

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

APPLIED IMAGE, Inc
 1653 East Main Street
 Rochester, NY 14609 USA
 Phone: 716/482-0300
 Fax: 716/288-5089

© 1993, Applied Image, inc., All Rights Reserved

CIHM
Microfiche
Series
(Monographs)

ICMH Collection de microfiches (monographies)

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

© 1994

Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- | | |
|--|--|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Pages detached/
Pages détachées |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire) | <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Showthrough/
Transparence |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur | <input type="checkbox"/> Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents | <input type="checkbox"/> Continuous pagination/
Pagination continue |
| <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure | <input type="checkbox"/> Includes index(es)/
Comprend un (des) index |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées
lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont
pas été filmées. | Title on header taken from:
Le titre de l'en-tête provient: |
| | <input type="checkbox"/> Title page of issue/
Page de titre de la livraison |
| | <input type="checkbox"/> Caption of issue/
Titre de départ de la livraison |
| | <input type="checkbox"/> Masthead/
Générique (périodiques) de la livraison |
| <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Additional comments:
Commentaires supplémentaires: | Various pagings. |

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

10X	12X	14X	16X	18X	20X	22X	24X	26X	28X	30X	32X
					/

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

University of British Columbia Library
Vancouver

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche sheet contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

University of British Columbia Library
Vancouver

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

32

MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO
From the bust in Naples Museum

M. TULLI CICERONIS

DE IMPERIO CN. POMPEI

SIVE

PRO LEGE MANILIA

AD QUIRITES ORATIO

WITH INTRODUCTION, NOTES, &c.

BY

W. J. WOODHOUSE, M.A.

Professor of Greek in the University of Sydney

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS

THE COPP CLARK COMPANY, LIMITED TORONTO

U.S.C. LIBRARY

PA6279
Ib
80 1915
unc

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION—		Page
Roman Policy in the East	ix
Mithridates	xii
Pompeius	xxvi
The Pirates	xxxix
Cicero	xxxvi
TEXT	I
NOTES	45
CRITICAL APPENDIX	96

U.S.C. LIBRARY

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

	Page
BUST OF CICERO -	Frontispiece
ORATOR SPEAKING FROM ROSTRA -	2
PLAN OF THE ROMAN FORUM -	3
COIN OF TIGRANES -	5
COIN OF MITHRIDATES -	6
COIN OF ARIOBARZANES I -	9
VIEW OF WALLS OF CYZICUS -	14
MEDIA ON VOYAGE WITH ARGONAUTS -	15
MAP OF ASIA MINOR -	17
BUST OF POMPEY -	facing 24
BUST OF HORTENSIVS -	facing 32
COLUMBARIUM OF LIVIA'S FREEDMEN (APPIAN WAY)	34

U.S.C. LIBRARY

INTRODUCTION

The policy of Rome in the eastern half of the Mediterranean area was at first different from that pursued in the western half. The wars with Carthage had made any other policy than that of annexation impossible; consequently Sicily, Spain, the western islands, and finally Africa, were from the first made directly subject to Rome as external departments of administration (provinciae). In the eastern Mediterranean the Senate exhibited greater reluctance to annex. The hesitancy displayed in accepting opportunities of rupture, and the studied moderation of the terms imposed after victory, prove that Rome did not deliberately adopt a policy of conquest in the East. Although the short space of twenty-four years sufficed for the virtual conquest of Macedonia, Greece and western Asia, the Senate had on each opportunity refused to annex, contenting itself with the establishment of a protectorate. It was not until three Macedonian wars had proved the utility of this policy that Macedonia was declared a Roman province, to which Achaëa (i.e. Greece) was attached (146 B.C.). Further east, the provincial system, that is to say the policy of annexation, made way even more slowly. The change from a policy of protectorates and buffer-states to one of annexation was partly owing to the proved unworkableness of the former system, partly also to the ever-growing influence of the commercial spirit of Rome itself—a spirit which grew by what it fed on; to which, in the main, must be ascribed the destruction of Carthage and Corinth¹ and the dishonourable treatment of

¹ § 11: Corinthum patres vestri, totius Graeciae lumen, extinctum esse voluerunt.

U.S.C. LIBRARIES

Rhodes. A third factor, less obvious and less capable of evaluation, must also be taken into the account. "Without the possession of a great moral force Rome would not have annexed the world. It was not done by her great generals. Other peoples had just as many as them, and Hannibal was without a rival. Rome did not prevail by force or stratagem, but by the ever-growing power of attraction of a state based on a unique system of law . . . an unconscious magnetism",¹ by virtue of which the Romans of that age were "called to be umpires of the nations and a terror to kings".²

The disinclination of the Romans to face the realities of the situation in the East, and, while putting down internal disorders with the strong hand, to devise a reasonable scheme of control over the instruments of their policy—the provincial governors—entailed disastrous results for themselves, in the rise of Mithridates of Pontus, the development of piracy throughout the Mediterranean and the growth of the Parthian power. The two first alone concern us in connection with the present oration.

The year 133 B.C., momentous in the domestic and constitutional history of Rome as that of the tribunate of Tiberius Gracchus, saw also the abandonment of the protectorate system and the creation of the first Roman province in the continent of Asia. In that year Attalus II, the last of his line, bequeathed by will his kingdom of Pergamum (or Pergamus) to the Roman state. Four years later, after the suppression of the pretender Aristonicus, the old Hellenic districts of Mysia, Lydia, Ionia and Caria were formally organized as the province of Asia.³ The new province included the most fertile

¹ Holm, Greek History, iv. 350.

² A. W. Schlegel (quoted by Holm, p. 353).

³ Cp. the speech Pro Flacco, § 65, Asia vestra constat ex Phrygia, Mysia, Caria, Lydia. Phrygia was incorporated in 116 B.C.

⁴ § 14: Asia vero tam opima est ac fertilis, ut et ubertate agrorum et varietate fructuum et magnitudine pastionis et multitudine earum rerum, quae exportentur, facile omnibus terris antecellat.

capable, populous, and wealthy districts of Asia Minor, and from the first ranked as the most valuable asset of the empire. The revenue derived from it was the mainstay of the Roman treasury,¹ and a source of immense profit to the great financial companies (publicani) which speculated in its wealth.² For the wealth of Asia became, under the régime of C. Gracchus, one of the instruments of the Revolution. It was he who devised the fatal system by which the collection of the tithe (decuma) on the contract system was sold by auction in Rome,³ not in the province itself as was the case e.g. in Sicily). In this way Gaius Gracchus bought the support of the upper middle class large and moderate capitalists known as the Equites—"body of men with few ideals but very decided wants".⁴ The scandalous extortion of the publicani was but one result from in the programme of misgovernment and injustice under which the provincials of Asia groaned. To it fell to be added the rapacity of the Roman governor himself and of the entire official class.⁵ In addition, a host of Roman business men (negotiatores) of every kind⁶—to whom their Roman citizenship in their exploitation of the provinces meant money—descended like harpies upon the land, bringing for the hapless natives bankruptcy and enslavement. How lucrative a field the province of Asia was is indicated by the enormous "parasitic population"⁷

¹ § 6: aguntur certissima populi Romani vectigalia et maxima, quibus amissis et pacis ornamenta et subsidia belli requiretis.

² § 17: Nam et publicani . . . suas rationes et copias in illam provinciam contulerunt.

³ Cic. Verr. iii. 6. 12, ensoria locatio constituta est, ut Asiae lege compronia.

⁴ Greenidge, Roman Public Life, p. 333.

⁵ § 65: Difficile est dictu, Quirites, quanto in odio simus apud exteras nationes propter eorum, quos ad eos per hos annos cum imperio misimus, invidines et iniurias. See also the foll. §§.

⁶ § 18: ex ceteris ordinibus homines navi atque industrii partim ipsi Asia negotiantur.

⁷ The expression is that of Mommsen, Hist. of Rome, iv. p. 177 (I note throughout the English edition of 1804).

of Roman and Italian origin settled there for business purposes when Mithridates issued his decree for its termination. The almost unanimous response to the decree is also the best evidence of the bitter hatred with which these immigrants had inspired the natives. The old principle, that Rome did not govern for profit,¹ had been abandoned for a new one, in the light of which the provinces were regarded as "the estates of the Roman people",² and were ill-managed into the bargain. When in Asia Minor the old immemorial conflict of East and West exhibited itself anew in a phase of acute national reaction of the Orientals against the Occidentals, it was little wonder that the champion of this reaction was hailed "the delivering god" by both Greeks and Asiatics.

MITHRIDATES

The man who is thus invested with a deep historical significance³ was Mithridates VI,⁴ surnamed Eupator, who, born about 130 B.C., had succeeded as a boy less than fourteen years to the throne which his father's assassination had left vacant. He traced his descent, on the father's side, from king Darius, son of Hystaspes, and with his Persian blood might well seem to the Asiatics to inherit the claim once made by the Persian kings to the supremacy of Asia. By services to the Greek cities in his kingdom his father had gained the surname of Euergetes ("Benefactor"), and Mithridates Eupator himself had had a Greek education, so that in upbringing, natural endowment, bodily activity, and the grandiose scale of his designs, he presented himself to the Greeks of his age as something of a reincarnation of Alexander the Great. Whether from the first he deliberately set before him-

¹ Cp. Momms. R. H. iv. 165.

² Cic. Verr. ii. 3. 7, quasi quaedam praedia populi Romani.

³ Cp. Momms. R. H. iv. 10, and 421.

⁴ I have retained the commoner spelling; another, perhaps better form is Mithradates (adopted by Momms. R. H.).

the task of expelling the Romans from Asia and establishing himself as Asiatic monarch ruling over a purely Asiatic empire, is a question that cannot be answered:—

“No one but God and I Knows what is in my heart”!—

It is true of Mithridates, as of all the other great figures of history whose aims and deeds are known to us only through the medium of a defective and often hostile tradition.

The kingdom of Pontus, or Cappadocia on the Pontus coast, it was called in earlier times, to distinguish it from the Greater Cappadocia in the interior, had taken its rise during the mutual wars of the successors of Alexander the Great. The first care of Mithridates was to enlarge his borders. This was the easier for him as their struggle with Jugurtha and with the Cimbri and Teutones² directed the attention of the Romans from the East. Also had in his service the best military talent of the Greeks of his day. Mithridates extended his power first round the eastern and northern shores of the Black Sea (Pontus), where he appeared as the champion of the once rich Greek cities of the Crimea and the mouth of the Don against the Scythians. Thus Mithridates acquired a second kingdom, called the kingdom of the Bosporus.³ The nomads of the steppes westwards as far as the Danube entered into relations with him, as did also the Greek cities on the coast to the south of that river. East of the Black Sea he acquired Colchis, and to the south-east Lesser Armenia (the country on the west of the Euphrates). To Artabanus, king of Greater Armenia, he gave his daughter Stratonice in marriage, and thus secured an alliance which afterwards stood him in good stead. “Thus the Bosporus was his granary, Colchis an arsenal full of wood, tar, and hemp, Armenia Minor as it were his acropolis. His ships controlled the Black Sea; Sinope¹ was a naval station and the capital."²

Hichens, The Garden of Allah.

60: ut idem (Marius) cum Jugurtha, idem cum Cimbris, idem cum Teutonis bellum administraret.

69: et se Bosporanis, finitimis suis, bellum inferre simularet.

Mithridates was now free to turn his attention to making annexations in Asia Minor itself. On the west of Pontus lay Paphlagonia, the inner country behind the coastal strip which for long had formed part of the Pontic kingdom. Beyond Paphlagonia, to the west, was Bithynia, ruled by Nicomedes II Epiphānes. South of Pontus lay Cappadocia, beyond which was Cilicia. Paphlagonia was now partitioned by the Bithynian and Pontic kings in concert (105 B.C.). Intrigues and counter-intrigues on the part of the two kings for the possession of Cappadocia led to a rupture, and finally to Roman intervention. The propraetor of Cilicia, L. Cornelius Sulla, the future Dictator, advanced across Mount Taurus, expelled the nominee of Mithridates, and set Ariobarzanes on the Cappadocian throne. This was done in 92 B.C. Scarcely had Sulla left Asia when Tigranes fell upon Cappadocia, at the instigation of Mithridates, and reinstated the Pontic king's nominee. In Bithynia also where Nicomedes II had died, about 91 B.C., and had been succeeded by his son Nicomedes III, Mithridates supported a pretender who by his aid expelled the legitimate king.

Rome was hard pressed at this moment (90 B.C.) by the rising of the Italians. The opportunity was favourable. Mithridates seriously intended to defy the Senate. Nevertheless, when Manius Aquillius was sent simply as ambassador³ to effect the restoration of both Ariobarzanes and Nicomedes, Mithridates gave way at once. It difficult to understand his action. "This strange combination of a policy of peace at any price with a policy of conquest was certainly in itself untenable, and was simply fresh proof that Mithridates did not belong to the class of genuine statesmen"—so the modern historian with any criticism.¹ War was actually brought about not by the determination of the two principals concerned, but by the personal efforts of Aquillius himself, who incited Nicomedes, his debtor, to raid Pontic territory. In answer to his complaints Mithridates was warned not to employ his arms against Nicomedes. Precisely the same policy of bear-baiting had been the prelude of the same scene with Carthage. Mithridates, who had now a legal right on his side, reoccupied Cappadocia, and in the spring of 88 B.C. the First Mithridatic War began.

¹ § 21: Sinopen atque Amisum, quibus in oppidis erant domicilia regis omnibus rebus ornata atque referta.

² Holm, Greek History, iv. 533.

³ § 11: legatum populi Romani consularem . . . legatum omni periculo interfectum.

Everywhere Mithridates posed as the champion of Hellenic nationality against the western "barbarians". It was practically certain that in western Asia Minor, owing to Roman misrule, the national sympathy both of the Greek cities and of the Asiatic peasantry would be in favour of the king. The ships of the corsairs were ready in his hand to aid in holding the seas against the Roman fleets. The embers of the Italian insurrection might perhaps also be fanned again to fierce flame—though indeed the king's ulterior claims could not at all be harmonized with Italian aspirations; to this fact, perhaps, it was due that he did not enter into any direct negotiations with the insurgents, but contented himself with enrolling Roman and Italian refugees in a foreign legion constituting one item of his vast but motley host. The first campaign went all in favour of the king. Nicomedes was so utterly routed that he incontinently abandoned his throne. Lucius Cassius, governor of the province of Asia, Quintus Oppius, governor of Cilicia, and Manius Aquillius, were successively defeated, or deserted by their troops without striking a blow. Mithridates thus remained master not only of Bithynia and Cappadocia, but of the province of Asia, including Pergamum its capital. Practically all western Asia was in his hands; his fleet commanded the Aegean Sea. It was of great importance to the Romans that Rhodes remained loyal and beat off all the king's assaults. Manius Aquilius, whose folly or greed had occasioned the war, was surrendered to Mithridates by the Mytilenaeans. After being dragged about Asia like a beast in chains, he was put to death in Pergamum;² according to the story molten gold was poured down his throat that so he might glut his avarice. "This savage mockery," says Mommsen,³ "alone suffices to erase its author's name from the roll of true nobility." Yet the same writer calls Alexander the Great "the most poetical of all heroic figures",⁴ forgetting the fantastic barbarity of his treatment of the brave defender of Gaza. From Ephesus Mithridates issued a decree to the inhabitants of all the cities which had joined him—to put to death on one and the same day all Italians found within their walls, without distinction of age, sex, or status, to cast forth their corpses unburied, and to confiscate their property.⁵ The decree was carried out almost everywhere, and eight thousand, or as other accounts have it, one hundred and fifty thousand Romans and Italians fell victims to a long hoarded revenge.

¹ Momms. R. H. iv. 25.

The hands of the Roman government all this time were tied by the Sulpician revolution. Sulla, the consul

¹ § 54: Rhodium, quorum usque ad nostram memoriam disciplina navalis et gloria remansit.

² § 11: legatum populi Romani consularem vinculis ac verberibus atque omni supplicio excruciatum necavit.

³ Momms. R. H. iv. 31.

⁴ Momms. R. H. iv. 274.

⁵ § 7: illa macula [Mithridatico] bello superiore concepta . . . quae . . . cives Romanos necandos trucidandosque curavit.

B.C., instead of embarking for Asia, had found himself compelled to march on Rome itself. Mithridates was able to extend his schemes to a military occupation of Macedonia and Greece. The Pontic fleet crossed the Aegean Sea to the Piraeus, inflicting on its way a fearful punishment upon the island of Delos, the emporium of Roman commerce and slave-trade.¹ Twenty thousand men, mostly Italians, were massacred, and the women and children sold as slaves—"the families of the slave-dealers learnt what slavery was!"² Athens, under the leadership of Aristion, a philosopher turned despot, declared for the king, and was garrisoned by his general, Archelaus. The rest of Greece followed this example. Never, perhaps, had Rome been in graver difficulties. Italian insurgents, though their cause was by this time manifestly lost, were still stubbornly holding out in Samnium; the Marian party, crushed for the moment, was by no means ready to acknowledge defeat; the Italian war and enormous monetary losses in Asia had brought about a financial crisis the like of which had never been known.³ The result of these embarrassments was that Sulla landed in Epirus in the spring of 87 B.C. with only five weak legions, without a war-chest, and, most serious deficiency of all, without even the nucleus of a fleet. Even Caesar in his "marvellous serenity" never exhibited a more undid self-reliance than did Sulla when he embarked on his desperate task.⁴ The obstinacy and skill of the defence, together with the fact that the Pontic fleet commanded the sea, delayed Sulla before the walls of Athens and the Piraeus (at this time two separate towns) nearly a year. Their capture enabled him to defeat the king's generals in a great battle

¹ 55: insula Delos . . . quo omnes undique cum mercibus atque hominibus commeabant, referta divitiis.

² Plin. Nat. Hist., iv. 546.

³ 19: cum in Asia res magnas permulti amiserunt, scimus Romae non impedita fidem concidisse.

⁴ See Momms. R. H. iv. 36.

in the plain of the Boeotian Cephissus, not far from Chironia (March, 86 B.C.), and still more decisively in the spring of the following year at Orchomenos in Boeotia (85 B.C.). Both Greece and Macedonia were thereby brought to the king. In the meantime, however, Sulla's position had become ambiguous. He was in fact no longer the general of the army of the Republic, for the revolutionary party was again triumphant in Rome, under Cinna; Sulla had been outlawed, and the Asiatic command given to the consul Lucius Valerius Flaccus¹ even before Sulla's first victory. Flaccus with two legions actually passed through Thessaly and Macedonia on his way to Asia (86 B.C.). At Chalcedon one of his chief officers, Gaius Flavius Fimbria, a scoundrel of the first water, instigated a mutiny of the troops. Flaccus was deposed and murdered at Nicomedia, and Fimbria, who was not without talent, installed as commander-in-chief. He defeated the younger Mithridates, and expelled even the king himself from Pergamus. The king's position was indeed becoming every day more desperate owing to the reaction against his despotism in western Asia Minor. Sulla's arrival in Asia was also now inevitable. His bold and energetic officer Lucius Licinius Lucullus had been scouring the Levant at risk of his life the last eight months to raise a fleet. He had got together war-ships in Syria, Cyprus, Pamphylia, and Rhodes, had occupied Cnidus, Colophon, and Chios, and perhaps, if he could have brought himself to co-operate with Fimbria, might have ended the war at a stroke by the capture of the king himself on his flight from Pergamus.

Under these circumstances all parties were not unwilling to come to terms. When Sulla, in 85 B.C., crossed into Asia peace was concluded on terms which amounted to a restoration of the status quo before the outbreak of the war. Mithridates had to restore Cappadocia, Bithynia, Asia, and Paphlagonia, to surrender the seventy constituting the fleet of Archelaus, and to pay 3000 talents indemnity for the expenses of the war. Ariobarzanes and Nicomedes were thus restored to their respective kingdoms. Fimbria's troops deserted him, and Fimbria committed suicide in the temple of Asklepios at Pergamus.

¹ See Momms. R. H. iv. 72, note.

 Sulla then regulated the affairs of Asia. The loyal communities were rewarded; the adherents of Mithridates and his instruments of the Italian massacre were executed.
 The whole province was required to pay in cash the arrears of the tithe which had accumulated for the past five years, and to raise a further sum of 20,000 talents (£4,800,000)
 as a war-indemnity. This simply meant financial ruin to the already impoverished province. In order to meet these frightful demands the communities were forced to borrow from Roman money-lenders, with the result that within seven years later their debt had grown to six times its original amount! One evil which the war had fostered—the outrages of the pirate fleets—Sulla took no serious steps to check. In Greece also devastation and ruin were everywhere the memorials of his presence. Politically his arrangements were nugatory; the two client kings were as helpless, and the province of Asia as defenceless, as before, while no guarantee had been taken against a revival of the Pontic power. Here as in Rome, whither Sulla returned in 83 B.C. to restore senatorial ascendancy,¹ his measures bore the stamp of his character—cynical and ruthless, without a trace of morality or political insight. Sulla was one of the ablest, but surely one of the worst men that Rome ever produced.
 The peace was only a truce, as it was never ratified in Rome. L. Murena, left in command of the two legions in Asia, took advantage of this to execute the war on his own account. The pretext was that Mithridates still retained some part of Cappadocia.
 Sulla's preparations for an expedition into his Bosporan dominions also gave some colour to the charge of preparing to renew the war with Rome.¹ In defiance Sulla's instructions Murena violated Pontic territory. was defeated on the river Halys (82 B.C.), and the Roman garrisons were expelled from Cappadocia. Murena assumed the title of imperator for these exploits, and commanded a triumph,² which he actually obtained; but a second message from Sulla forced him to desist from further operations. This episode constitutes the Second Mithridatic War. The peace was renewed (81 B.C.), but its ratification was still withheld; when Sulla died (78 B.C.) Mithridates saw that he must give up all hope of its ratification, and continued his preparations for a decisive struggle.³

¹ 8: ab eo bello Sullam in Italiam res publica . . . revocavit.

As in the year 88 B.C., it was the affairs of Bithynia that gave the signal for war. In 75 B.C. Nicomedes III died, and, like Attalus of Pergamus, left his kingdom by will to the Romans. The Senate immediately declared Bithynia a Roman province.⁴ The Romans thus became immediate neighbours of Mithridates, and gained control of the Bosphorus as well as of the Hellespont. At the end of 75 B.C. Mithridates declared war. He strengthened himself by making a formal treaty with Sertorius, who was now at the height of his successes in Spain.⁵ Sertorius agreed to recognize the king's sovereignty over Asia Minor, excepting the province of Asia, and sent him troops and an able officer, Marcus Marius. In return the king transmitted to Spain 3000 talents and forty ships.

¹§ 9: posteaquam maximas aedificasset ornassetque classes . . . Bosphoranis . . . bellum inferre simularet. It is true that Cicero refers to this to the time after the episode of Murena, but from other authorities we learn that it also applies to the interval before that episode.

²§ 8: triumphavit L. Murena de Mithridate . . . Murenam revocavit.

³§ 9: Mithridates autem omne reliquum tempus non ad oblivionem veteris belli, sed ad comparationem novi contulit, &c.

⁴§ 5: Bithyniae, quae nunc vestra provincia est.

⁵§ 9: usque in Hispaniam legatos ac litteras misit ad eos quibuscum tum bellum gereremus.

us, in Cicero's grandiloquent phrase, "the Atlantic united with the Euxine".¹ The imposing power of pirates was also once again ranged on the king's side, for since 79 B.C. the Romans had applied themselves with some vigour to checking their depredations.² On the Roman side, the provinces of Cilicia and Asia were assigned to the consul L. Lucullus, with five legions, including the two Valerian legions quartered in Asia since 100 B.C. The other consul, M. Aurelius Cotta, was sent to Bithynia. To secure control of the sea was the task of the praetor Marcus Antonius. The war began, as before, with the defection of the cities and the massacre of the Roman residents. In Bithynia, Cotta was defeated and shut up in Chalcedon. When Lucullus approached, Phrygiates withdrew to besiege Cyzicus, situate on an isthmus and connected with the southern shore of the Propontis by a bridge. Cyzicus was a large and wealthy city, the capture of which would have given the king an admirable base of operations by land and sea against Asia.³ The Cysicenes defended themselves desperately, while Lucullus held up a strong position in the rear of the Pontic army, which thus found itself caught in a trap and entirely dependent on the sea for supplies. Famine and disease in winter compelled the king to disastrous retreat.⁴ To counterbalance this blow a Pontic fleet with 10,000 picked men was sent under Marcus Marius and other renegade Romans to the Aegean; it was reported that its mission was to effect a landing in Italy and to stir up anew the Italian war.⁵ Lucullus annihilated one squadron between

Pro Mur. § 32, ut se Oceanum cum Ponto coniuncturum putaret.
 Momms. R. H. iv. 313 fol.

Pro Cic. Pro Mur. § 33, Asiae ianuam . . . qua effracta et revolsa, lateret provincia.

Pro Mur. § 30: uroemque Asiae clarissimam nobisque amicissimam Cysicenorum urbem esse ab ipso rege maxima multitudine et oppugnatam vehementissime; quam L. Lucullus . . . obsidionis periculis liberavit.

Pro Mur. § 31: ab eodem imperatore classem magnam et ornatam, quae ducibus Mariis ad Italiam studio atque odio inflammata raperetur, superatam etque depressam.

the mainland and the island of Tenedos, and caught the remainder at the little island of Næae, between Lemnos and Scyros.

Late in 73 B.C. Lucullus entered Pontus, long untrodden by an enemy,¹ continually pressing the king eastward and investing the towns. In the spring of 72 B.C., at Cabira on the Lycus, a defeat of the cavalry of Mithridates caused the dispersal of his army in panic. With difficulty Mithridates himself escaped from the mad rout. He might indeed have been captured had not his pursuit been turned aside to plunder a mule-load of gold—such is a somewhat foolish tale which Cicero works up into a fine parallel.² As it was, he escaped to Comana and thence to the kingdom of Tigranes.³ The Romans overran Pontus and Lesser Armenia, and captured the king's strongholds with their treasures. The Greek maritime towns—Amisus and Sinope in Pontus, Amastris in Paphlagonia, Heraclea in Bithynia—made a stout defence,⁴ supported by the squadrons of the pirates, for two years more after the battle of Cabira; but the power of Mithridates was shattered; the hopes based upon the alliance with Sertorius were vain, for Sertorius himself fell into the hands of his own officers this same year (72 B.C.) while the king's ships on their way home from Sicily and Crete were destroyed by Triarius at Tenedos. Machares, the king's son, deserted him, and as independent ruler of the Tauric Chersonese made his peace with the Romans. The Third Mithridatic War was virtually at an end.

¹ § 21: patefactumque nostris legionibus esse Pontum, qui antea Romano ex omni aditu clausus fuisset.

² § 22: Primum ex suo regno sic Mithridates profugit, ut ex Ponto Medea illa quondam profugisse dicitur, &c.

³ § 21: regem spoliatum regno patrio atque avito ad alios se regem ad alias gentes supplicem contulisse.

⁴ § 21: Sinopen atque Amisum . . . ceterasque urbes Ponti et Chersonesiae permultas uno aditu adventuque esse captas—which is exaggeration.

During the interval 72-70 B.C. Lucullus busied himself with the affairs of the province of Asia. For the gradual payment of the arrears of the Sullan indemnity he proceeded by means of equitable taxation, with such success that within four years the cities were free of that frightful burden. The prohibition of exorbitant rates of interest, and of the system of adding arrears of interest to the capital debt, relieved the provincials, but robbed the unscrupulous Roman negotiatores of their prey. Lucullus incurred the hostility of the entire capitalist class. He was soon to realize what that meant.

Tigranes gave Mithridates asylum, but at first refused to receive him at his court. When, however, Lucullus sent his son-in-law Appius Claudius (70 B.C.) to Antioch in Syria with a demand for the surrender of the fugitive, Tigranes, in high dudgeon at this cavalier treatment of the "King of Kings", changed his attitude, received his son-in-law in great state, and prepared to sweep the Romans into the sea.¹ The mission of Claudius was assigned only to furnish a diplomatic pretext for war with Tigranes, upon which Lucullus had already made up his mind.² It is hardly possible to say how far personal ambition, and how far the political and military necessities of the case contributed to this resolution³—which, indeed, in the face of it was sufficiently foolhardy.

Lucullus crossed the Euphrates at Melitene (69 B.C.), marching straight upon the new "City of Tigranes", Tigranocerta, founded on the borders of Armenia and Mesopotamia as the second capital of the Armenian Empire. Tigranes came to the relief of the city with an

§ 23: Hunc in illo timore et fuga Tigranes, rex Armenius, excepit identemque rebus suis confirmavit et adstrictum erexit perditumque gravit.

§ 4: Mithridate et Tigrane, quorum alter relictus, alter lacessitus.

§ 23: iis nationibus, quas nunquam populus Romanus neque lacessitas bello neque temptandas putavit.

Momms. iv. 335 fol. endeavours to justify the action of Lucullus, hardly with success.

immense host, but Lucullus offered him battle with force, as Tigranes himself put it, "too large for embassy, and too small for an army". According to the official bulletin of Lucullus, in this matter also true pupil of Sulla, 16,000 legionaries defeated 250,000 Asiatics and slew 100,000 of them with the loss of only five killed! Tigranocerta was immediately surrendered.

Perhaps Tigranes would now have submitted but for the influence of Mithridates, who was nominally the basis of contention. The war took on a new character.¹ An appeal was made to fanaticism; a religious war was proclaimed, and the peoples of the East were summoned to arms in defence of the holy places which, it was reported, were the real objective of the sacrilegious invader.²

In 68 B.C. Lucullus boldly advanced into the heart of Armenia upon Artaxata, the old capital, on the river Araxes. In the valley of the Arsanias he dispersed the forces of the two kings, but a mutiny of his troops compelled him to retreat with the goal almost in view.⁴ He fell back into Mesopotamia, and crossing the Tigris captured Nisibis, where he made his winter quarters, compelled to look on inactive whilst Mithridates reconquered his old kingdom.⁵ Marcus Fabius Hadrianus, t

¹ § 23: noster autem exercitus tametsi urbem ex Tigrani regno cepit et proeliis usus erat secundis—this is all Cicero has to say of a victory which "remains one of the most brilliant stars in the glorious history of Roman warfare" (Momms. R. H. iv. 340).

² § 23: Cuius in regnum posteaquam L. Lucullus cum exercitu venisset plures etiam gentes contra imperatorem nostrum concitatae sunt.

³ § 23: opinio, quae per animos gentium barbararum pervaserat, sed locupletissimi et religiosissimi diripiendi causa in eas oras nostrum exercitum adductum.

⁴ § 23: Noster exercitus . . . nimia longinquitate locorum ac desideriorum suorum commovebatur. And § 24: ut ex illis locis a militibus nostris reditus magis maturus quam progressio longior quaereretur.

⁵ § 24: Mithridates autem et suam manum iam confirmavit. And § 25: cum se in regnum suum recepisset . . . in exercitum nostrum clarum atque victorem impetum fecit.

oman commandant in Pontus, was defeated; all the efforts of C. Triarius to repel the invasion were vain. In the spring of 67 B.C. Lucullus was forced to yield to the urgent entreaties of his lieutenants for help, and to abandon Armenia. He was too late, however, to save Triarius from utter defeat at Ziela.¹

Just at this moment the news arrived from Rome that the intrigues of his enemies had achieved the ruin of Lucullus. Even in the previous year these had been so successful that the combination of two ordinary governorships (i.e. of Asia and Cilicia) with the extraordinary command against Mithridates (which Lucullus himself had extended to embrace the Armenian war) had been abrogated. The province of Asia had been assigned to one of the praetors, and that of Cilicia with three legions to the consul Q. Marcius Rex,² Lucullus being restricted to the command against the two kings. Now when the news came that a decree of the people gave their charge to those of the troops whose legal term of service had expired,³ i.e. primarily to the two mutinous Gallic legions, and transferred the chief command in Armenia and Pontus, with the conduct of the war, to one of the consuls of the current year (67 B.C.), Manius Acilius Glabrio, who had in fact already landed in Asia Minor.⁴ When, then, Lucullus called upon his troops to advance against the Armenians in order to forestall their threatened defection with the army of Mithridates, they marched indeed, but, on reaching the point where the route into Armenia and that into Cappadocia diverged, the bulk of § 25: nostram calamitatem, quae tanta fuit, ut eam ad aures Luculli imperatoris non ex proelio nuntius, sed ex sermone rumor adferret—which is, of course, hardly to be taken seriously (though Mommsen, H. iv. 349, so takes it).

Brother-in-law of Lucullus.

§ 26: partim militum, qui iam stipendiis confectis erant.

§ 26: Lucullus . . . vestro iussu coactus, qui imperii diuturnitati sum statuendum vetere exemplo putavistis, partim militum . . . misit, partim M'. Glabriori tradidit.

the army took the latter, and returned to the province of Asia. The results of eight years of brilliant warfare (74-67 B.C.) were lost. "It was a strange, almost incredible issue for a war conducted in a manner so glorious. If we look merely to military achievement hardly any other Roman general accomplished so much with so trifling means as Lucullus."¹ Now Mithridates not only reoccupied practically his whole kingdom, but his cavalry ranged over Cappadocia and Bithynia,² while king Ariobarzanes in vain implored assistance from the three Roman commanders in Asia Minor. At the end of the year the Manilian law transferred the command of the war to Pompeius; and in 66 B.C. Lucullus quit Asia for Rome.³

POMPEIUS

Cn. Pompeius,⁴ who was thus fated to reap where he had not sown, was born in 106 B.C. From early youth he had been accustomed to arms. At the age of seventeen he served under his father, Cn. Pompeius Strabo, in the Marsic War and against Cinna.⁵ On the news of Sulla landing in Italy in 83 B.C., Pompeius, not yet twenty-three years of age, went to Picenum, in which district he had property and personal interest, and raised at his own expense a force which grew to three legions.⁶ After beating

¹ Momms. R. H. iv. 350.

² § 5: Bithyniae . . . vicos exustos esse complures; regnum Ariobarzanis . . . totum esse in hostium potestate.

³ § 5: Lucillum magnis rebus gestis ab eo bello discedere.

⁴ For a bitter but perhaps essentially just characterization of Pompeius see Momms. R. H. iv. 271 fol.

⁵ § 28: qui e ludo atque e pueritiae disciplinis . . . ad patris exercitum . . . profectus est.

⁶ § 28: qui extrema pueritia miles in exercitu fuit summi imperatoris.

⁷ § 28: ineunte adulescentia maximi ipse exercitus imperatoris in partem hanc. And § 61: Quid tam novum quam adulescentium privatim exercitum difficili rei publicae tempore conficere?

detail the government troops¹ under Cloelius. Gaius Carrinas, and Lucius Junius Brutus Damasippus, the "extemporized general"² effected a junction with Sulla, who received him with the greeting of "imperator", that
 "as an officer commanding in his own name and not subordinate but co-ordinate".³ Under Sulla's auspices he fought in 82 B.C. against Carbo in Italy,⁴ and then,
 in spite of his youth, he was entrusted with independent command, as propraetor, of six legions⁵ against the remnant of the Marian party in Sicily and Africa. Sicily was subdued with little trouble,⁶ and executed the chiefs of the Marian party. The essentially contemptible character of the man was demonstrated in his treatment of Papirius Carbo. Notwithstanding the fact that Carbo had once protected him against his enemies, Pompeius specially enjoined that he should be brought before him that he might personally hand him over to the executioner. In Africa⁷ Pompeius defeated Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus, Cinna's son-in-law, and Hiarbas, who had seized the Numidian throne—"in forty days after his landing all was at an end".⁸ When he was instructed to disband
 his army he refused, and demanded a triumph, an honour

¹ § 61: Rem optime ductu suo gerere? Gessit.

² The phrase is Mommsen's, R. H. iv. 79.

³ Momms. R. H. iv. 79.

⁴ § 28: Civile . . . bellum. And § 30: Testis est Italia . . . huius virtute et subsidio . . . liberatam.

⁵ § 28: ineunte adulescentia maximi ipse exercitus imperator certainly refers in part to this.

⁶ § 30: testis [est] Sicilia quam multis undique cinctam periculis non errore belli sed consilii celeritate explicavit. And § 61: Quid tam praeter consuetudinem quam homini peradulescenti . . . imperium que exercitum dari, Siciliam permitti atque Africam bellumque in ea provincia administrandum?

⁷ § 28: Africanum . . . bellum. And § 30: testis [est] Africa, quae ignis oppressa hostium copiis eorum ipsorum sanguine redundavit.

⁸ § 61: bellum in Africa maximum confecit.

⁹ Momms. R. H. iv. 94.

to which as an extraordinary magistrate he had, according to precedent, no claim. Half-contemptuously Sulla yielded to his importunity, and Pompeius was able to boast being the only Roman who triumphed as a simple equites (79 B.C.).¹ It was Sulla himself also who saluted Pompeius on his return with the epithet "Magnus".

In 78 B.C. Sulla died, and M. Aemilius Lepidus tried by force of arms to subvert the Sullan constitution. The Senate was compelled to confer upon Pompeius, who being now only twenty-eight was too young for the high offices, and perhaps too young for any office at all, an extraordinary command (77 B.C.).² He defeated Marcus Brutus and invested him in Mutina; on the fall of the town Brutus, notwithstanding the safe-conduct promised to him, was put to death by order of Pompeius.³

Pompeius next insisted upon being appointed to the command in Spain, where the war with Q. Sertorius was raging. In the dearth of able men in official positions⁴ the Senate was forced to yield, in disregard of all the rules which Sulla had laid down in connection with the qualifications for office.⁵ "Not from the people which constitutionally ought to have been consulted in a case where a private man was to be invested with supreme magisterial power,⁶ but from the Senate, Pom

¹ § 61: Quid vero tam inauditum quam equitem Romanum triumphar?

² Cicero makes no reference to this. His audience would have little stomach for Pompeius as champion of oligarchical supremacy against Lepidus, in whose platform the restoration of the Tribunate was the plank.

³ Momms. R. H. iv. 291.

⁴ § 62: Quid tam inusitatum, quam ut, cum duo consules clarissimissimi fortissimique essent, eques Romanus ad bellum maximum formidolosissimumque pro consule mitteretur?

⁵ Momms. R. H. iv. 116.

⁶ Cp. the case of P. Scipio in 211 B.C., who was given consular authority for the Spanish War before he had been Consul or Praetor, but by the people in the Comitia Centuriata.

According to the legend, Pompeius received proconsular authority and the chief command in Hither Spain.¹ On his way to the Pyrenees he dealt with disturbances in southern Gaul, exploits which with characteristic vanity he magnified beyond all seeming.² In Spain, where for the first time in his life he had to deal with an opponent of genuine talent in war, Pompeius more than once tasted the bitterness of defeat. For five years (76-72 B.C.) the war dragged on, until Sertorius was assassinated.³ Returning to Italy in 71 B.C., Pompeius was just in time to catch and destroy five thousand fugitives from the defeated army of Spartacus. The credit, such as it was, for bringing to an end the Servile or Gladiatorial War belonged to Marcus Crassus, but here also his vanity made Pompeius boast that he had plucked up the war by the roots.⁴

Still at the head of his veteran army, Pompeius now demanded not only a triumph but the consulship. He had not yet held any ordinary magistracy, not even the quaestorship, and was not yet a member of the Senate. According to the law, the consulship could only be reached by way of the lesser ordinary magistracies, and on the other hand, only one who had been invested with the ordinary supreme power could triumph. A coalition of Pompeius, Crassus, and the democratic party, forced the hands of the Senate. So Pompeius a second time ave little again

e was ariss
idola
onsu
aeto

Momms. R. H. iv. 293.

§ 28: Transalpinum . . . bellum. And § 30: testis [est] Gallia, quam legionibus nostris iter in Hispaniam Gallorum internicione defactum est.

§ 28: Hispaniense . . . bellum. And § 30: testis [est] Hispania, quae saepissime plurimos hostes ab hoc superatos prostratosque conspexit.
§ 10: alterius partis periculum, Sertorianae atque Hispaniensis, . . . Cn. Pompei divino consilio ac singulari virtute depulsum est.

§ 28: servile . . . bellum. And § 30: testis [est] iterum et saepius Italia, quae cum servili bello taetro periculosoque premeretur . . . quod . . . adventu sublatum ac sepultum.

U.S.C. LIBRARY

triumphed as a simple eques, on Dec. 31st, 71 B.C., the day before he entered on his consulship.¹

With the consulship of Pompeius some of the main features of the Sullan constitution came to an end. In particular the Tribunate was restored to its old powers and the evil Gracchan system of farming the revenue of Asia was re-established, in order to secure the interests of the capitalists. In a word, "the system of Sulla which had based the monopoly of power by the nobility on the political annihilation of the mercantile aristocracy and of demagogism, was thus completely overthrown".² This same year the Romans saw another of those theatrical spectacles which are characteristic of the whole career of Pompeius. The office of Censor having been restored with all its old powers, the Recognitio Equitum or review of the Equites in the Forum was once more held. The whole corps filed past the Censors man by man, each knight leading his horse by the bridle, and the herald called his name. Pompeius was seen approaching with the insignia of consul, his lictors preceding him to clear the way. Asked in due form if he had performed the military service required by the law, Pompeius replied in a loud voice: "I have performed all, and all under my own command as Imperator"; upon which there was great applause.³

During the two years succeeding his consulship, Pompeius, refusing to assume the governorship of an ordinary province in the usual course, lived in Rome as a private citizen, taking little part in politics openly. It was the war with the pirates that enabled him once more to assume an extraordinary position.

¹ § 62: Quid tam singulare, quam ut ex senatus consulto legitimus solutus consul ante feret, quam ullum [alium] magistratum per legem capere licuisset? quid tam incredibile, quam ut [iterum] eques Romanus ex senatus consulto triumpharet?

² Momms. R. H. iv. 381.

³ There is probably a reference to this scene in § 28, cuius adolescentiam . . . non alienis praeceptis, sed suis imperiis . . . est erudita.

THE PIRATES

The maritime war with the pirates was indeed part and parcel of the Mithridatic War. From the earliest times chronic evil in the eastern Mediterranean, piracy had obtained through Rome's neglect of her responsibility for the policing of the seas an extraordinary solidarity of organization. Unless the accounts are exaggerated—which indeed is very probable—the pirates had at their mercy the commerce of the entire Mediterranean.¹ The most serious feature was that piracy of late years had actually changed in character. The freebooters constituted now a genuine piratical state. Their fleets were the refuge of the broken men of all nations—"the hunted fugees of all vanquished parties";² so that in a sense the existence of this robber-state was a standing protest against the social and political evils of the age, and is not to be condemned off-hand as a mere fortuitous consequence of men of criminal instincts. The robbers called themselves, or were called, Cilicians, from the fact that the rugged coasts of southern Asia Minor, lying withal conveniently upon the flank of the great routes of sea-borne commerce, formed their main resort. The Greek cities in this region, like Side in Pamphylia, entered into definite relations with the pirates, providing them with a market for the sale of captives and for the purchase of luxuries—for the pirates did not surely plunder towns and temples for the sake of mere hoards of gold. The pirates thus formed a genuine political power, whose alliance was sought, for example, by Mithridates and by Sertorius. The economic significance of the pirates for Rome herself is often overlooked. The immense and steadily increasing demand for slave-labour in Italy was supplied principally by the pirates through their slave-dealers resident in Delos. Hence the government winked at their enormities until the evil attained

¹Cp. Momms. iv. 307 fol.

²Momms. iv. 309.

U.S. LIBRARY

monstrous proportions.¹ The very real assistance rendered by the pirates to Mithridates awoke the Senate, perhaps through Sulla,² to the dangers of the situation.

In 79 B.C., one of the consuls, Publius Servilius Vatia was sent to Cilicia.³ He defeated the pirates, destroyed many of their fortresses, and penetrated to their inland fastnesses in the Isaurian highlands on the northern face of Mount Taurus. This war, which ended in 75 B.C. gained for Servilius and his descendants the surname of Isauricus. Harried in Asia, the corsairs made Crete the head-quarters, and rendered assistance more zealous than before to Mithridates in his decisive struggle with Rome. Next the praetor Marcus Antonius, son of the Antonius who, thirty years before, had first chastised the Cilician corsairs, and laid the foundations of the province of Cilicia, was by extraordinary decree entrusted with supreme command of naval operations against the pirates; he was defeated by them off Cydonia in Crete in 74¹ B.C., and without having accomplished anything died in 71 B.C. In 69 B.C. the proconsul Q. Metellus appeared in Cretan waters in order to conduct the war. In two years (68, 67 B.C.) the entire island was reduced after strenuous warfare, and Metellus assumed the surname of Creticus—"nevertheless the power of the Roman Empire in the Mediterranean was never lower, that of the corsairs never higher, than in those years".⁵ For the power of the pirates resided in their fleets on the high seas, and was not to be broken by sending legions against their strongholds on land.⁶ The absolute failure of the sea

¹ See §§ 31-33. 55.

² The famous temple of Hera at Samos was plundered by the pirates while Sulla was in Asia; cp. § 33: aut Samum . . . captas esse.

³ Cp. § 68: est vobis auctor vir bellorum omnium . . . peritissimus P. Servilius.

⁴ § 46: a communi Cretensium legati, cum in eorum insula metellus imperator exercitusque esset.

⁵ Momms. R. H. iv. 354.

⁶ Cp. Momms. R. H. iv. 360.

rial policy both on land and on sea was manifest by B.C.¹ In the beginning of that year the Pontic army the Romans was destroyed, the Armenian army broken the seas commanded by the pirates, and the price of grain in Italy enhanced to such a degree that famine was seriously threatening.² The crisis brought Pompeius more to a supreme position in the state.

In 67 B.C. a tribune, Aulus Gabinus—"a man ruined in finances and morals, but a dexterous negotiator, a bold negotiator, and a brave soldier"³—brought forward a proposal to establish a general imperial fleet under the exclusive command of a single man.⁴ A single general, to be named by the Senate from men of consular rank, was to be appointed for a term of three years over the whole Mediterranean, exercising also concurrently with the respective governors supreme command over the coasts for a distance of fifty miles inland. A staff of twenty-five praefecti of senatorial rank, with praetorian powers, selected the commander-in-chief, was also provided for by the

For the purpose of raising troops and ships, the general appointed was to have absolute disposal of the revenue of the empire and of the existing treasure both in Rome and in the provinces, with the immediate command of a credit vote of 144 millions of sesterces (14,400,000).⁵ In a word, these proposals amounted to the practical abolition of the Senate by the institution of an office with all but unlimited financial and military powers—an office "for which it was left to the future

54: At hercule aliquot annos continuos ante legem Gabiniam ille vir Romanus . . . maxima parte non modo utilitatis, sed dignitatis imperii caruit.

54: tanta repente vilitas [annonae] ex summa inopia et caritate alimentariae consecuta est.

Comms. R. H. iv. 392.

52: contra virum sortem A. Gabinium . . . cum is de uno patre contra praedones constituendo legem promulgasset.

Comms. R. H. iv. 388.

(B 102)

U.S.C. LIBRARY

to find the fitting name, but which in reality even no involved in it the monarchy".¹

Quintus Catulus, the most respected member of the Senate, and the natural mouthpiece of the Optimates and Q. Hortensius,² with one exception the most powerful pleader in Rome, in vain opposed the measure. Amid a scene of extraordinary enthusiasm³ the proposal became law; and the nomination of Pompeius as virtually master of the empire was made by the Senate—in view of the popular feeling there was no other choice. Immediately after the passing of the law the price of grain fell rapidly to normal⁴—"an evidence of the hopes attached to the grand expedition and its victorious leader".⁵ This explanation is surely absurd and economically false. It is clear that the price of grain must have been artificially inflated by the merchants—"whose heart was in the money-bags"⁶ in this instance also, as in that of the slave-traffic. The fact that in three months⁷ Pompeius completely cleared both divisions of the Mediterranean is proof, not of the *incredibilis ac divina virtus*⁸ of Pompeius, but rather of complete inability on the part of the

¹ Momms. R. H. iv. 391.

² § 52: Nam tu idem, Q. Hortensi, multa . . . et in senatu contra virum fortem A. Gabinium . . . et ex hoc ipso loco per multa item contra eam legem verba fecisti.

³ § 44: cum universus populus Romanus referto foro completis omnibus templis . . . unum sibi ad commune omnium gentium bellum Cn. Pompeium imperatorem depoposcit.

⁴ § 44: qui quo die a vobis maritimo bello praepositus est imperator tanta repente vilitas [annonae] ex summa inopia et caritate rei frumentariae consecuta est unius hominis spe ac nomine, quantam vi summa ubertate agrorum diuturna pax efficere potuisset.

⁵ Momms. R. H. iv. 395.

⁶ Momms. R. H. iv. 395.

⁷ § 35: undequinquagesimo die totam ad imperium populi Romanum Ciliciam adiunxit. Add to this forty days, for clearing the West Mediterranean, and including a short stay in Rome (cp. § 35: inde se in Italiam recepisset).

⁸ § 33, repeated in § 36.

ven no e government and the people to gauge correctly the al necessities of the case.¹
 The final action with the pirates had been fought off
 r of t Cape Coracesium in western Cilicia, so that Pompeius now otimate epe and himself near the theatre of the eastern war, with power und more than two years of his command to run.² The war Amid ore became self now practically at a stand-still,³ for Lucullus became uld do nothing with the men still under arms in Asia, y mas hile Glabrio refused to assume responsibility.⁴
 w of t In 66 B.C. Gaius Manilius,⁵ "an utterly worthless and mediate n significant man",⁶ a Tribune of the Commons, proposed l rapid to recall Glabrio and Marcus Rex, and to transfer their d to t eace, as well as the conduct of the war, to Pompeius, This e e. It have full authority to make war, and to strike treaties
 e. It have full authority to make war, and to strike treaties tificial peace and alliance in the East, and was to retain all in th e powers conferred by the Gabinian law. The bill of e of o mpeius, in fact, merely rounded off and completed the mpe binian law by adding what was lacking to make Pom-rran e absolute master of the Roman world. Under it of Po us would dispose as absolutely of the Roman land forces of b he already did of the Roman navy. Only among the h and dry Optimates, represented by Catulus and rtensius,⁷ was open opposition to the proposals of nilius displayed. The bill became law by a practically

1. Cp. Momms. R. H. iv. 401 fol.

2. 50: haec quoque oportunitas adiungatur, ut in iis ipsis locis adsit, habeat exercitum, &c. Cp. § 45.

3. 45: Huius adventus et Mithridatem insolita inflatum victoria tenuit et Tigranem magnis copiis minitantem Asiae retardavit. He pretends that the mere presence of Pompeius checked the operations of the two kings!

4. 5: huic qui successerit non satis esse paratum ad tantum bellum ministrandum.

5. 69: C. Manili . . . istam tuam legem . . . comprobo.

6. Momms. R. H. iv. 396.

7. 51: At enim vir clarissimus . . . Q. Catulus, itemque . . . Q. C. Censius ab hac ratione dissentiunt.

unanimous vote. "Never since Rome stood had such power been united in the hands of a single man. The Gabinio-Manilian proposals terminated the struggle between the Senate and the popular party, which the Sempronian law had begun sixty-seven years before."

It was in connection with the bill of Manilius that Cicero made his first purely political speech.³

CICERO

Marcus Tullius Cicero, born on Jan. 3rd, 106 B.C., the municipium of Arpinum, was of an equestrian family which up to his time had not been ennobled by office. He had therefore to contend with the jealousy of the hereditary aristocracy of office which practically monopolized the curule magistracies. The only avenue to office of higher grades therefore lay through the Law-courts; and Cicero at the age of twenty-six (80 B.C.) made his first public appearance as a pleader in a criminal case where he defended Sex. Roscius on a charge of parricide. His growing repute as a pleader, and the connections made by his practice, enabled him to set foot on the first rung of the political ladder in 75 B.C., when he gained the Quaestorship. As Quaestor in Sicily Cicero won the respect of the provincials, and to him they turned five years later (70 B.C.) to conduct the impeachment of Verres who is a typical representative of the corruption of Roman officials abroad to which allusion is made in the present speech.⁴ The attack on Verres was really

¹ Momms. R. H. iv. 398.

² Hence the speech, in England at any rate, is usually known as pro lege Manilia. The best MSS. call it the speech de imperio Pompei.

³ Cp. § 4: equitibus Romanis . . . qui ad me pro necessitudine, quod mihi est cum illo ordine.

⁴ § 13: quod ceteras in provincias eius modi homines cum impetravit, ut, etiamsi ab hoste defendant, tamen ipsorum adventu in urbes sociorum non multum ab hostili expugnatione differant. also §§ 37 fol., 41, 64-67.

dictment of the senatorial oligarchy, and as such marks the real beginning of Cicero's career as a politician. Its success meant much also for Cicero as an advocate, for his rival at the Bar, Q. Hortensius, had undertaken the defence of Verres. Political promotion soon followed; in 67 B.C. Cicero became Curule Aedile, and in 66 B.C. Praetor. During his year of office he presided over the quaestio de rebus repetundis.

In spite of his solemn disclaimer,¹ there can be no doubt that Cicero's support of Manilius was largely dictated by the necessity of securing the favour of Pompeius and the people, in view of his own candidature for the consulship. Personal interest was his leading motive, veiled under the pretence of gratitude to the electors² by that species of self-deception which comes naturally to the candidate for public honours in all ages. This, however, is not warrant for accusing Cicero as a "political trimmer"—an accusation levelled against him by Dion Cassius, and re-echoed by Mommsen.³ There is more truth in Mommsen's description of him as "belonging properly to no party or—which was much the same—to the party of material interests", by which is meant the Order to which the publicani and negotiatores belonged, both of whom were so vitally interested in the downfall of Lucullus and the restoration of the old state of things in Asia. Since the enfranchisement of Italy, the Equestrian Order, represented in the Capital and in politics chiefly by the above-mentioned groups, included the men of substance

¹ § 70: neque quo Cn. Pompei gratiam mihi per hanc causam conseruari putem, neque quo mihi . . . adiumenta honoribus quaeram.
² cp. Q. Cicero in the de pet. cons. § 5: si quid locuti populariter dicamur, id nos eo consilio fecisse, ut nobis Cn. Pompeium adiungere possent, ut eum, qui plurimum posset, aut amicum in nostra petitione haberemus, aut certe non adversarium.

³ See § 2.

Dio. Cass. xxxvi. 43, ἐπιφοιτῆρίζε τε γάρ, καὶ ποτὲ μὲν τὰ τούτων ἔστι καὶ τὰ ἐκείνων ἢ ὑπ' ἀμφοτέρων σπουδάζηται ἑπραττε. Cp. Mom: 3. 470.

in all the Italian towns, as well as the country landowners. In so far as Cicero voiced the ideals of a class, they were the ideals of the Italian middle class at the apex of which stood the Equestrian Order. Between this class and the senatorial aristocracy (the nobiles) there was no love lost, while on the other hand the possibilities of the ultra-democratic programme could only fill it with dread. It was this middle party in reality which carried Cicero to the consulship in 64 B.C., although circumstances forced the high and dry Optimates in line with it for the moment. Cicero's own political creed was that salvation for the state lay in the permanent of that combination. His watchwords were senatus auctoritas and ordinum concordia. "He advocated the maintenance of the old constitution, but not as it was understood by the extreme politicians of the right and left."¹ The Senate of which he dreamt was a Senate purified by the experience of the last eighty years governing Rome and the empire with the consent and loyal support of "the true Roman people" of Italy, the elimination of the fatal influence of the "mob of the Forum". Pompeius was to be the right arm of this combination; and Cicero himself, it must not be forgotten, was to be the Laelius of this new Scipio. Inasmuch as in his speech on behalf of the Manilian bill he was addressing precisely the degenerate and hopelessly incompetent mob which he despised, Cicero cannot be acquitted of a certain disingenuousness, but that is an inevitable outcome of the conditions of public life.

The treatment of the case by Cicero was in conformity with the attendant circumstances. The aim of the speech was not to convince, but to give noble and adequate expression to a conviction long since formed in the heart of his audience. Hence his own declaration of his theme—dicendum est enim de Cn. Pompei singulari eximia virtue;¹ but if his aim had been to give a really statesmanlike discussion he should have come to close quarters with the question whether it was expedient for the state to entrust powers so wide to a single man; the speech takes this for granted, and is in fact based upon petitio principis. That anxiety to secure efficiency of administration made the populace eager to consent to practical subversion of the constitution—that the hope of the moderate Optimates of securing the allegiance of Pompeius could only be realized at the price of surrendering true Republican government, simply never occurred to Cicero. To accuse him of bartering his patriotism for popularity is to misread his whole career. We may with justice impugn his political capacity and insight,

¹ Pelham, Outlines of Roman History, p. 226.

 but never, save in merest details, his political morality.
 The truth is that of all careers the political was that best adapted to the talents of Cicero; he had not in him the makings of a statesman. The parallelism between his life and character and those of Demosthenes is curiously close, but in nothing closer than in that "purblind patriotism" which refused to read the signs of the times, clinging with pathetic loyalty to the delusion that a people can renew its youth, and by an effort of will on the part of individuals regain that energy, that sense of responsibility and that lofty patriotism which characterized its undegenerate days.

U.S.C. LIBRARY

Exordium Ch I - 1-3

Narratio Ch II ~~III~~ 4-5

Confirmatio II 6 - 50

6-19 A The nature of the war

7-11 a. The dignity of Rome

12-13 b. The safety of the all

14-16 c. State revenue

17-19 d. The Investments of Pub

20-26 B. The magnitude of the 27-50 C. The choice of a comm

27 Qualifications for lead

a { scientia 28

1. b { virtus 29-42

c { auctoritas 43 - 46

d { felicitas 47 48

49 1. Hence Pompey should ^{opportunitate} appointed

3 Also he is on the spo

M. TULLI CICERONIS

DE IMPERIO CN. POMPEI

SIVE

PRO LEGE MANILIA

AD QUIRITES ORATIO

Chapter I

This is Cicero's first political speech

1. Quamquam mihi semper frequens conspectus ster multo iucundissimus, hic autem locus ad rendum amplissimus, ad dicendum ornatissimus est suis Quirites, tamen hoc aditu laudis, qui semper otimo cuique maxime patet, non mea me voluntas huc, sed vitae meae rationes ab ineunte aetate sus-eptae prohibuerunt. Nam cum antea [per aetatem] ondum huius auctoritatem loci attingere auderem atueremque nihil huc nisi perfectum ingenio, elaoratum industria adferri oportere, omne meum tem-
s amicorum temporibus transmittendum putavi.

hitherto his activity has been confined to the law-courts, and his election to the praetorship indicates the popular approval of his course. Duty now calls him into the arena of politics

2. Ita neque hic locus vacuus umquam fuit ab iis,

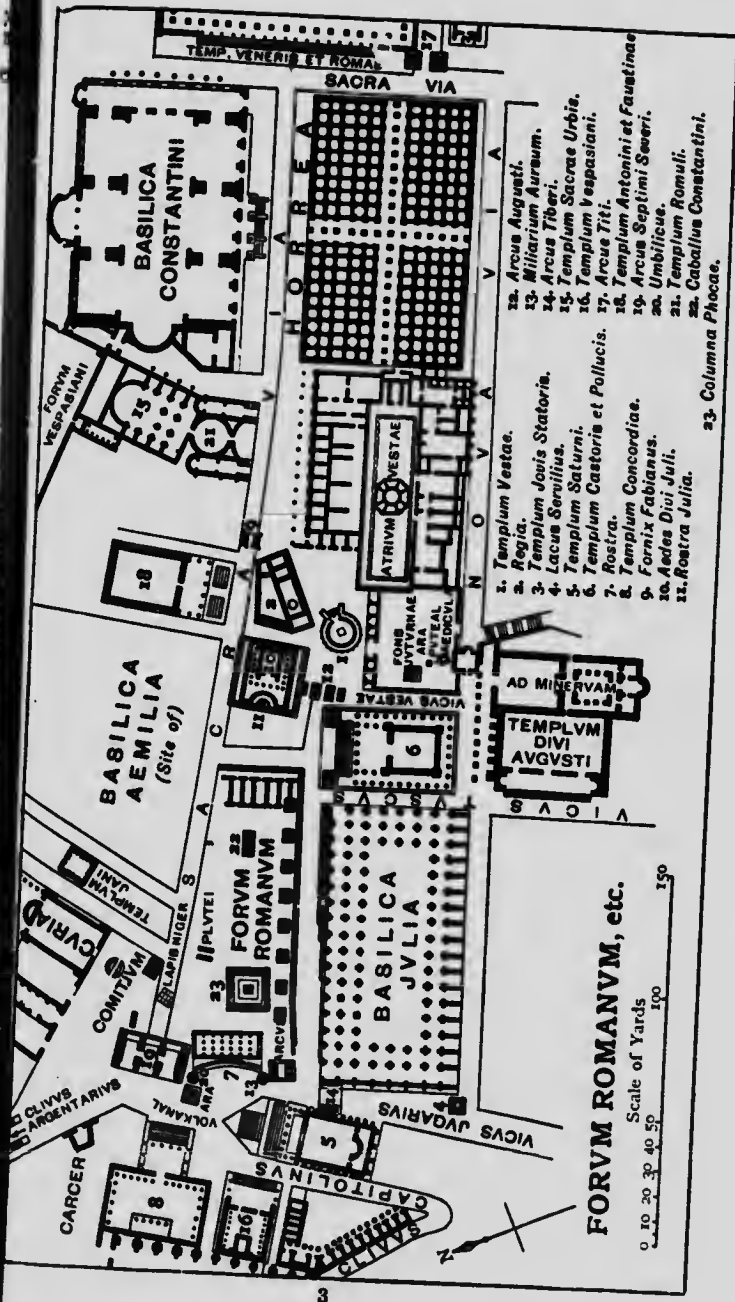

U.B.S. LIBRARY

10 qui vestram causam defenderent, et meus labor
12 13 14 15 16
17 18 19
privatorum periculis caste integreque versatus

28 vestro iudicio fructum est amplissimum consecutus
29 Nam cum propter dilationem comitorum ter praesens
30 31 32 33 34
35 primus centuriis cunctis renuntiatus sum, factus

[Cap
6 bor
us

FORVM ROMANVM, etc.

Scale of Yards
0 10 20 30 40 50 100 150

1. Templum Vestae.
2. Regia.
3. Templum Iovis Statoris.
4. Lacus Sordius.
5. Templum Saturni.
6. Templum Castoris et Pollucis.
7. Rostra.
8. Templum Concordiae.
9. Forum Fabianus.
10. Aedes Divi Julii.
11. Rostra Julia.
12. Templum Vestae.
13. Arcus Augusti.
14. Miliarium Aureum.
15. Arcus Tiberi.
16. Templum Sacrae Urbis.
17. Templum Vespatiani.
18. Arcus Titi.
19. Templum Antonini et Faustinae.
20. Arcus Septimi Severi.
21. Umbilicus.
22. Templum Romuli.
23. Columna Phocaeae.

U.S.G. LIBRARY

intellexi, Quirites, et quid de me iudicaretis et quae aliis praescriberetis. Nunc, cum et auctoritatis me tantum sit, quantum vos honoribus mandantes esse voluistis, et ad agendum facultatis tantum quantum homini vigilanti ex forensi usui pro cotidiana dicendi exercitatio potuit adferre, certe si quid auctoritatis in me est, apud eos utar, eam mihi dederunt, et si quid in dicendo consilium possum, is ostendam potissimum, qui et quoque fructum suo iudicio tribuendum esse duxerunt.

The merits of Pompeius constitute an unique theme

3. Atque illud in primis mihi laetandum iure et video, quod in hac insolita [mihi] ex hoc loco ratione dicendi causa talis oblata est, in qua oratio deest nemini possit. Dicendum est enim de Cn. Pompeio singulari eximiaque virtute; huius autem orationis difficilius est exitum quam principium invenire. mihi non tam copia quam modus in dicendo quaerendus est.

Chapter II

A dangerous war is being waged in Asia Minor. There is no one but one who is adequate to the task

4. Atque ut inde oratio mea proficiat, ut haec omnis causa ducitur, bellum grave et periculosum vestris vectigalibus ac sociis a duobus potissimis regibus adfertur, Mithridate et Tigrane, quorum alter relictus, alter lacessitus occasio sibi ad occupandam Asiam oblatam esse arbitror. Equitibus Romanis, honestissimis viris, adferuntur ex Asia cotidie litterae, quorum magnae res aguntur in vestris vectigalibus exercendis occupatae; qui

*Narratio
- end of sec 5.*

*and on account
indignity*

pro necessitudine, quae mihi est cum illo ordine
 usam rei publicae, periculaque rerum suarum tulerunt: (b) Bithyniae, quae nunc vestra provincia
 , vicos exustos esse complures; regnum Ario-

Coin of Tigranes

rzanis, quod finitimum est vestris vectigalibus, tum esse in hostium potestate; L. Lucullum agnis rebus gestis ab eo bello discedere; huic qui accesserit non satis esse paratum ad tantum bellum ministrandum; unum ab omnibus sociis et civibus id bellum imperatorem deposci atque expeti, idem hunc unum ab hostibus metui, praeterea minem.

The character of the war and the interests involved

Causa quae sit, videtis: nunc quid agendum considerate. Primum mihi videtur de genere deinde de magnitudine, tum de imperatore agendo esse dicendum. Genus est belli eius quod maxime vestros animos excitare atque inflammare ad persequendi studium debeat: in quo
 situr populi Romani gloria, quae vobis a maioribus

*Confirmatio
 (a) 6-19*

U.S. LIBRARY

¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰
 cum magna in omnibus rebus, tum summa in militari tradita est; agitur salus sociorum atque amicorum, pro qua multa maiores vestri magna gravia bella gesserunt; aguntur certissima populi
 5 Romani vectigalia et maxima, quibus amissis pacis ornamenta et subsidia belli requiretis; aguntur bona multorum civium, quibus est a vobis et ipsorum et rei publicae causa consulendum.

regard

Chapter III

Wiping something off a slate

¹ ² ³ ⁴ ⁵ ⁶ ⁷ ⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰
 7. Et quoniam semper appetentes gloriae praeterea ceteras gentes atque avidi laudis fuistis, delenda est

Confessatio
5-17

Coin of Mithridates

³ ⁴ ⁵ ⁶ ⁷ ⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰ ¹¹ ¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰
 vobis illa macula [Mithridatico] bello superiore cocepta, quae penitus iam insedit ac nimis inveterata
 in populi Romani nomine quod is, qui uno die tot
 in Asia tot in civitatibus uno nuntio atque una significatione [litterarum] cives Romanos necatis 5 ⁶ ⁷ ⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰ ¹¹ ¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰
 mansurum trucidandosque curavit, non modo adhuc poenam nullam suo dignam scelere suscepit, sed ab il-deservit crimi

sufficit

Murendeth

in tempore annum iam tertium et vicesimum regnat, et atque regnat, ut non se Ponto neque Cappadociae lategna ris occultare velit, sed emergere ex patrio regno populi atque in vestris vectigalibus, hoc est in Asiae luce ssis versari. Concerned in

Salvation
5

Troubles in Italy have given Mithridates respite

8. Etenim adhuc ita nostri cum illo rege contemerunt imperatores, ut ab illo insignia victoriae, non victoriam reportarent. Triumphavit L. Sulla, triumphavit L. Murena de Mithridate, duo fortissimi ni et summi imperatores, sed ita triumpharunt, ut 16 pulsus superatusque regnaret. Verum tamen 17 his imperatoribus laus est tribuenda, quod tegerunt, da enia danda, quod reliquerunt, propterea quod ab
 bello Sullam in Italiam res publica, Murenam 11 ulla revocavit.

Chapter IV

Mithridates has used the interval to organise a world-wide combination against Rome

did not employ all this time in forging enemies the old one

9. Mithridates autem omne reliquum tempus non oblivionem veteris belli, sed ad comparationem ovi contulit; qui posteaquam maximas aedificasset nassetque classes exercitusque permagnos, quibus-umque ex gentibus potuisset, comparasset et se osporapis, finitimis suis, bellum inferre simularet, que in Hispaniam legatos ac litteras misit ad eos ces, quibuscum tum bellum gerebamus, ut, cum bus in locis disiunctissimis maximeque diversis
 o consilio a binis hostium copiis bellum terra arique gereretur, vos ancipiti contentione districti imperio dimicaretis.

U.B.C. LIBRARY

Pompeius crushed Sertorius, and Lucullus was partially successful against Mithridates. Contrast between the present and the past 10. Sed tamen alterius partis periculum, Sertorianae atque Hispaniensis, quae multo plus firmitati ac roboris habebat, Cn. Pompei divino consilio ac singulari virtute depulsum est; in altera parte ita res a L. Lucullo, summo viro, est administrata, ut initia illa rerum gestarum magna atque praeclara non felicitati eius, sed virtuti, haec autem extrema, quae nuper acciderunt, non culpa, sed fortunae tribuenda esse videantur. Sed de Lucullo dicam alio loco, et ita dicam, Quirites, ut neque vera laus ei detracta oratione mea, neque falsa adfecta esse videatur; (11) de vestri imperii dignitate atque gloria quoniam is est exorsus orationis meae, videte quem vobis animum suscipiendum putetis.

felix entertain

Substitut

Chapter V

15. Maiores nostri saepe, mercatoribus aut naviculariis nostris iniuriosius tractatis, bella gesserunt; vos, tribus milibus civium Romanorum uno nuntio atque uno tempore necatis, quo tandem animo esse debetis. Legati quod erant appellati superbius, Corinthum patres vestri, totius Graeciae lumen, extinctum esse voluerunt; vos cum regem inultum esse patiemini qui legatum populi Romani consularem vinculis atque verberibus atque omni supplicio excruciatum necavit. Illi libertatem imminutam civium Romanorum non tulerunt; vos ereptam vitam neglegetis? Ius legationis verbo violatum illi, persecuti sunt; vos legatum omni supplicio interfectum relinquetis?

latus

The existence of the empire is at stake

12. Videte ne, ut illis pulcherrimum fuit tantam vobis imperii gloriam tradere, sic vobis turpissimum sit id, quod accepistis, tueri et conservare non posse. Quid? quod salus sociorum summum in periculum et discrimen vocatur, quo id tandem animo ferre

Coin of Ariobarzanes I

betis? Regno est expulsus Ariobarzanes rex, cuius populi Romani atque amicus; imminet duobus regi toti Asiae non solum vobis inimicissimi, sed etiam vestris sociis atque amicis; civitates autem omnes cuncta Asia atque Graecia vestrum auxilium spectare propter periculi magnitudinem coguntur; imperatorem certum a vobis deponere, cum praesertim vos alium miseritis, neque audent neque id se posse sine summo periculo posse arbitrantur.

Herodian
Compell

Pompeius alone can save it, and he alone is demanded

13. Vident et sentiunt hoc idem, quod vos, unum esse, in quo summa sint omnia, et eum propter esse, quo etiam carent acrius; cuius adventu ipso atque nomine, tametsi ille ad mariti-

(B 102)

Pompeius makes it harder to be deprived of him

U.S. LIBRARY

mum bellum venerat, tamen impetus hostium repres-sos esse intellegunt ac retardatos. Hi vos, quoniam libere loqui non licet, taciti rogant, ut se quoque [sicut ceterarum provinciarum socios] dignos existi-
 5 metis, quorum salutem tan viro commendetis, atque hoc etiam magis, quod ceteras in provincias eius modi homines cum imperio mittimus, ut, etiamsi ab hoste defendant, tamen ipsorum adventus in urbes sociorum non multum ab hostili expugnatione differ-10 ant, hunc audiebant antea, nunc praesentem vident tanta temperantia, tanta mansuetudine, tanta humanitate, ut ii beatissimi esse videantur, apud quos ille diutissime commoretur.

Chapter VI

Self-interest demands your intervention, for Asia is the mainstay of the revenue

14. Quare, si propter socios, nulla ipsi iniuria lac-
 15 siti, maiores nostri cum Antiocho, cum Philippo, cum Aetolis, cum Poënis bella gesserunt, quanto vos stu-diosius convenit, iniuriis provocatos, sociorum salute una cum imperii vestri dignitate defendere, praeser-sertim cum de maximis vestris vectigalibus agatur.
 20 Nam ceterarum provinciarum vectigalia, Quirites
 tanta sunt, ut iis ad ipsas provincias tuendas vobis
 contenti esse possimus; Asia vero tam opima est fertilis, ut et ubertate agrorum et varietate fructuum et magnitudine pastionis et multitudine earum rerum 25 quae exportentur, facile omnibus terris antecellat.
 Itaque haec vobis provincia, Quirites, si et benignitatem et pacis dignitatem retinere vultis, non modo a calamitate, sed etiam a metu calamitatis defendenda.

Sensitiveness of the revenue

15. Nam in ceteris rebus, cum venit calamitas, tum detrimentum accipitur; at in vectigalibus non solum adventus mali, sed etiam metus ipse adfert calamitatem. Nam cum hostium copiae non longe absunt, etiamsi inruptio nulla facta est, tamen pecora relinquuntur, agri cultura deseritur, mercatorum navigatio conquiescit. Ita neque ex portu neque ex decumis neque ex scriptura vectigal conservari potest; quare saepe totius anni fructus uno rumore periculi atque uno belli terrore amittitur.

Both the tax-payers and the tax-farmers must be protected

16. Quo tandem (igitur) animo esse existimatis aut eos, qui vectigalia nobis pensitant, aut eos, qui exercent atque exigunt, cum duo reges cum maximis copiis propter adsint, cum una excursio equitatus per brevi tempore totius anni vectigal auferre possit, si cum publicani familias maximas, quas in saltibus habent, quas in agris, quas in portibus atque in custodiis, magno periculo se habere arbitrentur? Putatisne vos illis rebus frui posse, nisi eos, qui vobis fructui sunt, conservaritis non solum, ut ante belli, calamitate, sed etiam calamitatis formidine liberatos?

Chapter VII

protecting the tax-farmers you protect the class which is the real bond of the entire social fabric

17. Ac ne illud quidem vobis neglegendum est, quod mihi ego extremum proposueram, cum essem belli genere dicturus, quod ad multorum bona civium Romanorum pertinet; quorum vobis pro vestra sapientia, Quirites, habenda est ratio dili-genter. Nam et publicani, homines honestissimi atque ornatissimi, suas rationes et copias in illam 5 provinciam contulerunt, quorum ipsorum per se res et fortunae vobis curae esse debent; etenim, si vectigalia nervos esse rei publicae semper duximus, eum certe ordinem, qui exeret illa, firmamentum

 ceterorum ordinum recte esse dicemus.

Other ranks of society are also involved in the danger; their loss will be the public loss

Save not the state and the commons after publicans

These words only occur in the edition of the work.

10 18. Deinde ex ceteris ordinibus homines navi atque industrii partim ipsi in Asia negotiantur, quibus vos absentibus consulere debetis, partim eorum in ea provincia pecunias magnas collocatas habent. Est igitur humanitatis vestrae magnū 15 numerum [eorum] civium calamitate prohibere sapientiae videre multorum civium calamitatem a re publica seiunctam esse non posse. Etenim illud primum parvi refert, nos publicanis, his amissis, 20 vectigalia alia postea victoria recuperare; neque enim
 isdem redimendi facultas erit propter calamitatem neque alius voluntas propter timorem.

Experience should have taught us that the money-market of Rome is intimately connected with the financial situation in Asia

19. Deinde, quod [nos] eadem Asia atque idem iste Mithridates, initio belli Asiatici docuit, certe in quidem calamitate docti memoria retinere debemus.
 25 Nam tum, cum in Asia res magnas permulti amiserunt, scimus Romae solutione impedita fidem concidisse. Non enim possunt una in civitate multi rem ac fortunas amittere, ut non plures secum in eandem trahant calamitatem. A quo periculo prohibete rem publicam et mihi credite, id quod ipsi videtis: haec fides atque haec ratio pecuniarum, quae Romae, quae in foro versatur, implicata est cum illis pecuniis Asiaticis et cohaeret; rueret illa non possunt, ut haec non eodem labefacta motu concidant. Quare videte num dubitandum vobis sit omni studio ad id bellum incumbere, in quo gloria nominis vestri, salus sociorum, vectigalia maxima, fortunae plurimorum civium coniunctae cum re publica defendantur.

Chapter VIII

This is not one of our 'little wars': we must not underestimate it. In spite of the brilliant achievements of Lucullus the danger is still formidable

20. Quoniam de genere belli dixi, nunc de magnitudine pauca dicam. Potest enim hoc dici: belli genus esse ita necessarium, ut sit gerendum, non esse ita magnum, ut sit pertimescendum. In quo maxime elaborandum est, ne forte ea vobis, quae diligentissime providenda sunt, contempnenda esse videantur. Atque ut omnes intellegant me L. Lucullo tantum impertire laudis, quantum forti viro et sapienti homini et magno imperatori debeatur, dico eius adventu maximas Mithridati copias omnibus rebus ornatas atque instructas fuisse, urbemque Asiae clarissimam nobisque amicissimam Cyzicenorum oppressam esse ab ipso rege maxima multitudine et oppugnatam vehementissime: quam L. Lucullus virtute, assiduitate, consilio summis obsidionis periculis liberavit: (21) at eodem imperatore

U.S. LIBRARY

Maritima

Confutatio
(8) 19-21

not

class¹em magnam et orn²atam, quae ducibus Sertoti-anis ad Italia³m studio atque odio infl⁴ammata r⁵aperetur, superatam esse atque depressam; magnas hostium praeterea copias multis proeliis esse deletas, 5 patefactumque nostris legionibus esse Pontum, qui antea populo Romano ex omni aditu clausus fuisset;
 Sinopen atque Amisum, quibus in oppidis erant

View of Walls of Cyzicus

domicilia regis omnibus rebus ornata ac referta, cete-rasque urbes Ponti et Cappadociae permultas uno 10 aditu adventuque esse captas; regem spoliatum regno patrio atque avito ad alios se reges atque ad alias gentes supplicem contulisse; atque haec omnia saavis populi Romani sociis atque integris vectigalibus esse gesta. Satis opinor hoc concessi laudis, 15 atque ita, Quirites, ut hac vos intellegatis, a nullo
 istorum, qui huic obtrebant legi atque causae, L.
 Lucillum similiter ex hoc loco esse laudatum.

VIII
rd tojiape-gnas
etas
qui set;
rant

16 te-no
um ad
na
li-
is,
ld
L

Medea on Voyage with Argonauts
15

U.S. LIBRARY

Chapter IX

Mithridates eluded capture—partly through our own fault

22. Requiretur fortasse nunc, quem ad modum, cum hæc ita sint, reliquum possit magnum esse bellum. Cognoscite, Quirites; non enim hoc sine causa quaeri videtur. Primum ex suo regno sic Mithridates profugit, ut ex eodem Ponto Medea illa quondam profugisse dicitur, quam prædicant in fuga fratris sui membra in iis locis, qua se parens persequeretur, dissipavisse, ut eorum collectio dispersa maerorque patrius celeritatem persequendi retardaret. Sic Mithridates fugiens maximam vim auri atque argenti pulcherrimarumque rerum omnium, quas a maioribus acceperat et ipse bello superavit ex tota Asia direptas in suum regnum conghesserat, in Ponto omnem reliquit. Hæc dum nostri colligunt omnia diligentius, rex ipse e manibus effugit. Ita illum in persequendi studio maeror, hos lætitia retardavit.

He has effected a combination with Tigranes, and our aims are suspected in the Far East

23. Hunc in illo timore et fuga Tigranes, rex Armenius, excepit diffidentemque rebus suis confirmavit et adfictum erexit perditumque recreavit. Cuius in regnum posteaquam L. Lucullus cum exercitu venit, plures etiam gentes contra imperatorem nostrum concitatae sunt. Erat enim metus iniectus iis nationibus, quas numquam populus Romanus neque lacessendas bello neque temptandas putavit; erat etiam alia gravis atque vehemens opinio, quæ per animos gentium barbararum pervaserat, fani locupletissimi et religiosissimi diriplendi causa in eas oras nostrum esse exercitum, adductum. Ita nationes multae atque maghae novo quodam terrore ac metu

Asia Minor, showing extent of kingdom of Mithridates, with that of Tigranes concitabantur. Noster autem exercitus tametsi urbem ex Tigrani regno cepit et proeliis usus erat secundis, tamen nimia longinquitate locorum ac desiderio suorum commovebatur.

The magic of his royal name aided him in his darkest hour, while the victorious career of Lucullus suffered interruption

Hic iam plura non dicam: fit enim illud extremum, ut ex illis locis a militibus nostris reditus magis maturus quam progressio longior quaereretur. Mithridates autem et suam manum iam confirmarat, [et eorum, qui se ex ipsius regno collegerant,] et magnis adventiciis auxiliis multorum regum et nationum iuyabatur. Nam hoc fere sic fieri solere accepimus, ut regum afflictæ fortunæ facile multorum opes adiciant ad misericordiam, maximeque eorum, qui aut reges sunt aut vivunt in regno, ut in nomen regale magnum et sanctum esse videatur.

The tables were turned—but I draw a veil over our disaster.

25. Itaque tantum victus efficere potuit, quantum incolomis numquam est ausus optare. Nam, cum se in regnum suum recepisset, non fuit eo contentus, quod ei præter spem acciderat, ut illam, posteaquam pulsus erat, terram unquam attingeret, sed in exercitum nostrum clarum atque victorem imperium fecit. Sinite hoc loco, Quirites, sicut poëtae solent, qui res Romanas scribunt, præterire me nostram calamitatem, quæ tanta fuit, ut eam ad aures Luculli imperatoris non ex proelio nuntius, sed ex sermone rumor adferret.

Lucullus has been recalled; Glabrio has taken over the remnant of his defeated army. This is enough to show the gravity of the crisis

26. Hic in illo ipso malo gravissimæque belli offensione L. Lucullus, qui tamen aliqua ex parte iis incommodis mederi fortasse potuisset, vestro iussu coactus, qui imperii diuturnitati modum statuendum vetere exemplo putavistis, partim militum, qui iam stipendiis confectis erant, dimisit, partim M. Glabroni tradidit. Multa prætereo consulto: sed ea vos coniectura perspicite, quantum illud bellum factum putetis, quod coniungant reges potentissimi, renovent agitatae nationes, suscipiant integræ gentes, novus imperator noster accipiat vetere exercitu pulso.

babble of Ziela

indirect question

D. IX
4
olere
muleque
it in r.
ster.
tum
cum
us,
am
kercit/
res
mi-lli
one

Chapter X

Rome possesses but one general competent to deal with Mithridates, and that is Pompeius

27. Satis mihi multa verba fecisse videor, quae hoc esset bellum—genere ipso necessarium, magnitudine periculosum; restat ut de imperatore ad id bellum deligendo ac tantis rebus praeficiendo dicendum esse videatur. Utinam, Quirites, virorum fortium atque innocentium copiam tantam haberetis, ut haec vobis deliberatio difficilis esset, quemnam potissimum tantis rebus ac tanto bello praeficiendum putaretis! Nunc vero cum sit unus Cn. Pompeius, qui non modo eorum hominum, qui nunc sunt, gloriam, sed etiam antiquitatis memoriam virtute superarit, quae res est, quae cuiusquam animum in hac causa dubium facere possit?

Confessionatio
(C) 27-50
Choice of leader

What makes a great general? Firstly, technical knowledge. From his youth upwards Pompeius has had unique experience

28. Ego enim sic existimo, in summo imperatore quattuor has res inesse oportere, scientiam rei militaris, virtutem, auctoritatem, felicitatem. Quis igitur hoc homine scientior umquam aut fuit, aut debuit? qui e ludo atque e pueritiae disciplinis bello maximo atque acerrimis hostibus ad patris exercitum atque in militiae disciplinam profectus est, qui extrema pueritia miles in exercitu fuit summi imperatoris, ineunte adulescentia maximi ipse exercitus imperator; qui saepius cum hoste conflavit quam quisquam cum inimico concertavit, plura bella vitavit quam ceteri legerunt, plures provincias con-

Scientia

the bo elli
iis
su
amp
qui
F.
ca

fecit quam alii concupiverunt; cuius adulescentia scientiam rei militaris, non alienis praeceptis, sed suis imperiis, non offensionibus belli, sed victoriis, non stipendiis, sed triumphis est erudita. Quod denique 5 genus esse belli potest, in quo illum non exercuerit fortuna rei publicae? Civile, Africanum, Transalpinum, Hispaniense [mixtum ex civitatibus atque ex bellicosissimis nationibus], servile, navale bellum, varia et diversa genera et bellorum et hostium non solum gesta ab hoc uno, sed etiam confecta nullam rem esse declarant in usu positam militari, quae huius viri scientiam fugere possit.

Chapter XI

No other general, either past or present, exhibits the sum total of soldierly qualities in so high a degree as Pompeius

29. Iam vero virtuti Cn. Pompei quae potest oratio par inveniri? Quid est, quod quisquam aut illi dignum aut vobis novum aut cuiquam inauditum possit adferre? Neque enim illae sunt solae virtutes imperatoriae, quae vulgo existimantur, labor in negotiis, fortitudo in periculis, industria in agendis, celeritas in conficiendo, consilium in providendo, quae tanta sunt in hoc uno, quanta in omnibus reliquis imperatoribus, quos aut vidimus aut audivimus, non fuerunt.

Italy, Sicily, Africa, Gaul, and Spain bear witness to his merits. Pompeius it was who reasserted Rome's dominion over the seas

30. Testis est Italia, quam ille [ipse] victor Sulla huius virtute et subsidio confessus est liberam esse tam; testis [est] Sicilia, quam multis undique circum-

29-42
Virtus

periculis non terrore belli, sed consilii celeritate ex-¹⁰
 ed superavit; testis [est] Africa, quae magnis oppressa
 s; non hostium copiis eorum ipsorum sanguine redundavit;
 enique testis [est] Gallia, per quam legionibus nostris iter in¹¹
 rcuerit Hispaniam Gallorum internicione patefactum est; 5
 ansal testis [est] Hispania, quae saepissime plurimos hostes que ex hoc superatos prostratosque conspexit; testis [est]
 ellum iterum et saepius Italia, quae cum servili bello tetro
 n non periculosoque premeretur, ab hoc auxilium absente nullam expectavit, quod bellum expectatione eius attenuatum 10 quaeque imminutum est, adventu sublatum ac sepultum; (31) testes nunc vero iam omnes sunt orae atque
 omnes terrae, gentes, nationes, maria denique omnia cum universa, tum in singulis oris omnes sinus etque portus. Quis enim toto mari locus per hos 15
 quos aut tam firmum habuit praesidium, ut tutus esset, aut tam fuit abditus, ut lateret? Quis navigavit, qui non se aut mortis aut servitutis periculo committeret, cum aut hieme aut referto praedonum mari navigaret? Hoc tantum bellum, tam turpe, 20 tam vetus, tam late divisum atque dispersum quis inquam arbitraretur aut ab omnibus imperatoribus uno anno aut omnibus annis ab uno imperatore vinci posse?

*The pirates were a terror, not only to the subjects of Rome,
 but to her own armies and officials*

32. Quam provinciam tenuistis a praedonibus 25
 peram per hosce annos? quod vectigal vobis tutum
 est? quem socium defendistis? cui praesidio classibus vestris fuistis? quam multas existimatis insulas desertas, quam multas aut metu relictas aut a 17
 praedonibus captas urbes esse sociorum?

Chapter XII

Sed quid ego longinqua commemoro? Fuit hoc quondam, fuit proprium populi Romani, longe a domo bellare et propugnaculis imperii sociorum fortunas, non sua tecta defendere. Sociis ego nostris mare per hosce annos clausum fuisse dicam, cum exercitus vestri nunquam Brundisio nisi hieme summa transmiserint? Qui ad vos ab exteris nationibus venirent, captos querar, cum legati populi Romani redempti sint? Mercatoribus tutum mare non fuisse dicam, cum duodecim secures in praedonum potestatem pervenerint?

apes (See NOTE)

Even Italian towns and the part of Rome herself suffered from their ravages

33. Capidum aut Colophonem aut Samum, nobilissimas urbes, innumerabilesque alias captas, esse commemorem, cum vestros portus atque eos portus, quibus vitam ac spiritum ducitis, in praedonum fuisse potestatem scialis? An vero ignoratis portum Caietae celeberrimum ac plenissimum navium inspectante praetore a praedonibus esse direptum, ex Miseno autem eius ipsius liberos, qui cum praedonibus antea [ibi] bellum gesserat, a praedonibus esse sublato? Nam quid ego Ostiense incommodum atque illam labem atque ignominiam rei publicae querar, cum prope inspectantibus vobis classis eadem consul populi Romani praepositus esset, a praedonibus capta atque oppressa esset? Pro di immortales! tantamque unius hominis incredibilis ac divina virtus tam brevi tempore lucem adferre rei publicae potuit, ut vos, qui modo ante ostium Tiberinum class⁶em hostium videbatis, ¹⁹ nunc nullam ¹¹ intra ¹⁴ Oceani ostium ¹⁷ praedonum navem esse audiat^{is}?

The western portion of the Mediterranean was cleared by Pompeius with marvellous rapidity

34. Atque haec qua celeritate gesta sint, quamquam videtis, tamen a me in dicendo praetereunda non sunt. Quis enim umquam aut obeundi negotii aut consequendi quaestus studio tam brevi tempore tot loca adire, tantos cursus conficere potuit, quam celeriter Cn. Pompeio duce tantu belli impetus navigavit? qui nondum tempestivo ad navigandum mari Siciliam adit, Africam exploravit, inde Sardiniam cum classe venit atque haec tria frumentaria subsidia rei publicae firmissimis praesidiis classibusque munivit.

The cleansing of the eastern portion culminated in wholesale surrender and the addition of a new province to the empire

35. Inde cum se in Italiam recepisset, duabus Hispaniis et Gallia [Transalpina] praesidiis ac navibus confirmata, missis item in oram Illyrici maris et in Achaiam omnemque Graeciam navibus, Italiae duobus maxima maximis classibus firmissimisque praesidiis adornavit, ipse autem ut Brundisio profectus est, unde quinquagesimo die totam ad imperium populi Romani Ciliciam adiunxit; omnes, qui ubique praedones fuerunt, partim capti interfectique sunt, partim unius huius se imperio ac potestati dederunt; idem Cretensibus, cum ad eum usque in Pamphyliam legatos deprecatoresque misissent, spem deditiois non ademit obsidesque imperavit. Ita tantum bellum, tam diuturnum, tam longe lateque dispersum, quo bello omnes gentes ac nationes premebantur, Cn. Pompeius extrema hieme apparavit, ineunte vere suscepit, media aestate confecit.

Chapter XIII

Such are the qualities of Pompeius the general; on a par with them are the virtues of Pompeius the man

36. Est haec divina atque incredibilis virtus im-peratoris. Quid? ceterae, quas paulo ante com-memorare coeperam, quantae atque quam multae sunt? Non enim bellandi virtus solum in summo ac perfecto imperatore quaerenda est, sed multae sunt artes eximiae huius administratae comitesque virtutis.
 Ac primum quanta innocentia debent esse imperatores, quanta deinde in omnibus rebus temperantia, quanta fide, quanta facilitate, quanto ingenio, quanta humanitate! quae breviter qualia sint in Cn. Pompeio consideremus. Summa enim omnia sunt, Quirites, sed ea magis ex aliorum contentione quam ipsa per sese cognosci atque intellegi possunt.

Clean-handedness—conspicuously lacking in all others who have commanded Roman armies in recent times

37. Quem enim possumus imperatorem ullo in numero putare, cuius in exercitu centuriatus veniant atque venerint? Quid hunc hominem magnum aut amplum de re publica cogitare, qui pecuniam ex aerario depromptam ad bellum administrandum aut propter cupiditatem provinciae magistratibus distri-serit aut propter avaritiam Romae in quaestu reliquerit? Vestra admurmuratio facit, Quirites, ut agnoscere videamini, qui haec fecerint; ego autem

ap. XIII

antur,
e vere

a bar

7
s im-
commultae
no ac
sunt
tutis.
perantia,
anta
peio
rites, per who

6
in apt
aut,
6
ex
aut
i eli-ut
em

26

POMPEY

From the bust in Naples Museum

U.S. LIBRARY

(c) Skidderia

non-modes - non

o
n
q
q
ac
in qu
av
an nomino, neminem; quare irasci mihi nemo poterit, nisi qui ante de se voluerit coniteri. Itaque propter hanc avaritiam imperatorum quantas calamitates, quocumque ventum est, nostri exercitus adferant, quis ignorat?

5

From the experiences of the country-towns in Italy an idea may be gained of the sufferings of the provincials at the hands of the troops of venal commanders

38. Itinera quae per hosce annos in Italia per agros atque oppida civium Romanorum nostri imperatores fecerint, recordamini; tum, factus statuetis, quid apud exteras nationes fieri existimetis. Utrum plures arbitramini per hosce annos militum vestrorum armis hostium urbes an hibernis sociorum civitates esse deletas? Neque enim potest exercitum is continere imperator, qui se ipse non continet, neque severus esse in iudicando, qui alios in se severos esse iudices non vult.

15

Such excesses are unknown in the army of Pompeius

39. Hic miramur hunc hominem tantum excellere ceteris, cuius legiones sic in Asiam pervenerint, ut non modo manus tanti exercitus, sed ne vestigium quidem cuiquam pacato nocuisse dicatur? Iam vero quem ad modum milites hibernent, cotidie sermones ac litterae perferuntur; non modo ut sumptum faciat in militem nemini vis adfertur, sed ne cupient quidem quicquam permittitur; hiemis enim, non avaritiae per fugium maiores nostri in sociorum atque amicorum tectis esse voluerunt.

25

Chapter XIV

From the path of duty Pompeius turned aside neither to the right hand nor to the left

40. Age vero, ceteris in rebus quae illius sit tem-perantia, considerate. Unde illam tantam celeritatem et tam incredibilem cursum inventum putatis? Non enim illum eximia vis remigum aut ars inaudita quaedam gubernandi aut venti aliqui novi tam celeriter in ultimas terras pertulerunt, sed eae res, quae ceteros remorari solent, non retardarunt: non avaritia ab instituto cursu ad praedam aliquam devocavit, non libido ad voluptatem, non amoenitas ad delecta-tionem, non nobilitas urbis ad cognitionem, non denique labor ipse ad quietem; postremo signa et tabulas ceteraque ornamenta Graecorum oppidorum, quae ceteri tollenda esse arbitrantur, ea sibi ille ne
 visenda quidem existimavit.

In him the old Romans seem to live again

41. Itaque omnes nunc in iis locis Cn. Pompeium sicut aliquem non ex hac urbe missum, sed de caelo delapsum intuentur; nunc denique incipiunt credere fuisse homines Romanos hac quondam continentia, quod iam nationibus exteris incredibile ac falso
 memoriae proditum videbatur; nunc imperii vestri splendor illis gentibus lucem adferre coepit; nunc intellegunt (non sine causa) maiores suos tum, cum ea temperantia magistratus habebamus, servire populo Romano quam imperare aliis maluisse. Iam vero ita facies aditus ad eum privatorum, ita liberae querimoniae de aliorum iniuriis esse dicuntur, ut is, qui

Expect subjunctive Inde for emphasis!

dignitate principibus excellit, facilitate infimis par esse videatur.

His virtues endear him even to those whom his valour subdues

42. Iam quantum consilio, quantum dicendi gravitate et copia valeat, in quo ipso inest quaedam dignitas imperatoria, vos, Quirites, hoc ipso ex loco saepe cognostis. Fidem vero eius quantum inter socios existimari putatis, quam hostes omnes omnium generum sanctissimam iudicant? Humanitate iam tanta est, ut difficile dictu sit, utrum hostes magis virtutem eius pugnantes timuerint an mansuetudinem victi dilexerint. Et quisquam dubitabit, quin huic hoc tantum bellum permittendum sit, qui ad omnia nostrae memoriae bella conficienda divino quodam consilio natus esse videatur?

Chapter XV

Returning to the characteristics of Pompeius as general—his prestige is unrivalled

43. Et quoniam auctoritas quoque in bellis administrandis multum atque in imperio militari valet, certe nemini dubium est, quin ea re idem ille imperator plurimum possit. Vehementer autem pertinere ad bella administranda (quid hostes, quid socii de imperatoribus nostris existiment, quis ignorat, cum sciamus homines in tantis rebus ut aut contemnant aut metuant, aut oderint aut ament, opinione non minus et fama quam aliqua ratione certa commoveri? Quod igitur nomen umquam in orbe terrarum clarius fuit? cuius res gestae pares? de quo homine vos id quod maxime facit auctoritatem,) tanta et tam praec-clara iudicia fecistis?

43-46
Auctoritas

U. D. Y. LIBRARY

The mere announcement of his commission to clear the seas instantaneously affected prices in Rome

44. An vero ullam usquam esse oram tam desertam putatis, quo non illius [diei] nomen [ac fama] per-5 vaserit, cum universus populus Romanus referto foro completisque omnibus templis, ex quibus hic locus conspici potest, unum sibi ad commune omnium gentium bellum Cn. Pompeium imperatorem depo-10 poscit? Itaque, ut plura non dicam, neque aliorum exemplis confirmem, quantum auctoritas valeat in bello, ab eodem Cn. Pompeio omnium rerum egregi-arum exempla sumantur; qui quo die a vobis maritimo bello praepositus est imperator, tanta repente vilitas [annonae] ex summa inopia et caritate rei 15 frumentariae consecuta est unius hominis spe ac nomine, quantam vix in summa ubertate agrorum diuturna pax efficere potuisset.

The mere knowledge of his presence in the Levant checked Mithridates and Tigranes in mid-career

45. Iam accepta in Ponto calamitate ex eo proelio, de quo vos paulo ante invitus admonui, cum socii 20 pertimissent, hostium opes animique crevissent, satis firmum praesidium provincia non haberet, amisissetis Asiam, Quirites, nisi ad ipsum discrimen eius temporis divinitus Cn. Pompeium ad eas regiones fortuna populi Romani attulisset. Huius adventus 25 et Mithridatem insolita inflatum victoria continuit et Tigranem magnis copiis minitantem Asiae retardavit. Et quisquam dubitabit, quid virtute per fecturus sit, qui tantum auctoritate perfecit, aut quam facile imperio atque exercitu socios et vectigalia conservaturus sit, qui ipso nomine ac rumore defenderit?

Chapter XVI

Our enemies themselves by their actions bear witness to his reputation

46. Age vero illa res quantam declarat eiusdem hominis apud hostes populi Romani auctoritatem, quod ex locis tam longinquis tamque diversis tam brevi tempore omnes huic se uni dederunt! quod a communi Cretensium legati, cum in eorum insula noster imperator exercitusque esset, ad Cn. Pompeium in ultimis prope terras venerunt eique se omnes Cretensium civitates dedere velle dixerunt! Quid? idem iste Mithridates nonne ad eundem Cn. Pompeium legatum usque in Hispaniam misit? [eum] quem [Pompeius legatum semper iudicavit,] ii, quibus erat molestum ad eum potissimum esse missum, speculatorem quam legatum iudicari maluerunt. Potestis igitur iam constituere, Quirites, hanc auctoritatem multis postea rebus gestis magnisque vestris iudiciis amplificatam quantum apud illos reges, quantum apud exteris nationes validam esse existimetis.

Lastly, Pompeius is the darling of Fortune

47. Reliquum est, ut de felicitate, quam praestare de se ipse nemo potest, meminisse et commemorare de altero possumus, sicut aequum est homines de potestate deorum, timide et pauca dicamus. Ego

2 enim sic existimo, Maximo, Marcello, Scipioni,
 3 Mario et ceteris magnis imperatoribus non solum
 4 propter virtutem, sed etiam propter fortunam saepius
 5 imperia mandata atque exercitus esse commissos.
 6 Fuit enim profecto quibusdam summis viris quaedam
 7 ad amplitudinem et ad gloriam et ad res magnas
 8 bene gerendas divinitus adiuncta fortuna. De huius
 9 autem hominis felicitate, de quo nunc agimus, hab
 10 utar moderatione dicendi, non ut in illius potestate
 11 fortunam positam esse dicam, sed ut praeterita
 12 meminisse, reliqua sperare videamur, ne aut invisa
 13 dis immortalibus oratio nostra aut ingrata esse vide-14 atur.

His habitual good fortune exceeds even the limits of ordinary human wishes

15 48. Itaque non sum praedicaturus, quantas ille res
 16 domi militiae, terra marique, quantaque felicitate
 17 gesserit, ut eius semper voluntatibus non modo cives
 18 adsenserint, socii obtemperarint, hostes obcederint, 19 sed etiam venti tempestatesque obsecundarint; hoc 20 brevissime dicam, neminem umquam tam impu-
 21 dentem fuisse, qui ab dis immortalibus tot et tantas
 22 res tacitus auderet optare, quot et quantas di im-
 23 mortales ad Cn⁷ Pompeium detulerunt. Quod ut illi
 24 proprium ac perpetuum sit, Quirites, cum communis
 25 salutis atque imperii, tum ipsius hominis causa, sicuti 26 facitis, velle et optare debetis.

In fine, Pompeius is the only possible general for this war

49. Quare cum et bellum sit ita necessarium, ut
 50 negligi non possit, ita magnum, ut accuratissime

47-48
 Felicitas

8 administrandum, et cum ei imperatorem praeficere possitis, in quo sit eximia belli scientia, singularis virtus, clarissima auctoritas, egregia fortuna, dubitatis, Quirites, quin hoc tantum boni, quod vobis ab dis immortalibus oblatum et datum est, in rem publicam conservandam atque amplificandam conferatis?

Chapter XVII

His presence in the East is an additional reason in favour of his appointment

50. Quodsi Romae Cn. Pompeius privatus esset hoc tempore, tamen ad tantum bellum is erat deligendus ac iue mittendus; nunc cum ad ceteras summas utilitates haec quoque oportunitas adiungatur, ut in iis ipsis locis adsit, ut habeat exercitum, ut ab
iis, qui habent, accipere statim possit, quid expectamus? aut cur non ducibus dis immortalibus eidem, cui cetera summa cum salute rei publicae commissa
sunt, hoc quoque bellum regium commendamus? 15

*There are, it is true, powerful opponents of this course—
Catulus and Hortensius*

51. At enim vir clarissimus, amantissimus rei publicae, vestris beneficiis amplissimis adfectus, Catulus, itemque summis ornamentis honoris, fortunae, virtutis, ingenii praeditus, Q. Hortensius, ab hac ratione dissentiunt: quorum ego auctoritatem apud vos multis locis plurimum valuisse et valere oportere confiteor; sed in hac causa, tametsi cognoscitis auctoritates contrarias viroborum fortissimorum et clarissimorum, tamen omissis auctoritatibus ipsa
re ac ratione exquisere possumus veritatem, atque 25

Republ. dicitur

hoc facilius, quod ea omnia, quae a me adhuc dicta sunt, idem isti vera esse concedunt, et necessarium bellum esse et magnum et in uno Cn. Pompeio summa esse omnia.

The argument of Hortensius—that supreme power should not be put into one man's hands—is obsolete and without basis in facts

5 52. Quid igitur ait Hortensius? Si uni omnia tribuenda sint, dignissimum esse Pompeium, sed ad unum tamen omnia deferri non oportere. Obsolevit iam ista oratio, re multo magis quam verbis refutata. Nam tu idem, O. Hortensi, multa pro tua summa copia ac singulari facultate dicendi et in senatu contra virum, fortem, A. Gabinium, graviter oratione teque dixisti, cum is de uno imperatore contra praedones constituendo legem promulgasset, et ex hoc ipso loco permulta item contra eam legem verba fecisti.

That argument would have blocked the proposals of Gabinius, and thereby have lost us our imperial position

53. Quid? tum, per deos immortales! si plus apud populum Romanum auctoritas tua quam ipsius populi Romani salus et vera causa valuisset, hodie hanc gloriam atque hoc orbis terrae imperium teneremus? An tibi tum imperium esse hoc videbatur, cum populi Romani legati, quaestores praetoresque capiebantur, cum ex omnibus provinciis comitebantur et privato et publico prohibebamur, cum ita clausis nobis erant maria omnia, ut neque privatam rem transmarinam neque publicam iam obire possemus.

Confutatio

ap. XVII ic dicta
ssarium
ompen

r should withou

omni
sed ad
solevi
futata summa senatu
orna
prae
ex ho
verba

als of ition

plu
ipsius
hodie tene
atur
esque heat laus
rem
mus

Q
H
O
R
T
E
N
S
I
U
S

116

QUINTUS HORTENSIVS

i
c
r
c
w
a
h
i n
s t
q
s
e
p
d
m ul
pe
no
cu
di
m tit

Chapter XVIII

For years before the passing of that law Rome was mistress of the seas in name alone. She could not protect her own shores, much less live up to the traditions of her glorious past

54. Quae civitas umquam fuit antea—non dico Atheniensium, quae satis late quondam mare tenuisse dicitur, non Carthaginensium, qui permultum classe ac maritimis rebus valuerunt, non Rhodorum, quorum usque ad nostram memoriam disciplina navalis et gloria remansit,—quae civitas umquam antea tam tenuis [aut tam parvula insula] fuit, quae non portus subs et agros et aliquam partem regionis, atque orae maritimae per se ipsa defenderet? At hercule aliquot annos continuos ante legem Gabiniam ille populus Romanus, cuius usque ad nostram memoriam nomen invictum in navalibus pugnis manserit, magna ac multo maxima parte non modo utilitatis, sed dignitatis atque imperii caruit. (55) Nos, quorum maiores Antiochum regem classe Persenque superarunt omnibusque navalibus pugnis Carthaginenses, homines in maritimis rebus exercitissimos paratissimosque, vicerunt, ii nullo in loco iam praedonibus pares esse poteramus; nos, qui antea non modo Italiam tutam habebamus, sed omnes socios in ultimis oris auctoritate nostri imperii salvos praestare poteramus, tum, cum insula Delus tam procul a nobis in Aegaeo mari posita, quo omnes undique cum mercibus atque operibus commeabant, referta divitiis, parva, sine mulo nihil timebat, idem non modo provinciis atque oris Italiae maritimis ac portibus nostris, sed etiam Appia iam via carebamus;

et iis temporibus nonne pudebat magistratus populi
Romani in hunc ipsum locum escendere, cum eum

Columbarium of Livia's Freedmen (Aspidian Way)

nobis maiores nostri exuviis nauticis et classium spoliis ornatum reliquissent!

VIII
populi
eum

Chapter XIX

Hortensius meant well, but fortunately for Rome the popular instinct was obeyed

56. Bono te animo tum, Q. Hortensi, populus Romanus et ceteros, qui erant in eadem sententia, dicere existimavit, et ea quae sentiebatis; sed tamen in salute communi idem populus Romanus dolori suo maluit quam auctoritati vestrae obtemperare. Itaque una lex, unus vir, unus annus non modo nos illa miseria ac turpitudine liberavit, sed etiam effecit, ut aliquando vere videremur omnibus gentibus ac nationibus terra marique imperare.

And by the way, it is a crying shame that a punctilio should have deprived Pompeius of the services of Gabinius himself

57. Quo mihi etiam indignius videtur obrectatum esse adhuc, Gabinio dicam an me Pompeio, an utriusque, id quod est verius, ne legaretur A. Gabinius Cn. Pompeio expetenti ac postulanti. Utrum ille, qui postulat ad tantum bellum legatum quem velit, idoneus non est qui impetret, cum ceteri ad expellendos socios diripiendasque provincias quos voluerint legatos eduxerint, an ipse, cuius lege salus ac dignitas populo Romano atque omnibus gentibus constituta est, expers esse debet victoriae [eius imperatoris atque eius exercitus, qui consilio ipsius ac periculo est constitutus]?

Columbarium of Livius' Freestmen (Aspian Way)

Vertical text on the right margin, possibly a library or collection stamp.

This wrong shall be righted—if not by the official heads of the state, then by myself

58. An C. Falcidius, Q. Metellus, Q. Caelius Latiniensis, Cn. Lentulus, quos omnes honoris causa nomino, cum tribuni plebi fuissent, anno proximo legati esse potuerunt; in uno Gabinio sunt tam diligentes, qui in hoc bello, quod lege Gabinia gereretur, in hoc imperatore atque exercitu, quem per vos ipse constituit, etiam praecipuo iure esse debebat? De quo legando consules spero ad senatum relatu-
 5 rorum; qui si dubitabunt aut gravabuntur, ego me profiteor relaturum; neque me impedit cuiusquam iniquitas, quo minus vobis fretus vestrum ius beneficiumque defendam, neque praeter intercessionem quicquam audiam, de qua, ut arbitror, isti ipsi, qui minitantur, etiam atque etiam quid liceat considerabunt. Mea
 10 quidem sententia, Quirites, unus A. Gabinius belli maritimi rerumque gestarum Cn. Pompeio socius adscribitur, propterea quod alter uni illud bellum suscipiendum vestris suffragiis detulit, alter delatum susceptumque confecit.

Chapter XX

The argument of Catulus—'Put not all your eggs into one basket'

59. Reliquum est, ut de Q. Catuli auctoritate et 20 sententia dicendum esse videatur. Qui cum ex vobis quaereret, si in uno Cn. Pompeio omnia poneretis, si 111 quid eo factum esset, in quo spem essetis habituri, cepit magnum suae virtutis fructum ac dignitatis, 25 cum omnes una prope voce in eo ipso vos spem habituros esse dixistis. Etenim talis est vir, ut nulla res tanta sit [ac tam difficilis], quam ille non et cons^o regere et integritate tueri et virtute conficere sit. Sed in hoc ipso ab eo vehementissime dis-sentio, quod, quo minus certa est hominum ac minus diuturna vita, hoc magis res publica, dum per deos 5 immortales licet, frui debet summi viri vita atque virtute.

Further, the position demanded for Pompeius is against precedent. But the whole career of Pompeius is without precedent

60. "At enim ne quid novi fiat contra exempla atque instituta maiorum." Non dicam hoc loco maiores nostros semper in pace consuetudini, in bello 10
 utilitati paruisse, semper ad novos casus temporum novorum consiliorum rationes accommodasse; non dicam duo bella maxima, Poenicum atque Hispani-ense, ab uno imperatore esse confecta duasque urbes potentissimas, quae huic imperio maxime minita- 15 bantur, Carthaginem atque Numantiam, ab eodem Scipione esse deletas; non commemorabo nuper ita
 vobis patribusque vestris esse visum, ut in uno C. 14
 Mario spes imperii poneretur, ut idem cum Iugurtha, idem cum Cimbris, idem cum Teutonis bellum ad- 20 ministraret: (61) in ipso Cn. Pompeio, in quo novi constitui nihil vult Q. Catulus, quam multa sint nova [summa] Q. Catuli voluntate constituta, recordamini.

Chapter XXI

Quid tam novum quam adolescentulum privatum
 exercitum difficili rei publicae tempore conficere? 25 Confecit. Huic praeesse? Praefuit. Rem optime ductu suo gerere? Gessit. Quid tam praeter con-suetudinem quam homini peradulescenti, cuius aetas a senatorio gradu longe abesset, imperium atque exercitum dari, Siciliam permitti atque Africam bellumque in ea provincia administrandum? Fuit in his 5 provinciis singulari innocentia, gravitate, virtute, bellum in Africa maximum confecit, victorem exercitum deportavit. Quid vero tam inauditum quam equitem Romanum triumphare? At eam quoque rem populus Romanus non modo vidit, sed omnium 10 etiam studio visendam et concelebrandam putavit.

And the most unprecedented honours and powers conferred upon him hitherto have had the approval of Catulus himself

62. Quid tam inusitatum, quam ut, cum duo consules clarissimi fortissimique essent, eques Romanus ad bellum maximum formidolosissimumque pro consule mitteretur? Missus est. Quo quidem tempore
 15 cum esset non nemo in senatu, qui diceret 'non oportere mitti hominem privatum pro consule', L. Philippus dixisse dicitur 'non se illum sua sententia pro consule, sed pro consulibus mittere'. Tanta in eo rei publicae bene gerendae spes constituebatur, 20 ut duorum consulum munus unius adulescentis virtuti committeretur. Quid tam singulare, quam ut ex senatus consulto legibus solutus consul ante fieret, quam ullum [alium] magistratum per leges capere licuisset? quid tam incredibile, quam ut
 25 [iterum] eques Romanus ex senatus consulto triumpharet? Quae in omnibus hominibus nova post hominum memoriam constituta sunt, ea tam multa non sunt quam haec, quae in hoc uno homine vidimus.

Opponents of the present measure should remember that results have proved the correctness of the popular verdict in the case of the proposals of Gabinius

63. Atque haec tot exempla tanta ac tam nova profecta sunt in eodem homine a Q. Catuli atque a ceterorum eiusdem dignitatis amplissimorum hominum auctoritate.

Chapter XXII

Quare videant, ne sit periniquum et non ferendum illorum auctoritatem de Cn. Pompei dignitate a vobis comprobata[m] [semper] esse, vestrum ab illis de eodem homine iudicium populi Romani auctoritatem improbari, praesertim cum iam suo iure populus Romanus in hoc homine suam auctoritatem vel contra omnes, qui dissentiunt, possit defendere, propterea quod isdem istis reclamantibus vos unum illum ex omnibus delegistis, quem bello praedonum praeponeretis.

Other virtues than those of a soldier are also required in the East

64. Hoc si vos temere fecistis et rei publicae parum consulistis, recte isti studia vestra suis consiliis regere conarentur; sin autem vos plus tum in re publica vidistis, vos istis repugnantibus per vosmet ipsos dignitatem huic imperio, salutem orbis terrarum attulistis, aliquando isti principes et sibi et ceteris populi Romani universi auctoritati parendum esse fateantur. Atque in hoc bello Asiatico et regio non solum militaris illa virtus, quae est in Cn.

Pompeio singularis, sed aliae quoque animi virtutes magnae et multae requiruntur. Difficile est in Asia, Cilicia, Syria regnisque interiorum nationum ita versari nostrum imperatorem, ut nihil aliud nisi de 5 hoste ac de laude cogitet. Deinde, etiamsi qui sunt pudore ac temperantia moderatiores, tamen eos esse tales propter multitudinem cupidorum hominum nemo arbitratur.

*We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that we are hated abroad
 —for which our generals are largely to blame*

65. Difficile est dictu, Quirites, quanto in odio 10 simus apud exteras nationes propter eorum, quos ad eas per hos annos cum imperio misimus, libidines et iniurias. Quod enim fanum putatis in illis terris nostris magistratibus religiosum, quam civitatem
 sanctam, quam domum satis clausam ac munitam 15 fuisse? Urbes iam locupletes et copiosae requiruntur, quibus causa belli propter diripiendi facultatem
 inferatur.

*We require therefore not only a great soldier, but an upright
 man*

66. Libenter haec coram cum Q. Catulo et Q.
 Hortensio, summis et clarissimis viris, disputarem;
 20 norunt enim sociorum vulnera, vident eorum calamitates, querimonias audiunt. Pro sociis vos contra hostes exercitus mittere putatis an hostium simulatione contra socios atque amicos? Quae civitas est in Asia, quae non modo imperatoris aut legati, sed 25 unius tribuni militum animos ac spiritus capere possit?

Chapter XXIII

Quare, etiamsi quem habetis, qui collatis signis exercitus regios superare posse videatur, tamen, nisi erit idem, qui a pecuniis sociorum, qui ab eorum coniugibus ac liberis, qui ab ornamentis fanorum atque oppidorum, qui ab auro gazaque regia manus, oculos, animum cohibere possit, non erit idoneus, qui ad bellum Asiaticum regiumque mittatur.

It is because Pompeius combines in himself these two qualifications that the East is calling him

67. Ecquam putatis civitatem pacatam fuisse, quae locuples sit? ecquam esse locupletem, quae istis pacata esse videatur? Ora maritima, Quirites, Cn. 10 Pompeium non solum propter rei militaris gloriam, sed etiam propter animi continentiam requisivit. Videbat enim praetores locupletari quotannis pecunia publica praeter paucos, neque nos quicquam aliud consequi classium nomine nisi ut detrimentis accipi- 15 endis maiore adfici turpitudine videremur. Nunc quae cupiditate homines in provincias et quibus iacturis, quibusque condicionibus profiscantur, ignorant videlicet isti, qui ad unum deferenda omnia esse non arbitrantur: quasi vero Cn. Pompeium non cum 20 suis virtutibus, um etiam alienis vitiis magnum esse videamus.

Men of high character and ability support the popular demand

68. Quare nolite dubitare, quin huic uni credatis omnia, qui inter tot annos unus inventus est quem socii in urbes suas cum exercitu venisse gaudeant. 25

5 Quodsi auctoritatibus hanc causam, Quirites, confirmendam putatis, est vobis auctor vir bellorum omnium maximarumque rerum peritissimus, P. Servilius, cuius tantae res gestae terra marique extiterunt, ut, cum de bello deliberetis, auctor vobis
 10 gravior nemo esse debeat; est C. Curio, summis vestris beneficiis maximisque rebus gestis, summo ingenio et prudentia praeditus, est Cn. Lentulus, in quo omnes pro amplissimis vestris honoribus sum-mum consilium, summam gravitatem esse cognostis, 15 est C. Cassius, integritate, veritate, constantia singulari. Quare videte ut horum auctoritatibus eorum orationi, qui dissentiunt, respondere posse videamur.

Confutatio

Chapter XXIV

I approve of the bill of Manilius, and promise to give it all the support in my power. I have no personal end in view

69. Quae cum ita sint, C. Manili, primum istam 15 tuam et legem et voluntatem et sententiam laudo vehementissimeque comprobo; deinde te hortor, ut auctore populo Romano maneat in sententia neve cuiusquam vim aut minas pertimescas. Primum in te satis esse animi perseverantiaeque arbitror; deinde 20 cum tantam multitudinem tanto cum studio adesse videamus, quantam iterum nunc in eodem homine praeficiendo videmus, quid est, quod aut de re aut de reficiendi facultate dubitemus? Ego autem, quid quid est in me studii, consilii, laboris, ingenii, quid 25 quid hoc beneficio populi Romani atque hac potes-tate praetoria, quicquid auctoritate, fide, constantia possum, id omne ad hanc rem conficiendam tibi esse

Peroratio.

populo Romano polliceor ac defero; (70) testorque omnes deos, et eos maxime qui huic loco temploque praesident, qui omnium mentes eorum, qui ad rem publicam adeunt, maxime perspiciunt, me hoc neque rogatu facere cuiusquam, neque quo Cn. Pompei 5 gratiam mihi per hanc causam conciliari putem, neque quo mihi ex cuiusquam amplitudine aut praesidia periculis aut adiumenta honoribus quaeram, propterea quod pericula facile, ut hominem praestare oportet, innocentia tecti repellemus, honorem autem 10 neque ab uno neque ex hoc loco, sed eadem illa nostra laboriosissima ratione vitae, si vestra voluntas feret, consequemur.

I know that my action has created for me personal enemies, but duty and gratitude compel me to put the safety and honour of Rome and her empire before my own advantage

71. Quam ob rem, si quid in hac causa mihi susceptum est, Quirites, id ego omne me rei publicae 15 causa suscepisse confirmo, tantumque abest, ut aliquam mihi bonam gratiam quaesisse videar, ut multas me etiam simultates partim obscuras, partim pertas intellegam mihi non necessarias, vobis non 20 nutes suscepisse. Sed ego me hoc honore praeditum, tantis [vestris] beneficiis adfectum statui, Quirites, vestram voluntatem et rei publicae dignitatem et salutem provinciarum atque sociorum meis omnibus commodis et rationibus praeferre oportere.

I
not
'pr
big join (act your ques
epit
to v crow

2.

It st prop
the l conta
cated
and while Caes
where platfo
its fr
'beak
city o

2, 3
the ri
neut. p
to the

NOTES

N.B.—In references to passages in the Speech, the first number refers to the Section, the second to the Line of the Page. H. = the Harleian MS. of Cicero, from the collation of Mr. A. C. Clark.

§ 1

1. conspectus: here used in a passive sense; i.e. meaning not a 'seeing', but a 'being seen', and so 'appearance' or 'presence'. The English word 'sight' has the same ambiguity: but note that when used in the active sense it is joined with a possessive adj. only; thus we say 'your sight' (act.), but 'the sight of you' (pass.). Trans. 'the sight of your crowded gathering', as though it were conspectus frequentiae vestrae; the idea of 'crowded' being attached as an epithet (frequens) to conspectus, rather than as a substantive to vester ('the crowded sight of you', not 'the sight of your crowds'), by the grammatical figure called Hypallage.

2. locus: the platform from which he speaks, the Rostra. It stood on the line of division between the Forum (Romanum) properly so called, and the Comitium (Place of Assembly); the latter being that part or extension of the Forum which contained the Senate House (Curia). The Comitium was dedicated to certain purposes, such as the holding of Assemblies, and was a consecrated space (templum: see note on 70, 2), while the Forum was the centre of the business life of Rome. Caesar transferred the Rostra to the N.W. end of the Forum, where its remains are now seen. The name of the orators' platform (Rostra, neut. plur.) was derived from the fact that its front was ornamented with the brazen spurs (rostrum, 'beak') of war-ships, originally those of the fleet of the Volscian city of Antium captured in 338 B.C.

2, 3. ad agendum . . . ad dicendum. The ius cum populo agendi, the right of summoning an assembly of the people (Comitia, neut. plur.) to vote upon some proposal (rogatio, 'bill'), belonged to the superior magistrates (magistratus cum imperio, i.e. consuls and praetors). Ad dicendum refers to the ius contionem habendi, the right of addressing the people upon any public question. All magistrates possessed this latter right, and the presiding magistrate could grant leave to or invite any private citizen to speak (hence ornatissimus, 'most honourable'). There was no right of free speech in Rome, although as a matter of fact there was probably little difficulty in finding opportunity of public utterance. A contio could only listen, not vote, and might be attended by anyone; voting could only be done in the Comitia, and by those who held the franchise. It was in a contio that the present speech was delivered.

4. Quirites. The true meaning of this word is unknown. The Romans themselves connected it with the word Curetes, inhabitants of Cures, a town in the Sabine country, in the hills north-east of Rome. Others derive it from the Sabine word cūris or quīris, 'lance'; so that Quirites would mean 'those who have the right to bear arms', = 'citizens'. If, however, that was its original meaning, there gradually came a change, and Quirites seems to denote the Romans in their civil, not military capacity: Caesar, for example, recalled a mutinous legion to duty by addressing the men as Quirites, implying that they were no longer soldiers, but simply citizens. The full designation of the Roman people was populus Romanus Quirites, or populus Romanus Quiritium.

laudis: objective genitive; trans. by 'to'.

6. ab ineunte aetate, 'since my entry upon manhood'; i.e. since laying aside the purple-bordered toga of a boy (tōgā praetextā) for the toga of a man (tōgā virilis; or tōgā purā, from its colour, entirely white—except that senators, equites, and curule magistrates still wore the purple border). A Roman boy thus 'came of age' at sixteen or thereabouts.

7. per aetatem, 'owing to my youth'. Cicero could not have possessed the ius agendi (see above) before gaining the praetorship; but in the interval since his first appearance as a pleader at the age of twenty-six, he might have secured an invitation to address public meetings (contiones), or he might have addressed them in his own right when Quaestor ante curule Aedile. It is for his failure to do this that Cicero apologizes, assigning as his reason his want of auctoritas and facultas ad agendum (see § 2). Hence Clark looks upon the words per aetatem as 'a perverse gloss upon antea'; H. omits them.

8. nondum. The negative force of nondum extends only to auderem, and statuerem has its own negative (nihil). Statuerem would not be well translated here as 'think' (= existimarem). Auderem gives a negative attitude of mind ('I did not venture while statuerem expresses the positive act ('I took as my principle').

8. hulus auctoritatem loci, 'this place of authority', auctoritatem appearing to supply the place of an adjective—'this authoritative place'. Similarly in 12. 1, tantam imperii gloriam, 'so glorious an empire'.

10, 11. tempus . . . temporibus: a play upon words, tempus being used in its ordinary sense of 'time', while temporibus means 'emergencies', especially perils arising from legal prosecutions (= periculis, 2. 2).

§ 2

12. neque . . . et. The first clause (hic locus . . . defenderent), though grammatically co-ordinate with, is logically subordinate to the second clause (meus labor . . . consecutus), i.e. we have 'neither has this platform . . . and my efforts' for 'while this platform . . . my efforts'.

1. defenderent: a consecutive subjunctive, introduced by the relative qui. Such clauses are used to describe the character of a person or thing, the relative being practically = ut, and being preceded by a demonstrative pronoun or adjective, like is, talis, or tantus; cf. 3. 13, talis . . . in qua . . . possit.

2. caste integreque, 'with clean hands and conscience'. Cicero means that he had not taken fees, nor received bribes to betray a client (praevaricatio was the name given to such 'collusion'). By a Lex Cincia of 204 B.C. advocates were forbidden to take fees or accept gifts from clients, but the law was practically a dead letter, and lawyers amassed great wealth. Theoretically, however, the bar at Rome was not a profession by which men lived, but an avenue to political power.

3. iudicio, i.e. in the elections. As all Roman magistracies were filled by the direct vote of the people, the elections gave the verdict of the community upon aspirants to office.

4. dilationem comitiorum. So many circumstances might cause the dissolution or postponement of Comitia that it is impossible to say why the Comitia centuriata for the election of praetors in 67 B.C. were twice interrupted; possibly it was on account of the faction-fights of which we hear in that year. Comitia could not be held at all if unfavourable omens were reported by the Augurs, or even if a magistrate of the same or of higher rank than the one presiding announced that he would watch for omens, as it was certain that he would see bad omens if he so desired. The veto (intercessio) of a Tribune of the Commons, or, in the case of the Comitia centuriata, the lowering of the red flag flying on the Janiculum on the right bank of the Tiber, broke up the assembly (as in the trial of Rabirius, 63 B.C.).

5. primus: not to be taken with praetor as 'first Praetor', in spite of the fact that the Praetor urbanus and the Praetor peregrinus ranked higher than their colleagues, and that, of these two, the Praetor urbanus was regarded as the more distinguished. The special functions (provincia) of the Praetors were assigned by lot (sortitio) after election. At this date there were eight Praetors elected annually, and as all the centuriae voted for Cicero, the presiding magistrate at once 'returned' him (renuntio is the technical expression). The voting on the other candidates was going on when the proceedings were interrupted, and the whole business must be gone through on a subsequent day.

1, 2. quid indicaretis . . . quid . . . praescriberetis. These clauses (indirect questions) are best translated by substantives — 'your verdict on myself . . . your demands on others'. This principle should be widely applied in rendering Latin.

3. honoribus: the regular word for official position. Cf. 70. 8.

5. ex forensi usu, 'from my practice in the courts'. Trials in civil suits before a Praetor were held either in the open air in the Comitium (see above, 1. 2), or in one or other of the basilicae in the neighbourhood of the Forum.

7. utar. Supply ea from the following eam (= auctoritatem).

7-9. eos . . . his, i.e. the audience. There is a change from the direct address in the second person (voluistis) to the more general third person. Ei . . . rei = dicendi facultati. By fructum Cicero means his own official position as praetor. Suo iudicio is, of course, ablative.

8, 9. si quid . . . possum, 'if I can . . .', generally, not under restriction to this particular occasion (which would require the future). Si quid is mock modest, in place of the assertive quicquid; cf. 71. 14 (where, however, the usual reading is quicquid).

§ 3

11. Atque, 'and further'. Atque is frequently thus used to adduce further arguments of similar force to others previously stated, or to add to what has gone before: atque at the beginning of chap. ii. is simply 'now'.

illud, 'the following consideration'; a frequent use of illud.

12, 13. in hac insolita . . . dicendi. This is our hackneyed phrase, 'unaccustomed as I am to speaking from this platform'. The words ex hoc loco limit the meaning to political speeches; Cicero had already made his mark as a speaker in the courts.

12, 13. ratione . . . causa . . . oratio. Ratio is here 'procedure'; causa, 'theme'; oratio, 'words'; but orationis, lower down, is 'theme', and at the beginning of chap. ii., 'speech'. Other varieties of meaning are found in 29. 13, 'statement on a par with the subject'; and 52. 8, 66. 13, 'objection', 'rejoinder'.

15. virtute, 'merit', as in 27. 11.

§ 4

21. vectigalibus. Is this neuter (from vectigal, 'tax', 'revenue'), as certainly in l. 27, or masculine (from vectigalis, 'payer of taxes', 'tributary subject')? In 45. 2 we find the combination socios et vectigalia, so that vectigalibus may well be neuter here; but the masculine is perhaps better after the phrase bellum adfertur. So in 5. 5 and 7. 4. Note the somewhat careless use of the word in this and the two following sections.

23. relictus, 'left unsubdued'. So in the speech for Murena Cicero says: Murena repressum (Mithridatem) magna ex parte, non oppressam reliquit, 'did not crush, but satisfied himself with checking'.

24. Asiam: the Roman province of Asia; i.e. the western part of Asia Minor, including the old kingdom of Bithynia and the districts of Phrygia and Mysia in the north, with Lydia and Caria in the south.

25. Equitibus Romanis. The equites were originally, as the name implies, the cavalry of the state, organized under the Servian constitution in eighteen centuriae. Each eques received a grant from the state towards the cost and maintenance of a pair of horses (hence the expression eques equo publico). The cost of service in the cavalry tends to restrict this career to the wealthier classes, but originally personal efficiency was the only definite qualification for admission to this purely military body of equites. In 403 B.C., owing to losses in the field and troubles at home, it became necessary to call for volunteers to increase the number of the cavalry; these new equites found their own horses (equites equo privato), had no state grant, and were not enrolled in the eighteen centuriae. The cavalry service gradually passed into the hands of the equites equo privato, and to a still larger extent into that of the so-called allies in Italy; the equites, properly so called (equo publico), belonging to the wealthiest and noblest families in Rome, no longer served in war, except on the general's staff and as mounted officers of the legions. The eighteen equestrian centuriae were filled by the Censors, who selected senators and members of senatorial families with a certain minimum property qualification of (probably) 400,000 sesterces. When at length senators were forbidden to engage in commerce the equestrian centuriae

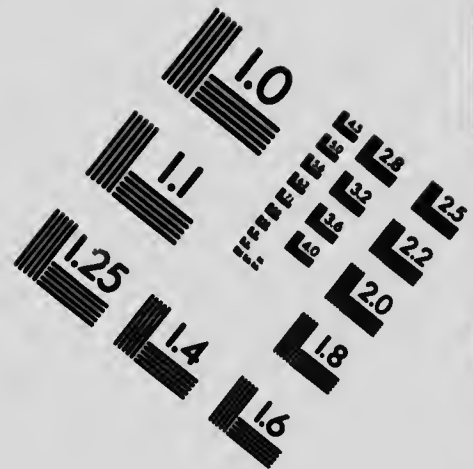

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

APPLIED IMAGE, Inc
 1653 East Main Street
 Rochester, NY 14609 USA
 Phone: 716/482-0300
 Fax: 716/288-5989

© 1993, Applied Image, Inc., All Rights Reserved

23

22

came to be filled entirely by the rich men of Rome who were non-senators, and in this way the name equites came to be applied to all who, eschewing a political career, devoted themselves to business and finance on a great scale, and formed the class of moderate capitalists, merchant princes, and financial magnates, perhaps 30,000 in all. When, finally, Gaius Gracchus gave to the equites, in this sense, the sole right to constitute the jury in the criminal courts (a right hitherto enjoyed exclusively by the senators) a definite form was thus given to the body, which is the Ordo equester of the later Republic. Members of the order, all possessing the minimum property-qualification of 400,000 sesterces, enjoyed three outward marks of distinction—the gold ring, the narrow purple band on the toga, and the exclusive right of occupying the fourteen rows of seats immediately behind the senators in the theatre. Honestus was the formal title of respect applied to the order. The political importance of the equites lay in their wealth; for by forming companies they were able to speculate in the taxes of the provinces, advancing to the state the estimated annual yield and receiving from it the right of collection. As there was no supervision, and as the courts were, for some years, in the hands of the equites themselves, this led to frightful extortion and wrong.

26. cotidie: a natural exaggeration. There was no daily mail delivery at Rome, nor any postal department, all such work being done by private couriers.

27. vectigalibus: here neuter. Trans. 'locked up in the farming of your taxes'. So in 18. 13, pecunias collocatas.

1. pro necessitudine. The 'tie' consisted in the fact that Cicero was himself of equestrian family.

§ 5

4. exustos esse. The infinitives throughout this section give the contents of the despatches from Asia.

5. vectigalibus. Here again the gender is doubtful. If neuter, trans. 'the lands tributary to you'. Cf. praedia populi Romani sunt vectigalia nostra atque provinciae (Verr. ii. 7), 'our tributary lands and provinces are the estates of the Roman people'.

7, 8. huic qui successerit: huic (= Lucullo) is dative after successerit; the demonstrative eum must be supplied before qui as subject of the infinitive esse (paratum). Trans. 'his successor' (i.e. Glabrio).

8. successerit: subjunctive, because it is the verb of a subordinate (here a relative) clause in indirect narration. Contrast the mood of the verb in the explanatory parenthesis quae nunc

vestra provincia est—a remark made by Cicero himself, forming no part of the despatches he is quoting.

9. sociis et civibus: the provincials of Asia and the Romans engaged there in business. Civibus not here Romans inhabiting the Capital.

9, 10. unum . . . imperatorem, 'there is but one man', i.e. Pompeius. Imperatorem is part of the predicate—'as general'.

§ 6

13. Causa quas sit: see note on 2. 1.

16, 17. Genus . . . eius modi, quod, 'in character, the war is such as . . .'; or 'the war is of such a character as . . .'. Instead of making bellum the subject of the sentence, Cicero has treated genus as the subject for the sake of emphasis. Quod grammatically refers to genus, of course, but logically to bellum, and therefore in the following sentence we have in quo (which can only refer to bellum), as though bellum had actually been the grammatical subject with which we started.

17. vestros animos. In English the more natural idiom is to drop animos, and say simply 'you'; if animos is kept, trans. 'feelings', 'passions'.

18. ad persequendi studium, i.e. ad studium belli persequendi = ad bellum studiose persequendum, 'to a vigorous prosecution of . . .'.
 4. certissima, 'an unfailing source of revenue'. The use of the word in this place must be distinguished from its use in the technical phrase vectigal certum, 'a definitely fixed impost', also called stipendium, levied upon the greater part of the conquered territory outside Italy (with the exception of Sicily and Asia, which paid decumae, 'tithes').

7. a vobis. Here with the gerund the ablative with a preposition is used, instead of the dative, to denote the agent. This is because there is already present a dative, quibus ('for whose interests'), as required by the particular word consulo in this sense. So with all verbs requiring a dative, the dative of the agent with the gerund or gerundive is generally replaced by the ablative with a preposition, in order to avoid ambiguity; sometimes also when there is no ambiguity, as in 24. 4, a me praetereunda non sunt. Contrast 24. 20, sibi . . . auctoritati parendum esse, where no ambiguity is present. See Crit. App. on the present passage.

§ 7

11. bello superiore, 'the last war'; s.e. the First Mithridatic War, the unimportant operations of Murena, usually called the Second Mithridatic War, being disregarded.

13. quod, 'I mean the fact that', explaining macula.
- 13, 14. tota in Asia. The preposition in, which is not usually inserted in such local abl. with totus or medius, is here retained to make the expression strictly similar in form to the following, tot in civitatibus.
- 14, 15. una significatione [litterarum], 'by a stroke of the pen', or 'by a single despatch'. H. omits litterarum; if the word be retained we have a case of Hypallage.
1. iam . . . regnat. Iam with the present tense expresses a state of things extending from the past into the present, and still continuing. Trans. 'is on the throne these three-and-twenty years'.
- ✓ tertium et vicissimum. According to the Roman inclusive mode of reckoning, this correctly gives the interval 88–66 B.C., beginning with the occupation of Cappadocia by Ariarathes.
4. vectigalibus: masc., supplying populis or agris; see on 4. 21.

in Asiae luce, 'flaunt himself in the broad daylight of Asia'. Luce is contrasted with latebris, 'dark corners', as though Mithridates emerged like some noxious animal from the twilight of his northern home into the brilliantly lighted circle of the more civilized lands of the West.

§ 8

7. insignia victoriae, i.e. the honour of a triumph, as in the two instances following. Trans. 'symbol . . . not the reality'.

10, 11. ita . . . ut . . . regnaret, 'they triumphed only to this degree . . . that he still retained his crown'. An example of the limiting or restrictive use of ita . . . ut, 'with the exception that', 'with the reservation that'; as in Cic., Div. in Caec., xiii. 44, cuius ego ingenium ita laudo ut non pertimescam, 'I praise his genius without fearing it'.

✓ 12, 13. quod egerunt . . . quod reliquerunt: quod in each case is probably not the direct object of its verb, but a conjunction, egerunt being used absolutely—'that they were active, we must praise, etc.'. Reliquerunt properly should have had a direct object expressed, but must here mean 'left something still to be done'. Such absolute use of relinquo, on the analogy of that of ago, is apparently unparalleled. H. reads egerunt triumphum, which Clark thinks is probably an early conjecture for a lost word. He suggests that possibly after egerunt there may have originally been tanta, which was subsequently obelized from confusion with danda which follows.

14. res publica, 'the claims of the state'.

§ 9

17. ad oblivionem, 'to the task of effacing the memory of . . .', by cultivating friendly relationship with Rome.

18. posteaquam: see Crit. App.

20. potuisset: sc. comparare. The subjunctive is apparently due to attraction through the presence of the surrounding pluperfects. We should expect poterat (some edd. read potuit) or posset.

21. Bosporanis: the people dwelling about the Cimmerian Bosphorus, in the Crimea and S. Russia.

22. usque in, 'all the way to'; emphasizing the vastness of the distance.

23. duces, i.e. Sertorius.

24. disiunctissimis . . . diversis: disiunctus expresses the distance between the two seats of war; diversus their situation at opposite points of the compass.

25. bini . . . ooplis: bini, the distributive, is used instead of duo with substantives which appear in the plural only, or which suffer a change of meaning in passing into the plural: e.g. binae aedes, 'two houses' (but duo aedes, 'two temples'); binae litterae, 'two epistles' (but duo litterae, 'two letters of the alphabet').

26. ancipiti: here literally, 'divided', i.e. in two places; generally in Cicero the word means 'doubtful', 'uncertain'.

§ 10

6. initia rerum gestarum: initia supplies the place of an adjective — 'his initial successes'. Cf. auctoritatem loci in 1. 8.

10. alio loco, i.e. in § 20.

10-12. Ita dicam . . . ut . . . videatur, 'so speak as to make it clear that . . .'. The subjunctive is consecutive, and the time to which videatur refers is future, as it is subordinated to a future (dicam).

13. exorsus, 'opening subject' (not = exordium, 'introduction'). Exorsus is found only in this passage.

§ 11

13, 14. videte . . . putetis: putetis, a subjunctive in indirect question, dependent on videte (which here means 'consider'), is apparently pleonastic, i.e. it adds nothing to the sense, which would have been quite complete had Cicero simply said 'consider what your feelings ought to be', instead of 'consider what you think your feelings ought to be'. Cicero very frequently uses this pleonastic form of expression; and many examples occur in this speech: cf. 26. 24, coniectura perspicite, quantum illud bellum factum putetis, for quantum . . . factum sit simply; so also in 27. 5, 9, videatur and putaretis, and in 46. 22, existimetis, are pleonastic. Some hold that this usage of a second verb of thinking dependent on a verb of feeling or perceiving is not a mere pleonasm, but represents what in English would be a parenthetical 'in your opinion', 'in your view', or 'think you', intended to soften the abruptness of the question even as stated indirectly.

✓ 15. Maiores nostri: the reference is to the campaign against the Illyrian pirates and their queen Teuta in 229 B.C., and against Demetrius of Pharos (an island in the Adriatic, off the Albanian coast) ten years later.

16. inturiosius: the comparative has a disparaging sense here, as often—'somewhat rudely'. So superbius in the following sentence.

17. nuntio, 'message' as in 7. 14; an instance of the Roman desire for the concrete in expression in preference to the abstract.

18. quo tandem animo: tandem, like the Greek $\delta\eta$, emphasizes the question; trans. 'pray'. The ablative here, with esse, is that of description. In 12. 5 the ablative is modal.

19. Legati. This was in 147 B.C. The Roman ambassadors were as a matter of fact grossly insulted, and, according to some accounts, even personally assaulted by the Corinthian mob and Diaeus and Critolaus the leaders of the Achaean League. Cicero, for obvious rhetorical reasons, here understates the case; but the total destruction of Corinth, by L. Mummius, in 146 B.C., like that of Carthage a few months previously, has been suspected to have been due to the jealousy of the Roman merchants.

20. lumen: trans. 'star', as Cicero may be rendering the Greek word $\lambda\omicron\sigma\tau\omicron\rho\upsilon$ applied to Corinth in a verse quoted by Diodorus. Do not use the word 'cynosure'. The metaphor is kept up in the predicate extinctum, which therefore agrees in gender with lumen, not with Corinthum.

21. vulnerunt, 'resolved', as in the formula velitis iubeatis, used in submitting a measure to the votes of the people assembled in comitia; esse is generally omitted after volo used in this sense.

22. legatum . . . consularem: the reference is to Manius Aquillius, who had been Consul with Gaius Marius in 101 B.C. In 88 B.C. he was captured by Mithridates and put to a cruel death.

23. excruciatum: this goes with all the ablatives.

24. libertatem imminutam. Latin is weak in abstract substantives, so that an idea expressed in English by an abstract substantive is rendered in Latin often by means of a past participle combined with a substantive; e.g. post urbem conditam, 'after the founding of the city', ante Tullium natum, 'before the birth of Tullius'. So in the following sentences: vitam ereptam, ius violatum, legatum interfectum. What exactly Cicero means by this sentence (which clearly refers to the treatment of the envoys at Corinth) it is impossible to say.

26. persecuti sunt, 'avenged' (= ulti). For a different meaning of the word see 6. 18.

27. relinquetis, 'leave unavenged'; a sense somewhat similar to that of relictus in 4. 23.

§ 12

3. id, quod accepistis, 'your heritage'. See on quid indicaretis in 2. 1.

4. Quid? 'further', or 'again'; a rhetorical question marking a transition to a new point of view, or to fresh arguments in support of a preceding statement (lit. 'what of this fact?'); quod is here again 'the fact that'

7. socius populi Romani atque amicus: an honorary title granted by the Roman Senate to foreign princes on the borders of the Empire.

10. cuncta Asia: the preposition in is omitted, as though cuncta were tota; cf. 31. 15, toto mari. Tota Asia is the more usual expression (in 7. 13, 14, we have tota in Asia for a special reason). Long takes the words cuncta . . . Graecia as nominative, amplifying civitates. H. reads cunctae Asiae et Graeciae.

12. certum, 'special', 'particular'.

13. alium, i.e. other than was desired, supplying atque exspectaverant. The reference is to Glabrio.

14. periculo: Cicero hints that Glabrio and Lucullus, the two generals on the spot, might have made the provincials suffer for asking for Pompeius, who is, of course, the general meant by certum imperatorem (cf. unum in 5. 9).

§ 13

16. summa: note the emphatic position of the predicate summa—'in whom all qualifications exist in a superlative degree'.

17. propter: here a local adverb—'close at hand' (as in

16. 14). Pompeius at this moment was on the south coast of Asia Minor, having just finished the war with the pirates.

18. ad maritimum bellum: supply the word 'only'.

6. hoc: ablative of measure.

ceteras in provincias: for the sentiment cf. 65. 9, difficile est dictu, Quirites, quanto in odio simus apud exterarum nationes, etc. This obviously contradicts the foregoing sicut ceterarum . . . socios, which should therefore probably be excluded, as a gloss upon quoque (Clark). The vulg. ceteros in provinciam is open to the objection that it makes too direct an attack upon Lucullus and others; throughout the speech Cicero strikes at Lucullus by innuendo. If the vulg. be retained, ceteros is predicative, and is best translated by an adverbial phrase—'in other instances'.

7. cum imperio, i.e. with imperium proconsulare, which ex-practors in charge of the Provinces possessed, as being in command of armies.

8. adventus: plural, because Cicero is referring to a number of separate instances.

§ 14

15. Antiocho. Antiochus III, the Great, king of Syria (223-187 B.C.). He attacked Attalus, king of Pergamus, and Eumenes the successor of Attalus, but was utterly defeated in the battle of Magnesia by the Romans (190 B.C.).

Philippo. Philip V, king of Macedonia, who made a treaty with Antiochus the Great for the partition of Egypt, and encroached upon the states of Rhodes, Athens, and Pergamus. He was defeated by Flamininus at Cynoscephalae in Thessaly (197 B.C.).

16. Aetolis. The Aetolian Federation invited Antiochus the Great into Greece against the Romans (192 B.C.), and attacked several cities in Greece. Three years later, after the defeat of Antiochus, the Aetolians were compelled to sue for a peace which amounted to unconditional surrender and the dissolution of their League.

Poenis. The First Punic War arose out of the appeal of the Mamertines in the Sicilian town of Messana to Rome when they were besieged by Hiero, king of Syracuse (264 B.C.). The seizure of Messana by the Romans led to the war with the Carthaginians. The Second Punic War arose out of the siege of Saguntum, a Spanish town in alliance with Rome, by Hannibal (218 B.C.). The Third war was occasioned by the Carthaginian resistance to the aggressions of Massinissa, king of Numidia, who was in alliance with Rome (149 B.C.). The expression propter socios would therefore suit any of the Punic wars.

21. tanta: here used in the sense 'only so great', i.e. 'so small', 'barely sufficient', as in the phrase tantum dico, 'I say this and no more'.

tutandas: 'tueri is the right word, since Cicero means that Asia can pay its own way, or look after itself' (Clark). If the vulg. tutandas be retained it must mean that they can hardly pay for the troops required for their protection.

23-25. ubertate agrorum . . . exportentur: in this sentence Cicero gives the source of the three main heads of taxation in the Province of Asia—the decumae, scriptura, and portoria (for which, see below). The subj. exportentur (so H.) implies the thought of the destination or end in view—'things to export'; cf. De Am. 104, haec habui, de amicitia quae dicerem, 'this was what I had to say'. The vulg. indic. exportantur is equivalent to a simple substantive, and the whole phrase would be correctly rendered by the word 'exports'.

26, 27. belli utilitatem et pacis dignitatem: more difficult phrases than those already employed in § 6, pacis ornamenta et subsidia belli; trans., 'to keep in your control the sinews of war and the splendours of peace', or 'that which arms you against external foes and sheds lustre upon you in time of peace'.

§ 15

1. venit: here venit; 'it is when the blow has fallen that . . .'

3. motus ipso, 'the mere apprehension'. For this use of ipse cf. 12. 18, ipso adventu; it can often be rendered by the word 'simple' or 'simply'.

6. pecora relinquuntur. See Crit. App.

7, 8. ex portu . . . vectigal, 'customs dues', or portoria, levied at the ports and frontier stations. These were contracted for by publicani like other branches of the vectigalia.

8. decumis. According to the theory of the Republic, all conquered territory became state domain, which was dealt with in various ways. As a rule, the cultivated land (ager cultus) was left in the occupation of its original owners, with the imposition of a fixed land-tax (vectigal certum, or stipendium; see on 6. 4), or of tithe (decuma = decima, sc. pars), which varied in amount with the annual yield of produce. Asia paid the decuma in Cicero's time.

scriptura. In the state domains (ager publicus) in Italy and the Provinces the pasture-lands were very important. They are spoken of under various terms—pascua, ager compascuus or pascuus, silva, saltus. The squatter who grazed his cattle on this land paid a fixed rent (vectigal) to the state. This vectigal was farmed by financial syndicates (publicani), who levied a grazing-tax (scriptura) on every head of stock registered (scribo, hence the name of the tax) as put to graze on them by each pecuarius, or pastoralist.

§ 16

12. qui . . . penitant: here the relative clause merely defines or explains the antecedent (see on 14. 25), and so its verb is the indic., in spite of the Orat. Obl.

13. exercent . . . exigunt, 'farm and collect'. The first word refers to the publicani, the second to their employés (familiae).

16. familias. Familia (connected with famulus, 'servant') properly denotes the slaves of a household, not 'family', i.e. wife and children. The employés of the publicani were for the most part slaves.

saltibus. The best MSS., including H., read salinis, 'salt-pans'. Some MSS. and edd. read silvis. Saltibus, 'in the bush', refers to scriptura in 15. 8, as agris to decumae and portibus . . . custodiis to portoria. Saltus is defined by Festus as ubi silvae et pastiones sunt.

18. custodiis: coast-guard stations and frontier posts, established to prevent smuggling. This meaning of the word appears not to be common.

20. vobis fructui sunt. The predicative dative, called also the Final dative, or dative of Result, is usually an abstract substantive, and is often, as here, combined with another dative, of the person affected by the result (here vobis). Other common examples are: cui bono est? (lit. 'to whom is it for a benefit?') 'who gains thereby' (not, as so often used in fiction and 'smart' articles, 'what good is it?'); oneri esse, 'to be a burden'; cordi esse, 'to be dear to'. The abstract substantive so used is always in the singular. Three examples occur in the present speech; cf. curae esse in 17. 6, and praesidio in 32. 27. Trans. 'to whom you owe these advantages'.

§ 17

23. ne . . . quidem, 'nor again' = Greek οὐδέ. illud: here again, as in 3. 11, of what follows.

25. quod . . . pertinet: if quod is here the relative, it logically refers to bellum, though grammatically to genus; cf. note on 6. 16, 17. Some prefer to take quod as a conjunction, as in 12. 4: 'I mean the fact that', explaining illud.

3. et publicani: et is 'in the first place', as though a second et were to follow; in place of a second et we have deinde in l. 10 below. But nam et is found so often in Cicero without any answering et that probably some other explanation is preferable, as that the et is adverbial like the Greek τε, cf. τελε τε by the side of τελε, ὄρα by the side of ὄρα, etc.

4. rationes et copias, 'business interests and capital'.

5. ipsorum per se, 'intrinsically', i.e. even apart from the interests of other classes affected by the prosperity, or the reverse, of the publicani.

8. eum ordinem, i.e. the equestrian Order, to which the publicani belonged. But ceterorum ordinum which follows is used in a general sense, of all ranks of society ('social fabric'). Others explain eum ordinem as the special ordo publicanorum, in which case the words ceterorum ordinum (and ceteris ordinibus in l. 10 below) will include those of the equestrian order who were not publicani, together with senators and the general mass of citizens. In any case the word ordo seems to be used in slightly different senses.

§ 18

10. ceteris ordinibus. Cicero means, firstly, the plebeians, or general mass of citizens, some of whom would no doubt find employment in Asia under the publicani; senators also are included under the term, for many of them would secretly have money invested with the publicani as 'sleeping partners', being themselves forbidden by a Lex Claudia (218 B.C.) to engage in mercantile pursuits.

11-13. partim ipsi . . . partim eorum: partim (orig. partem) is here used first adverbially ('partly'), and secondly as a substantive with a partitive genitive depending on it (= alii). Either construction is normal, but the combination is peculiar. In § 26 partim militum . . . dimisit, partim . . . tradidit, or Livy, 26. 46, partim copiarum ad tumulum expugnandum mittit, partim ipse ad arcem ducit, the partitive genitive precedes, and so is readily supplied also with the second partim.

13. pecunias, 'sums of money', and therefore combined with magnas, not multas.

16, 17. à re publica: for a rei publicae calamitate.

18, 19. publicanis . . . recuperare: see Crit. App.

20. redimendi: redimere is the technical expression for 'taking by contract', and is used here of the quinquennial contract entered into with the state by the publicani who farmed the various branches of revenue. The groups of publicani competed at public auction for the right to collect the vectigalia. The leasing of the public revenues was the duty of the Censors.

§ 19

23. iste: iste is frequent in the forensic orations as applied to the orator's opponent, often with a touch of contempt. It is so used here of Mithridates; trans. 'this'. Cf. istorum qui huic obtreant legi in 21. 16, and isti principes in 64. 16 and 20.

initio belli Asiatici: the First Mithridatic War.

25. cum . . . amiserunt: alluding to the financial crisis of 89 B.C., which, however, was due chiefly to the Social War. Amiserunt is the reading of H.; if the vulg. amiserant be retained it should be noted that cum with a pluperfect indicative generally expresses indefinite frequency, cum then being used in the same sense as quoties, 'as often as', 'whenever'; e.g. cum consul abfuerat, seditiosi erant, 'they were mutinous whenever the consul was absent'. Here this would not be the case, as the verb is restricted to a definite point of past time by the foregoing tum.

26. solutions . . . condidisse, 'payments were suspended and credit collapsed'; or use our phrase 'tightness of money' for solutione impedita.

2. ut non, 'without . . .'. An example of the restrictive use of ut, but here without ita in the principal clause. Cf. note on 8. 10, 11, and see the following sentence for another instance.

4. mihî credite: parenthetical and without influence upon the construction. Credo and opinor are often thus used.

5. haec fides . . . pecuniarum, 'our public credit and existing financial system'.

5-8. haec . . . illis . . . illa . . . haec: an example of Chiasmus (χιασμός, from χιάζω, 'to place crosswise'), i.e. the order of words in the two contrasted series is inverted in order to make the antithesis more striking. Here this leads to breach of the usual distinction in virtue of which hic . . . ille = 'the latter . . . the former'.

6. in foro. The bankers' offices (tabernae argentariae or argentariorum) stood in two rows along the two longer sides of the Forum. The row on the south-west side was called Tabernae veteres, that on the north-east side Tabernae novae; in time the former gave place to the Basilica Julia, the latter to the Basilica Aemilia. The phrase in foro, therefore, corresponds to our expression 'Lombard Street', or 'on 'Change'. Point would be given to the word haec by the fact that the tabernae were visible to the audience standing in the Comitium about the Rostra. Trans. 'money-market'.

8, 9. Quare videte sums up the first section of the speech, giving the four grounds upon which the necessity of the war was based.

§ 20

15, 16. belli genus . . . necessarium: for bellum genere ipso necessarium, which is the expression actually employed in 27. 2. Bellum, not belli genus, is the subject of non esse ita magnum. See note on 6. 16, 17.

16, 17. esse . . . non esse: an example of asyndeton or omission of the conjunction (here an adversative conjunction, 'but', 'however'). The omission gives vigour to the contrast.

17. In quo, 'on this point' (= in qua re).

23. etius adventu, 'at the time of his arrival'; a different sense from that of uno aditu adventuque lower down.

Mithridati: probably genitive, an alternative form to Mithridatis. Cf. 23. 5, ex Tigrani regno. It is, of course, possible to take Mithridati here as dative.

24-26. instructas fuisse . . . oppressam esse: in Orat. Rect. these would be instructae erant . . . obsidebatur—the first expressing a result already achieved, the second an action still continuing, at the time of the arrival of Lucullus.

25. Cyzicenorum. Cyzicus was one of the first cities in Asia for size and beauty (so Strabo, writing about 18 A.D.). It was made a Free State (libera civitas) by the Romans for its loyalty in the war against Mithridates.

29. liberavit. As this is the verb of a subordinate clause in indirect narration the subjunctive might be expected; but the indicative used in the relative clause has the effect of removing it, as it were, from its surroundings, and thus emphasizing the fact which it states.

§ 21

1. ducibus Sertorianis; some take this to be ablative absolute, like ducibus dis immortalibus in 50. 13, but I do not think this is possible; more probably the case is dative of the agent, which is not infrequent, especially with the Perf. Pass., cf. mihi res tota provisae est (Cic. Verr. iv. 42. 91). This construction rather than the more usual ablative with a is used here probably because of the preceding ab eodem imperatore.

5. Pontum. The kingdom of Pontus, not the Pontic (Euxine) Sea.

6. ex omnia aditu: the usual preposition after verbs of excluding is ab. Perhaps, however, the phrase is adverbial, and means 'at every point by which approach was possible'; cf. Verr. iv. 53, 117, nam et situ est quam munito, tum ex omni aditu . . . praeclaro ad aspectum; Phil. i. 25, omnes exaudentur aditus; Pro Caec. 35, primo aditu vestibuloque prohibuerint.

9, 10. uno aditu. Uno seems here to have the same sense as ipso.

11. alios reges, vis. first to Tigranes in Armenia, and then with Tigranes to the Parthian King Phraates; alias gentes therefore signifies Armenians and Parthians.

13. salvis . . . integris, i.e. without oppressing the provincials by forced contributions, and without heavy demands on the state chest; e.g. a vote of 3000 talents for the fleet was refused by Lucullus, according to Plutarch.

14. laudis; partitive genitive, depending on satis. For the reading see Crit. App.

§ 22

2. magnum: from its position emphatic and part of the predicate.

5. Ponto. Pontus, properly a district in the north-east of Asia Minor, is here used in a wider sense to include Colchis, still farther to the north-east, which actually belonged to the kingdom of Mithridates.

Medea illa, 'Medea famous in story'—a common use of ille. Long points out that in his treatise De Nat. Deorum, § 67, Cicero has quoted some verses from an old poet, which were probably in his memory when he wrote the present passage. Some of the lines run as follows:—

*perque agros passim dispergit corpus: id ea gratia, ut, dum nati dissipatos artus captaret parens,
ipsa interea effugeret, illum ut maeror tardaret sequi.*

7. fratris . . . parens, i.e. Absyrtus (in Greek Ἀψυρτος) . . . Acætes.

7, 8. se . . . persequeretur. The subjunctive is not necessarily due to the indirect statement, but would have been employed even in Orat. R. to imply the thought of Medea (possibly also because it represents a deliberative subj.). But the reflexive se can only be explained as due to the influence of the preceding sui; cf. Ad Att. 2. 7. Strictly, se should refer to parens, the subject of persequeretur; the preceding sui is, of course, quite normal, referring to the subject of its own sentence, which happens to be in the accusative (quam prædicant) owing to the indirect narration.

8. collectio dispersa. Usually regarded as a case of Hypallage, or transference of the epithet from the second substantive to the first, dispersa more properly belonging to eorum (= membrorum). See note on frequens conspectus vester in 1. 1.

15. diligentius, 'too carefully'; the same use of the comparative as in 11. 16.

16. illum . . . hos: = Acætes . . . the Romans.

§ 23

18. timore et fuga: an example of what is called hendiadys (from the Greek ἕν διὰ δύοῖν, 'one thing through two'), or the resolution of a substantive and epithet into two substantives—'fear and flight' for 'terror-stricken flight'. Vergil supplies the stock instance—pâtēris libāmus et auro, 'we make drink-offerings from bowls and gold (= golden bowls)'.

22. plures gentes, vis. the peoples subject to or allied with Tigranes.

24, 25. quas numquam . . . putavit. Cicero by implication censures Lucullus for carrying the war into the kingdom of Tigranes in the face of the reluctance of the Senate to be embroiled in the affairs of the far East. Bello must be taken only with laccessendas.

26. vehemens, 'fanatical'.

27. fani: supposed to be the temple of the Persian goddess Nanaca or Anaitis in Elymais, on the lower Euphrates—"the most celebrated and the richest shrine in the whole region of the Euphrates" (Mommsen, Rom. Hist., iv. 343, ed. 1894). But this seems too far removed from the scene of operations, and probably Cicero had no definite idea in his mind. "On no account can the allusion be to the temple of Comana or any shrine at all in the kingdom of Pontus" (Momms. l.c.).

3. novo quodam terrore. Notice this use of quidam to enhance the force of an epithet. Trans. by 'vague'.

5. ex Tigrani regno. Ex is used in order to avoid the occurrence together of two genitives, Tigrani regni. The form of expression adopted also brings into prominence the isolated character of the achievement—"captured a city out of all his realm". Cicero alludes thus disparagingly to the capture of the Armenian capital, Tigranocerta.

7. commovebatur: Cicero conceals the mutiny of the troops.

§ 24

12. [et eorum . . . collegerant]. Probably a gloss upon suam manum, for the two phrases must denote the same people, as opposed to the adventicia auxilia. If the words are retained, eorum must depend on auxiliis, unless some such word as copiis has fallen out.

2, 3. multorum opes: = multos opulentos. Cf. auctoritatem loci in 1. 8.

4, 5. ut . . . videatur. The meaning of this is somewhat obscure. It is possible to take the ut as consecutive, and attach the whole clause closely to the words vivunt in regno only—'those' who live under monarchical rule so that they regard the very name of king as something great and sacred'. Or the ut clause may be one of inferential generalization from the preceding—'so that apparently . . .', or, 'whence we gather that . . .':

§ 25

6, 7. victus . . . incolumis, 'in the hour of defeat . . . in the day of prosperity'.

7. est ausus optare. In English the conditional, 'would have ventured', would more naturally be used. Compare the Latin idiom in such phrases as melius fuit, for our 'it would have been better'; longum est narrare, 'it would be a long story'.

10. umquam. Umquam (like quisquam and its adjective ullus) is used only in clauses containing an expressed or an implied negative. Here the negative idea is implied in the preceding words: praeter spem = 'he had never hoped'.

11. victorem. The substantive is in apposition to exercitus, and so is virtually an adjective—'victorious'. Cf. the phrase tiro exercitus, 'a raw army'.

12. poëtae. Such were Cn. Naevius (240-202 B.C.), who wrote a history of the First Punic War in Saturnian verse, and Q. Ennius (239-170 B.C.), whose Annales, written in hexameter verse, gave the history of Rome from its foundation to his own day. It is, however, scarcely necessary to suppose that Cicero had any definite reference in his mind.

13. calamitatem: the defeat of Triarius in 67 B.C.

§ 26

18, 19. qui tamen . . . potuisset. Notice Cicero's ungenerous refusal to do justice to the undoubted military ability of Lucullus. Potuisset is a potential subjunctive, i.e. it forms part of the apodosis of a conditional sentence, the protasis of which is unexpressed, but can be supplied with greater or less readiness from the context; here 'if he had remained in command'.

21. veteris exemplo. Cicero is not honest in professing to appeal to precedent for the recall of Lucullus, as extension of command (prorogatio imperii) was no new thing, and was indeed the very object aimed at on behalf of Pompeius by the bill of Manilius. The earliest instance of prolongation of command after the expiry of the year of office is that of Q. Publilius Philo in 326 B.C.

22. stipendiis confectis: ablative of description—'whose time of service had expired'. If the vulg. confecti be read, trans. 'worn out by years of service', stipendiis then being an instrumental or causal ablative. The reading stipendiis confectis is that which corresponds with facts.

27. imperator noster, 'a general sent out from Rome', or 'by us'. Cf. 64. 4. By novus imperator here Glabrio is generally taken to be meant.

§ 27

4, 5. dicendum esse videatur. Ut dicerem or ut diceretur would have been sufficient. This superfluity of wording is a trick of style for which no real reason can be assigned, for the style of a great speaker or writer, the method by which certain effects are achieved, to a large extent defies analysis. Cf. perspicite quantum illud bellum factum putetis, in 26. 24, 25. Trans. 'I have still, perhaps, to speak'.

6. innocentium, 'with clean hands'—alluding to the charge industriously circulated at Rome, that Lucullus purposely prolonged the war in order to enrich himself.

11. antiquitatis memoriam: a compressed phrase for 'the glorious record of the heroes of the past', used for the sake of the parallelism with eorum . . . gloriam.

12. superarit: consecutive subjunctive, as unus . . . qui = vnus talis ut—'the one man of such character that . . .'

ulusquam. Quisquam, being confined to sentences in which there is a negative expressed or implied, is rightly used also in comparative sentences (which in reality deny equality in the specified point on the part of two things), and, as here, in questions to which a negative answer is expected; cf. quis . . . umquam . . . fuit in ll. 16, 17, below.

§ 28

15, 16. scientiam . . . felicitatem. It is not easy to get good English equivalents; perhaps 'technical knowledge, natural endowment, personal reputation, and luck'. Auctoritas might also be rendered 'prestige'.

17. hoc homine, i.e. Pompeius.

18. esse debuit, 'was bound to be'; i.e. had a right to claim the title scientior by virtue of early training.

19. bello maximo. The allusion is to the Marsic or Social War in 90 B.C., and to the Civil War against Cinna, which followed it in 87 B.C.

21, 22. summi imperatoris: his own father, Cn. Pompeius Strabo.

23. imperator, vis. when, before he was twenty-three, he raised forces in Picenum, and joined Sulla on his return from the East. Sulla himself saluted him as imperator on this occasion.

23, 24. hoste . . . inimico. Hostis is an enemy of one's country (consequently, in general a foreigner, sometimes a renegade, like Catiline); inimicus is a man's private enemy (in general, therefore, a fellow-countryman).

25. provincias confecit: either 'reduced to subjection more provinces', a phrase frequent in Livy (cf. Cic. De Inv. 2. 111, quosdam . . . consecratus est et confecit), or else provincias is used in the wider sense of 'commissions'.

2, 3. suis imperiis, 'under his own command'.

6. Civile: under Sulla against the younger Marius in 83 B.C., and against Cn. Papirius Carbo in Sicily in the following year. Also against the party of M. Aemilius Lepidus in Cisalpine Gaul in 77 B.C.

Africanum: against the remnant of the Marian party led by Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus, and Hiabas, a pretender to the throne of Numidia, in 81 B.C.

Transalpinum: against Gallic tribes incited by Sertorius to block his passage into Spain in 77 B.C.

7. Hispaniense: the war with Sertorius and Perpenna (76-72 B.C.).

7, 8. [mixtum . . . nationibus]. These words should be expunged, as this war does not call for description rather than the others. In any case civitatibus could hardly stand; civibus or civilibus is what is wanted.

8. servile: by cutting to pieces 5000 fugitives of the army of Spartacus in 71 B.C.

navale: the war against the pirates in 67 B.C.

11. esse: not to be joined with positam. Cf. 44. 3, desertam.

§ 29

13. Iam vero, 'further', introducing a transition to a more important consideration or illustration of the point.

21. quos . . . audivimus. Audire aliquem means 'to listen to a person': 'to hear about a person' is properly audire de aliquo; but audire is here assimilated in construction to videre.

§ 30

23-25. Testis est . . . testis . . . testis. Such repetition of a word at the beginning of successive clauses, for the sake of emphasis and solemnity, is called anäphöra.

24. liberatam: that is, from the tyranny of Marius and Cinna.

8. bello taetro. The Servile War was characterized by the barbarities practised by both sides upon their prisoners. It was "more a massacre than a war" (Mommsen, Rom. Hist., iv. 359, ed. 1894). Trans. 'the horrors and dangers of . . .'

11. sublatum . . . sepultum. The metaphor must be changed in translation.

§ 31

14. universa, 'taken as wholes', i.e. 'in their length and breadth'.

19. hieme. In winter (from about the middle of November to the middle of March) navigation generally ceased in the Mediterranean. Cf. Acts xxvii. 12 and xxviii. 11.

referto praedonum: the gen. is used after refertus here (like plenus) in order to avoid the concurrence of several ablatives in different senses.

19, 20. cum . . . navigaret, 'voyaging as he did'.

20. turpe, 'discreditable', to the Roman Government.

21. vetus: going back at least to 103 B.C.; see note on 33. 19.

22. arbitraretur, 'would have imagined'. A potential subjunctive; see on 26. 18, 19. It is used in questions which convey a negative opinion on the part of the speaker.

omnibus imperatoribus, i.e. qui nunc sunt, 'all present-day generals'; but omnibus annis, sc. vitae.

§ 32

27. cui praesidio classibus. Praesidio is a predicative dative, cui a dative of the person interested; classibus is an instrumental ablative. See note on vobis fructui sunt in 16. 20. Trans. by a verb.

30. captas urbes: Plutarch in his life of Pompeius says that four hundred cities were ravaged by the pirates.

1, 2. fuit . . . Fuit, 'was, but is no more'; so Vergil says fuit Ilium. Erat cannot be used in this sense.

3. propugnaculis imperii, i.e. the fleets and the troops in the frontier provinces.

5. dicam, 'am I to say'. Dicam here, as well as querar and dicam in the two succeeding sentences, are deliberative subjunctives, as is shown by commemorem in l. 13, below.

6. Brundisio. Most edd. follow the majority of MSS. in reading a Brundisio. H. omits the preposition. Names of towns from which one goes are generally in the ablative without a preposition; but it is argued that transmitto does not imply motion from as definitely as does such a word as proficiscor, so that the preposition may be inserted here for the sake of precision. In 35. 18 we have the usual mode of expression—Brundisio profectus est—although here also many MSS. read a Brundisio. The preposition should be omitted in both places. Brundisium or Brundisium (mod. Brindisi) was in ancient times, as it still is, the chief port of departure from Italy for the East.

7, 8. Qui . . . venirent. Supply the word legati, which is here used in its most general sense—'commissioners'. Venirent would more regularly have been venerint; but the tense is explained as representing veniebant, an imperfect of indefinite frequency—'who from time to time came'. The order is: cum legati p. Rom. redempti sint, querar eos captos esse qui ab exteris nationibus ad vos (legati) venirent.

9. redempti sint. Nothing is known of the episode to which Cicero alludes—if indeed it is not merely a piece of rhetorical exaggeration.

10. duodecim secures, i.e. two Praetors, as each praetor was attended in the provinces by six lictors, in the city by two only. The names of these two unfortunates are given by Plutarch as Sextilius and Vellinus. Secures is literally 'axes', put for lictors by the figure called metonymy, or transference of name. Compare our use of the words 'gun', 'bat', 'sabre', for 'sportsman', 'batsman', and 'trooper'. It was, of course, only outside the city that the bundle of rods (fascis) carried by the lictors contained the axe—the symbol of military jurisdiction against which there was no appeal.

§ 33

12. Cnidum. Cnidus was on the coast of Caria (the southwestern corner of Asia Minor). It possessed two harbours, and enjoyed a great trade, especially with Egypt, as it lay on the maritime highway (cf. Acts, xxvii. 7).

Colophonem. Colophon was in western Asia Minor, not far north of Ephesus. Near it was an oracle of Apollo of Clarus, which was plundered by the pirates.

Samum. Samos is the third in size of the four large islands lying off the coast of Asia Minor (the others being Lesbos, Chios, and Cos, in that order from north to south). Samos lay between Ephesus and Miletus (cf. Acts xx. 15, fol.). It possessed a famous temple of Hera (Lat. Juno), which the pirates plundered while Sulla was in Asia.

14. atque eos portus further defines vestros portus. Cf. regnat, et ita regnat in § 7.

15. quibus . . . ductis: as being the harbours in which the grain imported from Sicily, Africa, and Egypt was landed. The ports meant are those of which mention follows.

15, 16. in praedonum . . . potestatem. The accusative is pregnant, i.e. it expresses the process rather than the result. Some MSS, however, read potestate, which is simpler, though not preferable. This pregnant accusative with in seems to be an exceptional use confined to expressions containing esse, less frequently habere, and rarely other verbs. Cf. Cic. Div. 20. 66, quae in amicitiam populi Romani ditionemque essent; Phil. v. 7. 19, adesse in senatum iussit; Verr. 5. 38, in eorum potestatem portum futurum intellegebant, with which cf. Livy, xxiv. 1. 13, ut portus in potestatem Locrensium esset. It is probably an archaic usage.

17. Caletae: a seaport in the south of Latium, near the mouth of the Liris.

18. praetore. His name is unknown; he may have had the special duty of protecting the coast against the pirates.

19. Miseno. Misenum was a promontory of Campania, to the west of Naples. The emperor Augustus afterwards created a harbour on the east of the promontory, and made it the chief naval station on the western side of Italy.

eius ipsius. Although the name is not given, for reasons of delicacy, all would know that the reference was to the orator M. Antonius. He had been Praetor in 104 B.C., and was sent with the title of proconsul to Cilicia in 103 B.C.; he had defeated the pirates and triumphed in 102 B.C. The plural liberos is an exaggeration, as it was a daughter only that fell into the pirates' hands, while she was walking in the grounds of her father's villa at Misenum. She was ransomed for a large sum. This M. Antonius was the father of the M. Antonius Creticus who failed disgracefully against the pirates in his praetorship in 74 B.C. (and may therefore possibly be the Praetor alluded to in l. 18 above).

21. Ostionse. Ostium, as its name denotes, was the port at the mouth (ostium) of the Tiber, about sixteen miles distant from Rome; hence prope inspectantibus vobis.

22. labem atque ignominiam: possibly an example of hendiadys (see on 23. 18)—'blot and shame' for 'shameful blot'.

23-25. cum . . . oppressa est. Note that cum is here conjoined with an indicative—'at the time when . . .'; in l. 14 above, cum is conjoined with a subjunctive—'seeing that . . .'. This section contains also an example of the prepositional cum.

23, 24. ea, cui . . . esset: the subj. expresses the character—'a fleet of such importance as to require . . .'. The indicative would demand the omission of ea.

24. consul. His name is unknown; he was not necessarily on board at the time.

25. Pro di immortales! Pro (sometimes, but less correctly, written proh) is an interjection, and di immortales is vocative. Sometimes an accusative (often the word fidem) appears after pro, but this accusative really depends upon some suppressed verb like oro or obsecro.

27. brevi tempore: less than ninety days.

2. Oceani ostium, i.e. the Gaditanum fretum, or straits of Gibraltar. Cicero plays upon the word ostium ('portals' and 'port'). Notice the Chiasmus—ostium Tib. y Oceani ostium, and the antithesis—classem—navem, hostium—praedonum, videbatis—audiatis.

§ 34

4. a me: used instead of the more usual dative after the gerundive, perhaps to emphasize the idea of agency. See note on 6. 7, a vobis . . . consulendum.

4, 5. praetereunda non sunt. This should properly have been praetereundum non est. The plural is due to the influence of the haec placed at the beginning of the sentence, and treated as the subject of the main verb, not merely as nominative of its own dependent interrogative clause (qua . . . gesta sint).

7, 8. quam celeriter. There is here a slight irregularity of expression. The normal form would be tam brevi tempore . . . quam (understanding, of course, brevi tempore), or else tam celeriter . . . quam (understanding celeriter). Here these two possible modes are combined. In translating, omit celeriter, and say simply 'as' for quam.

8. belli impetus navigavit: a bold personification, the force of which lies in the verb. In the apparently similar passage in the Pro Murena, 15, 33, cum totius impetus belli ad Cysicenorun moenia exstitisset, the personification is less striking and poetical, as existit has lost its primary meaning of 'stand forth', and is in frequent use in the sense simply of 'to be'. Cicero was here perhaps recalling a line of the poet Ennius, labitur uncta carina, volat super impetus undas. The expression must be softened in English to something of the type of 'this war-cloud swept over the sea', or 'his warships flew'.

9. nondum tempestivo, i.e. in early spring, before the sailing season properly began (ineunte vere in 35. 2).

10, 11. adiit . . . exploravit . . . venit: not necessarily in all cases in person, but by means of his legati.

10. Africam: the territory in the neighbourhood of what had once been Carthage.

inde Sardiniam: see Crit. App.

11. frumentaria subsidia, 'sources of our grain supply', 'granaries'.

§ 35

13. in Italiam. Pompeius was compelled to return on account of the opposition in the city on the part of the Consul C. Calpurnius Piso to the levying of troops.

13, 14. duabus Hispaniis, viz., Hispania Citerior and Hispania Ulterior (so named, of course, from the Roman point of view). The two Provinces were organized in 197 B.C.

14. Gallia: probably the coast of that part of Gallia Transalpina or Gaul beyond the Alps which was called Gallia Narbonensis, or simply Provincia, a name which survives in the modern Provence, applied to the southern province of France, east of the Rhone (according to the division into provinces as before the Revolution of 1789). This part of Gaul had been a Roman Province from 121 B.C. Transalpine Gaul properly so called, i.e. Gaul N. of the Provincia, was first reduced by Julius Caësar. Some MSS. here read Transalpina; H. has Cisalpinga; probably the adjective should be omitted.

15. confirmata: the singular feminine, agreeing with the nearer subst., Gallia, makes the construction clearer than would have been the case if the more regular confirmatis had been used, owing to the presence of the other ablatives, praesidiis and navibus. H., however, has confirmatis.

16. Achaïam omnemque Graeciam. The name Achaia, according to the proper Greek usage, denoted only the territory on the northern coast of the Peloponnese; and although it was employed by the Romans to denote the entire land of Greece after its conquest in 146 B.C., yet in Cicero's time there was still some ambiguity attaching to it, so that the words omnemque Graeciam are here (and elsewhere in Cicero) added to indicate its use in the extended sense. Greece was probably not organized as a province (Provincia Achaia), as distinct from that of Macedonia, before the time of Augustus.

16, 17. duo maria: the Adriatic (mare superum), and the Tuscan or Tyrrhene sea (mare inferum).

18. ut = ex quo tempore. Cicero uses ut in this sense fairly often; cf. Ad Att. i. 15. 2, ut Brundisio profectus es, nullae mihi abs te sunt redditae litterae, and Brut. 5, ut illos libros edidisti, nihil a te postea accepimus. It is also found in comic drama.

20. Ciliciam, i.e. the western portion, called Cilicia Aspera or Trachea ('the Rugged'); the less mountainous eastern portion (Cilicia Campestris) had been a Roman Province since 102 B.C. Western Cilicia was a great stronghold of the pirates.

23. Oretensibus: dative after both ademit and imperavit. The pro-consul Quintus Metellus was at this time operating in Crete, but the Cretans, hoping for better terms, betook themselves to Pompeius, who claimed to have concurrent authority over the island with Metellus, by virtue of that clause in the Gabinian law which gave him authority over a distance of fifty miles from the sea. The result was a quarrel in which Pompeius was worsted.

usque in Pamphyliam: mere rhetoric, for Pamphylia was not very far from Crete. The Roman point of view is substituted for the Cretan. In § 46 there is a more flagrant specimen.

24. legatos deprecatoresque: hendiadys; trans. 'representatives to beg for terms'.

§ 36

5. ceteras, i.e. the moral and intellectual qualities, as distinguished from the purely military qualities (bellandi virtus) which have just been described.

paulo ante: referring probably to the hint contained in the words neque enim illae sunt solae virtutes imperatoriae, in 29. 16.

10. innocentia. See note on 27. 6.

13. qualia, i.e. the colour or complexion they take in the case of Pompeius; for in his case it is not a question of degree (quanta), as he possesses them in the fullest possible measure (summa).

15. ex aliorum contentione, 'from a comparison with others'. The references in the following section are to contemporaries, but the key is lost.

§ 37

17, 18. ullo in numero: 'count as such at all'.

18. cuus . . . veneant: the subjunctive is generic, a variety of the consecutive, after the relative indicating a constant characteristic—'the sort of man that . . .'

centuriatus. There were sixty centurions in each legion, appointed through the six military Tribunes by the commander-in-chief, i.e. the Consul or pro-consul. Appointment as centurion was the reward of merit for the rank and file in the legion.

19, 20. Quid . . . cogitare: supply possumus putare, with a slight change of meaning in the word putare ('reckon' . . . 'imagine').

22. provinciae: supply retinendae, not accipiendae; the general in the case assumed (though Cicero has, of course, some definite name in his mind) holds office (provincia), otherwise he could not have touched public money, but hopes by bribery (magistratibus diviserit) to secure prolongation of his command.

23. in quaestu reliquerit, 'left invested'.

2. nisi . . . confiteri, 'unless it be one who chooses first to admit his own guilt'; or, as we say, 'one need not put the cap unless it fits'. Ante, sc. quam irascatur: the clause in a clause introduced by antequam (or priusquam) is indicative when mere sequence is denoted, in the subjunctive when there is present any notion of anticipating or awaiting; so here, admission of guilt is a necessary preliminary to the display of anger.

4. ventum est. If a thing be spoken of that is repeatedly or customarily done, the perfect is used in subordinate propositions which express time, condition, or place, if the action of the subordinate is to be supposed as antecedent to that of the leading proposition (in English the present is generally used). The mood shows that here the clause is no part of the indirect question.

adferant, 'bring in their train', 'their coming is the signal for'.

§ 38

6-8. Itinera quae . . . fecerint: quae is here not the relative, but, as the subjunctive shows, the interrogative; itinera precedes quae for the sake of emphasis, as in causa quae sit, videtis in 6. 13.

7. odium Romanorum: the bulk of the Italians had received Roman citizenship by (1) the Lex Julia of 90 B.C. giving the full franchise to all allied and Latin cities which had not joined in the Social War, and (2) the Lex Plautia Papiria of 89 B.C., which offered the civitas to the cities which were in arms.

9. seri existimetis. See note on videte . . . putetis in 11. 13, 14.

11. libernis. All provincial towns, with the exception of those standing in a privileged position, i.e. cities with treaties (civitates foederatae), or those with charters (civitates liberae), were liable to have troops quartered upon them. Great sums were often paid for exemption from this burden, which suggested a frequent form of exaction to unscrupulous governors.

§ 39

16. Et, 'and then' (= cum ita se res habeat).

18, 19. non modo . . . sed ne . . . quidem; for non modo non . . . sed ne . . . quidem. When the same predicate serves both clauses, and the second clause is negative, the second non is omitted after non modo as it can be supplied from the following ne . . . quidem. Here, the common predicate is cuiquam . . . dicatur. So also in the sentence next but one following.

18. manus . . . vestigium: a somewhat forced antithesis between the acts of the troops and their passage through the country. Trans. 'so that no peaceful provincial has suffered aught either at the hands of all those thousands, or even from their mere passage through the country'. Manus may refer to personal outrage, vestigium to damage done by foraging parties to crops and cattle; or, if manus be taken to cover both the above, vestigium must be limited to the damage done by actual marching, as over standing corn. But no one, of course, can take the words seriously.

tanti exercitus: tantus has here a concessive force—'though so large'.

20. hibernant: the tense is quite accurate, as the troops of Pompeius were at that moment in Cilicia (so dicatur in the previous sentence).

23, 24. hiemis . . . avaritiae: both words depend upon perfugium, but in different senses—'a shelter not for avarice (subjective genitive), but from the wintry blast' (objective genitive). But the meaning is not so simple as it looks. For what really does avaritiae perfugium signify? Long rightly points out that the words must indicate a place to which avarice resorts to satisfy itself, not to hide; in other words, the antithesis is one of sound, not of sense.

§ 40

1. Age vero: a common formula of transition. The plural is not necessarily employed, even though a plural verb (considerate) follows so closely.

3. cursum: cursus, from curro, signifies rapid motion, and when combined with an adjective like incredibilis or tantus is best rendered 'rapidity'. The word also occurs in this section in its more ordinary sense of 'course'.

inventum, 'what is the secret of . . .'

4. eximia vis romigum, 'picked crews', such as would naturally be selected for service on the flagship.

9. amoenitas: always in classical Latin of the charm of natural scenery.

10. nobilitas urbis: alluding perhaps to the visit of Pompeius to Athens, where he stopped only long enough to offer sacrifice and address the people.

13. osteri. Cicero's mind would go back especially to Verres, who had despoiled the Sicilian cities of their art-treasures (ornamenta) in 73-71 B.C.; but few Roman governors could resist the temptation to beautify their mansions in Italy at the expense of the Greek cities.

ea: redundant, reminding signa . . . ornamenta after the relative clause.

§ 41

18. fuisse, 'that there really had lived Romans who in the old times exhibited the self-control once more (hac) exemplified'.

19. quod. The antecedent is the clause fuisse . . . continentia.

22, 23. ea temperantia: ablative of description, like hac . . . continentia, above, and humanitate . . . tanta, below. Note that this ablative must always be accompanied by an adjective or its equivalent. A distinction often drawn between the ablative of description and the genitive of description or quality—that the former generally expresses some temporary or external characteristic—seems to have little validity.

23. habebamus. The indicative in the subordinate clause lays stress upon the fact; the subjunctive would express it as a thought in the mind of the subject of the main verb.

25. liberae, 'unhindered'.

1. infirmis par, 'on a level with the humblest'.

§ 42

4. quaedam, 'an indefinable'; the same use as in 23. 3.

5, 6. hoc ipso ex loco, i.e. the Rostra from which he is speaking. But the preceding ipso means 'apart from all other considerations', 'taken on its own merits'.

6. Fidem, 'word of honour'.

8. Humanitate. Put first in order to secure a more formal parallelism to fidem; the result is to throw iam, 'further', slightly out of place.

11. Et quisquam, 'and after that . . .'. Et is often used in this sense to introduce an indignant question, like the Greek dra. Cf. 45. 27. Quisquam is used because the question is purely rhetorical, i.e. it is really a negative statement in disguise.

13. nostrae memoriae, 'of our time'—a genitive of quality or description. Abstract for Concrete.

14. divino quodam consilio, 'by special dispensation of Providence'. For quodam see note on 23. 3.

§ 43

17. ea re, i.e. auctoritate, 'prestige'.

21. in tantis rebus, 'in such a position that . . . '.

21, 22. contemnant . . . ament. The first pair of verbs applies to hostes, the second pair to socii.

2. iudicia, vis. by the honours conferred upon him. Cf. 2. 3.

§ 44

3. An vero introduces an example of the iudicia mentioned in the previous section, and proves the statement quod igitur nomen . . . fuit.

4. quo=ut eo, 'so distant that to it . . .'; the subjunctive pervaserit being consecutive.

Illius [diei]: if diei be retained the reference is to the day on which the proposals of Gabinius were brought before the Comitia Tributa in 67 B.C. See Crit. App.

6. templis, i.e. the steps of the temples surrounding the Forum, especially those of Vesta and of Castor and Pollux on the south-east side, and those of Saturn and of Concordia on the west, at the foot of the Capitol.

7. commune, 'in which all were interested'.

9. ut plura non dicam. The non goes with dicam so closely as to form practically a compound word, and ut is final. Similar expressions are ut taceam and ut cetera omittam, 'to say no more'. Some prefer to explain the ut as consecutive, in which case the non following it is quite regular; normally, of course, the negative final conjunction is ne, not ut non.

11, 12. ab eodem . . . sumantur, 'let us look to Pompeius alone for our example of all that is excellent'.

14. vilitas. The truth about this famous anecdote is simply that the speculators in grain, who had been holding their stocks for the rise, now began to realize, and so brought about a falling market. The magnitude of the powers conferred upon Pompeius convinced them that at last the government was in earnest.

ex summa inopia. Ex has here a temporal force—'following upon'; but it is used immediately afterwards, in the expression ex eo proelio, in a causal sense—'as the result of'. The connection between the two senses is the idea of one thing arising out of another, as effect from cause, or merely as a sequence to it. If the vulg. ex . . . ubertate be read in l. 16, ex is there also used in a causal sense; but in is the better reading.

15. unius hominis. The genitive is used in a double sense—objectively with spe, 'our hope in', and possessively or subjectively with nomine.

§ 45

18. proello: the defeat of Triarius, alluded to in 25. 13 (paulo ante).

22. Quirites. The insertion of this word here imparts solemnity to the statement.

22, 23. ad ipsum . . . temporis, 'to meet the emergency of that critical moment', or 'at the decisive moment of the crisis'. Cf. the phrase ad tempus, 'just at the right moment', 'in the nick of time'.

23. ad eas regiones, 'to that part of the world', not 'to those regions', as until the proposal of Manilius should become law Pompeius was confined by the terms of the Gabinian law to the Mediterranean area.

2. imperio atque exercitu. Hendiadys—'with an army at his back'.

§ 46

5. illa, 'the following', as in 3. 11.

7. longinquis . . . diversis: in the same sense as disiunctissimis maximeque diversis in 9. 24.

9. a communi Cretensium. See Crit. App. The word commune is frequently used by Cicero in the Verrine orations as = τὸ κοινόν ('federal government'); usually in the abl. case, e.g. Verr. ii. 114 (cf. §§ 154, 168) a communi Siciliae; ib. i. 95, commune Milyadum. The κοινόν or Diet of the Cretans was formed at the end of the third century B.C.

10. noster imperator, 'a general of Rome', vis. Q. Metellus Pius, surnamed Creticus. For noster cf. 26. 27.

14. legatum. According to all other authorities, Mithridates negotiated with Sertorius, the enemy of Rome, and this Cicero admits in § 9. It has been suggested that Pompeius found a spy (speculator) in his camp, and out of vanity pretended that the king wished to open negotiations with him.

15, 16. quibus erat molestum, vis. Metellus and his circle. Metellus Pius, the colleague of Pompeius in Spain, was his senior, and saved him from defeat there; but Cicero wishes to cast a slight upon Metellus. As regards the grammar, the subject of erat is the whole infinitive clause (eum) . . . esse missum; the infinitive clause, speculatorem . . . iudicari, is the object after maluerunt.

§ 47

25. aequum est. Supply dicere, to which homines is the subject accusative.

25, 26. de potestate deorum, 'about a matter which lies in the hands of the gods'.

1. Maximo. Quintus Fabius Maximus. By standing obstinately on the defensive he staved off Hannibal's attack upon Rome in the Second Punic War, and earned by his strategy the surname of Cunctator ('Lingerer'). He held the consulship five times.

Marcello. Marcus Claudius Marcellus, the conqueror of Syracuse after a two years' siege (212 B.C.). 'He was the spear of Rome, as Fabius was her shield', in the Second Punic War. He fell in a reconnaissance in his fifth consulship (208 B.C.).

Scipioni. Rome saw two great men of this name. If Cicero here alludes to the Scipio mentioned in § 60 (where also the name of Marius follows immediately), Scipio Aemilianus, the younger son of Lucius Aemilius Paulus, is meant. He was adopted by Publius Scipio, the eldest son of Scipio Africanus Maior, the conqueror of Hannibal; hence after adoption his name in full would run, P. Corn. Scipio Aemilianus. By his destruction of Carthage in 146 B.C., bringing to an end the Third Punic War, he gained the title Africanus, which his adoptive grandfather had himself won by his victory over Hannibal at Zama at the end of the Second Punic War in 202 B.C. These two are distinguished as the Elder (Maior) and Younger (Minor) respectively.

2. Mario. Gaius Marius, seven times Consul, born at Arpinum in 157 B.C. He brought the war with Jugurtha in Africa to an end (106 B.C.), and saved Rome from the Cimbric and Teutonic hordes by his victory in 102 B.C. at Aquae Sextiae, in southern Gaul, and at Vercellae in N. Italy in 101 B.C.

ceteris . . . imperatoribus: especially Sulla, whose name is omitted in favour of that of Marius to avoid offending the susceptibilities of the people.

5. quaedam, 'mysterious', 'inexplicable'; as in §§ 23, 42.

6. ad, 'to the attainment of'.

§ 48

16. ut: perhaps 'how'; gesserit . . . obsecundarint being subjunctives in indirect question. Or the ut may be consecutive, after quanta felicitate.

17. adsonserint: more usually a deponent.

18. venti: contrast 40. 5.

hoc, 'just this'.

20, 21. qui . . . auderet: the subjunctive is consecutive—'so presumptuous as to . . .'

22, 23. illi proprium: in 32. 2 proprium is combined with a genitive; here with the dative (of personal interest) owing to the addition of perpetuum.

§ 49

4-6. quin . . . conferatis: dubitare in the sense of 'to hesitate' is generally constructed with an infinitive. As, however, the rhetorical question is virtually negative, quin is rightly used here after dubito.

4. boni: partitive genitive, depending on hoc tantum. Cicero means the chance of appointing a general like Pompeius.

5, 6. in rem publicam conservandam. The gerundive with a substantive (like the perfect participle passive in similar circumstances) is often equivalent to an English abstract noun—'to the safety and honour of the state'. The usual preposition after conferre (a favourite word with Cicero) is ad, not in as here.

§ 50

8. erat deligendus, 'would have had to be chosen'. This is the apodosis of a conditional sentence (the protasis being quodsi . . . esset). When the condition is represented as not fulfilled in the present, the imperfect subjunctive is used in both protasis and apodosis; but the verb sum accompanied by a gerund or verbal adjective (also the verbs possum, debeo, oportet, decet, licet) are commonly used in a past tense of the indicative in an apodosis where other verbs would require to be in the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive. "This is done when the leading proposition may be in a manner conceived as independent of the condition, and valid in itself" (Madvig).

12. qui habent, i.e. the other generals at the seat of war—Lucullus, Glabrio, and Marcius Rex.

14. cetera: perhaps it is best to understand quae a vobis commissa sunt; but some supply bella. Summa is ablative with cum salute—trans. 'to . . .'

15. bellum regium, 'war with King Mithridates'.
commendamus: the reading of H.; see Crit. App. If the vulg. committamus be retained, it is dubitative subjunctive—
 'why should we not . . .'

§ 51

16. At enim, 'but you will tell me'. This is a constant formula of introduction of supposed objections, which the orator forthwith demolishes in turn. In Greek ἀλλὰ γὰρ is so used. With this section begins the refutatio of the arguments of opponents.

17. beneficiis: important magistracies. Cf. 68. 7; 69. 25.

18. Catulus. Quintus Lutatius Catulus (son of Q. Lutatius Catulus, the colleague of Marius in 102 B.C. against the Cimbri and Teutones) had been Consul in 78 B.C., and was now princeps senatus and leader of the party of the nobles (Optimates).

honoris, 'public office'; here his consulship in 69 B.C., with Q. Caecilius Metellus, is meant.

fortunaē: Hortensius was a man of immense wealth.

19. Hortensius. Quintus Hortensius, born in 114 B.C., had no rival as a forensic orator until Cicero appeared. The two men were often arrayed on opposite sides, especially in the famous prosecution of Verres for extortion in Sicily (70 B.C.). Hortensius died in 50 B.C.

21. multis locis: not local, but temporal—'on many occasions'.

22, 23. cognoscitis . . . contrarias. The meaning is obscure. Who are the virī fortissimi of l. 23? Possibly Catulus and Hortensius, in which case contrarias means 'opposed to the proposals of Manilius' (and the reading of H., cognoscitis in that case preferable); or the words look forward to § 68, and the virī are those there mentioned, in which case contrarias means 'opposed to the views of Catulus and Hortensius' (this view gives some colour to the vulg. reading cognoscetis).

24, 25. ipsa re ac ratione, 'by the logic of facts'.

2. isti: the opponents of the present measure. See on 19. 23. Trans. 'our friends'.

§ 52

8. re, 'facts'. Cicero means the results of the Gabinian law.

13. promulgasset = promulgavisset. Promulgare is to publish the text of a proposal; this had to be done for the space of a trinum nundinum, i.e. three nundina, or weeks of eight days, before the date of meeting of the Comitia for voting. Some, however, hold that the minimum interval was seventeen days only, taking trinum nundinum to mean for three nundinae (= the first day of the eight-day week) counting inclusively after the Roman method. During this interval it was open for any official to summon a public meeting (contio) for the purpose of addressing the people on the proposal. On the nundinae, however, neither contio nor comitia could be held.

§ 53

16. tum, 'on that occasion', in contrast to the following hodie; it is not the inferential tum ('then' = 'therefore').

18, 19. valuisset . . . teneremus: notice the change of tense, the pluperfect expressing single or momentary action, the imperfect continuous action in present time (the imperfect might also express repeated or continuous action in past time). Such change is, of course, not to be regarded as an irregularity in the construction of conditional sentences. Trans. 'if . . . had prevailed . . . be now possessing'.

19. hanc gloriam . . . imperium, 'this glorious world-wide empire'. See note on 23. 18.

21. legati . . . praetoresque: quaestores praetoresque not in apposition to legati, but three different grades of officials are enumerated. For legati refer to § 32, where also the capture of two Praetors with their lictors is alluded to; the Quaestors would also be on their staff.

§ 54

2. satis late, 'of some extent', i.e. large for so early a period, but not to be compared with the extent of the Roman empire. At the height of her power Athens held sway over practically the whole of the Aegean sea, the Propontis, and many of the important towns on the coasts of Thrace and Asia Minor.

3. Carthaginiensium. The western third of the Mediterranean was practically a Carthaginian preserve until the outbreak of the First Punic War (264 B.C.). The greater part of Sicily, the whole of Sardinia and Corsica, and the Spanish and North African coasts were in Carthaginian hands.

4. Rhodium. The island of Rhodes attained great eminence as a maritime power after the death of Alexander the Great (323 B.C.). The Rhodians rendered assistance to Rome in the Mithridatic Wars; but their commerce was ruined when the Romans declared the island of Delos a free port in 168 B.C.

12. permanserit: the subjunctive is concessive—'although her name has . . .'; invictum must be taken with it as part of the predicate, not with nomen.

§ 55

15. Antiochum. Antiochus III, the Great, who ruled over Syria from 223 B.C. to 187 B.C. He invaded Greece, but was defeated at Thermopylae (191 B.C.). The Romans next, as a preliminary to carrying the war into Asia, gained the command of the Aegean by several naval battles; in these they were assisted by the Rhodians, who in particular defeated Hannibal and the Syrian fleet near the mouth of the river Eurymedon in Pamphylia.

Persenque. Perseus, or Perses, was the last king of Macedonia (179–167 B.C.). He was defeated by L. Aemilius Paulus at Pydna in 168 B.C. As a matter of fact, the Roman fleet did very little in the war, and Perseus surrendered without a blow in Samothrace to the Praetor Cn. Octavius.

16. omnibusque: national vanity makes Cicero forget the disasters of the First Punic War, especially the loss of ninety-three ships at Drepanum under P. Claudius (249 B.C.). H. omits the words.

18. ¶: this resumes nos, with a change of person from first to third, the first being again adopted in the verb (poteramus). So idem in this same section. Trans. 'we, I say . . .'

22. Delus. The smallest of the Cyclades, the group of islands occupying the western part of the Aegean sea. During the period of Greek independence it was celebrated as the legendary scene of the birth of Apollo. As early as 168 B.C. it was declared a free port, and so inherited the commerce of Rhodes. After the destruction of Corinth in 146 B.C. it became the chief emporium of the eastern Mediterranean, a rôle for which its central position on the highway of trade fitted it. It was the chief slave mart of the Roman world. The admirals of Mithridates plundered and ruined the island, which is now deserted.

27. Appia . . . via. The Via Appia, the 'queen of Roman roads', and perhaps the first one built, bore the name of the Censor Appius Claudius Caecus (Censor in 312 B.C.). It ran to Tarracina and thence along the coast until it struck inland to Capua. Subsequently it was continued through Beneventum and Tarentum to Brundisium, and so became the great highway of travellers to and from the East. The 'Three Taverns' and 'Appii Forum' mentioned in Acts xxviii. 15 were stations on this road.

carebamus, 'were forced to avoid'.

1. et, 'and then'; indignant, as in 42. 11, 45. 27.
 3. exuvii nauticis: the beaks (rostra) of the war-ships of Antium. See note on 1. 2.

§ 56

1. bono animo, 'with good intent', 'honest purpose' (= ex animo). Usually the phrase means 'with good courage'.

Hortensal. The use of the vocative is no proof that Hortensius was present.

3. et ea: supply dicere.

§ 57

10. Quo, 'wherefore'. Cf. 13. 17.

10, 11. obtrectatum esse: impersonal; trans. 'the carping opposition to . . .'

11. anne: for the simple an; dicam is deliberative or dubitative subjunctive.

12. ne legaretur. The legati in the army were chosen by the Senate, but the nominations were as a rule in accord with the suggestions or wishes of the commander on whose staff they were to serve. By the Lex Gabinia Pompeius was given the right to choose his own legati. Two things, however, stood in the way of his nominating Gabinus himself as one of his legati. In the first place, Gabinus, being Tribune of the Commons, could not leave Rome during his year of office (67 B.C.). In the second place, the Lex Licinia and the second Lex Aebutia enacted that neither he who proposed a law for giving a commission for any special purpose (curatio ac potestas), nor his colleagues, nor his kin, could directly or indirectly benefit by holding office under its terms (Cic., Leg. Agr., 2. 21). The instances which Cicero adduces, of men who had held the position of legatus the year following their tribunate, prove absolutely nothing, as no one denied the possibility or legality of that, provided that the provisions of the Lex Aebutia were not infringed. Pompeius allowed his right of choice to lapse to the Senate, and seems to have asked the Senate to nominate Gabinus, in spite of that law, on the expiry of his tribunate in December of 67 B.C. There was no technical objection whatever to Gabinus being legatus to Pompeius under the terms of the Manilian proposal, if that became law, and he actually did serve under Pompeius in the Mithridatic War; consequently Cicero's tall talk of his own intentions is meant merely to tickle the ears of the mob.

13. expetenti ac postulanti: the participles have a concessive force—'though he . . .'

21. periculo: because Gabinius, as the lator legis, was responsible for its results; the failure of Pompeius to achieve his task would have been the signal for the prosecution and ruin of Gabinius. Moreover, we are told that Gabinius was all but slain in the Senate-house when he introduced his proposals.

§ 58

1, 2. Falcidius . . . Lentulus. Nothing is known of these persons, beyond the inference, drawn from the use of the complimentary phrase quos . . . nomino ('whom I mention with all due respect'), that they were living contemporaries of Cicero. Apparently they were not legati of Pompeius.

1-4. An . . . potuerunt: in grammar, this sentence is coordinate with the following sentence, in uno Gabinio, &c., but in logic is subordinate to it. Trans. 'while Falcidius . . ., are they so scrupulous'.

4. diligentes, 'careful to observe minutiae', a word which admits the formal correctness of his opponents' attitude of opposition to the request of Pompeius. To whom does the word refer? Hardly to the persons named, but to 'people' in general.

5. hoc bello: the war with the pirates (hoc, of course, does not imply that it was still continuing).

gereretur: the subj. gives the ground.

7. praecipuo iure esse debbat, 'though he ought to have enjoyed special privileges', taking praecipuo iure as an ablative of description. Some prefer to supply the word legatus, and trans. 'though he ought by special right to have been on the staff', i.e. he had a better claim than any other man to be nominated; on this way of taking the words, praecipuo iure is an ablative of manner equivalent to potissimum, and really conceals a protasis ('if claims had been properly weighed', or some such phrase).

9, 10. ego . . . relaturum: ad senatum referre is the technical term for introducing a motion before the Senate. Cicero, as Praetor, had this right, but anyone who held the same or a higher office might veto the introduction of his motion. The Consuls had in addition the power to issue a decree declaring any particular proposal out of order—to this the word iniquitas refers. The possibility of enforcing the prohibition as a standing order for the year would depend entirely upon the personal influence of the Consuls in the House. Finally, the Tribunes of the Commons might veto any course of action, in spite of the Senate's approval of it. As the Tribunes were officers of the people, they would, Cicero here pretends, respect the popular determination to have Gabinius on the staff of Pompeius.

10. iniquitas, 'unreasonableness', as exhibited in a veto.

11. vestrum ius beneficiumque: vestrum means 'proceeding from you', 'granted by you'—vis. the 'right and favour' of naming his own legati conceded to Pompeius by the Lex Gabinia. The special grant of this right was held by Pompeius to override the provisions of the Leges Licinia and Aebutia, which blocked his desire to nominate Gabinius himself. Some interpret 'your right (sc. to appoint whom you will, in spite of technical obstacles) and your gift' (sc. your grant of the position of legatus to Gabinius). The words might also mean 'the rights and the office bestowed by you', i.e. Cicero's own official position. The obscurity of the whole passage is intentional.

12. intercessio, 'the veto', either of a colleague or of a Consul, as above explained, or of a Tribune of the Commons; the latter is what Cicero has especially in his mind.

14. quid liceat, 'how far they may go'—in thwarting the popular desire.

14-19. Mea . . . confect. This sentence is a good example of Cicero's popular oratory. Though it purports to take the audience into his confidence and to reveal his real thoughts, using the address Quirites to arrest attention, the meaning is of the vaguest. What is really the significance of the words socius adscribitur? The reason which professes to be stated in the concluding lines is nothing but a meaningless inversion of what is simply a play on words.

§ 59

20, 21. auctoritate et sententia. Hendiadys — 'influential opinion'.

21. dicendum esse videatur: a very pronounced case of that superfluity to which attention was called in the note on 11, 13, 14. One reason for the superfluity lies in Cicero's excessive fondness for ending his period with the words esse videatur or esse videantur—a trick which incurred the ridicule of his contemporaries. This combination, with others of the same type (e.g. esse fateantur in 64, 22, esse audiatis in 33, 2), occurs more than a dozen times in this speech.

22. quaereret: namely, in some contio in which he had spoken against the Gabinian proposal.

21 . . . 21, 'if . . . and'.

22, 23. si quid eo factum esset, 'and anything happened to him'; a euphemism like the Greek εὐ εἰς ἄθανάτου for dying. In this sense ſio is constructed with dat. abl. or abl. with de.

23. in quo: quo is interrogative, introducing a dependent question.

25. cum, 'in that', implying cause (= eo quod, 'by the fact that you all cried'). Cf. Ad. Fam. ix. 14. 3, gratulor tibi cum tantum vales apud Dolabellam, 'I wish you joy now that you enjoy such influence with D.'

6, 7. virī . . . virtute. The editors call attention to the alliteration, but do not suggest what it was intended to convey. It is, of course, merely accidental and of no moment.

§ 60

8. At enim: see note on 51. 16. The words ne quid introduce the warning or protest of Catulus, and possibly, with what follows, are an actual quotation from his speech.

8, 9. exempla atque instituta: trans. as a hendiadys — 'traditional usage'.

9. Non dicam: a good example of the rhetorical figure called praeteritio, in which the orator professes to omit what he is all the time asserting and emphasizing. It is one of the commonest devices of the public speaker. For other examples in this speech, see §§ 21, Nam quid ego Ostiense, &c., and 48. 14. hoc loco, 'here', 'at this point'.

11, 12. novos casus . . . rationes, 'varied their policy to suit new emergencies' (lit. 'adapted the calculations of new plans to new conditions of circumstances')—a characteristically Ciceronian amplification of the simple ad nova tempora (nova) consilia accommodasse.

13. Poenicum atque Hispaniense: the Third Punic War (149–146 B.C.), and the war with Viriathus in Spain which was brought to an end by the capture of Numantia (133 B.C.). Note that in §§ 10, 28, Hispaniense refers to the last phase of the Civil War, the struggle with Sertorius.

17. Scipione: the Younger Scipio. See note on 47. 1. In 147 B.C. he was elected to the consulship, though below the legal age, and standing only for the aedileship. Again, in 134 B.C. he was elected Consul for the Spanish War, in spite of the existence of a law (passed about 150 B.C.) forbidding the holding of a second consulship.

nuper: in reality forty years before the date of this speech.

18. esse visum, 'you resolved'. In the case of Marius the standing order forbidding re-election to the consulship was set aside.

20. Teutonis: Teutōni, not Teutōnēs, is the classical prose form.

§ 61

23. [summa] . . . voluntate: because sanctioned by the Optimates, of which party Catulus was the recognized leader. But summa (omitted by H.) is clearly an assumption on Cicero's part.

24. privatum: not to be taken with exercitum but with adulescentulum—'that a stripling holding no official position should . . .'

25. conficere, 'to raise', 'to levy'; confecit, 'but he did . . .'

26, 27. Rem . . . gerere: alluding to his first victories, over the Marians commanded by L. Brutus and others in 83 B.C. (Momms. 4. 79).

2. a senatorio gradu. By Sulla's own regulations (in the Leges Corneliae of 81 B.C.) the quaestorship carried with it the right of sitting in the Senate on the expiry of the year of office. The age at which the various magistracies could be held had been fixed indirectly, if not directly, by the Lex Villia Annalis of 180 B.C. The exact provisions of that Lex are unknown, but it seems not to have settled directly the age at which magistracies could be held, but to have determined the order of their succession (quaestorship, praetorship, consulship), and the minimum interval (vis. two years) between the holding of one magistracy and the attainment of the next higher magistracy. It appears that the quaestorship could not be held before the twenty-eighth year. Sulla made thirty-seven the minimum legal age, though in practice men were allowed to hold the office after completing their thirtieth year. In any case, Pompeius was below the legal age for a seat in the Senate, as he was only in his twenty-fourth year when Sulla sent him to Sicily in 82 B.C.

5. gravitate, 'dignity', always a characteristic of Pompeius.

6. in Africa: against Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus.

7. deportavit. Deportare is regularly used of bringing home an army by sea.

8. triumphare. The right to enter Rome in triumph originally belonged solely to those invested with the imperium or supreme military power, vis. to Dictators, Consuls, Praetors. In the case of pro-magistrates, independent command was a necessary condition of a triumph, and their imperium must also have been continuous, from a magistracy to the pro-magistracy; hence the elder Scipio Africanus, who had been given proconsular command without having held the imperium as a magistrate, was refused a triumph in 206 B.C., and so also

L. Corn. Lentulus in 200 B.C. Pompeius, however, twice triumphed before holding any magistracy at all; the importance of his career lay in the fact that he held the imperium without having had any civil magistracy.

In a triumph the victorious general (imperator), crowned with laurel, entered the city by the Porta Triumphalis in a chariot drawn by four horses (quadriga). He was preceded by his prisoners of war, the spoils of captured cities, and emblems of his exploits; behind him marched his troops. The procession passed along the Via Sacra, through the Forum, and up the Capitol Hill, where sacrifice was made to Jupiter. A special ordinance of the people was required to enable the triumphator to display his imperium within the walls of Rome on the day of his triumph. It was the prerogative of the Senate to decide whether a general's exploits deserved the honour of a triumph (hence ex senatus consulto triumpharet in l. 25, below), and certain conditions had to be fulfilled before a triumph was granted. There were, however, notorious instances in which a general who had done nothing to deserve it gained the honour, e.g. Murena in 80 B.C. Cicero's own ambition to enter Rome in triumph for his exploits against the brigands of Cilicia (in 51 B.C.) was thwarted by the outbreak of the Civil War.

9, 10. vidit . . . visendam, 'lived to see . . . flock to see'.

§ 62

11. inuitatum . . . ut. Inuitatum = contra consuetudinem factum est, and so can be followed as here by ut . . . mitteretur (a consecutive subjunctive in historic sequence). The accusative and infinitive would be the more usual construction, as in 61. 24 and 27, after novum (fuit) and praeter consuetudinem.

consules. The Consuls of 77 B.C., the year in question, were Mamercus Aemilius Lepidus and Decimus Junius Brutus; both declined to take command against Sertorius—hence the point of the gibe of Philippus.

13. pro consule = cum imperio proconsulari, 'as proconsul'. The form proconsul is not usually employed in classical Latin.

17. Philippus. Lucius Marcius Philippus, Consul in 91 B.C., when he bitterly opposed the reforms initiated by the Tribune Drusus. In 86 B.C. he was Censor. He had been closely associated with the Marian party, but finally became a supporter of Sulla and Pompeius (see Momms. 4. 269, ed. 1894). As an orator he was celebrated for his caustic wit, of which we have a good specimen here.

19. constituebatur, 'was based'; a stronger word than ponebatur.

22. ex senatus consulto. According to the theory of the constitution, the power to set aside the law in individual cases belonged solely to the people assembled in Comitia, but in course of time the Senate usurped this prerogative. The aim of Sulla's legislation had been to give the Senate in law the powers which it had gradually usurped during and since the Punic Wars.

legibus solutus: in the case of the election of Pompeius to the consulship for 70 B.C. two laws were set aside—the Lex Villia Annalis, and the Lex Cornelia (of Sulla) which enacted that a man must have held the quaestorship and the praetorship before he was qualified for the consulship (see above, on 61. 2).

23. ullum [alium] magistratum. The question is, are these words to be taken literally? Some hold that Cicero has in mind only the curule offices, i.e. the curule aedileship, the praetorship, and the consulship, and that as forty-three was (in Cicero's time; see Phil. 5. 46) the legal minimum age for the consulship, and two clear years elapsed between any two magistracies, thirty-seven was the legal minimum age for the curule aedileship. On this view, the expression ullum alium magistratum is an exaggeration; which may be partially remedied by omitting alium (with H.). Others, however, maintain that Cicero's words cannot be restricted to the curule offices, but must be taken literally and cover also the quaestorship. According to Mommsen, thirty-seven was the legal minimum age for the quaestorship, although as a matter of use and wont the law was disregarded (see note on 61. 2). Pompeius was close upon thirty-six when he entered upon his consulship in 70 B.C., so that he was too young for the curule aedileship (according to the first view), and legally, though not as a matter of practice, too young also for the quaestorship (according to the second view). On either view, the real emphasis is on the words per leges, and Cicero chooses to insist upon the letter of the law, without reference to the actual practice.

24. Houisset. The rule is that when an ideal limit is given, involving a notion of necessary antecedence or purpose, antequam or priusquam are combined with a subjunctive—e.g. Priusquam se hostes ex terrore reciperent, in fines Suessionum copias duxit, 'he led his army into the territory of the Suessiones, before the enemy should recover from their panic'. Here, however, the notion is hardly more than one of simple temporal sequence, and the indicative would have stood quite well. The subjunctive may be due to attraction. The explanation of the tense is much more difficult, and in fact it scarcely admits of explanation. Apparently there are only five instances of the pluperfect subjunctive after antequam in Cicero. Possibly the pluperfect is here partly due to the feeling of an apodosis in a conditional sentence of unrealized condition—the protasis being implicit in the words per leges, which = si legum rationem habuisset.

25. [Iterum]. H. omits, rightly, because the first triumph of Pompeius was not ex senatus consulto, but by permission of Sulla as autocrat.

— equus Romanus. Pompeius was still only a knight in 71 B.C., on the last day of which year he celebrated his second triumph. For he had held no magistracy, which ipso facto would have given him a seat on the Senate after his year of office; nor had there been any Censors appointed since 86 B.C., who might have admitted him to the Senate.

§ 63

6. illorum auctoritatem. The Senate had been supreme in the constitution as revised by Sulla, down to the date of the restoration of the tribunician power (i.e. of popular sovereignty) in 70 B.C. During the Senate's supremacy the people had not even been asked to ratify many of the extraordinary commands conferred in defiance of the existing laws, e.g. the appointment of Pompeius to command in the Spanish War, and the extraordinary powers given to M. Antonius against the pirates in 74 B.C. Cicero now claims the same power for the people.

illorum. As the reference is to the subject of the main verb (videant), we should expect suam; but illorum gives a stronger contrast to vestrum.

9. suo iure, 'with perfect right'. The confidence of the people in Pompeius had been justified by his success against the pirates. The iam shows that there is no reference here to the constitutional sovereignty of the Comitia.

13. praeponeatis: a final subjunctive, the relative quem being equivalent to ut eum.

§ 64

15-17. si . . . fecistis . . . conarentur. The indicative implies that the speaker has, or pretends to have, an open mind on the question of fact; there is no implication of reality or unreality. In the apodosis the imperf. subj. (conarentur, so H., for vulg. conantur) referring to pres. time implies unreality. Note that the conditional relationship lies chiefly in the two adverbs—temere . . . recte: 'assuming the correctness of your judgment (a point which I do not discuss) . . . they would now be in the right (as in fact they are not) in their action'. The combination of subj. in the apodosis with an indic. in the protasis is common enough when the leading proposition expresses a wish or a command, as in the next following sentence (see Madv. 348, obs. 4).

17, 18. plus . . . vidistis, 'displayed deeper political insight'.

20. principes: the leaders of the Optimates, especially Hor-tensius and Catulus.

20, 21. sibi . . . auctoritati. Notice the double dative, which, however, is not in this instance ambiguous: sibi (and ceteris) is the dative of the agent with the gerund; auctoritati the ordinary dative required by the verb pareo. See note on 6. 7.

22. bello Asiatico et regio, 'war with an Asiatic potentate'. The phrase is intended to suggest the idea of wealth and luxury, to the temptations of which all other Roman generals had succumbed.

3. Syria. Why is Syria mentioned? From 83 B.C. it was an Armenian satrapy until 69 B.C., when its Armenian governor, Magadates, withdrew. Then it was the prey of various robber chiefs until 64 B.C. when Pompeius organized it as a province. I cannot discover Cicero's reason for mentioning it here in illustration of his point.

interiorum, 'in inner Asia'—the regions to the east of those enumerated; for Asia, of course, means only the Roman province so called.

§ 65

9, 10. quanto in odio simus, 'how detested we are'. In odio esse is the periphrastic passive of the defective verb odisse, 'to hate'.

16, 17. quibus causa . . . inferatur, 'against which some pretext for war may be brought'. Inferatur is a consecutive, or final, subjunctive, introduced by the relative quibus = 'of such sort that . . .'.

facultatem, 'the opportunity or power of plundering', so H.; vulg. cupiditatem.

§ 66

18. coram: probably 'face to face with', i.e. publicly, rather than 'privately', as Halm takes it.

22. an, 'or not rather'.

hostium simulatione, 'under pretence of operating against the enemy'—a condensed expression of a type not rare in Latin. Cf. eas copias, quas diu simulatione rei publicae comparabant, ('under pretence of defending the state').

24. non modo = non dicam, 'to say nothing of . . .'. Non

modo stands with sed (sed etiam, verum etiam) following when "it is intended to show that the first clause comprises too much, and that we must abide by the second and more limited one" (Madv.).

1. collatis signis, 'in a pitched battle'.

§ 67

8. Equam = numquam in impassioned questions, which are really negative statements in disguise—'is there any . . . that'.

pacatam fuisse, 'has been left at peace'.

13, 14. pecunia publica, i.e. the money voted for the payment of fleets and armies.

14. praeter paucos. Cicero suddenly remembers P. Servilius (see below, 68. 3), against whose character nothing could be said, as he was a supporter of the proposal of Manilius; he may have been present among the audience.

15. classium nomine: generally taken to mean 'with fleets that existed only on paper'; but nomine is more probably 'on the strength, or score, of . . .'

16. maiores: greater than if nothing had been attempted at all. The reference is perhaps to the misuse of power of which M. Antonius, surnamed Creticus, had been guilty. He had been disgracefully defeated by the Cretans. Verres may also be in Cicero's mind.

17. lacturis, 'sacrifices', i.e. bribes to influential men, to secure appointment.

18. condicionibus, 'arrangements', with creditors before leaving Rome. Or it may be merely 'compacts', i.e. promises made to supporters in Rome.

videlicet: ironical, as generally.

21. alienis = aliorum.

§ 68

23. nolite dubitare, quin. See note on 49. 4-6.

3. omnium, 'of every kind'. Cf. omni supplicio, in 11. 23.

Servilius. P. Servilius Vatia Isauricus, Consul in 79 B.C. In 77 B.C. he was sent against the pirates with a fleet and army, and operated three years against them with success in Lycia, Pamphylia, and Isauria (the southern districts of Asia Minor). He triumphed in 75 B.C.

5. cum . . . deliberetis, 'seeing that it is a military question that you are debating'. For this causal sense of cum, cf. cum hieme navigaret, in 31. 19.

6. Curio. C. Scribonius Curio, Consul in 76 B.C. As Proconsul in Macedonia (75-73 B.C.) he fought against the Thracians and the Dardani. He was the first Roman general to reach the Danube. He had some reputation as an orator (hence, summo ingenio praeditus).

7. beneficiis . . . rebus gestis: to govern these ablatives, some word like ornatus must be supplied from praeditus. By beneficiis his consulship and triumph are meant (cf. 51. 17, 69. 25).

8. Lentulus. Cn. Cornelius Lentulus Clodianus, Consul in 72 B.C. He was one of the legati of Pompeius in his war against the pirates. In his consulship he was defeated by the revolted slaves under Spartacus. The words summam gravitatem refer to the severity with which he and his colleague purged the Senate in the censorship of 70 B.C.; sixty-four Senators, about one-eighth of the House, were struck off the roll.

9. pro, 'answering to', 'as the high offices conferred by you prove'.

11. Cassius. C. Cassius Longinus Varus, Consul in 73 B.C. In the following year, as proconsul in Cisalpine Gaul, he was defeated by Spartacus near Mutina (Modena).

12, 13. videte ut . . . videamur: so H.; videre here means 'take care that', 'make sure that', in which sense it is followed by either ne or ut—'see to it that the weight of our supporters appear to match . . .'. Others translate—'see how . . .'. Madvig conjectured videte, horumne, 'consider whether . . .'. Auctoritatibus is ablative.

§ 69

14. Quae cum ita sint, 'accordingly', introducing the conclusion.

17. auctore populo Romano, 'with the support of the Roman people'; it was obvious to which side the popular opinion inclined.

18. vim aut minas: that is to say, of the Optimates, who had, for example, all but killed Gabinius even in the Senate-house when he introduced his proposals. Manilius himself was actually prosecuted (Plutarch says for peculation) on the expiry of his year of office, and condemned, in spite of Cicero's advocacy.

21. iterum: the first time being on the occasion of the passing of the Gabinian law in the previous year.

23. reficiendi: reficio is the technical term for continuing a term of command; cf. De Am. 96, ferebat legem de tribunis plebis reficiendis. Pompeius who received power by the Lex Gabinia will be renewed by the Lex Manilia (Clark).

25. beneficio: explained by the following potestate praetoria

1. defero, 'place at the disposal of'.

§ 70

2. loco temploque: hendiadys — 'this consecrated spot'. See note on 1. 2. The word templum does not necessarily imply a building, but signifies any space marked out in accordance with the sacred rules of augury (from temno). Such a locus inauguratus or templum, 'consecrated ground', was necessary for all dealings with the people, even for a simple contio, which, like our own parliamentary proceedings, always began with prayer (solenne carmen precatiois).

3. praesident, 'protect'—those, namely, whose temples surrounded the Forum, or overlooked it from the Capitol.

3, 4. ad rem publicam adeunt, 'engage in political life'. accedunt is the more usual word in this phrase.

5-7. neque quo . . . neque quo: quo = ut. There should have followed an adversative sentence beginning with sed, but here the opposition does not appear until § 71, when it takes a different form.

6. concordari putem, 'in the expectation, or thought, of winning'—an instance of the pleonasm of which other examples have been remarked in this speech. Notice the length and sonorosity of the concluding sentences of the oration.

8. periculis . . . honoribus: supply repellendis . . . adipiscendis, datives of purpose.

9, 10. ut . . . oportet, 'as a man ought'. Some take it to be 'so far as'.

10. repellemus: notice the change of person, from quaeram to the plural, which is less egotistical.

honorem, 'official advancement', in general; but, as being already Praetor, Cicero now looks forward to the consulship and he must have that specially in mind.

11. ex hoc loco, i.e. as a political orator.

11, 12. eadem . . . ratione vitae: his energy as an advocate looking back to the thought with which the oration opened in § 1.

13. feret: intransitive use of fero, as in the phrases ut ferat opinio, 'so men think', si occasio tulerit, 'if occasion require' and many others.

§ 71

14. si quid: a touch of mock modesty. Cf. 2, 8, 9, and note.

14, 15. mihī susceptum est. With the past participle of some verbs, and tenses compounded of it, a dative of the possessor is found, practically expressing agency. No strict rule can be given about it. The past fact is thought of as a kind of possession or advantage (cf. the English auxiliary have of past events). This view is strongly supported by the Latin Dat. of the Agent, which is not common except with Verbals and Past Participles (Roby, § 1146). Evidently nobis faciēda = 'things for us to do', nobis facta = 'things we have got done' (Monro, Hom. Gr., § 143).

16, 17. tantumque abest ut . . . ut, 'so far from thinking that . . . I know'. This double ut is not very common in classical Latin, though the phrase is generally given as quite unimpeachable.

19, 20. non inutilis: equivalent to utilissimas; an example of Litotes or Meiosis (understatement).

21-25. statui . . . oportere, 'adopted as my principle . . . the obligation'.

24. commodis et rationibus, 'considerations of my own interests'.

CRITICAL APPENDIX

The chief authority followed in the present edition is the Harley MS. 2682, a folio of 192 leaves of vellum, written in minuscules of German type of the latter part of the eleventh century. Its readings are taken from the Collation by Mr. A. C. Clark (Anecdota Oxoniensia, Part vii, 1891). The MS. is denoted by the symbol H. By vulg. is meant the reading ordinarily printed in the various editions of C. F. W. Mueller, Karl Halm, and others. Minor divergencies are not noted.

§ 1. 5. patet, H.; vulg. patuit.

§ 3. 12. [mihi]: H. omits; "the word is probably introduced from the preceding line" (Clark).

§ 4. 22. adfertur, H.; vulg. infertur. Adfertur is preferable, because less usual than infertur; cp. Phil. 6. 17, si pacem adferent, cupidum me, si bellum, providum iudicatote (Clark).

24. arbitratur, H.; vulg. arbitrantur.

§ 6. 7. a vobis et ipsorum et rei publicae causa: H. has nobis et ipsorum causa et rei publicae, which is perhaps correct.

§ 7. 11. [Mithridatico]: H. reads the word.

16. curavit, H.; vulg. denotavit ("not elsewhere found in Cicero's orations", Eberhard).

2. Ponto, H.; vulg. Ponti.

§ 9. 18. posteaquam . . . aedificasset, H.; vulg. postea, cum . . . aedificasset. Postquam (posteaquam) is found with the subj. in Cicero only twelve times in all; but a simple, though quite unscientific, correction of cum for quam is always available (see Fausset, Pro Cluentio, § 181, 32). Gildersleeve and Lodge (Lat. Gr. § 563, n. 4) remark that if the subj. is to be retained in these passages it is to be explained as due either to Partial Obliquity (whatever that may be), or to the intrusion of the cum-Subj. into other temporal constructions. The subj. appears in late Latin.

§ 12. 5. quo id tandem animo, H.; vulg. omits id.

§ 13. 1. venerat, H.; vulg. venerit.

3. taciti rogant, H.; vulg. tacite rogant. The reading of H. follows Cicero's usual idiom; cp. 48. 21, qui . . . tacitus auderet optare; Pro Cluent. 6, ne ipsi . . . taciti cogitationi vestrae subiiciatis. "He only uses tacite four times in the speeches, and there the adj. could not possibly be used, e.g. Pro Quinct. 50, huic ne perire quidem tacite obscureque conceditur" (Clark, who also gives other references).

6. ceteras in provincias, H.; vulg. ceteros in provinciam. See note in loc.

8. adventus: H. has aditus, which is more likely to have been altered to adventus than vice versa (Clark).

13. commoretur, H.; vulg. commoratur. "The subj. is more appropriate" (Clark); and had been restored by conjecture by the older edd.

§ 14. 16. studiosius, H.; vulg. studio. The comp. is preferable, as according better with the contrast between nulla . . . lacessiti and iniuriis provocatos.

21. tuendas, H.; vulg. tutandas. "Elsewhere in the speeches Cicero uses the pres. of tutor twice, and the perf. tutatus est five times, but no other parts" (Clark). See note in loc.

§ 15. 6. pecora relinquuntur, H. Some edd. restore pecua (from pecu), which Lewis and Short, quoting this passage, trans. 'the places where cattle are kept, pastures, etc.', though why the word should not retain its usual meaning of 'herds' is hard to see. Servius commenting on Verg. Georg. 3. 64 refers to this passage, and appears to have read pecua. Other edd. accept an old conj. pecuaria relinquitur, i.e. pecuaria res, 'business of cattle-farming', or better 'cattle' simply. The phrase pecuaria res is used by Cicero in the sense of 'stock of cattle' in Pro Quinct. 3. 12, erat ei pecuaria res ampla.

§ 16. 11. igitur, H.; some edd. omit.

17. portibus, H.; vulg. portubus.

17, 18. in custodiis, H.; vulg. custodiis.

§ 18. 15. [eorum]: H. omits ("possibly a corruption of Romanorum, a gloss on civium"—a suggestion of Nettleship, quoted by Clark).

18, 19. publicanis . . . recuperare: a vexed passage. Mueller's text, nos publicanis omissis vectigalia postea, etc. keeps nearest to the MSS., which have amissis. Something is lost after publicanis, or after vectigalia (if the latter word is not a gloss which has crept into the text—so Mommsen, who also conj. nos publica his amissis, followed by Kayser); or possibly postea is corrupt (for posse ea?). A simple change is to read amissa, but the abl. form is probably correct. There is no real difficulty in the combination postea . . . recuperare, as the infin. is aorist. I have ventured to add one more to the long list of conjectures on the passage.

§ 19. 22. [nos]: H. omits.

25. amiserunt, H.; vulg. amiserant.

§ 20. 18. elaborandum, Kayser; vulg. laborandum.

26. oppressam, H.; vulg. obsessam. The phrase opprimere urbem is Ciceronian; cf. Pro Sest. § 112, capta urbe atque oppressa. "Obsidere and oppugnare are generally contrasted, e.g. Livy, 2. 11, consiliis ab oppugnanda urbe ad obsidendam versis" (Clark).

§ 21. 2. atque odio, in H. alone.

8. ornata ac referta, H.; vulg. ornatas ac refertas. The neut. had been restored by conj. by several early edd. "The description seems better suited to the palaces (domicilia) than to the towns" (Clark). Probably the vulg. arose from the unconscious repetition of 20. 23, 24.

14, 15. hoc concessi laudis, atque ita . . . ut hac vos intellegatis: hoc and hac are the readings of H.; vulg. haec . . . hoc. Concessi is Eberhard's conj. for the MS. esse. Clark suspects that the words ut . . . intellegatis are an interpolation from 20. 20, ut omnes intellegant, the copyist's eye having strayed from atque ita to atque ut abors. If the reading esse be retained, some word would seem to have been lost after ita (Momms. conj. edita). With the reading adopted in the text concessi is easily supplied after ita, and opinor is parenthetical.

§ 22. 12. quas a maioribus, H.; vulg. quas et a maioribus. Eberhard conj. aut . . . aut.

17. retardavit, H.; vulg. tardavit.

§ 23. 26, 27. per animos, H.; vulg. animos. Clark points out that, excluding the present passage, Cicero does not use pervado with the accusat. without a preposition.

5. Tigrani, H. alone; vulg. Tigranis.

§ 24. 8. fit, H.; vulg. fuit.

9. illis, H.; vulg. iis.

10. processio, H.; vulg. processio—"here a barbarism" (Clark).

§ 26. 20. qui, H.; vulg. quod.

21, 22. partim militum . . . partim: a conj. of Gulielmus; H. has partim in the second place; vulg. partem militum . . . partem. Cp. In Pis. 48, cum partim eius praedae . . . devorassent, partim nova luxuries, etc. See note on 18. 11, 12.

22. confectis, H., confirming an old conj.; vulg. confecti. See note in loc.

§ 27. 1, 2. quale hoc esset bellum, H.; vulg. quare esset hoc bellum. H. is right, as the point is not 'wherefore', but as to the fact. The words genere . . . periculosum are explanatory of quale, and the sentence should be printed as in the text.

§ 28. 18. atque e pueritiae, H.; vulg. atque pueritiae.

§ 30. 23. [ipse]: H. omits. "It may be a variant for ille, which has been combined with it" (Clark).

25. testis [est] . . . testis [est]: "est is repeated six times in other MSS. H. has est once in l. 23, and in the other five cases omits it. The insertion is uncalled for, and shows the hand of a corrector" (Clark).

§ 31. 13. omnes terrae, gentes, nationes, maria denique, H.; vulg. omnes exterae gentes ac nationes, denique maria. The reading of H. is very vigorous; "why it should be rejected, I cannot guess" (Clark).

§ 33. 16. potestatem, H.; vulg. potestate. See note in loc.

20. [ibi]: H. omits. "Ibi can only mean 'off Misenum', and no such battle is known of. I cannot find any note explaining its use here" (Clark).

§ 34. 10. inde, MSS.; vulg. in. For the omission of the preposition see Zumpt, Lat. Gr. § 398; cp. Livy, 32. 16, haec circa Andrum insulam classes coniunctae Euboeam . . . traierunt.

§ 37. 4. ventum est, H.; vulg. ventum sit.

adferant, H.; vulg. ferant. "Cp. 15. 3, metus ipse adfert calamitatem; so 25. 13-16, calamitatem . . . adferret. Calamitatem ferre always means to 'endure calamity'" (Clark).

§ 39. 23. quicquam, H.; vulg. cuiquam.

enim: H. omits, perhaps rightly.

§ 40. 1. quae illius sit: H. has quae sit; other MSS. vary between qua, qualis, and quali. Hence Mueller and others print qua sit; Halm, qua ille sit. I restore illius.

§ 42. 12. permittendum, H. alone; vulg. transmittendum. "Permittendum is very idiomatical; cp. 61. 3, permitti . . . bellum" (Clark).

§ 44. 4. quo non illius [diei] nomen [ac fama]. "H. has a curious reading—quo non illius dici nomen ac fama illius pervaserit (dici being probably a blunder for diei), which looks as if two variants illius diei nomen, and fama illius diei had become fused. Nomen is probably right, and has been glossed by fama" (Clark). I suggest the omission of diei also, in which case illius = Pompei. Cicero has just asked quod nomen (= cuius nomen) clarius?

10. auctoritas, H.; vulg. huius auctoritas. But huius is here out of place as the sentiment is general.

14. [annonae]: H. omits, and reads also tanta repentina for tanta repente; probably repentina should be restored.

16. in, H.; vulg. ex.

§ 45. 25. inflatum, H.; vulg. inflammatum. "Inflatum must be right as developing the metaphor in continuit; cp. De Leg. Agr. 2. 97, Quibus illi rebus elati et inflati . . . non continebuntur" (Clark).

§ 46. 8, 9. quod a communi Cretensium. H. reads quod communi Cret., from which Gul. restored the reading in the text, which is accepted by Kayser. "This brilliant reading is the best proof of the superiority of H. No trace of it is found in other MSS." (Clark).

14, 15. [eum] . . . [Pompeius . . . iudicavit]: bracketed by Eberhard as a gloss.

15. [semper]: H. omits; other MSS. vary between semper erat and erat semper, which has given rise to various conjectures.

17. iudicari, H.; vulg. iudicare.

§ 47. 24. ipse, H.; vulg. ipso.

§ 50. 15. commendamus, H.; vulg. committamus. Commendo is the more forcible word (see Clark).

§ 51. 22. cognoscitis, H.; vulg. cognoscetis. See note in loc.

§ 53. 20. esse hoc, H.; vulg. hoc esse.

§ 54. 1. umquam fuit antea, H.; vulg. antea umquam fuit.

6, 7. quae civitas umquam antea tam tenuis [aut tam parvula insula] fuit, quae, so H. but without the brackets; vulg. quae civitas, inquam, antea tam tenuis, quae tam parva insula fuit, quae. The quae before the second tam is a conj. of Manutius; inquam is due to Halm. It is clear that the bracketed words are an interpolation; perhaps, as Clark suggests, from § 55, insula Delus . . . parva.

§ 55. 22. Delus, H.; vulg. Delos. H. is probably correct.

26. portibus, H.; vulg. portubus.

1. nonne, H.; vulg. non.

§ 56. 3. et ea quae, H.; vulg. ea. "The omission of et after -it is simple" (Clark).

§ 57. 16. voluerint, H.; vulg. voluerunt.

19-21. victoriae [eius . . . constitutus]. All the MSS. are corrupt here; victoriae is given by H.; vulg. gloriae. "The clause eius . . . constitutus can be easily dispensed with, and is probably taken from the next section, where it is practically repeated, sc. qui . . . constituit" (Clark). Eberhard, however, prefers to bracket the latter passage.

§ 58. 5-7. gereretur . . . debebat, H.; vulg. geritur . . . deberet. The vulg. gives no satisfactory sense.

10. iniquitas, H.; vulg. inimicum edictum. "While it is easy to see how iniquitas could be glossed by inimicum edictum, it is difficult to see how the converse could have taken place except from wilful alteration, and this one is not justified in assuming" (Clark).

13. minitantur, H.; vulg. minantur.

§ 59. 25. in eo ipso, H.; vulg. in ipso. Some critics bracket the words vos . . . esse, or spem . . . esse.

1. [ac tam difficilis]: H. omits. "The words do not add anything to the sense" (Clark); it is already complete in tanta.

§ 60. 13. Poenicum, H.; vulg. Punicum. Poenicum is the older spelling.

§ 61. 23. [summa]: H. omits.

§ 62. 23. [alium]: H. omits, probably rightly; see note in loc.

25. [iterum]: H. omits, certainly rightly; see note in loc.

29. vidimus, H.; vulg. videmus.

§ 63. 2. in eodem homine, H.; vulg. in eundem hominem.

Cp. 62. 28, quae in hoc homine vidimus.

7. [semper]: H. omits. "The sentence is better balanced without it" (Clark).

§ 64. 17. conarentur, H.; vulg. conantur.

18. istis, H.; vulg. iis.

§ 65. 16. facultatem, H.; vulg. cupiditatem.

§ 66. 20. norunt, H.; vulg. noverunt.

22. exercitus, H.; vulg. exercitum.

3. qui a pecuniis, H.; vulg. qui se a pecuniis.

4, 5. qui ab . . . oppidorum: found in H. alone.

§ 67. 14. nos, H.; vulg. eos.

15. consequi, H.; vulg. adsequi.

17, 18. et quibus . . . quibusque, H. (which also reads iniuriis for vulg. iacturis); vulg. et quibus . . . quibus.

§ 68. 24. inventus est, H.; vulg. inventus sit.

11. veritate, H.; vulg. virtute. "Cp. Verr. Act. Pr. § 51, veritatis, integritatis, fidei. The confusion is common" (Clark).

12. eorum, H.; vulg. illorum.

§ 69. 23. reficiendi, H.; vulg. perficiendi. The reading of H. "has met with undeserved neglect" (Clark). See note in loc.

§ 71. 14. si quid, H.; vulg. quicquid.

21. [vestris]: H. omits.

VOCABULARY

- A., abbrev. for Aulus.
ā, āb, prep. with abl. from, by, since.
abdītus, -a, -um, part. adj. (abdo), concealed, secret.
absens, -entis, part. (absūm), absent, in absence.
absum, ābesse, āsvi, intr. be absent, be away, distant.
atque, conj. and.
accidō, -cidī, v. 3, happen, befall, come to pass.
accipio, -cipi, -ceptum, v. 3, accept, receive, hear.
accomōdō, -ōvi, -atum, v. 1, adapt, adjust, fit.
accūrātus, -a, -um, adj. finished, exact, elaborate, wrought with care; superl. adv. accuratissimo.
acer, ācris, ācrē, adj. keen, bitter; comp. acrior; sup. acerrimus.
Achāia, -ae, f. Achaea.
ād, prep. with acc. to, for; like apud, at, near, with.
addūco, -xi, -ctum, v. 3, bring, conduct, lead.
adō, -ire, adii, aditum, v. 4, approach, go or come to, visit.
ādō, adv. to such a degree.
With conj. to introduce a more important aspect of the matter, or to make a correction—indeed, atque adeo.
adfero, adferre, attūli, allatum (or adlatum), bring, contribute, bring forward, produce.
adflō, -feci, -fectum, v. affect, visit, treat with.
adfigo, -fixi, -fictum, v. 3, to attach, to add to.
adflctus, -a, -um, part. adj. (adfligo), cast down, dejected, shattered.
adhūc, adv. still, hitherto, as yet, thus far.
adimo, -emi, -emptum, v. 3, take from, remove, deprive.
ādītus, -ūs, m. approach, pathway.
adīumentum, -i, n. means of aid, help, assistance.
adiungo, -iunxi, -iunctum, v. 3, join, attach.
adlūco, -lexi, -lectum, v. 3, allure, entice, attract.
administrā, -ae, f. assistant, handmaid.
administrō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, manage.
admōnō, -ui, -itum, v. 2, remind, put in mind of.
admurmūrātio, -ōnis, f. murmuring, murmur of assent.
adorno, -avi, -atum, v. 1, provide, furnish, equip.
adparō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, prepare for, make ready.
adscribo, -scripsi, -scriptum, v. 3, reckon, included.
adsentis, -ensui, -ensum, v. 4, agree with, approve of.
adsūquor, -secutus or -sequutus, v. 3 dep. gain.

- adadūctūs, -ctūs, f. application.
adsum, adesse, adfui, be present, at hand.
adūlescens, -entis, m. youth, young man.
adulescentiā, -ae, f. youth.
adulescentūlūs, -i, m. a very young man.
adventiciūs, -a, -um, adj. foreign, incidental.
adventūs, -ūs, m. coming, arrival.
aedifico, -avi, -ctum, v. 1, build.
Aegaeus, -a, -um, adj. Aegean (sea).
aegrē, adv. of aegr, -gra, -grum, hardly, with difficulty; compar. aegrus.
aequus, -a, -um, adj. right, proper.
aerārium, -ri, n. treasury (part of the temple of Saturn in Rome).
aestās, -ātis, f. summer.
aetās, -ātis, f. age, lifetime, generation, years. The context often shows that it signifies 'youth'.
Aetōlus, -a, -um, adj. Aetolian; as subst. Aetolus, -i, m. an Aetolian.
Āfricā, -ae, f. the province of Africa, originally the territory of Carthage, made a Roman province in 146 B.C., corresponding to the modern Tunis.
Africānus, -a, -um, adj. of, or belonging to, or in, Africa.
āgō (imperat. of ago), come, come now, well (often combined with 1st or 2nd person plur.).
āgr, agri, m. land, territory.
āgrō, -avi, -ctum, v. 1, excite, alarm.
agnoscō, -nōvi, agnītum, v. 3, recognize, acknowledge, identify.
āgō, āgi, actum, v. 3, do, act, do something; speak, plead (of a speaker); consult or deal with people (of a magistrate); res agitur, to be at stake.
ait (aio), defect. verb 3rd sing. pres. say, affirm.
āliēnus, -a, -um, adj. that belongs to another, another's, foreign.
āliquando, adv. at length, at last.
āliquis, āliquid, indef. subst. pron. someone, somebody, anyone, some or certain.
āliquōt, indef. indecl. num. some, several.
ālius, -a, -ud, adj. and subst. another, other; ālius...ālius, the one...the other; in pl. some...others.
alter, altera, alterum, adj. the other (of two), the second; alter...alter, the one...the other.
āmans, -ntis, part. adj. (amo); with gen. fond of; superl. amantissimus.
amicus, -a, -um, adj. friendly, well-disposed; superl. amicissimus; subst. amicus, -i, m. friend.
Āmisus, -i, f. Amisus, a town of Pontus.
āmitto, -misi, -missum, v. 3, lose.
āmo, -avi, -ctum, v. 1, love.
āmoenitās, -ātis, f. pleasantness, charm.
amplifico, -avi, -ctum, v. 1, extend, enlarge.
amplitudo, -inis, f. greatness, distinction, consequence.
amplūs, -a, -um, adj. large, great, dignified, important; superl. amplissimus.
an, conj. or, whether. Introducing rhetorical questions almost = num., 'do you really? with vero, 'can it be that?'
anceps, ancipitīs, adj. on both

- or deal strate);
ake.
d sing.
at be-other's,
th, at subst.
ebody,
some,
subst.
allus,
in pl.
f. the
cond;
... the
amo);
superl.
endly,
ami-
s, -i,
wn of
v. 3,
re.
ness,
I, ex-
ness,
reat.
perl.
ntro.
s alilly?
?
both
- sides, in two places (so often doubtful, uncertain, dangerous).
animus, -i, m. mind, spirit, feelings, intention; in pl. pride, arrogance.
anne, conj. or.
annōnā, -ae, f. yearly produce,
especially grain.
annus, -i, m. year.
antē, prep. with accus. and adv.
before.
antē, adv. before, previously.
antēcellō, antecellere, v. 3 defect.
rise above, surpass, excel.
Antiochus, -i, prop. name, Anti-ochus.
antiquitas, -atis, f. antiquity,
ancient times.
āpertus, -a, -um, part. adj. open,
manifest.
appello, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, call,
accost, address.
appētō, -īvi and -īi, -itum, v. 3, grasp at, reach after, be eager
for.
Appiūs, -i, a Roman praenomen,
especially of the Claudian gens;
adj. Appius, -a, -um (via Appia), Appian, built by Appius.
apud, prep. with acc. at, in presence of, among, with.
arbitror, -ātus, v. 1 dep. think,
suppose, imagine.
argentum, -i, n. silver, plate.
Ariobarzānēs, -is, m. proper name, Ariobarzanes, king of Bithynia.
arma, -ōrum, n. plur. arms.
Armenius, -a, -um, adj. of Armenia; as subst. Armenius, -i,
m. an Armenian.
ars, artis, f. art, skill, method.
Asia, -ae, f. Asia.
Asiaticus, -a, -um, adj. Asiatic.
assequor, -āqui, -ācātus, v. 3
dep. achieve.
at, conj. but; at vero, but certainly, but assuredly; at enim,
but you will say.
Athēniensis, -e, adj. Athenian.
atque, conj. and, and in fact.
attēnō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, impair, diminish, lessen in importance.
attingo, -tigi, -tactum, v. 3,
touch, lay hands on, arrive at,
adjoin.
auctōr, -ōris, m. author, adviser,
instigator, supporter.
auctōritās, -ātis, f. authority, influence, declaration of opinion.
audēō, ausus, v. 2, dare, venture.
audio, -īvi or -īi, -itum, v. 4,
hear, hear of, listen to.
auferō, auferre, abstūli, ablat-tum, v. 3, carry off, take away.
Aulus, -i, m. proper name, Aulus (abbrev. A.).
auris, -is, f. ear.
aurum, -i, n. gold.
aut, conj. or; aut ... aut, either
... or.
autem, conj. but, however, moreover, now.
auxilium, -ii, n. help, aid.
avaritia, -ae, f. greed, avarice.
avidus, -a, -um, adj. greedy.
avitus, -a, -um, adj. ancestral.
barbarus, -a, -um, adj. barbarian,
foreign.
beatus, -a, -um, adj. happy,
blessed; superl. beatissimus.
bellicosus, -a, -um, adj. warlike.
bellō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, wage war.
bellum, -i, n. war.
bēnēficiūm, -ii, n. favour, benefit, kindness, distinction or honour conferred by the people.
bini, -ae, -a, distrib. num. two each, two.
Bithyniā, -ae, f. Bithynia, a province of Asia Minor.

bōnā (n. plur. of bōnus), -ōrum, goods, property, fortune.
bōnus, -a, -um, adj. good, excellent, loyal; comp. mēlior, -us; superl. optimus, -a, -um.
Bosporāni, -ōrum, people near the Cimmerian Bosphorus (Crimea).
brēvis, -e, adj. short, small.
brēviter, adv. briefly, shortly; superl. brevissime.
Brundisium, -ii, Brundisium in S. Italy (now Brindisi).
C., abbreviation for Caius, Gaius.
Caelius, -ii, Roman gentile name, Caelius.
caelum, -i, n. sky, heaven.
Caietā, -ae, f. Caieta, a coast town of Latium.
Caius, Gaius, a Roman praenomen. calāmitas, -ātis, f. calamity, damage, injury, misfortune.
cāpio, cēpi, captum, v. 3, take, capture, receive, reap fruit of, contain, hold.
Cappadōciā, -ae, f. Cappadocia, a district in north-east of Asia Minor.
cārō, -ūi, -itum, v. 2, be without, be deprived of.
cāritās, -ātis, f. dearness, high price.
Carthāginēnsis, -e, adj. of or belonging to Carthage.
Carthāgō, -inis, f. Carthage, in North Africa.
Cassius, -ii, Roman gentile name, Cassius.
castē, adv. purely, virtuously, disinterestedly.
castus, -a, -um, adj. pure, disinterested.
casus, -ūs, m. chance, accident.
Cātūlus, -i, m. a cognomen in the gens Lutatia.
causā, -ae, f. cause, reason, subject, subject-matter, cause of case (in legal sense), interests.

causā, abl. with gen. or poss. adj. for the sake of, on account of.
cēlēbēr, -bris, -bre, adj. frequented, thronged; superl. celeberrimus.
cēlērītās, -ātis, f. speed, quickness.
cēlērītēr, adv. quickly, speedily.
centūriā, -ae, f. century (Roman electoral unit).
centūriātūs, -ūs, m. the post of centurion.
certō, adv. certainly, surely, at least, at all events.
certus, -a, -um, adj. certain, sure, fixed, unflinching, definite.
cēteri, -ae, -a, adj. the rest, the others.
Cilicia, -ae, f. Cilicia, a district of south-east Asia Minor.
Cimbri, -ōrum, m. a people of north Germany.
cingo, cixi, cinctum, v. 3, surround, encircle.
civilis, -e, adj. civic, of citizens, civil.
civis, -is, m. a citizen.
civitas, -ātis, f. state, community.
clārus, -a, -um, adj. famous, illustrious, clear, plain, evident; compar. clarior, superl. clarissimus.
classis, -is, f. fleet, navy.
claudō, clausi, clausum, v. 3, shut, close, block.
Cnēius, abbrev. Cn.
Cnidus, -i, f. Cnidus, a town in Asia Minor.
coepi, coepisse (perf. used as pres.), v. defect. begin, commence, start.
cōgito, -āvi, -itum, v. 1, think, conceive.
cognitō, -ōnis, f. acquaintance, investigation.
cognosco, -gnōvi, -gnitum, v. 3, know, recognize, acknowledge cause of interests.

 poss. adj.
 part of.
 f. fre-
 superl.
 quick.
 heedily.
 Roman
 post of ely, at certain,
 definite.
 rest,
 district
 r.
 ple of 3, sur
 tizens,
 unity.
 mous,
 evi-
 superl.
 v. 3,
 wn in eá as
 com-hink,
 ance,
 v. 3,
 edge

cōgo, cōgī, cōactum, v. 3, compel.
cōhaerēō, -haesi, -haesum, v. 2,
 to be united with, connected with.
cohibeo, -hibui, -hibitum, v. 2,
 hold in check, keep from.
collātus, -a, -um, part. adj.
 (confero), brought together;
collatis signis, 'in pitched battle'.
collectiō, -ōnis, f. a collecting.
colligo, -lēgi, -lectum, v. 3, collect, gather.
collōcō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, to place, put; invest.
Colophōn, -onis, f. Colophon, a town in Lydia (Asia Minor).
cōmēs, -itis, m. or f. companion.
cōmītia, -ōrum, n. plur. the elections; the singular, cō- mītium, -ii, the place of assembly.
commētātus, -ūs, m. intercourse.
commēmōro, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1,
 relate, mention, recall.
commendo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1,
 commend, entrust to.
commēō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, go to,
 frequent, resort to.
committo, -misi, -missum, v. 3,
 commit, entrust; with se, commit one's self, expose one's self.
commōdum, -i, n. advantage,
 profit.
commōrōr, -ātus, v. 1 dep.
 delay, wait, stay.
commōveo, -mōvi, -mōtum, v. 2,
 move, stir, agitate, disquiet.
commūne, -is, n. subst. community, state.
communis, -e, adj. common,
 general.
comparātio, -ōnis, f. preparing,
 preparation.
compārō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, furnish, get ready.
complētus, -a, -um, part. adj.
 (compleo), fill, throng.
complēre, -a and -ia, gen. -ium,

adj. plur. on subst. several, very many.
comprōbō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, approve, sanction, acknowledge.
concedō, -cessi, -cessum, v. 3,
 grant, allow, admit.
conclēbrō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, publicly celebrate, solemnize.
concerto, -ivi, -ātum, v. 1, fight with, contend or strive with.
concido, -cidi, v. 3, fall, collapse,
 come to grief.
concilio, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, gain
 over, win, conciliate.
concipio, -cēpi, -ceptum, v. 3,
 receive, incur.
concito, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, stir up,
 excite.
concupisco, -pivi or -pivi, -pitum,
 v. 3, covet.
conditio or condicio, -ōnis, f.
 agreement, compact, terms,
 condition.
confēro, conferre, contūli, collātum, v. contribute, direct,
 apply; with se, to betake one's self.
conficio, -fēci, -fectum, v. 3, complete, accomplish, finish, destroy, wear out, reduce to subjection, levy (an army).
confirmo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1,
 strengthen, establish, prove,
 hearten, assert, affirm.
confiteor, -fessus, v. 2 dep. confess.
configo, -fixi, -fictum, v. 3, contend, fight.
congrō, -gessi, -gestum, v. 3,
 bring together, collect.
coniectūrā, -ae, f. conjecture,
 inference.
coniungo, -nxi, -nctum, v. 3, join,
 unite, join in prosecuting.
coniunx (coniux), coniūgis, m.
and f. consort, husband, wife.
cōnor, -ātus, v. 1 dep. try, attempt.
conquiescō, -quiesvi, -quiesum,

- v.* 3, be inactive, stand still, cease.
- consequor, -sequutus or -sequutus, v. 3 dep. follow, follow up, gain, win, effect, make.
- conservo, -avi, -atum, v. I, save, preserve.
- considero, -avi, -atum, v. I, consider, meditate, reflect on.
- consilium, -ii, n. plan, policy, measures, sagacity.
- conspectus, -us, m. sight, appearance, presence.
- conspicio, -spexi, -spectum, v. 3, observe, behold.
- constantia, -ae, f. constancy, steadfastness.
- constituo, -ui, -utum, v. 3, fix, establish, determine, decide.
- consuetudo, -inis, f. custom, habit, practice, precedent.
- consul, -ulis, m. consul (one of the two chief magistrates elected annually at Rome).
- consularis, -e, adj. consular, of consular rank; subst. consularis, -is, m. one who has held the office of consul, ex-consul, one of consular rank.
- consulto, -lui, -lutum, v. 3, with acc. consult, ask opinion; with dat. consult for a person or thing, provide for, have regard to interests of.
- consulto, adv. deliberately, purposely.
- consultum, -i, n. decree, resolution.
- contemno, -tempni, -temptum, v. 3, despise.
- contendo, -di, -tum, v. 3, contend with, engage.
- contentio, -onis, f. struggle, contest, comparison, contrast.
- contentus, -a, -um, part. adj. contented, satisfied.
- continentia, -ae, f. temperance, self-control, moderation.
- contineo, -ui, -entum, v. 2, restrain, control.
- continuus, -a, -um, adj. continuous, uninterrupted.
- contra, prep. with acc. against, in opposition to.
- contrarius, -a, -um, adj. contrary, opposed.
- convénit, 3rd sing. pres. (convénio) used impersonally, to be suitable, becoming, appropriate.
- copia, -ae, f. abundance, riches, copiousness ('material'), plenty.
- copiae, -arum, as military term, forces, troops.
- copiosus, -a, -um, adj. rich, opulent.
- cōram, adv. openly, face to face, in one's presence.
- Cōrinthus, -i, f. Corinth, in Greece.
- cōtidianus, -a, -um, adj. daily.
- cōtidis, adv. daily.
- credo, -didi, -ditum, v. 3, believe, think, entrust, confide to; phrase, mihi credite, believe me.
- cresco, crevi, crētum, v. 3, increase, grow.
- Crētensis, -e, adj. Cretan, of Crete; subst. Crētensis, -is, m. f. a Cretan.
- culpā, -ae, f. fault.
- cultūra, -ae, f. cultivation.
- cum, conj. when, since, seeing that.
- cum...tum, not only...but also; both...and; while...especially.
- cum, prep. with abl. with, in company of; enclitic with pers. pron. mecum, tecum, secum, nobiscum, &c.
- cunctus, -a, -um (more frequent in plur. cuncti, -ae, -a), adj. all.
- cūpiditas, -atis, f. desire, greed, longing.

cupidus, -a, -um, adj. avaricious, grasping.
cupio, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 3, desire, wish.
cur, adv. why, wherefore.
cūrā, -ae, f. care, anxiety.
Curio, -onis, m. Curio.
cursus, -us, m. course, journey, career.
custodia, -ae, f. customs-house.
Cyzicēnus, -a, -um, adj. of or belonging to Cyzicus, in north-west Asia Minor on the Sea of Marmora; subst. Cyzicēnus, -i, m. a citizen of Cyzicus.

dē, prep. with abl. from, down from, about, concerning, for.
dēbēō, -ūi, -itum, v. 2, to owe, to be indebted to, be bound to, be under an obligation to (I ought, should, must, &c.).
declārō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, announce, proclaim.
decīma (decīma, sc. pars.), -ae, f. a tenth part, tithe.
dēditō, -ōnis, f. capitulation, surrender.
dēdō, dedīdi, deditum, v. 3, give up, surrender.
dēfendō, -di, -sum, v. 3, defend, champion.
dēferō, -ferre, -tūli, -lātum, v. 3, bring, report, lay before, put into hands of.
dēindē, adv. afterwards, then, in the second place.
dēlabōr, -lapsus, v. dep. 3, descend.
delectatio, -ōnis, f. delight.
dēlēō, -lēvi, -lētum, v. 2, destroy, erase, wipe away.
dēliberatio, -ōnis, f. deliberation.
dēlibēro, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, deliberate.
dēligo, -lēgi, -lectum, v. 3, choose, select.

Dēlūs, -i, f. Delos, an island in the Aegean Sea; one of the Cyclādes.
dēnique, adv. at last, at length, finally, in a word.
dēnotō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, to mark or point out, indicate, designate, specify.
dēpellō, -pūli, -pulsum, v. 3, drive away, remove, beat off.
dēportō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, carry away from a province, bring home.
dēposcō, -pōposci, v. 3, demand, claim.
dēprēcātōr, -ōris, m. intercessor.
dēprīmo, -pressi, -pressum, v. 3, crush, overwhelm.
dēprōmō, -prompsi, -promptum, v. 3, draw forth, bring out.
dēsēro, -rētum, v. 3, forsake, desert, abandon.
dēsīdērīum, -ii, n. regret, longing for, desire.
dēsūm, -esse, -fui, v. irreg. fail, am wanting.
dētrāho, -xi, -ctum, v. 3, take away from.
dētrīmentum, -i, n. loss, harm, damage.
dēūs, -i, m. (plur. di, dei, dii), god.
dēvōcō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, call aside.
dīco, -xi, -ctum, v. 3, say, tell, assert, address the people dictu, supine of dico, to say.
dīēs, -ei, m. day (in sing. sometimes fem.).
dīfferō, differre, distūli, dīlātum, v. 3, to differ from dīffīcīlis, -e, adj. difficult.
dīffīdō, -fīsus, v. 3, to despair, be hopeless.
dīgnitas, -tātis, f. dignity, high rank, greatness, glory.
dīgnus, -a, -um, adj. worthy,

- deserving; superl. dignis-simus.
- disiunctus, -a, -um, part. adj.
separated from.
- distatio, -ōnis, f. postponement.
- diligens, -entis, adj. careful,
scrupulous, conscientious.
- diligenter, adv. diligently, carefully; compar. diligentius,
superl. diligentissime.
- diligō, dilexi, dilectum, v. 3,
love, prize, esteem.
- dimico, -avi, -atum, v. 1, con-
tend, fight.
- dimitto, -misi, -missum, v. 3,
dismiss, disband.
- diripio, -i, -eptum, v. 3, plunder, sack.
- discēdo, -ceasi, -cessum, v. 3,
depart.
- disciplinā, -ae, f. discipline,
training, knowledge, skill.
- discrimen, -inis, n. danger.
- disiunctus, -a, -um, part. adj.
separated, distant, remote from one another; superl. disiun-tissimus.
- dispersus, -a, -um, part. adj.
(dispergo), scattered.
- dispūtō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, debate, argue, investigate.
- dissentiō, -sensi, -sensum, v. 4,
differ in opinion, disagree,
dissent.
- disiipo, -avi, -atum, v. 1, scatter,
strew.
- districtus, -a, -um, part. adj.
(from distingo, v. 3), busied, engaged, occupied.
- diū, adv. a long time, long; superl.
diutissime.
- diuturnitas, -tatis, f. duration.
- diuturnus, -a, -um, adj. of long duration; lasting.
- diversus, -a, -um, adj. different,
opposite, in different quarters
of the globe.
- dividō, -visi, -visum, v. 3, separate, divide.
- divinitus, adv. by providence,
providentially, sent from heaven.
- divinus, -a, -um, adj. divine,
inspired.
- divitias, -iarum, f. plur. riches,
wealth, treasure.
- dō, dēdi, dātum, dāre, v. 1, give.
- dōcēo, dōcui, doctum, v. 2, teach,
instruct, inform.
- dōlor, -ōris, m. pain, grief, distress.
- dōmicillium, -ii, n. abode, home,
dwelling.
- dōmus, -ūs, f. home, house; locative,
domi, at home.
- dūbitō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, doubt,
hesitate.
- dūbius, -a, -um, adj. uncertain,
doubtful.
- dūcō, -xi, -ctum, v. 3, think, deem, derive; (in passive often = 'originate').
- ductus, -ūs, m. leadership.
- dūm, conj. while, whilst (with indic.); until (with subj.).
- dūō, -ae, -o, num. adj. two.
- duōdecim, num. twelve.
- dux, dūcis, m. and f. leader,
chief.
- ē or ex, prep. with abl. out of,
from, by reason of.
- ecquis, ecquid, interrog. pron. is there any who?
- ēdictum, -i, n. edict, proclamation.
- ēdūco, -xi, -ctum, v. 3, lead forth.
- efficio, -feci, -fectum, v. 3, effect,
achieve.
- effugio, -fugi, v. 3, escape.
- ēgo, mei, pers. pron. I.
- ēgrēgius, -a, -um, adj. excellent,
eminent.
- etismōdi, of that sort.
- ēlabōrō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, work hard, work out, elaborate.
- ēmergō, -mersi, -mersum, v. 3, emerge, come forth.

enim, conj. for.
equēs, -itīs, m. horseman, knight;
in plur. equites, the order of knights at Rome.
equitātūs, -ūs, m. cavalry.
erēptus, -a, -um, part. adj.
(eripio), torn away, wrested from.
erigo, erexi, erectum, v. 3, raise
up, encourage, cheer up.
erūdīo, -īvi and -īi, -itum, v. 4,
educate, teach, instruct.
escendō, -di, -sum, v. 3, mount,
ascend.
et, conj. and, also, even.
et...et, both...and.
et̄nim, conj. and indeed, and in fact.
et̄iam, conj. also, even, yet;
etiam atque etiam, again and
again.
etiāmsi, conj. even if, although.
ex or ē, prep. with abl. out of,
from, by, in accordance with.
excello, -cellī, -celsum, v. 3, excel, surpass.
excipio, -cēpi, -ceptum, v. 3, receive, welcome, give shelter to.
excitō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, rouse,
excite, inflame.
excrucio, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, torture, rack, afflict.
excursiō, -ōnis, f. inroad.
exemplum, -i, n. example, precedent.
exercō, -āi, -itum, v. 2, employ, train, manage (of the public taxes).
exercitatio, -ōnis, f. practice.
exercitatus, -a, -um, part. adj.
versed in, skilled in; superl.
exercitissimus.
exercitūs, -ūs, m. army.
exigo, -ēgi, -actum, v. 3, to exact, collect.
eximius, -a, -um, adj. distinguished, excellent.
existimo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, think,
judge, consider, reckon.

exitūs, -ūs, m. end.
exorsūs, -ūs, m. beginning, opening subject (of speech).
expello, -pūli, -pulsum, v. 3,
drive out.
expers, -rtis, adj. having no
share in, not privy to, free from, destitute of, without.
expētō, -īvi, -itum, v. 3, desire,
wish for.
expilō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, plunder,
pillage.
explico, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, free,
rescue.
explōrō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, explore, investigate, examine.
exportō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, export.
expugnatiō, -ōnis, f. a taking
by storm or assault.
exquirō, exquisivi, exquisitum,
v. 3, search for, inquire after.
existō, existiti, v. 3, stand forth.
expectatiō, -ōnis, f. expectation.
expectō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, expect, wait for, hope for, look
for.
extinguo, -nxi, -nctum, v. 3,
put out, quench.
extērus, -a, -um, adj. foreign.
extrēmus, -a, -um, adj. (superl.
of extērus), utmost, extreme,
last, at the end.
extūro, -ussī, -ustum, v. 3, burn
down, destroy by fire.
extūviae, -ārum, f. spoils.
facilē, adv. easily; compar. fa- cilius.
facilis, -e, adj. easy.
facilitās, -ātis, f. affability, courtesy, ease.
facio, fēci, factum, v. 3, do.
facultās, -ātis, f. power, opportunity, ability, capacity.
Falcidius, a Roman gentile name.
falsō, adv. falsely.
falsūs, -a, -um, adj. false.
fāma, -ae, f. fame, reputation,
character, report.

- fāmillā, -ae, f. establishment of slaves.
fānum, -i, n. shrine, sanctuary.
felicītās, -ātis, f. luck, good-fortune.
īrē, adv. generally, usually, as a rule.
ferendus, -a, -um, gerundive (fero), tolerable, to be borne.
ferō, ferre, tūli, lātum, v. irreg. bear, bring, allow.
fertilis, -e, adj. fertile, productive, rich.
fidēs, -ei, f. faith, honesty, faithfulness, loyalty, conscientiousness, credit.
finis, -is, m. end, limit, border, frontier, territory.
finitimus, -a, -um, adj. neighbouring, adjoining.
fiō, fieri, factus (used as pass. of facio), to become, happen, be done.
firmamentum, -i, n. prop, support, stay.
firmus, -a, -um, adj. strong, reliable; superl. firmissimus.
forensis, -e, adj. belonging to the Forum or law-courts, public, forensic, 'at the Bar'.
formido, -inis, f. fear.
formidolōsus, -a, -um, adj. formidable; superl. formidolosis-simus.
fortassē, adv. perhaps, possibly.
fortē, adv. (abl. of fors, 'chance'), by chance.
fortis, -e, adj. strong, bold, brave; superl. fortissimus.
fortitūdo, -inis, f. courage.
fortūnā, -ae, f. fortune, luck, prosperity, wealth.
forum, -i, n. forum, market-place (especially the Forum Romanum, or Forum at Rome).
frāter, -tris, m. brother.
frēquens, -entis, adj. in great numbers, populous, crowded.
frētus, -a, -um, adj. (with abl.), relying upon, trusting to.
fructūs, -ūs, m. fruit, profit, enjoyment, advantage.
frumentarius, -a, -um, adj. concerned with corn, or provisions; res frumentaria, grain, provisions.
frūor, fructus, v. 3 dep. enjoy, reap the advantage of.
fūga, -ae, f. flight.
fūgio, -i, -itum, v. 3, escape, escape from.
Gābinus, -i, m. the name of a Roman gens; adj. Gābinus, -a, -um (lex Gābinia), Gābinian, proposed by Gābinus.
Gallā, -ae, f. Gaul.
Gallus, -i, m. a Gaul.
gaudēo, gavisus sum, v. 2, rejoice, be glad.
gāza, -ae, f. treasure, riches.
gens, gentis, f. race, nation.
gēnus, -eris, n. kind, class, character.
gēro, gessi, gestum, v. 3, perform, carry on, wage (of war).
gesta, neut. plur. part. as subst. achievements, deeds.
Glābrio, -ōnis, m. proper name, Glābrio.
glōria, -ae, f. glory, renown.
gnāvus, -a, -um, adj. diligent, energetic, assiduous.
grādūs, -ūs, m. degree, rank.
Graeciā, -ae, f. Greece.
Graecus, -a, -um, adj. Greek.
grātīā, -ae, f. favour, thanks.
grāvis, -e, adj. disagreeable, of grave import, important, dignified, severe; compar. gravior, superl. gravissimus.
grāvītās, -ātis, f. weight, importance, impressiveness.
grāviter, adv. vehemently, seriously, severely, with weighty argument.
grāvō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, weigh

- down; in pass. hesitate, object to, shrink from.
- gubernō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, steer, direct.
- habēō, -tū, -itum, v. 2, have, hold, possess.
- herculē or herclē, adv. interj. By Hercules! (so mehercules, mehercule).
- hibernā, -ōrum, n. pl. winter-quarters.
- hibernō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, winter.
- hic, adv. here, herein.
- hic, hæc, hęc, dem. pron. this, this man, he (she, it); often conjoined with -cō, hęc.
- hiems, -em̄is, f. winter.
- Hispaniā, -ae, Spain.
- Hispaniensis, -e, adj. a native of Spain, Spanish.
- hodiē, adv. to-day.
- hōmō, -inis, m. a man, human being.
- honestus, -a, -um; adj. honourable, distinguished; superl. honestissimus.
- honor or hōnos, -ōris, m. honour, official position.
- Hortensius, Roman gentile name.
- hortor, -ātus, v. 1 dep. exhort, urge, incite, encourage.
- hostilis, -e, adj. hostile, unfriendly.
- hostis, -is, m. and f. enemy.
- hūc, adv. hither, to this place.
- hūmānitas, -ātis, f. gentleness, kindness, courtesy.
- lactūrā, -ae, f. loss, sacrifice.
- iam, adv. now, already, by this time.
- Ibi, adv. there.
- idem, eādem, idem, pron. the same.
- Idōnētus, -a, -um, adj. fit, suitable.
- Igitur, conj. therefore, accordingly, then.
- ignōminia, -ae, f. disgrace.
- ignorō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, to be ignorant of.
- illō, -a, -ud, pron. that, this, he (she, it); (illud often the well-known, the following).
- Illyricus, -a, -um, adj. of or belonging to Illyria (mod. Dalmatia and Albania).
- imminēō, v. 2, to overhang, threaten, menace.
- imminūō, -nūi, -nūtum, v. 3, lessen, curtail, diminish.
- immortalis, -e, adj. immortal.
- impēdiō, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 4, hinder.
- impērātor, -ōris, m. general, commander.
- imperātorius, -a, -um, adj. of or pertaining to a general.
- impērium, -ii, n. empire, dominion, command.
- impēro, -āvi, -ātum, v. 4, order, command.
- impertio, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 4, impart, bestow.
- impetrō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, obtain by asking.
- impētūs, -ūs, m. attack, onslaught, assault, weight.
- implicō, -cūi, -cītum (and -cāvi, -cātum), v. 1, entangle, involve, to be bound up with.
- imprōbō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, disapprove of, disallow, reject.
- impūdēns, -entis, adj. impudent, shameless.
- in, prep. with acc. into, to, on, for, against; with abl. in, in the case of, among.
- inauditus, -a, -um, part. adj. unheard-of.
- incipiō, -cēpi, -ceptum, v. 3, commence, begin.
- incōlūmīs, -e, adj. safe, unimpaired.
- incommōdum, -i, n. loss, damage.
- incredibilis, -e, adj. incredible, strange, beyond belief.
- incumbo, -cūbūi, -cūbitum, v. 3,

- to devote one's self to, to throw one's self into.
- indē, adv. thence, from that point or time.
- indigne, adv. unworthily; compar. indignus.
- indignūs, -a, -um, adj. unworthy.
- industrialis, -ae, f. diligence, activity.
- industriūs, -a, -um, adj. energetic, industrious.
- inēo, -ivi or -li, -itum, v. 4, enter, begin, commence.
- inferō, intūli, illātum, inferre, v. 3, to bring or carry into.
- infimus, -a, -um, lowest, weakest (superl. of inferūs, -a, -um).
- inflammō, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, set on fire, inflame.
- info, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, puff up, make proud.
- ingenium, -ii, n. ability, talent, wit.
- ingrātus, -a, -um, adj. ungrateful.
- inico, -iēci, -iectum, v. 3, inspire, cause.
- inimicus, -a, -um, adj. hostile; superl. inimicissimus.
- iniquitas, -atis, f. unreasonable-ness.
- initium, -ii, n. beginning.
- iniriā, -ae, f. injury, wrong, wrong-doing.
- iniriōsus, -a, -um, adj. injurious, unjust; adv. compar. inuriosius, somewhat unjustly.
- innōcens, -ntis, adj. guiltless, innocent, free from corruption.
- innōcentiā, -ae, f. freedom from corruption, purity of motive.
- innūmerābilis, -e, adj. innumerable.
- inōpiā, -ae, f. poverty, want, scarcity.
- inquam, defect. verb. 1st pers. sing. pres. I say.
- inruptiō, -ōnis, f. incursion, invasion.
- insidō, -ēdi, -essum, v. 3, settle upon, sink in.
- insignē, -is, n. badge, mark, token, emblem, symbol.
- insōlitus, -a, -um, adj. unwonted, unfamiliar, strange.
- inspecto, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, look upon, watch.
- institutum, -i, n. precedent, institution, usage.
- institutus, -a, -um, part. adj. (instituto), entered upon, begun, laid down.
- instructus, -a, -um, part. adj. (instruo), equipped, supplied, furnished with.
- insulā, -ae, f. island.
- insum, inesse, infūl, to be in, to be contained or found in.
- intēger, -gra, -grum, adj. entire, unbroken, with power unimpaired.
- intēgrē, adv. correctly, honestly, with clear conscience.
- intēgritas, -atis, f. uprightness.
- intelligo, -exi, -ectum, v. 3, understand, feel.
- inter, prep. with acc. in the course of, in the midst of.
- intercessiō, -ōnis, f. protest, intercession, veto.
- interficio, -fēci, -fectum, v. 3, kill.
- intērior, neut. interior, gen. -ioris, compar. inner, interior.
- interniciō, -ōnis, f. massacre, carnage.
- intrā, adv. and prep. with acc. within.
- intūdeō, -itus, v. 2 dep. look at, behold, regard.
- inultus, -a, -um, adj. upon whom no vengeance is taken, unpunished.
- inūsitatūs, -a, -um, adj. strange, unusual, novel.
- inūtilis, -e, adj. useless.
- invēnio, -vēni, -ventum, v. 4, find, discover.

- inveterasō, -veterāvi, v. 3, grow old, become established, firmly rooted.
- invictūs, -a, -um, adj. unconquered, invincible.
- invisūs, -a, -um, adj. hateful, displeasing.
- invidus, -a, -um, adj. unwilling.
- ipse, -a, -um, dem. pron. (used both as subst. and as adj.) self, myself (himself, yourself, &c.), mere, simple.
- irascor, irātus, v. 3 dep. be angry.
- is, ēa, id, dem. pron. he (she, it), that, this, such.
- iste, -a, -ud, dem. pron. this, that (of yours, especially used of things connected with the person addressed). In speeches, one's opponent; often with irony or contempt.
- ita, adv. so, thus, accordingly, and so.
- Itālia, -ae, f. Italy.
- Itaque, conj. and so, accordingly.
- Item, adv. likewise, so.
- iter, itinēria, n. journey, way, march.
- Itōrum, adv. a second time, again.
- iucundus, -a, -um, adj. pleasant, agreeable; superl. iucundissimus.
- iudex, -icis, m. judge.
- iudicium, -ii, n. judgment, sentence, verdict.
- iudicō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, judge, decide, pass verdict, proclaim, declare.
- Jugurthā, -ae, m. proper name, Jugurtha (king of the Numidians).
- ius, iūris, n. law, right; adv. iure, rightly, duly.
- iussūs, -ūs, m. command, order.
- iuvō, iūvi, iūtum, v. 1, assist, succour, support.
- L, abbreviation for Lucius.
- labāficō, -ficī, -factum, v. 3, cause to shake, undermine, shatter, destroy.
- labēs, -is, f. stain, disgrace, blot.
- labōr, -ōris, m. labour, toil, exertion, energy.
- laboriosus, -a, -um, adj. toilsome, industrious; superl. laboriosissimus.
- labōro, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, labour, strive.
- lācesso, -ivi, -itum, v. 3, provoke, challenge.
- laetitia, -ae, f. joy, pleasure.
- laetor, -ātus, v. 1 dep. rejoice, be glad at.
- lātē, adv. widely (compar. lātius).
- lātēbra, -ae, f. hiding-place, covert, retreat.
- lātō, -ni, v. 2, lie hid.
- laudo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, praise, eulogize.
- laus, laudis, f. praise, fame, glory.
- legatio, -ōnis, f. embassy, legation, the persons of an embassy.
- legātus, -i, m. ambassador, envoy, deputy.
- legio, -ōnis, f. legion (military term).
- lēgo, lēgi, lectum, v. 3, read, read about.
- lēgō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, to appoint as legatus (staff-officer).
- Lentulus, -i, m. proper name (surname of a family of the gens Cornelia).
- lex, lēgis, f. law.
- libenter, adv. willingly, gladly.
- liber, -tra, -trum, adj. free.
- liberō, adv. freely.
- liberi, -ōrum, m. plur. (of liber), children.
- liberō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, free, liberate.
- libertās, -ātis, f. freedom.

- libido, -inis, f. passion, fancy, caprice, lawless desire.
licet, licitum and licitum est, v. 2 impers. it is permitted, all may.
litterae, -arum, f. plur. letters, despatches.
locuplēs, -ētis, adj. rich, wealthy; superl. locupletissimus.
locuplētō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, grow rich, enrich.
lōcus, -ī, m. place.
longē, adv. far, far off.
longinquitās, -ātis, f. distance.
longinquūs, -a, -um, adj. remote, distant.
longūs, -a, -um, adj. long, extending far; compar. longior.
lōquor, -cūtus, v. 3 dep. speak, say.
Lūcūs, -ī, m. a Roman praenomen (abbrev. L.).
Lūcullūs, -ī, family name of the Licinian gens.
lūdūs, -ī, m. school.
lūmen, -inis, n. light; metaph. gem, star, glory.
lux, lūcis, f. light, daylight, salvation.
M., abbreviation for Manius.
maculā, -ae, f. spot, blemish, stain, disgrace.
maerōr, -ōris, m. grief.
māgis, adv. more.
magistrātūs, -ūs, m. magistracy, magistrate.
magnitudo, -inis, f. greatness.
magnus, -a, -um, adj. great, large, rich, splendid (compar. maior, -us, gen. -ōris; superl. maximus).
māiorēs, -um, m. pl. ancestors; superl. maximus).
māiorēs. See magnus.
mālo, mālui, malle, v. irreg. prefer, choose rather.
mālum, -ī, n. evil, calamity, mischief.
mando, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, commit to one, put in one's hands, assign, bestow.
maneo, -nsi, -nsum, v. 2, remain, stand firm.
Manius, a Roman praenomen.
mansuetudo, -inis, f. kindness.
manus, -ūs, f. hand; (2) band, troop, host.
Marcellus, -ī, m. proper name (belonging to the plebeian gens Claudia).
mare, -is, n. sea.
maritimus, -a, -um, adj. maritime, marine.
Mārius, -ī, m. proper name of a Roman gens.
māturus, -a, -um, adj. early, speedy.
maximē, adv. in the highest degree, especially.
Maximus, -a, -um. See magnus. Maximus is a title of Q. Fabius.
me, accusat. sing. of pers. pr. ego.
Medea, -ae, f. proper name, Medea.
medeor, -ōri, v. 2 dep. heal, cure.
medius, -a, -um, adj. that is in the middle, mid, middle.
membrum, -ī, n. limb, member, part.
memini, -meminisse, v. defect. remember, recall, call to mind.
mēmōria, -ae, f. memory, recollection; post hominum memoriam, 'in the memory of man', 'since history began'.
mens, mentis, f. mind, purpose, thoughts.
mercātor, -ōris, m. merchant, trader.
merx, mercis, f. wares, commodities, merchandise.
Mētellus, -ī, m. proper name of a family of the Roman gens Caecilia.
mētū, -ūī, -ūtum, v. 3, fear.

- mētus, -ūs, m. fear, apprehension.
mēs, -a, -um, poss. adj. my, mine, of me.
mihi, dat. sing. of ego, 'to me'.
miles, -itis, m. soldier.
militāris, -e, adj. military, war-like.
militia, -ae, f. military service, warfare; locative, militiae, in war, in the field.
millē, subst. n., with plur. millia, combined with gen. a thousand.
minae, -arum, f. plur. menaces, threats.
minitōr, -ātus, v. I dep. threaten, menace.
minōr, -ātus, v. I, threaten, menace.
minus, adv. less; with quo (quominus) as final conj. that ...not; but quo minus in § 59, 'by what the less...by that the...'
mirōr, -atus sum, v. I dep. wonder at.
misceo, miscui, mixtum, v. 2, mix, mingle, embroil, stir up.
Misēnum, -i, n. proper name (of a promontory and town in Campania in Italy).
misēria, -ae, f. affliction, distress.
misēricordia, -ae, f. pity, mercy, compassion.
Mithridātes, -is or -i, m. proper name, Mithridates, king of Pontus.
Mithridaticus, -a, -um, adj. of or belonging to or concerned with Mithridates.
mitto, misi, missum, v. 3, send.
moderātio, -ōnis, f. moderation, justice, self-restraint.
moderātus, -a, -um, adj. temperate, self-controlled; compar. moderatior.
modō, adv. only, but now, recently.
- mōdus, -i, m. fashion, sort, limit, restriction; quemadmodum, how.
mōlestus, -a, -um, adj. troublesome, hostile, vexatious.
mors, -tis, f. death.
mōtus, -ūs, m. movement, fall, collapse, shock.
multitūdō, -ōnis, f. multitude, number.
multō, adv. by much, by far, much.
multus, -a, -um, adj. much (plur. many).
mūlo, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 4, fortify.
mūtus, -ōria, n. function, duty.
Murēna, -ae, proper name of a family of the Licinian gens.
mūrus, -i, m. wall.
- nam, conj. for.
nascor, nātus sum, v. 3 dep. be born.
nātio, -ōnis, f. nation, people.
nauticus, -a, -um, adj. nautical, naval.
nāvālis, -e, adj. naval, marine.
nāviculārius, -ii, m. ship-owner.
nāvigātio, -ōnis, f. navigation, voyage.
nāvigō, -āvi, -ātum, v. I, sail, navigate, go on a voyage.
nāvis, -is, f. ship.
navus, -a, -um (gnavus), adj. diligent, busy.
ne, conj. that...not, lest, that.
neq(ue), nor; neq(ue)
 .. neq(ue), neither...nor;
neq(ue)...et (or -que), not only not...but also.
necessārius, -a, -um, adj. necessary, unavoidable, inevitable.
necessitūdō, -ōnis, f. close connection, intimacy, tie.
neco, -avi, -ātum, v. I, kill, butcher, massacre.
negligo, -exi, -ectum, v. 3, neglect, disregard.

- nēgōtior, -atus, v. 1 dep. trade, carry on business.
nēgōtium, ū, n. business, affair.
nēmō, -īnis (but in classical Lat. nullus, from nullus, is used as the gen., and nullō, nullā, for the abl.), no one, no man, none.
nēquē (= nec), and not, nor; neque vero, nor indeed.
nervus, -i, m. sinew.
nōvō, adv. and not, nor.
nihil, n. indecl. nothing; as an adv. in no respect, not at all.
nimis, adv. too, too much.
nimius, -a, -um, adj. excessive, too much, too great.
nisi, conj. unless, except, save only.
nōbilis, -e, adj. famous; superl. nobilissimus.
nobilitas, -ātis, f. renown, fame, celebrity.
nōceo, -cul, -ctum, v. 2, harm, injure.
nōlo, nōlui, nolle, v. irreg. to be unwilling.
nōmen, -īnis, n. name, fame.
nōmīno, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, to name.
nōn, adv. not; nonne, introducing a question expecting the answer 'Yes'.
nondum, adv. not yet.
nosco, nōvi, nōtum, v. 3, know.
noster, -stra, -strum, poss. adj. our, of us (often best translated by 'from Rome', or 'Roman').
nōvus, -a, -um, adj. new, fresh.
nullus, -a, -um, adj. no, none, not any.
num, adv., interrog. particle usually implying that an answer in the negative is expected; in indirect interrogation, whether.
Numantia, -ae, f. proper name, a town in Spain.
nūmērus, -i, m. number.
- numquam, adv. never.
nunc, adv. now, as it is, as things are.
nuntius, -ii, m. messenger, message.
nūper, adv. lately, recently.
- ōbō, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 4, enter upon, engage in, execute, accomplish.
oblīvīō, -ōnis, f. a forgetting, forgetfulness, effacement of the memory of.
obōediō, -ivi, -itum, v. 4, obey, yield obedience to.
obscurus, -a, -um, adj. in the dark, unknown, secret.
obscundō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, comply with, humour, favour.
obtes, -idis, m. and f. hostage.
obsidō, -sēdi, -sessum, v. 2, besiege, blockade, beset, invest.
obsidiō, -ōnis, f. investment, blockade.
obsōlescō, -āvi, v. 3, to become obsolete.
obtempōrō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, submit to, obey, listen to.
obtractō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, disparage, underrate.
occāsio, -ōnis, f. opportunity.
occultō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, hide, conceal.
occūpo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, seize, take possession of, locked up, sunk (of funds).
Ōcēānus, -i, m. the ocean.
ōculus, -i, m. eye.
ōdi, odisse, v. defect. hate.
ōdium, -ii, n. hate, enmity, hatred.
offensio, -ōnis, f. failure, misfortune, blow.
offero, obtūli, oblātum, offerre, v. 3, offer, present, proffer, bestow.
ōmitto, -isi, -issum, v. 3, neglect, lay aside, pass over.
omnis, -e, adj. all, every, the whole, every kind of.

- onus, -aris, n. load, cargo.
opimus, -a, -um, adj. rich, fertile.
opinio, -onis, f. opinion, belief, impression, expectation, prejudice, preconception.
opinor, -atus, v. 1 dep. think.
oportere (oportet, oportuit), v. 2 impers. it behoves, is becoming, one ought.
oppidum, -i, n. town.
opportunitas, -atis, f. fitness, convenience.
oppressio, -pressi, -pressum, v. 3, crus, overpower.
oppugno, -avi, -atum, v. 1, assault, attack, assail.
ops, opis, f. power, resources, means.
optimus, -a, -um, superl. of bonus; adv. optime, splendidly.
opto, -avi, -atum, v. 1, wish for, pray for, desire.
ora, -ae, f. border, coast, region.
oratio, -onis, f. speech, utterance, language, theme.
orbis, -is, m. circle (with terrae, 'the world').
ordo, -inis, m. order, class, rank.
ornamentum, -i, n. ornament, decoration, adornment, distinction.
ornatus, -us, -um, adv. in graceful style (of oratory).
ornatus, -a, -um, adj. fitted out, equipped, wealthy, adorned, embellished, distinguished, honourable; superl. ornatissimus.
ornō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, equip, fit out.
ostendō, -di, -sum and -tum, v. 3, show, display.
Ostiensis, -e, adj. belonging to Ostia (the port of Rome, at the mouth of the Tiber).
ostium, -ii, n. mouth, entrance.
- P., abbreviation for Publius.
pacatus, -a, -um, part. adj. peaceful, quiet, pacifically disposed.
pacō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, pacify, make quiet or peaceful.
Pamphylia, -ae, f. Pamphylia, a district in southern Asia Minor.
par, paris, adj. equal, equal to.
paratus, -a, -um, part. adj. ready, prepared; superl. paratissimus.
parens, -entis, m. and f. parent.
parco, -ui, -itum, v. 2, obey.
pars, partis, f. part, division, region; aliqua ex parte, to some degree.
partim, adv. partly, in part, a part, some of, some.
parum, adv. and subst. indecl. too little.
parvulus, -a, -um, adj. very small, petty.
parvus, -a, -um, adj. little, small, few.
pastio, -onis, f. pasturing, pasture.
patēficio, -feci, -factum, v. 3, lay open, disclose.
patēō, -ui, v. 2, to lie open, be free, accessible, be evident.
pater, -tris, m. father, ancestor.
patior, passus sum, v. 3 dep. endure, suffer, allow.
paterius, -a, -um, adj. paternal.
paucus, -a, -um, adj. (mostly used in plur.), few, little.
paulō, adv. by a little, a little.
pax, pacis, f. peace.
pecū, dat. -ui, abl. -ū; pl. pecua, gen. pecunum, n. cattle.
pecūarius, -a, -um, adj. of or belonging to cattle; with res, stock of cattle.
pecuniā, -ae, f. money, riches, sums of money.
pecus, pecoris, n. cattle, herds, flocks.
pello, pepuli, pulsum, v. 3, repulse, defeat.
pēnitūs, adv. inwardly, deeply, into the inmost part.
penitō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, pay.

- p̄r, prep. with acc. in accordance with, through, by means of, owing to (of a reason that permits or hinders); in oaths, by.
- p̄r̄ad̄ulescens, -entis, adj. very young.
- p̄r̄br̄ēvis, -e, adj. very short, very small.
- p̄rd̄itus, -a, -um, part. adj. (perdo), ruined, broken.
- p̄r̄fectus, -a, -um, part. adj. (perficio), perfected, finished.
- p̄r̄f̄ero, p̄r̄t̄ūli, p̄r̄l̄ātum, p̄r̄ferre, v. 3 irreg. bear, bring, carry.
- p̄r̄f̄icio, -f̄eci, -fectum, v. 3, accomplish, bring to pass.
- p̄r̄f̄ugium, -ii, n. refuge, shelter.
- p̄r̄ic̄ul̄ōsus, -a, -um, adj. dangerous.
- p̄r̄ic̄ulum, -i, n. danger, peril.
- p̄r̄in̄iqūis, -a, -um, adj. very unfair.
- p̄r̄itus, -us, -um, adj. skilled, experienced, practised; superl. p̄r̄it̄issimus.
- p̄r̄m̄agnus, -a, -um, adj. very great.
- p̄r̄man̄ō, -mansī, -mansum, v. 2, last, persist, abide, continue.
- p̄r̄mitto, -misi, -missum, v. 3, allow, permit, entrust to.
- p̄r̄multus, -a, -um, adj. very much, very many.
- p̄r̄p̄t̄uus, -a, -um, adj. unbroken, continuous.
- p̄r̄s̄equor, -c̄it̄us, v. 3 dep. follow up, pursue closely, prosecute, avenge.
- P̄ers̄ēs, ae. m. proper name, King Perses or Perseus.
- p̄r̄severant̄ia, -ae, f. perseverance, steadfastness.
- p̄r̄sp̄icio, -sp̄exi, -spectum, v. 3, perceive, see through, see into.
- p̄r̄t̄imesco, -m̄ti, v. 3, dread.
- p̄r̄t̄ineo, -ti, v. 2, reach to, relate to, concern, affect.
- p̄r̄vid̄ō, -v̄asi, -vasum, v. 3, spread among, impress, reach.
- p̄r̄ven̄io, -v̄eni, -ventum, v. 4, come to, come into, arrive at.
- Philippus, -i, m. proper name, Philip.
- pl̄ēb̄ēs, -ēi and -i, f. old form of plebs, pl̄ēbis, f. the commons of Rome.
- pl̄ēnus, -a, -um, adj. full; superl. pl̄ēnissimus.
- pl̄ūrimus, -a, -um, adj. (superl. of multus), very many (much), a great number.
- pl̄ūs, pl̄ūris (subst.); plural, pl̄ūres, neut. plura (subst. and adj.), compar. of multus, more, several.
- p̄oenā, -ae, f. penalty, punishment.
- Poenicus, -a, -um, adj. Punic, Carthaginian.
- Poenus, -a, -um, adj. Punic, Carthaginian; as. subst. Poenus, -i, a Carthaginian.
- p̄ōt̄ā, -ae, m. and f. poet.
- p̄ollic̄eor, p̄ollic̄itus, v. 2 dep. promise, proffer.
- Pomp̄ēius, -i, m. proper name, Pompeius.
- p̄ōno, p̄ōui, p̄ōit̄um, v. 3, place, set, base upon.
- Pont̄ūs, -i, m. Pontus, a district in Asia Minor.
- p̄ōp̄ulus, -i, m. people.
- p̄ort̄ūs, -ūs, m. harbour, haven, port.
- possum, possi, p̄ōt̄ui, v. irreg. am able, can.
- post̄eā, adv. afterwards.
- post̄eāquam, conj. after that, after (with indic.).
- post̄r̄im̄ō, adv. finally.
- post̄ul̄ō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, ask, demand.
- p̄ōtens, -entis, part. adj. mighty, powerful; superl. potentissimus.

pōtestās, -ātis, f. power, authority.
potissimum, adv. preferably, rather, above all.
praeceptum, -i, n. principle, precepts, teaching.
praecipuus, -a, -um, adj. special, peculiar.
praecīlārus, -a, -um, adj. brilliant, splendid, famous.
praeda, -ae, f. plunder, pillage.
praedīcō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, say, relate.
praeditūs, -a, -um, part. adj. gifted, endowed, furnished with.
praedō, -ōnis, m. robber, brigand, pirate.
praefēro, -ferre, -tūli, -lātum, v. irreg. prefer, place before.
praeficiō, -fēcī, -fectum, v. 3, set over.
praepōnō, -posūi, -positum, v. 3, set over, set in command.
praescribo, -scripsī, -scriptum, v. 3, prescribe, appoint, ordain.
praesens, -entis, part. adj. (praesum), present, in person, on the spot, before one's eyes.
praesentiā, -ae, f. presence.
praesertim, adv. especially, chiefly, principally.
praesideo, -sēdī, v. 2, guard, protect.
praesidium, -ii, n. protection, garrison, guard.
praestō, -stī, -stum or -stum, v. 1, warrant, be surety for, guarantee, perform.
praesum, praesesse, praestī, to be over, to command.
praeter, prep. with acc. except, beyond, contrary to.
praeterea, adv. besides.
praetērō, -īvi and -īi, -stum, ire, v. pass by, pass over.
praetērītā, -ōrum, neut. plur. of past part. the past.

(B 102)

praetōr, -ōris, m. praetor (Roman magistrate).
praetōrius, -a, -um, adj. praetorian, of or belonging to a praetor, who has been praetor.
prēmo, pressī, pressum, v. 3, press, oppress, crush.
primum, adv. first, in the first place, firstly.
primus, -a, -um, adj., superl. first, foremost.
princeps, -cipis, m. and f. first, chief, chief person.
principium, -ii, n. beginning.
privātus, -a, -um, part. adj. private; as subst. privatus, -i, m. a private person, one not in office.
prō, prep. with abl. before, for, on behalf of, in place of, in return for, according to, conformably with.
prō, interjection expressing wonder or grief.
prōcessō, -ōnis, f. advance, march forward.
prōcul, adv. far off, far away.
prōditus, -a, -um, part. adj. (prōdō), hand down, record.
proellum, -ii, n. battle, contest, engagement.
prōfectō, adv. surely, certainly, undoubtedly.
prōficiscor, -fectus, v. 3 dep. depart, set out, start, originate from, proceed from.
prōfiteor, -fessus, v. 2 dep. declare.
prōfūgio, -fūgi, -fūgitum, v. 3, flee, escape, take to flight.
progressio, -ōnis, f. advance.
prōhibēō, -tī, -itum, v. 2, prevent, check, restrain.
prōmulgō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, publish, make known.
prōpe, prep. with acc. near; adv. nearly, almost.
prōponō, -pōsūi, -pōsitum, v. 3, set forth, place before.

- prōprius, -a, -um, adj. special, one's own, characteristic.
- propter, prep. with acc. near, hard by; on account of, by reason of; as adv. near, at hand, hard by.
- propterea, adv. on that account; with quod, because.
- prōpugnāculum, -i, n. bulwarks, defence.
- prōsterno, -strāvi, -strātum, v. 3, throw down, overthrow.
- prōvideo, -vidi, -visum, v. 2, foresee, provide for, care for, take care.
- prōvinciā, -ae, f. province, area of administration.
- prōvoco, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, stir up, challenge.
- proximus, -a, -um, superl. next, ensuing, the next following.
- prudentiā, -ae, f. discretion, prudence, sagacity.
- publicanus, -a, -um, adj. concerned with the public revenue; as subst. publicanus, -i, m. farmer of taxes.
- publicus, -a, -um, adj. public.
- Publius, -ii, a Roman praenomen (abbrev. P.).
- pūdet (pūdeo), -ūi, v. 2, impersonal, to be ashamed, feel shame.
- pūdōr, -ōris, m. shame, sense of honour, conscientiousness.
- pueritiā, -ae, f. boyhood.
- pugna, -ae, f. fight, battle.
- pugno, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, fight.
- pulcher, -chra, -chrum, adj. beautiful, glorious; superl. pulcherrimus.
- Punicus, -a, -um, adj. Punic, Carthaginian.
- pūto, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, think, consider, deem.
- Q., abbreviation for Quintus.
- qua, adv. (abl. fem. of qui), where, how, by what means.
- quaerō, quaesivi, quaesitum, v. 3, ask, inquire, seek, look for.
- quaestōr, -ōris, m. quaestor (Roman magistrate and financial officials).
- quaestūs, -ūs, m. gain, trade.
- quālis, -e, pron. adj. interrog. and rel. of what sort, what kind of, such as; talīs...qualis, such...as.
- quā, adv., after compar. than, as; in dependent clauses, indirect questions, &c. how; tam...quam, so...as, so much...as.
- quamquam, conj. though, although.
- quantus, -a, -um, adj. how great; tantus...quantus, so great...as.
- quārē, adv. wherefore, therefore.
- quāsi, adv. as if, as though, as it were.
- quattuōr, num. adj. four.
- quē, conj., enclitic, and.
- quemadmodum, or quem ad modum, adv. in what manner, how.
- quērimoniā, -ae, f. complaint.
- quēror, quēstus, v. 3 dep. lament, complain.
- qui, quae, quod (gen. cuius), pron. rel. who, which, that.
- quicumque, quaecumque, quodcumque, rel. pron. whoever, whatever, whosoever.
- quidam, quaedam, quoddam (and subst. quiddam), pron. indef. a certain, somebody (something).
- quidem, adv. indeed; no...quidem, not even.
- quies, -ētis, f. repose, rest.
- quin, conj. but that, that.
- Quintus, -i, m. proper name, Quintus; abbrev. Q.
- Quirīs, -itīs (mostly in plur. Quirites, -itium or -itum), m. Quirites (= Romans).

- quis, quis, quid, pron. interrog. who? which? what? adv. quid? what? how? again, moreover; why, wherefore.
- quis, quis, quid, pron. indef. as subst. anyone, anybody, someone; usually combined with si, num, nisi, &c.
- quisnam, m. and f. quidnam, interr. pron. who (what) pray? who in the world?
- quisquam, quaequam, quicquam (quidquam), pron. indef. anyone, anything, something.
- quisquē, quaeque, quidque, indef. pron. each, every (often conjoined with a superl. to denote a whole class).
- quō, adv. whither, to which place; on which account, wherefore; as final conj. in order that, that.
- quocumque, adv. whithersoever.
- quōd, conj. because, in that, that, the fact that, as to the fact that.
- quodsi (or as two words, quod si), conj. but if, and if, if however.
- quominus (or as two words, quominus), conj. that...not.
- quondam, adv. formerly, once, once upon a time.
- quoniam, conj. since, seeing that, because.
- quōque, adv. also.
- quōtē, indecl. adj. how many, as many as.
- quōtannis, every year, annually.
- rāpiō, rāpi, raptum, v. 3. hurry along, hasten.
- rātio, -ōnis, f. way, manner, system, plan, view, interests, respect, regard, consideration.
- recipio, -cēpi, -ceptum, v. 3. receive; with se, betake one's self, return.
- reclamō, -avi, -atum, v. 1. shout in disapproval, protest, cry out against.
- recondor, -atus, v. 1 dep. call to mind, recollect.
- recreō, -avi, -atum, v. 1. restore, renew, refresh, invigorate.
- rectō, adv. rightly, duly.
- recupero, -avi, -atum, v. 1. regain, recover.
- redimō, -ēmi, -emptum, v. 3. to buy, buy up, farm, contract for, ransom.
- reditus, -us, m. return.
- redundo, -avi, -atum, v. 1. overflow, deluge.
- referō, -ferre, -tūli, -lātum, v. irreg. bring a motion before the senate.
- refert, impers. it is of importance, it matters; parvi refert, it matters little.
- refertus, -a, -um, adj. filled with, thronged, crowded (gen. of persons; abl. of things).
- reficio, -feci, -fectum, v. 3. reappoint, continue in command.
- refugio, -fugi, -fugitum, v. 3. escape, take refuge, shrink from.
- refutō, -avi, -atum, v. 1. refute, disprove.
- regalis, -e, adj. royal, kingly.
- regiō, -ōnis, f. region, district.
- regius, -a, -um, adj. royal, sovereign.
- regnō, -avi, -atum, v. 1. reign, rule.
- regnum, -i, n. rule, kingdom, sovereignty.
- regō, rexi, rectum, v. 3. rule, control, direct.
- relictus, -a, -um, part. adj. (relinquo) left, left unpunished.
- religiōsus, -a, -um, adj. religious, scrupulous, sacred, regarded as holy, inviolate; superl. religiosissimus.
- relinquo, -liqui, -lictum, v. 3.

- leave, leave unpunished or un-avenged, neglect.
- rēliquus, -a, -um, adj. remaining, remainder, the rest.
- rēmāno, -mansī, -mansum, v. 2, remain, abide, endure.
- rēmex, -mīgis, m. rower, oarsman.
- rēmōrōr, -ātus sum, v. 1 dep. delay.
- rēnōvō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, renew, restore.
- rēnuntio, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, report, return (of a presiding magistrate announcing a successful candidate).
- rēpellō, -pūli, -pulsum, v. 3, drive back, repulse, repel.
- rēpentē, adv. suddenly.
- repentīnus, -a, -um, adj. sudden.
- rēporto, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, bear back, bring back.
- rēprīmo, -pressī, -pressum, v. 3, check, restrain.
- repugno, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, oppose, withstand, contend against.
- rēquirō, -quisīvī, -quisitum, v. 3, seek, search for, need, feel the want of, ask, inquire.
- rēs, rēi, f. thing, affair, matter, event, fortunes, property, substance, capital.
- respondēō, -dī, -sum, v. 2, answer.
- respublica (or two words, res publica), gen. reipublicae (rei publicae), f. state, republic, commonwealth.
- resto, -stītī, v. 1, remain.
- rētardō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, keep back, hinder, detain, delay.
- rētīneo, -tī, -tentum, v. 2, hold fast, retain, preserve.
- rēvōcō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, call back, recall.
- rex, rēgis, m. king, monarch, tyrant.
- Rhōdīūs, -a, -um, adj. Rhodian;
- as subst.* Rhōdīūs, -ī, m. a Rhodian.
- rōbūr, -ōris, n. strength, vigour.
- rōgātus, -ūs, m. request.
- rōgō, -āvī, -ātum, v. 1, ask.
- Rōma, -ae, f. Rome; locative, Romae, at Rome.
- Rōmānus, -a, -um, adj. Roman.
- rūmōr, -ōris, m. rumour, report, common talk.
- rūo, rūi, rūtum, v. 3, fall, go to ruin.
- saepē, adv. often, frequently; compar. saepius; superl. saepissime.
- saltus, -ūs, m. forest or woodland pasture.
- sālūs, -ūtis, f. safety, welfare.
- salvus, -a, -um, adj. safe, unharmed.
- Sāmūs (or Samos), -ī, f. Samos, an island off the coast of Asia Minor.
- sanctūs, -a, -um, adj. sacred, holy, venerable; superl. sanctissimus.
- sanguis, -inis, m. blood.
- sapiens, -entis, adj. wise, prudent, sagacious.
- sāplentīa, -ae, f. wisdom.
- Sardinīa, -ae, f. the island Sardinia.
- sātis, adv. enough.
- scēlus, -ōris, n. crime, wickedness.
- scientīa, -ae, f. knowledge.
- scio, scīvī, scītum, v. 4, know.
- Scīpiō, -ōnis, m. Scipio, family name (of the gens Cornelia).
- scribō, scripsī, scriptum; v. 3, write, describe, tell.
- scriptūrā, -ae, f. tax paid on public pastures, grazing-tax.
- sē (sese), pron. reflex. himself (herself, itself), themselves; gen. sui.
- secundūs, -a, -um, adj. favourable.

- sōcūs, -is, f. axe (of Roman lictors).
- sōd, conj. but, yet, on the contrary.
- sōiungo, -iunxi, -iunctum, v. 3, disjoin, disunite, separate.
- sēmpēr, adv. ever, always, perpetually.
- senātorius, -a, -um, adj. of a senator, senatorial.
- senātūs, -ūs, m. Senate.
- sententiā, -ae, f. opinion, sentiment, meaning, purpose, judgment, decision, sentence.
- sentiō, sensi, sensum, v. 4, feel, perceive.
- sēpeliō, -pēlvi or -ii, -pūltum, v. 4, bury, put an end to.
- sermō, -ōnis, m. talk, conversation, report.
- Sertoriānus, -a, -um, adj. of or connected with Sertorius.
- servilis, -e, adj. servile, connected with slaves (bellum, Slave War).
- Serviliūs, -a, -um, adj. name of a Roman gens.
- servio, -ivi or -ii, -itum, v. 4, serve, be a slave or subject to.
- servitūs, -ūtis, f. slavery.
- sēvērūs, -a, -um, adj. severe, stern, cruel.
- si, conj. if.
- sibi, dat. of reflex. pron. se (sing. and plur.).
- sic, adv. so, thus.
- Sicilia, -ae, f. the island of Sicily.
- sicut, adv. as, even as, like.
- significātiō, -ōnis, f. indication, meaning.
- signum, -i, n. statue.
- similitēr, adv. in like manner, similarly.
- simulātiō, -ōnis, f. pretence.
- simulō, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, feign, counterfeit, pretend.
- simultās, -ātis, f. hostility, feud.
- sine, conj. but if.
- sine, prep. with abl. without.
- singūlaris, -e, adj. singular, remarkable, unparalleled, unique, unrivalled.
- singūli, -ae, -a, distrib. num. adj. separate, each several.
- sino, sivi, situm, v. 3, permit, allow.
- Sinōps, -is, f. Sinope, a town on the Black Sea.
- sinus, -ūs, m. bay.
- socius, -a, -um, adj. sharing, joining in, confederate; as subst. socius, -i, m. ally.
- solēo, -itūs, v. 2, be wont, be accustomed.
- solum, adv. only, alone.
- solus, -a, -um, adj. alone, only, the only.
- solutiō, -ōnis, f. payment.
- solutus, -a, -um, part. adj. (solvo), freed from.
- spēculātor, -ōris, m. spy.
- spēro, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, hope, hope for.
- spēs, spai, f. hope.
- spiritus, -ūs, m. breath, life, spirit, pride, arrogance.
- splendōr, -ōris, m. brightness, glory.
- spōllā, -ōrum, n. plur. spoil.
- spōllō, -avi, -ātum, v. 1, strip, despoil.
- statim, adv. forthwith, at once, immediately.
- stātūō, -ui, -ūtum, v. 3, fix, determine, resolve.
- stipendium, -ii, n. tribute, tax, pay for military service, campaign.
- stūdium, -ii, n. zeal, eagerness, devotion, party spirit, partisanship.
- sublatus, -a, -um, part. adj. (tollo), removed, taken away, abolished.
- subsidium, -ii, n. help, aid, support.

- succedo, -cessi, -cessum, v. 3.
 take the place of, succeed.
suffragium, -ii, n. vote.
Sullā, -ae, m. proper name (of the gens Cornelia).
sum, esse, fūi, v. irreg. to be,
 to be in existence.
summus, superl. adj. (superus),
 very great, in highest degree,
 height or depth of.
sumō, sumpai, sumptum, v. 3,
 take.
sumptūs, -ūs, m. expense,
 charge, cost, outlay.
sūperbus, -a, -um, adj. proud,
 haughty.
superior, -us, compar. adj.
 (sūpērūs), gen. superioris,
 preceding, former, previous.
supēro, -avi, -atum, v. 1, overcome.
supplex, -icis, m. and f. a suppliant.
supplicium, -ii, n. torture, outrage.
suscipio, -cēpi, -cēptum, v. 3,
 take up, undertake, begin,
 adopt, take upon one's self,
 receive, suffer (of a penalty),
 incur.
sūus, -a, -um, poss. refl. adj.
 one's own, his (her, its), own,
 their own.
Syrīā, -ae, f. the country of Syria.
tābulā, -ae, f. picture, painting.
tacitō, adv. (tacitus), silently.
tācitus, -a, -um, adj. silent,
 without employing words.
tāctōr, -tra, -trum, adj. foul,
 hideous, horrid.
tālis, -e, adj. such, of such a kind.
tān, adv. so, so much.
tāmen, conj. yet, however,
 nevertheless.
tāmeti, conj. although.
tandēm, adv. at length, at last,
 finally; in questions, pray,
 pray now.
tantum, adv. so much, so greatly.
tantus, -a, -um, adj. so great,
 so much.
tardō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, to delay.
tectum, -i, n. house, dwelling.
tēgō, texi, tectum, v. 3, protect, shield.
tēmērō, adv. rashly, indiscreetly.
temperantīā, -ae, f. sobriety,
 moderation, self-control.
tempestās, -ātis, f. weather,
 tempest.
tempestivus, -a, -um, adj. seasonable, timely, opportune.
templum, -i, n. consecrated space, sanctuary, temple.
temptō, -avi, -atum, v. 1, to touch, make trial of, tamper with, meddle with, disturb.
tempūs, -ōris, n. time, period,
 season, fitting time, opportunity, circumstances, time of need, extremity, emergency.
tēnō, tēndi, tentum, v. 2,
 hold, hold sway over.
tēnūis, -e, adj. feeble.
tēr, num. adv. three times,
 thrice.
terrā, -ae, f. the earth, land.
terrōr, -ōris, m. terror, fear,
 alarm.
tertius, -a, -um, adj. third.
testis, -is, m. and f. witness.
testōr, -ātus sum, v. 1 dep.
 appeal to, invoke, call to witness.
Teutōnī, -ōrum, m. plur. the Teutons, a German tribe.
Tiberīnus, -a, -um, adj. of the Tiber.
Tigrānēs, -is or -i, m. proper name, Tigranes, king of Armenia.
tīmō, tīmūi, v. 2, fear.
tīmīdō, adv. timidly.
tīmīdus, -a, -um, adj. fearful,
 faint-hearted.

- tímōr, -ōris, m. fear.
tollo, sustūli, sublatum, v. 3,
 take away, remove.
tōt, num. indecl. so many.
tōtū, -a, -um, adj. whole, entire, complete, total.
tractō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, handle,
 treat, deal with.
tradō, -didī, -ditum, v. 3, hand down, deliver, bequeath, hand over.
trahō, traxi, tractum, v. 3,
 draw in, drag, bring.
transalpīnus, -a, -um, adj.
 transalpine, beyond the Alps.
transmārinus, -a, -um, adj.
 transmarine, foreign.
transmittō, -misi, -missum, v.
 3, transmit, transfer, devote,
 dedicate to; go across, cross.
trēs, tria (gen. trium), num.
 adj. three.
tribūnus, -i, m. tribune (Roman official).
tribūo, -būi, -būtum, v. 3, allot, assign, grant, give.
trīphō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, triumph, enjoy the honour of
 a triumph over (de with abl.).
trīphūs, -i, m. a triumph (a solemn entry of Rome by a general and his army in procession).
trucidō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, butcher, massacre.
tu, 2 sing. pers. pron. you.
tūtor, tūtus, v. 2 dep. defend,
 maintain, safeguard.
tūm, adv. then.
turpis, -e, adj. base, disgraceful;
superl. turpissimus.
turpitūdō, -inis, f. disgrace, infamy.
tūtōr, -ātus, v. 1 dep. guard,
 keep, protect.
tūtus, -a, -um, adj. safe.
tuus, -a, -um, poss. pron. thy,
 thine, your, yours.
- ubertās, -ātis, f. wealth, richness, fertility, abundance.
ubiquē, adv. anywhere, every-
 where.
ullus, -a, -um, adj. any.
ultimus, -a, -um, adj. last, final,
 uttermost.
umquam, adv. ever (in negative sentences).
unā, adv. together with, in company with.
undō, adv. whence; interrog.
 whence?
undōquingēsimus, -a, -um,
num. adj. the forty-ninth.
undiquē, adv. from all sides, on all sides.
universus, -a, -um, adj. all together, entire, in totality.
unus, -a, -um, num. adj. one,
 only, alone, or single; unus
quisque, each one.
urbs, urbis, f. city (especially the city of Rome).
usquam, adv. anywhere, at any place (usually in negative and conditional sentences).
usquē, adv. right on, as far as,
 all the way to.
usūs, -ūs, m. practice, exercise,
 employment, experience.
ut, conj. that, so that, in order that; adv. in comparisons, with sic, ita, &c., as, in the same manner as, even as, so far as.
ūterquē, ūtriquē, ūtrumquē,
(gen. ūtriusquē, dat. ūtrique),
 one and the other, both, each.
ūtilitās, -ātis, f. utility, serviceableness, profit.
ūtinām, adv. oh that! if only!
 would that! (with subj.).
ūtōr, usus sum, v. 3 dep. use,
 employ, enjoy or experience.
ūtrūm, adv. whether (introduc- ing direct and indirect questions, either alone or followed by an, annon, necue).
utrum...an, whether...or.

- victus, -a, -um, adj. empty, wanting, without, left vacant or deserted.
vālo, -ui, -itum, v. 2, to be strong or powerful.
vārietas, -ātis, f. diversity, difference.
vārius, -a, -um, adj. various, diverse.
vectigāl, -ālis, n. tax.
vectigālis, -e, adj. tributary, subject to tribute.
vehēmens, -entis, adj. forcible, strong.
vehēmentēr, adv. violently, strongly, forcibly, very much; adv. superl. vehementissime.
vēnō, vēni or vēnivi, -itum, v. 4, to be on sale, be sold.
vēniā, -ae, f. indulgence, grace, pardon.
vēnō, vēni, ventum, v. 4, come.
ventūs, -i, m. wind.
verbēr, -āris, n. stripe, stroke, blow.
verbum, -i, n. word.
verō, adv. truly; compar. verius.
veritas, -ātis, f. truth.
verō, adv. in truth, truly; an vero, can it be that? but, but indeed, while.
versor, -ātus, v. 1 dep. move about in a place, live, abide, to be engaged with, concerned in, busied with.
verūm, conj. but, but yet, however; often combined with tamen, nevertheless, notwithstanding, however.
verūs, -a, -um, adj. true, real, genuine.
vestēr, -tra, -trum, poss. adj. your, of you.
vestigium, -ii, n. footsteps.
vestrum, gen. plur. of personal pron. tu.
vētūs, -āris, adj. old, ancient, former.
viā, -ae, f. roadway, course, path.
- victissimus, -a, -um, ord. num. adj. twentieth.
victōr, -ōris, m. victor, conqueror; in apposition, victorious.
victōria, -ae, f. victory.
viciūs, -i, m. quarter of a town, hamlet, village.
vidēlicet, adv. it is easy to see, clearly, plainly, of course.
video, vidi, visum, v. 2, see; in pass. seem, appear, seem good.
vigilans, -antis, adj. watchful, careful, vigilant.
vigilo, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, watch.
vilitās, -ātis, f. cheapness.
vinco, vici, victum, v. 3, conquer, overcome.
vinculum, -i, n. bond, fetter (also vinculum).
violō, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, injure, violate, outrage.
vir, viri, m. man.
virtūs, -ūtis, f. virtue, courage, worth, excellence.
vis (acc. vim; abl. vi; no gen.), f. large quantity, abundance, violence, force, vigour.
visō, visi, visum, v. 3, behold, contemplate, to go to see.
vita, -ae, f. life.
vitium, -ii, n. vice, crime, offence.
vivo, vixi, victum, v. 3, live.
vix, adv. scarcely, hardly.
vōco, -āvi, -ātum, v. 1, call, bring, put, set.
vōlo, vōlle, vōltūi, v. irreg. wish, be willing.
vōluntās, -ātis, f. will, goodwill, inclination, purpose.
vōluptās, -ātis, f. pleasure, delight.
vox, vōcis, f. voice.
vulgō, adv. commonly, universally, generally, publicly.
vulnus, -ūs, n. wound.

man.

con-
vic-

own,

see,

see ;
seem

hful,

I,

con-

tter

ure,

ge,

.),
ce,

ld,

of-

ll,

h,

lo-

.

.

