When Scotland was Catholic to the Core.

Under the heading "Happenings in Scotland" in the "True Witness" recently, there was a report of a remarkable sermon on the "National Apostasy" of Scotland, in the course of which the preacher referred to the glorious days in that country, when the Church's teachings were received with unquestioning obedience by the whole people; before there were any Presbyterians in the world; and when Scotland was Catholic to the core. The rev. preacher concluded by expressing a hope, in which we heartily join, that the Faith will ere long be restored to that fine old Celtic people, who possessed so many virtues and good qualities.

The sermon suggested a peep into Scottish history "in the ages of Scottish faith." Let us take a glimpse at St. Mungo's Cathedral at Glasgow in the sixteenth century, before what Leo XIII. describes as "the terrible storm" had broken over the Church. The Sarum Missal which imitates the good example set by their predecessors and by so many pious monarchs.—True Witness.

"There was a time," says the Paulist Calendar, "when bigotry and anti-Catholic prejudice seemed to dull men's powers of reasoning; and books containing the most fantastic descriptions of Catholic worship and beliefs, to say nothing of the calumnious attacks upon priests and nuns, were published and read as though they were divinely inspired. However, there is sense of fair play which appeals very strongly to the American people, and gradually such literature lost its popularity, to a great extent, disappeared. For quite a while the popular novel was free from any allusions to young nuns who were enticed into monasteries by monks who had designs upon their wealth, or to the young woman who, without any calling to a religious life, was immured in a convent, etc.; but writers of fiction seem to think that there is a priest, or a monk, or a nun in the story. With the intention to their Catholic readers many recent authors, in laying the scene of their novels, have assigned to Catholic priests, nuns, and laymen parts which are intended as a tribute to Catholics and Catholicism, but which on the contrary, are as false and as objectionable as the scenes and characters portrayed in the anti-Catholic literature of the past. It is the duty of Catholics to show their disapproval of such novels; and the most effective way to do this is to let them severely alone."

Says the Sacred Heart Review:—The Right Rev. Monsignor John Canon Muller, V. G., speaking at Bradford, England, the other day on the change for the better, as regards toleration to Catholics, which has come over England in the last fifty years said:—"Not so very long ago in this country of ours, which was once called 'Garden of God's Church,' it was deemed by law as high treason for a Catholic to profess or practice his religion. Our priests were outlaws, and when they ventured into their country to keep alive the faith in the hearts of the remaining faithful and to minister to them the helps and consolations of our holy religion, it was at the peril of their lives. . . . Myself a priest of fifty-three years standing, I have spent thirty-seven years in this town, where in the penitential days there was not a single priest. And now there are sixteen of us—not hunted to death, but respected, and enjoying full liberty under the law in the exercise of our sacerdotal duties; not under the ban of a wicked law which would have sent us to the gallows, but protected under the authority of the King and the laws of the land; protected not merely in the streets and in our homes, but at the bedside of the dying Catholic while administering to him the last rites of Holy Church; in the church itself, and even at the altar while offering the Adorable Sacrifice which a lingering remnant of the penal laws still stigmatizes as idolatry."

The cause of the venerable servant of God, Sister Mary of St. Ephrasia P.letter, foundress of the Congregation of the Good Shepherd, of Angers, has been advanced another step. At a recent meeting of the Sacred Congregation of Rites the following question was put: "Is there sufficient proof as to the validity of the process instituted at Angers by apostolic authority as to the sanctity and miracles in general of the above-named servant of God?" The answer of the Sacred Congregation was in the affirmative; and the Holy Father has confirmed it.

The high altar of London's new Catholic Cathedral is to be a single solid block, 12 ft. x 4 ft. x 3 ft. 5 in., of gray granite, without carvings. Over the altar rises a baldacchino resting on eight columns of onyx. These columns are 15 feet high and had to be procured from African quarries, as pieces of such size are not made or found in Europe. St. Paul's in Rome is the only church in the world that has anything like these supports, but they are made of several pieces. The columns will rest upon bases of white marble, which material is also used for the crown of the baldacchino itself. The archiepiscopal throne has been presented by the Catholic Bishops of England. It is of white marble, inlaid, and was made in Rome, a facsimile of the Papal throne in the Basilica of St. John Lateran. The pulpit is a composition work made with different kinds of marble inlaid with mosaics. It stands square in the form of a massive gallery and has three seats for the bishop and his deacons. It is also being made in Rome. The baptismal font is of marble. Byzantine in form so as to harmonize with the architectural features of the Byzantine chapel. Opposite it will stand the finely-executed statue of St. John the Baptist, presented by the late Marquess of Bute. The rood cross, that is, a crucifix thirty feet high, will be placed in the arch that divides the sanctuary from the nave. This is a feature almost entirely omitted from modern Catholic churches in the United States, yet it has a beautiful significance and takes us back to the days of Constantine, when the crucifix was first permitted to be openly exposed in the Roman dominion.

Cavaliere Bianchi, the Pope's modelist, has recently completed the coining of the first specimen of the Pontifical medal for this year, which is the twenty-fifth year or jubilee year of the pontificate of Leo XIII. It is very probable that Leo XIII. is the only Pontiff, with the exception of his predecessor, Pius IX. who has ever had a medal of his twenty-fifth year coined. In the days of St. Peter such method of marking the years was not in vogue, nor was the condition of Christianity in the mode of reckoning the years. The medal just struck, of which three examples, one of gold, one of silver and one of bronze, will be coined, is unique besides, as showing the Pontiff arrayed in the cope and crowned with the tiara. Around the medal on the obverse side an inscription indicates the name and date: "Leo XIII., Pontifex Maximus, twenty-fifth year." On the reverse is the figure of St. Peter arrayed in the well-known robes which are attributed to the Apostle, and over them is the pallium, the symbol of jurisdiction. The Apstels holds the keys in one hand and in the other he has a book, on which are written the words "Thou art Peter." Around and beneath the figure the sentence is continued in the words: "And upon this rock I will build My church." The outlines and modeling of the figure of St. Peter are very fine and artistically wrought. The design was made by the celebrated artist, Professor Commendatore Lodovico Salvi.

Beautiful Venice has suffered a calamity which has thrilled all the world that loves beauty and reveres art. Its unrivaled campanile, or bell tower, of St. Mark's Cathedral, that reared its shaft like a Titan's spear amid the clouds, suddenly collapsed a few days ago, and now lies a heap of ruin upon the great square before the Doges' palace and the cathedral. The tower and the splendid pines which surrounded it served a most useful purpose, apart from their value as ornaments of the water city. They stood there to rebuke the wrong implied in the expression, the Dark Ages, since no age capable of producing such glorious triumphs of architectural inspiration could possibly be regarded as wanting in the light of intellect. Artists and poets and lovers of the sublime have painted and sung and carved over the matchless beauty of the great square and its surroundings in a way that proved the power of art over minds that no other influence could reach. But the doom of these glories had long been anticipated. They were built, as it were, upon sand.

Venice is little more than a developed crannoge—a series of causeways erected upon piles sunk in a vast sand bank, upon which the action of the tides is incessant. The matchless floor of the cathedral has sunk many feet, and must soon be a thing of the past unless some colossal work of preservation be initiated by the Venetian authorities. It is consoling to know that immediate steps will be taken to re-erect the campanile, as close in resemblance to the original as possible. This was begun as far back as the year 888, and was not completed until the fifteenth century. Thus its erection covered almost the whole of the period embraced in what are called the Dark Ages—in an artistic and scholastic sense a cruel misnomer.—S. Andard and Times.

Rev. Father Martin Carroll, rector of St. Vincent de Paul's Church, Brooklyn, injured in a trolley car collision at Saratoga, N. Y., on July 23, will be incapacitated from duty for at least five or six months. Prayers for the recovery of Father Carroll were said at all the Masses in the Church of St. Vincent de Paul on Sunday last. Many members of the parish went, and at the conclusion of the Masses knelt before the altar and offered individual petitions for their pastor's recovery. The parish has a membership of fully 12,000. Father Carroll is a member of Bishop McDonnell's council, and the Bishop sent a letter of sympathy to the church.

On Friday, July 25, in the Cathedral at Santa Fe, Rev. J. B. Pinal, late pastor of St. Columba's Church at Durango, Colorado, was consecrated Auxiliary Bishop of Santa Fe. The solemn ceremony was performed by Archbishop Bourgade, assisted by Bishop Matz, of Denver, and Bishop Granjon, of Tucson.

In two decades the late Archbishop Feehan confirmed about 200,000 persons, ordained 250 priests, laid the cornerstones of eighty churches and dedicated over one hundred churches.

The statement is made that the charities of the late John W. Macky were more than a quarter of a million dollars a year, and so modestly were they given that no one, excepting possibly his private secretary, knew the beneficiaries. Mr. Macky for a long time virtually supported the Catholic Orphan Asylum and its one hundred and thirty children at Virginia, Nev. In New York he maintained five or six free beds in hospitals in memory of his son, Willie, who died a half dozen years ago, at the age of 26.

Washington, D. C. had audience of the Pope and of Cardinal Rampoll, the Papal Secretary of State.

A correspondent of the "Southern Cross," of Buenos Ayres, cites, as evidence of the deep hold the faith has taken on the hearts of the South Sea Islanders, the fact that before proceeding to elect a successor to the late Queen Amelia the chiefs attended Mass in a body.

A few months ago a Russian writer published in a St. Petersburg paper an article on the "Primacy of the See of Rome." The article created a sensation then, and it is still stirring the Russian church circles to their very depths. The writer's name is Resanoff, and his writings have long since enjoyed a commanding authority in Russia. In the above mentioned article he says emphatically that the Pope of Rome is the chief of Christendom, and that Russian theologians, in refusing to recognize his supremacy, are the dupes of the schismatic tendencies of the East and of a deplorable obstinacy.

On Sunday, August 24, there will be a remarkable benediction at Auriesville, New York. There on the hilltop overlooking one of the beautiful scenes of the Mohawk Valley, a statue representing in value the figure of Christ departed resting on the knee of His Mother, will be unveiled and blessed, and near by a massive crown of thorns and gold and precious gems will be placed as the votive offering of hearts to which this piety, as the group is called, is the most perfect expression of monthly piety.

Milburn's Heart and Nerves Pills cure Anemia, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Weakness, Palpitation Throbbing, Rapid Spells, Dizziness, or any condition arising from Impoverished Blood, Disordered Nerves or Weak Heart.

All Stuffed Up
That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.
No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.
To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.
"I was ill for four months with catarrh in the head and throat. Had a bad cough and raised blood. I had become discouraged when my husband bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and persuaded me to try it. I advise all to take it. It has cured and built me up." Mrs. Helen Russell, West Liscomb, N. S.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

It may sound funny but some people could say less and say more.

TOPOGRAPHY.
Even the bald headed man realizes that there is plenty of room at the top.

THEY WON'T WAIT.
It is said that age improves liquor, but evidently there are men in Charlottetown who don't care to wait.

NO DOUBT ABOUT IT.
A donation party might be a howling success to a man who is out of dough.

AND YET NO 'AIR APPARENT.
It is said that the Sultan of Sulu has no hair on his head. No wonder the old reprobate is baldheaded. He has thirteen wives.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?
A farmer not from the city sent the following note to a butcher the other day: "If you want to see a fine hog come to my farm and inquire for me."

HELD UP THE TRAIN.
Talk about the boldness of highway robbers in America. It's nothing! Dispatches from London say that Queen Alexandra's golden train was held up by six mere toys.

THE MAN WITH THE HOE.
A Charlottetown literary man has taken to hoeing his garden every evening. Hope he'll raise something more than blisters. Perhaps he'll raise a disturbance when he reads this.

SHOULD SAY NOT.
A city exchange says that the new British torpedo boat destroyer launched the other day achieved a mean speed of 34 knots an hour. Don't see anything mean about that speed.

STORY OF AN 'ED-EATER.
"I wish no pay for this poem," remarked the long-haired individual, "I submit it as a compliment." "Then permit me to return the compliment," replied the editor.

STRANGE SPECTACLES.
Blotbs—I shall have to wear glasses. Blotbs—Do your eyes trouble you? Blotbs—What did you think I was going to wear them for? Bunions?

CAUSE FOR REJOICING.
"My man," said the prison surgeon gravely to the convict, "I am sorry to tell you that you have indications of smallpox, but—"
"Wow! Hurrah! Whoop! Hurrah!" shouted the prisoner excitedly.
"Why, my man, why this rejoicing? I have just told you that you have smallpox!"
"Yes, an' I'm goin' to break out! Whoop!"

It was a hopeless case, and they gently placed him in a padded cell.

SAID TO BE TRUE.
During his address to the teachers' annual training at the Westmount Academy, Montreal, recently, Prof. J. W. Robertson, Ottawa, told a rather amusing story, which was said to be a true one. The story is as follows: At a Nova Scotia school some time ago a teacher asked one of her pupils if he could define a lie.

"Can you tell me what a lie is?" said she to Johnny.
"Yes, ma'am," was the reply.
"Well, what is a lie, Johnny?"
"Well, ma'am," said Johnny, after thinking a moment, "a lie is an abomination unto the Lord and a very present help in time of trouble."

Any one of the three shots in the body would have caused the death.

Mr. George Ross, of Toronto, Chief Post Office Superintendent of Canada, arrived here from Halifax last Wednesday night to ascertain regarding the agitation for improvements in the Post Office Building here. Mr. Ross is of the opinion that the people are justified in asking for improvements in the postal service and as a result of his investigation the interior of the Post Office will be remodelled and rearranged, more boxes introduced, the method of sorting improved and the general delivery rearranged.

As noticed by our last issue, Sunday the 17th inst., is the date set apart by Rev. Dr. Doyle, of Vernon River, for the jubilee service of St. Joachim's Church and the dedication of the magnificent new organ. Rev. Father Sheehan, C. S. S. R., will preach at Mass and at the evening service. St. Bev. Mgr. McJannet, of Jamaica Plain, and Fathers Cullen, Connolly and Flitlay, all of the archdiocese of Boston, are among the invited guests. His Lordship Bishop McDonald will be celebrant of the Pontifical Mass, and his Grace Archbishop O'Brien, of Halifax, will preside.

America's Grand Spa and Famous Resort, Saratoga Springs

Midsummer is at hand, and the vacation season at the many summer watering resorts is now at its height, especially is this so of Saratoga, the grandest, the most refreshing and the greatest of all American Summer Havens.

The cooling springs are gushing forth with their supply of healthful mineral water; the pleasant parks are bedecked with all their summer glory; the magnificent and palatial hotels are a scene of never ending life and gaiety, while from the large verandas and spacious halls floats the pleasant strains of delightful music. And the nearby lake now presents an ideal picture, situated, as it is, in a valley, with receding hills on both sides, a clear, blue sheet of water with a surface dotted here and there with boats and yachts.

The famous race track is a scene of animation and enthusiasm, here are the millionaire followers of the race tracks, the pick of the country, the fastest of horses and always intense interest. Here one can view a typical American race track scene, and the greatest sport in the country with a first-class patronage.

At this particular season of the year Saratoga is alone, she distances all rivals and has enjoyment galore.

Saratoga can be reached from Boston via the Boston and Maine Railroad, which runs through cars from Boston via the Fitchburg Division.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of the P. E. Island Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition, which takes place at Charlottetown from September 23rd to 28th. The management of this Exhibition are determined this year to do everything possible toward making the affair a grand success, and to this end they are offering over $6,000 in prizes, the largest amount that has yet been offered. The races on the 24th and 25th will no doubt be largely attended as the fastest classes are being entered, the prizes in purses amounting to $1,250. Stockbrokers, fruit growers, agriculturists and farmers generally show all united in endeavoring to make this Exhibition the most successful yet.

If the truth be told, I to saw no way out of the difficulty, but I would not own this to myself, much less to my companion. I therefore began to speak vaguely about the fallacy of such reasoning, and said it might as well be alleged that no individual teacher could ever err, a thing obviously untrue. She shook her head at this objection, and rejoined that Christ did not promise to preserve every individual teacher who should be commissioned to teach his Church from falling into error, but He had said: I will be with you; that is, the Church herself should be an infallible and unfailing teacher of truth. Thereupon I spoke of the bad lives of some of the Popes, who nevertheless were regarded as infallible in matters of doctrine, and asked, how did that coincide with the promise that Christ would be ever present in the Church? She replied that it was not said that the apostles and their successors should be without sin, but that the doctrine should be preserved from corruption. And for the matter of that, I need not speak of the Popes' failings; the innovators of the present day were no saints, witness Henry VIII, and—but no she would not say a word against Her Majesty, although her Count was not one pleasant to live,—I then found a subterfuge by saying that our Lord's words might be interpreted as referring to the invisible Church of elect souls, taught by the inspirations of the Holy Spirit and by reading the Scriptures. She asked me, did I really believe that? Had not all pious and god-fearing people both in the Eastern and the Western Church for a thousand years and more, on the authority of the word of God as expounded by the Church, worshipped God under the sacramental veil of the Host? Or were a handful of apostates like the Waldenses and other heretics the only souls whom the Holy Spirit vouchsafed to enlighten? To speak only of this doctrine of the presence of Christ in the Holy Eucharist could I fail to see how indispensable it was to believe that our Lord would preserve the Church from error on that point? When at the Last Supper He uttered the words: "This is my Body," did He not in His divine presence clearly foresee that the whole Church in all ages up to our day would understand them in their literal sense? And were they not intended to be so understood did He not foresee that they would give rise to idolatrous worship? To permit such a thing as that could hardly be reconciled with our idea of His Godhead. And even granting that the Church was in error concerning this fundamental dogma and chief article of faith, pray which of the hundred conflicting theories promulgated by the Reformers, each one of whom professes to be enlightened by the Holy Spirit, may be taken as the correct one?

I was for speaking about confession, indulgence, purgatory and the like, but Miss Cecil would not let me shirk the great difficulty. She returned to the main question at issue. Either the Church was a divinely appointed Teacher who never erred on any essential point, or Christ is not the omniscient God, faithful to His promise, whom we are taught to adore. Finding myself unable to answer these arguments, I got a little out of temper, and spoke rather sharply to my companion, bidding her take heed lest it should be pride that brought her in danger of losing her faith. Did she consider herself wiser and more clear sighted than all the excellent and enlightened divines, both in England and on the continent who were unanimous in asserting the Papacy to be the handiwork of the devil? Then the tears came into Miss Judith's eyes, and she gently answered that she too had feared the same thing; but she could only humbly pray God to enlighten her. To whom could she go for counsel? Not to the Anglican clergy, as it was impossible to feel any respect for men who altered their doctrines at the pleasure of Queen and Parliament. To her father! Unhappily she was only too well persuaded that as he had already changed his creed from political motives, he would not hesitate to do the same again if policy dictated. She could only look to God, and to her own conscience in this perplexing struggle. If I could render her any assistance, she would be eternally grateful to me.

This was said in so simple, straightforward a manner, that I felt heartily ashamed of having reproached her with pride. Moreover the doubts she had expressed had awakened so loud an echo in my own mind, that I was at a loss what to answer. It was a relief to me that we resorted to the tent at that moment, and looking for the missing kerchief put a temporary stop to our conversation. It was found at the back of the chair upon which the Queen sat to watch the games, and we started on our walk back to the palace without delay.

I was the first to begin the conversation again, by entreating her not to be hasty in deciding on so important a matter. I would give more thought to the difficulties she propounded; I would read books on the subject and consult some learned divines. Meanwhile we must both be earnest in prayer for light from on high; it was quite possible that the Catholic Church was the true Church of Christ. She thanked me, and promised to do nothing rashly; as yet she was far from seeing her way clear on many points. She begged me not to allow her mother or the Queen to know anything about her difficulties for the present; to this I readily assented. Then it suddenly occurred to me to ask whether these dreadful doubts had suggested themselves to her mind, or whether some meddlesome Papist had done the mischief.

"The principal difficulty that I mentioned to you," she answered, "has staggered me for a long time, but not until quite recently has it clamored for solution. It is ever since I read a little book, I dare say you know it, for it has been much talked of for the last four years, I mean this one." So saying she drew from her pocket a pamphlet which she handed to me. I looked at the title, and exclaimed, "What! the Rationes decem of Campion, the Jesuit! Now I see it all. Those serpents have instilled their poison into you!"

"I am perfectly aware, Mr. St. Barbe," Miss Cecil calmly responded in answer to my angry outburst, "that our preachers hate the Jesuits, and say all manner of evil against them, for they regard them as their deadliest enemies. In all my life I have never seen one of them, except this very Campion, the writer of this little book, and of him I never can think without emotion. He was brought as a prisoner to London, three weeks after it was published, and taken to the Tower gagged and bound, on horseback. It was market day; I was standing in Cheap-side, near the cross, and I saw how his countenance beamed with holy joy while the populace surged around; I saw how reverently he saluted the cross. A few days later, the Queen expressed a desire to see the noted Jesuit; I was one of the few persons selected to accompany her to the house of the Earl of Leicester, where the interview was to be held privately. How Leicester, Bedford, and the Queen herself were all deeply touched by the calm, modest demeanor of the young man, just entering upon the prime of life, thus brought face to face with death in its most terrible form. The Queen made him most brilliant offers, promising him the highest dignities, the richest benefices, if he would renounce his allegiance to the Pope. He declined them all, but so gently, that it was impossible for her to be angry, and we all expected his pardon would follow. Far from this, on the very next day he was placed by her orders on the rack, and so cruelly tortured that he could not raise his hand in the presence of the Judge.

And then, in the terrible condition to which he was reduced, no remedies having been given to him, he had to appear in public disputation against our most learned and able theologians, concerning the contents of this very book. He silenced his opponents so completely, I heard my father say, that all further disputations were prohibited. After that a most scandalous trial took place; it is enough to read the official report, though in that a great deal is suppressed. Last of all he was executed at Tyburn, forgiving his enemies, praying for the Queen, like the holy martyrs of old. Such was the maligned Jesuit, the author of this little book! Now I ask you as a favor to read his "Rationes decem, his ten arguments in defence of the Papacy, for which he, and many of our best and noblest fellow countrymen—witness Sir Thomas More—have laid down their lives. But first of all try to lay aside your prejudices against the name of Jesuit, so far as to give the reasons he adduces your deliberate and impartial consideration."

This I promised to do, and put the pamphlet, which I had long been desirous of possessing, into my pocket. Yet I went on railing against the Jesuits and repeating the slanders that I had heard or read about them. At length Miss Cecil begged me to leave off, and think what a lovely evening it was. The crimson glow of sunset had faded from the sky, and the moon had risen; a light breeze whispered in the tree tops, and ever and anon the sound of the flowing river fell on our ear. But fair and tranquil as was the face of nature, I was not to a mood to enjoy the beauty of the scene, my mind was too much agitated to feel its charm. Miss Cecil walked in silence by my side for a considerable distance. When I looked at her refined and aristocratic features, the turmoil within my breast rose higher. Was this adorable creature to become a Papist? My whole being rose against the thought, and I resolved to spare no effort in order to snatch his prey, as I said to myself, from the evil one. As we approached the palace, I spoke to her on the subject, imploring her with passionate earnestness, not to listen to the seducer, but for God's sake to think of the consequences a change of religion would involve.

"The consequences?" she repeated. "Which consequences, the temporal or the eternal? And pray whom do you mean by the seducer? There is but one question to be answered: what is the truth taught by Jesus Christ? And when one is satisfied on that point, there only remains to act in accordance with the words: 'What doth it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and suffer the loss of his own soul?'"

CHAPTER XVII.

When Miss Cecil and I reached the palace, we found a page waiting to conduct us to the Queen's presence. We handed over the kerchief; the Queen at once sent away my companion, and inquired whether I had confessed the fair Judith, and what was the result? I replied that Her Majesty's penetration had not been at fault; there were, it was true, some clouds of doubt which distributed the serenity of Miss Cecil's faith, I trusted they might be dispersed before they threatened a storm. She desired me to be more explicit. Fortunately for me at that moment the Earl of Essex was announced, and I was dismissed, the Queen saying that I must at some other time tell her more about my penitent's state of mind. I answered that the seal of confession must not be broken; she laughed, and gave me a playful tap of the shoulder as I withdrew, a sign that I was in great favor.

That night I could not sleep. After tossing on my bed till midnight was past, my mind dwelling continually on the objections Miss Cecil had stated, I rose, and lighting a taper, sat down to read the "Rationes decem." The arguments were so irresistible, couched as they were in pithy latinity, that I could not help reading the book all through. More than once I threw it aside angrily, and paced up and down my chamber to still the agitation it awakened; but each time I took it up again, and read some more. Champion's reason struck me like so many blows; I could have cried aloud, as with physical pain. The mishandling of Holy Scripture by the Reformers, Luther rejecting the Epistle of St. James, his followers rejecting other books, the Genevans repudiating the Book of Esther, just as the Manichees did St. Matthew's Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles, the Ebionites the Epistles of St. Paul; the wresting of the sacred text by recent expositors for the support of their own opinions, the example cited by Campion, being the words Miss Judith had mentioned. 'This is my Body' to which most contrary meanings were attached; the impossibility that a Church out of whose pale there is no salvation, should be an invisible Church; the Oecumenical Councils, from the first four of which, recognized by Parliament in the first years of Elizabeth's reign, the Jesuits drew proofs of the primacy of Peter; the sacrificial character of the Mass, the veneration of the saints, etc., the authority of the early Fathers and their exposition of the Sacred Scriptures; the testimony of history; the obvious contradictions and false conclusions in the tenets of modern innovations; the fair flowers of Paradise, the bane and rage of hell; the hierarchy on earth, the Church with her missions, her colleges, her cannon laws, her clergy, regular and secular; the splendid adornment of her cathedrals, the pious institutions of our forefathers—all these and more besides, that I cannot now recall, burst in upon my soul with tempestuous force, shaking in their foundations those religious convictions which, imbibed in my childhood, had every year grown with my growth.

My first feeling was one of rage against the writer of a book whose object was to overthrow all that I had hitherto regarded as sacred, and call upon me to venerate what till then had been an abomination to me. (To be continued.)

Minard's Liniment relieves neuralgia. Only a Mask.

Many are not benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, builds up the whole system.

If you are a gentleman people can find it out without you boasting that you were born one.
