MONDAY EVENING, AUG. 10.

Disgusted with Brown's Proposals.

There is a deep feeling of disgust and irritation over the course of the Government of Canada in applying for reciprocity on the Brown basis. "We are prosperous, independent, progressive—trade increasing, manufactures multiplying—and now this hazardous experiment is to be undertaken on terms so unequal!" is what merchants, manufacturers and professional men are saying, in tones of infinite disgust. One declares that he "sick at the thought of the thing," another says he will lose all respect for the institutions of the country if such a scheme can be forced on the representatives of an unwilling people by the powerful Ministry, and still another declares that men will hereafter be afraid to put their money in any trade or manufacture that requires permanence for fear some meddlesome Mackenzie may step in with another scheme for ruining them.

The disgust of many is so great that they are unwilling to do business with the Government that made them with savage and silent scorn. Smith and Burpee are pined for their want of influence. Many who have been excoriating those who have been so what appeared by their assurance of secret hostility to the treaty, and their delusive promises that they will secure necessary amendments. The Telegraph has expressed their views of the Brown proposals, and they will try to have the draft modified. Very few attach much importance to their promises, as they lack influence in merely local matters, so marked that they cannot be supposed to have any weight in matters of general concern.

Circumstantial Evidence.

No hero of romance was ever entangled in a more broken knot of circumstantial evidence than was recently worn around Frank Wagner at Jersey City, New Jersey. The dead body of James McCann was found by the roadside, and Wagner was arrested on suspicion. He was grooved to have been seen in the vicinity of the body, and his commission had given signs of great fear on being arrested; he denied being out that night, which was at once shown to be a falsehood; he was known to have exhibited a pistol at a saloon close by where the murdered man was found; and, finally, a revolver was found in a note-book, and the chambers just fitted for bullets of the size taken from McCann's head. The evidence was conclusive. There was no doubt in the public mind of the man's guilt. If Lynch law had prevailed in New Jersey Wagner would have ornamented the landscape with a gallows, as it actuated by a desire to injure the fame of the crowing detective, one Thomas Brooks comes forward and claims to have shot the man as he was attempting to board his train. His horses ran away when he fired, and he had no idea that he had shot the man; he is a rabbit until he reads about the finding of the body and the arrest of Wagner. And this is real life, not fiction. A dramatist would merely have to delay the confession of Brooks until the day appointed for the hanging of Wagner, to have an exciting situation.

There seems to be an increase in New Brunswick of fatalities from that species of man's inhumanity to man known as brutal beating. James McCann knocked down Samuel Sprules and kills him. Joshua Brundage kicks his man to death, and railway guards beat a Bathurst constable within an inch of his life. There should be hanging for this kind of murder. Big boots are nearly as fatal, when applied to a prostrate man, as pistol shots.

It is rumored to-day that Postmaster Howe is to be permitted to retire on a pension, and that Mr. Wm. Elder is to succeed him. The salary, it is said, will be increased, in accordance with the Montreal precedent, so that the office will be a desirable one. Mr. Woodrow is the only one mentioned as a rival candidate for the office. We have not been able to verify the report.

The Jubilee at the Opening of the Memramook Bridge—Speeches, Dancing and Refreshments—Who was Present and Who was Absent.

The bridge over the Memramook was opened to the public to-day with great pomp and a grand display of bunting. Who the originators of all this buncombe were this deponent knoweth not. The rotten and demoralized structure, which spanned the river at this place, had seen its day, and our Government thought a new work was required. In this they were right. Besides, Amass Killam's youngest brother, Joseph, was not very busy and it might be well for him to "get his hand in," and know how to pull the ropes preparatory to succeeding his elder brother, Amass, when the latter retires from the country's service loaded down with the profits of his toll.

This bridge is a well-built and substantial piece of work, and reflects great credit on Mr. Killam. The dimensions of the work I have not ascertained, but believe it is 188 feet long, that the truss is 20 feet wide, that the foundations are three feet higher than the old bridge were, and that in every respect the bridge is superior and more durable than the old one.

The "opening to the public" was not conducted in a systematic way. It seems some carriages had driven over early in the forenoon. At noon the bridge was trimmed, decorated, and literally covered with bushes, green and otherwise. A band from Moncton (I believe the same that was used on election day, when the "Whitney-machine-shop" procession marched to the polling booth) furnished music to the happy folk who had gathered together from the village round about, as well as from Moncton, Dorchester, Salsbury, Sackville, &c. I would judge the number was about four hundred.

The "Christening" of the bridge was highly amusing. A man named Merrill was delegated to do this part of the farce. He ascended to the top of the bridge and, after making a short speech, called on Joseph Killam to give a name to the "Christening" of the bridge. The "Christening" of the bridge was highly amusing. We were then favored with speeches. Joseph Dickson, a Dorchester Corner last student, essayed to speak, but made a poor attempt, and gave way, as he said, to better men. Mr. Wm. Blaisie, a respectable looking gentleman, a former member of the Legislature, the Government, the country, &c. The speaker called on the Hon. Mr. Livingston, of the Sackville Bonifera. He had not spoken since in public; was passing through the crowd, and saw the display of bunting and, being in search of a "vite," thought he would interview the crowd, and in the process of doing so, he was believed he would have lost his heart, so much pleased was he by the display. He spoke eloquently and to the point. Thomas M. Wetmore, Esq., barrister, of Dorchester, spoke eloquently and to the point. He was no speaker; but those who had the pleasure of listening to his well chosen and nicely rounded remarks predict for him a bright future among the orators at the bar. The respectable Merrill put the finishing touches to the speaking and surprised all by his oratory. He praised the Killams, one and all, the Government, and Kelly especially. He spoke kindly and in a friendly way, and was well "pop the question" then and there.

Mr. Killam made a few remarks, after which the soldiers were passed around to the hundreds who felt like participating in the festivities. The Government, the country, &c. A verdict of wilful murder was rendered against James McCann, Jr., of Woodstock, by the coroner's jury that sat on the body of Samuel Sprules. It is reported from St. Andrews that Hon. John Macdonald is to apply to the present Government to have the law of the province amended so that the present Government, the country, &c. The speaker called on the Hon. Mr. Livingston, of the Sackville Bonifera. He had not spoken since in public; was passing through the crowd, and saw the display of bunting and, being in search of a "vite," thought he would interview the crowd, and in the process of doing so, he was believed he would have lost his heart, so much pleased was he by the display. A circular note in relation to the case in instruction, sent to the different European powers by Senator Ulloa, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is published. Senator Ulloa says that he has engaged the present of deterring religion, and of incendiaries, assassination and pillage. In support of his claims, he instances the massacres at Cuenca and Olay.

There is a mystery attending the suicide of Lord Gordon, whose the legend has as yet failed to unravel. No money or securities have been found. It appears that the warrants were not altogether regular, and the whole affair bears the complexion of another attempt at kidnapping by the deceased's business friends. The Chief Justice reprimanded the officials who effected the arrest.

James McCuskey, of Harding's Point, was badly beaten by Joshua Brundage, in Westfield, King's Co., on the 22nd of June, died last Friday. At the inquest, Saturday, it appeared by the testimony of Dr. James Christie, who made a post mortem examination, and witnesses of the row, that death was caused by "fracture of the kidney resulting from inflammation produced by the kicks of Brundage, and a verdict to that effect was rendered.

Charles Lamb would not allow any great antiquity for wit, and apostrophizing candlelight, said: "This is our peculiar and household plant; wanting it, what savage, uncivilized nights must our ancestors have spent, wining in caves and unlighted fastnesses! They must have lain about and grumbled at one another in the dark. What rejoices could have passed, when you must have felt about for a smile, and handled a neighbor's cheeks to be sure he understood it. Jokes came in with candles."

Philadelphia was to be thought the stamping ground of the "cutest lawyer," but Boston appears to have one who is entitled to go up head. This Boston lawyer, under the will of a deceased wife, claimed a life interest in a large estate in Kansas, left by her, but her friends sought to break the will. Ascertaining that under the laws Kansas he would have been heir to the estate if no will had been made, he permitted them to break the will, and then, to their surprise and disgust, took possession of the estate.

A man named Walter Greenwood recently came to his death in Manchester, England, from the prick of a needle. He had fastened a paper front to his flannel shirt with a needle, having no pins. Shortly after going out he fell sick, and was finally taken in an unconscious state to a surgery, where he was examined by physicians. The needle was found sticking in his whole length in the left side of the pit of the stomach. The needle was extracted, but the patient vomited, and was unconscious during the operation, and died in 10 minutes afterwards. The medical gentlemen are not certain whether death was caused by the shock to the system or by internal hemorrhage.

The Irish Friendly Society excursion comes off to-morrow. The train will leave Carleton at 8 o'clock, and returning will have departure at 4 p. m. Excursionists should be at the ferry in time for the 8 o'clock boat.

Robert McArthur and Douglas Hayden have been appointed on the Portland Police Force. The new engine was tested at the foot of King Street on Saturday afternoon. It threw a large stream of water higher than any of the old engines can, and was pronounced in every way satisfactory to the Department.

Mr. W. H. Whitcomb is in the city to arrange, if possible, for the appearance of his Black Crook Company for a short season.

Magley's Circus arrived in the city this morning about 8 o'clock, from St. George. They came across from the Suspension Bridge and made, even after a wet night's journey, an excellent appearance. They perform this afternoon and evening.

The Rev. Mr. Felwell preached in Zion's Church twice yesterday, on both occasions to excellent congregations. Mr. Felwell is a very eminent speaker, and created a very favorable impression on all who heard him. The arrangements for establishing a Church here will soon be perfected.

On Saturday evening the woodboats Nautilus and Brunswick got becalmed just above the Falls and drifted ashore. The crew were obliged to land in several rooms of the Victoria Hotel, yesterday.

The inhabitants of Portland were up bright and early this morning, peering from window, house-top and fence for the circus. They were bound to have the first sight of it.
