ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

The special observances which marked the celebration of the Jubilee of St. Paul's church yesterday radiated thanksgiving and rejoicing.
For the anniversary service in the morning the Chancel society under the direction of Mrs. H. B. Robinson, its president, had filled the church with great masses of golden rosettes and had placed flowers and garlands in the altar vases. The service was fully choral. Rev. Canon R. A. Armstrong, rector of Trinity, read the opening prayers, and Rev. W. H. Sampson, rural dean, read the lesson. The rector, Ven. A. H. Archdeacon Crowfoot, was the celebrant for the Choral Eucharist. Very Rev. Dean Neales of Fredericton, read the Gospel and Rev. James Millidge the epistle. Ven. D. Forsyth, Archdeacon of Chatham, preached an eloquent and interesting sermon from the text used by Dr. Gray, then rector of Trinity church, when St. Paul's church was opened in 1842. The preacher reviewed the history of the church and paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Canon DeVeber, who was rector of the parish for thirty-four years. Solos were sung by Chester Bourne and A. Chip Ritchie. In addition to those already mentioned the following clergymen were present: Archdeacon W. O. Raymond, Canon G. A. Kuhn, Rev. Dr. Hibbard, H. H. A. Thomas, H. T. Buckland, W. P. Dunham, H. Haslam, E. P. Wright and W. Craig Nichols.

MORNING NEWS OVER THE WIRES

Mathias Thibedeau, giving his address as St. Louis, Kent county, was arrested Monday afternoon in Sussex, charged with passing counterfeit bills. He passed them in two stores, giving ten dollar bills in each case. In the second store, Miss Thompson, a clerk, became suspicious and sent the bill to the Royal Bank, where it was pronounced counterfeit. Thibedeau was arrested and yesterday morning was brought before Magistrate H. W. Folkner, who sent him up for trial. He was taken to Hampton.

The inquest into the death of James Ross, who was found dead by the roadside at Neguac with a bullet in his head, was continued yesterday in Newcastle. The inquest will probably last two or three days longer.
Prof. W. W. Gill, director of technical education in the department of labor at Ottawa, has resigned and has accepted a position as directing head of the department of electrical and mechanical engineering in the University of British Columbia. The Nova Scotia Electrical Association opened its first annual convention at Halifax yesterday. Among those present are: W. S. Brown, C. T. Nesbit, F. J. Nesbit and F. A. Pumble of St. John.

Ottawa Watches the See-saw Work to Worry the Wage-earner.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—A further slight drop in the cost of living during July is shown by the figures of the Labor Department for the month of July. Eggs, evaporated apples and prunes were reported higher, as also were rentals. In retail prices nearly all the items on the budget were slightly lower; the chief decrease being in beef (rib roast), lard, cheese and sugar. Eggs advanced about 4.5 cents per dozen, with smaller increases in evaporated apples and prunes. A small decline occurred in fuel and lighting, but rentals advanced somewhat on the average.
The average cost of a budget of twenty-nine foods in sixty cities was $10.98.

SING SING CONVICT GETS RADIUM TREATMENT

Ossining, Aug. 17.—Radium worth $10,000 was taken to Sing Sing prison and used in the hospital to treat a cancer that developed on the lip of John Duffy, a prisoner.
Dr. Amos O. Squire, head physician of the prison, who in private practice specializes in radium treatment, owns the radium. Duffy appreciated the treatment because the use of the radium, costly to other patients, was free to him. Duffy has been in Sing Sing a little more than five months for second degree assault in Brooklyn. His sentence is one year and three months to two years.

Early Autumn Wearables
In An Initial Showing

Interesting style developments now appear on every hand in our Ready-to-wear Departments. Although stocks are not yet complete, the present varieties afford ample room for individual choice. One is apt to find a charming novelty garment among first arrivals that will not be found later in the season. Come in and let us show you these late arrivals.

Autumn Coats

These are big and wrappy. From among them you will find it an easy matter to select a big, plain rough coat made from heavy frieze or polo cloth, especially suitable for motoring. These are fashioned with big collars, belts, pockets, warm linings and strapped at wrist sleeves.

Dressy Coats are lovelier than ever. Many of them are lavishly embroidered or luxuriously trimmed with fur of contrasting color. Bohemian, Velours, and Duvelyns are among the favored fabrics. The colors most in demand for early autumn are soft browns, bark shades, castor, mole and other variations of grey and brown. Prices will be found a pleasant relief from recent seasons. $16.50 to $75.00.

Coats for Kiddies

Styles for school girls follow closely those designed for older girls. Warm Velours, Blanket Cloths, Friezes and heavy Heather Mixed Cloths, lined throughout or just to the waist, are here now. Mostly practical garments—just what is best suited to the rough and tumble wear of fall school days. Collars and pockets are big and comfortable, of course, and are among the predominant style features. Some very smart, girlish models have flaring skirts. Navy, brown, sand, green, grey, king's blue and rose, are all included in the popular autumn colorings. All sizes from 2 to 12 years.

(Second floor.)

Autumn Suits

The fine tailoring of these first suits will immediately meet with your approval. Coats for fall are noticeably longer in length; skirts are plain and emphasize the slim silhouette.

Embroidery, braid and touches of fur are tastefully used to trim many of these fall models. However, plain suits of becoming lines are also very evident. Tricotines, Broadcloths and Velours are all strongly featured.

Additional Reforms Follow a Chicago Edict Against Bobbed Hair.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—A new set of rules in regard to dress of girl employees has been made by Marshall Field & Co., who recently barred bobbed hair unless it was netted. These new rules ban rouge, "powder in excess," extreme style in dress and "rolled-down stockings, and speak depreciatingly of dresses trimmed with spangles or with embroidered parts. The regulations have been posted on the bulletin boards, and the floor managers have passed them among the girls.

employees' manual and subsequent bulletins that there need be no mistake in regard to our wishes in this matter. "We find, however, numerous instances of employees wearing dresses with short sleeves, low-cut necks and extremely short skirts, sometimes with rolled-down stockings. Rouge should not be used, nor powder in excess, and extreme styles in hairdressing should be avoided. Dresses trimmed with spangles or having embroidered parts also are noticed. "Employees are expected to co-operate with us in keeping the style in dress refined and business-like. Cases which cannot be dealt with in the usual manner will be referred to the superintendent's office for disposition. "As far as known, there have been no dismissals for non-observance of the above rules, as there were early in the week of insurgents who refused to observe the order of 'all bobbed hair in nets.' The order against bobbed hair went into effect last Saturday. Twenty were dismissed for their refusal to wear nets over their short locks, it is said. "The rules about dress are really not new," said Mrs. G. Reid, head of the educational department of the firm. "We have always had rules about the style in dress to which our employees must conform. Perhaps there are one or two new things mentioned in the notice, but that is because they are particular evils of this season."

SPARKLING TALE OF MOUSE.

Girl Says Intruder Dropped Diamond Circle From Its Tail.
(New York Times.)
A tale that will interest Curator Dimars of the Bronx Zoo was narrated yesterday by Miss Genevieve Allen, head of the Abandonment Bureau at the district attorney's office. She told of having battled in her office with a mouse that had "a diamond in its tail." Miss Allen was alone when the "monster" was seen, but she did not faint; instead, she hurled a telephone book at the intruder. Great was her relief when the mouse fled, but greater her joy at finding that the impish little thing had "discovered" a diamond it must have "worse," she said.
The gem was a diamond ear-ring in a gold setting. The stone, it was estimated, weighed half a carat. To verify her tale, Miss Allen turned over the gem to Acting District Attorney Banton. He put it in a safe to await a claimant. Miss Allen said a woman client reported such a loss several days ago. How the mouse could have picked up the circle of gold is a new kind of mystery the personnel of the district attorney's office is trying to unravel.

Mrs. Massena plans to devote her time to beautifying her large estate near here.

SEIZED FOR DEATH IN INSURANCE PLOT

Dr. Brumfield Arrested on a Charge of Claiming Buried Laborer's Body was His Own—Disguised as a Farm Hand.

Calgary, Alberta, Aug. 17.—Dr. Richard M. Brumfield, wanted in Roseburg, Ore., in connection with the death of Dennis Russell, waived extradition after his arrest on a farm near here, where he was employed as a laborer.

Search for Dr. Brumfield has been in progress since July 14, when his wrecked and partly burned automobile was found a short distance from Roseburg, Ore. Beneath the automobile was a mangled and bruised corpse, which a coroner's jury later identified as that of Dennis Russell, a laborer the doctor had employed to blow out stumps.

Dr. Brumfield's wife identified the body as that of her husband, but Sheriff S. W. Starnes of Douglas county held to the theory that the body was Russell's. Charges were made that Brumfield attempted to make it appear that Russell's body was his own, so his insurance could be collected.

When arrested, Dr. Brumfield was suffering from such strain that he had to be given medical attention at police headquarters. He had passed a sleepless night and his voice was hoarse and shrill when reporters interviewed him.

"Send my love to my wife and children and tell them everything will be all right," was the only statement he would make.

In a letter which the police found hidden beneath a mattress on Dr. Brumfield's bed at the farm, several points were brought out coinciding with newspaper accounts of Russell's slaying. Police said it was evident Brumfield was writing the letter to some one vitally interested in the slayer and a person whom he was anxious to advise of the case.

In the letter, the writer related that he was sitting in front of his shack one evening when the "Doc" came along. They got into a conversation when he (the writer) asked if the "Doc" would sell his rifle. He wrote further that the "Doc" returned later that evening with the rifle and that "the Doc" gave him a drink of whiskey.

The liquor made him ill, the letter said, and he went for a drive with the other man "to try and straighten up," but that he was nearly overcome.

The writer said that while "the Doc" was driving him to the latter's place the machine lurched off the road and upset. He managed to jump clear, but his companion was killed. While he was looking under the car by the light of a match, the letter declared, the machine caught fire and he was forced to run away.

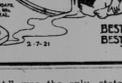

It was through an express order sent by Dr. Brumfield to Seattle from Banff, Alberta, under the name of Norman Whitney, that his presence in Canada was disclosed.

Detective Sergeant Wagh of the Royal Mounted Police, learning of the order, went to Banff, where he found that the person who had represented himself as Whitney had obtained a position on a farm owned by A. C. Vader, four miles south of Midnapore.

Brumfield, disguised as a farm hand, and wearing a heavy moustache and beard, was arrested at the farm house.

Large and Long-Lived Were the Renwicks—One Passed Away.

To be a member of a family of fifteen children, most of whom reached the age of eighty years and two of whom went beyond the ninety-year mark, and to be one of seven in the same family who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, were unique features in the life history of Thomas Renwick, who died a few days ago at Kirkland, De Kalb county, Illinois.

He was the fourteenth child of Walter and Mary Renwick, and was born in Dumfrieshire, Scotland, in 1833. In 1858 the family came to Canada in a sailing vessel and settled in Clarke township, in Durham county, Ontario, doing pioneer work in the early settlement of that locality.

Some years later Mr. Renwick went to Illinois, and settled in South Grove township. His wife, to whom he was married fifty-seven years ago, and two daughters and a son survive him. Also a brother, Robert, residing at Maple Park, and two sisters. Decease was a brother of the late Mrs. Walter Riddell of Cobourg, and an uncle of Mr. Justice William Renwick Riddell, Toronto.

J. W. Flavell Will Be Neutral Regarding Claims of Toronto and Montreal.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—Sir Joseph Flavell has written to the Montreal Gazette replying to criticism in that paper of the Canadian government railway policy.

He objects to the state policy leading to a settled objective, determined upon presumably by the government, and a further statement that he is, of course, a Toronto man and so ignores Montreal's claim as a great railway centre and the second greatest port in America. He says he has no reason to believe there is such a government policy, and continues:

"As to the location of head office of the National system in Toronto, I have made no effort to have it placed in Toronto. No one has asked me to make such effort. I have not been consulted by the government, or by any one on behalf of the government concerning this question. A small deputation waited upon me last week, and expressed a desire that the head office of the National System of Railways should be in Toronto. I directed their attention to the clause in the statute, incorporating the Canadian National Railways Company, which reads: "The head office of the company shall be at such place in Canada as the governor-in-council may from time to time determine," and suggested that their representations should be made at Ottawa.

When a decision is reached upon the location of the head office, I assume it will be upon evidence that the place chosen will best serve the National Railways. Mere assertion of superiority by Montreal on one hand or desire to retain the office already in Toronto, on

GANG OF BURGLARS AT MAINE RESORTS

Special Patrols Installed in Prout's Neck Section Since Robbery at Biddeford Summer Homes.

Biddeford, Aug. 17.—Summer motorists have become alarmed as the result of series of robberies at Kennebec Beach, Biddeford Pool and Prout's Neck the past four weeks and are taking extraordinary precautions. Local police at these resorts and private detectives employed in some instances have now been augmented by county officers at Prout's Neck.

Beginning tonight, five deputy sheriffs will patrol the Prout's Neck section at night through an arrangement made with Sheriff King F. Graham by a group of summer residents there whereby they will pay the expense of the extra protection.

The latest success of the burglars who are believed to be organized and working together was the securing of a considerable amount of plunder from the summer homes of Philip James of New York and Dr. James Robbins of Weston, Mass., at Biddeford Pool. This included a necklace, said to be valued at $8,000.

About $2,000 in jewelry was taken last month from rooms in two hotels at Kennebec Beach, and a tinistry, valued at $3,000, was removed from the Parsons mansion at Parsons beach.

BYNGS HAVE NO CHILDREN. Lady Byng is not altogether a stranger in Canada, and she told an interviewer who met the Empress of France that she had pleasant recollections of Ottawa and Quebec, which she had visited, as a child, when her father, Sir Richard Charles Merton, was military secretary to the Marquis of Lorne as governor general. Lord and Lady Byng have no children, and when posing for the camera men before quitting the ship, Lady Byng remarked smilingly: "Well, here we are, the whole family." Their nieces, Lady Elizabeth and Lady Mary Byng, are expected to come out later to spend the winter at Rideau Hall.

ITALIAN WRITER GIVES INTIMATE SKETCH OF POPE

Difficult to Find Two More Different Men Than Benedict and Pius.

(Special cable to the N. Y. Times and Montreal Gazette.)

Rome, Aug. 17.—In September, Benedict XV. will have reigned, as Pope, seven years. A writer in the Epoca who appears to be conversant with inner life of the Vatican, describes his personality as that of "sphinx," so well has the veil of reserve instituted at his accession, been maintained.

The whole world felt as if it knew the lovable, humane, predecessor of Benedict, even during his life, still more since his death. A tradition of veneration surrounds the name of Pius X. like that of St. Francis of Assisi, "everybody's saint."

The article sets forth that it would be difficult to find two more different personalities, characters and physiques than those of Pius and Benedict. Benedict is a scholar, a trained diplomat, an aristocrat, with the traditional Genoese trait of shrewdness in money matters. In person he is described as small, frail, somewhat bent, walking unsteadily, and with a weak inharmonious voice. Yet he triumphs over all these from the inherent force of his character and mind.

Benedict, the article says, sleeps little, seldom more than six hours a day, often working in his study until the small hours of the morning, acquainting himself with details of all that passed through the Vatican, elaborating deeply considered lines of policy which have developed during the past seven years. The Pontiff, notwithstanding his advanced age, is in excellent health, and is generally enjoyed by those who lead a sedentary life. He eats little, suffers occasionally from rheumatism and neuralgia, and drinks or smokes hardly at all.

The Pope's character contains apparent contradictions, though as a whole, calm, reflective and self-controlled. The writer says that he is likely to have occasional bursts of unexpected impatience. Accustomed before he became Pope to narrow means, he is economical, some say parsimonious, in ordering the life of the employees of the Vatican, but he sometimes spends with unexpected generosity, preferably for private charity or church building.

During late years of his pontificate, which were gravely diminished during the war, have been replaced, even increased largely by generous contributions from America, especially Philadelphia, from the Knights of Columbus and other visitors who morning and evening, realize the great need of money to carry on the government of the Church throughout the world.

During the present Pontificate, especially under Nitti's premiership, Italian relations between the Vatican and the Italian government have become easier, as was illustrated by the late conference at the Vatican of providing its own passports for employes going abroad, which only require the visa of the Italian government. It is even reported that Nitti, when premier, sometimes went incognito to a monastery where he met Cardinal Gasparri, the Pope's secretary of state, in order personally to discuss matters interesting to the two governments. During the seven difficult years that Benedict XV. has reigned, there have been indubitable successes and increasing influence by the Vatican on the public opinion of the world. This has been shown in the Near East and the renewed relations with

HIGH PRICES AND PROSPERITY.

Nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fertility of the soil in the provinces which have fallen on the year which received them during the war period. Farm products in general were sold at most abnormal figures, and yet within one year after the downward movement had begun the farmer of the United States was at the door of government asking for aid. They have been an advance of $100,000,000 on an average, and the small raisers had an extraordinary market for four years, and now have had to be helped by a loan of $5,000,000 to save them from disaster. Cotton went up for forty-two cents per pound, as compared with a normal price of 12 cents, and in the first year of deflation the planters have had to be assisted by a normal price of 12 cents per pound to enable them to carry on. Under such circumstances it would seem that the higher prices go the more hurt they do to the farmer, and the more he should have no doubt of the injury suffered by those who pay them.

The war has been a rampant one since 1914 and the closing months of 1920, has played havoc with the commodities of the world. The inflation is gradual but persistent, and adjustment, until something approaching a normal momentary equilibrium should be exempt from the operations of the economic laws now in motion. That is to say, they resist the parting of their particular contribution to the cost of production, which is really attempting to increase the price of the commodity, and when that takes place no one is worse off in the long run. Resistance merely delays the stability which would again set the wheels of trade and industry moving with normal momentum. Until purely artificial conditions are supplanted by the natural operations of the law of supply and demand, the parting of human activity, we shall have comparative stagnation and a large measure of needless suffering. Peace prosperity always exacts its penalties.

UNPARALLELED RECORD.

(Hallifax Recorder.)

Nova Scotia had the good fortune to number among her premiers some of the very ablest men who ever appeared in the public life of Canada: Howe, Johnston, Tupper, Thompson, Fielding and Hon. Geo. H. Murray. Some of these enjoyed but a brief tenure of office, but it was the good fortune of two of them, last named, to carry out an exceptional length of time and to carry on administrations against which the worst enemies failed to find the shadow of corruption. Mr. Fielding prepared the way for the downfall of the Halme-Thompson government in 1882, and his splendid gifts and alert energy placed him in the premiership of the province for fourteen years, when he entered the commons to pursue a career which placed him in the ranks of our very greatest. His successor was a young man of sterling personality and capacity, who was already a battle-scarred veteran, Hon. Geo. H. Murray. The high traditions of the Fielding government were maintained and the province soon discovered that another of her greatest sons had appeared on the scene. Since the momentous day of July 20th, 1906, Mr. Murray has held power, winning election after election by large majorities and at times coming out of the campaign with almost the entire membership of the house of assembly in solid phalanx behind him, so greatly did the people trust him, and so satisfied were they with his clean, progressive and economical government given them by his successive administrations. A quarter of a century is a long time for an elective ruler to hold continuous power. In fact, we do not know of a parallel case in the history of the empire. Tomorrow, after twenty-five years, there is nothing in sight to suggest the early ending of the Murray regime. The great premier's eye is undimmed and his natural force unabated. The mental keenness, the power in debate, the frank and stately eloquence, the leading personality, the charming manner, the political resource and the statesman's grasp of public needs are all there in full glory, and the wish of the vast majority of his countrymen is that he may long enjoy life and health to remain at his high post as chief guardian of their collective interests.

The W. C. T. U. held a meeting yesterday afternoon, with Mrs. David Hipwell, the president, in the chair. The secretary read a letter from Chief Inspector J. B. Hawthorne, in which he expressed regret that he was unable to attend the meeting. Reports were received from those visiting hospitals and stricken families, and plans for the coming exhibition were discussed.

At a meeting of the local branch of the Navy League of Canada, held in the board of trade rooms yesterday, R. E. Armstrong presided. It was decided to recommend the appointment of Commander Lewin as commissioner for the maritime provinces, the purpose of his work being the arousing of interest in the league's work. Large accommodations will be given to the members of the executive assisted in welcoming the officers and men of the Cambrian, which arrived in port today.

MINING IN QUEBEC.

The value of the products of the mines and quarries operated during 1920 in the province of Quebec reached a record figure of $28,922,939. This is the highest figure yet attained and the upward trend of mineral production has been continuous for the last six years. As compared with the preceding year, when the value of the production was $20,813,670, there is an increase of $8,109,269, or 38.9 per cent. If we go back twenty years and take the value of the mineral production recorded in 1900, which was $2,540,076, we observe that the mineral industry of the province has grown more than tenfold in that period.

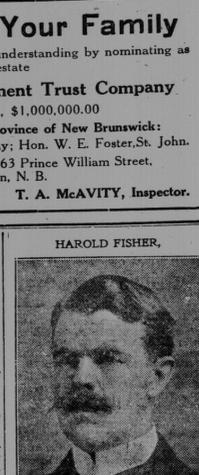

FIRMNESS IN SUGAR.

The advance in prices of granulated sugar, which was put into effect recently, draws attention to the strong situation at present existing on the New York market, and, according to a local member of the trade, there is not much prospect of any reaction in the near future at least. This belief is based on the good demand which has been experienced in the raw sugar market, as well as in the refined.

POOR APPLE CROP THROUGH EUROPE

Apple prospects in Europe point to a rather short crop of poor quality, according to the latest information furnished by the Dominion Fruit Branch. In Great Britain the prolonged drought caused much loss, the "drop" being especially heavy and the quality low. Despite this, however, western countries report average prospects and Kent almost as good. In the Scandinavian countries while the bloom was most promising, adverse weather has lowered prospects considerably and at best only poor crops are looked for. France will pick but a light crop, but in Belgium and Holland indications are average or better.

It would appear from this report and others that the prospects for Canadian shippers of apples to Europe are good, particularly later in the season, when the market has absorbed the bulk of the low quality home-grown fruit, which will have to be disposed of quickly.

King Peter of Serbia, who has been ill for a long time, died at Belgrade yesterday. His illness was caused by a combination of the lung and was unrelenting from last Friday until the end of his life. When Serbia rejected the Austrian demands he placed himself at the head of the army and remained there until the invaders were driven from the country.

NEW SEAPLANE ALTITUDE RECORD

Port Washington, N. Y., Aug. 17.—A new altitude record for seaplanes was claimed yesterday when a monoplane flying yacht, piloted by Commander David McCulloch, U. S. N., and carrying three passengers, reached an altitude of twenty thousand feet. Freezing weather prevented the flyers, who were dressed in summer attire, from going higher. The old record was established here two years ago by Chief Briggs, who reached an altitude of 16,000 feet.

STORY OF THE GREAT RACE BETWEEN THE PARIS AND TYNE CREWS, AND THE TRAGIC DEATH OF RENFORTH

How 15,000 People Travelled to Renforth and Cheered the St. John Crew on to Victory

A Wonderful Scene as the Race Was Begun, With Every Vantage Point Occupied By Eager Spectators—The Tragic Death of Renforth and Its Effect on the Citizens Who at First Thought He Had "Sold Out"—Those Who Officiated.

The following account of the great race on the Kennebecasis river on August 23, 1871, fifty years ago next Tuesday, between the Paris crew of St. John and the Tyne crew of England, and of the death of Renforth, is taken from the Telegraph of August 24, 1871. It is well worth reading:

As early as 3 o'clock yesterday morning there was life and bustle in the streets that indicated the coming event. Many had been up all night, making music in the streets, and others had arisen from bed to be among the first to reach the scene of action. At 4 o'clock a crowd had collected at the depot and the train left with a load of passengers. At half past another load left for the scene. By this time many vehicles were en route, filled with people. At five the darkness had given place to a cold gray mist, and the train was literally packed, the people going over the sides of the cars in their haste. The road between the city and Riverside was dotted with teams, the drivers urging their steeds forward as if fearing to be late at the scene. Old men, boys, women, little children were all there. There was every kind of vehicle from a sloven to a barouche. The scene at the Kennebecasis was a remarkable one. The railway from Torryburn cove to a point a mile and a half distant was covered with a motley mass of humanity, there not being many women among them. Along the beach a thin skirmish struggled, and pickets were seen on the hillside. Trees were made available as outlooks, many a careless boy or ambitious man being perched upon the branches. Small parties sat around lunch baskets and ate their breakfast although the air of the morning and their ride had given them keen appetites. Old women peered at apples and gingerbread from stands along the roadside fence. Carriages with thousands, the regiments of the rail became brigades on the embankment, and the became whole corps d'armee on the entire river front. The grand stand and the other erections were gay with bright colors of ladies' garments. Under the alders, their heads resting on mossy stones or pieces of wood, lay many a peaceful sleeper who drank in long draughts of "nature's sweet restorer" in the utmost placidity. Little boys ventured out on the water on rafts constructed with much haste and little engineering skill. Rowboats plied on the river, and sailboats passed to and fro. The fleet of woodboats at anchor kept up their sails, and yachts glided gracefully back and forth. The fawn had arrived from Fredericton at an early hour, and was anchored in the stream. Tugboats, steamers, and woodboats constantly arrived and took up positions in the line, their decks covered with people. A long line of small boats were fastened to a boom stretched away from the judges' boat and bands of music on board the steamers discoursed music that was certainly not sweet as heard across the waters.

As the hour of seven approached the faces of the throng became anxious. All were eager to see the contest, and there was just enough breeze and ripple to render it uncertain. Mr. Jones, the referee, was seen wending his way along the beach with a very grave countenance. To all questions he answered as one not having authority. At seven the breeze died away, the sun shone from the mist and blended the expectant mass of human beings, the dresses and banners, with the tints of the woods and fields, and photographed a picture on the brain of every beholder that will long remain undimmed. All who were present did not behold it, however. The cause that made such a scene possible absorbed the attention of most of the spectators, and in straining to catch a glimpse of those about to contest for the championship of the world, they overlooked all the loveliness and glory that the restlessness of humanity and the repose of nature contributed to produce. Weatherwise people looked at the fleeting mist, sniffed the air, shook their heads and said that a breeze would soon come, and then anxious wishes were expressed for the start to be made before it should come. That an uplifting of faces there was in that vast throng when the Tyne men paddled out from the shore. The hearts of all were stirred. There were no indifferent ones in that multitude. All were hoping, praying for the success of their favorites. The sleepers aroused themselves as quickly as though cannons had been fired near them. The boys climbed higher in the trees, and those who had been sitting stood. When the boats were started by side how the people were excited. The maidens allowed the arms of their protectors to encircle them without regard to the publicity of the occasion, the timid forgot to guard his pocketbook, the pickpocket forgot to steal and the old ladies mounted their stands, regardless of the gingerbread trodden underfoot.

When the pink shirts showed in advance, what a wave of sound arose from the excited throng and echoed among the hills! When clear water was seen between the stern of the St. John and the bow of the Queen Victoria, while the rapid stroke of the Tyneiders showed they were doing their best, how the anxiety of the people changed to gladness, and voices and hats went up for joy! How the wise and foreseeing individual, who has so fine a faculty for planning villainy for others, poked his neighbor in the ribs and said: "I told you so. A gun game. Halifax will tell the story. Renforth has sold out." How the man who had for weeks been deprecating the qualifications of our men and toadying the Tyneiders, appeared to all to bear him witness that he had been sure of our boys winning all along!

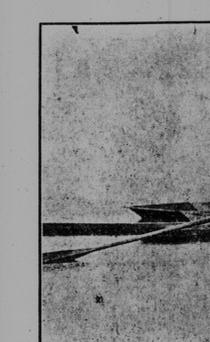

How the people flew at the victim to get him from limb for fragments to keep as memorials of the day! And then there was the scramble for the cars, the people as eager to get away as they had been to come, and all under the impression that one train ought to take away as many as seven trains had brought. After the breakman had refused to admit more, and the cars were in motion, some clambered up the sides and found no rest for the soles of their feet. The steamers and woodboats, and yachts and canoes were soon in motion and, as the breeze had freshened considerably, the scene was a lively one. People cheered everywhere and shouted themselves hoarse. Joy reigned supreme, except in the small circle gathered around the dying athlete. The others were ignorant of his fate, or their merits would have been hushed.

Now we shall endeavor to describe the race itself, the forty minute struggle that opened so brilliantly and had so melancholy terminated.

Preparing for the Contest.

The night mist still settled amongst the trees as both crews rose about half past four, and, donning their ordinary clothes, started out for a brisk walk in the vicinity of their respective quarters, just as erey twilight was merging into day. They looked well, and the lightness of Renforth's eye and his fine condition were remarked on by many who met the English quintette. Both crews breakfasted at about the same hour and spent the time until a little after six in talking with their friends. Then they began to look to matters more immediately connected with the struggle so soon to come off. Mr. James Shackhouse, umpire on the part of the St. John men, had remained at their quarters all night, and, with the referee, Hon. Thomas R. Jones, accompanied them to the shore and on board the official tug, and their boat, the Queen Victoria, was rowed out by Robert McLaren, their spare man, and Mr. James Belyea. The tug was run up to position, outside the outer starting buoy, and the St. John crew and their friends awaited the appearance of the Englishmen.

At three minutes past seven o'clock

The Paris Crew, Composed of Robert Fulton, Elijah Ross, Samuel Hutton, George Price.

The Renforth crew were ferried to their starting stage, and when they were placed on it, Bright, the spare man, paddled the Queen Victoria out to them. Renforth got in first after putting his oar through the rowlock and took his seat, the boat being steadied by Bright; Kelley took his seat next, followed by Chambers, Percy getting down to his place about the same time. They all had on white guernseys, and Bright and Chambers wore blue caps. Renforth wore a brown American driving cap, and Kelley's cap was an old one, originally blue, but somewhat faded. They put off at eight minutes past seven o'clock, and at once paddled across to the starting line, taking up a position about fifty yards ahead of the official steamer. Many on the shore who had not seen the St. John crew's boat or recognized the men on the tug, began to ask: "Where is the Paris crew?" "Why are they not here?" etc.

"Gentlemen, said Renforth to the Paris crew on the tug, "are you ready?" "Yes," came promptly from the St. John men as, at sixteen minutes past seven, the St. John boat was put into the water, and the crew, wearing pink shirts and caps, got in quickly.

At this time the wind, which had been blowing very lightly seemed to increase to about a three knot breeze, but it died away again and the river was almost perfectly smooth at twenty-eight minutes after seven. The Englishmen had taken off their guernseys and caps, and as they sat upright in their boat they looked the personification of muscular development. The St. John men bared their heads but kept on their pink shirts. They sat square up and the countenance of each was firm, if not grim, in its expression. St. John won the toss and chose the outside, and the boats were backed up to their respective buoys.

"Now, give us the word," said Fulton, "and the sooner the better," and he as well as the others of the St. John quartette showed impatience to be away. Both boats, however, were slightly out of position, and they were ordered back. When they again ceased moving the St. John boat still had an advantage of six inches.

"Back your boat a little, Fulton," said Mr. Jones, and the St. John men moved to the desired position.

"Gentlemen, are you ready?" said Mr. Jones.

"Ready," came from Fulton and Renforth simultaneously, and the oarblades of the eight men sank slowly in the water.

"Go" was pronounced very sharply, and with distinctness, by Mr. Jones, at exactly thirty-four minutes past seven o'clock, and eight of the best oarsmen that ever manned a boat surged back, their craft springing away like arrows under their powerful stroke. Such a magnificent sight as the two boats presented for the first two hundred yards has seldom, if ever, been witnessed in aquatic life. Fulton had struck at forty o'clock, and Renforth at forty-two, and had not gained on St. John. Soon Renforth started, but St. John had begun to draw ahead inch by inch. A quarter of a mile up the course and St. John was half a length ahead. Still on, and clear water was shown between the stern of the St. John and the bow of the English boat, and when half a mile had been covered, Fulton was sweeping off at forty-one strokes to the minute, and Price was steering a beautifully straight course. The other boat was taking a rather sweeping course, as if determined to close the widening gap. It was of no avail, however, for the St. John men were thoroughly on their mettle and the gap was widening, when Renforth turned his head and giving a look at his opponent's boat, dropped his oar, threw up an arm and would have fallen overboard had he not been caught by Kelley, who supported him, while Percy and Chambers rowed the shell ashore. Cries of "fraud," "shame," "sold out," "where's his pluck?" and similar expressions were heard on all sides, and amid the most intense excitement the St. John boat sped on. The race from that moment was a bit of magnificent rowing, the stake boat being reached in eighteen minutes, official time, and the whole race accomplished in 39 minutes 29.8 seconds.

"The scene at this stage of the proceedings, on the steamers and other craft, can hardly be described.

"Those on the judges' boat shared in the excitement of the throng. Mr. Oldham danced around the stand, exclaiming that his crew had to run ashore to escape a foul. A row nearly took place on account of John Bright withdrawing money he was putting up on the Tyne, and Mr. Jones was obliged to forbid any person to interfere in discussions between the umpires and himself.

"Another scene was occasioned at the finish. The owners of small boats, seeming to feel a clear course of no consequence since the race was decided, rowed and sailed across the course, creating the greatest excitement on the judges' boats. The referee shouted until he was hoarse, and other interested parties stormed wildly.

"Who's got a pistol to shoot the wretch with?" said one. "Will they keep off?" said another. The referee then ordered two men to enter a gig and row out to some boats and get them out of the way. Mr. Oldham, Umpire, objected to the boat leaving, and said the referee had no authority to send it off. Mr. Jones yielded the point, and the boats kept encroaching and the men on the judges' boat kept frantically yelling to them to keep off. One or two of the intruders came within stone's throw, and a shower of pebbles and lumps of coal made them clear the track in short order.

The breeze that sprang up just before the start had considerably freshened, and the water was far from smooth. Within half a mile of the judges' boat Fulton increased his stroke to forty-four and came in amidst the wildest cheering from shore, embankment, trees, woodboats, steamers, mast heads, and small boats. The official time as announced by Dr. Walker, and recorded by Dr. Allison, was 39 minutes, 29.8 seconds. The men were cool and fresh looking, not one of them exhibiting signs of fatigue, their breathing being as regular as before they started.

"What died Renforth? What did he break?" asked a dozen voices.

"He has broken his heart," answered Ross, "because he was beaten." "How far did you lead them?" cried all in breath, as they patted the backs of their men with more energy than gentleness. "Let me dress first," said Fulton, "and then I'll talk." After the men got dressed they passed around their hats and took up a collection for the Tyne crew. On reaching the shore they were bowled through the throng, slapped on the back, hugged, and otherwise made to feel the joy inspired by their triumphs.

Particulars of Renforth's Death.

When the Paris Crew had drawn away about two lengths in advance of the Renforth Crew, Kelley relates that he said to Renforth: "Now, Jim, for a doze!"—meaning an extra spurt such as had served them a good turn at and near the beginning of the race. Kelley, observing no visible response, spoke to him a second time in the same terms, only to hear his comrade say in a half smothered voice, "Harry, Harry." Meantime Renforth's body suddenly inclined forward, and immediately after he fell back into Kelley's arms, asking to be rowed to the shore, and sinking into a swoon. The boat was speedily turned shoreward, and taken as quickly as circumstance would permit, to a point a few yards above the Railway wharf. The shouting thousands poured down over the railway embankment and the beach to meet the unfortunate men, some shouting for victory, while others gave expression that the race had been sold, and others expressed heartfelt sympathy for the Englishmen. Mr. Wallace, of the Newcastle Chronicle, descended from the carriage in which he and our reporter were keeping ahead of the race and hurried to the water's edge.

The man appeared to be dead as he was carried up and across the railway and put in a carriage on the main road. Percy and another friend or two entered the coach in which he was placed, and they were driven in great haste to Torryburn. Renforth meantime lying in a state of insensibility. His appearance in the coach was appalling, and his face and his naked arms and shoulders presented a death-like pallor. Having arrived at the Clarendon House a few minutes past 8 o'clock he was carried to his room and placed upon a bed. A messenger was immediately despatched for medical aid, and in less than fifteen minutes Dr. Johnston entered the room. Meantime what a few minutes before had been a perfect picture of human strength lay apparently almost lifeless and cold. The breathing was slight and his pulse seemed chilled in both heart and limb. Scarcely had Dr. Johnston commenced an examination of the patient when Dr. McLaren arrived. By this time, however, he had so far revived as to be able to speak. He was known to have frequently suffered from epileptic fits, and being asked if it was one of these, he responded firmly in the negative, "it was no fit this time, and he added: "I'll tell you what it is"—but his sentence was cut short by his sufferings. He tossed himself about upon the bed, complaining chiefly of distress in the region of the chest and showing signs of difficulty in breathing. Dr. McLaren ordered the rubbing of his spine and extremities continued and an increased supply of fresh air. A cerous, almost transparent, liquid oozed from his mouth, and this time went on becoming slightly tinged with blood. A little brandy and water so cleared his mouth, that again he spoke suitably. He assured the bystanders that he had not long to live, and soon piteously said: "Good-bye, Harry; good-bye to the boys." These, with a few interlarded utterances, which seemed to refer to his sad mishap and to his friends across the water, were his last words. He once or twice subsequently gave tokens of his desire not to be disturbed by the rubbing of his cold feet, hands and limbs, but the difficulty in breathing so rapidly increased, that his own assurances of speedy end were but too painfully evident.

Scarcely had the doctors reached the Clarendon House before crowds of anxious persons clustered about the premises eager to hear what was the matter. Dr. McLaren soon assured those about him that pulmonary apoplexy or congestion of the lungs was the cause of all the trouble. The doctor tried bleeding first in the right arm, but with only limited success in that quarter—a very few blinks, like drops slowly trickling from the punctured vein. Two similar experiments, but with more avail, were then tried on the left arm; but bleeding, and warm flannels, and fresh air were all in vain. From about half past eight o'clock he sank very rapidly and at a quarter before nine the great oarsman breathed his last, if indeed it can be said he so much as breathed at all during the last six or eight minutes that other signs of lingering life were perceptible. The manner of Renforth's precarious condition given to the throng outside the house during his last moments were redolent with mingled feelings of doubt and sadness; but the bustle of the place subsided into painful silence when news of the appalling announcement of his death was made. Those thousands who but a few minutes before gave wild demonstration of joy at the victory which then was sure—for the old and trusted fow, were now silent as a bolt from the blue of clouds; and their next anxiety was for a last look at the angular features of a man whose name had become a synonym for a last form of the great Tyne champion.

Inquest and Post Mortem.

Some delay was experienced in securing the services of the coroner. At about forty minutes past two o'clock, however, Coroner Earle arrived, and the following jury were duly summoned and sworn, viz: James Donville, foreman; James Trueman, George A. Wood, Alexander Robinson, Jr., John Murphy, John Melick and Timothy J. Cronin. The body of the deceased was then reviewed by the jury. A very generally expressed desire for a post mortem examination having been made apparent to the coroner, Dr. McLaren was directed to perform that office. The inquest was accordingly adjourned until this (Thursday) morning, when to meet in the room over the dead house in the city goal. At the request of the friends of the deceased, the post mortem was delayed a few hours, and until Dr. Wade, assistant surgeon to H. M. F., could be present on their behalf. The examination was ultimately made by Dr. McLaren, assisted by Dr. Wade, and in presence of Drs. Walker and Earle, Jr., and of some of the jury and a few others. The result fully confirmed the original opinion of Dr. McLaren, as expressed by Dr. Bayard and several other medical gentlemen who, during the day, visited the remains of the deceased. Among the witnesses announced to appear today at the inquest

The Foundation of Style Is the Corset

The most beautiful gown will appear but poorly over a corset that is not just so, while the most simple Gingham Dress becomes attractive and graceful over a corset that shapes correctly. At the Oak Hall Women's Shop will be found corsets that are correctly designed for the new season's style in dress—corsets that will shape the figure comfortably to the graceful lines of fashion.
