ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD

Christ On Education

Through influences whose workings are quite intelligible a delusion has taken possession of the modern mind which would lead the world to believe that only in our day and generation have systems of education, approached within the sight of the heights of perfection, says a writer in an Exchange. Because the universe has witnessed so many new and startling discoveries, of which earlier days were ignorant, the temptation comes to imagine that the lines of human progress the last word could not have been spoken until the people of the present arrived upon the scene. As a young nation, too, his country may have yielded to the flattering notion that the Creator called it into existence to be the herald of the advanced and fully-perfected schemes of moral betterment for which other nations and other times were but the prophets and precursors. Convinced of this, and urged on by the consciousness that a solemn duty had been imposed to be worthy of the commission assigned, the dwellers in this glorious land have pushed forward into paths which were thought, never before to have been trodden, and in all directions they have essayed to test supposedly new theories along every avenue of human endeavor. Quite natural to expect, therefore, that the plastic mind of childhood could not escape. As the future hung from the destiny of youth, the field was too tempting to elude trespass from those who felt themselves forbidden to deliver wise methods of cultivation. So it has come to pass that the whole scheme of scholastic management seems to have undergone complete transformation within the memory of this generation. Because the ancient manners were regarded with discredit, modern experiment must be invoked. To listen to the advocates of prevailing systems one might be justified in imagining that the newly discovered world was a discoverer in turn, since old traditions were treated with disregard meted out to ideas that had ended their days of useful service.

The Future Of Your Children

We quote the following practical remarks from the New World: "The plain fact of the matter is that here in America we have become enamored of the 'white collar job.' Vocational training, despite much discussion of the subject, does not seem to work itself out practically in the average community. If it did, we should have more boys who desired to follow the honorable calling of farmer or blacksmith or carpenter, and fewer who gravitate toward what is commonly designated as 'professional life.' We need skilled mechanics quite as much as we need lawyers, yet comparatively few parents are willing to have a son look forward to following a trade after leaving high school."

Says Bishop Bertram of Breslau in a pastoral letter: "Reason and religion teach that in the choice of a vocation the aptitudes and capabilities of a young person, his physical and mental energies, must be studied, so as to ascertain if the latter are comfortable with his inclinations. These qualifications in the aggregate, together with the situation of the family, are natural guides for the proper choice."

A boy will be happy in his vocation only if he is equal to the task. A competent mechanic is happier than an incompetent official. The choice of a vocation in disregard of personal aptitude, capabilities, inclinations and circumstances, is generally a source of permanent discontent and misfortune.

Therefore, no trade should be selected which tends to gradually undermine the health of a young man. Not every one is fitted for exacting brain work or office tasks. Not every one has the physical endurance which is indispensable in some factories.

Parents should prefer skilled to unskilled occupations; for in every position through training and school-eyes, a skilled hand is demanded. That is a prerequisite

Constitution

Constitution is one of the most prevalent troubles the human race is subject to, and is the greatest cause of many of our ailments. If the bowels cease to work properly, all the other organs become deranged.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mrs. Winslow McKay, Jordan Branch, N.S., writes: "I have been sick for a number of years with sick headache and constipation. I tried all kinds of doctor's medicine, but none did me any good until I tried Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and after using four vials I am completely cured. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from this disease. I keep them on hand all the time."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25¢ a vial. Sold by all druggists and dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How Seattle Got Its Name

Many easterners unfamiliar with the story have been heard to ask "How Seattle got its name?" The town was named after a prominent Indian chief whose tribe lived in the Sound country long before Seattle, the city, was founded, or Seattle, the chief, was born. When the town was in its infancy certain savages sought to destroy it by massacring the populace. Chief Seattle sent his daughter, the Princess Angeline, to warn the whites. Thus the hostile Indians were repulsed when they attacked the town and the massacre was averted. For that great act of kindness Chief Seattle's name is perpetuated. Seattle is so proud of the old Indian that it has erected a monument over the exact spot where the chief was born, the stone having a suitable inscription for the enlightenment of strangers. Princess Angeline lived to ripe old age, and died not long ago in the town that bears her father's name.

Santa Maria Maggiore

Santa Maria Maggiore, one of the five patriarchal Roman basilicas, and called also the Liberian Basilica, occupied a commanding position on the crown of the Esquilian Hill, surrounded by an open square. It is the third in importance of the Roman churches. The original structure of the fourth century is so encrusted by modern classical additions that nothing of its early character is visible externally. The apse was remodeled either late in the twelfth or early in the thirteenth century. Giuliano Sangallo added the offered ceiling to the nave, gilded, it is said, with the first gold brought from South America. Fontana was the architect of the Sistine chapel, that opens out of the right hand aisle at the altar end (c. 1583), and Flaminio Ponzio that of Paul V, called also the Borghese chapel, later in the same century. The baptistry was added from the designs of Fuga, in 1608, and Giacomo della Porta finished the chapel of the Sforzas—now the winter choir of the canons—which had been begun by Michael Angelo; the rear facade was added under Clement X. between 1670-78, by Rainaldi, and the great entrance facade and portico by Benedetto XIV towards the middle of the eighteenth century. With these dates before us we may proceed to examine the basilica, whose whole interior effect, though wonderfully striking from its size and grand proportions, is not quite satisfactory, the detail and ornamentation being almost exclusively Renaissance of the time of Gregory XIII (c. 1575).

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURE DANDRUFF

Mary Ovington, Jasper Ont writes:—"My mother had a badly sprained arm. Nothing we used did her any good. Then father got Haggard's Yellow Oil and it cured mother's arm in a few days Price 25 cents."

When it comes to useless professions, yours is the most useless of all," said the barber to the sculptor, "for a sculptor merely makes faces and busts." "Yes," retorted his friend, "and the barber curls and dyes."

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Get rid of these unsightly and obnoxious skin troubles by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

CONSTITUTION CURED BY THE USE OF MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR

(Continued from page 2.) London, Sept. 22—Field Marshal Haig's troops last night smashed into the German lines at four distinct points, on the battle front. Near Gavrelle, north of the Scarpe, the British advanced on a two-mile front. East of Epehy the British captured several organized points of resistance, according to today's official statement. North of Epehy Haig's men pushed forward in the sector south of Villers-Guislain. They also repulsed a German attack on Meuvres and improved their positions there. This morning the Germans attacked the British positions northwest of La Bassée, in Flanders. Fighting is still in progress.

Paris, Sept. 22—The statement issued by the war office tonight follows: "On account of very unfavorable weather aviation activity was feeble on the night of the 21st. Availing themselves of a short period of clear weather our aviators dropped nearly sixteen tons of projectiles on enemy aviation grounds and results were observed and also on the railway stations at Elain, Bexancourt and Janville, where fires and explosions were seen."

With the Palestine Army, Sept. 22—(Canadian Press Despatch from Reuter's Limited)—General Allenby's smashing blow completely surprised the Turks. The operations were started during the night, by a local attack by Welsh and Indian troops, who advanced some distance on the right of the Nablus Road, capturing four hundred prisoners. The attack was delivered before dawn, after a brief but intense bombardment. General Allenby directed the blow at the enemy's most formidable right, which was quite overwhelmed. Our men captured the first line trenches before the Turks had time to lay down a barrage from the opposite remaining works, some of which were most powerful. These were overcome, thanks to the gallantry and dash of the British and Indian troops.

London, Sept. 23—News from the minor war theatres is exceptionally fine. With today's reports the story of the destruction of the Turkish seventh and eighth armies in Palestine is almost complete. Allenby has shut off all avenues of retreat and has already gathered in 25,000 of the 40,000 Turks south Nazareth and west of the Jordan. Allowing for the killed and wounded who are not included in the 25,000, it is plain that the British general has made a clean sweep. Guns numbering 200, and stores of ammunition, clothing, food and transport vehicles have been captured. It is possible that the haul of prisoners eventually may number more than 35,000. Falkenhayn, whose headquarters are at Aleppo, has suffered a grave defeat. No enemy army before has been so humbled in this war. With the capture of Jisred Danieh, the Turks' last exit is closed.

London, Sept. 23—Constantinople was bombed by the British Royal Air Forces Friday and Saturday of last week, according to an official communication issued by the Admiralty tonight. The statement says: "The Greeks co-operated in the bombing of Constantinople on Sept. 20 and 21, and dropped thousands of leaflets into Stamboul. A balloon shot down in the European operations in flames set fire to three hangars, which were burned out."

Paris, Sept. 24—The Franco-Serbian forces which crossed the Nidji Mountains have cut the enemy rail and road communications in the valleys of the Vardar and the Corna and forced the Bulgars and Germans to retreat all along the front. In southern Macedonia the first Bulgarian army which, in conjunction with certain German formations, holds that part of the front from Monastir eastward to the Nidji range has been cut off from communication with the second Bulgarian army, which before its retreat had been engaged for several days in a prolonged battle with the British and Greek troops in the Lake Doiran sector.

Local and Other Items

Latest war news is very good. In the East General Allenby's success is better than first stated. He seems to have made a clean sweep of the Turkish army. On the western front the Allied armies are steadily forgoing ahead. The capture of Metz is coming nearer and nearer.

Ottawa advises state, Mr. J. G. Turiff, Liberal Unionist member for Assiniboia, has been appointed to the vacant senatorship for Saskatchewan.

It was announced by the Admiralty Sept. 22, that a British Monitor was sunk as the result of an internal explosion. One Officer and nineteen men were killed, and fifty-seven were missing, presumed killed.

A Zurich despatch reports, because of the aggravation of the internal situation in Germany which continues to grow, the German Government has taken measures to assure rapid and pitiless repression in case of revolt.

The Cheese Board met in this city, Friday Sept. 20th, President Brown in the chair. The cable from Brockville read: "no board meeting this week. Last price 22c. The offering was small on the board and Mr. R. E. Mutch secured the lots offered at 22c. The next Board meeting will be held in two weeks time."

According to official statement received Sept. 22, the French line steamer ship Admiral Charner, bound for Bizerta to Malta has been torpedoed with the loss of six lives. The passengers and crew numbered 174. An unseen submarine fired three torpedoes two of which struck the boat, but the vessel remained afloat three hours.

The S.S. Northumberland left Charlottetown for Pictou at 6.30 a. m. Saturday and returned at 8.30 p. m., having been a little late on account of fog. She brought 180 passengers and a large cargo including six race horses for the exhibition and the paraphernalia of the Williams show. The steamer will leave here every morning at 6.30 until the 30th.

After five days' exposure in an open boat the crew including the captain of a Portuguese Steamer arrived at an Atlantic Port. They reported that their steamer had been torpedoed in the North Atlantic five days previously. It is feared that three other boats with the remainder of the crew have been lost. The survivors who landed suffered considerably during their five days at sea.

John E. Rovensky of New York, told the bankers who assembled in the national convention of the American Institute of Bankers Sept. 20th, that other nations probably will owe United States nearly $9,000,000,000, at the end of the war if it should come about in a year's time. Mr. Rovensky is Vice president of the National Bank of Commerce of New York. The world now owes the United States about $5,765,000,000. Mr. Rovensky said, and he estimated that this would be increased with a year by about $3,000,000,000.

Prices still continue to advance, and are now higher on an average than they were last year. This is apparently true and the reason is the extent to which production of staples and almost all other materials and goods has been curtailed by war. A computation by the National City Bank of New York based upon the average import prices into the United States in the fiscal year 1918 of a large number of articles representing production in every quarter of the globe, shows prices exceeding those of 1917, when prices were higher than in 1917, 1915, and 1914 fiscal years.

A new loan bill was passed by the French Chamber of Deputies on Friday last. It is at 4 per cent and runs for 25 years. An interesting feature of the loan is that, besides French rente certificates and national defence bonds Russian bonds will be accepted in payment to the half of the subscription. The Senate later passed the measure by a vote of 230 to 1.

A despatch from Kansas says, that ruling on the claim of a farmer who had three sisters, John G. Callaghan, government draft inspector, held that men on farms well provided with feminine workers are not to be exempted on agricultural grounds. Callaghan decided that the women were capable of running the farm and the man was placed in Class 1.

Lord Northcliffe in addressing the Newfoundland forestry companies, engaged in wood cutting in Scotland, at Kenmore Camp, urged them not to let the prevalent false optimism about submarines cause them to relax their timber getting efforts. He said that every stick felled was a plank in the bridge of victory. Lord Northcliffe paid a high tribute to the war effort of the, the most purely British overseas community in the world.

An average field of twelve and a half bushels per acre for spring wheat, and sixteen and a half bushels for fall wheat for all Canada, is given by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in its preliminary estimate of average yields per acre of the principal grain crops of Canada during 1918. The delegation representing the horse breeders of Canada which visited Ottawa last week and asked the Government to use its good influence with the Allies to follow the American lead and endorse the points enunciated by President Wilson, causing the situation to drive the wedge into Germany and her Allies. The Morning Post says that the answer is framed in the only terms which befit the occasion. The Daily Chronicle thinks that the Allies cannot fail to be influenced by President Wilson's example, which makes it certain that they will reject the Austrian invitation. The Chronicle contends, however, that their reply ought to be framed so as to carry a message of hope, and not despair, to the masses of Germany and Austro-Hungary.

Reply Approved By The London Papers

London, Sept. 19—The promptness, as well as the substance, of President Wilson's reply to Austria-Hungary is approved by the London morning papers. Even the pacifist Daily News urges the Allies to follow the American lead and endorse the points enunciated by President Wilson, causing the situation to drive the wedge into Germany and her Allies. The Times admires the promptitude of the reply as heartily as it agrees with the line taken by the President. The Morning Post says that the answer is framed in the only terms which befit the occasion. The Daily Chronicle thinks that the Allies cannot fail to be influenced by President Wilson's example, which makes it certain that they will reject the Austrian invitation. The Chronicle contends, however, that their reply ought to be framed so as to carry a message of hope, and not despair, to the masses of Germany and Austro-Hungary.

Says Prices Unwarranted

(Ottawa Journal-Press.) With the exception of the C. C. Ray Co., Ltd., practically all of the large coal dealers in the Capital have raised the price of coal from $10.55 to $10.80 a ton. The dealers justify the raise by saying that there has been an increase of ten cents a ton in freight rates; that the price of coal has been increased at the mines, and that labor costs have risen. The increase in price has been brought to the attention of the Ottawa Fuel Committee, and has been sent on by the latter to the Fuel Controller's Office for investigation. The Journal-Press is informed by a member of the Fuel Committee that an increase in local labor costs would not justify an increase in the price of coal, as the spread between the cost of the coal to the dealers laid down in Ottawa and the selling price has been fixed at $2.45 a ton. The Journal-Press received reliable information on Thursday night that there are between 15,000 and 20,000 tons of hard coal in storage in the Capital, and that the coal dealers are charging $10.80 for coal which they bought before the existence of the alleged increase in costs.

September.

(Written for The Catholic Bulletin by Dr. James Henderson.)

Low hung thy golden suns, September, Like mighty censers swung late in the afternoon Till luscious haze o'er-spread all the ways, If we remember, mind again of June. Lo! on the hills are resting winds outblown In cave and glen; a spell they rest them there And in the quiet hush of even, September, Each day nearer, lower down When even reaches for Sol's golden urn And shadows chill are on the world again, Thus, round and revel of the muted year Brings us into touch another spell: Thus bud and blossom in the chalice brew September, we faint would draw us near And quaff as golden suns their censers swing And embers of the fallen leaves and sere Must on thy hearth but pale them, And Autumn's hopes are crushed and rudely strewn. In any lengthened shades in quiet repose Brilliant dyes; pigment of the frost-sprites for the painting! Swing low! swing low thy golden suns, September, For soon upon thy world shall pencilled beauty dwell.

The Measure of A Man.

By Anna C. Minogue, in Rosary Magazine

"Convict No. 125" had not stirred from his place. Now, seeing the girl, the Judge by her side, coming in his direction, he was turning away when she raised her crop. His feet were glued to the ground; it was Mollie's old gesture, calling him. They continued to advance until they were a few paces from him, when she paused; and the blood shot like fire through his veins as he saw Mollie standing before him.

"I am sure I am a great deal of bother to you, Judge Brown," she said, "but will you get me a glass of water? The soup was so highly seasoned it has made me thirsty."

The Judge, with another sweeping bow, acknowledged the pleasure it gave him to serve her and hastened to fulfill her commission. Then, looking into the eyes of "No. 125," she said: "Everybody is watching us—I am going to ask you something about the road."

She moved her crop carefully toward where the plowed earth showed blood-red against the grass, and he touched his hat. While the pantomime was being enacted, she was saying: "Larry will wait back in the woods with a horse for you. I will meet you on the Texas border. Then the Rio Grande! Better move on!"

"Mollie! Mollie!" he whispered, softly; then forward to join the gaping crowd, passing on the way Judge Brown, returning with the water.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs. They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and dependency.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures kidney and liver troubles, relieves the back, and builds up the whole system. wonder of Mollie's coming. He had seen Mollie! Clever little Mollie! He began to move back into the crowd, for the face of the Deputy had become disconcerting. He concluded that it were better to wait until all had been served. After dinner, when the men would settle down to discuss the matter of the road and the young people were amusing themselves—then he would find his opportunity.

"Come up, my man, and don't be so shy! Those girls won't hurt you!" "No. 125" heard the Deputy addressing the words to him, and they sent him forward to a place at one of the tables. A lovely girl, who seemed to be made up of blue ribbon, smiled upon him as she brought him a bowl of soup. He had no relish for it, but he made a pretense at eating, for somewhere, the Deputy might be watching him. When he escaped from the table he joined a group of young men, and while they talked he planned the best way to reach the wood. It came when he saw the Deputy, with Judge Brown and the others, start towards the road.

As he turned, he encountered one of the convicts. "Say pal, it was some spread, was it not?" he remarked. "Mac's white all the way through. I heard some of the women talking, and they said as how, when the invite came to Mac, he said nixy on the blow-out for him, unless his men could come, too. He's a man's man, is old Mac!" and the speaker, who was serving a ten-year term for robbery, moved on.

"No. 125" made a second start, when a woman asked him to bring her a hamper. "There are so many cakes and pies left," she explained, "that we have decided to send them down to the camp for Mr. Mac and his men."

"Mac and his men"—the words went singing through his brain, as he obeyed her orders. At last he found himself free to follow his way to the wood where Larry, Mollie's brother was waiting with the fleetest horse to be found in Texas. If any one noticed him, they would know probably he was one of Mac's men.

The thought jerked him up. That was what he called them—men—and treated them as such. And they had proven worthy of his trust. "No. 125" told himself that he would not have betrayed that trust either, had he been guilty. He could see among the shrubs the heads of the horses, and his heart gave a leap. Freedom—Mollie—Mexico! Then he stepped for he seemed to see the face of Deputy Mac. When the men met for supper that night and one was missing? Of course it would be a blow, but he would write and explain. He could now see Larry lying on the grass, and he cursed the weeping in his soul. But for him he would not have had to spend those two years in prison, would not now be running away! But why should he curse the poor fellow! He could not help it. The yellow streak was in him; he only needed the occasion to reveal it. That came when he wounded the sheriff of Pushmataha County, and on his knees begged his friend to save him for his sister's sake.

"No. 125" came to a dead halt. What he intended doing was what Larry had done; he, too, only required the occasion to show himself a coward at heart! Had he not put himself in the place of the boy, offered himself a victim for justice in his stead. And now he was taking his first opportunity to go back on his bargain! His face burned at the thought. Sometime Mollie would learn what was in his soul and cease to care for him! He leaped forward and, catching the sleeping youth by the collar, set him on his feet.

"I am not going with you," he said, slowly and deliberately. "I put myself in your place, you cowardly cur, and I'll serve my time out! Tell Mollie that I will come to her, when I can come as a man, and not as an escaped convict with a price on my head. Tell her I love her more than ever for what she did for me today—that she is worthy of the best there is in me—and she is going to have it. Now, get off—for I don't like the sight of you!"

Larry mounted and galloped off, leading the riderless horse. As he turned back, "No. 125" said—and there was a singular lightness in his heart—"One of your men, Deputy Mac!"

The Kaiser's Changed Opinions

It is interesting to note the change in the state of mind of the Emperor of Germany as manifested by his public utterances. When this war broke out he declared that Germany was fighting for "a place in the sun," and indulged in more or less bombastic predictions of the "glorious successes" to be won by the sword of the Fatherland. This was his mind until after the battle of the Marne when he changed his view and flooded the press of Germany with references to the "mailed fist" and "the shining armour" of the "superman of Prussia," who would "drive their enemies into the sea and win for Germany an empire greater than had been dreamed of. But the Kaiser is climbing down. He talks no longer of German prowess but now adopts the tone of an injured innocent and prates of the awful war that was "forced upon us" by "enemies envious of our progress."

In an address delivered at Essen, the seat of the great Krupp industry, he intimates that Germany is willing for peace but that the Allies persist in wishing to continue the struggle. Wilhelm, seemingly, cannot understand why his desires should not be granted. He forgets that he willed the war which for more than four years has drenched the world with blood and set back the progress of civilization for half a century. It suits him not to remember the massacres of innocent non-combatants, the atrocities committed in the name of Kultur at Louvain, the sinking of the Lusitania or the murder of Edith Cavell, all the work of his wearisome Kaiser.

Contrast with the plaint of the Kaiser the simple yet portentous words of the Premier of Great Britain: "There can be no compromise between freedom and tyranny." There speaks the first minister of the nation which will have the final say in the arrangement of peace. When tyranny cases and due reparation is exacted for the crimes committed by Prussianism, when German "kultur" and the doctrine of might has been beaten and crushed to earth and, in the words of President Wilson, the world has been "made safe for democracy" some attention may be paid to the opinions of the Butcher of Berlin but until the end for which Britain drew the sword has been fully attained this war must go on. Berlin is welcome to what comfort she can extract from the present situation. The rest of the world will be satisfied with the assurance of Lloyd George that "nothing but heart failure on the part of the British nation can prevent our achieving a real victory." There will be no premature peace.

Holy See And China

The question of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Holy See and China now rests entirely with the latter. The Holy See, which accepted China's proposal to that effect, has clearly explained that the presence of a nunciature in Peking would not in the slightest degree affect the rights enjoyed by France through the treaty of Peking, and it is now simply waiting to see if China will carry out its original proposal or allow itself to be deterred from it by the pressure of a foreign power.

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

TO MAKE GOOD BREAD You must have Good Yeast

GOOD BREAD is, without question, the most important article of food in the catalog of man's diet; surely, it is the "staff of life." Good bread is obtainable only by using the Best Yeast, the best flour, and adopting the best method of combining the two. Compressed Yeast is in all respects the best commercial Yeast yet discovered, and Fleischmann's Yeast is indisputably the most successful and best known to the world. It is uniform in quality and strength. It saves time and labor, and relieves the housewife of the vexation and worry she necessarily suffers from the use of an inferior or unreliable leaven. It is, moreover, a fact that with the use of Fleischmann's Yeast, more loaves of bread of the same weight can be produced from a given quantity of flour than can be produced with the use of any other kind of Yeast.

This is explained by the more thorough fermentation and expansion which the minute particles of flour undergo, thereby increasing the size of the mors and at the same time adding to the nutritive properties of the bread. This fact may be clearly and easily demonstrated by any who doubt that there is economy in using Fleischmann's Yeast. If you have never used this Yeast give it a trial. Ask your Grocer for a "Fleischmann" Recipe Book.
