Inadequate Service to City For Residents of District Pointed Out.

Partially cut off from the main disricts of the city of London, residents of Chelsea Green are clamoring for ome means of cheap transportation with the city. They are urging that loop of the London street railway or a bus line be extended to the Green as early as possible. They point out that while the local cars of the L. and P. S. stop at Thompson Tempting Array of Articles road every two hours, this is not as good a service as they need.

TANNER IS NAMED FOR NEW OFFICE

Secretary of Board Expected To Be Chosen as Purchasing Agent.

A private conference was held at 10 o'clock this morning between Trustees Roy Cairneross, Dr. Alfred J. Grant, and V. K. Greer, chief inspector of public schools. Inspector Greer is mentioned fo the position of inspector-secretary of chief executive officer, the creation of which position is known to be recom mended in the Brittain report on the educational survey.

It is understood, further, that the authority of E. A. Miller, at present principal of the collegiate institute and H. B. Beal, now principal of the Technical high school, will be con-siderably enlarged and their responsibilities correspondingly increased with their respective departments. The plan suggested in the Brittain report would appont Inspector Greer as chief executive officer, with the architect, works, attendance and purchasing departments directly respon sible to him, instead of to the board as at present. Such a move would tend to unify the whole system, Dr. Brittain claims, by way of co-or-dinating a number of departments which, under the present scheme, function as independent units. agent, in addition to the continuance of his duties as secretary of the board and committee meetings.

Coal Strike Is Averted

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 6. — That the threatened strike in the Alberta coal fields has been averted is in-dicated by the telegraphic advices received by the labor department this morning from the Edmonton miners' federation. The advices state that an agreement has been reached with all operators con-cerned on the basis of the findings of the conciliation board.

Cronyn Hall Is Scene of Gay Autumn Fete, Followed by Church Supper.

Cronyn hall was en fete yesterday for the annual autumn bazaar. The hall was very attractively banded with red and white crepe paper, and gay little clown dolls reposed on one wall. Mrs. Chadwick is to be given much credit for her arrangement of the decorations, and also for the effective way she used the union jack and Canadian flags, adding a very patriotic touch to the event.

Mrs. Chadwick ushered to the tearoom, where Miss Meredith and Mrs. Jeffrey Hale presided over the tea-cups, and coffee urns. Here, as in the hall, flags and red and white bunting were used. Three Remedies for the Nagging Wife. Can a Cultured Girl Find Happiness With a Man Who Lacks Polish?-Shall He Marry for a Good Business Opportunity?

Dear Dorothy Dix-Several years ago I married an old maid. are well mated as to tastes in books, amusements, etc., and she is an excellent housekeeper and cook. We have most of the luxuries of life and But my wife has a very peculiar disposition. She daily finds fault with her neighbors, her friends and her enemies, and is constantly reminding me of my shortcomings and of my past mistakes. It is most harassing, and they were alone, "yesterday I made thee a proposal for the healing of this breach between us, and it was and when I try to reason have out of this health about the state of the land of the state of the land of

and when I try to reason her out of this habit she gets furious, and I have to take my curtain lecture in silence. The worst feature of this nagging is that it grows on her as she grows older, and I am at my wits' end to know how to break the spell and change her disposition. I have dignity and cannot stand these petty family squabbles, and I shall be deeply grateful to you for any suggestions about how

HENPECKED HUSBAND. I fear that it is only in story books that people change their dispositions and the selfish become unselfish, the mean become kind, gentle and tender, and high-tempered turn meek and patient. In real life that miracle is seldom, if ever, wrought, because most of us are so self-conceited that we will never admit to a fault, so we have no chance of improving ourselves. Of course, the perpetual fault-finder is suffering from a case of exaggerated ego, and it is an affliction that is common to both sexes. There are many men who knock everything their wives do, and probably just as many women who live with their little hammers in their hands. At the bottom of their trouble is the fixed conviction that they are the wisest people in the world and absolutely infallible, and that they know how to do everything better than anybody else. The only cure for this is to reduce the swelling in their heads, and this is a well-nigh impossible thing to do.

Still if I were a man who had drawn one of these naggers in the matrimonial lottery, I should try three remedies on her. I would make a little memorandum of every time she found fault with me and put down the exact terms of criticism she used. Then I would wait for the psychological moment in which she was calm and at peace with me, and I would present my little document

The chances are that she would be surprised and horrified, for the agger seldom realizes what she says. And I would follow up this by telling er how unhappy she made me, how she wounded me, and how she was killing my love for her. I would appeal to her affection for me and to her sense of fair play, and remind her that she also had weaknesses and flaws that I was too much of a gentleman to be continually throwing in her face. Curthermore, I would impress on her that the only way that two imperfect, ltering creatures can get along together is by mutual forbearance

If that plan also went blah. I would deliver an ultimatum to the lady, and tell her that unless she could treat you with the same civility that she does a stranger, I would become a stranger to her ind that I had listened to my last curtain lecture. Believe me, broher, few women desire to give up a good husband and a good home, and the fear of losing them will silence the most eloquent tongue. Also the domestic bullies, like every other bully, are cowards and you can always call their bluff.

ifhe "Taming of the Shrew" is still good reading for henpecked hus-T; and furnishes much food for thought. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix-Can a girl who is cultured and refined be happy with good man who lacks polish? I care a great deal for a young man who is nxious for me to marry him, but I am hesitating because of that ques-

He is good and kind and honest, but would his sometimes incorrect beech and his occasional social blunders get on my nerves if we were mared? Of course, I cannot correct his mistakes now, but do you think he buld resent it if I corrected them after marriage? Please tell me my ance for happiness in such a case?

I should say it depended altogether on how broadminded you arc, M. L. F., whether such a marriage would be a success or a

Undoubtedly every woman is supersensitive about the appearance that er husband makes in public. Also every woman yearns to be married to a an of the world who knows how to wear his clothes and say just the right ning, and who can overawe head waiters and hand a woman into a taxi vithout chucking her in as if she were a sack of potatoes. And every wonan writhes when her husband mispronounces words and is short on gramar and steps on other women's feet and doesn't know which spoon to use. But, after all, these are not the important things. Kind hearts are tore than fine manners and many a man who makes love like a matinee iero neglects and starves a woman after he has got her.

So, if you love a man who has not had advantages of education and association, marry him only if you have enough vision to see his good points instead of his failings, and if you have philosophy enough to laugh over them, instead of blushing over them.

But if you marry him, don't try to teach him table etiquette or correct his grammar. Take him "as is," as the shipping manitests say. No man marries to get a critic on the hearth, or desires a schoolma'am for a wife. If your husband has it in him to learn, he will pick things up by himself.

And remember that some of the most polished men in the world were

Dear Dorothy Dix-I want to ask your advice about what to do under shellfire. I am a single man of thirty-one and have met a woman who is about forty-one, but who has never married. She is always talking to me about how much money she could make if she had an active young fellow like me for a partner. But she says we would have to get married, as that is the only way she would be sure I would be honest with her. This woman s always bragging about what a great and wonderful family she comes com until she bores me to death. I do not want to marry her, but it looks like a good business opening for me. What do you think?

Fly, son, fly, while the flying is good. The highest board a man ever pays is when he marries for a home. If you marry this woman, you will be nothing but an errand boy who will have to work for his board and clothes for an employer, who bosses his every move inside and outside of working hours. The Messenger.

For the rest of the day she kept the cabin, chafing with anxiety to know what was toward, and the more racked by it because Sakr-el-Bahr refrained through all those hours from coming to her. At last, towards evening, unable longer to contain herself, she went forth again, and, as it chanced, she did so at an untimely moment.

The sun had set, and the evening prayer was being recited aboard the galeasse, her crew all prostrate. Perceiving this, she drew back again instinctively, and remained screened by the curtain until the prayer was ended. Then, putting it aside but mit.

Then, putting it aside, but without stepping past the Nubians, who were on guard, she saw that on her left Asad-ed-Din, with Marzak, Biskaine and one or two other officers, was again occupying the divan under the awning. Her eyes sought Sakr-el-Bahr, and presently they beheld him coming up the gangway with his long, swinging stride, in the wake of the boatswain's way with his long, swinging stride, in the wake of the boatswain's mates, who were doling out the meager evening meal to the slaves. Suddenly he halted by Lionel, who occupied a seat at the head of his oar, immediately next to the gangway. He addressed him harshly in the lingua franca, which Lionel did not understand, and his words rang clearly and were heard—as he did not understand, and his words rang clearly and were heard—as he intended that they should be—by ill upon the poop.

WIN MEANS A LOT

Those fans who in expectation of fireworks and gore have decided to wear asbestos-lined overcoats and rubber boots at Tecumseh park Saturday afternoon, when the Sarnia and London intermediates hook up in the "Battle of the Four Points," may be slightly disappointed. The O. R. F. U., knowing the temper of the two teams, clals who will insist on the gladiators agreed to give him a tryout.

rules, and not the late Marquis of Queensbury's code.

But those who like hard, strenuous, forceful and clean football won't be a whit disappointed when the final whistle toots Saturday afternoon with one of the two teams derailed from the championship route. With two squads as closely matched as the Sarnians and the Londoners, any game is going to be hard fought and when it happens to be these two particular crews, it's liable to border on a cross between Cumberland Mountain wrestling and the bone twisting national pastime of Japan.

Cobb also wanted to play college football and baseball. He says he had nursed this college ambition for years and because of it never accepted money for playing ball; he wanted to entered his head. He had other plans. He wanted to become a surgeon. He had intended entering the university of Georgia. His father approved of the plan. It defigited him to discover that his Tryus had selected one of the leading professions.

Have Every Confidence.

There hasn't been any lessening of the determination of the locals in the weeks infer the oval.

Coach Huestis has not departed from the style of play he intends to use against the Sarnians in one partcular. The players have every confidence that this will prove more than effective against the borderers' bag of tricks. The locals have pretty well guaged Sarnia's weakness, as they have had occasion to digest their strength, and naturally the Londoners have been drilling at plays that will hit hard at the soft portion of the invaders.

Defensively, the local halves should get mone protection than they received a week ago last Saturday. To add to this, the whole department has been practiced at running the ball back and Sarnia gains on purely booting offensives will be cut down to almost even terms and probably better.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—Five amateur teams will compose the Ottawa senior hockey league this winter, and amateur hockey is expected to boom in this city as never before. Rideau aquatic club was admitted to membership last night, the other four teams of last season being Shamrocks, New Edinburghs, Montagnards, the champions, and Gunners. The season opens Dec. 13. Saskatoon Sheiks of the Western Canada hockey league, when questioned today regarding their claim to Carson Cooper, the Hamilton amateur, who is reported to be signed by Art Ross of the Boston professional hockey club, point to the fact that three years ago Cooper accepted terms with the local club and failing to report he was placed on the reserve list of the Saskatoon team. This claim to Cooper was ratified by President Frank Calder of the N. H. L. at a conference between the Pacific Coast hockey league, in Calgary in 1922. According to the agreement drawn up at the time Cooper was regarded as belonging to the Saskatoon hockey club. askatoon Sheiks of the Western Can-that Manager Prodger relented, and as a result there weren't any more than about 300 local fans in on it, too.

Preston not only trotted out the most players of any senior squad in the producesion which the locals started Monday night, but the heaviest and fattest and the most eager. The Prestonites simply couldn't restrain themselves at afl. One sight of the ice and they were reeling all over but they sobered down before the practice was through. They took an intermission about half way through and then lined up two teams, and threw off more restraint wraps than ever. A little more used to the artiand threw off more restraint walls than ever. A little more used to the artificial ice and the first feel of skates, they did everything like a regular game. "Gunner" Arnott, leading snarpshooter of the "Big Four" last year, poked in the first goal of the scrimmage against Schmalz, who understudies Paddy Farrell.

Ashley Gets Hand, Dad Ashley, who got a big hand from his local admirers, attempted one of his graceful rushes, but only got a foot in each goal at the same time—so, so much for workouts. Local tans also much for workouts. Local tans also Herbert as much stuff as any of the experienced Settell Levels Several New Charges Against Officials of the Ontario Hydro Commission and Methods of Conducting Business-Will Be Probed Thoroughly.

SIR ADAM WILL ATTEND SESSION TODAY

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 5 .- Sir Adam Beck declared tonight that never had a stain been cast on the great hydro undertaking nor a serious flaw discovered, despite the unending efforts of powerful corporations to discredit the organization and the men connected with it. Five attempts and the present one-six in all-had been made to land him in jail, Sir Adam said, yet all previous investigations, inquiries, probes and attempts to bedevil hydro and himself had

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 5 .- Late this afternoon a new series of "charges" were presented before the Snider royal commission, arising out of E. Clarence Settell's letter to Sir Adam Beck. As a result, Sir Adam, the London & Port Stanley Railway, and F. A. Gaby, the chief engineer of the Ontario hydro commission, are all involved still more deeply in the tangle resulting from Mr. Settell's

Sir Adam Beck is accused of using hydro chauffeurs on private missions and for long trips into the United States for the purpose of attending horse shows. His former secretary also accused Beck of selling to the commission at a high price a planer which he owned and was anxious to be rid of.

Settell charges that in 1922 an account which related only to the London & Port Stanley proceedings was paid by the hydro power commission.

Charge Against Gaby. The new charges contain allegations that the Cataract Sand and Gravel Company, which is said to be Mr. Gaby's own company, had profited from transactions with the Ontario hydro commission. Commissioner Snider today con-

Commissioner Snider today concluded his investigation into the general charges against the hydro administration and will go into the new charges tomorrow.

When reading the new charges, W. D. Brewster, counsel for the commission, took exception to statements that all the charges in the original letter are not to be probed. "They are all before us and will be probed before we are through," he said.

It was also announced that Sir Adam will be at the inquiry tomorrow.

"Used Cars Improperly." Improper use of hydro commission automobiles by members of the staff was a matter prominently before the commission during the day. Evidence was given of hydro chauffeurs having been engaged on private missions for Sir Adam Beck. Lengthy trips to the States were also alleged against Sir Adam Beck and Mr. Gaby's family. At the afternoon session of the probe, H. E. Fairlie of the hydro gave

It was also announced that Sir Adam will be at the inquiry tomorrow.

The New Charges.
The new charges affecting Mr. Gaby are:
1—That the expense of Gaby, his brother, and Crerar to Europe in 1913 brother, and Crerar to Europe in 1913 were excessive.

| Description of the charge that visits of inspection, which he made to the London street railway had been charged to the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg railway. He explained that such visits had not been made for the purpose of valuating the road for Sir Adam Beck, who was plained that such had never been the case so far as he could remember.

I—That the expense of Gaby, his brother, and Crerar to Europe in 1913 were excessive.

2—That a large amount of time and materials were paid for by the hydro for the erection of Gaby's residence.

3—That a meeting held on January 11, 1917. Gaby recommended the purchase of a planer by the hydro for sast of at a p.ice of $650.

4—That a dredge purchased a planer, which Sir Adam desired to get rid of at a p.ice of $650.

4—That a dredge purchased by the Cataract Sand and Gravel Company—owned by Gaby—for $2,100, was sold to the hydro power commission in 1917 to $4,200.

5—That in 1917 a large number of vouchers were presented and cashed by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble for expenses of boarding construction gangs: that the money for these false vouchers was obtained by Trimble from the hydro power commission and then used to pay liabilities of the Cataract Sand and Gravel Company, owned by Gaby.

6—That an account dated February 17, 1922, in favor of Nelson R. Butcher, was paid for by the hydro power commission, when it related solely to reporting of London & Port Stanley proceedings.

7—Charges wrong-doing on the part of Gaby in connection with the use of automobiles owned by the hydro power commission.

the hydro engineers, Arthur Trimble, testified that in the winter of 1921-22 this company had been in financial difficulties, and had asked him if he could not interest some capital for it. One of could not interest some capital for it.
The company had been manufacturing cement and selling it to the hydro under an arrangement of cost plus 30c per barrel. It secured its stone at cost from the Walkerton quarry, which was owned by the hydro.

Trimble had told the company that its best plan would be to give him. best plan would be to give him option upon its plant, and he effect a reorganization. In doing this he had consulted Mr. Gaby, telling him that there was a possibility that he would be paid for his services in cash or in stock, and asking if there was any objection to his engaging in the deal. Mr. Gaby had seen no objection, and Mr. Trimble had succeeded in disposing of the Han-over Portland Cement to a new company, which had organized under the name of the Hanover Stone and Cement Company, which had later purchased the Walkerton quarry from the hydro for $310,000, paging $50,000 in cash and giving a mortgage $260,000 for the balance. had any interest in the cement company or in the stock which he had received on account of his reorganization services. His evidence was confirmed in its entirety by J. Y. Ormsby, who had organized the Hanover Stone and Cement Company.

Settell was then recalled to the witness stand and asked for his commentary upon the evidence.

"Well," he said, "the facts are there. This cement company paid there. This cement company paid this huge price of $310,000 for the Walkerton quarry and of that large amount they paid only $50,000 cash. Then when the hydro work is finished and the hydro does not need any more cement they default on their mortgage interest and say to the hydro, 'Take your pit back.'"
"There is no question that the company is in default on its mortgage interest," Mr. Brewster agreed. Settell also alleged that the com-

Farmer Brown's Boy Learns Two Secrets From Tracks In the Snow

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS. Unc' Billy Possom was out of sorts. He was very much out of sorts. That hollow tree of Bobby Coon's was bet-ter than his own hollow tree. Unc Billy had been so sure that Bobby was never coming back to it that Bobby's return had been one of the to his own house. To get there he must go through the snow, and Unc' Billy was very much out of sorts as he made his way home. Now no one can walk in soft snow and not leave tracks. From the edg Coon had left tracks in the snow all the way to his hollow tree. He hadn't thought anything about these tracks He had been too happy in his free some work. "That little rascal probably will go straight to his home." said Farmer Brown's Boy, talking to bard, J. M. Macintyre, will be in charge.

Other results of the election of officers were as follows: Hon. president, E. E. Reid; hon. vice-presidents.

Coon's tracks. They were very plain in the soft snow, and Farmer Brown's Boy had no trouble at all in following them. It was fun. At last they ended at the foot of a big tree. Farmer Brown's Boy looked up. He saw a round hole. He knew then saw a round hole. He knew then that there was a hollow in that tree and that he had found Bobby Coon's home. He didn't pound on the tree The lake at Port Stanley this morning was quite rough, only a few boats risking going out to the fishing grounds.

EFFIGY OF GUY FAWKES AGAIN BURNED ON MARKET SQUARE

Death.

LARGE PROCESSION

It was 319 years ago yesterday that Guy Fawkes stole into the basement of the British houses of parliament armed with flint and steel and prepared to blow the otherwise peace-ful parlimentarians and the stately building skywards.

when the gunpowder plot of 1605 was discovered in the nick of time. Guy Fawkes was hauled from his secret place in the basement of the parliament buildings to be burned to the parliament buildings to be burned to the stake. He paid with his life for the folly of plotting against His Majesty the King of England. Three hundred and eighteen times since that date his effigies have been strung up in public places by loyal Orangemen all over the British Empire 1) be socked in all and hunned

Hundreds were on hand for the pectacle. Children, curious to see the celebration of the burning of the famous historical character, thronged the market long before the hour set for the plotter's bonfire.

Guy Fawkes of London this year was a remarkably well-dressed, aristocratic old gentleman, and he stood up like a man as his body was being wheeled through the city.

A MESSAGE of the MODE from JEAN PATOU

The Internationally-Known Parisian Designer Talks Shop Through Our New York Fashion Representatives—THE BREATH OF THE AVENUE

HE United States welcomes another distinguished foreign guest, Jean Patou. M. Patou has made his fame not only as a great Parisian designer, but also as a collector and connoisseur, as a soldier with a notable record in the war, and as a man whose charm and wit and striking personal appearance make him a romantic figure wherever he goes. The great establishment which he heads in Paris probably dresses more smart American women than any other French house. It is to observe in her surroundings, the American type, that he admires so much, that Patou has come to this country.

And because Patou plays so prominent a part in American women's fashions. The Breath of the Avenue interviews him upon his arrival in New York. He receives us at teatime in his suite at the Plaza. He speaks to these women of America through The Breath of the Avenue. Translated from the French, his message is this:

First He Speaks of the Silhouette

"The silhouette, to my idea, should be alive on the woman who wears it. When I design a costume, I plan it for the many moments in which the wearer moves, as well as for those in which she stands still. I think of her as dancingdancing always. And that is why I introduce the dress that is straight in repose, and that flares when it is in motion.

"The skirts are short. Yes-they are most graceful when they are short, if they are becoming to the woman who is to wear them. But if they do not suit her-no, ah no. In gencrai, it is the short skirt that has the most grace. Again it is the short skirt that can dance its way through the day and

"I make short skirts, for example, for Leonora Hughes, because she dances all the time, because she is so slender, so straight like so many of your American women, because she is neither a young girl nor woman of the world, but that type which lies between and that is so amusing to dress."

Patou Indorses the Ensemble

"The costume in which the wrap harmonizes with the dress-that. I believe, is an idea that has come to remain. It so meets the requirements of the modern woman. When she throws back her coat or her cape, in the daytime or in the evening, wherever she is, she is complete. And the costume of the woman who is chic is complete always. I think of my dresses when I plan my coats. What is the link-the liasonbetween them? That depends. Sometimes it is the color, sometimes the material, sometimes the details. But that is a matter that is so subtle. How can you express it? It is the inspiration of the moment."

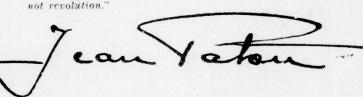

Patou Gives His Theory of Jewelry '

"In jewelry-as in all things-I admire all that is beautiful. And if the jewelry goes beautifully with the gown, then it is beautiful also. That is why I follow the fantasy of pearls in color. They add, do they not, to the effect of the costume? And they do not attempt to be what they are not. They do not pretend that they have value. For that reason, they are of good taste for any woman to wear.

And Patou Looks to the Future

"As for my new collections, I know two things, and only two-with sureness. I shall continue to make les robes tailleurs, those simple frocks that are so distinguished for their tailoring. The woman of today is so active, she can only be chic when she is simply dressed for the daytime occasion. I admire her like that. I like her short hair, it suits her. But later in the day-in the afternoon and for the evening-she can become all the more feminine. And for that eveningtime of all fabrics, I like best to work in chiffon because in it I can hest show that graceful line that makes a gown aline

"As for what comes in fashions, I do not know. It is the woman herself who makes the mode. The mode rises and changes and falls, but not all of the moment. Have you ever watched in your garden a flower that grows from day to day? Do you see any sudden change when you see it all the time? No. And to me the mode is like that at its best-rhythm.
