LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER
—OR—
THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XX.

"I carried a woman's picture and a whole tress of her hair in my bosom for three years; I worked in the mines of California. I toiled like a veritable slave for three years for a woman's sake—a woman who professed to love me, and who was to be my wife!"

"Well!" said Locksley, interested in spite of himself.

"I came home to find that my faith, my hope, my happiness, were but a dream of the opium eater!"

"She was dead!" whispered Edmund, pityingly.

"Dead? No! A thousand times worse!" the other said, with a savage sneer, and setting his teeth hard. "She was false! My love died a cruel death! I am blighted!"

"I am sorry for you," said Locksley. And he realized how trifling were his troubles compared with the troubles of this man. "The shock must have been terrible when you had so much faith."

"And I am sorry for you," replied the other, with an ugly laugh. "You reminded me so much of myself when I saw your rapturous gaze at that portrait."

Locksley smiled.

"Your disappointment makes a doublet of you—a cynic I am to be married in two days. My love is good and true. There is no cloud on our future's horizon."

"The old story," scoffed the stranger.

"A mere conspiracy of nature for pairing people off! I tell you that happiness and truth are but dreams of Utopia, invented to accentuate our misery. Be warned in time!"

The train stopped with a jerk, and the stranger jumped out without another word.

"I am sorry for him," repeated Locksley. "Poor fellow! He carries his misery in his face. His is a strong nature for either loving or hating—for either joy or woe."

The train was off again, and he had half-a-dozen companions until he reached Richmond. Still, amid all their talk, for they were busy discussing the suspension of a great banking-house, he could not forget the stranger's unhappy story—he could not forget that this was the second story in one day of woman's frailty and man's misery.

But he forgot it when he was out in the sunlight, and strode the platform of Richmond station.

A dozen hack-drivers waved their whips at him, frantically shouting:

"Carriage, sir, carriage!"

"I want to go to Mortlake road," he said to one of them. "There is a village near, I believe?"

"Yes, sir. Kew Village. A mile and a half from here," responded the man.

"Take me to the post office," Locksley ordered, "and from there I wish to go to 'The Myrtles,' in the Mortlake road."

The driver signified that he understood by touching the rim of a battered silk-hat with his grimy forefinger, while Locksley entered the carriage.

Another moment, and the vehicle started away, and was soon rolling through a delightful country lane, whose hedgerows were brilliant with the tints from autumn's lavish brush.

"It is a pretty place," thought Locksley. "I am sure that Dora will like it."

This was the one burden of his wishes. He hoped or he thought Dora would like everything that he did—everything that concerned them—that concerned him and herself.

At the quaint little post office he presented a card that Fairfax had given to him.

"I wish to look over 'The Myrtles,'" he said, "I understand that you have the keys."

The postmistress was an elderly woman, and she looked at him a little curiously, while handing the keys over the counter.

"Do you think of renting 'The Myrtles,' sir?" she asked, respectfully.

"If it suits me, I may buy the place. I hope that 'The Myrtles' has a good reputation!"

He spoke half-laughingly, but he noticed that the postmistress only smiled sadly, and made an evasive reply.

"It is a very pretty place, sir. I hope that you will like it, and that good fortune may attend you."

He half-turned, then spoke again.

"You have lived here for a long time, madam?"

"Forty years, sir."

"It is a good neighborhood? I want you to tell me truthfully and candidly. I can trust you to do this when I say that I wish to bring my wife here—my future wife, I should say, for we shall not be married until the day after to-morrow."

For a minute the woman seemed distressed.

"The mortlake road is the most select in Richmond," she said, at length, "and near to Sheen Park, where members of the royal family live. It is one of the healthiest places in all England, sir; but 'The Myrtles' is not a lucky place."

"I do not understand you," smiled Edmund. "I do not place any reliance in mere luck, as it is generally accepted. If the elevation is right, and the drains upon the latest scientific principles, there cannot be much the matter, unless," he added, jokingly, "there is a ghost!"

"I never heard of a ghost, sir," the postmistress replied; "but I will tell you my meaning. I may be a foolish old woman, but I can't help it; and since you have spoken so nicely to me, I advise you not to look at 'The Myrtles!'"

"Come, come! that is too absurd."

Now let me hear your reasons," Locksley was amused.

"I will tell you in a few words, sir, and then I expect that you will laugh at me. It is just eight years since a fine young gentleman came here, sir. He was a perfect stranger to everybody, but he had plenty of money, and he built 'The Myrtles,' and furnished it on the most lavish scale. The grounds were planned and laid out by the most expert landscape gardeners that money could obtain; and then, when all was finished, he brought home his bride. They came here from the church to spend their honeymoon at 'The Myrtles.' It is dreadful to tell, but the poor creature died that very night—died and fell into her husband's arms, while speaking to one of the servants upon some trifling matter."

"Well!" demanded Locksley, "I suppose the poor lady had a diseased heart, and the excitement had been too much for her!"

"In a measure that may have been so, but it was rumored that one hour after their marriage the young husband discovered that the woman he had honored and loved beyond all others was not worthy at even a kind thought! He had been abroad, fighting for his beautiful home-land, for one who was false to her vows. The proof he held was indisputable, and the servant said that the look of hopeless despair upon his face was terrible, when he gazed upon her lifeless form."

"Heavens!" thought Locksley, "Can that man be my acquaintance in the train, only one short hour since?"

"When the ill-fated bride had been taken to her last resting place, 'The Myrtles' was closed and the furniture sold by auction, piecemeal," the postmistress went on. "For years no one seemed to notice the house, hidden as it was by the trees that surrounded it, until everybody was surprised by seeing that it was full of workmen again, and the story soon leaked out that Mr. Fairfax had bought 'The Myrtles,' to bring his bride there."

"Yes?" questioned Locksley. "I know that my friend was disappointed, but he has not told me how."

"His wife-to-be eloped on her wedding eve, with another man!"

"Great God!" ejaculated Edmund. "One would think the place were haunted by ghoulish memories! Still I am not of a superstitious turn of mind, and since I have come so far, I will look over 'The Myrtles,' madam."

He thanked her and stepped into the waiting carriage.

"Because there have been two false brides, must there of a necessity be a third?" he thought, a little contemptuously. "Even if I could believe it possible for my darling to be other than an angel—to be influenced one iota by what I have heard would be an insult to the dearest and truest little woman on earth! It is certainly strange how fate pursues its way, and I shall soon begin to believe that the novelist was right when he accused nature of plagiarizing the wonderful events and coincidences of fiction."

The carriage rattled along smartly for ten minutes, then pulled up before a pair of ornamental wooden gates, and in the stone columns that supported them Locksley read:

THE MYRTLES.

Each of the keys in the bunch had been handed to him was labeled, so that Locksley had no trouble in selecting those he wanted.

He opened a small door in the wall then drew wide the gates that led into the drive, and told the coachman to follow him.

The "vindex" way was flanked on the right by a soft line of magnificent Hedera trees; on the left was a high and continuous bank of velvety grass, flowing meads, and lovely ferns.

Some two hundred yards from the highway he came upon the house, almost surrounded by a grand stretch of lawn, the borders of which were adorned with many flowers, growing in wild disorder.

Beyond was a picturesque pleasure garden, and a miniature park, that ended in a gentle slope to the river Thames.

Locksley was delighted by all that met his eye. The house itself was handsome from every view. There was not an angle or a nook that did not add to its outward beauty.

STILL THANKFUL.

James Jerkin fell a paralytic while he was making shingles; he landed with a frightful bang that jarred the distant dingies. I called upon him with a pile and ake a tested c h i c k e n; "such stimulants as these," thought I, "will make his life blood quicker."

And, as it seems funny, and not a hardship to my door will come, demanding money. Each day some people fall from roofs upon a heap of boulders, and dislocate a lot of hocks and collarbones and shoulders. And many live in rented homes, with landlords grim encroaching, and oh, the anguish in their homes when rent day is approaching! What though my radiator's you, from my ample store, a mustard pie and chicken. It surely is a fearful thing that you, as tough as leather, should have the sawbones come with string to the your joints together; you were so hale, so stout and strong, so blithe and fresh and merry; and now the leech, he comes along, and the apothecary. And, lying prone upon his back, he said, that cheerful duffer, "I'm thankful that I own the shack in which I'm billed to suffer! Here I may languish, sick and sore, as long as it seems funny, and not a hardship to my door will come, demanding money. Each day some people fall from roofs upon a heap of boulders, and dislocate a lot of hocks and collarbones and shoulders. And many live in rented homes, with landlords grim encroaching, and oh, the anguish in their homes when rent day is approaching! What though my radiator's hant, the paint rubbed off my fenders? This house is mine, I pay no rent—what bliss the thought engenders!"

THE PRINCE AT CAPE TOWN.
CAPE TOWN, April 30.

As the time the cruiser nosed through the fog this morning and she was accompanied by a naval escort, to the landing stage, until late hour to-night, the Royal Yacht was the centre of enthusiastic demonstrations. The Earl of Athlone, Governor General and his wife, Mrs. Alice, greeted the Prince on the cruiser, and when he landed he was welcomed by Premier Hertzog, members of the cabinet and other personages. The Prince received loyal addresses from Indian, Chinese, Malay and other Moslem communities from the Cape colored community. The fourth member of the crew, Captain Simon Anderson, was picked up by the steam schooner Lake Francis. The missing are Basil Hubble, engineer; Harry Hubble, Jr., fireman; T. Barnes, deckhand. The Ryba went out early this morning to place a pilot aboard the Property Gifts to Wife Illegal.

MAY BUY BRIDE-COURT'S RULING.
Married men in Quebec cannot make gifts of property to their wives through a deed of donation. It is illegal, according to a judgment of the courts issued recently. Moreover, a wife cannot give property to her husband. Either must die to give a present that the Quebec laws will approve.

And furthermore, married men and women living in this province cannot go into another province and there make a gift of property to each other. That is, if their legal residence remains Quebec. "What we have we hold," is the situation.

But the word property does not embrace everything that a man may give his wife or the "Miasus" may give her husband. He may give her birthday and holiday presents, bracelets, rings, jewelry and other like things, but all in accordance with his means. Property, for the purpose of the recent ruling, means everything else other than the exceptions just mentioned, land, house and movables of every kind.

In order to evade the restrictions of this law, the general practice now is to "buy" the right to marry a girl. That is, before marriage, the happy couple go before a notary public, where the man solemnly undertakes in writing to give the bride a sum of money—say ten thousand dollars—and all the furniture that may be or may ever be in the common domicile. This gift is in consideration of the girl's love and affection for the man and in anticipation of her marriage to him. The furniture is safeguarded by stipulating that it shall be for the maintenance of any issue of the marriage. The cash is safeguarded, because the man does not actually hand it over. He defers payment until he wants to put something in her name, or until he goes bankrupt, in which latter case she files her claim for the amount mentioned in her "contract" against her husband's estate and ranks with the other creditors for dividends.

In the legal world one ruling from a judge has general application and becomes a precedent. So when Mr. Justice Bruneau declared a deed of donation made from husband to wife illegal, he set up a rule for all to follow, or gave an interpretation of an existing rule.

and the gray wigs which are most liked in this city.

When asked whether this was a forecast that powdered hair might again return to favor, the hairdresser gave it as his opinion that women would much rather have a silk wig that could be easily removed and adjusted, than revert to the old custom of powdering. The wigs are worn in the evening and in the boudoir. They are much less expensive than real hair, and the fastidious can have several to go with different frocks. Curis of a deep lemon yellow or a rich henna cause the conservative to gasp.

Danny's Attitude

A small urchin in a Belfast slum Sunday School was asked to tell the story of Daniel in the Lion's Den. He began eagerly: "Danny was thrum into a den o' lions. There was lions every side av him and lions ahint him, and a 'mortal' big lion forinist him. And"—with immense gusto—"there was wee Danny in the middle, not carin' a damn for any o' them."

The Scotsman

A wealthy Scotsman purchased a second-hand motor car and the first time he was out in it the chauffeur seemed to have great difficulties with the controls. "Ye're going awfu' fast," said the owner. "Yes, sir," gasped the driver, "something's gone wrong. . . . I can't stop her."
"Then, for heaven's sake, laddie," cried the Scot, "run into something cheap."

Regrettable Indiscretions

Mr. Cashin, since his defection from the ranks of his party, has given expression at some considerable length to the grievance which he feels because the rest of the world neither sympathizes with him nor appreciates his heroic action in playing the part of a "detective" among his colleagues.

The fact of the matter is—and the pity is that he does not realize it himself—that his first step lowered him in the estimation of the community, and his excuses since then have made him appear somewhat ridiculous. Amusement at the member's attitude changed, however, to a feeling of indignation yesterday, when he chose to fling a gratuitous insult at a body of men whom the rest of the world holds in the highest regard—the Rhodes Scholars. In referring to one winner of this prize as the recipient of charity, the member applies the term of contempt to all, and if his words carried any weight whatever, the effect would be to discourage students in Newfoundland, (who do not belong to the same privileged class as the honourable member) in the efforts they are making to secure the advantages which the munificent bequest of Cecil Rhodes has placed within their reach.

The Member for Ferryland shouts in clarion tones that he is fighting for the fishermen and the rights of the poor man. Then let him be consistent in what he says. The Rhodes Scholarship has already been the means of sending to a university the sons of many poor men in this Colony, and let us hope it will enable many more to be raised from obscurity and to apply their talents to the uplift of their less fortunate fellow countrymen.

The withdrawal of offensive remarks under pressure does not exonerate the member for Ferryland of giving offence, and unless he is capable of keeping a proper control over his utterances he would be well advised to lapse into silence before he stumbles into another hornet's nest. We are not very sanguine of his accepting this advice, however, for as one writer puts it: "It is all one to go about to draw such men out of their mistakes, who have no settled notions, as to dispossess a vagrant of his habitation who has no settled abode."

From the Opposition has come a chorus of congratulations upon his "manly and independent stand," and the Member for Ferryland has quite failed to perceive that his new friends are doing nothing more than using him for their own ends. Does he imagine for a moment that the sentiments expressed by the members of the Opposition are sincere? Does he believe that they are doing anything more than laughing in their sleeve at his discomfort?

We put the matter plainly to the Member for Ferryland because we believe, after he has cut his first political teeth, and provided he does not sing his swan song prematurely, that he has a political career before him in this country, and it is to be deplored that a young man should destroy his own chances in a fit of spleen, or permit others to push him off the stage just because it gives them a little diversion.

Wasting Valuable Time

At a time when employment is an urgent necessity, and particularly when work is available, it is a matter to be deplored that the closure of the House has been delayed unnecessarily during the week by holding up the passing of Supplies.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES PAIN.

Feildian's Re-Union

A GREAT SUCCESS. The Feildian Dinner, at the Sterling Restaurant, last night, was attended by a large and enthusiastic gathering of Old Boys of Bishop Feild College, and their friends. Covers were laid for about 180 and the guests were the Hockey and Rowing Teams, besides Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., President of the Nfld. Hockey League, the Hon. Sir John Crosbie, (who was unavoidably absent), W. Angus Reid, President of St. John's Skating Rink, C. J. Ellis, Secretary of the Regatta Committee, and representatives from the Press. The dining hall was tastefully decorated in the Club colors, and the halls were hung with photographs of the teams which had won championships in previous years, while the Boyle Trophy, emblematic of the Newfoundland Hockey Championship, showed up prominently at the head of the table.

An excellent menu had been prepared by the management and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. H. V. Hutchings, newly elected President of the Old Feildian Association, ably performed the duties of Chairman.

The following is the toast list:—"THE KING"—Prop. the Chairman, God Save the King.

"THE FEILDIAN TEAM"—Prop. J. A. Winter; resp. E. G. Ewing (Capt.)

"OUR OPPONENTS"—Prop. H. W. Dickinson (Mgr.); resp. S. K. Lumsden (Guards), E. Phelan (St. Bon's).

"THE NFLD. HOCKEY LEAGUE"—Prop. Dr. W. W. Blackall; resp. Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C. (President).

"FEILDIAN ROWING CREW"—Prop. W. J. Martin; resp. A. Wright (Cox).

"THE REGATTA COMMITTEE"—Prop. E. R. A. Chafe; resp. C. J. Ellis (Secretary).

"OUR GUESTS"—Prop. A. B. Perlin; resp. W. Angus Reid.

"BISHOP FEILD COLLEGE"—Prop. H. A. Winter; resp. R. R. Wood (Principal).

"THE CHAIRMAN"—Prop. M. G. Winter (Jr.); resp. H. V. Hutchings.

All the speakers were in good form and their addresses were genuinely witty. Many humorous reminiscences of their school days were related by several of the "Old Guard," and contributed greatly to the evening's entertainment. Frequent mention was made to the historic instruments of punishment in use at the College, which proved that they had left a lasting impression upon those who came in contact with them. The Chairman, in the course of his address, referred to the very great services rendered to the Feildian cause by Mr. Harold Hayward, that when none has contributed more time or energy in propagating the interests of the Feildian Club. These remarks were received with the greatest enthusiasm. The musical selections rendered during the evening were greatly enjoyed and much credit for the success of this part of the programme is due to Mr. Ern Fox, who presided at the piano. The College song was sung with a heartiness which was conclusive proof that all the Old Boys present have warm and appreciative memories of the happy days they spent at Bishop Feild College. During the evening a telegram was received from Mr. Hubert Rendell, a member of the hockey team, who is now on his way to New York to be married. The message sent his best wishes to the Club for the success of its dinner and its receipt was the signal for the hearty drinking of Mr. Rendell's health. Although the programme was lengthy, the dinner was voted as one of the most successful re-unions yet held by that body, and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment. The National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne brought the evening to a close.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

April 30th.—Busy all this day about my accounts for the month, which do give me the poorest satisfaction, since though my gettings are more, yet my spendings are greater than ever they were. But Lord, to what fall is it come in the economy, and my wife, since the wretch has heed for naught but her own vain pleasures and will yet make a pauper of me. Anon to my barbers to have myself trimmed and he do discourse of the elections which will be held in the fall for the Council. Indeed, though it is yet early, I do hear how there are like to be as many candidates as there were for the last election. The House this afternoon still on Ways and Means, and little progress made, nor do they seem any hope of prorogation before another fortnight. This night, being bid to the Feildian Hockey and Rowing dinner, do find there many old friends that I have not seen this long time, and much good discourse on all sides. In particular, do have a long talk with Dr. Blackall of the poor wife of my great ancestor, who did die at a mighty early age. But Lord, towards the end of the dinner, being called upon to speak, did have the whole thing spoiled for me, since I find 'tis much easier to write than to speak. Home late and to bed, mighty tired.

A Trial Will Convince

If you are seeking, as many people are, to find a real economical toilet soap, a soap that does all you expect a soap to do yet costs but little, you should immediately begin using Ivory Toilet Soap. Ivory is as good as any soap can be—it is pure, soothing and best of all, economical. No soap is better than Ivory, cost what it may, yet Ivory costs but five and ten cents a cake. Because of Ivory's low cost, some people are skeptical of its quality, and to convince those who have not used it of Ivory's purity and worth, the manufacturers are presenting free sample cakes to the patrons of the different stores handling this high class soap. To-morrow, Saturday, Messrs. Ayre & Sons will distribute to all purchasers in their grocery store a trial size cake of Ivory Soap, free. Every purchaser will receive a sample, and it is to be hoped that you will make a point of visiting Messrs. Ayre & Sons to-morrow and become acquainted with the most pleasing, most economical toilet soap you ever used.—May 1, 1925.

Seals Numerous Near Belle Isle

A message was received at noon today, by Capt. Winsor, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, from H. Thomas, operator at Belle Isle, which reads as follows: "Large patch of seals about one mile off land. Patch extends east and west as far as the eye can see and very thick. Straits full of loose ice and slob. Am advising Harbour, of Neptune. No seals are seen at east end of island; ice heavy."

LOCAL BROADCASTING.—Station 8JJC will be on the air Sunday afternoon at the usual hour with a special musical programme. The programme will consist of Songs, Recitations, Pianoforte Selections, etc., supplied by Misses Curtis, O'Neill and O'Brien.

With the Govt. Boats

S.S. Gloucester came off dock this morning after receiving a general cleaning up. She is expected to get away to-morrow to take up the summer service on the South Coast and Fortune Bay, sailing from Argentia on Monday next. Passengers leaving town by the morning train will have time to make the connection.

The Sagona has been cleaned up after the sealfishery and is now ready for the Stratus service. She will very likely sail to-morrow, and passengers leaving here by Tuesday's express will connect at Humbermouth.

The Prospero will be ready to take up her regular service north, to Cook's Harbor, sailing from here on Wednesday next, May 6th. Freight for intermediate ports of call will be accepted at the Dock freight shed on Monday.

The Malakoff, which left port at 8 p.m. yesterday, direct for Westleyville, took along sixty sealers who are returning home. Upon leaving the latter port she will take up the regular Bonavista Bay service from Port Bonavista.

The Clyde, which left port yesterday, will take up the Notre Dame Bay service.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

EFFORTS TO LOCATE STEAMER IN DISTRESS. HALIFAX, May 1. Rescue craft were groping their way through the fog this morning to a position forty miles southwest of Halifax, given by the ship believed to be the wooden steamer Clackamas, from Norfolk, Va., with coal for this port. She sent out an S.O.S. call last night, but nothing has been heard from her since then. The Red Cross Liner Silvia reported by radio through Camperdown that she expected to be at the given position of the disabled ship at 9 this morning. The Department of Marine and Fisheries has ordered the C.G.S. Stanley to get steam up, and she will proceed at once to the scene. The United Fruit steamer San Gil, from Boston to Halifax, arrived in port this morning, but reported she had not heard or seen anything concerning the distressed vessel. The Red Star Liner Zealand, was standing by last night. The crew of the ship in distress are believed to be Nova Scotians. Owing to very thick fog the task of rescue is proving difficult.

THE VALUE OF ANGLo-AMERICAN FRIENDSHIPS. NEW YORK, May 1. "The battle of Yorktown was not a loss but rather a gain for Great Britain," Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to Washington, declared in an address last night before the Yorktown Historical Association. "Considering the political intelligence of the time," he said, "a British victory could only have continued a struggle that must eventually have ended the same way, and would in the meanwhile have exhausted England." Sir Esme described how, standing on the battlefield of Yorktown, he felt thankful that all feeling of bitterness was forever past between us. Sir Esme Howard urged still closer friendship between the United States and Great Britain as the two countries with most in common, and added that George Washington, though he warned the United States against entangling alliances, would have been the first to rejoice in the friendship between America and Britain, based on mutual respect and understanding.

TRIAL OF TERRORISTS TO PROCEED. LONDON, May 1. Reuter despatch from Sofia says the members of the Agrarian and Communist organizations who are under arrest charged with conspiracy and terrorism will be brought to trial shortly as the Crown has nearly completed its case against them. The Executive Committee of the Social Democratic Party has decided to communicate to Second Internationale at Amsterdam and to the Socialist Party abroad detailed particulars of the recent events in Bulgaria.

OUTBREAK OF SMALLPOX IN WASHINGTON. WASHINGTON, May 1. In an effort to prevent the spread of Smallpox which has resulted in 13 deaths in the Capital since January 2d, the Public Health Service yesterday urged all Government employees here to submit to vaccination. Physicians were assigned to various departments to inoculate officials and clerks with vaccine without charge. At the Veterans' Bureau, which shelters the largest single unit of Government workers, more than 2300 had been vaccinated. Last night it was understood that President Coolidge had been vaccinated.

NEPTUNE REPORTS for 7,000. The following message was received last night by Job Brothers and Company, from Capt. Barbour, of the Neptune: "Just a little east of Belle Isle; shot 200 to-day; weather very thick; estimated number on board 7,000." The Postal Telegraphs had a message stating the crew are all well. It was currently rumored on the street this morning that the Neptune was returning to port, but upon making enquiries we understand that such is not the case. The owners expect that Capt. Barbour will do well with the old seals to-day, and she will stay out as long as the chances for more seals look good. According to the sealing laws, passed in the House a few days ago, there is no specified time set for the ships to return home.

Weekly Meeting

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon, Mayor Cook and Councillors Martin, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

After reading and confirmation of minutes of last meeting, communications were tabled from the Acting Manager of the Newfoundland Government Railway as follows:—

(1) Asking use of land, Council property, near the Cold Storage premises, so that the present wooden sheds at the entrance to the Dock may be temporarily placed there during work of rebuilding the latter.

(2) Asking use of land West of the Gas Works and laying of tracks thereon to facilitate unloading of freight during the coming season.

(3) For permission to utilize land south of Cousins' property, Southside, for carrying purposes, in connection with the rebuilding of the Dry Dock, and also permission to use a certain portion of new made ground, Southside Road, for erection of stables.

The Council realize the necessity and urgency of this important work, and are only too glad to do all in their power to assist in the undertaking, and expedite matters for the Government, willingly acceded to the several requests mentioned above, but several under the Municipal Regulation, permit stables to be erected at the place mentioned, as the Regulations call for certain facilities which are not obtainable on the site at the present time. The City Engineer was instructed to meet the Manager of the R.R. Railway, and point out to him the lands the use of which will be given them for at least two years.

The Superintendent of the Nfld. Light & Power Company, in reply to Council's letter in which explanation was asked as to why street lights were not on Friday, Saturday and Sunday last week, stated that the service, particularly in the western section, had been completely out of commission owing to the storm on Friday night; that the transformer in some fifty-seven lamps had been burnt out. Every effort had been made to quickly resume the service.

In the matter of unused street car rails, West of Rawlins' Cross, on Military Road, Supt. Morris stated that he questioned as to whether these would be used in future was at present in process, but if the Council would defer the matter for at least another fortnight pending instructions from head office, it would then be given consideration. This was agreed to. As to the notification of the Council re condition of rails in other parts of the town, he stated they would receive immediate attention of the Company.

The Company also wrote with regard to lights on Pennywell Road, between Golf and Caghin Avenues. Their inspector reported that the lamps in this locality had been deliberately broken. The Inspector General is to be asked to have a watch kept in the section, and if possible locate the guilty parties.

Bovring Bros. Ltd. complained of the Cove near their premises, particularly of the unsightly W.C., and asked that steps be taken to remove same as also to improve conditions generally at this place. They stated that the truckmen who occupy a stand in the Cove generally park near the sidewalk much to the annoyance and inconvenience of pedestrians going to and from their office. They had interviewed the truckmen as to the possibility of occupying another way, and they thought this could be satisfactorily arranged. A Committee of Council will visit the place and take up the several matters mentioned.

Mr. A. Penny wrote re damage to his property when the roof of the cart shed at the Sanitary Stables collapsed last fall. This will be attended to. Mr. N. Pike offered gravel for road purposes. This was referred to the City Engineer.

In the matter of Mr. Kelly's application for concrete sidewalk in front of his residence, Bl. Street, if the other residents were prepared to pay proportion of cost for this improvement, same will be given consideration.

The following plans were passed, on the recommendation of the City Engineer, at whose office permits may be obtained:—J. Evans, dwelling, New Dover Street; Mrs. Raines, dwelling, Gower Street; K. Jillingham, dwelling, Golf Avenue; R. W. Barnes, garage, LeMarchant Road, provided he installs ventilator in the building.

The application of Mr. Jas. Varty, to erect garage on Blatch St., will also be granted on the usual conditions, and also provided he pays proportion of cost for water and sewer extension, etc., on this street. Permits are also to be issued: P. T. McGrath, annex to building, Gower St.; R. W. Barnes, annex to building, Atlantic Ave. Councillor Martin called attention to a paragraph in the report of proceedings at the Legislative Council, under date of April 24th, wherein it was stated that the Municipal Council agreed to a sliding scale of taxation on the proposed new hotel. This was not the decision of the Council as conveyed to the Government. The Council had desired a straight tax of $800.00 per annum for a period of thirty years. He mentioned the matter merely for the purpose of relieving the public of a somewhat erroneous impression as to the Council's action in the matter. The Medical Officer of Health reported two new cases of Scarlet Fever in the city during the past week. At present he stated there are in Hospital seven cases of Scarlet Fever and one of Diphtheria.

The City Engineer submitted his weekly report. He informed the Council that on the advice of the Inspector S.P.C.A. the horse drinking troughs throughout the city had been disconnected owing to a disease prevalent amongst the horses.

With the disposal of routine business, granting of requisitions and passing of weekly accounts, the meeting adjourned.

REPORT FOR QUARTERLY MEETING, MONDAY, APRIL 27, 1925.

The figures in the annual report were made up to the end of December, 1924, so that the following figures in this report are on the work for the months of January, February and March. During these three months the Nurses visits to homes were 2,496; the births number 288; the illegitimate are births number 10; deaths number 19; one year number 24; the still births were nine.

Fourteen of these deaths occurred during March, and it was a noticeable fact that twelve of these fourteen are under four months. This fact makes the number of still births forcibly makes tell the need of a Clinic for more comprehensive Ante-Natal work.

ATTENDANCES AT CENTRES.

During the month of March we were able to arrange for a Centre to be opened in the East End, at St. Joseph's Hall. This has been accomplished, and is indeed a big step forward. We can now boast of three individual Clinics—Fridays in the West End, Tuesdays in the Central and East Districts. This gives each Nurse a centre in which to take a personal interest. Competition is at once established which has a most wonderfully beneficial effect. There is every reason for the numbers attending the Welfare Centres to increase rapidly, with proportionate benefit to the community.

On Thursdays we now consider a Central amalgamated Clinic, and we are keeping records and numbers separately for this Clinic.

I would like to ask the Association their feeling and opinion re obtaining a Welfare Centre House in the centre of the city. For adequate progress in our own work during 1925 we want this more than anything else. May I ask the Executive to give it serious consideration.

Our Dental Clinic would be better if it could be held in our own rooms. Dr. James, who has so very considerably helped us with this Branch, has found it far from ideal arranging treatments in his own Surgery. Since last giving a report our staff has undergone a change. We have been very sorry to lose Miss Jolliffe, who has worked with us for a year. Miss Palmer, a Graduate of St. John's General Hospital, and holding a certificate for Maternity Work from the "Women's Hospital," New York, is the new worker on our staff.

Miss Johnson's have again been most generous and given us a Baby weighing Scales, we now use the same pattern (which is exceptionally good) at the East and West End Centres, and both were donated by Mr. E. M. Johnson, Jr. Besides this year of competitions—"The Empire Mother and Baby Competition" we are running two local ones. There is the first annual "Mother-Craft Competition," for which we are hoping to have a good entry. Also this week, with the kind co-operation of the Education Authorities, we have arranged an Essay Competition for the School children of St. John's. The subject is:—"How Can We Make St. John's a Healthier and Happier City?" or "My Duties as a Young Citizen." Miss Ella Morris, C. E. A. Jeffery, Esq., and Rev. D. L. Nichol have kindly consented to act as judges.

We are hoping for an entry worthy while, and so create thoughtful thoughts towards "Civic Responsibility" in the young mind.

MAKING SATISFACTION VOCAL.

One of the several order of a 11 children who in the course of our Letter Friendship sometimes gives me an interesting peek into their daily lives. took the moment when the baby was asleep and the other two children were at school to chat with me the other day. Her letter was all interesting. I love these cross sections of people's lives. They are like the glimpses of back doors one gets from the railroad train, or the intriguing glimpses of an interior in the house one is walking past when the lights have been lit and the shades not yet drawn. But one little incident stood out. Here it is:

"I Did Behave Lots of Times."

"I got provoked at Jean the other day, and said: 'Why are you so naughty, why don't you behave yourself once in awhile?'"

"Well, I did," says Miss Jean. "I did behave lots of times and you never knew a thing about it."

"I laughed, but after a bit I got to thinking of that little speech and I realized that I do forget far too often to praise the children when things are done cheerfully and well, for being polite in company, for acting well in church, for good marks in school."

"And the Lord knows I don't want to forget. I must tell them all I can while I may. The road ahead may be rough. And they may need those things to remember, and the remembering will help keep them sweet."

Only When One Is Displeased.
 There is nothing in the world easier than to fall into the habit of complaining only when one is displeased, or when things go wrong. Is there?
 Husbands, wives, employers, teachers—in fact all human beings who have anything to do with the conduct of other human beings (a fairly inclusive order) sometimes fall into this habit.

Annoyance is a very vocal emotion. Satisfaction seems to be less so.

And yet, while finding fault is a necessary process if one wants to get things done right, finding virtues is almost as helpful.

Now He Says Them.

I know a man who is always saying nice things to his wife. Always telling her how sweet she looks in her new hat. How much he missed her when she went away for a week. How pretty she dresses the children. He once told me that this was a deliberately acquired habit. "There was a time in our life when we were quite unhappy," he said, "and we both took stock. She said that nothing she did ever pleased me. I knew that was nonsense, but she said: 'Well, when have you said you liked anything about me?' I knew I had thought she looked sweet and was proud of things she did lots of times, and I thought that was all nonsense for her to say that, but when I got to thinking it over I realized that I had been thinking those things, but I guessed I hadn't been saying them. Whereas if I didn't like a dress or a dinner I said so. And she couldn't read my mind so she didn't know about the things I liked. And since then I've been trying to say nice things. I don't mean that I manufacture any compliments I don't mean. I just try whenever I think a nice thing not to keep it to myself where it doesn't do anyone any good, but to say it."

"A Denial come to judgment!"

$7,000,000 Spent by Tourists in Nova Scotia

During 1924, it was estimated by A. J. Campbell, secretary and publicity director of the Nova Scotia Publicity Bureau, over $7,000,000 was left in the province by tourists. He stated: "The largest tourist influx recorded in the history of Nova Scotia," sums up the record for the year. That record seems the more remarkable when one recalls that a strong counter-attraction existed in the British Empire Exposition in London, while serious drawbacks were encountered in the cool weather prevailing over most of the continent during the early summer and the vexatious regulations imposed governing re-entry to the United States.

Despite other attractions and all drawbacks, however, 102,456 summer visitors entered the province, and the fact must now be conceded on all sides that the tourist traffic into Nova Scotia has entered the ranks of big business—has, indeed, assumed the importance of one of our major industries.

After consultation with hotel men, garage owners, merchants and other competent observers, it is conservatively estimated that these visitors remained on an average about two weeks and expended on an average about $75 each. This means that, during the tourist season, the sum of $7,684,200 was distributed in new dollars throughout the province.

Goods purchased by the visitors included woollen goods of all kinds—clothing, suits, hosiery, sweaters, dresses, rugs, blankets, etc., hooked mats, furs, jewellery, salt fish, boots, moose heads, confections, gloves, silks, linens, laces, souvenir dishes, banners, antiques, and other goods.

We have figures showing that at least one of our visitors, a noted author and playwright expended more than $100,000 in the province. Another brought in the sum of $35,000 to be expended here. These cases are mentioned merely to show the possibilities of the tourist industry and the need for caution before arriving at a hasty conclusion as to its value from contact with one or two impetuous or parsimonious individuals.

During the past season strenuous endeavors were made by the Nova Scotia Publicity Bureau to enlarge the tourist traffic to our shores. Illustrated advertisements were inserted in nine of the largest American, and six of the outstanding Canadian, newspapers with a combined circulation of more than 3,000,000 readers daily. Space was also purchased in road guides and on road maps. More than 500,000 copies of handbooks, booklets, folders, brochures and maps descriptive of the province were broadcast.

250 photographs, with legends attached, were distributed to illustrated periodicals, and 59 articles prepared and illustrated for the advertising mediums and other papers.

Better Wives and Mothers

The emancipation of women as evidenced by the evolution in dress from steel stays that made a twenty-inch waist and the long street-sweeping skirts to the sports clothes of the present day has certainly had its effect upon the health of women. With proper attention to diet and exercise a race of better wives and mothers is assured by it. If, however, ailments develop as evidenced by irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness and irritability, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be depended upon to overcome them. Thousands of women testify to its success.

Asparagus salad is attractive served in lettuce cups and garnished with shredded pimento and sliced onion.

Delicious cream soup can be made from the water in which asparagus is cooked, and the tough portions rubbed through a sieve.

Turning People Topsy-Turvy

DISEASES THAT TRICK THE SENSES.

An attack of influenza recently left strange effects on a sixteen-year-old girl. Before her illness she was a normal child, but now she falls into trances, when strange noises are heard and glasses are said to rattle on the table by themselves. She is also said to be able to forecast the number of visitors who will arrive during the day, while she can tell time to the minute without looking at the clock.

Sleepy sickness works strange changes in people's characters. In one case a girl who had been quite normal suffered from a slight attack. On recovery she used to amuse herself by climbing fire-escapes, pushing her sister into the canal, and hitting a small brother on the head with a bottle.

Often a sufferer from sleepy sickness will recover to find himself gifted with quite a different set of characteristics from those he formerly possessed. Honest folk become cunning, happy housewives turn into scolds, and good children become incurably naughty.

Sudden shock and loss of memory occasionally cause a queer derangement of the senses. The sufferer loses the ability to judge the duration of time. Minutes stretch themselves out like hours, and all sorts of strange mistakes are made.

A workman who had this "time" disease would leave his work only a few minutes after he had started in the morning, and would go home expecting his wife to have the midday meal ready.

Even at night the sufferer often believes he has been asleep for hours when really he has only just closed his eyes.

The Sinking of the Raufuku Maru

WELLES TO ASSIST AS SHIP'S CREW VAINLY STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Passengers who arrived on the liner Homeric after seeing the Japanese freighter Raufuku Maru sink with its 38 officers and men expressed widely divergent views as to whether every possible effort had been made by the Homeric's officers to save the Japanese seamen. The Homeric docked last night after its race with death failed on Tuesday.

The division among the passengers was about equal, some saying that everything humanly possible had been done, and that it would have been suicide to launch the Homeric's lifeboats; other stating that they believed some lives might have been saved had the boats been launched or rafts set adrift towards the sinking vessel. Captain John Roberts was given a testimonial signed by 123 of the 238 first cabin passengers.

All the persons interviewed spoke of the tragedy of the spectacle at which men as well as women wept unshamefully. Captain Roberts said that in his forty years at sea he had never seen a more heroic effort to rescue the Japanese.

Paul E. Albert grain and marine surveyor seen as terrible a sea disaster, except during the World War. "If rafts had been launched from the Homeric, even without seamen on them, I believe the seas would have carried the rafts to the men. There certainly was no heroic effort to rescue the Japanese."

Another passenger said Captain Roberts "would have been a murderer if he had sent the boats out." Captain Roberts was an officer aboard the Baltic which effected the rescue of 1700 persons when the steamer Republic and Florida collided off New York harbor in 1909.

The Captain's Story.

Captain Roberts of the Homeric, which reached New York yesterday after a vain attempt to rescue the crew of 38 of the Japanese steamer Raufuku Maru, made the following statement to reporters, who gathered in his cabin while the liner was anchored off Quarantine last night.

"At 5:47 a.m. (New York Time), April 21, in answer to distress messages from Chatham, Mass., regarding the Raufuku Maru, our course was altered toward the position given in the messages, 111 miles distant. Speed was increased to the maximum possible in the prevailing weather; the wind was northeast, with a strong gale and high sea.

"A wireless message was despatched to the Raufuku Maru to use the wireless as much as possible, and the Homeric's course was altered in accordance with the bearing of the Raufuku Maru, found by wireless direction under uku Maru ahead, distant about two miles, visibility being low with sleet and driving spray. Speed was reduced and oil pumped outboard while approaching the Raufuku Maru close to windward. The ship apparently had a list to starboard of about sixty degrees. Men were seen clinging to the rail.

Powerless to Aid. "As the Homeric got abreast of the Raufuku Maru's stern, efforts were made to turn so as to approach the Raufuku Maru's lee side. These failed, and the ship was backed toward a list to starboard of about sixty degrees. Men were seen clinging to the rail. When close to windward of wreck, her keel could be seen when she lurched, and when nearing the lee quarter, much small wreckage, but no life or boats were seen.

"At 11:18 a.m., the Raufuku Maru capsized, or settled down, while on her beam-ends; the sea entering the top of funnel while great seas broke over the ends of the ship. The Homeric continued to pump oil outboard with lifeboats ready for lowering, and stood by without seeing man or boat, until the Raufuku Maru sank at 11:56 a.m.

"The Homeric again closed on the floating wreckage, but no life, or anything to support life, in that terrific sea, remained. The gale increased in force, and the Homeric secured boats and proceeded on the voyage."

Passengers Voluble.

All passengers were eager to tell of the disaster. Some expressed anger, while others spoke highly of the manner in which Captain Roberts handled the situation.

L. L. Lewis, an attorney, of 120 Broadway, was among the passengers who expressed anger over the manner in which the attempted rescue was handled.

"I was not impressed that the Homeric upheld the tradition of English sailors," he said. "I saw several men struggling in the water for some time after the Japanese ship capsized."

Mr. Lewis also expressed regret that the Homeric had not remained in the vicinity of the foundered vessel after it turned over and sank. He admitted that he had refused to sign the testimonial giving his above statement as being a "good enough reason for declining to do so."

Another passenger who told a graphic story and who believed he had seen bodies in the water, was Raymond E. Wolf, a member of the University of Pennsylvania relay team returning after a meeting of Cambridge and Oxford University teams in London.

"I saw the Japanese boat until the last," he said. "Its rigging and smoke stack were dipping into the water and its crew were huddled on the high side of the bridge, which was the highest point out of water. The heavy seas and salt water spray hid them from sight at times and splashed over the Homeric."

Collision Imminent.

"The Homeric stood between the Japanese boat and the wind and poured oil on the water, which caused some calm, but the wind blew so hard that the Homeric was being driven on top of the Japanese boat, so that a collision seemed imminent. I think we were about two hundred yards away at that time."

Unable to Launch Boat.

"A lifeboat was made ready to drop over the Homeric, but there wasn't chance to launch it," Mr. Wolf said, "as heavy waves kept following each other in such rapid succession."

All of the passengers were on the decks of the liner, most of them peering through binoculars as the vessel foundered. Men and women wept as the vessel turned over and went down.

Prayed for Drowning Men.

During the hour that the huge liner lay alongside the sinking freighter, the Rev. James J. Talbot, Pastor of the Old St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Mulberry Street, stood in the stern of the Homeric with head bowed, praying for those aboard the freighter. When the ship foundered he gave general absolution for the drowning seamen.

"Standing in the stern of the Homeric I could see the heads and shoulders of the Japanese seamen banded against the sky," said Father Talbot. "They were apparently trying to climb to the highest point on the bridge as their vessel was listing about sixty degrees. I counted about twenty seamen."

"I have frequently seen death, but that was the most tragic disaster that I have witnessed."

Father Talbot was among those who declared that the "loss of the 38 lives was unavoidable."

GROWING UP.

This thing called growing up is strange. With every day there comes a change. Something put off and taken on. A new charm come, an old one gone. A lip that's vanished and a fear which was but is no longer here. And with it all behind those eyes A hint of something very wise.

Uncounted births must gaze behold That watches little souls unfold. First smiles are born and there comes The strange discovery of thumbs. Glad recognition follows swift And eyes with lovely gladness lift And light with God's most holy grace To see a sweet familiar face.

Speech slowly seems to come. A word at last from those young lips is heard. One at a time, then two or three, Oh, most entrancing mystery! As thought and voice unite to find Expression for the little mind. Then as the door of speech unlocks Age loves another chatter-box.

Strength takes command. The spirit glows So much the little baby knows That now she dares to disobey: Too long she's trod another's way This she will do, or that she won't. And disregarding every "don't" We utter, we are often pained To see our judgments so distained.

And yet no lovelier joy I know Than watching little children grow. Each day brings something new to see, Something of splendor yet to be. Something of pride and love and mirth And glad achievement brought to birth.

Old is the process. That is true— Old is mankind, but ever new.

Rudolph Valentino and Nita Naldi

IN "A SAINTED DEVIL."

Those of our people—and they are in the hundreds—who read the different periodicals devoted to the moving picture business are no doubt quite familiar with the many productions made by the many producers, and amongst the most prominent they will remember what has been named as "The Famous Forty." This is a class of pictures, forty in number, of the biggest of the biggest, and the most prominent of those is "The Sainted Devil" with Rudolph Valentino and Nita Naldi, which is the attraction at the popular Star for Monday. In this picture we see Valentino even more so than we did in "The Four Horsemen" and in "Blood and Sand," more so in loving, tangoing, fighting and thrilling. Playing opposite is the "vamp" of the movies, Nita Naldi, and the scenes and settings, particularly the ballroom scene baffles description. There is no doubt but "A Sainted Devil" is Valentino's most brilliant achievement. By reference to the ad. it will be seen that the picture is for two days only, and all who can should avail of the matinees, as at nights there will be packed houses.

House of Assembly Proceedings

THURSDAY, April 30.

MR. H. B. C. LAKE presented a petition from the residents of Laminale on the subject of mail service. Hon. J. J. Long supported the prayer of the petition.

The report of the Select Committee on the Nfd. Power & Paper Co. notice being received and adopted, and the Bill to confirm certain titles was introduced and read a first time.

QUESTIONS.

In reply to a question about obtaining crushed stone for the Dock, the Prime Minister said that Mr. Lee, who has charge of works for the W. I. Docks Co., is at present making enquiries as to where the material can be obtained cheapest.

ORDERS OF THE DAY.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on Supply.

A section or two of the Tariff was read.

MR. SCAMMELL took up the debate and spoke at considerable length eulogizing Mr. Cashin, and demanding the Government on its undertakings.

MR. CASHIN followed and reiterating his intention to hang up the proceedings by stating that more business had been got through before Mr. Scammell spoke than would be done between then and midnight. The charges made during the previous session were on the same lines as previously reported except perhaps that they were more personal and less creditable particularly in reference to Mr. Browne.

The following is verbatim report of the incident.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member for St. John's West sees fit to interrupt me in this House. Now I can tell the member for St. John's West that I am about to eat him up. Mr. Chairman, if you do not call the Hon. Gentleman to order, as it is your duty, I will have to see that he keeps order in this House. I would like the Hon. gentleman to explain to this House why he is in the Monroe party. He is not in the Monroe party for the people of this country. He is in the Monroe party because Mr. Hickman, whom he went to first, turned him down and then he had to ask Mr. Monroe to take him.

MR. BROWNE—I think that I should be allowed to give a personal explanation.

MR. HALFYARD—I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN—Mr. Browne is entitled to give a personal explanation.

MR. BROWNE—The Hon. Member for Ferryland opposite is hardly the man to say these things about me because he has proved himself a traitor to his party. He has no reason for the statements that he has made about me. He does not know what has taken place between Mr. Hickman and myself. Ask Mr. Hickman if he likes and he will find that there is nothing to my discredit in what took place between us. I would like to tell Mr. Cashin that he should make sure of what he is saying before he passes such remarks. I want to tell him that I have as much independence as he has. He has not the monopoly of the independence. I can tell him that there are as good members in this House as the Cashins. I am as good as a Cashin, even though my name is different from his. I want to tell him that and I would like him to remember it. It is not because his name is different from mine that he has the right to stand up here and make statements which he knows nothing at all about. He makes the statement that affects me when he says that the tariff affects me. He mentions the fact that a person of the salary of five or six thousand dollars is going to get a saving on the tariff. I say that he ought to go to school and find out about the making up of the income tax before he makes such statements. I must ask the hon. member in future not to make such personal remarks about me.

MR. CASHIN—When I went to school I did not go on charity like you did. Cecil Rhodes did not have to die to send me to school.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, that statement is not worthy of Mr. Cashin. I believe that he is too honourable to make a statement like that, intentionally. If a man has brains enough to win the Rhodes Scholarship I trust that Mr. Cashin is not the person to insult him on the floors of this House. I assure him—

MR. CASHIN—I.

MR. HALFYARD—I rise, Mr. Chairman, on the point—

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. It is not in the capacity of the Attorney General of this country that I rise and out of respect for this House. When I spoke a moment ago I made the suggestion that the Hon. member should withdraw that statement because I said that he was too honourable to make it and that it was not worthy of him, to attack a person with brains enough to win the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship. The suggestion that he made was that the hon. members for St. John's West was educated on charity because of the death of Cecil Rhodes. I know several of those who have won the Cecil Rhodes scholarship in this country and I pay every respect to them because they are all worthy of it, and they were not educated on charity.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, the point of order has been raised. I ask the Hon. Minister of Justice if it is right to have this apply to one of the hon. members and not to another when he has called the first a traitor.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It is not.

MR. PUDDISTER—I have said before that these epithets which are unparliamentary should not be passed and I do not want to have to repeat it. I am going to ask the Hon. member for Ferryland if he will be kind enough to withdraw his uncharitable remarks made against the member for St. John's West.

MR. CASHIN—Alright, Mr. Chairman, I take it back.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—I just want to say that I think that it is very inconsistent for the Hon. Minister of Justice to take the point for one Hon. Member and not to take it for the other.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is an imputation of which I am not guilty. If the hon. member of the Opposition is looking for trouble which he appears to be, he will find it himself. The Minister of Justice is able to look after himself when the occasion arises. It is out of respect for the Hon. member for Ferryland that I said he was too honourable to say that. I thought that he would not want that statement of his to go on record. I did not say it because Mr. Browne was on this side of the House. He made an attack on a person of brains when he said that because the hon. member won the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship he was educated on charity. I want to say that the Minister of Justice is not mixing himself in this row just at present for any ulterior motive, but out of respect for the hon. member for Ferryland himself.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Chairman, I have taken my remarks back and I shall proceed with my speech.

Laughter Stronger Than Logic

Dr. J. B. Baillie, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Leeds, recently opened the new art studio and history and geography rooms at the Friends' School, Bootham, York, which have been added to the existing school buildings by the extension of the premises." records the Yorkshire Post.

Lord Gainsford, a former Minister of Education, and a governor of the school, presided, and said: "One of the things we have to cultivate in these periods of depression is to try to show outward happiness; to show that joy can exist in our lives to-day; that whatever we do we do with willing zeal. In that way you will add enormously to the pleasure and happiness of those with whom you come in contact.

Dr. Baillie, referring to Lord Gainsford's statement, said there was no question at all that in this epoch of our national life cultivation of joy was the most important means for the maintenance of our social life. We talked a great deal about people being reasonable, but in his experience logic had divided more people than it had brought together. For every purpose of connecting people with another, laughter was an infinitely more powerful influence than logic."

Test Receiver Redesigned for Broadcast Work

EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON.

(Part 1)

There is so much interest in short-wave reception that we feel a description of a representative short-wave receiver will be well accepted by our readers. Not only are KDKA and WGY broadcasting on wavelengths well over 100 meters but WGY has carried many experimental broadcasts on wavelengths as low as 15 meters. Due to the very excellent reception of short waves secured by this receiver we feel that within a comparatively short time there will be a number of broadcasting stations on wavelengths between 50 and 100 meters. This article which will describe the short-wave receiver which is being used on the American Radio Relay League station in Seattle by the traffic manager of the American Radio Relay League is a period of eight months. It is to be used while the Pacific is in South Sea waters. After a system of the set, we will show how it can be modified to make a most efficient receiver for the higher broadcasting wavelengths between 200 and 300 meters. The receiver consists of a regenerative detector and two stages of frequency amplification. As it is specially designed for code work and regeneration and oscillation, it is the most accurate. The regeneration control has very little effect on the wavelength. That means the broadcast reception of the station will not be tuned out when adjusted.

Justing the regeneration condenser. Jacks are provided so that you can plug in on either the first or second stage of amplification. For headset reception one stage of audio amplification is all that is ever of any use. Two stages make a lot more noise but do not give a bit better range than one stage does. For Loudspeaker reception two stages are desirable and a number of times necessary. The panel layout is simplicity itself. There are only two controls, secondary (tuning) and regeneration (volume). The secondary tuning control is the only one which need be logged as the regeneration control will depend on the plate voltage you are using, on the brilliancy of the detector tube filament and on the condition of your storage battery. The rheostat knob will have to be adjusted only occasionally when the battery gets low. Only one rheostat is needed for all these tubes. Both tuning and regeneration control condensers operate by means of string verniers which turn rather large metal pulleys on the condensers. Vernier geared dials can be substituted with complete success. The exact panel layout is of no particular value as it will have to be altered for condensers of different type to those shown. The general layout is all that one need know in order to duplicate the receiver. This will be seen from the photo which will be shown to-morrow. Wesley Young Men's Literary Class

On Tuesday night, 28th inst., the Mock Parliament held by the Wesley Young Men's Literary Class was brought to a close after a very stormy session. The Parliament has met three times altogether. It was opened on the 14th of April and since that time has met on the 19th and 28th. At each meeting a large number of visitors and friends of the Literary Class have been present, and they have expressed themselves as having greatly enjoyed the Mock Parliament.

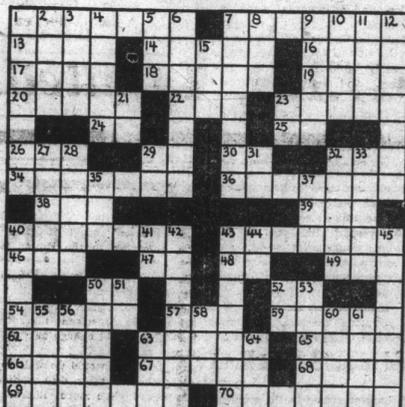

At Tuesday night's meeting some excellent addresses were made by both Government and Opposition members. Quite a heated discussion took place when the "Spinsters Marriage Act" was introduced. This Act will prohibit spinsters from marrying unless they have a certificate, proving that they can scrub floors, wash thoroughly greasy dishes, mend their own hose, and bob their own hair. This act was passed after considerable crossfire, and three Government members even crossed the House. The annual meeting of the Literary Class takes place next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, and the following Tuesday the Class will close for the season with an annual Dinner to be held at the Sterling Restaurant. Tickets may be had from members of the Class. Price: $1.50—B.S.

Cruiser Orders in Britain

AUSTRALIAN REBUKE TO SOCIALISTS.

Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Australian Premier, has issued a long statement replying to criticism of the Government's decision to place the orders for two new cruisers to Britain. He says that it would be impossible to justify the building of the cruisers in Australia, since only 15 per cent. of Australian material could be used. He states that "the attitude of the Labour Party towards defence—particularly naval defence—makes it extremely unlikely that the shipbuilding industry in Australia would receive from them even that measure of support which our circumstances permit and our safety demands." The construction of a seaplane carrier would suffice to keep the technical staff together for naval repairs.

Little Jack Rabbit
by David Cory

Bobbie Redvest flew swiftly over the meadow. He saw Timmie Woodhouse looking out of a thick hedge. "Will you come to the Jack Rabbits' May Day?" asked the pretty robin, settling to rest a moment in an apple tree.

"I will," answered the woodhouse. "On the first of May."

"In time, please don't be late; we start at half past eight," said Bobbie Redvest, as he clapped his wings and flew up the hedge.

On the ridge of the Big Barn the Weathercock turned to the new East, now West, on his tail. "Here comes Bobbie Redvest," he called down to the Barn. "On seeing the little robin, Bobbie Redvest, "I have something nice to tell you."

"It's short and very snappy," said the quick and make us happy," said Cocky Doodle, the little rooster.

"Well, it's a May Day Party," exclaimed the pretty robin, as the Barn-Park stood before him, "Little Jack Rabbit's May Day Party. He has you all to come on the first of the Pleasant Pasture at the end of the Shady Forest."

"Well, I should say yes. And I'll bring Mrs. Frog and Tad Tadpole," answered the old gentleman frog, with a wink and a blink. Then he gave a loud croak, "Kerdukk, kerdukk!" and caught a fly with his long tongue as easily as you can say "Jack Robinson!" Little Reader.

"Mrs. Oriole, will you come to Little Jack Rabbit's May Day Party?" asked the little robin, flying up to the Weeping Willow Tree, on a branch of which hung the lady oriole's stockings. "Yes, wow, I'll come if the kind hearted. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that."

Pity the Preacher

A Texas paper comments as follows: "The preacher has a great time. If his hair is grey, he is old. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he has too many; if he has none, he isn't setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is pre-empting; if she doesn't, she isn't interested in her husband's work. If a preacher reads from notes, he is a bore; if he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough. If he stays at home in his study, he doesn't mix enough with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be at home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on some poor family, he is playing to the grandstand; if he calls at the home of the wealthy, he is an aristocrat. Whatever he does, some one could have told him to do better."—The Churchman.

Newfoundland Fisherman and Wife Observe 49th Wedding Anniversary in Westchester

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

The subjoined excerpt from a New York newspaper will be perused with interest by the readers of the Telegram, as for many years Capt. John Boland was one of our most successful banking masters. For several years he sailed out of the firm of James Fox & Sons of this city, and, as stated below, was high liner. Capt. Boland was born in Mosquito, now Bristol's Hope, midway between Harbor Grace and Carbonear, and sprung from good old Irish stock, his parents combining farming with fishing, and the old homestead is still there. Previous to coming to St. John's, he sailed out of Harbor Grace with some of our most famous master mariners, and was always reckoned "every inch a sailor."

With regard to the part Capt. Boland and the other Newfoundlanders played in saving the crew of the Welsh steamship, J. W. Ricot, off Cape Mondeo, Portugal, which is referred to in the subjoined excerpt from the New York paper, I can give a brief description of the heroic rescue of the shipwrecked mariners by the hardy and fearless volunteer Newfoundland sailors, when all other efforts had failed. I gave full particulars of this memorable event in the columns of the Telegram about two years ago, when Capt. Boland visited his Native Land. A brief sketch will not be out of place here.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS TO THE RESCUE.
 In the year 1882, while Goodridge & Sons' brigantine "Miriam," Capt. Manning (who is still hale and hearty in St. John's), was lying in Figueira, Portugal, it was reported that the Welsh steamship, J. W. Ricot, was on the sand-bank, about half a mile from the land, with the sea raging almost to the mast-head, to which three sailors and Capt. Freeman were taken. The Portuguese lifeboat and crew went to their assistance, and remained there seventy-four hours, but had to abandon the attempt to save took their lifeboat from the Portuguese, where she was lying on the beach. They manned the lifeboat, and pulled a distance of 12 miles along shore. When about 8 miles from the wrecked steamer they could see that there was something unusual on the foremast-head. They reached about 300 yards from the ship, and saw that the men on the foremast-head were alive, and beginning to cut the ropes by which they were lashed to the spar, also that the poor fellows were very excited. Two hours previous one man had cut himself loose and jumped, falling on the ship's davits, and was instantly killed. Chief officer Dunn spoke through the trumpet, telling them not to be excited that "he would take them off living or dead." He watched his chance after three rolling seas had passed—gave orders to back the boat astern, and reaching the ship, took them off with the greatest difficulty.

Previous to the daring Newfoundland volunteers undertaking what was looked upon as a forlorn hope, Capt. Manning, being dubious of success, and a most careful man over his crew, was in a bad state, when Chief officer Dunn told him (Capt. Manning) to write a letter to his (Dunn's) wife in St. John's, telling her that if anything happened it was his own wish to go to save the crew, and that he exonerated the captain from all blame. John Boland said the same. The British Consul insured the lives of the hardy and daring Newfoundland volunteers for one thousand pounds for that day only.

In coming back in the lifeboat, the Portuguese lifesaving crew, hearing that the shipwrecked mariners were rescued by the Newfoundlanders went to meet the heroes, and wished to take the shipwrecked mariners in their boat, but the captain of the wrecked steamship would not go with them saying "the Newfoundlanders saved them and they would live or die with them." They landed on a little beach four miles from Figueira, just inside the Cape Lighthouse. When the boat struck the beach they took the shipwrecked men in their arms and brought them ashore, procured a covered wagon and conveyed them to town.

THE HEROES' RECEPTION.
 The British Consul then took the poor fellows in charge, and had them sent to a hotel. Hundreds of Portuguese ladies placed their arms around the necks of the Newfoundland heroes and kissed them, but the Portuguese men spat in their faces being jealous of the Newfoundland volunteers because of their success. Had the Newfoundlanders handed over the rescued men to the Portuguese crew, when the latter went to meet them, they would have received twenty pounds per man, and all the honors of the heroic rescue. Two days after the British Consul sent for the Newfoundland heroes, and presented them with the munitific (?) sum of half a sovereign a man. It is needless to say the crew enjoyed themselves that night as only Newfoundlanders know how to do on the half sovereign each.

RESCUE CREW HONOURED.
 One year after Lady Carter sent for all the crew to visit Government House (Sir F. E. T. Carter being Administrator at this time), and presented each man with a silver medal, but John Boland being at sea, did not receive his until some time afterwards. Each of the Newfoundland volunteers were also presented with a letter from the King of Portugal, to the effect that if they were ever in trouble in any Portuguese port or colony, everything should be done for their comfort.

THE NEWFOUNDLANDER'S ELEMENT.
 It is in emergency or when pitted against a rival of another nationality that the inborn heroism, daring and love of adventure of the Newfoundland marine shines forth in all its glory, and this is only one instance of the many where Newfoundlanders performed what was held to be impossible, with honour to themselves and credit to their country. The love of adventure is in their blood, whether it be in Greenland's icy mountains, or India's coral strand, or any other part of the globe. And now let us see what the New York newspapers have to say about the old Newfoundland banking skipper, in the evening of his days.

JOHN BOLAND'S EARLY DAYS.
 It's a far cry from the romance of the sea to the drab life of the home, but Capt. John Boland, 2106 Starling

Are, old Newfoundland fisherman, in celebrating with his wife recently their 49th wedding anniversary prove that the two can be reconciled.

Capt. Boland was born in the fishing town of Carbonear, Nfld., Oct. 16, 1882. The call of the sea could not be resisted, so he shipped as a cabin boy on a schooner at the age of 13. He spent more than 31 years at sea, having a number of harrowing experiences. Each time, however, he cheated death.

The captain comes of a seafaring family. His ancestors for generations roamed the Seven Seas in search of adventure. Mrs. Boland was born in St. John's, Nfld., May 17, 1851, and there the couple married almost a half century ago.

Her ancestors also followed the sea.

He Tells Good Stories.
 The old mariner, who at the age of 73 is robust, looks back upon "the good old days," with evident relish and his eyes glow with pride as he narrates his adventures both as mate and as master of fishing schooners, with the Newfoundland fishing banks as a background.

In reminiscing he told how he once saved the life of his own son, who was cooking below deck when their fishing schooner overturned in a sudden squall in Placentia Bay.

Some time later his son died at sea, he added.

Capt. Boland on a fishing trip to South Light, some years ago, became known as a "highliner," which title was bestowed upon the person making the biggest catch of the year.

Carried the First Herring.
 He was master of the "Jubilee," the first vessel to carry a cargo of herring in a Newfoundland bottom to an American port. He had considerable experience in the seal-fishing trade, and, in 1872, as captain of the brig "Mary Jane" rode out a terrific storm off Battle Harbor, while three other schooners were sunk in the gale.

Capt. Boland, in 1881, received a silver medal and laudatory letter from the Portuguese Government for having assisted nine other men in saving the lives of four stranded seamen who were clinging to the mast of the schooner "Marfan," which ran aground off Cape Mondeo.

For a score of years the captain and his wife have lived in Westchester. He lives in memories of his sea experiences while his spouse is a de-voice of automobiling and the radio. The aged mariner is fond of horses and dogs. He spends much of his spare time gardening.

Sleeps Only Five Hours.
 He arises at 4.30 each morning after having only five hours sleep. He agrees with Thomas Edison that this sleep period is ample and that "if a person devotes his or her spare time to a hobby and is industrious, they are sure to live to a ripe old age."

Asked what he thought of the present generation, he replied: "If the people who inhabited my birthplace were to see the girls of to-day they would think they were living in a different world."

Mr. Boland, however, has nothing but praise for the fapper, and maintains that they are more vivacious and intelligent than girls of past eras. Her husband explains that Westchester is much improved since he moved there. He said: "New York is the finest city in the world and it is much improved since I arrived here, 45 years ago."

Spends His Time in Westchester.
 The retired mariner explained that all his time is spent in Westchester. He is employed in a City department nearby, and when his work is done he hurries home to play with his granddaughter, aged 5 years.

The captain admits having attended two movies during his lifetime and "fell asleep at both of them," he adds. Despite his advanced age he still feels the lure of the sea, and would gladly ship on a vessel to-morrow if home-les did not bind.

He has much praise for his spouse, who he says "is a wonderful mother and wife." The couple's two sons, a daughter and five grandchildren participated in the celebration.

Concert at Insane Asylum

On Tuesday night the annual concert for the patients at the Insane Asylum was given by the Independent Order Daughters of Empire.

Lady Allardyce, who very graciously consented to attend, was received by Dr. Parsons, Superintendent of the Institution, and afterwards gave a short address.

The following ladies and gentlemen contributed to the programme which was greatly enjoyed—Misses Ollivier, Janet Anderson and Oliver; Messrs. Phelps and Wardell, and members from the St. Mary's Amateur Dramatic Company.

Upwards of two hundred and twenty patients were present, who were afterwards served with tea and cakes kindly provided by the Daughters of Empire. Needless to say the Superintendent and staff of the Institution are greatly indebted to the ladies who arranged the treat, and also to the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly contributed numbers to the programme.

Will Sail Around the World in a 68-Foot Boat

"The longest cruise in the smallest boat" is the slogan of an around-the-world cruise now being undertaken by a party from Chicago, Ill., in a 68-foot all-cypress sailing vessel modeled after a Norwegian ketch. The voyage, which is expected to take two years, is under the direction of Capt. A. J. Duken, an experienced explorer and navigator. It was undertaken to obtain moving pictures and historical data of little known islands of the South Seas.

The ship, known as the Big Bill, after William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, is the first to sail from Chicago to the Orient by way of the Illinois Michigan Canal, the Illinois and Mississippi rivers. It is equipped with an auxiliary engine, radio, and many other modern improvements.

We have Head Light and Tail Light Bulbs for all makes of cars. Tyre Testers, Valve Insides and Distilled water always on hand, at McKINLAY'S Garage.

Ship Sails in Milky Sea Off the Coast of Peru

Plowing for miles through a white sea was the unusual sight recently of the steamship "Peru" off the coast of Peru, as reported by Capt. A. G. Cameron to the Geographic Office of the U. S. Navy Department.

This unusual phenomenon occurred at night and, according to the Geographic Office, is accounted for by the presence in the water of minute particles of mica.

In the account of the voyage, the famous scientific ship Challenger is referred to a similar experience when the vessel "passed through a full of minute algae glassing particles of mica."

TO YOUNG MEN!

This is specially addressed to the young men who are following the trend of style especially as regards trousers. If you want the bell bottom trousers, with or without cuff, here is the place to get them; we are making and have made recently some splendid examples of this style. This also applies to the straight hanging English trousers hanging free from the hips to the cuff; with plenty of room at knees and bottom.
