

another cruiser of the Koelin class.

In the general fighting two of the German destroyers were riddled and sunk, while many others were badly damaged. One cruiser, battle scarred and on fire, drifted away in the mist and was lost sight of.

The British cruiser squadron, according to the semi-official re-port of the battle, although attacked by submarine boats and menaced by floating mines and the guns from the German warships, suffered no serious losses. The cruiser Amethyst and the torpedo destroyer Laertes, both were damaged, but all the ships in the British fleet were afloat at the end of the engagement. The British loss of life was not anoat at the end of the engagement. The Brissh loss of the was not great.

In the battle cruiser squadron were the flagship Lion, the New Zealand, the Queen Mary and the Princess Royal, commanded by Rear-Admiral Moore, Rear-Admiral Christian, Commodore Goodenough, and Commodore Tyrwritt had charge of other contingents.
A wireless despatch received tonight from one of the cruisers said she was making for port with men wounded in the engagement. Only the strategists expected the British squadron on guard to take the offensive. The amateurs long ago decided that the squadron would simply wait, content to keep the Germans bottled up, and prepared to attack them when they attempted a sortie.
But apparently the British got word that the time was favorable and delivered a blow, the light cruisers and battleships supporting the destroyers, which were attended by submarines. And every one that went into this engagement came out under its own steam.
London is ringing with the news from one end to the other. In every hotel and club the tidings are posted, and crowds are cheering themselves hoarse. Every theatre and music hall read the news from the stage or flashed it on huge screens. So, too, in all the small moving picture houses, the message was displayed over and over again. "Put it on again, mate! Let's have it over again, Give us some more," and a dozen similar commands were shouled from the pits and galleries. <text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text>

This is what you should do to shed a spoiled complexion: Spread eveny over the face, covering every inch of skin, a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax. Let this stay on over night; wash it off next morning. Repeat daily until your complexion is as clear, soil and beautiful as a young girl's. This result is inevit-able, no matter how solled or discolored the complexion. The wax literally peels off the filmy surface skin, exposing the lovely young skin beneath. The process is entirely harmless, so little of the old skin coming off at a time. Mercolized wax is obtainable at any drug store; one ounce wurker for rough, tanned, reddened. Diotchy, pimpled or freekled skin. Pure powdered saxolite is excellent for wrinkled skin. An ounce of it difference in all articles and Optiolane tell of further advance by the victorious R. S.
