university; spent a good many of his most important years in Glasgow and Edin burgh, and in 1870 became connected with King's College, London, with which he is connected still. So that England, Ireland and Scotland can each claim to have had to do with the development of this eminent benefactor of mankind. Statistics show that in London, England, at the beginning of this century, only about one out of five children reached the age of five years. At present, an average of over four out of five attain the age of five years, a fact held to be due to the various ameli-orations we have mentioned. These improvements have been tested and have added greatly to the comfort and security of mankind. They have all been given to the world by the genius of the Anglo-Saxon race. While we applaud in a sincerely cosmopolitan spirit the researches of Koch. of Pasteur, or of Behring, no less honor and credit are due the great savants of our own kith and kin, of whom we have this four-fold reason to be proud.

We must take things as we find them, and not be disheartened when we meet with disappointment. The new religious convert is often seized with a desire to preach. This tendency was present among the negroes who, after their emancipation, had became so impressionable that Decision Re the Steel Strike To they were seized with a sudden desire to be lawyers, preachers, teachers, in fact anything but what they were best fitted for, namely, workers. Mr. Washington dispelled all such ideas, and impressed upon his compatriots the importance of "toiling terribly." We have in such men as Booker T. The Hon. George W. Ross, in his speech in London, England, to the Imperial Federation League, appears to have taken the position that Imperial Federation was not a question requiring to be immediately dealt with, and that there were many other questions requiring earlier attention.

We can quite understand the Hon. New York, Aug. 3.-The coastwise steamship lines running out of this port, including the Ward, Clyde, Mallory, Old Dominion, Morgan and Southern Pacific lines, have been notified of the adoption of a new wage schedule by the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association. A VERITABLE WONDERLAND

Wapta Falls in the Canadian Rockies So Described.

Region of Incomparable Beauty and Grandeur Amidst a Sea of Mountains. A new wonderland is being opened to the adventurous tourist in the Canadian Rocky Mountains, where have been found scenic beauties hitherto unknown, but which the ploneer explorers assert are unrivaled. Lofty but often unmeasured mountains, bold in outline, panoplied in snow and ice. full of undiscovered crags and valleys, peaks untrodden by man, canyons that have never echoed the human voice, they offer stirring problems for mind and muscle: and withal they are accessible, for more than 500 miles through the mountains of British Columbia, range after range of the Canadian Rockies, and then of the serried elevations along the Pacific coast are traversed by the railway. There are four great parallel uplifts, with three north and three south depressions, between the Rocky Mountains at the east; then the Selkirk range, moated on each side by the gorges of the Columbia; next the Columbia or Gold range; and finally the series of coast ranges. Each of these consist of dozens of huge wrinkles or folds in the rocky crust of the earth, broken into hundreds of peaks and plateaus by hundreds of mighty chasms and excavations. This is only the east and west width of it. The length of deur of the hills reaches to the south unknown of Alaska.

BEAUTY. In this vast stretch-this sea of mountains—one has not to go far afield to make new discoveries of twentieth century wonderlands. For, after all these years of travel through the mountains, it was not until the dying days of the old century were drawing to a close that the existence gion incomparable in its beauty and grandeur, and yet contiguous to the beaten track, was made known to the Stray explorers in pursuit of adventure, it is true, had previously told of lofty waterfalls dropping as if from the clouds, of huge glaciers exceeding that great one of the Selkirks, winsome mountain-girt lakelets, and tall peaks whose summits were lost in the azure; but they were put down as mere travelers' tales. Nothing, it was thought, could be grander than that already known. Recent exploration, verbrate throughout the valley and however, has confirmed these reports, make the earth tremble. The rising and when the deep snow which mantles the mountains and fills the valleys tern sun, forms itself into prismatic will have disappeared in the spring- splendor and involves itself into a time, a small army of men will be building reads and making trails to add this long-hidden fairyland to the hunting grounds, the elysian abode of other beauty spots which attract a the gods themselves. A few miles further on is Summit Lake, at an elevation of 6,000 feet above the level of the sea, at the foot of a spur from the Wapta range and directly facing the high Wapta peak which towers above it. Here camps are to be built, for the views are magnificent the reflection of the great pinnacle in the clear blue waters, accentuated by the rarefled atmospheric conditions, being perfect. From here one can reach the Twin Falls and the Great Glacier by a trail which leads along the mountain's shoulders above the timber line, at an elevation of between 6,000 and 7,000 feet; and all along the way are unbroken views of the whole valley of the North Fork as far north as Mounts Collie and Balfour, which form the gateway through which this marvelous sea of ice forces it way to the bottom of the valley. The long range of hills bordering the east bank of the North Fork stand as a barrier to the glacier and the immense snowfields which ex-

At different points along the hills the glaciers have apparently suddenly broken through in some remote age, and between the higher peaks they have advanced far enough ferward to curtain the canyon below. The traveler of 1901 will be able to penetrate these delightful wilds by trails aggregating 25 miles, and some of these paths, as stated, are at high altitudes; others by which the return trip will usually be made, lead down the valley and cross the shoulder of Mount Field, from the outlook on which glorious scenes that will live long in one's memory reveal themselves. ROCKIES. A week could be spent in the trip if one is enthusiastic over nature's great works. In two days the region could be traversed by easy stages. There are other valleys to the south and east, which when explored, will doubtless reveal many scenic surprises. Mr. Chamberlain replied that farm burning had been entirely abandoned and replaced by the policy of concentration camps. He contended that these were humane and satisfactory institutions as had been shown by the fact that thousands of Boers came into them voluntarily. "The government have the best reasons to believe" continued the colonial secretary, "that a vast majority of the ers acknowledge themselves beaten and would gladly surrender and resume peaceful pursuits, but for the comparative handful of irreconcilables who are carrying on a guerilla war that is degenerating into brigandage and absolute murder. Incursions into protected districts must be more severely dealt with, if there is to be 'sniping' of soldiers from behind hedges, and even of women.'

"Rubbish!" cried an Irish member. Mr. Chamberlain retorted that he met some ladies who had been as-saulted in this way. ENGLAND TO LEAD IN RAPID TRANSIT.

Trains to Run at Rate of More Than 110 Miles an Hour-To Travel on Single Track.

London, Aug. 2 .- A revolution in railroading is foreshadowed by the report just made by the railway committee of the House of Commons favoring the electric line between Manchester and Liverpool. It is confidently asserted that the house will unquestionably approve its committee report.

This will mean that passengers getting aboard the single rail electric train at Manchester will be able to step out at Liverpool less than ten minutes later, for these trains travel at the rate of something more than 110 miles an hour. At present it takes just twice as long for a train making its best time to traverse the distance between the two cities.

There has been stout opposition to the one-rail system by the conservative element, but the extraordinary speed of these trains and their safety withal have been irresistible factors in recommending them to the progressives. Engineers say there is no reason why hese trains cannot be constructed to attain a speed of 150 miles an hour or

CANADIANS AT SAN FRANCISCO

Londoners in Important Place at Epworth League.

Rev. R. D. Hamilton and Rev. C. J. Scott, of This City, Lead Great Gatherings—Brainy Addresses.

The San Francisco Call and Bulletin, two of the leading papers of California, contain extended reports, illustrated with many engravings, of the great International Epworth League convention lately held there attended by some 20,000 delegates from all parts of the States and Canada. These reports show that the Canadian contingent distinguished themselves throughout the proceedings, both in executive and by the vigor and braininess of their eloquence. Most of those taking part are well known in London. Rev. S. C. Crews, of Toronto, conducted shows a splendid crop in sight, and a communion service and presided over a monster meeting in the Alhambra Theater, and Rev. R. D. Hamilton, London, led a prayer gathering, and Rev. C. T. Scott, London, delivered an address on 'Personal Work for Christ'; Rev. E. E. Scott, Vancouver, B. C., brother of the latter, presided over the "Forward Movement" section; Rev. F. C. Stevenson, Toronto, discussed "Scriptural Habits of Giving"; Rev. S. T. Bartlett, Napanee, conducted a "Round Table" conference, and Rev. T. Albert Moore ably presided over the Junior League section. Rev. Dr. Withrow, Toronto, was to the fore; also Rev. J. W. Saunby, formerly of London; Rev. E. S. Rome and Rev. W. H. Barraciough, Victoria, B. C., and Rev. C. S. Heatn, of New Westminster, B. C. Rev. G. R. Turk, Toronto, and Rev. G. W. Kerby, Montreal, who have recently entered the evangelistic field together, sang duets with great acceptance. Rev. Mr. Turk also spoke on "THE CHURCH AND THE WORKING-

Labor councils have appointed committees to co-operate with the Lord's Day Alliance. The church must lock shields Alliance. The church must lock shields with the workingman to put down the liquor traffic. We must kill the saloon or it will kill us. The surroundings of the workingman's home should be as safe as the boulevard. The places of worship must be within easy reach of the workingman. By what Christian principle have man. By what Christian principle have many workingmen been forced into the mission halis? The church must puil down the money barriers and cease flaunting silks and diamonds in the workingman's face. WHERE CANADA GOT METHODISM.

WHERE CANADA GOT METHODISM.

Rev. James Henderson, of Teronto, responded to the welcome in behalf of the Canadian contingent. He said in part:

"I am reminded today of our great obligation to you—that which has made us largely what we are. It was from you we got much of our Methodism. Your adventurous William Losee was the morning star of the Methodist Church in the wilds of Canada. And among the names which shine the brightest on the roll of Methodistic fame in our country are those of Dunham and Ruter and Bangs and Black and Freeborn Garretson, the latter of whom, you will remem-Bangs and Black and Freeborn Garretson, the latter of whom, you will remember, was converted on horseback, and our Methodism has been on the go or the gallop ever since. I do not indulge in anything like poetic license when I say that these old saddle-bag preachers who crossed the line together with their successors did more to lay the moral foundations of our country than any other agency. The dust of many of those American pioneer preachers sleeps in many agency. The dust of many of those American pioneer preachers sleeps in many an unmarked grave, but some of them deserve a cenotaph in Westminster Abbey. They were mighty men. They were not all college-bred. In ridicule some of them have been called graduates of bush colleges and fellows of swamp university, but they were the men who knew how to reach the hearts of our people, and struck at the evils of their times as with the strokes of a sleege-hammer. Yes, they were great men. They belonged to a special and spiritual peerage. It is true they lacked the dillettantism of the modern divine, who described a tear as that small particle of aqueous fluid trickling from the visual organs over the facial lineaments, indicating ecstatic joy or bitter grief; but their preaching often brought tears of penitence to eyes that had never wept for sin before. Like Bruce's army at Bannockburn, these men won their victories upon their knees. But it was such preaching and praying that gave us a Christian Canada, so that the bond that binds our hearts to your great Methodiist Church is one that can never pioneer preachers sleeps in many bond that binds our hearts to your great Methodiist Church is one that can never be broken."

The convention was welcomed by the governor of the state, the mayor of the city, and received the greetings of Presi-dent McKinley and Vice-President Roosevelt. On the score of proximity, and out of deference to Canadian wishes, the next convention will probably be held at Detroit or Minneapolis. Toronto has already enjoyed the honor.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS ENCOURAGING

The Fall Prospects for Trade Are Good.

Rain Improves the Situation Across Border—The Usual Summer Lull.

Toronto, Aug. 3 .- Bradstreet's trade review, weekly summary: Trade at London has been rather quiet this week. There has been some sorting demand from country centers, and fall orders have been numerous.
Prices of leading staple goods are steady.

Business at Montreal continues of Business at Montreal continues of fair volume for the midsummer week. The sorting trade is about over, and wholesalers are busy with fall shipments. Values of payments have been fair for this season. Trade at Toronto has been rather quiet this week. The season for holidaving is still affecting the trade movement. The prospects for fall trade are very favorable, and indications will point to a large turnover. staple goods continue steady and payments are fair. Trade at Winnipeg has been fairly active the past week, drygoods, boots and shoes showing more briskness MAGEE, MCKILLOP & MURPHY-than other lines. These staples are Barristers, solicitors, notaries, etc. reaping the benefit of the crop conditions, and when the summer dullness is over it is expected that there will be renewed activity in most lines of trade. Money is rather scarce, and there are many old scores to be wiped out the coming fall, but everyone is encouraged over the prospects. Business conditions at Hamilton are encouraging. Manufacturers and jobbers are busy preparing for a large fall movement, and are busy getting out goods, orders for which were booked weeks ago. Collections have been fair. The settlement of the fishermen's strike at the Pacific coast has greatly improved the prospects for the trade with the north, and will certainly improve as a result. Labor troubles are still disturbing trade conditions in a number of Kootenay mining camps. Trade at Ottawa has been fair. The outlook for trade is promising. Values of staple goods are steady to firm. At Quebec trade in general has been fully as active as the preceding week although the sultry weather has told on some lines. Country collections are Travelers' orders indicate encouragement for fall trade.

OVER THE LINE. New York, Aug. 2.-R. G. Dun & Co. review: Continued favorable weather conditions have resulted in the saving of much late planted corn, and in the Northwest ideal weather for the spring wheat harvest has been enjoyed. As th's is the point that business in all parts of the country has been most carefully watching, the general feeling is better than a week ago. The American Woolen Company has refused to take further orders on the goods it recent ly opened, as mill capacity has been reached. Collections are prompt. Official returns of pig iron production in the first half of the new year shows a record-breaking aggregate of 7,674,-713 tons, exceeding the remarkable output of the previous year by 32.644 tons. There is less disposition to pay fancy prices for steel and iron products that has advanced by the strike, which is an evidence of general belief in early resumption of work. An unfavorable showing for the first halfyear in both exports and output of copper resulted in the first alteration in nominal price since the advance of cents eighteen months ago. Dealers in some drought-stricken districts have countermanded orders for footwear, and these cancellations are felt mainly by western makers, but as a whole the industry is in a healthy position. The local jobbing trade is remarkably active for the season and contracts for fall goods are large. Leather is quiet, shoe factories buying lightly owing to large supplies taken recently. Scarcity of beiting butts caused another advance of a cent. Liberal arrivals of hides tend to depress R. W. SHAW, M.D., L.R.C.P.; M.R.C.S., England. The people are not clamoring for infidel notions and destructive criticism, but an intelligent discussion of the old gospel of salvation. Nothing will draw like it. Having a Mind of His Own.

A man of independence of mind is one thing; "a man who has a mind of his own," as those words are ordinarily used, is quite another thing. "Hav- athlete is generally not a particularly ing a mind of his own," or "having a mind of her own," is commonly applied to a, self-willed person with little regard for the opinions or feelings of others. On the other hand, a person of independence of mind, or judgment, is a person who is readiest to consider the views and preferences of others, in order to weigh them well, and then to decide independently in view of all that is said on either side of a matter at issue. A person who is known as "having a mind of his own" is generally a disagreeable person, often spiteful and ill-natured, commonly incapable of independence of thought or action, but readily swayed by impulse, caprice, or pre-judice. A person of independence of mind is often an agreeable character, deferential towards others, and of practical efficiency in the community. Which sort do you belong to?

Scientific Child Study.

The school systems of the world are fikely to be revolutionized by certain investigations which have been made recently in Chicago. Seven thousand school children have been experimented with, as carefully and scientifically as any student is taught to experiment with chemicals in a school laboratory. Three facts of tremendous interest to every father and to every mother who have intelligence enough to appreciate the high privilege of parentage have been discov-

Girls vs. Boys.

In making their interesting experiments with the school children of Chicago, the gentlemen did the weighing on ordinary physicians' scales, and the children wore their ordinary school clothing. The average weight of the boys' clothing was five and eighttenths per cent. of the total weight of the boy. The average weight of the girls' clothing was five and five-tenths per cent. of the total weight of the girl. After the pupils had been carefully weighed, an equally exact test was made of their strength of grip. many exceptions to the rule, it has Different records were made for their been proved that the strong child and right and for their left hands. These records are so closely associated with each other-the records of weights and the records of strength of gripthat Dr. Christopher summarizes them together. The weight of the girl surpasses the weight of the boy something over a year later than the time at which her stature surpasses his. Thirdly, Professor Lombroso's theory | The boy begins to be heavier than the girl after he has begun to be taller than she is. So the girl maintains her superiority over the boy in weight for a shorter time than she keeps her superiority in height over him. The charts also show that while the girl also increases very slowly in height after they have reached the age of fourteen, the weight continues to increase rapidly until sixteen, and less rapidly thereafter. The usefulness of the machine showing the power of gripping with the two hands becomes most apparent when considered in connection with the matter of weight. The investigations all show a marked increase in the hand-power of boys commencing with the time when they cross the threshold of physical manhood. This gain continues until after they pass the public school age. In girls, as the tests prove, there is no such acceleration of muscular strength at this time. After sixteen, among girls, practically no increase in the strength of grip occurs.

As in an ordinary trial a prisoner may object to a clergyman who, he thinks, has some prejudice or grudge against him, so at a court-martial he is always asked if he is satisfied with the officers selected to try him. Peter the Great.

An old chronicler gives an interest ing account of the memorial visit of Peter the Great to England in January, 1698. King William III. appointed the Marquis of Caermarthen to act as cicerone and guide to the illustrious but eccentric visitor. A very unflattering picture of the potentate is presented the writer stating that his appearance was insignificant, his manners those of an uncouth barbarian, his speech brusque and occasionally insolent, and behavior beggared description. While staying at Deptford he amused himself by running a wheelbarrow through and through Evelyn's wellkept hedges of holly and privet, and generally destroying the grounds. His chief pleasure, after the excitements of the day were over, was to spend the night in drinking with the marquis at his house in Leicester Fields. The chronicler solemnly declares that the redoubtable emperor is to be more beautiful to the eye in drank as many as eight large bottles of sack one day after dinner. marquis, when showing him the sights of London, took him to Westminster Hall. Dairyman.]

The visit of the Hon. Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture, and Prof. Robertson to Great Britain this sum mer, is likely to result in an enlarged market for Canadian farm products. For the past two months, these gentlemen have been presenting the interests of the Canadian farmer to the people in the old land in a way that cannot but result in largely increased trade between the two countries. By addresses to the boards of trade. the provision dealers' associations, etc., in the largely populated centers of Britain; by interviews published in the leading dailies and by conferences with representative business men and parties interested in catering to the great consuming masses of the mother land, Canada, and, more especially our capabilities as producers of the finest quality of food products, attracted by it. have been brought to the attention of Progress like this is gratifying to the producer. Not only is dairying progressing but kindred agricultural interests are forging ahead at a rapid pace. All this means much to the Canadian farmer, who, in our opinion, is just at the beginning of even greater things in the line of agricultural

To a Canadian, however, interested in the welfare and development of his country, this is an attractive subject, and we are led to believe that your many readers on the other side of her borders will feel equally

CHEESE MAKING To turn to something more prac

It is rather unfortunate that this season should come at a time when the farmer has so much other work on his hands, that he is inclined to let the dairy and the milk And yet these are the conditions as we find them, and our dairymen will time, the hot, muggy weather, and for the maker. I saw the mystic rite, And heard the triune blessing fail Upon a babe in white.

Eweet was its smile, and free from guile And sin's seductive charm; It lay amid the circling folds Upon a surpliced arm

A gentle grace o'erspread its face, Soft as the tints of skies The sunset paints—like jewels set Shone out its sparkling eyes.

Like sun-kissed sand along the strand Lay tangled threads of hair; Some twined in tiny curls, and some Fell on a brow so fair. Sun a shinin', bees a hummin',
Wish sech hours had come to stay,
Want to lop down where it's shady.
Chewin' on a wisp o' hay,
Want to dream about the home folks,
Smilin' faces, things I've said;
Sort o' livin' over bygones.

'Twas there among that goodly throng I heard the sponsor's vow, nd there, too, saw God's servant sign Christ's cross upon its brow.

HOW THE ENGLISH MAKE LOVE.

A statistician claims to have learned some remarkable facts concerning the manner in which English men and women make love.

When they are about to propose, he says, Englishmen act in various ways. Thirty-six out of every hundred take the young ladies in their arms and then whisper the expected words. The others accompany their words with kisses, which the cold blooded press on the ladies' cheeks, the self-possessed on their hair and the enthusiastic on their lips. Not more than two per cent of these wooers go down on their knees when proposing. The per cent of them are extremely timid when the crucial moment comes, and, no matter how hard they try, they cannot speak in the ladies' presence. They stop and close their mouths nervously, and all their endeavors to utter words of love are utterly vain.

About the demeanor of English women on such an occasion the statistician has also much to tell us. Sixtyeight per cent of them, he says, blush when they hear an avowal of love and cover their faces with their hands. One out of a hundred is so overcome with emotion that she falls back on a sofa, and another one immediately rushes off to tell the good news to her friends Ten out of every hundred remain like statues until the words are uttered and then fall gracefully into the arms of dusty business for the men on the floor, raking out the straw.

In 1842, my father sold out, and bought 150 acres on the third concession line, near St. George. It was a kind of a bankrupt estate, and he got it at a little over $18 an acre. About twenty years after he sold it for $45. There was no "sugaring" on the third line. It was "timbered plains," lighter soil, with oak timber and oak bushes. There was eighty-five acres cleared; but we got twenty acres more "grubbed." The grubbing cost $2 75 an acre. Everything was grubbed up by the roots, in the shape of timber, up to a certain size. Over that they were merely chopped down. But no trimming of brush was included in the contract. The two men got their board also. Where the saplings were too big to be "spanned" round at the ground, they were not grubbed up, but cut down. Oh, the many days I spent as a boy of sixteen, trimming and piling brush on that new field! Nobody along the line owned more than 150 acres, and the most 100 each; and all were on a beautiful and friendly equality. Uncle Charles Kitchen, with the best house on the line; and Uncle Edward Kitchen (no relation) with the largest family of daughters; Uncle John Buckberry. with his reminiscences of "the last war"-were some of our neighbors.

In 1842 we had a hired man, John Richardson, a Galloway Scotsman, "just out," whom my father picked up in Galt as a new immigrant. He had two brothers in Ohio, and they had advised him to spend his first summer in Canada, and then come on to them. So, in the fall, my father took him (and his big trunk) on a load of wheat, to Dundas, and left him at a hotel, waiting for the stage to take him to Hamilton. We heard no more of him for twenty or twenty-five years. But it seemed a farmer came along (probably an executor) and got him advised to hire to work a widow's farm near Ancaster. The widow (with a couple of children) had the use of the farm until the oldest son was of age; and John would soon learn the outs-and-ins of Canadian farming. The sequel was, John and the widow made a match, and when the time was up, he had saved enough to buy and pay for a good farm in the neighborhood, to which the "old folks" removed when the young folks came into pessession My father sent a pressing invitation by his step-son (who told him these particulars) "to bring his wife, come and see him." But I think I never heard of his coming.

INDUSTRIES OF PAISLEY.

A Busy City in Scotland—Description of Its Manufactories.

Important Manufactures of Thread, Flour, Starch-Paisley Poets-Poverty a Scarcity.

[From Our Own Correspondent.] During my visit to the West of Scotand I had the pleasure and privilege of staying with an old friend at Paisley. It is, I suppose, well known, that Paisley is near Glasgow, and that the "Paisley bodies" are supposed to believe that Glasgow is a suburb of their important town. There is good train service between the two places, so that it is easy to get in or out at all hours of the day. Paisley is what we in Canada would call a good-sized city, as its present population is over 80,000. When I was in Glasgow a gentleman advised me to see the old abbey, and when I arrived, my friend said I ought to see the mills, which give work to so many Paisley men and women; he explained the importance of the town in some such fashion as this: Paisley corn flour feeds the world. Paisley jam sweetens it. Paisley thread holds it together. Paisley starch stiffens it. All this on the material side of life, and Paisley poetry-what shall we say has it not produced, Tannahill and other distinguished poets? There is a Tannahill festival every year, when a great gathering is held, and much local poetry sung. This is no doubt a good influence, as tending to keep alive the thought that man cannot live merely on flour, starch and thread. An amusing story is told of a banquet that was once held, when a good number were present, and when the toast of our local poet was proposed every man rose to acknowledge it. However, what with its old abbey and its new mills, its thread, marmalade and poetry, Paisley is certainly a hive of industry, and no mean city.

Besides the industries already menioned, which are world-famed, there OTHER FORMS OF COMMERCIAL ACTIVITY not so well known. There is some engineering, a little shipbuilding, "sternwheelers" for the Nile being a special line, as are also the great dredgers. The weavers of the old time are gone, and the Paisley shawls are no more. At one time a woman did not consider herself well-married unless she got a good Paisley shawl. Now these shaws are a memory and a curiosity. The thread trade came in about the time the shawl trade went out, and if alertness and enterprise has been lacking in some parts of Britain, it has not been among those who have managed the manufacture and sale of Paisley thread. In this industry the best machinery is used, and the managers are on the lookout for improvements; are willing, indeed, to accept new suggestions, and to pay for them. Hence Paisley is the center of the thread industry, and now has its branches on the other side of the Atlantic.

I was pleased to learn that there is COMPARATIVELY LITTLE POV-ERTY here, and that there need be none. There is, of course, drinking, and that there is plenty of work, and there are benevolent societies capable of min-In such a town, with temperance and the men who amassed so much wealth fine public hall given by Mr. Clark, a splendid building suitable for meetings of all kinds, and near by a small but picturesque and useful park; in the library and other places evidences are se, n of the same thoughtfulness and We have seen far too little of the generosity. Paisley possesses what some call "the Coates Cathedral," which is. I suppose, the most wonderful Bap- adventure in "The Swan Creek Bliztist church in the world. This building shows what money can do, and it also leads many people to question whether such an immense sum has been well spent. This particular church is a memorial to the head of the Coates family, the great thread manufacturer, and is certainly a remarkable thing of its kind, being built at a cost of about three - quarters of a million dollars. This sum, it may be said, would have built fifteen Baptist churches, handsome and convenient, or it would have provided a neat hospital building with a fair endowment. However, the people who had the disposal of it thought they would build a church, and although the particular congregation for which it was built was small, they have put up a fine cathedral-like building. The Lillie Hamilton French, William Edinburgh, and no pains have been McLeod Raine and W. B. McHarg. spared to make the whole structure ed by age this will be a fine ecclesiastical structure. At present there is a garish newness about it which will take some time to wear off. The day that I visited it the handsome marble pulpit -a pulpit that cost sufficient for the building of a small church-was being finished by the setting in of the beautifully carved panels, and this, with so much other costly work, stimulated reflection. One cannot settle such questions by asking, like these of old,

"might not this have been sold for much money and given to the poor?" But we cannot help thinking that a handsome gift like this will be a "white elephant" building harmonize with the genius of the Baptist community, a community that stands for simplicity and opposition to ritual? However, it is not our business to solve these questions, and we may even be thought impertinent to pose them. I spent a little time exploring the old abbey, a foundation of the Stuarts, which is now in process of restoration, but had not time to take notes of its history or study architectural details. On the whole, I felt that Paisley was indeed an interesting, and, in its own way, an important, place, a town which does not live upon its past, but keeps well up to the demands and needs of the new age. I write this brief notice on the steamship Lake Ontario as we approach Belle Isle. Though it is July, we are in cold weather, as we have seen huge icebergs this morning, and now we can see nothing, but, for though we know that ice is floating round us, we have to rely under God upon the intelligence and energy of men who know how to watch and wait, as well as work.

The August Magazines.

The August Canadian Magazine, inkeep with the season, is devoted to sport, travel and fiction. Nonie Powell writes of the birthplace of Napoleon, and the relicts and mementoes of him stored in Ajaccio, Corsica. S. Turner describes a record trip up the Matterhorn made at the close of last year's Alpine season. W. A. R. Kerr gives a history of "Golf in Canada," showing that the game was played in Montreal as early as 1824. These three articles are profusely illustrated, the latter being accompanied by eighteen photographs. C. W. Nash writes of "The Bass of Ontario," his article being embellished with three excellent drawngs. There is a fine collecton of short stories in addition to the two serials now running in the magazine. A. T. Hunter makes some pungent criticisms of our militia camps, while John A. Cooper gives utterance to some observations on the progress of the Maritime Provinces.

Scribner's Magazine for August is the annual Fiction Number, and it contains seven complete short stories, the beginning of a new serial, and special illustrated articles and poems. The color-printing is shown at its best in the exquisite work of Maxfield Parrish, who has found a very congenial subject in Quiller-Couch's story of the Cornish coast, which has to do with a classical legend. These drawings are the most remarkable in color which have yet been attempted. There is also a beautiful cover-design by Albert Herter, which it has taken ten printings to reproduce. The leading fiction is a novelette by Richard Harding Davis, entitled "A Derelict," which depicts the character of a brilliant but erratic newspaper correspondent, who writes the best story of the destrucmeans for many pain and poverty, but toin of the Spanish fleet at Santiago. It is a thrilling narrative, and the illustrations by Walter Appleton Clark l are the most effective yet achieved istering to those that are in real need. by this artist. It s fully illustrated by Burns, who is though these industries; there is a familiar with every detail of the fishing fleet.

Of all the writers who have lately become close friends of the public, none has taken a firmer hold than Ralph Connor, with his "Sky Pilot." Pilot himself, and we feel this all the more on reading the story of his last zard," which appears in the August number of Leslie's Monthly.

This Mid-Summer number is a notable one for fiction. Miss Cholmondeley, author of "Red Pottage," contributes a story in a vein which is apparently a new field for her. "Let Loose," touches with great suggestiveness upon the thin line which divides the natural world from things easy to understand. From Mr. Hornung, the magazine has secured a capital tale of the Australian bush. Its title, "The Taking of Stingaree," very suggestive of the author's skill.

Mrs. Flora Ann Steel, whose "Face of the Waters," and "Hosts of the Lord," have made a multitude of American readers, is a name not often seen in American magazines. In Leslies Monthly she tells a new story of "The Squaring of the Gods," India. which shows that she is still a perfect interpreter of the mysteries and superstitions which make India what it is. Then there are other stories by genuine anecdotes of Lincoln, which the editors have secured at first hand, harmonious and complete within and an amusing miscellany of little stories without. When it is somewhat mellow- and a very suggestive article upon the of yachting, which gives expenses facts and figures to make one think that the old Roman times have come

And larger voice on shores of lovelier

Starred heavens of vaster light and night with sleep

Tender as women's hands Outward the grave processional of hours, Each a discovered joy, a solved sur-

Days dark in bud, that, ripening, fall like flowers

Gardened in Paradise.

Outward! O throes resolved in mightier Splendor of nameless deeds, essential Pulse of the cosmic chords. Outward, where every word and deed is Outward, beyond the lies of name and

BALLADE OF OLD LOVE LETTERS.

Deep in a cedar chest they lie,

Far removed from the light of day, The ink on their pages long since dry, The soul of their longing fled away. Lines that vary from grave to gay. And yearnings tinged with the heart's

And words that promise and plead and pray-These are the strings of Love's sad lyre.

Many a year has passed them by.

Many a month from March to May. The snows have gathered on hillocks high And birds have sung in the orchards Minstrels have caroled their roundelay,

And nights grown black o'er the sunset's Yet such as these have survived decay-

These are the strings of Love's sad lyre.

All too sacred for mortal eve. Let them dream in the silence gray,

For love remains though the lovers die, Slow passing out from their house of

FIFTY TIMES THE PRICE

Such was, no doubt, the idea of Mr. William Bogie, the well-known proprietor of the popular Waverley House, Victoria Square, Montreal, when he said Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets were worth fifty times the price

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold at 50 cents a box. At Mr. Bogie's valuation this would bring the price up to $25 a box. Is this high? Does sound much? How many a man would sacrifice his whole fortune to get back a good, sound digestion. Twenty-five dollars is not an uncommon price to pay in dictors' bills in the effort to cure Dyspepsia. It is an unnecessary price, because Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold at 50 cents for Dyspepsia on earth. But there is no doubt about it that a man on being cured of Dyspepsia by a box of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets has got a full $25 worth for his 50 cents.

Mr. Bogie, of the Waverley House, thinks so. One box of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cured him. He acknowledges that the service is worth fifty times what he paid for it. "I have been troubled with Dyspepsia for many years and could get nothing to help me until I tried Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. One box sufficed to cure me. I consider Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets worth fifty times the price asked."

Saunders

McGlashan's Courtship.

Saunders McGlashan was a hand loom weaver in a rural part of Scotland. In his early youth his father died and left him with the care of his mother and the younger children. He was a gray-haired man now. The bairns were married and awa'. His old mother, on whom he had lavished the most tender care, was lying beside his father in the kirkyard. He lavished the most tender care, was lying beside his father in the kirkyard. He returned to the house alone. He sat down in his father's chair, crowned with a priceless crown of deserved blessing, but there was no voice to welcome him. "What'll I dae?" he said. "I think I'll just keep the hoose mysel."

But when winter set in his trials began. One dark morning he awoke and said: "What needs I lie gautin' here. I'll rise and get a licht." So he got his flint and steel and tinder box and set to work. The sparks from the flint and steel would not ignite the tinder. He struck vehemently, missed the flint, and drove the steel deep into his knuckles. "I said in my haste this mornin' that I wud hae a wife, and noo I say in my solemn leisure, this very day I shall have a wife." Instinct told him that when he went a-wooing his best dress should go on; and, looking in the glass, he said: "I canna gang to see the lassies wi' a beard like that." The shaving done, he rubbed his chin. saying with great simplicity: "I think that should dae for the lassies, noo." Then he turned and admired himself in the glass, for vanity is the last thing that dies in a man.

"Ye're not a very ill-looking man after a', Saunders; but it's a' very weel bein' guid lookin' and weel drest, but what woman am I gaun to seek for my wife?" He got at length a paper and pencil and wrote down with great deliberation six female names in large half-text, carefully dotting all the "i's" and stroking all the "t's" and surveyed the list as follows:

"That's a' the women I mind about."

"That's a' the women I mind about

There's no great choice among them; let me see," putting on his spectacles. "It's no wise-like gaun courtin' when a body no wise-like gaun courtin when a body needs to wear specs. Several o' them I've never spoken till, but I suppose that's of no consequence in this case. There's Mary Young; she's not very young, at ony rate. Elspeth McFarlane; but she's blind o' the reecht e'e, and it's not necessary that Saunders McGlashan should marry an imperfect woman. Kirsty Forsyth; she's been married twice already, an' surely two men's enough for ony woman. Mary Morrison, a bonnie woman; but she's gotten a confounded lang tongue, an' they say the hair upon her heid's no her ain hair. I'm certain it's her ain tongue at ony rate! Jeannie Millar, wi' plenty o' siller—not to be despised. Janet Henderson, wi' plenty o' love. I ken that she has a gude heart, for she was kind to her mither lang bedfast. Noo, which o' thae six will I go to first? I think the first four can bide awee, but the last twa Henderson, wi' plenty o -siller and love! love and siller! Eh, wadna it be grand if a person could get them baith! but that's no allowed in the Christian dispensation. The patriarchs them baith! but that's no allowed in the Christian dispensation. The patriarchs had mair liberty. Abraham wud just hae ta'en them baith, but I'm no Abraham. If I bring Janet Henderson to my fireside, and she sit at that side darnin' stockin's, and I sit at this side after my day's work, an' I lauch ower to her, an' she lauchs ower tae me, isna that heaven upon earth? A body can get on in this warld without siller, but they canno' get on in the warld without love. I'll gie Janet Henderson the first offer.'

He put on his best Sabbath Day hat and issued forth into the street. Instantly at all the windows commanding a view of the street there were female of the street there were female a view of the street there were lemaie noses flattened against the panes. Voices might be heard crying "Mither! mither! Mither! ,Come here! Come here! Look! look! There's Saunder McGlashan wi' his beard off, and his Sabbath Day claes on in the middle of the week! He's lookin' awfu' melancholy. I wonder whele dead."

Quite unconscious of the sensation he Quite unconscious of the sensation he was creating, he walked gravely on toward the house of Janet Henderson.

"Lord preserve me, Saunders, is that you? A sicht o' you's guid for sair een! Come awa into the fire. What's up wi'ye the day, Saunders? Ye're awfu' weel lickit up, ye are. I never saw you lookin' sae handsome. What is't ye're after?"

"I'm gaun about seeking a wife." "I'm gaun about seeking a wife."
"Eh, Saunders, if that's what ye want, ye needna want that very lang, I'm thinkin'."

"But ye dinna seem to understand me; it's you I want for my wife."
"Saunders McGlashan! think shame o' yoursel', makin' a fool o' a young person in that manner."

"I'm makin' nae fool o' ye, Janet. This yery day I'm determined to hae a wife. very day I'm determined to hae a wife. You are the first that I have spoken till.

I houp there's nae offense, Janet. I meant nae offense. Eh! oh! very well; if that's the way o't, it canna be helped," and, slowly unfolding the paper, which he had taken from this waistcoat pocket, "I have several other women's names markit here tae ca' upon.

He rose, thinking it was all over, and turned toward the door; but the maiden was there first, with her back to the asor, and said: "Lord preserve me! What have I done? Before the happy man knew where he was he had kissed the maiden, who was long expecting it. But the man blushed crimson, feeling guilty of a crime which he thought no woman could forgive, for it was the first kiss he had gottten or given in fifty long years, while the woman stood with a look of supreme satisfaction, and said to him:

Simple Faith.

Our Father which art in heaven .- St. Matthew, vi., 9.

I have observed a certain spiritual depression in some of my friends and acquaintance which I have tried to account for. In conversation with one of them recently I naturally referred to the other life. As an answer to my Startling Report Which Comes From a argument he simply shrugged his shoulders. That was to me the key to the mystery, an explanation of the religious undertone which is to be found in the church and out of it. A shrug of the shoulders is more significant than a brusque denial, for it means dry and the cliffs down which the that one would like to believe, but mighty waters have since plunged finds it impossible to do so.

The reason for this condition of things is quite clear. While it is evident that the only solid foundation for human happiness is a religion which covers this life with one hand and though such an occurrence would atwith the other points to a better life, it is equally evident that without a belief in another life and the renewal of our tenderest mind become dazed and the soul's it must suggest to mos, people a surquietude is disturbed. Mental unrest is the defiant enemy of peace, for it sets us adrift in an uncertain sea. Even the body, by the law of cause and effect, suffers in consequence, for the body is the servant of the mind, and unless the one sees clearly the heart of the other grows weak. have got to fully understand that health is largely a consequence of mental attitude. A buoyant thought is necessary to physical vigor. The theology of our fathers was sung in the minor key, and for good and sufficient reasons it has been abandoned by the people at large. It was always difficult to love a God who was called our Father, but whose relation to the race was not quite fatherly, and so in these latter years we have drifted away from the old theological ideas. If we had substituted other and truer ideas in their place we should have maintained our spiritual equanimity, but, having given up the we have had nothing to take its place. Mental uncertainty means depression We shall construct a better theology in time, but meanwhile we suffer from a restlessness which makes us dread the future, because we have no radical convictions concerning it.

What we need, and what we must have to enable us to become efficient, is a firm and unwavering faith in a simple religion. There is nothing useful or inspiring in doubt. When a man sees nothing ahead of him, his present drops to the level of the common-

The sailor cannot cross the ocean without keeping his eyes on the stars. What is above and beyond him is more important than what is below. The stars are his guide, his warning, his prophecy that he will reach port in safety. And it is equally true that the soul must see something beyond the horizon line of these fleeting years, before it can do its best work. A man really lives in his future more than he knows. When you draw the curtain and shut that future out, you darken his whole life and sap the strength of his motives.

The first duty of a man, therefore, is to look carefully after his religious belief, for thereon hang consequences of the utmost importance. The bright ness of the heart depends on what the mind whispers to it as worthy of belief. No one ever yet lived the noblest life on a doubt. The conscious presence of God is like a fire in the grate on a frosty day. When we leave the plain statements

Out of Sorts.

Carelessness and neglect, and ofttimes wilful disregard of Nature's laws puts the system out of sorts. Horried, neglected and irregular meals cause most of the trouble.

No wonder the stomach revolts goes on strike. It's functions are so necessary to your daily health that when it doesn't act properly your entire body suffers. Bowels clogged, liver inactive, blood impure, bad taste, coated tongue-you feel all petered outand you look it.

The result is indigestion, biliousness and constipation, followed by more serious complications if the body's natural functions are not restored at once. To all such sufferers there is a sure, safe, economical and palatable cure—that is time-tested, never-failing Abbey's Effervescent Salt. A laxative that never gripes, gentle, but certain. ARE LAKE ERIE'S Government Official.

Tradition has it that once upon a time, for a single day, since civilization obtained a footing on this coalinent the bed of the Niagara River was without cessation, stood forth naked and black and frowning and grim. The phenomenon was explained on natural grounds. The same thing may haptract more wondering visitors probably than does the great cataract now as it roars and surges and flashes in ties after death, the the sunlight from century to century. prise of hardly less degree to be informed that Lake Erie is in danger of becoming so shallow as to offer obstacles to navigation. We can conceive of the Niagara being dammed at its source, but few have ever dreamed that the vast expanse of water which furnishes it its current would ever perceptibly shrink.

That is the startling report, however, that the chief engineer of the marine department of Canada has just made. He has returned to Ottawa from a tour of inspection of the upper lakes, and states that Lake Erie is lower than was ever known to be the case before. This condition is due, he thinks, to a series of dry seasons, the drain made by the power of development works at Niagara Falls and to the fact that dredging the Tonawanda canal has made it easier for water to escape from the lake. considers it imperative that the United States government adopt remedial measures at an early date, else navigation upon its present basis will be seriously interfered with.

He offers no suggestions as to what remedies should be applied. The seasons are not likely to remain always dry, though when a body of water like this great inland sea is appreciably affected it is about the most startling commentary yet noted upon the policy of stripping the country of its rain gatherers in the forests of the northwest. Lake Erie at best is one of the shallowest of the great chain. There are three divisions in its floor, increasing its depth towards its outlet. The upper portion has a level floor with an average depth of about thirty feet. The middle portion, taking in the principal part of the lake, has a mean depth of from sixty to seventy feet. The lower portion varies from sixty to 210 feet. These measures were taken a number of years ago and are not applicable to the reduced depth that has been reported. The area of the lake is 9,600 square miles, or more by nearly a fourth than that of the state of Massachusetts. But it drains only a narrow margin of country around it and receives no rivers of importance, the Maumee being the largest on the American side. It is more than 300 feet higher than Lake Ontario. It is one of the most important factors in our system of lake navigation and furnishes business for many flourishing towns and cities. The present report concerning it may be a false tlemen in government service. harm can come from a careful investigation of the conditions, to say the least .- Boston Transcript.

Letters to the Editor.

As a body of Christian women we extend to the Old Boys' excursionists, who will sojourn among us for a few days, our hearty welcome. We would be glad to know that their visit was marked by much innocent pleasure and healthful recreation, but we regret to find that on its threshold will lie, if the official programme is carried out, a series of acts that must be an offense to the beliefs and feelings of a large majority of our citizens and a violation of the Lord's Day act of this province. We refer to the Sunday excursions, parades and concerts, and the official and civic recognition of all these indefensible infringements upon the peace and rest of our Sabbath day.

It has appeared to the on-looking public as if the aim of each successre "Old Boys'" anniversary has been import into London a larger slice of the wide-open, law-defying Saboath of American cities. For this we fear a certain element of our own opulation has been, and is, more reonsible than the city's guests. The liquor that has been on former asions given away in large quan ties to young men and mere boys is disgrace to those responsible for it, nd last year it left in its wake a urse that darkened some homes pernanently. The sale of liquor on the Sabbath, by city hotels, was in direct ontravention of the license act. After a severe illness of about two months, Smith Spence, of 153 Simcoe street, died this morning. The news will cause deep regret among a wide circle of friends in London and the surrounding country, for deceased was well known and liked. Mr. Spence was born in Yorkshire, England, about 40 years ago, his father emigrating to this country, bringing a young family, and after receiving a good common school education, he was apprenticed to Mr. Macpherson, Delaware, with whom e learned woodworking and worked for several years. He filled various positions with different firms in London and was always classed among the best workmen. For about fourteen years he had been wine clerk at the City Hotel, but had been unable to attend to his regular duties for some two months. Thinking a change would be a benefit. Mr. Spence spent a holiday at the old nomestead in Komoka, returning home last Monday, but he gradually became worse. WAR OFFICE FAILS IN PRESS BOYCOTT.

Which It Refused Reports.

London, Aug. 3 .- The contest between the war office and the Daily Mail has terminated in a victory for the paper. The war office had not only cut off the Daily Mail's South African casualty lists and other official news, but had also ordered the news agencies not to supply the Daily Mail with any official information distributed from the war office.

Thereupon the Daily Mail sued the news agencies under its contracts to compel them to deliver the news.

The war office then held back bulletins until near the hour for the morning papers to go to press. This raised a storm of protest from the provincial papers, and the war office finally capitulated and called off the boycott.

A BLACK EYE NEED CAUSE NO TROUBLE.

Have Your Barber Fix You Up Should Trouble Overtake, With Oil Paint and Powder

A traveling barber, like the old-time roving printer, is generally a very interesting fellow, one filled to overflowing with new stories, as well as the latest wrinkles in connection with his occupation, and is not slow to impart any information in his possession to a customer who looks as though he would stand for a chat while being shaved or having his locks clipped. By the way, a barber's weakness, when you thoroughly know him, seems to be that he talks too much and wastes a del of valuable time belonging to the particular friend over whom he is working; but the expert traveling barber never makes the mistake of giving a customer a tired feeling through the ceaseless wagging of his tongue, but just talks enough to please, and his stories are usually of a kind not generally known.

Meeting one of these gentlemen yesterday, who has been roving down east, the conversation drifted to various things done for customers besides cutting hair and shaving faces, and pie-crust promise from a man. the chat may be appreciated by any one who happens to receive an unexpected lump during the coming week, when the crowds on the street will be greater than usual.

MATRIMONIAL ENGAGEMENTS

Capitulates to Mr. Harmsworth's Paper to Dorothy Dix Writes Against Long Engage ments-The Young Man Should Declare His Intentions.

How much is it worth to be a man's steady company by the year? A Long Island woman has been doing some figuring on the subject, and she estimates that a thousand dollars per annum is no more than fair compensation. For twenty years she was wooed by a dilatory Romeo, who courted and courted, but never named the wedding day, and finally espoused another.

Now the forsaken Juliet asks the court to award her at the rate of a thousand dollars a year for the time she wasted her sweetness on the desert air, and when you take into consideration the wear and tear on hope, and the strain on faith and affection involved in a long engagement, to say nothing of the damage done to a sus ceptible heart, it doesn't seem a cent too much. Being engaged is a luxury one should be willing to pay for, and it's the greatest pity that when Cupid renders his little account, so many men always dispute the bill.

As a matter of fact courtship is like a great many other things in life—the more you have of it, the less it is worth. It is only when it comes in small and explosive packages that it is really of any value, and there are many signs that indicate that women are beginning to perceive that the LINKED SWEETNESS long drawn out of the long engagement isn't worth the price they have to pay for it. There is yearly an in-creasing number of breach of promise suits, and it looks as if the suitor of the future would be required, in sporting parlance, to either put up or shut

Nevertheless every thoughtful person knows that there ought to be a time limit on engagements, and that it is a wise parent who calls for a breakaway when there is no immediate prospect of the wedding being pulled

Nothing else is so trying on a girl as a long engagement. It bunches all the other woes and worries of her sex, without any of their ameliorations. She is a grass widow without alimony, a wife without a bill payer, a maiden with no further opportunities of conquest. She has made a compact with gotten that among the facts of the fate in which she has signed, sealed outbreak are: The seige of the legafate in which she has signed, sealed and delivered herself over without getting anything in return for it but a

A LONG ENGAGEMENT is the suicide of happiness for a girl, and anybody is justified in keeping her from committing that particular form of hari-kari if they can. American society, so far as men are concerned, is run too much on the open door policy anyway. We need a little more home protection. Any man with a decent coat and half-way e went on.

It is another matter where young girls are concerned, and many a young woman who started out with bright prospects of belledom of the gospel, and wherever the claims owes her collapsed social boom to the man whose attentions were without

People who take things they have no right to, and for which they never intend paying, seldom have any scruple about helping themselves to the best, and it is invariably the most attractive of the season's buds that the man who never makes good selects as the victims of his profitless devotion. He fills up her dance cards at balls, he camps perpetually on her father's parlor chairs. and he manages to establish an air of proprietorship that is none the less real because intangible. He hasn't the faintest idea in the world of marrying her himself, but he keeps every eligible man away. We often wonder why such and such a girl, whose beauty and wit render her unusually charming, is drifting into old maidenhood when her less attractive sisters are marrying well all about her, and establishing themselves in life. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the answer is because she has been silly enough, or unfortunate enough, to permit herself to be monopolized by some man whose attentions were without intentions. The managing mamma has been much derided in the public prints, but in real life the mother who knows her business is the MOST USEFUL POSSESSION any girl can have, and her first care should be to see that her daughter does not get side-tracked into one of these social pockets.

The matter is all the worse when, as is often the case, the girl is pretty and charming, but poor and of a humbler rank in society than the man whose attentions to her are without intention. Sometimes, if he is extra honorable, he will tell her that he is not a marrying man, and then he feels free to monopolize her society, careless of the fact that he is keeping other suitore away, and filling her heart and mind so full of himself that when the honest man does come who asks her hand in marriage she will have nothing but the lees of affection to give

The man whose attentions are without intention has had things his own way long enough, and if the Long Island woman can establish a precedent that a woman is entitled to compensation for the time and smiles and sympathy and conversation she spends on the man who never makes good. she will be a benefactress to her sex. THE CHINESE CRISIS

A Vindication of Their Standing in China by Protestant Missionaries.

In view of the importance of the present crisis in the history of Christian missions in China, and of the fact that our position has been seriously misunderstood and our opinions and utterances subjected to adverse criticism, it has seemed to us advisable to make the following statement.

The points in the rece... which most concern us are: 1. That missionaries are chiefly responsible for the recent uprising, and 2. That they have manifested an un-Christian spirit in suggesting the punishment of those who were guilty of the massacre of and native Christians.

these charges we would remark: 1. That when the facts concerning this uprising are rightly understood, it will be found that its causes are deeprooted and manifold. The history of foreign relations with China has along been that of hereditary prejudice on the one hand and force on the other. The government of China has never given a friendly reception to foreigners. It has

RESENTED THEIR PRESENCE and yielded grudgingly the few rights obtained from it by treaty. This long standing ill-will was deeply intensified by the political humiliation and loss of territory which followed the war with Japan. The rise of the Boxer movement in Shantung and its rapid growth there and in the adjacent province of Chihli, will be found to have amongst its immediate causes: (a) the shortness of food, almost amounting to famine, which prevailed in these regions; (b) enterprises; (c) the Chau, Port Arthur and Wei Hai wei, which were bitterly resented as unwarrantable aggressions; and (d) the projection and forcible surveying of a projection and forcible surveying of a military route through the province of exasperation.

2. The recent uprising was anti-foreign rather than anti-Christian. Na-tive Christians have suffered mainly because they have been reckoned as "secondary devils," i. e., the allies of foreigners. Moreover, the destruction of railways and the attack on railway engineers preceded the destruction of mission compounds and the slaughter of missionaries. Nor should it be fortions, the destruction of the property of the imperial customs, and the indiscriminate massacre of foreigners and of Chinese found in possession of foreign-made articles. That missionaries were residing in the interior, and were without the means to defend themselves, entirely accounts for the large number who perished. Had they been foreigners but not missionaries, the result would have been the same.

3. The CHARGE ALSO INCLUDES the statement that missionaries have shop on the revenue from this source, it would be a case of starve. But in men whose attentions are without in- of appreciation of what is good in Chinese life and thought; and on the disregard of Chinese preas a kind of free club, where they judice and etiquette. It is not of our prevail among the masses of China, a certain measure of opposition and resentment is sure to be excited. For this we do not feel called upon to apologize. But the amount of opposition thus excited has been greatly exaggerated. The conciliating effect of the work done by their hospitals, colleges, schools, and famine relief has far more than counterbalanced any prejudice raised by the preaching the gospel. In spite of all that has recently taken place, it remains true that our position in China has not been secured so much by treaty right as by the goodwill of the people And it is worthy of remark that those missionaries in the interior who did reach the coast, owe their escape in large measure to the friendliness of officials and people. 4. To the charge that missionaries have excited hostility by interfering in native litigation in the interests of anguish and the peril through which their converts in courts of justice, we need only say that even by the Chinese officials themselves this charge is rare ly preferred against the Protestant section of the missionary body. flagrant cases of prosecution, mission-

At the same of the foreigner in an unworthy cause. But interference in native litigation as in the Christian gospel as the one great such, receives no support from the agency for the mental, moral and spir principles and practice of the general itual elevation of this people, and we bodv.

II. With reference to the second point -that we have manifested an un- greater humility and with more com-Christian spirit in suggesting the plete consecration we may exercise the punishment of those who were guilty ministry to which we are called. of the massacre of foreigners and na tive Christians-we understand that the criticism applies chiefly to the message sent by the public meeting held in Shanghai in September last. 1. It should, in the first place, be borne in mind that the resolutions painless. passed at that meeting were called for by the proposal of the allies to evacuate Peking immediately after the relief of the legations. It was felt, not only by missionaries but by the whole of the foreign residents in China, that such a course would be fraught with the greatest disaster, inasmuch as it would give sanction to further law-

2. Further, it must be remembered that whilst suggesting that a satisfactory settlement "should include the adequate punishment of all who were guilty of the recent murders of foreigners and native Christians," it was left was to the powers to decide what that rema "adequate punishment" should be. moreover, when taking such measures as were necessary they were urged to "make every effort to avoid all need-less and indiscriminate slaughter of Chinese and destruction of their property." 3. By a strange misunderstanding we find that this suggestion has been interpreted as though it were animated by an UNCHRISTIAN SPIRIT OF RE-VENGE. With the loss of scores of friends and colleagues still fresh upon us, and with stories of cruel massacres reaching us day by day, it would not have been surprising had we been betrayed into

THEY PICNICKED AT SPRINGBANK

St. John's and Masonville Churches Take Advantage of the New Car Line.

The picnic of St. John's Church, London township, held at Springbank, was one of the best in the record of the parish. The Sunday school of Masonville joined forces. The day was bright, and there was a farge gathering of young and old. Special cars were provided, and these conveyed the party direct from Brough's bridge to Springbank, a distance of over six miles. It was a pretty inauguration of the new street railway extension northward. A noon and evening meal was provided from the larders of good housekeepers, and a variety of games and sports, boating on the river and other pastimes were indulged in. A number of city friends joined the party in the afternoon. The following is a list of races, and the winners were fittingly rewarded with prizes: Boys' race, under 6 years-1, Frank Simpson; 2, Grey McNeil; 3, Ewart McNeil.

Girls, under 6 years-1, Irene Taylor; 2, Violet Shoebottom; 3, Ella Taylor. Boys, 6 to 9 years—1, John Simpson; 2, George Lance; 3, Roy Barrell. Girls, 6 to 9 years—1 Annie Stoneman; 2, Marjory Stoneman; 3, Kathleen Shoebottom.

"I should much prefer your going, brother mine," she said, gaily. "If I posibly count make the effort, I would go too; but it would be a bore if I were to faint en route, and you and Andree to faint en route, and you and and you altered tooks?"

raptures? he wondered. Would she give him the greeting for which he yearned so intensely, or would she receive him with that cold indifference which had marked their intercourse during the last few months they had been together? Passionately as he longed to see her, to hold her in his arms, to press his lips to hers, to feel the touch of her little hands again, he felt that, rather than be greeted coldly and received with indifference. coldly and received with indifference, would rather not see her again-uld rather that she should think him would rather that she should think him dead than that she should regret that he lived.

For a moment or two he hesitated; but the wish was too strong within him not to yield. It was but the project an hour to yield. It was but the project of the the wish was too strong within him not to yield. It was but ten o'clock; an hour and a half yet to walt for the train.

"But it is raining, Douglas," she said.

I'll tell you what I will do: I'll do down to the station and look at the trains arriving. I must have something to get the extra steam off, Kathie; but I won't until I see you really resting."

She promised to obey him if he would let her stay and see him go; so Douglas downed his uister and returned to give lister and returned to give Ler a good-night kiss.

She stood on tiptoe to receive the embrace and to fasten his coat, which she buttoned up to his chin.
"Give my dear love to Andree, and tell regive my dear love to Andree, and tell her that I am longing to see her beautiful face again. Oh, Dougtas!" and the girl hid her fair face for a moment on the shoulder of his rough ulster, as she pictured what the meeting would be, "how happy she will be to see you begain."

Douglas Lancaster kissed her tenderly, and tried to give her back the smile; bu his face was so sad and wistful that Kathleen, as she stood at the window and watched his tall figure as he cross-ed the street and disappeared, felt her the street and disappeared, felt her limagine that you ought to gratify me?"

Andree hesitated a little, then she liftdifference. "Surely Andree cannot have ased to love him. Impossible, when she lits honesty." loved him so dearly in the old days; and he is worthy of her love." One or two minutes' quick walking brought Douglas Lancaster to the Great Western station, which, late as it was, was still sufficiently full of life and bustle to be grateful to his excited nerves and restless condition. And he began again the restless pacing up and down, which was pleasanter now that he had so much more space for his peregina-

The six months' privations and suffering of mind and body which he had undergone had altered him greatly. It would have been difficult to anyone, except to those who had known and loved him well, to recognize in the gaunt, haggard, lined face, the handsome young haggard, med tace, the had some sofficer who had won Andres Marchmont's heart but two years before. Still, he was quite handsome enough to win many an approving glance from fair young lady travelers, many of whom, with their respective beaux or chaperones, were returning to their suburban homes after an evening's dissipation in London.

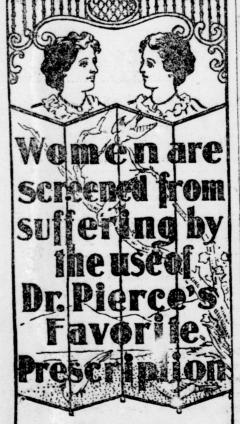

The late trains came in rapidly, and Douglas watched the passengers as they alighted, with an absent, preoccupied turn, a familiar voice near him made him A gentleman, who stood with his back turned to Douglas, was giving some orders to a servant who stood near him with a portmanteau in his hand,

"I will not forget, Sir Hugh," the man replied, touching his hat as he went away to execute the orders he had received; and his master, turning round, came face to face with Douglas Lancaster. For a moment they stood facing each other ni silence; then there was a simultaneous exclamation, and two hands were stretched out, and met in the close, warm pressure of friends who had provwarm pressure of friends who had proved each other "leal and true."

"Douglas-my dear Douglas!" Then another exclamation came from both at once:
"Andree; she is with you?" "Andree; she is with you?"
And both men turned pale with an unspoken dread as their eyes met.
"Come out of this crowd," said Hugh Marchmont, passing his hand through his friend's arm and drawing him out on to the platform; "we cannot talk here. How ill you are looking, Douglas," he redded solicitously. "Do you mean that added, solicitously. "Do you mean that you, too, have no tidings of Andree—do not know where she is?" not know where she is?"
"In pity explain yourself," said Lancaster, in a hoarse voice. "Where is she?
Is she not at Ilchemster?"
"She left Ilchemster three or four months ago. We can find no clew as to her whereabouts since, and hoped almost against hope that she had made her way It was after Jem Burns' trial and my father's death."

"You are speaking in enigmas," said Douglas, almost fiercely. "I know nothing of all this, Hugh," and his voice faltered, and grew weak with the suspense and anxiety. "Do not trifle with me; I cannot bear it."

IT CURES RREGULARITY TI MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG SICKWOMEN WELL

"My dear old fellow," said Hugh, gently, "I would not give you a moment's pain willingly. Where are you staying? At the Great Western? Come there, then, and I will tell you all I know."

But the other's feverish impatience was too great to allow him to wait, and they went into the waiting-room at the station together. It was, fortunately, almost empty, and Douglas sank down on one of the heavy, leather-covered seats with an expression of pain contracting his face. "My dear old fellow," said Hugh, gent-

"Captivity and short commons," Doug-las said, trying to laugh. "I'm all right, Hugh; go on."

And then, in that waiting-room, the sight of which long afterwards gave both men a sickening sensation of the horror of those few moments' conversation, of those few moments' conversation, Hugh told the bereaved husband all the sad events of the past few months—the trial, his father's death, Andree's disappearance.

"I have made every possible search," Douglas rose, an awful look of anguish

Douglas rose, an awful look of anguish upon his face.

"She is dead!" he said, feebly, in a hollow voice, as he tried to move forward. "I shall never see my darling again; she is dead!"

He staggered as he rose, and Hugh threw his arms round him, his own eyes tall of feeward the misery depicted on full of tears at the misery depicted on his friend's face. They moved forward a few steps, while Hugh felt that the weight grew heavier as his friend's strength left him.

His head sank back, and a gentleman from the other end of the room came hastily forward to Hugh's assistance. They managed to get him to a sofa. He fell heavily back, his eyes closed, and a thin red stream came oozing slowly from between his lips,

CHAPTER XXI. Mr. Fenwick's face flushed with pleasure at Andree's unexpected entrance and offer; but he was too generous and too inselfish to accept it without knowing the motives which prompted it.

"Do you really mean what you say, my child?" he said. "Will it really give you pleasure to grant my request, or is it merely from a feeling, prompted solely by your grateful heart, which makes you imagine that you ought to gratify me

"Mr. Fenwick," she said, bravely, in a low voice, "I had, when I refused you, but one motive for so doing. Your picture is for exhibition, and I have reasons, strong and powerful reasons, for not wishing, for not letting—" She faltered wishing, for not letting—" She faltered here, but went on again in a moment: "It may be—I hope it is—that anyone who knew me before I came here, before you received me with such true charity please let me go on—may think me dead, and I am thankful that they should do so; it is better both for me and for them. My very love seems to bring a curse with it. If the likeness should be recog-nized will you give me a solemn prom-ise not to betray me to anyone who might ask for me? Will you," she conmight ask for me? Will you, she continued, eagerly, "give me your word that no matter what claim they might tell you that they had upon me, you will not tell them that I am living, that I sat for you, but let them think, if they will, that it is a fancy of your own merely?"

Mr. Fenwick hesitated. Too frank for any concealment himself the idea of any any concealment himself, the idea of any ception was repugnant to him.
'You think me wrong," she said, quickly, the tears filling her eyes-tears were very near now with proud, self-contained Andree Lancaster. "Ah! do not—do not take your regard from me. Your friendalighted, with an absent, preoccupied gaze, which saw none of them, although he stood there apparently one of the most attentive of spectators.

Suddenly waking from his absorption, and glancing at the clock, he became aware that it only wanted a few minutes to the departure of his train, and he went off to get his ticket. As he waited his proposed in the control of the control your kindness. You will let me, Mr. Fenwick? Pearl, plead for me!"
"There is no need, dear child," said the painter, taking the little hands in his. "All shall be as you wish. Nay, it is I who owe you thanks now, Andree," and he bent towards her with an earnest affection on the kindly face. "I wish so much we could make your life a brighter one! you are so young still." Her lips quivered, and the large tears

Her lips quivered, and the large tears welling we in her sweet dark eyes rolled slowly down her cheeks.

"I do not deserve a brighter one," she said, sadly. "If you could help me I would tell you frankly. There is no one living I would trust more freely. No, dear friends, do not urge me. My burden must be borne alone, and the belief that my bearing it thus makes it easier for my bearing it thus makes it easier for others, helps to make it lighter."

She stooped her head, touched her lips lightly to the strong hand that held her trembling fingers, and escaped from the studio, rushing away to hide in the privacy of her own room the passion of tears his tender sympathy had aroused.

After this day "Out in the Cold" progressed steadily, and, if not rapidly, it may have been because Mr. Fenwick loved his work too well to hurry its completion.

These sittings were, on the whole, pleasant times to Andree. The artist was a traveled and intellectual man. He talked well: and when he saw that he could interest her, and lighten a little of the heavy cloud on her brow, he brought forth all the stores he had acquired dur-ing a working and changeful life, and pread out their varied treasures for the amusement. Fond of society and change themselves, the painter and his sister were grieved and sorry for the entire seclusion which Andree almost insisted upon for herself. he never left the house except daily walk, necessary for the preserva-tion of her health, and then the close veil she kept always over her face defied recognition. If they had company she ver joined them; and when the Fen-cks saw the pain it gave her they desisted from all entreaty, and even discontinued to a certain extent the pleas-ant literary and artistic reunions which had make their quiet, uneventful lives gay and sociable.

But in the spring, just before his picture was finished, a great shadow fell upon the peaceful home. More than once as he painted Andree had noticed that Mr. Fenwick passed his hand occasional-ly over his temples, as if in pain, and that lately the kind face had grown very grave and sad. She had noticed, too, long fits of abstraction and melancholy never indulged in before his sister, who never indulged in before his sister, who seemed to notice nothing wrong; but Andree could feel that there was something troubling him which he had difficulty in concealing, and which one sad day could be concealed no longer.

She had gone into the studio, with her usual soft, noiseless movement, and found Mr. Fenwick sitting with his arms crossed on the back of another chair, and his face buried on them.

He looked up hastily as she entered, and she saw tears on his face.

Andree sprang to his side, all her quiet manner gone now.

Andree sprang to his side, all her quiet manner gone now.

"What is it?" she said, entreatingly.

"Mr. Fenwick, dear, kind friend, what is troubling you?"

And then he told her, sadly indeed, but with a holy and beautiful resignation which sprang from his earnest, unfailing faith in the wisdom of Him "who doeth all things well," the trouble which had come upon him. His eyesight was going. He was almost blind; and the girl, as she listened, burst into tears of passionate listened, burst into tears of passionate BUFFALO FORFEITED A GAME. At Toronto yesterday's game was forfeited to Toronto by Umpire Sharkey, Buffalo refusing to play with Sharkey as umpire. Sharkey is a local umpire and had been requested by Manager Barrow to umpire, as the Toronto club would not allow Warner to officiate again, owing to his alleged partiality and incompetence. Warner received instructions from President Powers to officiate, and was in the stand, but made no attempt to get on the grounds to umpire. fried Dr. Pitcher As a Last Resert.

A Toronto Lady's Experience With This Famous Specialist's Backache Kidney Tablets.

For many years in the hospitals of Detreit and as professor of Genito-Urin-ary Diseases in Michigan College of Medicine of that city, Dr. Zina Pitcher gave careful thought and consideration to diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and urinary system.

So prefoundedly impressed was he with the fact that many thousands of people suffer from some form of kidney derangement, who were unable to avail themselves of the services of a specialist, that he decided to give to humanity at large his famous prescription for Kidney Diseases, under the name of Dr. Pritcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. It is of these tablets that Mrs. May

Goddard, 332 Adelaide street west, Toronto, speaks in the following terms:—
"After enjoying the most perfect health for many years it was a sore trial for me to realize that my health was failing. I had, in the first place, acute pains in the small of my back, and was losing flesh rapidly. Then other complications arose, which so weakened me that it was only with the greatest amount of determination that I could attend to my work. I tried a number of remedies and consulted several physicians without obtaining more than temporary relief, and as a last resort I thought I would try Dr. Pitcher's Back-ache Kidney Tablets. Their beneficial action was almost instantaneous, and the results highly gratifying. The pain in my back disappeared in a short time, and my general health improved greatly. I am now feeling fine, and am glad to have this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of so valuable a remedy.

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50 cents a box at all druggists or sent by mail, postage free.

> DIED AT HESPELER. The Hespeler correspondent of the Galt Reporter says: "Death removed another pioneer of this section last night at 11 o'clock, in the person of Sarah E. Musser, relict of the late Charles Richter, who passed away into her eternal rest after an illness of only four days' duration. The deceased last visited Hespeler on Friday, when she called in several of her old friends here. Later she was stricken with an attack of peritonitis and when it was seen that the end was approaching the children were notified. Deceased retained consciousness to within a couple of hours of her death, which came peacefully. The deceased died on the farm where she spent most of her life. She was a God-fearing woman, and possessed many fine qualities of heart. During her life she identified herself with the Mennonite faith. Since the death of her husband, which occurred about a year ago, her daughter, Mrs. G. Langton, and children, of Bay City, Mich., have been living on the homestead with her. Don't Spoil Your Breakfast

In the Hot Weather.

Many a breakfast is spoiled at this season and pleasures marred, by commencing the morning meal with oatmeal and other starchy grain foods that tax digestive strength and irritate the stomach. Malt Breakfast Food is the ideal summer breakfast dish. It is predigested, therefore requires no digestive exertion on the part or old or young. Malt Breakfast Food is delicious in flavor, as well as the most appetizing and most nutritious of all grain foods. It keeps the blood cool and pure and the clear. Ask your grocer for a packet, you will certainly relish it. BASEBALL GAME

The first will be played Monday morning at 10:30, and a 15c admission, stand and all, will be charged. Keen interest is being taken in the games especially among the large number of Rocket followers. The play is bound to be fast and interesting. The line up is:
