Diverse Comment on the British Cabinet Council.

Contradictory Reports Regarding the Alleged Death of the Czar-The Royal Yorks Scared by a Crank.

Getting There.

BUDA PESTH, Oct. 5 .- The Upper House of the Hungarian Diet today adopted by a majority of 3 the bill granting liberty of worship to all religious beliefs.

Good News from Hankow, London, Oct. 6. - The British Missionary Society has received a telegram from the missionary station at Hankow saying: "We are all well and apprehend no danger." The Suez Canal. CAIRO, Oct. 5 .- The Egyptian Gazette publishes a rumor that the Suez Canal

Company has applied to France for protection of its property in Egypt. It is stated that this application was made for the alleged reason that the property is endangered by the troubles which have arisen from the strikes among the laborers and other employes of the company. Three Bridal Knots Necessary.

Paris, Oct. 5 .- The civil marriage of Miss Elizabeth Sperry, of San Francisco, to Prince Andre Ponatowsky took place in the office of the mayor at Passy this morning, the mayor performing the ceremony. The bride was attired in dark green silk. The religious ceremony will take place to-morrow in the Catholic Church of St. Pierre de Challiot, and afterwards in the American Protestant Church of Holy

The Trouble in Delagoa Bay. LISBON, Oct. 5 .- The Government is informed that the situation of affairs at Lorenzo Marquez, Delagoa Bay, is growing worse. Chief Matupas' men offered to aid the Portuguese against the Kaffirs, and the garrison has great hopes as to the result of this assistance. The chief's men arrived at Lorenzo Marquez yesterday and were supplied with arms from the Portuguese arsenal. This morning they all ran away, taking their rifles, etc., with them. St. Dominicans Discontented.

LONDON, Oct. 5 .- Sir Robert Hamilton, who was sent to the island of St. Dominica, West Indies, as commissioner to inquire into the affairs of that island, has made a report in which the population, numbering 30,000, are greatly discontented because the prevailing poverty is due, it is alleged, to defective administration. The poorer classes are too heavily taxed. The report suggests a number of reforms, among which is the withdrawal of Dominica from the Leeward Islands Federation and placing it under the control of a lieutenantgovernor.

Startled by a Crank.

LONDON, Oct. 5 .- As the Duke and Duchess of York were proceeding in a carriage at Leeds this afternoon to the Yorkshire College, at the opening ceremonies of which they were to be present, a man rushed from the crowd which lined the route to the college buildings and attempted to force his way to the side of the carriage. One of a detachment of lancers, which was acting as an escort to the Duke and Duchess, struck the man repeatedly with his sword and drove him back to the crowd, where he was taken in charge by the police. The prisoner proved to be an imhecile, and it is believed that his action in rushing towards the carriage was prompted solely by a desire to shake hands with the Duke and Duchess.

The Czar Probably Dying or Dead. London, Oct. 5.—The Russian embassy here have no news to warrant the rumors of the Czar's death. His majesty was at Yolta in the Crimea yesterday, and reports from there stated his condition was unchanged. The London Stock Exchange and the Berlin and Paris Bourses show much weakness this morning in consequence of the circulated rumor that the Czar was dying. Denials of these reports have, however, been made. In consequence of these reports, however, the London stock market was slightly unsettled at the close, BERLIN, Oct. 5. - The Lokalonzeiger publishes a dispatch from St. Petersburg which says the Czar suffered a renewed attack of apoplexy last evening. The Russian embassy in Berlin have heard nothing to confirm this statement.

QUEBEC, Oct. 5 .- A private dispatch received by a broker of this city announces the death of the Czar of Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5 .- Nothing official concerning the condition of the Czar has been published in this city in the last four days. The newspapers are forbidden to publish any unofficial reports, and the members of the Imperial family and household are forbidden to hold any communication on the subject.

The Oriental Racket.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 5 .- Owing to palace intrigues, the situation is so alarming that all foreigners, women and children, including the families of members of the customs service, have been ordered to leave forth-

The Shanghai correspondent of the News says a report is in circulation there that the Japanese intend to establish a blockade of the treaty ports of Chin Foo and Tien Tsin. Chinese merchants at Shanghai are canceling their freight contracts. The missionary at Loa Hang has fied to New Chwang. The country is in a very unsettled state, and soldiers are much peace of Europe may be threatened, for France, Russia and the United States would in such case certainly intervene.

TIEN TSIN, Oct. 5 .- According to reports received here the Province of Mongolia is in a state of rebellion and troops have been dispatched from Pekin to subdue the revolt. There is also said to be grave trouble in the Pekin palace, but full information is a lesser danger. lacking. Every precaution is being taken by the residents of Tien Tsin against a threatened attack by the natives.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 5 .- An appeal is to be made to the German Government by German residents in Japan against the proposed revision of the German-Japanese treaty regarding German consular agency. Japan wants the treaty revised on the lines of the treaty between Japan and England, which after a stated period, abolishes the British consular courts. The Germans oppose the abolition of the courts.

J. S. Van Buren, agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at Hong Kong, one of the passengers on the steamer Gaelic, which arrived at San Francisco on Friday, says that it is impossible to get trustworthy news of the war at any place in the east. forces, All Chinese news comes by way of Shanghai, and as the Government controls the wires all information concerning engagements between the contending forces is garbled to suit the Chinese authorities. The news obtainable at Yokohama is no more satisfactory, as it is modified or exaggerated to suit the ideas of the Japanese | The object of M. Zola's visit is said to be authorities.

The Times will publish tomorrow a dispatch from Shanghai denying that the five warships reported as having been sighted off Chusan were Japanese vessels. The Morning Post insists that it is impossible to allow Japan to dictate terms to China without consulting the European powers. For the sake of the world's peace. it says, Russia, Germany, France and Great Britain must intervene.

A dispatch to the Post from Shanghai says that several Japanese warships are patrolling the sea near Wei Hai Wei with the object of preventing the Chinese from leaving Wei Hai Wei or Port Arthur. The warships approach the coast at nightfall and steam away again at dawn.

The Japanese Prince, Yamashina, who was recently recalled to Japan to assume an important command, is a passenger on the Hamburg-American steamer Augusta Victoria, which sailed from Southampton today for New York. Prince Yamashina has been serving in the German navy.

The Central News correspondent in Shanghai telegraphs: Seventy Japanese transports passed the northeast promontory near Chee Foo on the morning of Oct. 2.

CHINESE ON THE RUN. New Chwang reports are to the effect that the Chinese are in full retreat from Moukden. Ten thousand armed Coreans are receiving Japanese pay.

Comment on the Cabinet Meeting. LONDON, Oct. 5 .- The Daily News denies that Sir Wm. Harcourt was summoned to return to London to attend the council, on the contrary he was informed that he Quoting John Russell Young's statement iu reference to the Corean war the News says: "The Cabinet had naturally to discuss the proper steps to take in the emergency of a Japanese rush over Chinese ports, such as Mr. Young anticipates. We are far from anticipating any Russian interference in the quarrel, but the possibility has to be considered, and it was probably taken account of at yesterday's Cabinet meeting. The Manchester Guardian today says that English diplomats in Japan cabled to London on Sept. 30 the destination of the secret expedition which left Hiroshima last week, and also described the policy that the Japanese Government would adopt in the event of the collapse of China. Russia and England have, however, decided that the settlement of the trouble between China and Japan shall be an international and not merely a Japanese affair, and this fact has tended to make Japan angry, Germany and France, the Guardian says concurring in the plan to make the settlement of an international conference. The policy of the United States Government is uncertain. It has been the tendency of the United States Government for the past twenty years to questions without regard to other powers. Japan, in her present mood, will pay no heed to any representations made by the powers until they shall be accompanied by tangible evidence of the intention to back it up. It was to authorize this, according says that after a showing of force Japan would be told that England desired that an

Europe would immediately call an international conference. The St. James' Gazette declares that the interests of England, France and Russia are closely involved in the possible breaking up of the Chinese Empire, and it is becan no longer regard the progress of events in the east with indifference. The Globe ridicules the idea that the council was summoned merely for the purpose of sending warships to protect the lives and property of British residents in China, and expresses the opinion that the Manchester Guardian's article of today gives the real reason for the meeting of the

The Gaulois, commenting on the British Cabinet Council, asks whether the intervention of England in Corean difficulties might not constitute a repetition of the coupe of 1878, which enabled Admiral Lord John Hay to take possession of the Island of Cyprus.

A special cable from London says: Threatened eventualities in the cast is the official explanation of the summoning of the emergency Cabinet council which Wednesday plunged all Europe into a veritable war panic. This explanation will not find ready screptance in the light of such knowledge of the eastern situation as the public possesses. An order issued by the lords of the admiralty will be regarded of vastly greater importance and significance than the announcement which came from official hands after the adjournment of the council. This decree transfers at once the headquarters of the channel fleet from Portsmouth to Gibraltar. In other words, the strongest section of the British navy that designed for the home defense-is suddenly ordered practically to reinforce the British squadron in the Mediterranean. There are so many explanations possible of this action that in the absence of all definite knowledge it is, perhaps, useless to specu-

Today's strange naval order tends to confirm this statement for although in the event of hostilities between France and England the former power would probably strike the earliest blow against the British Mediterranean fleet yet Great Britain would never leave her own coast unprotected in order to meet

> There is not even a hint as yet as to the sudden and startling tidings which caused the hasty summons of the Cabinet. It was definitely ascertained yesterday that at 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning there was nothing in sight to call the Cabinet together until the meeting in the ordinary course six weeks hence. Five hours later the most urgent messages were sent to absent Ministers in all directions.

No Pay, No Fight. LONDON, Oct 6 .- It is reported in Shanghai that 2,000 soldiers of Li Hung Chang's crack corps, now in Corea, have deserted in consequence of their having received no pay for some time. It is believed that the deserters have joined the enemy's Zola and the Pops.

ROME, Oct. 6 .- It is announced that Emile Zola, the French author, one of whose works, "Lourdes." has been placed on the Index Librarum Prohibitorum by the Vatican, will arrive in this city on Oct. 28. to obtain audience of the Pope, but in this the Vatican officials declare he will not suc-

The Order in Council Signed by the Acting Governor.

THE ORDER IN COUNCIL SIG NED. OTTAWA, Oct. 5 .- Sir Henry Strong, Chief Justice of Canada, who is Acting Deputy Governor-General, signed an order in council today passed at yesterday's meeting of the Cabinet, appointing Mr. W. R, Meredith Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for Ontario. The appointment of Mr. Meredith, therefore, dates from today, and his salary of $6,000 a year has begun. It will take a couple of days or more before the commission is prepared and engrossed and sent to Mr. Meredith. Meantime, however, he can act as a judge. but it is not likely that he will be sworn in before his commission reaches him. There is, however, nothing to prevent him being sworn in and taking his seat on the bench at once.

The talk among Conservatives here is that Mr. J. P. Whitney, of Dundas, will be leader of the party in place of Mr. Mere-

ADIEU TO TORONTO CORPORATION. TORONTO, Oct. 5 - Mayor Kennedy received the following letter from Mr. Meredith this morning: "Sir,-I have been offered and have accepted the position of chief justice of the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice, and have, therefore, to tender you my resignation of the office of corporation counsel and head of the city's legal department. In thus severing my official connection with the city, permit me to express to you and the members of the city council my sincere thanks for the unvarying kindness and consideration which I have received at your hands and theirs during the brief period for which I have occupied the position in the service of the city which I now sever. Yours faithfully, "W. R. MEREDITH."

TOO LATE.

Father and Daughter Separated for Twenty-Five Years-She Finds Him Dead.

LUCKNOW, Oct. 6 .- About 25 years ago Stephen Howard was a married man in the State of Iowa. He had two children, a boy and a girl. The latter was only three months old when her mother died, leaving Howard a widower with two young children. They were given out for adoption. strike out its own line on eastern The girl went with a middle-aged couple named Reedy, who had no children of their own. The whereabouts of the boy is unknown. > Slau ghtering Deer by Hundreds. ESCANABA, Mich., Oct. 6 .- The annual claughter of deer in the upper peninsula has begun. Yesterday over 250 carcasses were shipped through here for Chicago, Detroit and other cities. This killing of the animals is in direct violation of the Collision at Charlottetown.

CHARLOTTHTOWN, P. E. I., Oct. 6 .- Last night as the steamer Florida, Plant Line, was leaving the dock one of her hawsers broke and she ran into the ferry steamer Elfin, carrying away the latter's stern nearly up to the cabin doors. The Elfin had to be run aground to prevent her sink. ing. The Florida, apparently unhurt, started to put to sea immediately after the

ONDON AND ENVIRONS

-Chestnuts are again on the market. -Dr. Wm. Woods, a graduate of the Western University here, is in town. -There was considerable excursion business to Detroit and Chicago on the Grand Trunk today. -The firemen were called this afternoon to extinguish a small blaze at the house of Henry Burdick, caretaker of Queen's Park. -Mrs. Annie Lees was pronounced insane by Judge Edward Elliott this morning, and was committed to jail awaiting removal to the asylum.

-Mr. Walter B. Laidlaw, student at law with Mr. T. H. Luscombe, barrister, of this city, has gone to Toronto to attend the law school in Osgoode Hali.

-The night schools opened last evening. W. H. May, in the Colborne street school, had a class of 30, and Mr. Bryant, in the King street school, had considerably more.

-The Bishop of Huron has been the guest of his brother, Rev. A. H. Bald-win, Toronto. Miss Baldwin, daughter of the bishop, has been visiting Mr. J. D. Noble at Petrolea.

-The collections at the London custom house for the month ending Sept. 30 showed a big falling off compared with the same month last year. In 1893 they amounted to $50,902 CC, while this year only $40,893 70 was taken in-a decrease of $10,008 06.

-An order was made by Judge William Elliot this morning for the examination next week of Henry McBean and Michael O'Brien. Both we employes of McBean Bros., grocers, who recently assigned, and it is expected they will throw some light on the failure.

-As the bylaw appointing Wm, R. Meredith city solicitor of London has never been rescinded, it will be necessary for the late leader of the Opposition to include in his list of resignations one withdrawing from that position. The job has been re tained in the family, however, and Mr. T. G. Meredith has nominally filled the posi-

-Farmers returning home on Saturdays by way of Blackfriars' bridge have lately lost a number of articles from their rigs. A gang of small London West youths hide behind the steps at the head of Lichfield street, and as soon as a rig reaches the bridge they help themselves to whatever is within reach. The youths have a special liking for fruit.

-H. W. Hyam, the jewelry auctioneer who was committed for trial on a charge of misrepresenting the value of a watch sold during fair week to Alfred Christian, came before Judge Edward Elliott today. The evidence of the crown was taken and Hyam was discharged, Judge Elliott holding was not sufficient to convict. J. B. Mc-Killop for prosecution, R. K. Cowan for defense.

-David Young was brought to jail this afternoon from con. 8, London township, on a charge of insanity. He returned from the Western States a short time ago, and during the past few days showed signs of mental derangement. This morning he became to violent that it required the combined strength of four men to hold him in a rig. Squire Smyth remanded Young for a week.

-Word has been received of the death of Mr. T. J. McCormick, of Sydney, Australia. He was a brother of Mrs. A. Porte and William and Andrew McCormick. Deceased was 62 years of rge, and was born in this city. He was twice married, but leaves no children. It is eighteen years since Mr. McCormick last visited London He here a good position in Australia, and died after a painful illness of eighteen months. Heart failure was the affection.

-The Ailsa Craig Banner in this week's issue has the following to say in connection with the report of a concert in that town: 'Mr. Partridge's club swinging was justly encored, and the slack wire performances of Mr. Stevens were fully up to the professional standard, while the horizontal bar and other athletic performances of Parridge brothers and Messrs. Stevens and Williamson were enjoyed by old and young, rich and poor, and were applauded to the echo." The performers were young Londoners. -An Indian with the historic name of Doxtator was charged with drunkenness at this morning's Police Court. He denied the allegation and evinced a desire to go directly home. The policeman who made the arrest was not there to press the charge, and Mr. Parke let the prisoner go, saying as he did so that he did not know why he was arrested. Daniel Young was found looking for a place to lay his head, and was taken to the police station. He was a patient in the asylum for eight months and afterwards, and until five day ago, he was sick in the hospital. He wa remanded for a week. A middle-aged woman named Mary McMullen had just been in half an bour when the court met. She hails from Toronto and was not in a fit state to appear before the magistrate. She, too, was remanded for a week.

-At the Grand next Tuesday the distinguished young actor, Robert Mantell, will appear as the Del Franchi brothers in a magnificent scenic and spectacular revival of Alexander Dumas's world-renowned heroic drama, "The Corsican Brothers." The brilliant success Mr. Mantell has achieved elsewhere by his impersonation of these mystically united beroes assures a performance of more than ordinary merit, His supporting company, which includes many well-known and competent artists, is also warmly commended, while the entire production is praised for its elaborateness a to scenery, costumes, properties, mechanical effects and other stage accessories. This revival of "The Corsican Brothers" is admitted to be the finest ever given of this play in America, and never before has it been so popular with theater-goers. A Falling Market.

The Saturday market continues to be phenomenally large, and more than one farmer grumbles at the amount of space occupied by the hay and straw dealers. "Why don't they have a distinct market of their own like the wood dealers?" one asked this morning. "Then this crowding of wagons in the streets adjoining the market will be done away with." Garden produce constituted the bulk of receipts. Potatoes were lower at 60 to 70 cents a bag. Lamb also dropped to 5½ to 6½ cents, and eggs dropped I cent. The latter sold at 13 and 14 cents by the basket, and 15 to 17 cents by the dozen. Oats accompanied the drep and sold at 78 and 80 cents. Wheat varied in price from 85 to 90 cents. Dressed hogs were lower in price and brought $6 a design work at marvelous prices, and they hundredweight. Butter sold at 18 to 20 able to resist the official source that no issues between do it right. Greenway, florist. 'Phone cents by the crock and 20 to 27 cents for

To the formal opening of Fall and Winter Millinery, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. It will be the best chance to see the newest styles in Hats and Bonnets. London, Paris and New York have paid tribute to make the occasion a marked success, and our Miss Genge with her corps of assistants stand ready to turn their best ideas to your betterment. There are prevailing shapes, but beyond that your own taste is fashion's law. Every conceivable color and shape intermingle in such pleasing confusion as to almost bewilder the evesight. Flowers, Ribbons, Velvets, Jets and Braids enter largely into the make-up of Parisian novelties. Unusual skill and care have been expended upon the collection of shapes and materials for making to order any style of hat you say. The entire Millinery Section is full of magnets. You recall the displays of last year and the year before. Nothing to equal them had ever appeared in this city; and yet they don't begin to compare with what is to bewhat is already. It's something better than the average show of autumn finery. Miss it, and you are the loser. There's no tinge of exaggeration in the statement that it's the finest display, the most attractive in every way that you have ever seen.

A Dunwich Young Lady Assaulted on the Public Highway.

The village of Dutton has been consider ably agitated for the past couple of days because of the doings of a local "Jack the Hugger." On Monday evening four young ladies were accessed and attacked on the streets of the village, but all managed to escape without serious difficulty. Two of the young ladies, however, who were (Laughter.) together, had to fight off the man Q.—What before they escaped. Later the same night a man was seen looking in a window at the residence of Mr. George Balkwell. Mr. Balkwell gave chase, but the fellow escaped. Excitement reached a climax Thursday night, when it was learned that a young lady had been assaulted in Dunwich, that the culprit had been arrested, and that he was the man who had assumed the role of Jack the Hugger in the village.

Thursday efternoon Miss Annie Mc-Kechnie, a young lady 18 years of age, who lives with her mother two miles north of Campbellton, went to the village for the mail. When returning, and about half a mile from her home, she saw a man approaching. The man, on meeting her, struck her a blow on the side of the head and attempted to assault her. The young lady fought desperately and succeeded in effecting her escape, but not until she was almost exhausted and her clothes almost torn from her body. Roderick McKenzie, her brother, and her cousin, Daniel McKenzie, started after her assailant, and after a chase of three or four miles, he was captured in the county of Middlesex. He was taken to Dutton, where an information was laid before Mr. A. J. Leitch, J.P., charging him with assault and attempted criminality. He turned out to be a man 21 years of age, named Andrew Foote, an Englishemigrant, who had been two years in this county. He had been working for Mr. Donald Mc-Millan, of Dunwich. Foote was recognized by Mr. Balkwell as the man to whom he gave chase Monday night, and also by the ladies whom he accosted. He was arraigned on Friday before Squire Leitch, when he was committed for trial at St. Thomas.

Friday Afternoon and Evening. The remainder of the evidence in the case of the Queen vs. Robt. Herrington, the taken this afternoon, and the addresses to the jury were delivered.

HERRINGTON GUILTY. The jury in the case of Robert Herring-ton, accused of firing Lyons' mill in Strathroy on Aug. 15, returned at 8:30 p.m. with at that. a verdict of "guilty," Herrington received the announcement with the greatest apparent indifference. He was removed to asked Collins' counsel. his cell, and will be sentenced at the clase of the assizes.

AFTER DAMAGES. Another suit for damages was heard this afternoon, being the third since the assizes opened, with more to follow. Two South street residents were the principals, and the whole trouble originally arose over for a month? A,—Two more some chickens. Mrs. Dulhenty, a tidy from one place to another. little woman with two young children depending upon her, lives at No. 350. She keeps about two dozen chickens, and her neighbor, Mr. Crosby, complained that the fowl were committing a nuisance by destroying his property. On July 11 Crosby was fixing the division fence, and in order to keep her chickens at home Mrs. Dulhenty placed a trunk lid between the fence and her house-a distance of about ten inches. Crosby threw the lid aside, a row ensued, and the ultimate result was the arrest of the woman, who now asks $500 damages for malicious arrest,

Mrs. Dulhenty told her story with a clear, firm, deliberate way, and under cross-examination did not vary in her statements in the least. "I put the lid there," she said, merely to prevent my chickens going into Crosby's premises and being worried by his dog. He threw it away, and I put it back again. Crosby repeated the performance and took the lid onto his his side of the fence. He refused to give it up, and I go: a piece of stove wood, followed Crosby up a few feet and caught him by the coller." In the backward march Crosby fell over a fence post and the witness followed suit. The row, she said, finally wound up by witness dropping the strick and Croshy striking her on the arms and back with the trunk lid. A warrant was shortly afterwards sworn out and the arrest made. The case was heard at the police court the following morning and was dismissed. The parties returned to their homes and Mrs. Dulhenty climbed on the high board

Judge Robertson-Well, I think he might have let her sit there. (Laughter.) Mrs. Dulhenty said that when times were good she made about $250 per week, on which she had to support herself and children. She was a seamstress, but could do no work for a month after the assault.

Wm. Davis, an old pensioner and inmate of the City Hospital, saw Crosby strike Mrs. Dulhenty with the trunk lid twice, knocking her down. She got up, but was struck again, and again fell. Crosby was calling for help. Mrs. Dulhenty received injuries on the arm and face. Witness was positive she never struck Crosby. Did you meet Mr. Crosby when you went away?" asked Mr. Cowan. "No, I didn't said Davis. "He met me."

Q .- What did you say to Crosby? A .-That it was a good fall.

Q .- You did not tell him that he got the worst of it? A .- I don't think so. P. M. Parke would not admit that he was in the habit of dismissing such cases in the police court.

Bert Temple, 11 years old, saw the affair. He saw the plaintiff's arms. They were badly injured, and there was a wound on her forehead. She never attempted to hit Crosby.

Mrs. Mosley, a neighbor, after describ. ing the bruises on Mrs. Dulhenty's arms and back, told Mr. Cowan that she had no particular love for Crosby. "He threw water on my 2-year old baby just after he recovered from diphtheria," said Mrs. Moslev.

"You once had some trouble with Mr. Crosby," said Mr. Cowan. "Yes, I did," said the witness. wanted me to pay him rent which I did not owe him."

Q .- He sued you in the Division Court and made you pay him? A .- Yes. Mr. Cowan asked for a non-suit on the ground that good reason existed for the arrest. The request was refused.

Mr. Crosby, who was then called, gave his age as 74 years, and enumerated the accidents which he had met with and the illnesses from which he had suffered. He contradicted Mrs. Dulhenty's version of the gers looked on with mingled horror and affair. It was merely to ward off a blow from a stick in Mrs. Dulhenty's hands that he struck her with the trunk lid. He was afraid for his life. Mr. Crosby's evidence was corroborated ing the fence.

The court then adjourned.

MRS. DULHENTY GETS $325. The evening session of the court was begun at 8 o'clock, and it was 11:30 before the spectators filed out. The addresses to the jury were each of half an hour's duration, the judge's remarks being interspersed with numerous flashes of wit. The questions were submitted at 9:30, and within half an hour of midnight they were returned with answers attached as below: 1. Did the plaintiff on the occasion in question approach the defendant with the stick of firewood in her hands and threaten to knock his brains out? Ans .- No. 2. Did the plaintiff strike at the defendant, intending to do him grievous bodily harm! Ans. - No.

3. Did the defendant, when he laid the information, honestly believe that the plaintiff would, if not bound over, do him some bodily injury? Ans .- No. 4. Did the defendant assault the plaintiff if so what damages would you allow?

Ans. - Yes; $50. 5. Was there a malicious prosecution—if so, what damages would you assess? Ans.

-Yes; $275. Judgment was entered accordingly, and Judge Kobertson granted a stay of proceedings until the fourth day of the divisional Saturday Morning.

away down to the farm of Thos. Hearns. near Melbourne, where it remained for some time and fattened on Hearn's pasture. Collins was a harness oil vendor, and in trying to sell some of his goods, called at Hearn's. The latter's funds were low and he did not invest in oil. Collins spoke of buying horses and finally bought the horse No Radical Change, but Healthy Progfor $3 50, Hearn telling him that the sum was merely to pay for the pasture. For Serious Quarrel Traceable to a Batch four months the prisoner drove the horse through the country, and then sold it on the London market for $6 and got another horse valued at $15 to boot. Summers located his lost property and commenced proceedings. Four arrests were made-Collins, Wm. Geary, Wm. Grant and Nelson Kelestine-but at the magistrate's hearing the latter three were dismissed and Collins sent for trial.

The tale of Thomas Hearns, one of the elleged Strathroy fire bug, was quickly Crown witnesses, was that he kept the animal for about a month, until Collins showed up one day and wanted to purchase more than in the previous week, a remarkit, but Hearns refused to sell it. He gave it to Collins for $3 50-$3 for a month's pasture and 50 cents for a halter-worth $1

"Of course you would not sell a stray horse; you are too virtuous for that?"

"Yes, sir," replied Hearns. Q.—Do you suppose you had the right to the money? A .- Of course. Q.—The horse was running in James Clark's pasture adjoining, though? A-

Q.—Three dollars was pretty high charge for a month? A,-Two months; it jumped Q.—Then you charged for the horse jumping? A .- Yes. (Laughter.) Mrs. Hearns, wife of Thomas, corroborated her husband's version of the affair. When Collins came in June 11 and wanted to buy the horse, Hearns said he did not do such dirty work as that.

Nelson Kelestine said the horse was worth a little over $3. The case went to on Oct. 1, 1893.

COLLINS ACQUITTED. The jury in the Collins case returned at 1:30 with a verdict of "not guilty." Judge Robertson, in making the discharge, exwas checked.

SHE KISSED ALL SHE MET.

Men Hugged by Wholesale in New York -A Woman's Peculiar Penchant.

A comely, well-dressed woman about 35 years old spent over an hour in Broadway, Williamsburgh, near Berry street, yesterday afternoon, in hugging and kissing every man who came within her reach, She was rather large in stature and well proportioned, and old men, young men, large men, and small men who came within her clutches had to submit to her embraces and be kissed. Some of them took it goodnaturedly and laughed with the crowd that looked on, while others tore themselves away and rushed off amid the howls of the spectators. The first man to fall victim to her kisses was talking to a couple of friends at a street corner when the woman sided up, and throwing her arms around his neck imprinted a kiss on his cheek. He tried to draw himself away, but the woman held him fast and kissed him again and again despite his struggles. He looked around for his friends, but they had fled. Finally the woman released him, and the man ran off as fast as his legs could carry him. In the three blocks which she traveled she caught no less than a dozen men, and hugged and kissed them all. At this juncture a boat arrived at one of the slips, and passengers from it began to pour into the street. In consequence, any number of men were forced to submit to hugs and kisses, while the women passenamusement. Finally, when there were no more victims in sight the woman boarded a car in which a number of men had taken refuge from her. Her appearance at the rear door was the signal for a precipitate by a corpenter who was assisting in repair- rush to the front door, and in a second every man was on the front platform with the door securely shut. She threatened to kiss a policeman who warned her and finally boarded another car and was seen no more. - [New York Sun.

ress Toward Improvement.

New York, Oct. 5. - Bradstreet's says: While no radical change has appeared this week, there are features of the situation pointing to continued progress in the direction of improvement. This is true of the country at large. At a number of points east and west the demand for money has increased, and changes in the character of mercantile collections are as a rule in the direction of improvement. Bank clearances for the week aggregate $999,555,127, or 21 per cent able gain. The number of business failures in the United States this week is 215, against 204 last week. Experts of wheat, including flour as wheat, from both coasts of the United States and Canada, for six business days, ending with Thursday of this week, aggregate 3,243,000 bushels, which is compared with 2,582,000 bushels sent abroad the week before.

Cable and tolegraphic advices show the heaviest total of available stocks of wheat in the United States and Canada, both coasts, affoat for and in Europe on record for Oct. 1, 162, 206,000 bushels, notwithstanding a sharp decrease in European stocks of late. September's world's wheat increase if 10,-584,000 bushels, which is moderate contrasted with 1890, 1891, 1892, but heavier than in 1889 and 1893. Australia carries 5,500,000 bushels of wheat in sight at this time, as compared with 7,800,000 bushels on July 1 last, and with 2,900,000 bushels

There are 40 failures reported from the Dominion of Canada this week, compared with 31 last week, 30 a year ago and 36 two years ago.

DUN & CO.'S REPORT. R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The lowest prices ever known for wheat and cotton necessarily imply somewhat restricted consumption of other products. With the chief crops of the west and south sinking in value, it is not strange that purchases of manufactured products are smaller than was predicted. Wheat has touched the lowest point shoe store in Parkhill, but was acquitted, orn States there is also a lamentable is the plaintiff. He wants $10,000 from failure of the corn crop. Under the circumstances it would be very strange if the demand for manufactured products should be quite as large as in other years.

The condition of the industries is in some respects more satisfactory.

The failures for the past week have been 219 in the United States, against 320 in the United States last year, and 39 in Canada, against 45 last year.

THE underground dungeon lately discovered at Warwick, England, is having a history invented for it. The great dramatist makes mention of a toad in the dungeon. Sure enough when the keep was entered a toad was seen. Some one would have it that Shakespeare was locked up in that place for his deer-stealing frolic; and still more credulous the history-framer is inclined to set on record as truth that Shakespeare then saw the toad which tenanted the dungeon lately.

R. HOEBS SHOULD BE RETURNED

WITHOUT OPPOSITION. The resignation of Mr. W. R. Meredith M. P. P. for London necessitates a new ection for the Legislature in this city. t the general election a few months since e contest lay between Mr. Meredith and r. T. S. Hobbs. Mr. Meredith came fore the electors as leader of the Oppotion, as the coming premier in the event the defeat of the Government, as a skillil and successful local campaigner. Mr. obbs, though a respected merchant and anufacturer, until last campaign was omparatively unknown to many of the ively few votes of defeating the chosen a little more care had een exercised by his friends in the evision of the voters' lists. Even the poitical opponents of Mr. Hobbs admit that o other member of the Conservative party out its leader could have achieved victory in the recent contest in this city; certainly a high compliment to pay to any candi-

We do not know that Mr. Hobbs is greeable to enter the field for the service of his fellow-citizens at the present time, but if he is, it would only be a fair and graceful thing for the community at large to acquiesce in his election without opposition. The concessions which have been made regarding his strength as a public man should influence his political opponents to agree to this course. But there are other and equally strong reasons that will commend themselves to every section of the electorate at the present time. Our merchants and manufacturers Virginia, tells of a development of trolley have passed through a period of de- lines and of the adaptation of telephones to pression in recent years, and they are ill-disposed to have the prospective business revival interfered with by unnecessary political excitement. They know, as we all do, that within the next twelvemonths we will have to undergo the turmoil of a Dominion election, and are not likely to look with favor upon an unnecessary campaign at the present time. Then there is the further fact to be considered, that whereas when Mr. Meredith was elected by a small majority in June last there was some prospect of his becoming head of the Government of Ontario, his resignation now betokens that he despaired of reaching the coveted position of premier; in other words, it is an acknowledgment that Sir Oliver Mowat's Government is in power to stay for four years to come. "We have been sending an Opposition member to Toronto for a long period; it will do us good to have a change," many citizens have been saying within the last day or two. "Let us elect Mr. Hobbs, whose strong run against the Opposition leader proves his general acceptability to the citizens of London."

If, however, a contest is forced upon the city, we trust it will not be prolonged to a greater extent than the public interests demand. It is unfortunate that a vacancy is caused while citizens are wrestling with the iniquitous Dominion Franshise Act. But if a battle must be fought, we trust that both sides will see to it that it is conducted with decency, and free from those personalities that have been too Icequent in public contests in the past. Personalities and vulgar abuse, whether indulged in on the platform or through the press, are neither good morals, good journalism nor good politics.

-Sol. White, of Windsor, erstwhile Mr. Meredith's lieutenant in the Legislature, referring to the vacancy in the Conservative leadership, says: "I do not know of a member of the Opposition that will prove acceptable as leader." Too bad that Sol. was himself discharged from further attendance in the Legislature!

-Savings banks deposits are not always an indication of working-class prosperity. If they were so, then would the staid old State of Massachusetts be one of the most prosperous commonwealths on the continent. In its 85 saving banks today, there is no less than $399,995,000 on deposit.

-The London bar has now given four of Mr. Justice Richard Meredith. This is | He will probably raise the number to at an enviable secord

LAW AS TO BYE-ELECTIONS.

By the acceptance of an office of emolument in the gift of the Dominion Government Mr. Meredith vacates his seat in the Legislature. There has been some question in the minds of various electors as to the procedure necessary to fill the vacancy in the representation of this city thus caused. The law is clear upon the subject. Section 28, sub-sec. 1, chap. 11, of the Revised Statutes of Ontarlo provides:

"A warrant may issue under the hands and seals of two members-elect of the Legin Chancery for the issue of a new writ for the election of a new member of the Legislative Assembly to fill any vacancy arising subsequently to a general election and before the first meeting of said Assembly thereafter, by reason of the death or other of the causes aforesaid, and the writ may issue at any time after such vacancy."

-Lord Rosebery, the Liberal Prime Minister of Great Britain, made a noteworty speech when he received the freedom of Inverness a couple of weeks ago. He affirmed that British statesmen were invariably honest. Some of them may have been dull, he said, some incapable, some aggravating, but there was no one whose honor and honesty could be questioned in the slightest degree. Then he took up the fact that 150 years have elapsed since the battle of Culloden was fought, and spoke of the devotion of the Highlanders to the cause for which they had taken up arms -a devotion which enabled an impoverished and persecuted people and chiefs to resist the temptation of a reward of £30,-000. They in the north had no reason to be ashamed of that time. They might ask him why? He had, he said an element of encouragement from this historical episode. It was this: If a people whose rebellion was so much founded upon conviction had by patient statesmanship been won over to logalty to the Crown and to the Government, there was an encouragement to think that the Celtle population in Ireland by patient and sympathetic methods-methods which to define would lead him on to troubled ground-might be won back from disaffection and discontent to being a prosperous sister in the federation of these islands. This reference to the efforts of the Liberals of Great Britain to make the union of Britain and Ireland a union of hearts was loudly cheered by the assem-

ELECTRICITY AS AN AID TO

FARMERS. Probably at an earlier day than many people believe, electricity will be made to serve the farmers of Ontario. So far the cost has been the one reason why the trolley or its equivalent has not been generally turned to account for rapid transit to thousands when only hundreds were due. and from centers of population, but electricity is coming or the signs of the times mean nothing. We are accustomed to regard the people of the Southern States as slow and backward in adopting time and labor saving devices, but a correspondent of the Country Gentleman, writing from Southeastern the daily wants of the fruit farmers in that district, which is truly remarkable. One line of electric road on Hampton Roads is Important Recommendations carrying the farmers' produce from truck farm to steamers for the great northern markets. Other lines now building will in a very short time penetrate the trucking belt around the city of Norfolk in each and every direction. Already 50 or more thrifty farmers and truckers in the trucking field around Norfolk are connected by telephone with the telephone system of the city. This system embraces Old Point, Hampton, Newport News, Smithfield, Churchland, Suffolk, and other minor points in its circuit, and where five years ago not a man outside the city of Norfolk had telephone connection with the world, now the wires are run between all the little country villages and the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth, and the lines extend out in various directions in the region around. During such portions of the year as heavier shipments of farm produce are going forward, telegrams from New York, Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, and other points are sent to Norfolk, the center of this great market-garden industry, during the early morning hours, showing the condition and demands of every important market center in the United States. These early morning telegrams are telephoned out to farmers and truckers before 9 o'clock in the morning, and each man knows what, when and where to ship his produce that may be ready for market. Uncle Sam has also been very liberal with the truck farmer, and delivers the mail to him two or three miles out of the city twice or thrice daily. In a few short years trating the trucking belt around Norfolk in every direction. Shall the fruit growers and progressive farmers of the Niagara Peninsula and of the Western Ontario belt be less progressive than these "sleepy" Southerners? The time will come when, by the agency of electricity, all the thickly-settled portions of the country will be connected by telephones and electric railway systems, provided cheaply because constantly in use, and the people in the country will be brought into the closest contact with those in the centers of population. Perhaps we shall find in this peaceful revolution the solution of the difficulty of keeping boys and girls on the farm.

CITY TREE TRIMMING.

In various parts of the city it may be observed that the shade trees are being trimmed. No one can fail to see the extraordinary improvement in the appearance of both the trees and the streets through this operation. The foliage of the maples is generally too low, and in all cases where they are large enough for the purpose it would add not only to the healthfulness of the surrounding houses, but to the beauty of the trees and streets, were they properly trimmed. Examples may be seen in different sections of the city where islative Assembly to the clerk of the Crown this has been done, and it is curious how the effect of an avenue of elms is created by this pruning of the maples. The trees are in reality the property of the city; at the same time, anything like reasonable private treatment of them will probably not be disallowed by the authorities. It might be well for the city engineer or the proper official to look into the whole matter of the trimming and oversight of the street trees so as to get the best possible results both from the standpoint of hygiene and scenic effect.

Of the W. M. M. S. Western Branch at Strathroy.

Several Committees.

Election of Officers, Delegates to the General Board, Representatives to Conference, E;c.

STRATHROY, Ont., Oct. 5.-The Women's Methodist Missionary Society, western branch, resumed its sessions on Thurday morning. After routine the reports of committees were continued. The organizer's committee report says:

1. Your committee recommend that correspondence be kept up quarterly or halfyearly between district organizers and the corresponding secretary of each auxiliary. 2. That new auxiliaries report to the branch corresponding secretary through their own corresponding secretary immediately upon the organization of an auxiliary, and thus open up communication with headquarters. That the duty of district organizers to hold district conventions be emphasized. 4. That district organizers be responsible when possible for the observance of woman's missionary Sunday of their distsicts. 5. That district organizers be nominated at the branch meeting. 6. That the report of this committee be inserted in the printed report of the branch. Continuation of the report of memorial court: Re National Council of Women-Resolved that we do not affiliate with the National Council. In view of the fact that through overwork or change of climate our lady missionaries are liable to become permanently laid aside, it is thought well that a superannuation fund be formed for their benefit, the plan suggested being that I cent per month be contributed by members of auxiliaries, and that this be forwarded to the general board as a memorial.

The report of the mission band committee, recommending that in each band and circle a member be appointed to present the claims of the Palm Branch, believing that the urgent appeal of the editor should be brought before each circle and band, and where there is no delegate from the bands and circles that the delegate from the auxiliary be asked to see that an appointment be made. 2. Your committee, recognizing the need for the personal consecration for service, recommended that bands organize for the devotional as well as for the business and literary departments of the work. Also as a branch we discourage the charging of admission fees and also of giving entertainments which are not of a missionary character, and of all costuming at entertainments. 3. That the branch give notice f motion that article 9 of the constitution of the mission bands be changed to read: "Any mission band sending the sum of $10 annually to the auxiliarly treasurer or to the branch in whose bounds it is, shall be entitled to send one delegate to the branch annual meeting, but she shall not be eligible to any office in the branch or election to the board of management, except she be a member of an auxiliary."

THURSDAY AFTERNOON After routine the balloting for delegates to the general board took place, resulting as follows: Mrs Daly, London; Mrs T W Jackson, Caledonia; Mrs Wright, Mrs Williams, Galt; Mrs Dickson, London; Mrs Phelps. Mount Pleasant; Mrs Fowler.

Prepare Them, Sweet Pickled Pears 7 lbs. of pears 4 lbs. of sugar, 1 quart of vinegar. Make a syrup of sugar and vinegar, then add a tablespoonful of cloves and one of cinnamon. As soon as the syrup is hot put in the pared pears and cook slowly until the pears become soft and tender. The spices used should be ground, and if the pears are large it is better to halve

Watermelon Sweet Pickle-Cut the melon into oblong pieces and remove the rind and soft part near the seeds. To every 8 lbs. of melon take one pint of vinegar and 8 lbs. of sugar and prepare as follows: mix half a teaspoonful each of ground mace and cloves, one teaspoonful each of ginger, cinnamon and allspice. Put this mixture into a small bag made of cheesecloth and boil it with the vinegar. Cook the strips of melon first in clear water till tender, then pour the hot syrup on them. Repeat this four or five times, then heat all together, pour into jars and seal.

To Pickle Cauliflower-Cut the cauliflower into little flowerets of equal size. Throw them into boiling salted water. Put them on the back of the stove and when just ready to boil, take off and drain. Put them into jars. Boil enough vinegar to cover them, seasoning it with one ounce each of nutmeg and mustard seed and a half ounce of mace to three quarts of vinegar. Pour this while hot over the cauliflowers adding a little sweet oil to cover the top. Cover the pickle while warm with a bladder of fine leather over the corks.

Cucumber Pickles-Take one peck of cucumbers, add one large cup of salt with enough water to cover them. Let them remain over night and in the morning drain off the water. Wash them carefully and cover with scalded cider vinegar. Then add a piece of alum the size of a small white bean to make the pickles brittle, and for spices put in an ounce each of whole cloves and cin-

Spiced Grapes-Eight pounds of grapes, mashed and cooked enough to strain out the seeds and skins; rub all the pulp through. Then add four pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar, and one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, allspice and cloves. Cook slowly for three English Pickle-For 12 quarts of tard mixed with 1 cup of wheat flour, 1 ounce of carry powder, 1 ounce each of whole pepper seed, green ginger root, and pepper pods, 2 ounces each of mace and cloves. Cut the following into baked, as is the case with hand-painted pieces 1 inch square and soak in strong salt and water for 2 days-small onions, sliced cucumbers, green tomatoes, green beans, green peppers, carrots, nasturtion, cauliflower and watermelon rind. Then drain off and put in jars. Scald not but boil the spices in the vinegar, putting the cloves and mace into a bag. When this thickens pour it over the pickles. The cauliflower, carrots and watermelon rind, if used, must be cooked until they are quite tender. Chili Sauce-12 ripe tomatoes crushed, 2 onions, 2 green peppers chopped fine, 1 teacupful of vinegar, 1 tablespoonful each of ginger, allspice and cinnamon. Boil down as for catsup and then bottle

Pickled Peaches-Pour boiling water over peaches and then remove the skins. Put in a large stone jar. Make a syrup with proportions of 1 quart of cider vinegar to 3 parts of sugar, boil and skim and pour over the fruit 3 successive mornings. Then drain off the syrup, put a layer of fruit in a jar 3 inches deep, sprinkle with bits of whole matter for what occasion it may be decinnamon and cloves, then another layer of fruit and spice and so on till all is used. Boil the syrup with a handful | young girls, are alike treated with black, each of cinnamon and cloves until it is like molasses and pour boiling hot over nowhere does the sembre shadow dominate. fruit. Have syrup enough to cover the fruit well and cover closely.

Piccalilli-1 peck green tomatoes, 4 onions, 4 green peppers chopped, 1 teacupful of salt. Let them stand for two hours and then put them to drain over night. Next morning take enough vinegar to cover them and add 1 cupful of sugar, 1 tablespoonful of mustard mixed in single bags. Cook all together until tender and when cold it is ready for

The Hair and Its Care.

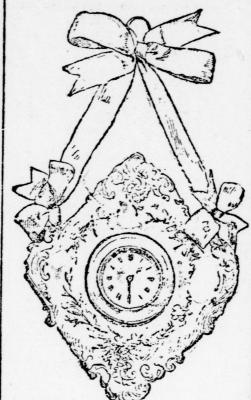

Cleanliness is very important in the treatment of the hair. A nice head of hair, well cared for, is woman's glory. Thorough brushing with a good hair brush would be quite sufficient in ordinary cases to keep the hair in good condition. Don't be afraid of the number of strokes given. Connoisseurs in the art of hair dressing recommend one hundred strokes with a brush each night before retiring. But brushing the hair wili not always keep it clean. An occasional bath in good suds in which are a few drops of ammonia is a nice thing. Rinse the hair in clear, tepid water.

The First Hoop-Skirt. The first hoop skirt was worn in 1530 and weighed forty pounds. It was a cage that could only be entered by being tipped to one side. Women crawled into this dreadful thing, which was fastened round the waist by a strong leather belt. No wonder the modern women has all sorts of internal complaints.

NOVELTIES FOR CHRISTMAS.

Already Are Artistic Workers Preparing for the Annual Event.

One of the novelties that will delight the china painter who is forehanded enough to be already thinking of Christmas presents is the china cleck case which is being made in white porcelain ready for decorating. One of the prettiest forms is given for a hanging clock, where space is limited. There may be others to stand on the mantel. These may be decorated to harmonize with the recipient's room and a small, round clock slipped in. Such a present will be received with delight, for most of us admire the pretty porcelain timepieces that are rather beyond our Big But Beautiful Buttons. If buttons were gay in the times of our grandmothers, they are to be "screechers" now, in the words of the manufacturer; but while they are striking in color effects and hand painting, as well as in size-for some of them are even three inches in diameter-they are beautiful conceits, says the Boston Herald. These large buttons are as light as a feather in weight, being composed of filigree French gilt or silver and studded with jewels. Rhinestone buttons are the latest, and the winter street suits will have rows upon rows of them. The small ones will button the sleeves to the elbow and the larger ones will form a trimming down the front and side seams of the skirt. Huge, hand-cut pearl buttons, with heads of staring owls and those of horses, were noticed in pickles: 6 quarts of vinegar, 1 cunce of the exhibit. It is in the enamel butmustard seed, 1 ounce of flour of mus- tons that the French have displayed perfection their love of bright color. The foundation of the button is brass, upon which a heavy coat of enamel is placed, and the button is china. After the baking process has been gone through with the button passes into the hands of the artists, who decorate it in every conceivable style. It is here that the enormous cost of the button comes in, and a glance at a card of these enamel plastrons reminds one of the case of precious ivery painted medallions in the art museum. Enamel, rhinestone and pearl buttons are to head the fashion list, and she who cannot turn over her $10 bill for a dozen buttons next month might well consider herself among the antiquities. While hooks and eyes are out of fashion as serviceable articles, they are decidedly in it as a trimming, and the Paris hooks and eyes of heavy, rope-twisted brass and silver are as large as belt buckles, and will be used for the same purpose. They are four inches in length, and will be worn at

New England Brown Bread. The real, light, savery, delicious New England brown bread, says the New York world, is thus made: To a pint and a half of ryemeal add a pint and a half of cornmeal and a teaspoonful of salt; mix thoroughly dry; then add a cup of molasses and a heaping teaspoonful of baking the brush proper pass. soda, wet in a little warm water. A Lumberman's Secret for White, Flaky Bread-How to Have Mealy Potatoes-Gruel for the Sick Room-Some Minor Matters With Important Bearings, Trifles make perfection. Here are a few of the added touches that make the difference between commonplace and ideal housekeeping. When you have strained your plain boiled potatoes, take them at once to the open door or window and give them a vigorous shaking in the draught. They will become white and mealy. Try it once, and you will do it always, so great is the improve-Every good housekeeper browns and rolls or grates her stale bread, thus having it in readiness for scallops or frying meats, fish, croquettes. If, after being rolled, it is put through the flour sieve the additional fineness will amply repay the trouble.

I sat one morning in the bright, clean kitchen of a lumber camp watching the cook make bread, After kneading the bread he took enough for a loaf and drew it out again and again, rolling it up each time as we would puff paste. Then he set it aside to rise, repeating the process before putting it in the pans. This, he said, was the secret of white and flaky bread. Do you wish to make gruel for a sick friend? Take corn meal, and sift it into a quart of boiling water, stirring it until it is of the consistency of cream. Add salt to flavor, and let it simmer for half an hour longer; then run it though a fine sieve. Have in a bowl a little cream or women of the lower classes go out of the rich milk. Pour your boiling gruel into house, except in closed chairs, and those it, and you have a drink a sick person ought to relish.

that can be used for many things, a bookcase for a boy's bedroom. It also suits admirably for a shelf for medicine bottles, boxes and handy necessities, where any of the family may store articles of almost any kind. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the bracket is made of parts of a dry goods box planed and fitted together and afterward stained, and sometimes varneatly. It looks best painted white or brown. The shelf can be made of walnut or oak, if they are obtainable, and will not cost any more than $2 for all materials needed in its construction. It is made of any dimensions. It is best to select a place for it, measure the space, then proceed according to this. This idea may be carried out in an endless number of designs. - Orange Judd Farmer.

A Fountain Blacking Brush.

Fountain ink wells and pens are not novelties in these days, but the reservoir principle has just been applied to a brush by an English manufacturer. In this device the handle, A to C, is hollow and forms the storage vessel. C is a cap with a screwed junction uniting it to the body of the brush. B is a cap of a similar kind, but formed with a hollow circular space at its centre. Through this the bristles of

The peculiarity of this brush is that it is arranged on a separate former, with the centre hollow at its inner end, and into this a tube passes from the reservoir compartment. The inner end of this tube is closed when out of use by a disk having a hole in its centre, but which usually presents a blank surface opposite the tube. To open the reservoir to the brush the button A is pressed, and liquid will flow out at the rate which it is being used. The valve arrangement is very similar to that employed in oil cans, but has the addition of two flat springs, keeping the disk valve close up to the partition against which it works, and therefore doing away bow down to the middle classes. THE WOMEN OF COREA.

THEIR STATUS IN THE SOCIETY OF THE HERMIT KINGDOM.

Classes are Clearly and Rigidly Defined-Ladies of Rank Kept in Closest Seclusion -Modes of Dressing, Marriage Customs and Methods of Punishment.

HE present war in Corea is bound to better the condition of her women. It could not be worse than it is. The 5, 000,000 women of the country are practically slaves. They are bound to their husbands with fetters of iron, which only the men can loosen, They dare not go upon the streets. Their quarters are kept for them in the backs of the houses, and the best of the Corean

wives would commit COREAN GIRL suicide if a stranger of the other sex rudely put his hands upon her Many of these people are actually slaves. They have been bought, and they can be whipped if they do not obey. Little is known about the condition of Corean womanhood. The lines are so strict as to their being seen upon the street, or as to their coming into contact with any but their own sex, that such traveller's letters and books as have been written concerning Corea contain little about them. Only the whom you see with their faces uncovered are generally slaves. Now and then a common woman goes about the streets of Seoul with a green cloak over her head. She holds this close to her face, leaving a crack out of which one eye peeps, and if she of women in Corea-the upper, the middle and the lower class. The upper class are usually the daughters of nobles. They marry nobles, and if their husbands can afford it, which is not often, they have slaves to do all the work for them, and they lead lives of comparapractically the same in design, but that of the upper classes is made of much more expensive material. It is a very unbecoming dress. The Corean women are not, as a rule, beautiful, and this dress does not add to their looks. My interpreter, "Gen." Pak, who has a wife, a concubine or so, stretched upwards would have room to spare when being gathered about the neck. The top of these drawers has a band fully eight inches wide, and this COREAN LADY. is fastened tightly over the breast by a white ribbon drawstring, which is tied in front. This garment is always white, and it is fastened so tight that the band cuts into the flesh at the back, and among the lower classes often runs below the breast. leaving it exposed. Above this band, and just meeting it, there is a little jacket with long sleeves. This jacket is not more than six inches long. It is sometimes of yellow, green or blue, and at other times of white. It is tied together with ribbons of the same color as the jacket, and it is so scanty that a great sunburned streak, an inch wide, shines out below the shoulder-blades of such women as get into the sun. The drawers are not tied at the ankle. They narrow down as they fall to the feet, and below them the woman wears stockings of wadded white cotton. These make her feet look about five sizes larger than they are, and the winter stocking is half an inch thick. It is more like a boot than a shoe, and it extends only about two inches above the ankle. The Corean lady wears no shoes while at home. She trots about in her stocking feet, and the poorer classes go barefooted. When she goes out she puts on slippers of rabbit skin faced with silk. Some of these are very pretty, but they look uncomfortable, and are quite heavy. They have soles of oxhide, which are nailed onto the slipper with iron pega, the heads of which are as large around as that of a tenpenny nail, and they are clumsy

in the extreme. In addition to these divided skirts, or drawers, she has overreach from the armpits to the knees, and over the whole she wears a cloak-like gown, which falls to her feet, and which is tied on with ribbon. This practically makes up the costume of a Coreau lady. It usually consists of good material, and often of silk. The younger women are fond of red. The middle-aged affect blue and the widows always wear white, which is the color of mourning.

There is a great difference in conditions as regards the classes of woman. A middle-class woman when she meets the wife of a noble has to address her in reverential tones, and the lower classes may be classed the wives of scholars or interpreters and those of doctors and of the traders that go to Peking.

The women of Corea are not much respected in the laws of the country as regards inheritance. The son gets all the property and the daughters inherit nothing. Daughters are by no means so welcome as sons, and a woman who bears many girls is considered a disgrace to the Corean girls get most of their fun in their childhood. They trot around with the boys and play as they will until they are 7 years old. They wear clothes like their mothers, or, if they are poor. practically no clothes at all, and they can do about as they please. After the age of ? they are not allowed to play outside of the walls which surround the house. They are never seen on the streets, as they grow older their life becomes more and more a secluded one. At eight or nine they are taught the Corean characters and how to sew, to embroider and to keep house. They are often engaged at ten, and are married at thirteen and fourtsen. It is a curious thing that they practically lose their names after they are eleven. The custom is just the reverse of ours. We often call a girl "baby" when she is little. The Coreans call their girls by fixed names until they get to be eleven, after which they are called "aga" or baby. After a woman is married she takes her husband's name and loses her own, though baby sticks to the old maids for forever. A woman never sees her husband before she marries him, nor has she any part in making the engagement. The matter is earried on, as in China, through matchmakers, and it is customary for the groom to furnish the money for the bride's wardrobe. The swan is the emblem of marital fidelity, and after the engagement has been made, the bridegroom goes in state to the house of the father of the bride, carrying a white swan in his arms. There is usually a tent with a spread table in it waiting for him, and about this stand the matchmakers and the bride's father. As he comes in, he places this swan on the table, and bows to it four times and a half. He then goes to the other side of the yard, where the bride sits in a hall. She raises as he comes up, and she usually has a slave on each side of her, holding her hand, so that her long sleeves, as the hands meet in front of her face, completely hide the face from the groom. Then the two go through numerous bows, the woman still keeping her face hidden, and the bridegroom finally going down on his knees and bumping his head against the floor in front of the the bride. After this is over, the bride and groom are offered cakes and wine. They drink out of the same glass, and it is this drinking that constitutes the ceremony of marriage. There is also a marriage certificate about as big as a small tablecloth, which is sent to the bride's father in a ceremonial box.

Hereafter she is practically the slave of her husband, who can treat her as he will and divorce her with little trouble. Diverces among the higher classes are not common, and the women are, among those classes, fairly well treated, as far as the use of the whip is concerned. It is only the slaves and the wives of the lower classes who are much punished, but if a woman is unfaithful, no matter what her class, she can be taken by her husband to the magistrate and be punished with a

aggestions for Those Who Mean to Cultivate Home Plants in Winter. Most window gardens are filled with a miscellaneous selection of so-called flowering plants, whose few poor scattering blosoms scarcely pay for their care, and might with profit give place to those without beauty of flower, but whose foliage is at least attractive. Indeed, so often is this the case, that many householders are banishing all flowering plants, depending solely upon palms, aspedistras, etc., for their window adornment. But if one prefers flowers to foliageand most people do-this is all wrong. A few fine foliage plants are indeed attractive, but they do not take the place of fragrant blossoms, that never seem half as lovely as when all outside nature is hidden beneath snow and ice. It is not necessary for the window to be flowerless, even with the poor facilities of the common living room, if the following rules are adhered

1. Select only such plants as are winter bloomers.

2. Choose only those that will thrive in the temperature at which you keep your room. Select carefully to suit the amount of sunshine or shade in your window. 2. Examine every, plant to make sure that it is entirely free from insects before bringing to the window in the autumn 4. Shower the leaves of your plants once a week, to keep down dust and insects. If insects appear, fight them at once, and never give up until they are routed. 5. Keep flowering plants in small or medium sized pots. See that the soil is rich, the drainage an inch deep at bottom of pot, and a crust of hard earth is never allowed to form at the top of the pot. 6. Water only when dry, then give sufficient water to wet to the bottom of the pot. Be chary of water in severely cold weather. 7. Turn the pots frequently, pinch off withered flowers and faded leaves. Allow all Holland bulbs to root six or eight weeks in the dark before bringing to the

8. Give weak liquid manure once a fortnight to all plants showing buds-never to half-grown plants. To comment a little on these rules. It is useless to select summer blossomers for the house in winter. A few begonias, abutilons and petunias are practically ever bloomers, but most plants must have their season of rest. Few roses, geraniums or fuchias bloom well in winter, but these few any florist can name. Alliums, ageratums, cannas, cyclamen, cinerarias, petunias, callas, the otalicite orange, hyacinths, paper white and double Roman narcissua, and Chinese sacred lilies are among the surest bloomers for the begin-

Nearly all plants can be grown in a moderately warm room, but in either a very warm or quite cool room the choice must be more restricted. For instance begonias, heliotropes, impatients, sultani, salvias and torentias would soon come to grief in a low temperature (unless protected well at night), while they would flourish in the warm room. The exact reverse would be the case with carnations, ten-week-stocks and camelias. In the same way begonias, primulas, nicotiana, and a few other plants will flower well in a shady window, while roses, geraniums and heliotropes must have sun, and plenty of it, to bloom.

It is the attention to the minutae of plant culture that makes the successful amateur. Yet these rules are not burdensome to the true flower lover, for it is not a task to minister to our friends' resonable wants, as our plants' wants are? Clean, well fed plants are always ready to bloom If they have half a chance.

The Cecropia Emperor Caterpillar. This gigantic and strikingly colored caterpillar is probably the largest of all our insects, and if they were at all abundant would prove a devastator without an equal. However, they are too few in numbers to cause any great injury except to individual trees, and their large size and conspicuous coloring enable them to be a large, beautiful moth which proceeds to deposit eggs for other caterpillars. Although many eggs are deposited comparatively few develop caterpillars. Plum and pear trees are the objects of their rav-

CECROPIA EMPEROR CATERPILLAR. easily detected, when they can be easily picked or knocked off and destroyed. The caterpillar is shown in figure above, and when it is full fed it will spin a large brown cocoon on the tree. Next

Splitting Cabbage Stems. A description is given of a method for arresting the growth of cabbage heads nearly mature, and thereby preventing their cracking. This is performed by cutting the cabbage stem half or two thirds across with a sharp pruning knife and then extending the cut either up or down for a short distance. If the cabbage does not bend over by its own weight and thus widen the split, a splinter of wood should be inserted to keep the cut surfaces apart. By this means the further growth of the heads is arrested, and yet sufficient sap reaches them to keep them fresh until wanted for use.

SWEET PEAS.

How the Best Results May Be Obtained by Cultivators.

A near neighbor of mine, says D. Hendricks in Country Gentlemen, has succeeded so well this season with sweet peas that I have learned a lesson or two about their growth and what is needed to secure the best results, which may be unfamiliar to some. The first desideratum is a wet soilnot merely a moist soil, but one which remains continuously wet all through the season. That is the spot where this popular vine thrives best and blooms most abundantly. He thinks they would grow nicely in a tank of undrained soil, but I do not put them in the list of acquatics quite yet. His garden is low and wet, with a heavy soil that never gets dry, though he has supplied partial drainage. There he planted Eckford's varieties, mixed, as early last spring as the ground could be worked, making the drills rich with stable manure, and using plenty of seed. He has four rows, with a total length of perhaps 100 feet. The plants received no special after-culture, except to provide upright support. For this the ordinary wire netting was used to good effect. The vines grow rapidly and with great vigor from the start, and came into bloom very early.

From that time to the last week in August, they had continued to bloom with marvelous abundance and great beauty, surpassing anything I have heard or read of. He and his family, his friends and neighbors from far and near, have been picking them daily, by the peck and halfbushel; and yet the bright, sweet blossoms are there anew, to greet the beholder each succeeding morning, as abundant as ever, and "Mac's" sweet peas are the wonder of the city in which they grow. He is a newspaper man, without floral knowledge or garden experience, but he loves flowers, and his sweet pea harvest has made him enthusiastic. He has had a world of pleasure in gathering the blossoms and supplying his friends with the fragrant beauties. The vines are now about twelve feet high, and still running upward as rapidly as ever, with no sign of stopping. Sections of wire netting have been added from time to time, and a series of scaffolding has been erected on either side of each double

He estimates that from the middle of June, when he began to gather the blossoms, until September, the daily picking has averaged one peck for last two weeks of June, two pecks through July and three pecks for August, making a total product to September of 42 bushels. The flowers have been closely gather. ed each day. It would be idle, of course, to attempt any estimate as to the number of sprays contained in such a mass of bloom. The vines are to-day as green and fresh as ever, and nothing but frost is likely to end their luxuriant career.

The gentleman thinks that next season he will set ten-foot posts along on either side of the double rows at convenient distances, at the time of planting. To these having no "poor fund" or any beneficiaries he will nail cross-pieces, upon which the plank scaffolding can be placed, having steps at each end to reach the platform, from which the flowers can gathered. The secret of his success seems to bewet soil and plenty of sunshine; although I should add that his garden is partly thirty to thirty-five feet. This tremendous shaded late in the afternoon, it being on the northerly side of a ridge upon which is a row of buildings. All other sweet peas in this vicinity have ceased to bloom and after flowing 450 miles through that weeks ago, and many of the plantings are state and the province of New Brunswick

Fertilizers in the Garden.

The effect produced by applying nitrate and superphosphate to flowers, vegetables and lawns is often wonderful. I have seen plants change from a sickly yellow to a luxuriant green within two days after applying nitrate of soda to them. The effect on grass is to keep it green and healthy during dry weather. This is accomplished, in part, by causing the roots of the grass to penetrate deep into the soil, following the nitrate, which has been washed down by rains earlier in the season, and thus enabling the grass to procure water from the moist soil below the surface. Where the food is, there you will find the roots.

There are a few plants known as "leguminous plants," among which are peas, beans and clover, which do not require an additional supply of nitrogen. To fertilize these, all that is necessary is superphosphate, ground bone, or some other form of phosphoric acid, and muriate of potash, or wood ashes. For all other crops or plants nitrate of soda should be added to the above materials. -S. M. Harris, in Florist and Gardener, Sheep After Plowing. Where plowing is done for wheat, sheep are the best stock to keep on the plowed land to compact its surface. They will eat down weeds and the growth of scattered grain and thus prevent any need of cultivation which makes the soil too light. Their manure is scattered more evenly than that of any other stock. Sheep can be put on wheat in the fall to crop its growth with advantage to the crop.

How does the green get into the grass? How does the look get into the glass? How does the sweet get into the roses? How does the smell get into our noses?

How does the blue get into the skies? How does the see it get into my eyes?

How does the twinkle get into a star? How does the sunshine come so far?

A SPORTING PARADISE.

A PICTURESQUE REGION OF THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

The North Shore of New Brunswick-A Glimpse at the Prosperous City of St. John-Notes of a September Outing in a Delightful Country. Every city and hamlet in Ontario has its particular north shore, but the one spoken of in this article is the north shore of New Brunswick, and it is washed by the waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, with its gigantic bays and inlets. There are no speckled trout to be caught from the rocks, though there are millions of them far up the rivers and streams which flow into the gulf; but the salmon, that king of fish, abounds, as do mackerel and bass and an almost infinite variety of food fishes, including in its season the princely-and bony-shad. The ovster, too, is a denizen of the coast, and epicures declare that the world renowned bivalve only reaches complete perfection in the native beds around Prince Edward's Island, Point du Chene and the vicinity. Without pretending to be an epicure, I give them my modest but sincere approval. To taste them for the first time is to experience wholly new sensation in oyster-eating, and if one does not feel as Thackeray did when he first essayed a Saddle Rock, as if he had "swallowed a small baby"-the north shore oyster is not large—one certainly does emulate the great humorist in feeling profoundly grateful.

The north shore of New Brunswick seems at first blush a great way off from Ontario cities and towns, but railways in these times have almost annihilated distance. One steps on board a palace car on the Canadian Pacific Railway in Windsor, say, and in thirty-six hours by the watch steps out again at St. John, the metropolis of the province of New Brunswick. It is a trip that is well worth one's while even if one has no interest in the objective point. The scenery, though less rugged and startling than that on the western portion of the Canadian Pacific-which is unsurpassed anywhere—is varied and pleasing. After leaving Montreal, where the St. Lawrence is crossed on a splendid specimen of the cantilever bridge, the road runs to the southeast and presents the traveler with a panorama which includes the Green Mountains of Vermont, the White Hills of New Hampshire and what is left of the once magnificent pineries of Maine. There are glimpses, too, of Katahdin and Moosehead Lake, most charming of inland waters; and after the frontier is again crossed the wooded shores of the St. John and the Kennebecasis furnish pictures which will linger long in memory's gallery. St. John is rather a solemn city and spectability and solidity than of thrift and enterprise. It has suffered like all the rest of us from the hard times and has had the additional burden of trying to recover from the fire which devastated it in 1877. It exhibits, however, less appearance of poverty or idleness than any city with which I am acquainted of 45,000 inhabitants, and it has the proud record of for one. It is a sightly city "set upon a hill," and was settled by the loyalists who left New York in 1783.

Attractive features of this provincial city are the high tides, the water rising and falling in the spring and autumn from change in the harbor level has a remarkable effect upon the outflow from the River St. John, which takes its rise in Maine, empties into the harbor through a rocky chasm not much more than 500 feet in width. At low tide there is a fall at this point of some fifteen feet; and at high ide the fall is reversed, and pours the sea into the river with resistless force. At half-tide the fall can be passed with safety by the wary navigator; but if the latter fails to be exact in taking fortune at the flood-or ebb as the case may be-he finds himself drawn back on his course, and compelled to wait another tide. It is an interesting sight to stand on the suspension bridge which overlooks the fall-or on the cantelever just above-and note the "daily recurring miracle," as the people call it, of water running up hill,

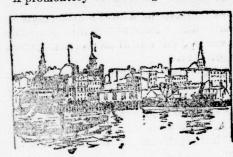

From St. John to the north shore the route is by the Intercolonial Railway, one of the finest and best-equipped railroads in the country, the connecting link between Quebec and the maritime provinces, with the terminals not only at St. John, but at Halifax, N. S., and at Sydney, Cape Breton Island. Upon the route the traveler strikes for the first time the logical method of dividing the day into hours, treating it as a whole day instead of two halves. Midnight instead of being 12 o'clock is 24 o'clock, and when one travels over the road for the first time it seems a little odd to be out so late. Recklessness comes with practice, however-as it does under the commoner enumeration—and he learns to stay up until 23 or 24 o'clock without a murmur. The twenty-four hour system is not, however, the only distinguishing feature of the Intercolonial. Although it runs, very largely, through a new and comparatively little settled country, it has one of the best roadbeds and finest equipments to be found anywhere. There are few of the best roads anywhere where one finds the ordinary day car lighted at night with incandescent electricity, but that is what we found on the Intercolonial, and the contrast with the oil lamps which are such a vexationand in hot weather such a discomfortwas very pleasing. The road is one with a future before it, which it justly merits; for aside from its commercial importance as the connecting link between the provinces it passes within easy reach of more and better fishing territory than any other route in the country. There are moose and caribou, also, to be had in the region if one braves the rigors of winter travel, and has acquired the art of snow-shoe-

The centre of the fishing district-or as good a centre as any-is at Newcastle, on the Miramichi river, about forty miles from the mouth, where this magnificent stream is seven miles wide. Salmon, not very Arge, but exceptionally fine, are taken in the river, and mackerel, bass and cod in the bay; while trout abound in the streams that find their way into the river as well as in the numberless brooks and lakes of the surrounding country. In the winter smelts are taken in enormous quantities and shipped all over the country, as the curious can satisfy themselves if they will look at the brands on the packages this winter in the fish markets. Partridge, plover and snipe abound and English wood-cock are still found, though not as plentiful as they once were. In the spring and fall there are ducks, geese and brant in myriads. In a word, it is the paradise of the sportsman; and as the game laws are being carefully and wisely enforced, it is likely to continue such. Newcastle itself is not a very imposing place, except as a point of departure for the sportsmen. In the harbor, however, may be found the ships of almost every nation taking on cargoes of lumber; and a new enterprise has been put on foot within the past few years in the quarrying of building-stone, grindstones and stones for the reduction of wood pulp. The "Fish" sandstone, so called from the owner of the quarry, Mr. Charles E. Fish, is famous throughout Canada for beauty and durability; and some of it has found its way as far west as Chicago.

A promontory overlooking the Mirami-

thi from the water front of this quarry is connected with a fact that is of historic interest. When the British ship was returning with the body of Wolfe, slain at Quebec, the convoy sailed up the Miramichi to get fresh water for the voyage, and it was this elevated point that an encampment was made. While the forces were in camp an attack was made from an Indian village on the other side of the river and the commander, believing it to come from the French, destroyed the village and practieally made a clean sweep of the settlement on that side of the river, including the oldest church in the province a few miles below. The village which has since sprung up on the site is known to this day

Burned Church. Another historic incident was on one of the greatest forest fires in history. It occurred in October, 1825, and swept over the entire Miramichi country from the head waters of the river, in a sheet of flame 100 miles broad, and devastated an area of more than 4,000 square miles, 400 of which were pretty well settled country. According to the accounts of the early historians. the loss, aside from that of the forests, which was incalculable, was over $1,000. 000 in property, including 600 houses and 300 head of cattle. In addition there were at least 160 lives lost and probably many more. The light of the fire was seen as far as the Magdalen Islands and the cinders ained all over the streets of Halifax, hunireds of miles away.

A HANDY RULE.

One That Will Oftentimes Get Men Out of Bothersome Scrapes.

The rule often called "the 6, 8 and 10 rnle" is not nearly so well known as it should be, as this would often get men out of scrapes that now bother them. For example: we are out at the lumber pile and want to cut a piece six feet long and have the ends square. We have only the ordinary two foot rule with us, no try square or carpenter's square, and how shall we get the ends square. If we had one square-we could measure down each side an equal distance, but as neither end is square we shall have to use our "6, 8 and 10 rule." We begin by measuring along the straight edge of the board and (supposing it to be a board not exceeding twelve inches) lay off six inches, marking each point, making one point where we wish to cut. Now, measuring across the board, we lay off eight inches and makes an "arc," by swinging the rule from the first point. For the final mark we take ten inches on the rule, and placing one end on the second point we marked, swing it until "ten inches" crosses the arc swing, A line drawn through the first and third points will be at right angles to the edge of the board. In other words, we form a triangle with a base six inches; a height of eight inches and a hypothenuse of ten inches, which makes a right angle triangle. The cut will show this plainly. It will be seen that it is marked 3, 4 and 5 inches in the cut instead of 6. 8 and 10, but it is the same proportion and may be 12, 16, 20 inches or feet, according to requirements. Start with the point marked one and lay off two just three inches from it. Again, using point 1, lay out point 3, which is just 4 inches from it, and from point 2 measure where the line will cut point 3, when just 5 inches long. Then draw through 1 and 3 and you have the line at right angles to the edge of the board. It may be interesting to note that this valuable rule, (which is really that a "right angled triangle can be formed by having the sides in the proportion of 3, 4 and 5") was discovered and published by the Greek philosopher Pythagorus several thousand years

SIX. EIGHT AND TEN RULE.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, FOURTH QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 14.

Text of the Lesson, Luke v, 1-11-Mem ory Verses, 4-6-Golden Text, Mark i, 17 - Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

1. "And it came to pass that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, He stood by the lake of Gennesareth.' After He was expelled from Nazareth, as we saw in last week's lesson, He for a time made Capernaum His center (Math. iv, 13) that prophecy might be fulfilled. About that time Andrew and Peter, James and John received a call to follow Him and did so (Math, iv, 18-22). Among the many sick and suffering whom He healed in Capernaum were the man in the synagogue with an unclean spirit and the mother of Simon's wife. Throughout all Galilee He healed all manner of disease and preached the gospel of the kingdom, so that His fame spread everywhere (Math. iv. 23-25). In the midst of this popularity today's lesson finds Him preaching to the people hungering for the word on the shore of Galilee's sea. From my present experience in 15 Bible classes, held in as many different cities and towns, in which I meet from 2,000 to 3,000 people weekly in all kinds of weather, I most earnestly testify to all preachers and teachers that people still hunger for the word of God. Why should there be a famine? (Amos viii, 11, the postoffice at 8:20 a.m.

"And saw two ships standing by the lake, but the fisherman were gone out of them and were washing their nets." This is clearly a different incident from that in Math. iv, 18-22, for there the men were in the ships, two of them casting a net and two mending their nets. How interesting it is that all we do is seen and noted, and the Spirit thinks it worth while to record whether these men were washing or mending or casting their nets! If we would live always as under the eye of the Lord. what a difference it might make!

8. "And He entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And He sat down and taught the people out of the ship." To appreciate this fully one must remember that a fishing boat is not always the sweetest nor cleanest kind of a vessel, and some Christian people would consider well before stepping into a fishing boat, even to do people good. Let us consider Jesus and have more of His spirit. What He would teach the people we may imagine from His discourse with Nicodemus and the woman of Samaria, etc. It would surely be concerning the kingdom and how to reach it and walk worthy of it.

4. "Now, when He had left speaking. He said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep and let down your nets for a draft." He had been in a figure, casting the net for souls, and His word would surely accomplish His pleasure and bear fruit to the glory of God. But He has been using Simon's boat and taking Simon's time, and He will let no service go unrewarded. He is not unmindful of the needs of the body and will surely make good Math.

Him, Master, we have toiled all the night | can put you in possession of one. and have taken nothing-nevertheless at Thy word I will let down the net." We cannot help thinking of that other night long after when they toiled all night and caught nothing (John xxi, 8). Is there any connection? It is well for Christians to remember that no labor is ever in vain in the Lord (I Cor. xv, 58).

6. "And when they had this done they inclosed a great multitude of fishes, and their net brake." At His word something is always accomplished. When it is God who worketh there will aways be results, perhaps not what we would like or wish, but always what He pleases. He controls even fishes, and fishes more easily than men, for they do not resist Him. In the post resurrection incident the net did not break (John xxi, 11). Consider why.

7. "And they beckoned unto their partners which were in the other ship that they should come and help them. And they came and filled both the ships so that they began to sink." What a giver the Lord is! How abundantly He rewards these partners for the use of one of their boats! Why do we know so little of the Lord's fullness, of His exceeding abundance? Is it not because we do not yield fully to Him? We are so loath to present our bodies a living sacrifice, so afraid He will require too much of us or in some way afflict or grieve us, when all the while He desires to fill us with all His fullness (Eph. iii, 19). Hear Him as He says that if His people would only hearken unto Him He would feed them with the finest of the wheat and satisfy them with honey from the rock (Ps. lxxxi, 13, 16). 8. "When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord. Nothing gives such a deep conviction of sin as a sight of the Lord and His goodness. It is the goodness of God that leads us to repentance (Rom. ii, 4). Consider what abhorrent views of self were wrought in Job, Isaiah, Daniel and Paul when they saw the glory and goodness of the Lord (Job xiii, 5, 6; Isa. vi, 5; Dan. x, 8; Phil. iii, 7, 8). If we have a good opinion of ourselves, we need only to see Jesus in order to have all our comeliness turned to corruption and be enabled truthfully to "I know that in me-that is, in my flesh-dwelleth no good thing" (Rom. vii,

"For he was astonished and all that were with him at the draft of the fishes which they had taken." All their night's toil had accomplished nothing, but now, with one cast of the net, both boats are filled almost to sinking. What an illusration of Prov. x, 22, R. V., "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and toil addeth nothing thereto!" If we would only abide always and wholly under His control, how much He might accomplish through us! His name is wonderful, and there is nothing too wonderful for Him. 10. "And so was also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon: Fear not. From henceforth thou shalt catch men." Earthly partnerships are helpful if in the Lord, as these four were, but we must avoid all partnerships with the ungodly (II Cor. vi, 14-18). Esteem above all things the partnership with this very same Jesus, who in our lesson so blesses these men, for He condescends to let us be laborers with Him (I Cor. iii, 9).

11. "And when they had brought their ships to land they for sook all and followed Him." On a previous occasion it is written that they left their nets and followed Him (Math. iv, 20), but now they forsook all. Yet, after the resurrection, we find some of them, at Peter's suggestion, toiling at their nets again, but fruitlessly. It was on that occasion that Jesus said to Simon, 'Lovest thou me more than these?"(John xxi, 8, 15.)

SUPPLEMENT TO DAILY ADVERTISER --- SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1894.

Motto for the Week:

When bad men combine, the good must associate; or they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle. - [EDMUND BURKE.

Mr. Gladstone, we notice, has published a letter during the last week announcing his adhesion to local option. That is as we expected. Last week the Home Guard expressed the opinion that his former utterances on the question had probably been misrepresented, or misinterpreted. During the last two years he has, over and over again, committed himself, both before the general public and before his many temperance supporters, to stand of fall, with his Government and party, on the Local Veto Bill introduced by his Government. Having thus committed his colleagues and successors, it is not like the man to turn suddenly and leave them in the lurch as soon as he has become personally rid of the responsibilities of office.

Some Canadian newspapers started :he story that Frances E. Willard, the well-known W. C. T. U. worker, had changed her views regarding prohibition, and even total-abstinence, during her year's visit in England. The Hamilton Spectator and the Halifax Herald, both anti-prohibitionists, seem to have led off in this matter. We notice, too, that the Advocate, the new liquor interests' organ-which has generally been reliable-followed suit. Of course the statements are false. We hardly thought it worth while even referring to them. Miss Willard has recently written to a leading Canadian W. C. T. U. worker, in which she says: "Concerning total abstinence, prohibition and woman's ballot, my opinions are fixed as the laws of gravitation. Politicians try to make it seem otherwise for their own purposes."

It turns out that Mr. Gladstone is a more thorough out-and-out Prohibitionist than many gave him credit for. Instead of repudiating the principle of local option, as some recently reported him to have done, he affirms his adhesion to that, but not to that as a finality. He hopes to see something more than that, and at once, too. He expresses the conviction that merely limiting the number of licensed places is "little less than an imposture." We take it that he is fully awake to the importance of three-fold prohibition, in order to get an effective measurestriking at the manufacture and importation as well as the sale. Canada has had its experience in attempting to stop sales merely, and allowing the manufacture and importation to go on, and it was by no means satisfactory. The intelligence of the country now demands something more than merely limiting the number of licensed places, or even than merely cutting off all licenses and still allowing the other two sluices to remain wide open.

Lessons of the McWhirrell Case,

Much public attention has been drawn of late to the case of Walter McWhirrell, convicted for the brutal Lurder of Mr. and Mrs. Williams last December and sentenced to be hanged, but now taken to the penitentiary for life. Perhaps no criminal trial in this Province for years has been more carefully watched throughout. Certainly no crime could have been more revolting and brutal.

Whoever read carefully the history of that strange case, through the various stages of its development, must have been struck with the fact that the connection of the liquor shop was very close throughout. Walter McWhirrell and John Walker, two young Englishmen, were the persons most closely suspected. Both were found guilty by the coroner's inquest, and the latter is yet in jail awaiting his trial on charge of being implicated in the murder of Mrs. Williams. The evidence went to show that they first fell in with each other at a York street licensed tavern in Toronto, and they there met and consulted time after time over repeated drinks.

John Cory, the hired man, who was so at one time suspected and who a material witness in the case, first fell in with McWhirrell in same York street bar-room, and it hile drinking there together that the information about the old illiams and where and how to Both McWhirrell and then fast spending their drink and were getting and Walker at Little York, the evi- Plebiscites and Per Capita of Use. | wards consumed in some other 'prov- attendance and the reports of officers (work in that country. The proto a tavern there for more drinks. Later on McWhirrell returned to Farmer Stapleford's, where he had worked during the summer, in a state of intoxication and penniless, as he was found to be at the time of the ar-

McWhirrell tells the story that he found two men with the stolen horse and sleigh at a West End licensed tavern and made purchase of it there, where all seem to have met with one accord. There were more or less drinks also connected with the prisoners in the case and Butcher, the milkman, where their horse was left for a day

The way the money flew, too, would indicate that most of the men who have figured so prominently were having "a roaring good time," though the money seems to have gone nearly all in the one direction—for drinks—as their meals and lodgings were of a very economical character. McWhirrell had $65 when he left Farmer Stapleford's a short time before—the hard earnings of months. It was shown, too, that he got $15 more for the horse only two or three days before his arrest, and yet he had not 5 cents in his possession when arrested. Cory had been paid $15 a few days before, also the earnings of many days' hard work, most of them were claimed to be and that was all gone before he turned up to account for himself. Walker, it has been shown, had been imprisoned before for stealing property and selling up, and was so "hard up" those times and do almost anything that would furnish him more money.

Or own conclusion was, in reading the evidence of the trial from day to day, that while it was not at all probable that any of the licensed liquor and British Columbia. sellers were cognizant of any crime bebar-rooms first brought together men different provinces has not been puband left them in condition to be ready lished in the Dominion inland revenue for almost any act. Thus were lives returns of the past two or three years, sacrificed, property stolen, the peace as it was years ago. These figures, so

The two victims of that dreadful murder were quiet, harmless, temperate people themselves, who probably "left the drink alone," but, in our opinion, they became victims all the same. The taxpayers of Peel county and the one case, and it will cost them at least another $10,000 before is is through. Then, the sense of peace and security in the whole community has been greatly shaken by the dreadful occur-

Can any one feel, in the face of the evidence of a case like this, that, if need be, the personal liberty of a few to drink and sell ought to outweigh in importance the personal safety of a whole community? T. W. CASEY.

About "Public Accommodation," The good meaning Canadian people who strongly favor granting liquor licenses "for the accommodation of travelers" and all that, were given a text in the Toronto papers recently well worthy of some hard thinking about. At Little York, east of Toronto, there is just such a house, and on Friday night of last week Frank Fisher, a guest of the house, got in a mad frenzy, the result of a protracted spree and "undertook to clean the house out," in which he seems to have succeeded for a time. Of course, "the traveling public" had to shift for itself as best it could, while the effects of the bar "accommodation" were being thus worked off. In the end a constable was called in and with his cane succeeded in knocking the man into helplessness, after which he was put under arrest and was afterwards fined $10 or twenty days. His money, of course, had been squandered in drink-there was good evidence of that-and he was sent to jail for twenty days.

The other lodgers got back to safety and quietness, and the taxpayers got another dose of taxation to pay the constable, the convicting magistrate and the jail bill, but the license holder got the sale of his liquors. If the license officials proceed against the seller for supplying liquor to a man already intoxicated the Home Guard will cheerfully give full credit for it. This case is but one of the many unavoidable incidents, even in a fairly persons gave their names for memberwell conducted licensed tavern, of ship at the next division meeting. legally connecting a liquor bar with a house of public accommodation. Would not the traveling public be quite as well off under prohibition?

-There will in future be few boy smokers in the State of Illinois. The Hughes, Irwin, Bosworth, Phillips, Legislature has passed a law prohibit- Williams, and Sisters Hughes, Doan,

A very intelligent correspondent asks us for information regarding the particulars of the dates and results of the prohibitition plebiscites taken in the various provinces and also the average per capita of liquors consumed in each Province. We have published similar information from time to time in the Home Guard, but cheerfully do so again, as many are now referring to facts of this kind.

The dates of the votings were as follows:

1. Manitoba, July 23, 1892, at the general Provincial elections.

2. Prince Edward Island, Dec. 14, 1893, at the general Provincial elec-3. Ontario, Jan. 1, 1894, at the gen-

In every one of these provinces the prohibition majorities were much more decisive than the political maiorities at the same elections, and "s weeping."

In New Brunswick no such plebiscite was taken at the last election, but the Legislature then elected, has since ing per capita estimate for the various it, the proceeds of which were drank adopted a resolution in favor of Dominion prohibition by a unanimous as to be ready to go almost anywhere vote. In the Northwest Territories Legislature a resolution was recently adopted ordering such a plebiscite at the next general election.

The last published Dominion inland revenue report gives the following figures of the annual consumption per head for the entire Dominion for 1893: Spirits, gallons, .740; beer, 3.485, wine, 094; tobacco, 2.314 pounds.

The "spirits" given represents proof spirits, or equal to from two to four times that quantity of whisky and such iquors, as ordinarily sold, according to their usual strength.

The tables given for years indicate quite a falling off, per capita, in the consumption of spirits and wine, but office of D. Scribe, and J. Turner, held at St. Helier, Jersey Island, quite a large increase in beer. In 1873 the per capita of spirits is re- position. In the evening a public ported in the membership, on ported at 1.682 gallons; in 1883 it fell to 1.090 and in 1893 to .740. Of wines the consumption in 1873 to .238 of a gallon; in 1883, but .135 and in 1893 down to .094. This does not include native Canadian wines, however, the manufacture of which has become a large industry in some localities.

Beer consumption, on the contrary, shows an increase. In 1873 the per capita was reported at 3.188 gallons; entertainment of delegates and visitors in 1883 it fell to 2.882, and in 1893 it rose to 3.485. The average yearly consumption of beer since Confederation is 2.768 gallons, or one-third less than last year's consumption.

Turning to the Dominion Statistical Year Book for 1891 we find the followprovinces of "liquor," which included spirits, wine and beer. It is the same, we believe, as was given in the inland D.G.W.P., Ravenshoe P. O. revenue reports a few years ago. THE GRAND CHIEF'S INQUIRY .-Immediately after Mr. Laurier's speech at Winnipeg was published in this Province. Mr. J. D. Andrews, G.C.T., of Hamilton, wrote him, asking him explicitly if he was correctly reported as saying that the Liberal party, in the event of being returned to power, would give a Dominion prohibition plebiscite, and if the result was a majority for prohibition would they then feel bound to enact a prohibitory law and stand by it Mr. Laurier has replied that such is their position before

T. Andrews, of this Province, received a few days ago a letter from Defense Lodge, Brisbane, Queensland, asking for a short history of the order in Canada. Similar requests were sent at the same time to similar officers in various parts of the world. These replies will be read at a public meeting to be held under the auspices of that lodge on Nov. 9.

THE OTTAWA DISTRICT.—Reports have been published in the Ottawa papers of increased activity in the work by the executive of Carleton county, which includes the city of Ottawa. Old Cameron Lodge—one of the oldest now in the work, and named after the old veteran, Hon, Malcolm Cameron, in his life-time-is hard at work. It recently had a very well attended and successful social. Several lodge fraternal visits have been made. Arrangements are being made by the executive to organize a lodge at Manotic at an early day and to help strengthen several others.

Some Practical Suggestions.

The importance of temperance journals in the advancement of tempe ance work is being constantly mor and more recognized by really intell gent workers. Not only is it necessar to inform those not already convince of the facts and arguments, but the cessful work.

Similar work would place the Home GUARD into thousands of hands and awake much additional interest, besides enabling us to greatly improve it in every way. Will not the workers help in this matter?

WOMEN IN NEW ZEALAND .- Since the enfranchisement of women in a British Province the English papers have given a good deal of attention to the workings of the experiment. The London Star recently said: "Woman continues to pursue her conquering way in New Zealand. All the ladies of that colony who have attained the age of 21 are legally qualified to vote at Parliamentary elections; a lady, Miss Yates, is the duly elected mayor of an important borough; another lady, Miss Lillian Edgar, has recently been elected a member of the governing body of the University of Auckland. and by the last mail we hear of the ladies securing three out of the seven seats on a school board. Furthermore. one of the three ladies has been chosen as president of the board for the enuing year.

PROTECTION IN SWITZERLAND. Switzerland is, in many respects, in advance in legislation of other countries. The factory laws of Zurich, adopted in 1887, provide that such parts of machinery and belts as are dangerous to life must be carefully fenced in by a railing, and all preventative measures must be applied to insure laborers against ill-health and accidents. Factories can be built or altered only after the Government has approved the plans. A factory injurious to the health and life of its workers and neighbors must suspend until improved. Manufacturers are amenable for injury or death to a workingman by neglect of his foreman, inspector, or other employes under their

An Interesting Chat With the Rev. W. J. Chapin.

Ke Met the Crisis and Returned to His Duties With Renewed Health.

(From the Springfield, Ill., Journal.) In the pretty village of Chatham, Ill., there lives a Baptist divine whose snow white hair is the one outward sign that he has encroached upon the days beyond the allotted three score years and ten. His clear eye, keen mental faculties and magnificent physique all bear witness to a life well spent. This pioneer in God's eternal vineyard is Rev. W. J. Chapin, whose 72 years are crowded with noble deeds in the Christian ministry.

To a Journal representative who asked him something of his career in the ministry, Mr. Chapin talked in an interesting strain, and said that, in spite of the indications to the contrary, his life had not all been sunshine and good health.

"As my present appearance testifies, I was fortunate in the possession of a very vigorous constitution. But as is too often the case, I overestimated my physical reill that I was compelled to stop before my sermon was finished. It was a bad case of nervous prostration, and for a time my friends and family were greatly exercised over my condition. Complete rest was health was sufficiently restored to resume work, but I was not the same man. I felt absolutely worthless physically and mentally. I had so lost control voluntarily release their grip upon a pen, and my hand would turn over with absolutely no volition on my part. About two years ago, to intensify matters, I was seized with a severe attack of la grippe. I recovered only partially from it and had frequent returns of that indescribable feeling which accompanies and follows that strange malady. I looked in vain for something to bring relief and finally I read an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Something seemed to tell me that they would do me good and I commenced using them. They gave me additional strength from the start and toned up my system from a condition of almost absolute prostration so that I was able again to resume my duties as a minister. The improvement was simply marvelous, and the credit is due Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Chapin was present during the con-

They did him so much good that I decided to try their efficacy on myself. I have been troubled for years with what our physician, Dr. Hewitt, called rheumatic paralysis, and since taking the Pink Pills I have be stronger and the pain in my right arm hand is less acute. Two Little Girls I Know.

I know a little girl (You? Oh, no!) Who, when she's asked to go to bed, Does just so: She brings a dozen wrinkles out,

And takes the dimples in; She puckers up her pretty lips, And then she does begin: "Oh, dear me! I don't see why! All the others sit up late, And why can't I?"

Another little girl I know With curly pate, Who says, "When I'm a great big girl, I'll sit up late.

But mamma says 'twill make me grow To be an early bird." So she and dolly trot away Without another word.

Along this they trudged, Breezy squealing every few moments at sight of a starfish, with its five jeweled points crusted with very prickly-looking little spines. She did not squeal because she had stepped on one, but because it might hurt so very dreadfully if she should!

On the island was a grove of stunted cedars, with tables dotted around here and there, amid a very discouraged- But she didn't really know the air, looking growth of samphire. "O papa, see! your basket of clams! Way out there, getting swallowed up, like Pharaoh !"

"Well, I couldn't help it," said papa, drily. "I found I had to leave either the clams or the children, and I concluded it would better be the clams; but we can go back there and exchange now, if you want to!"

"Oh, no, no!" expostulated Berry and Breezy, eagerly. "Let's go and tell mamma how we were drowned!" "But, said Berry, "if we were really drowned, we couldn't tell her you see !"

"Well, most drowned, then!" cor-

Finished Poetry.

Patient Labor as Much as Fine Frenza a Factor in Its Production.

There are yet some persons left who fancy that poetry is the product of a fine frenzy that the poet genius awakes rom a sublimated cataleptic trance to fill page after page with effortless beatitude. A number of manuscript sheets of Longfellow's "Excelsior, which may be found in Harvard, should not only explode this theory, but give hope to many a discouraged amateur. As Longfellow first constructed the first verse of this poem it

The shades of night were falling fast As through an Alpine village passed A youth who, as the peasants sung, Responded in an unknown tongue, Excelsior.

This was manifestly weak, as the only obvious reason why the Alpine peasants sung was that that might afford a rhyme for the youth's response in an unknown tongue. A second trial at the verse, however, not only failed to improve it, but arranged it in such form that it is difficult to believe Longfellow guilty of the fault. The last two lines of the verse were made

The Deacon's Remonstrance.

There lived down in Cambridge, Ind., a well-known old gentleman by the name of Josiah Nixon, who in early boyhood had acquired the habit of gross exaggeration. The habit had grown upon him so that he believed everything he said was the truth, no matter how great the exaggeration. After he had reached the ripe old age of three score and ten, some of the deacons in the church thought his peculiarity too much like lying to pass unnoticed, and it was decided after a great deal of consideration that the old gentleman must be churched. One evening while he was seated in front of his door telling a small circle of neighbors about the way pyoneers had to live, the gate opened and the delegation of deacons filed in. "Yes," the old gentleman was saying, "we had hard times then. I lived two years on grass and hickory bark on Sundays. We used to call Sundays. "Mixed Scripture."

Apropos of "Mixed Scripture" says an American minister, I had a parishioner in one of my early circuits who invariably prayed for the widowless and fatherless. Although in comfortable circumstances, he paid me for two years' preaching with a bag of apples, worth 75 cents.

He was full of captious criticism of his brethren—and unsparing, too—so I prepared a sermon to rebuke that failure; and after I had done my best to point out the evil and its remedy, in the class meeting that followed the sermon he said, when called upon to speak: "Well, brethren, I guess some of you got hit today." I never prepared another special

cent occasion, Mr. Robert Wallace created great amusement by stating that a certain sort of herring was called a "Glasgow bailie," though whether that was meant as a compliment to the bailie or as a sarcasm on the herring, he was unable to say. But the origin of the term "Glasgow bailies," as applied to herrings, is very simple. In old times the Glasgow vendors of herrings, who brought their boats up to the Broomielaw, had to present their finest fish to the bailie of the riverthe "skate bailie," as he was termed. Thus, in Glasgow, very large herrings came in time to be themselves called "bailies."

They go on the theory that the Constitution of the United States guarantees the rights of American citizens. Other states are to rally round the Indiana Prohibitionists. They have been assured of the support of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and Populists are interested in the matter.

A Doctor on Alcoholic Remedies.

Recently Prof. Murdoch Cameron, of Glasgow, was amongst the speakers at the National Temperance League breakfast to the officers and members of the British Medical Association, when, in the course of an interesting address, he said: We doctors are blamed a good deal for the drink. Our patients blame us. I remember a man whom I wanted to give up drinking who did not know that I was a doctor. I spoke to him as a friend. He said, "It is no good; my doctor ordered me to take drink." I said, "If the doctor had ordered you strychnine would you go on taking it as you have gone on taking the drink? Would he have let you have gone on taking it when you were having the jumps? If he had ordered you landanum, and your wife said you had been sleeping for sixteen hours, would he have ordered you to continue it? My advice to you is to see if the doctor intended it merely tor." "Well," I said, "I know all the doctors in Glasgow; will you give me his name?" He gave me the name of

I have seen a little disappointment come across the face of a lady when I said she had better take no claret. She said, "I am needing something to make blood." (Laughter.) I said, "Claret will never make blood," and as I did so a shade of disappointment came over her face. I knew a case in Glasgow where there was one of those old fellows who go about and never give a disease a name, but who say, "I will give you a powder or a pill," never venture to say anything more. This old fellow dropped in and looked at the tongue of his patient and felt her pulse. He said, "You need a tumbler of toddy every day at 12 o'clock." After the doctor went away, of course, the neighbors came droptook up my trouble." (Laughter.) You have the appetite to contend against, and you have to set your faces against it, and never prescribe alcohol unless it is in certain rigid cases. There unless there is a bottle of whisky to receive it, outside we have a good deal of difficulty in keeping our patients right. Indoors we have no difficulty whatever, and the patients make good recoveries. I look to women largely to help in this work, but if we are going to be reformers in this matter we cannot ask others to do what we have not the courage to do ourselves. (Cheers.) I am quite convinced of this, that whilst I would welcome the shutting up of public houses, the shutting up at 9 o'clock at night alone would save thousands of our working men. (Applause.) There are cases of consumption so far advanced that Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will not cure, but none so bad that it will not give relief. A DRESS FOR AUTUMN.

WHEN THE LEAVES BEGIN TO TURN DON THE NEW DRESS.

& Dress Having the Latest Sleeve Novelties of the Season-A Skirt With Round Graceful Drapery-The Style of the Trimmings and the Materials Used.

When the leaves have begun to turn one doesn't like to go about in one's essentially summer gowns, no matter how fluffy and pretty they are nor how becoming, nor in what good taste they have been conceived and executed. When cool breezes have begun to blow, and chilly nights and mornings are abroad, the woman who appreciates the fitness of things begins to bestir herself about the arrangement of her autumn wardrobe. Indeed, if she is a clever and far-sighted woman, she will have that arrangement well under way before those chilly hours have come, because certain sad experiences have taught her how busy a dressmaker is in "the season," and how absolutely impossible it is to secure the services of one at a moment's, or even at a month's, notice. Woman's work may be overcrowded - some people say it is-but the fact remains that the demand for dressmaking exceeds the supply. Women who dress ever so littlebuying, perhaps, two suits a year-are often put to their wits' end to get their dresses properly made at the time when they are most needed. Very busy woman are usually so pressed for time that it is a difficult matter to plan their gowns ahead, and arrange for their construction; but a series of continued sad experiences will soon convince them that they must make time for this important duty if they will create for themselves any of the convenience and enjoyment that comes from the wearing of appropriate dress.

Any woman who wants to make a good appearance will never wear a gown the second season without a bit of freshening. but if this is properly done it is usually all that is necessary among those in the plainer walks of life. An appropriate fall wrap -it may be a last year's garment with a few clever alterations-is added early to the fall costume, which is never complete, or, in fact, safe, without it, as the temperature soon begins to vary so much that on going out one should at least carry a jacket with her for contingencies. The gloves and boots should be thicker than those used for mid-summer wear. The divided skirt and Union suit should be of somewhat warmer material; in fact, every effort should be made to prepare the appearance and the person for the expected change in the barometer.

The material known as crepon has been by far the most popular of any of the fabries affected this summer, and bids fair to continue so in its accentuated forms for the fall and winter. This stuff has a peculiarly artistic quality, which endears it to all lovers os the beautiful. Its original manufacturer must have made a fortune out of it by this time, for it is affected in its different qualities by all classes of people. It is now made in a silk-and-wool mixture, a plain wool, a mohair, and a cotton. Some of it is almost transparent, and other qualities are thick and heavy.

One of the chief novelties of the season is observed in the sleeve used in the costume shown in the illustration. This natty adjunct to an elegant fall gown is a happy diversion from the hackneyed mutton-leg, and shows a style entirely new and graceful. The over-part of the sleeve is open from elbow to shoulder, showing a wide flare at the top like an epaulette. A puffing of silk begins at the elbow and fills in the sleeve with its soft, ample folds to the shoulder. From elbow to wrist the sleeve is close-fitting, and garnished with three buttons. Nothing so attractive or original has been devised for a long time. The gown itself is of corn-flower blue cheviot, combined with blue silk showing cardinal figures. The waist is a stylish Eton jacket worn over a full, soft vest of the silk, and finished with a silk stock belt and collar of the same style. The skirt is a double one. with a round, graceful drapery which reaches the foot of the gown in front, and is short and full in the back An effective embroidery in pardinal and blue on cloth forms the stylish revers of the jacket. The band trimming that edges sleeves and drapery is of the same material. - Jenness Miller Monthly.

The pictures should be cut in squares, and, when transferred to the linen, should be bordered with gilt paint, as if framed. An irregular border of the same is painted all around the edge of the linen panel, which is fastened with brass-headed tacks to a gilded curtain rod cut the required

SOME APPLE RECIPES.

Delicious Dishes That Are Particularly

Seasonable. The fresh autumn crop of apples is just entering the market, and receipts for the use of this wholesome and cheap fruit are very much in order. The ways of preparing them for the table are as the stars in number, and each one of them is good and nutritious, and few of them expensive or troublesome.

Begins the dinner very pleasantly, and is simple and easy to make. To two cups of stewed apples add two cups of cold water. Set over the fire until the apple is dissolved and very soft. Mix two teaspoonsfuls of corn starch in a little cold water, and add to this two teaspoonfuls of sugar, a salt spoonful of ground cinnamon and a pinch of salt; stir into smooth paste and add to the apples, stirring all the while. Let it boil for five minutes and strain it into a hot tureen. Just before serving it sprinkle a handful of hot buttered sippets into the tureen.

A nice dish for breakfast or luncheon is made by coring and peeling several large tart apples. Cut slices right across the apples, so that they make rings about a quarter of an inch thick. Let these lie a few minutes in ice water. Then dip them in sugar and fry quickly in hot butter. They make a delightful relish. One of the very nicest of the many puddings made of

APPLE TAPIOCA.

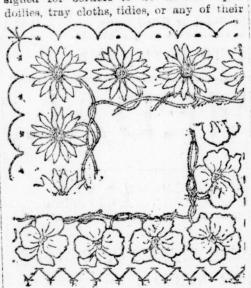

Core and pare six apples fully ripe. Set these in a pudding dish; fill the hollow of each apple with powdered sugar and stick into the pulp three cloves. Sprinkle around the fruit six tablespoonfuls of large pearl tapioca; squeeze a little lemon juice on each apple and pour two cups of cold water into the dish. If this is cooked very slowly for an hour and a half the tapioca will form a delicate jelly all about the apples, and served lukewarm (not hot) with cream will be found very good. It is a dish perfectly wholesome for children and invalids.

APPLE TURNOVERS

Are nice to serve at a luncheon party, enough being made to serve one to each guest. Make a very rich "short" pastry, roll it out and cut into squares about five inches wide. Set in the middle of each a large pared and cored apple; drop into each apple a piece of butter about as big as the end of one's thumb, fill up the hole with sugar and put more around the outside of the fruit. Into the sugar stick two inches of cinnamon and press three cloves into the flesh of the apple. Lay a slice of lemon on the top of all this, then take up the four corners of the pastry, pinch them into a knot over the apple and let them bake in a good quick oven so that the pastry may be well browned, but they must have time to be well done. This way of doing apples is very rich and good. They may be eaten either with or without cream.

luncheon. Dissolve half a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water. Pass three heaping cups of stewed apples through a sieve. sweeten and flavor with lemon juice and cinnamon and mix with the jelly. Whip a pint of sweet, rich cream and stir lightly into the fruit. Heap this into a glass dish and set it into the refrigerator until ready near relatives, in outline stitch with wash silk of any desirable shade. Very little explanation is needed, as the illustrations speak quite plainly for themselves. The little pansies and daisies are conventional in design, but it will add greatly to their artistic effect if they are not all "twins," but are made to vary in some slight details. The pansy faces may nod toward each other further on in the border, thus relieving the "setness" of any absolutely conventional pattern. It takes but a little taste and skill to make this variation, and the effect gained will more than repay one's work. In the case of the daisies, a petal or two twisted, here and there, relieves the stiffness greatly. The intertwining stems form a beautiful inside finish to the border. The fancy stitching on the outside edge may vary almost indefinitely, the illustrations suggesting two styles. Of course, if one has not the "gift" of making one's pencil obey one's fancies, the little variations in the border can be omitted, and it can be made simply a repetition throughout of one little daisy blossom or pansy face. The design is sketched or stamped upon the linen with colored crayon or a soft pencil.

Things Worth Knowing. About a tablespoonful of coal oil put into a quart of cold water makes a nice preparation for washing windows. Wipe dry first with a damp cloth, then rub dry with a dry cloth, and the glass will polish like a piece of China. A rug made of coarse sacking, such as that in which phosphate is sold, has a very pretty effect. Cut the sacking in about four-inch strips; ravel it down to four threads; sew these strips on closely to a firm foundation. The effect is very much like a gray fur rug.

Nothing is better to keep slugs from roses than road dust. First sprinkle the bushes well with water, then sift the dust over them. If this is done while the roses are in bud they will bloom bright and fresh in spite of the dust.

WHITE-EYED VIREO.

This little bird, Vireo Noveboracensis, shown in the illustation, is interesting from the fact that it has a habit of frequently using bits of newspaper for the construction of its nest, and has thereby gained the sobriquet "polititian," given by Wilson, that well-known writer and authority on birds.

The white-eyed vireo, also known as the white-eyed greenlet, is one of about eighteen varieties. It spends its summers mostly in Ontario and Quebec and in the eastern part of the United States, and its winters in the Gulf States and vicinity. The back and head of the female bird is a mouse-colored gray, the breast more whitish in color, and the eye, as its name itdicates, is white, surrounding the black pupil. The wings little darker than its back head, and have a touch of white towards the tips. The male bird is slightly larger than its mate, also much prettier, having more profused markings on the wings. It is an active species, and tangle thickets are its special haunts, although sometimes found in the shrubbery of towns and orchards. It has a varied song, which is quaint and emphatic. In its neatly-made cup or purse-shaped nest one may find the eggs, which, as usual in the vireo's, is a clear white ground, sprinkled with specks of reddish brown and dark purple. The eggs are three to five in number. The white-eyed vireo shares all the traits which are characteristic of its family, being bold, reckless, impulsive (especially when its nesting precincts are disturbed), and gifted with agreeable vocal powers. The nest is usually found on the outskirts of woods, covered with a tangle of blackberry, or other briars, networks of bushes and creeping vines. It is seldom found more than four feet above the ground and is usually built from two to three feet from it. The nest is suspended by the brim from a forked twig, as shown in the illustration.

The red-eyed vireo (Vireo olivaceus) is larger than the white-eyed, and has rather a longer head with a bright red eye. On a long, hot summer's day one may hear its gay and cheerful song floating on the air, when all others are silent. The nest of this tireless songster is built much higher than his brother's with the white eye, it usually being built from five to twentyfive feet above ground, but seldom higher. This nest is also suspended by the rim from horizontal forks of branches. It consists of miscellaneous strips of fibrous bark and fine grasses on the inside, making a strong, durable structure. The redeyed vireo frequents the banks of streams, and seems especially fond of pouring forth its joyful notes from among the branches of some sycamore. - American Agricultur-

Bees and Grapes.

Nelson W. McLain, who was appointed by the United States agricultural department to investigate the complaint that bees destroyed grapes, has reported. He

The bees daily visited the fruit in great numbers and labored diligently to improve the only remaining source of subsistence. They inspected and took what advantage they could of every opening at the stem or crack in the spidermis or puncture made by insects which deposit their eggs in the skin of grapes. They regarded the epidermis of the peaches, pears, plums and other fruits having a thick covering simply as subjects for inquiry and investigation, and not objects for attack. If the skin be broken or removed, they will, in case of need, lap and suck the juices exposed. The same was also true of the grapes, if the skin was broken by violence or burst on account of the fruit becoming over-ripe; the bees lapped and sucked the the juices from the exposed parts of grapes and stored it in cells for food. They made no attempt to grasp the cuticle of grapes with their mandibles or with their claws. If the grapes were cut open or burst from over-ripeness the bees would lap and suck the juices from the exposed segments of the grape until they came to the film separating the exposed and broken sedgments from the unbroken sedgments. Through and beyond the film separating the sedgments they appear to be unable to penetrate. I removed the outer skip from many grapes of different kinds, taking care not to rupture the film surrounding the pulp. When these were exposed to the bees they continued to lap and suck the juices from the outer film until it was dry and smooth as was the film between broken and unbroken sedgments. They showed no disposition to use their jaws or claws, and the outer film, as well as the film between broken sedgments remained whole until the pulp decayed and

After continuing the test for thirty days we sent to Michigan for varieties not obtainable here; another colony of Italian bees were added to the rest and twenty varieties of grapes again exposed upon plates and suspended from the rafters. The conditions naturally prevalent during a severe and protracted drouth were again produced and the test again continued for twenty-five days. The bees showed no more capacity or disposition to offer violence to one kind of grape more than another. No more attention was given the thin-skinned varieties than the thick-skinned. As long as the skin remained whole they did not harm the grapes. When the skins were broken by violence, such as by cutting or squeezing, the juices exposed were appropriated.

SCIENCE IN FARMING.

Interesting Data Concerning the Experimental Schools of Canada The splendid record which Canada made at the world's fair in 1893 in the department of agriculture is not only evidence of the fertility of the soil in the dominion, but it is also a proof of the rapid strides which the Canadian farmer has made durfing the past ten years in the adoption of the latest and most approved methods of scientific and economic farming. The excellence of the agricultural and horticultural exhibits made by Canadians at Chicago on that occasion was due in a large degree to the effective system of experimental farms established in various parts of the dominion a few years ago. Though of comparatively recent origin, these farms have done more to improve the condition of the agricultural classes, especially in the older and more densely populated provinces of Canada, and raise the standard of Canadian farm products than is generally known even among the people of the dominion themselves. -In the United States, as far back as 1861, congress passed an act providing for the endowment of a college of agriculture and mechanic arts in the different states of the union by making a large grant of public land for that purpose. The quantity appropriated for each state was equal to 30,. 000 acres for each senator and representa-, tive in congress under the representation fixed by the census of 1860. The money derived from the sale of these public lands was invested in safe securities and the interest only was used for the maintenance of the institutions. The states themselves provided the necessary land and paid for the erection of all college buildings. It was in this way that the foundation was i laid for the present system of experimental colleges and stations in the United States. The federal government under the provisions of the Hatch bill, passed in 1886, made a further appropriation of $15,000 a year for the establishment and maintenance of scientific experimental stations in every state of the union, and in the following year the office of experimental stations in Washington was created, giving the entire system a central advisory head. Canada first felt the need of a similar system when the completion of the Canadian Pacific railway opened up for settlement the vast grain producing areas of the Northwest Territories and the Province of Manitoba. The farmers of Ontario found that they were unable to produce the standard grains in competition with the farmers of the great west, who paid little or nothing for their land and were able from the rich alluvial soil to obtain a larger and more profitable crop than could be grown on the well-tilled acres of the older provinces. Then began the gradual evolution in the methods of tilling the soil in the eastern provinces of the dominion. Fields of golden grain gave place to fruit farms. Stock raising became an essential instead of an incidental feature in the work of the farmer. Local associations were formed, and practical instruction given as to the latest and most improved methods of making the dairy a profitable source of revenue. The provincial government of Ontario in 1873 provided for the establishment of an agricultural college near Guelph, in the western portion of the province. Skilled instructors were brought from the United States and Great Britain to teach the youth what science had done in those countries to make mixed farming, stock raising and fruit culture take the place of the primitive methods of continual grain production. Although this institution did its work in a most effective manner, the need of a comprehensive system, which would extend to all the provinces, was soon felt. Instruction by local dairy and fruit growing associations, aided by grants of public money, partially filled the want until 1886, when the Dominion Government appointed a commissioner to visit the various experimental stations and agricultural colleges in the United States and Europe for the purpose of obtaining information necessary for the establishment of a system of experimental farms, which could be extended to every province of Canada. As a result of this investigation, parliament in the following year passed an act providing for the establishment of five experimental farms, one in the province of Nova Scotia to meet the wants of the farmers of the maritime provinces, one in Manitoba, one in the Northwest Territory, one in British Columbia, and a central farm near the capital of the deminion, intended to meet the wants of the farmers in Ontaria and Quebec. The provincial farms are managed Farmer. by a superintendent, who is responsible and receives his instructions from the director of of the system stationed at the central farm at Ottawa. All scientific investigations of a general character are conducted on the farm at Ottawa, which comprises some 600 acres and is provided with extensive buildings. The results of experiments made on the central farm are given to the provincial experiment stations, where they

The work on the different farms comprises the conduct of researches and verification of experiments designed to test the relative value for all purposes of different breeds of stock and their adaptability to the varying climate which prevails in different parts of the country, the examination into economic questions involving the production of butter and cheese, testing of the merits, hardiness and adaptability of new or untried varieties of wheat or other cereals and of field crops, grasses and forage plants, fruits, vegetables, plants and trees, and to disseminate among persons engaged in farming, gardening or fruit growing information obtained and samples produced as the result of successful experiments. Also the analyzing of fertilizers in order to test their comparative value as applied to crops of different kinds: examination into the composition and digestibility of foods for domestic antools; experiments in the planting of trees for timber and shelter purposes; examinations into the diseases to which cultivated plants and trees are subject, and also into the ravages of destructive insects and the discovery of useful and effective remedies to be used in such cases; to conduct investigations into the causes of diseases from which domestic animals suffer and ascertain the vitality and purity of agricultural seeds.

My second letter will show the importance of this work by a record of the actual results accomplished in various fields.

CRATES IN HARVESTING.

Saving Effected by Their Use in Marketing

Apples and Potatoes. One of the most successful potato growers in the United States harvests all his potatoes into bushel crates, says the American Agriculturist, piling them up upon a twohorse wagon until fully loaded, when they are drawn directly from the field to market or to the railroad to be loaded upon the cars, or to the cellar to be BUSHEL CRATE stored for a later market. The advantage in the use of such cates is obvious. They afford a receptacle into which the potatoes can be picked from the ground and carried to the cart, and as the crate is set into the cart and an empty crate taken, there is no bruising of the tubers, as when poured several times into and out of baskets in getting them from the field to their destination. The same advantage has even more force in the case of gathering apples, which should be handled as little as possible to preserve the keeping qualities of the fruit. Of course a large number of crates is required where one's potato field or orchard is extensive. but well-made crates once provided will last almost a lifetime, and become better and better appreciated the longer they are used. The particular crate figured has solid ends and slat sides and bottom. The ends have two upright cleats and a horizental cleat at the top, which forms a handle on each end, by which the crate is readily carried. Cut nails and spruce boards would best be used in the construction of these crates, for cut nails and spruce lumber do not readily part company. The crates can be made in bushel or two-bushel sizes, as preferred, being made of such a size in length, breadth and height as will make them fit most economically into one's cart or farm wagon box, taking care always to keep the cubic contents the same, that called for in a bushel or two-bushel measure. Where one is hauling his crops directly to market, such crates will help very materially in it not been for Pink Pills. They did him seiling the crops, for if the dealer can re- so much good that I decided to try their ceive them in the crates, pile them up in efficacy on myself. I have been troubled his cellar without emptying, and bring for years with what our physician, Dr. them up and sell them from the crate as since taking the Pink Pills I have been wanted-when the empty crate can be stronger and the pain in my right arm and stored away for its owner, -he will be hand is less acute. We keep the pills in much better pleased, and will often accept the house all the time, and they do me a produce thus crated in preference to the great deal of good in the way of offering of another which must be handled over at least twice, increasing labor and injuring the fruit. The making of a sup-

not be done. Oil the Harness. There are often rainy days at this season of the year when little can be done to good advantage. The farmer has a full working force at his command, and must be on the lookout to make the best of the time at his disposal. A day cannot be more profitably appropriated than by giving the harness a good oiling. Many farmers wholly neglect this, while others think this work can only be done in a proper manner by the expert harnessmaker. The "know how," of course, must be at your command or your labor may be even worse than lost. There are a few things that must be understood to do this work to be a benefit to your property.

Separate all the parts of the harness and give it a thorough washing. This is best done in 'a common washtub. Put in all the parts; cover with clean, soft water of a temperature of about 100 degrees; about a pint of good, home-made soft soap can be added to each set of harness. Harnessmakers use salsoda to remove the dirt, but I prefer good soft soap. Allow the harness to soak about half an hour: then with a good stout rag or brush remove all the dirt. Use a board to wash over; put in the tub washboard fashion; also have a sharp hickory stick to dig around the loops and buckles. Wash clean and hang up to dry in a place free from dust. Do not hang in the sun. For oiling, use good neatsfoot oil. A little tallow can be added with good success in proportions of one to ten. Also add a little lampblack. About three pints of oil will be absorbed per set of harness. Heat well and apply as hot as your hand will bear. - Ohio

The longer he works the greater the damage is done, and the more the tree must be hacked to dislodge them. Young orchards are most affected by the borer. Not only do they offer the best chance for depositing the tegg in plentiful supplies of palatable wood, but a

THE PREACHER'S TRIAL.

An Interesting Chat With the Rev. W. J. Chapin.

In the Strain of Pulpit Labor He Had Overdrawn His Health Account-How He Met the Crisis and Returned to His Duties With Renewed Health.

(From the Springfield, Ill., Journal.) In the pretty village of Chatham, Ill.

there lives a Baptist divine whose snow white hair is the one outward sign that he has encroached upon the days beyond the allosted three score years and ten. His clear eye, keen mental faculties and magnificent physique all bear witness to a life well spent. This pioneer in God's eternal vineyard is Rev. W. J. Chapin, whose 72 years are crowded with noble deeds in the Christian ministry.

To a Journal representative who asked him something of his career in the ministry, Mr. Chapin talked in an interesting strain, and said that, in spite of the indications to the contrary, his life had not all been sunshine and good health.

"As my present appearance testifies, I was fortunate in the possession of a very vigorous constitution. But as is too often the case, I overestimated my physical resources, and when it was too late learned that I had overdrawn my health account. The crisis came about eighteen years ago, At the time I was preaching the gospe from the pulpit, and I became suddenly so ill that I was compelled to stop before my sermon was finished. It was a bad case of nervous prostration, and for a time my friends and family were greatly exercised over my condition, Complete rest was imperative, and Mrs. Chapin and I planned and took a long trip. My health was sufficiently restored to resume work, but I was not the same man. I felt absolutely worthless physically and mentally. I had so lost control of my muscles that my fingers would involuntarily release their grip upon a pen, and my hand would turn over with absolutely no volition on my part. About two years ago, to intensify matters, I was seized with a severe attack of la grippe. I recovered only partially from it and had frequent returns of that indescribable feeling which accompanies and follows that strange malady. I looked in vain for something to bring relief and finally I read an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Something seemed to tell me that they would do me good and I commenced using them. They gave me additional strength from the start and toned up my system from a condition of almost absolute prostration so that I was able again to resume my duties as a minister. The improvement was simply marvelous, and the credit is due Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Chapin was present during the conversation and said: "I don't think Mr. Chapin could ever have resumed his preaching after he had the attack of la grippe had Hewitt, called rheumatic paralysis, and my system and strengthening me." In all cases like the above Pink Pills offer a speedy and certain cure. They act directly upon the blood and nerves. Sold ply of such crates will afford occupation by all dealers or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of 50 cents a box, or $2 50 for for some rainy days, when other work cansix boxes, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. BASEBALL.

BALTIMOREANS FEEL BADLY.
BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 5.—Hundreds of Baltimore enthusiasts who had arranged to go to New York to see the Orioles and Cinpinnatis play ball tomorrow cancelled their engagements. Many of them discarded their orange and black nickties and other Driole decorations and donned plain black, as better representing their state of mind. The New Yorks won the second game of the Temple series much as they won yesterday's game, by outbatting the home club, and the rooters were sad in consequence. It was not alone the loss of the game, however, that caused so many heartaches, more properly should the dissatisfaction and disaffection be attributed to the faults of the players while off the field.

This morning the Orioles were in as uncertain a frame of mind over the playing of the Temple series as they were yesterday. Some of the players were sulking and wrangling, and McGraw openly asserted that he would not play in another game. The outlook was not encouraging for a continuation of the sport, and it was then the people of Baltimore, as they became acquainted with the facts, began to criticise the pennant winners. Recalling that they had shown their appreciation of the ball team in a way which bordered on the princely, the citizens insisted that the players show a little appreciation of favors | took place Thursday at St. Everist. extended, and defend the city's fair name for sportsmanlike conduct. They argued has the series had been created and that the series must be won or lost in a manly way if the good name of the team and city were to be preserved. Yesterday's haggling and quibbling was forgiven, but no more wrangling would be condoned.

Manager Hanlon presented the conditions to the players, and they were all on the field this afternoon, but their minds were n a chaotic state and their nerves not of the streadiest. The boys put up a good game of ball, however, and partially redeemed themselves in the opinions of their friends.

The teams left for New York, where the third game of the series will be played tomorrow.

A crowd of nearly 11,000 persons was on the grounds when the game was called. It was an ideal day for baseball. New York earned four runs in the third. Baltimore tied the score in their half of the same inning and took the lead in the seventh. The Giants tied the score in the eighth and won out in the ninth on three of Jennings' errors. The side would have been retired had Jennings made what would have been ordinarily an easy play. Tiernan's triple cleared the bases. The Orioles scored one and had three men left on bases in the ninth. The score:

York 1. Umpires-Hurst and Emslie.

Time of game-2:05.
When the New Yorks first got on the field the crowd commenced guying Burke when he went out to left field for practice. He made matters worse by trying to "get back" at those who were getting at him, until they became so exasperated that a rush was made on the field. Burke hit the first man who got to him, but he was soon surrounded by an angry mob. The players of both teams and police hurried to his assistance and trouble was averted. Mc-Graw gave in at the last moment and took his position with the rest of the ball men. The games in New York for the Temple

EXPERIMENTS with glass building bricks were begun in 1891 by Mr. Falconier, an architect of Lyons, These bricks are hollow, being blown like bottles, and are given forms-such as cubes, hexagons, etc. -that permit of ready laying. A bituminous foement, with a base of asphalt, is used with them. The bricks serve as double windows, giving protection against both heat and cold; they are good insulators of humidity and noise, and they lend themselves readily to the decoration of buildings, either by their form or color. The bricks are especially adapted for bath halls, hot shouses, hospitals, refrigerating establishments and buildings in which absence of windows would be an advantage.

TORONTO. Oct. 6. — Only one commodity showed improvement at the western cattle mar-ket yesterday, that of mutton, which advanced cluding 1,771 sheep and lambs, and about 1,400 hogs. There was little trade in export cattle, about the only buyer being James Eakins. Several loads of the best cattle were bought for Antwerp. Only really good cattle brought 3½c per 1b, 3½c being generally paid; common and rough cattle went as low as 3c. There was a general complaint of the condition of cattle not being good enough. Buying for butchers' cattle was slow, save for really good cattle. There was practically no buying for outside, and local demand was light. Some common cattle at 2½c, and one or two bunches outside, and local demand was light. Some common cattle at 2½c, and one or two bunches that were considered poor went at 2½c, though the general price for good cattle was from 3c to 3½c, one or two choice going up to 3½c. Prices of stockers and feeders ranged from ½c to 3c. Export sheep advanced about ½c on better news across the ocean. Those taken sold from 3½c to ½c, though the supply was large. Lambs were quiet and dull, prices ranging from $2 to $2.25. There was a good demand for calves.

open course. Electric Motors.

The only firm of its kind in Ontario west of Hamilton is the London Electric Motor Company, which was established but a few months ago, with its headquarters at 90 York street. During its short existence the company has made a reputation for itself which is causing a rapid increase in trade. It goes extensively into the manufacture of constant potential motors, from 1 to 20 horse power, now rapidly replacing steam power in many of the factories throughout Canada and the United States. These motors have advantages which are recognized by every person. They are money-saving devices, the space occupied by them is but a few feet, and they can be operated by the youngest boy. Another advantage is the trifling expense necessary to keep the motor in order. Many of these machines have already been placed in London industries, and are giving the greatest satisfaction. Repairing of all kinds of electrical appliances-from the smallest to the largest-is a specialty of the company. Alternating fan motors, switches and resistance boxes are also manufactured. They have agencies in all the principal cities, and have already sold motors and supplies in

Richard North walked along, full of crouble. It could not be but that he should have taken up a suspicion that Oliver Rane - now his brother-in-law - might have been the author of the anonymous letter. How, else, could its copy have dropped from his pocket-book - if, indeed, it had so dropped? Jelly had not thrown so much as a shadow of hint upon the doctor; either she trolled herself to caution; but Richard North could not two failed to see the obvious inference, or conorth could put two-and-two together. He went straight to Mrs. Gass's, and found that lady at breakfast in her dining-room, with window thrown up to the warm summer

"What is it you, Mr. Richard?" she cried, rising, to shake hands. "I'm a'most ashamed to be found breakfasting at this hour; but the truth is, I overslept myself; and that idiot of a girl never came to tell me the time. The first part of the night I had no sleep at all; 'twas three o'clock before I closed my

"Were you not well?" asked Richard. "I'd a touch of my pain; nothing more. Which is indigestion, Dr. Rane says; and he's about right. Is it a compliment to ask you to take some breakfast, Mr. Richard? The eggs are fresh, and here's some downright good tea."

Richard answered that it would be only a compliment; he had breakfast with his father and Arthur Bohun before leaving home. His eyes ran dreamily over the white damask cloth, as if he were admiring what stood on it; the pretty china, the well kept ver, the vase of fresh roses. Mrs. Gass liked to have things nice about her, although people called her vulgar. In reality Richard what he had to ask, and with how he should

In a pause, made by Mrs. Gass's draining her cup of tea, Richard North bent forard and opened the communication, speak in low and confidential tones. "I have come to you thus early for a little information, Mrs. Gass. Will you kindly tell me what were the contents of the paper that was found here on your carpet, the pight of Edmund's seizure?

From the look that Mrs. Gass's countenance assumed at the question, it might have een thought that she was about to have a solzure herself, Her eyes grew round, her chesk and nose red, For a full minute she made no answer.

"What cause can you have to ask me that, Mr. Richard? You can't know nothing

"Yes, I can; and do. I know that such a paper was found; I fear it was a copy of the anonymous letter. But I have come to you particulars.

"My patience!" ejaculated Mrs. Gass. "To think you should have got hold of it at Who in the world told you, sir?"

"Jelly. But "Jelly. But — "
"Prat that giri!" warmly interposed Mrs. Gass. Her tongue is as long as from here to yonder."

"But not intentionally, I was about to add. I overheard her say a chance word, and I insisted upon her disclosing to me what she knew. There is no blame due to

elly, Mrs. Gass."
"I say, Yes there is, Mr. Richard. What steam-engine; once set going it won't be

"Well, we will leave Jelly. It may be for the better that I know this. Tell me all about it, my dear old friend." Thus adjured, Mrs. Gass spoke; telling the tale from the beginning. Richard listened in "He denied that it came out of his pocket-ok?" was the first remark he made. "Denied it out and out. And then my houghts turned naturally to Molly Green; rno other stranger had been in the room at them two. He said perhaps she had rought it in her petticoats from the Hall; but I don't think it could have been. I'm Afraid - I'm afraid, Mr. Richard - that it must have dropped from his pocket-book." Their eyes met; each hesitating to speak out the conviction lying at heart, notwith-aranding there had been confidential secrets between them before today. Richard was thinking that he ought not to have married Bessy - at least, until it was cleared up. Why did you not tell me, Mrs. Gass?

"It was in my mind to do so - I said word or two - but then, you see, I couldn't think it was him that wrote it," was her nower. "Mrs. Cumberland told me she saw the anonymous letter itself; Mr. North showed it her; and that it was not a bit like any handwriting she ever met with. Suppose he is innocent - would it have been right for me to come out with a tale, even to you, Mr. Richard, that he might have been guilty?" On this point Richard said no more. All the talking in the world now could not undo the marriage, and he was never one to re-proach uselessly. Mrs. Gass resumed.

"If I had spoke ever so, I don't suppose it would have altered things. Mr. Richard. There was no proof; and, failing that, you wouldn't have liked to say anything at all to Miss Bessy. Any way they are man and wife now. 'I hope - I hope he did not write it!'

said Richard, fervently. Mrs. Gass gave a sweep with her arm to all the china together, as she bent her earnest face nearer to Richard's. "Let's remember this much to our comfort, Mr. Richard; if it was him, he never thought to harm a hair of your brother's head. He must have wrote it to damage Alexander. Oliver Rane has looked upon Alexander as his mortal enemy — as a man who did him a right down bad turn and spoilt his prospects — as a man upon whom it was a'most a duty to be revenged."

"Do you think this?"cried Richard, rather at sea.

"No; but I say he thinks it. He never meant worse nor better 'y the letter than to drive Alexander away tim the place where, as Rane fancies, he only had a footing by treachery. That is, if he wrote it. Sometimes I think he did, and sometimes I think he didn't."

"What is to be done?" "Nothing. You can do nothing. You and me must just bury it between us, sir, for Miss Bessy's sake. It would be a nasty thing for her if a whisper of this should go abroad, let him be as innocent as the babe unborn. They are fond of one another, and it would just be a cruelty to have stopped the marriage with this. He is a well-intentioned man, and I don't see but what they'll be happy together. Let us hope that he has made his reace with the Lord, and that it won't be visited upon him." "Amen!" was the mental response of Rehard North,

CHAPTER XIII.

Dashing up to Dallory Hall, just a week and a day after the wedding, came Mrs. North. Madam had learnt the news.

Whitst she was reposing in all security in Paris, amidst a knot of friends who had chosen to be there at that season, Matilda North happened to take up a Times newspaper of some two or three days old, and saw the account of the morriage; "Oliver Rane, M.D., of Dallory Ham, to Bessy, daughter of John North, of Dallory Hall, and of Elizabeth, his first wife." Madam rose up, her face flaming, and clutched the journal; she verily believed Miss Matilda was playing a farce upon her. No; the announcement was there in plain black and white. Making her hasty arrangements to quit the French capital, she came thunderng home; and arrived the very day that

Dr. and Mrs. Rane returned. A letter had preceded her. A letter of denouncing wrath, that had made her husband shake in his shoes. Poor Mr. North looked tremblingly out for the arrival, caught a glimpse of the carriage and of madam's face, and slipped out by the back-door into the fields. Where he remained wandering about for hours.

So madam found no one to receive her. Richard was at the works, Captain Bohun had been out all the afternoon.

Nothing increases wrath like having no object to expend it on; and madam foiled. might have sat for a picture of fury. The passion that had been bubbling higher and higher all the way from Paris, found no One of the servants happened to come in her way; the first housemaid, who had been head over Molly Green. Madam stopped her; bit her lips for calmness, and then in-quired particulars of the wedding with a smooth face.

Without counting the little ones, who enjoyed themselves in their own fashion, about 70 sat down to supper. After all were fully satisfied the speech-making began, and Deacens McIntyre and Kierstead spoke in kindly terms of the paster and his work, and expressed their gratitude for his faithful and fearless work amongst them. NEW YORK, Oct. 5 .- Cats and rabbits are suspected of having carried smallpox from the isolated hospital to the almshouse in Newark, where two cases of the disease were discovered. The hospital for contagious diseases and the almshouse are only a short distance apart on the same tract of land. There were a dozen cats in the almshouse, and nearly as many more in the stables, and a number of tame rabbits had the run of the grounds. TEMPLARS IN COUNCIL.

East Middlesex District Council in Somerset Hall-An Evening Concert.

A meeting of East Middlesex District Council of Reyal Templars was held in Somerset Hall yesterday afternoon, and was followed by a concert in the evening, at which a silver collection was taken up At the business meeting in the afternoon Mr. G. N. Weekes, the select councilor, occupied the chair. Among those present were: Chas. W. Stein (secretary), Miss McClary, Nilestown; E. Parsons, Komoka; J. Lee, London East; Miss Bernard, Nilestown; Miss Gowat, Nilestown; J. Sinclair, Komoka; Mrs. Watson, Komoka, and Messrs. Francis, Thornhill, John Cameron and others, of Somerset Council, city. Arrangements were made for resuscitating old councils and opening new ones. The Crusaders' Band will shortly be brought into the district. Councils were recommended to promote the circulation of the Templar as far as possible. Resolutions were passed requesting electors to attend primary political meetings and ascertain the stand of the candidates on the subject of temperance as outlined by the late Methodist General Conference. Similar steps were recommended to be taken in regard to municipal councils with reference to the reduction of licenses in the various municipalities. In the evening a concert was held in the hall. Mr. Weeks again occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks he referred particularly to the attitude of the Roman Carholic Church in relation to the temperance platform, and in having debarred liquor dealers from holding office in the church. Mr. Fred W. Daly, in a paper, rather severely criticised the action of the Methodist General Conference in mutilating the report of the committee on temperance. The conference, in his opinion, was not educated on the question. Its action in refusing to make it obligatory that Sunday school superintendents should be abstainers from tobacco was also adversely criticised. It seemed to him that it was a dire mistake that Sunday school scholars should be set a bad example on account of the personal feelings of a few Sunday school superintendents. At the last local general ents. election the question of prohibition had not, in his opinion, been discussed as it should have been. He urged temperance people, irrespective of denomination, to vote for temperance candidates only or not vote at all. Then prohibition would not be far off. The Lambeth male quartet gave several selections and Mr. Ziegler sang "A Little Boy for Sale." Miss McEvoy recited charmingly and Miss Barnard played the piano. The meeting closed with a paper by Mr. D. H. Tennant on "The Liquor Traffic and Bod Debts."

Ate Toadstools and Died.

ALTOONA, Pe., Oct. 5 .- Last evening Mrs. Winifred Smith's son brought home a bunch of toadstools, thinking they were muchrooms. They were cooked, but Mrs. Smith was the only one who ate them. She was soon overcome by the poison and died this morning.
