The Home Rule Bill.

One could imagine every member of the British House of Commons leaning slightly forward in their seats, their eyes fixed upon the speaker, during the lengthy speech from Mr. Gladstone upon the Home Rule bill for Ireland. And after the speech was ended, one could not seek for expressions of surprise upon the faces of the members, but expectancy would demand the presentation of a general countenance indicative of gratification for England's possession of a statesman who has proved himself so cleverly capable of framing a measure that has every appearance of being sufficiently liberal to meet the extraordinary requirements of an extraordinary people.

Throughout the speech one can discern the intention of Mr. Gladstone to feed the temper of his hearers with well-prepared words ere he sprung upon them the more radical features of the measure. And the manner in which he followed up his skimming sentences with artillery of reasons must have quickened the pulse of those who were susceptible to the power of a fellow-man upon whom the crown of leadership glimmers when defiance and strength mark his attitude. But it was when the statements of the chief clauses of the bill that one could in fancy see an assemblage quivering with expectation, and the next moment thundering its applause at the venerable head of him who through long and severe opposition has persistently and courageously fought the fight of Home Rule for Ireland.

The keynote of the bill, as stated in the speech, is the question of the right of Irish members to share in the councils of the Imperial Parliament. That right will be given them in almost a certainty. The reason for granting this right is without doubt well given in the assertion that such a course is essential to the unity of Great Britain and that the Home Rule Bill seeks to strengthen that unity by every possible means. In this assertion the people of the British Empire will mark the Imperial policy of the present leader of the British House of Commons, and discern the probable character of the administration of affairs in connection with the relations of the colonies to the Mother Country.

The Exodus From Rural Districts. The tendency of population towards large centres of industrial activity, which is constantly spoken of as one of the features of modern life, and by many thought to be confined chiefly to Canada, presents a problem which is neither modern nor specially Canadian.

These families with the early condition of the Old Canada, that the retention of laborers in the rural districts was for centuries enforced by strict laws. Men were not only bound to the soil, but bound also to the masters of those estates in which they were reared. The growth of towns was both a cause and consequence of the very movement which some consider modern. It is one of the immutable conditions of country life to rear more men, and women, too, than are needed for the maintenance of agriculture. In fact, only one form of manufacturing industry; it utilizes only one class of skill, and is adapted to only one order of taste. Good farmers, like poets, are born, not made. The Poor Law of England was so designed as to check the exodus of farm labor either to other farming districts or to towns. Fear of losing their "settlement" has kept thousands of men from migrating to places where their labor was more in demand, and therefore better paid. The scheme was an ingenious device to keep down agricultural wages by preventing that outflow of surplus population which naturally accumulates in rural districts, and which creates some alarm lest we be left without enough cultivators of the soil to fill us bread and meat.

A special bulletin just issued by the Ontario Government on "The Teaching of Agriculture in Public Schools" discusses the question of the movements of population, with an evident design to make political capital for the party in power in this province. Statistics are presented relating to agriculture and manufactures in such a way, and with such comments, as indicate that farmers in Canada are being treated as if they were left without enough cultivators of the soil to fill us bread and meat.

Table with columns: Year, Population, Increase, etc. Rows include 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930.

Loss in Ontario population, 308,000. But if the first table is looked at it will be found that instead of Ontario having, as the bulletin of the Ontario Government says, lost 188,000 population, it gained 188,000, that, by comparing two of the bulletin's tables, it is manifest that the statement of "loss in Ontario population" is an error which it ought to have read, "Gain in Ontario population 188,000," an error of 554,672, which, in discussing a difficulty. What is full representation for Ireland? By a Double Process. In 1884 the House treated Ireland in a way as a mere appendage to Great Britain. That number was then beyond what, according to the calculation of population in this country, Ireland was entitled to, and it is claimed that, unhappily, the disparity has since been aggravated by a double process. The population of Great Britain has increased, while that of Ireland has diminished and has now reached a point that, whereas formerly entitled to the same representation, it is now entitled to a smaller one.

Eighty Irish Members. These 80 members would be introduced to recognize a commission given to 103 members, when it will sweep away the difficulties which have hitherto surrounded the bill. The proper number, we endeavored to arrange the schedule of the bill in such a manner that the representation would be practically not clash with representation in the legislature at Dublin.

Now comes the greater difficulty, what voting power will be given to the 80 members to be represented here fully. That is my first postulate. My second postulate is that Ireland, as a separate power, subject, no doubt, to Imperial authority. Yet, still, as we must have separate powers, subject, no doubt, to Imperial authority, as has been done in other legislatures of the Empire, Ireland is to be endowed with a separate power. This is the question before us in this case, or is it not, to vote strongly in favor of the bill, or to vote against it? Aye, or No. There are reasons both ways.

We cannot cut them off in a manner perfectly clean and clear from these questions. We cannot find an absolutely accurate line of cleavage between questions that are Imperial questions and those that are Irish questions. [Cheers.] Unless the Irish members are allowed to vote on all British questions they must have little or no vote, because there are no questions which they are to be allowed to vote on with accuracy and precision on the proper side of the line as either English or Irish members. It is to be excluded from one of the highest and most important functions of the House, viz., that of determining the composition of the executive power.

A vote of confidence is a simple declaration, but may be otherwise. I do not see how possible to exclude Irish members from voting on that great subject. A serious breach. Next, unless Irish members vote on all questions you break the Imperial unity of the House. The presence of 80 members with only limited powers of voting is a serious matter. It is to be excluded from one of the highest and most important functions of the House, viz., that of determining the composition of the executive power.

conceded to accept the House of Commons and the universal supremacy of the Empire. In return she has asked you only that she have the management of her own affairs, which means and justice, combined with the voice of her people, I hope, will soon move this nation to say soon shall be awarded her.

When the speaker said that, I think it is to be the end of the matter. I think dispassionate men would say, the sooner ended the better; the sooner stamped the seal which will efface all former animosities and open the era of peace and good will, the sooner done the better.

Toronto Defeats Trinity 7 Goals to 5. Winnipeg Beats at Ottawa-Gandeur Talks About His Coming Back With Hanlan—General Sporting News and News.

Every one expected that feeling would run high in last night's inter-university match in the O.H.A. series, but the game itself far outdid what was looked for.

Trinity scored the first goal, Varsity soon evened when Trinity scored again. Varsity again evened and then added another—3, 2, Toronto's favor. Then followed a series of rushes, in which the puck travelled up and down the rink, and at the end of half-time three goals had been added to Varsity's score, making it 6-0.

The scheduled match in the O. H. A. senior series last night at the Granite rink between Toronto and Granite resulted in a victory for the Granites by 10 goals to 4.

The feature of the game was Shanklin's dashy shots on goal. He scored no less than 10 times, which is the local record for one person in a match. The other scorers for the Granites were Walker (4), Higginbotham and Carrol, and for Toronto, Donaldson (2), Patterson and Lamont.

DIORY BELLS NEW ROLE

Good Fun and Some Pretty Girls at the Grand.

Diory Bell made his appearance in 'Vigil' last night at the Grand. It was a very enjoyable entertainment of the nature of a burlesque. The bill called it a comic opera, but beyond the fact that Julian Edwards, the composer, has inserted here and there a few pleasing and totemic numbers peculiar to comic opera, even going so far as to introduce a drinking chorus into Olympus of a kind that we have heard sung a good many times in Alpine villages and other places.

Mr. Bell plays the dual roles of Jupiter and Roman, a cobbler of sportsmanlike whom identities become involved. Mr. Bell plays the part of an old maid whom nobody would marry, but who loves her cobbler dearly. Between them they make a good team; they carry the show. Of course a few beautiful girls tend to make the burden lighter.

ALL FOUR WERE COMMITTED

THE DAYLIGHT BURGLARS SENT UP FOR TRIAL

What the Detectives Overheard the Prisoners Say to Each Other in the Cells. Another Charge Against the Elderly Archer—Flocked Out by a Young Woman Whom He Recognized.

The four persons whose names have been in everybody's mouth for the past few days and whose deeds have made them famous were on view at the Police Court yesterday morning. The room was crowded with spectators. William Archer was the first to climb the prisoner's stairway and make his appearance in the dock. His countenance is one that does not give the spectator a favorable impression. His thick lips and the prominence of his nose indicate a degenerate determination such as is always attributed to the professional burglar. His younger brother, Edward Archer, who came next, had the marked likeness to the first named, but his face has not entirely lost the innocent look of boyhood. Neither of the two had a sign of the dawn that presages the misdeed. Bennett was the third to enter the dock. He looked as though he felt he had had a stroke of hard luck. Norris, the last of the quartet, stood outside the dock, and was the only one who did not enter. He was evidently felt that he had been in bad company.

Col. Denison was in his place, and at his right sat Melville Parker, J.P., of Oakville, and Justice Baxter and Miller sat at the magistrate's right.

As Mr. Jennings Davis declared only three men had taken part in the robbery of his store Crown Attorney Curry withdrew the charge against the younger Archer. The evidence in all the cases proved the facts as already published. About $1500 worth of jewelry was produced and identified by Messrs. Davis and Roberts. Davis positively identified a ring which William Archer gave Miss Jennie Adams, a young lady, who swore to that fact. The most interesting evidence produced was given by Detective Duncan. He stated that he had followed Archer and his brother in the morning at 2 1/2, but the stock advanced during the morning and was sold in the afternoon at 3 1/2. Quotations are:

Chancellor Burwell lectured in the east-entertainment hall last Saturday in the University extension course on "The Moral and Religious Spirit of the Greek Drama." "Oedipus Rex" was the subject of the evening. Prof. Mark Baldwin has received the offer of a position as professor of philosophy at the University of Toronto. He will accept this position which will give him a very high place in the department of experimental psychology and will have two assistants under his orders. Mr. Baldwin has not yet come to a decision in the matter.

Mr. Neil MacDugall will represent the University at the Victoria College convention which is being held at the Victoria College Banquet and Glee Club will also be present.

STREET RAILWAY NOTES

A Straight Service Between the Extreme East and West

A straight service between the extreme east at Lee-avenue and the extreme west at Scholes' Hotel in King-street west will be established as soon as the Don bridge has been sufficiently strengthened. It is also probable when the electric system has been constructed in Queen-street east between Young-street and the Don that at the Don bridge, which forms the eastern junction of Queen and King-streets, the cars will run alternately in Queen and King-streets, meeting again at Scholes' Hotel, which is the western junction of the two streets.

The University Modern Language Club held its regular meeting in the College yesterday afternoon. Vice-President Lingelbach in the chair. The meeting was devoted to the study of English literature.

Considerable business was done at the local stock exchange yesterday. The market was active and the stock advanced during the morning and was sold in the afternoon at 3 1/2. Quotations are:
