The Stocking Basket.

Cosily thron'd in her cushioned chair,
A mother reclined from toil and care,
Except the darning of a stocking.
And her chair's perpetual rocking.
I thought I had somewhere seen it styled
The plague of life, such a basket piled
With tiresome, everlasting stitching. The plague of life, such a basket plant with thresome, everlasting stitching, With work so very unbewitching, And as she broke the thread asunder, Weaving in and out, over and under, I wished the rents in human life Could be mended with as little strife.

She took in her hand a tiny thing,
All striped with a white and scarlet ring,
And smiled as she thought of the silken ha
And laughing eyes of her darling fair;
Of the rosy lips and dainty hands,
The pleasing cries and loud demands.
She sighed as she thought of the world u tried.

tried,
And up and down her needle plied,
She knew it said, oh, blessed are such!
And strok'd her work with a tender touch,
Softly folded and laid it away,
As the little feet in slumber lay.

But on the next a tear-drop lingers:
The mother wrought with trembling fingers,
And sadly bowed with an anxious face,
Appealing on high for strength and grace
To guide the steps of her wayward son,
To bless and protect her erring one,
Nor suffer the wand'ring feet to roam
Forth from the love of his early home;
To shield him from the glittering net
The tempter with costly jewels had set;
To save him from the sparkling bowl,
And all the dangers that sear the soul.

As on the third her looks were bent,
The face wore a smile of sweet content,
For the fair-haired girl whose gentle ways
Were extolled by all with a voice of praise:
For her sunshine ever glowed,
And from her lips rare music flowed;
With graceful carriage and modest mien
She moved through life like a fair young queen,

The mother said with a fervent prayer,
The mother said with a fervent prayer, May Heaven shield her from harm and care, From cruel want, and the stings that smart, From the bruises of a blighted heart. The next were those whose feet had trod.

The next were those whose feet had tree-for many summers the earth's green sod, And the storms of many winters felt, In joys had smiled, and in sorrows knelt. No cloud so dark, but the glimmering hue Of the sunrise ever struggled through; No gloom so deep, faith could not brighten; No toil so hard, love could not lighten.

The last for one who was passing down
To her narrow home with a silver crown
Of wondrous lustre, that seemed to shed
A light of glory round her head.
Peacefully sinking in quiet rest
Awaiting those of the truly blest;
For her she plead the right to share
All tender aid and watchful care. And thus the stockings all were mended

With each stitch a thought was blended; With ev'ry thread for future wear, The weaving in of a silent prayer.

The Other Mother.

One of the noisy group of children always to be found in Cherry Street had fallen on the pavement and was crying bitterly. In a more aristocratic part of the city her screams would have brought many mothers to doors and windows; but here she cried on unheeded except by her playmates, who stood about woman who had been busy in the back of one of the shops heard the cry and came hurrying out of the door and down the street toward the little group. She took the child in her arms and cuddled it against her bosom, soothing it with crooning words and gentle touches that one would hardly have expected from such coarse, rough hands. The other children stood about in a kind of wonder and surprise, offering explanations.

claimed-" honest, we ain't." "She jest done it herself," put in another; she allers is a tumblin' about, anyhow." The woman was still comforting the child, and would have taken her back into the shop with her, had not a woman just then come out upon the opposite doorstep and called to her in angry tones and words sprinkled with aths, to "leave the child come to her-she'd teach her to trouble folks with her yelling!" and "Other folks had better look out for theirselves and not meddle with her young ones!" Her voice was thick, however, and her brain dull from drink, so that she was satisfied when she had thus delivered herself, and crawled back into the hou when the child was put down on the pavement again. When she had disappeared, the woman hugged the child to her own childless heart once more, and touched caressingly the tangled heads of one or two of the others Then she turned and entered the shop again -the one with the three gilt balls over the

It was unusually quiet there in the shop this afternoon, for her husband's brother had gone off to the races for the day and her father in-law lay in a half drunken sleep in knitting, which lay on a chair behind the counter, seated herself in the corner, and the edles began to click. A meagre light crept in in streaks through the dingy window pane and shadowed the curious collection of objects about the shop as though it wished to discover their business there. It rested on a widow's homely face, softening its rugged lines and discovering a latent sweetness there. She was a Scotch woman, and had the patient, steadfast blue eyes of her race, set under a brow that in a more fortunate and appreciative sphere of life would hav been termed intellectual.

of degrading associations and this squalid street. It was as though a fresh sea breeze had found its way into a stagnant inland swamp. She gazed absently about the shop as she knitted. Many of the objects that her eyes rested on suggested strange associa-tions to her. A number of musical instru-ments lay on the shelf and ornamented the walls near the windows, and she could seethe gentle face of the shabby, old starving man who had brought the Stradivarius violin that hung among them; he had died, she re-membered hearing, a few days later. She recollected when the French horn was brought, and knew that its owner, a young a

An old musket stood against the wall beside these, stiff and He saw only the vision of his country home; But the woman ceased to be mindful of these things, as she knitted on. She was thinking of her far-away Scotch home, that she had left when her husband brought her away to America. It was only a little fishing cottage perched on the crags, but she three gilt balls—the childless mother waited ing cottage perched on the crags, but she longed now for a breath of that salt air and a glimpse of the wild free waves, and she thought of the kindly faces gathered about the fireplace. But it was not this picture that filled her eyes with tears. It was the emptiness in her arms, where a precious den had lain for so short a tie for that short three months. Just long enough it had been for them to grow accustomed to its sweet dependence, so that ever after they would feel the invisible presence and look for the warm human touch. It was the mother's heart of the woman, which no life of harshness or repression could subdue. The foot-falls in the street outside the open door grew more numerous as the scant daylight waned. They were tired, heavy, often unsteady footsteps. Now she heard them, and now, busy with her thoughts, she did not notice them. She was almost startled when a young man, with a quick, sharp tread, turned in at the door. His step upon the floor tore the cobweb of memories her brain, and with an effort she brought her mind back to the present. His manner was nervous and excited as he thrust his hand into his vest pocket, and she saw that he looked ill. A feeling of pity came over her as she noted, too, what a handsome, boyish face it was, not really bad, and not weak either, as were so many of the faces that came there, although one could see in his eyes the unmistakable restlessness and fever of the gambling man, who almost always comes sooner or later to haunt the pawn shop. She had learned well, in these few years, the eaning and the signs of this, among the other moral diseases, and she had seen other faces as young as his with the same taint in them; but her pity welled up fresh from her heart at each new sight of human degradation, in a way not common in the pawnshop heart. The young man's face was haggard, and his clothes were unkemp. When in his nervous haste his hat fell off almost unheeded, and she saw the dark curls that might have been a child's, her mother's heart throbbed vet again within her. and with uncertain fingers was unrolling something from a bit of tissue paper. An exclamation broke from the woman's lips as the covering was torn away. It was a minia-ture of a woman—a beautiful woman, a face a young face, a face which could not grow old. She did not notice the rich jewels set about it, but stood murmuring. "Weel, weel, sae bonny, sae winsome!" It was as though a rare and lovely flowe had been placed in her hand. But as she murmured and exclaimed, the face of the young man grew paler.

"Don't!" he cried, in a sharp, painful voice, and with a sudden gesture, as though ne would take it back. "Don't! I can't bear it .-- What will you give me for it?" She took the miniature in her hand rever-ently, almost as she might have touched the beautiful young face, had it been there beside her. She gazed at it earnestly,—for loveli-ness of this kind or of any kind rarely came near her life,-and then she turned it over once and again. As she turned it the second time, an inscription on the back held her attention: "For my little son, from his loving mother." She read it aloud, and the

"Dont! Don't! Let me go!"-and his face

"Ye shall not go!" exclaimed the woman, with a great determination wakening in her eyes. "Ye shall not go and take it to some ither place,—ye'r mother! But sin ye need siller, ye must aye let me gie it ye wi'out that. I am a mother, too," she went on, half proudly, half pleadingly, "an if my ain airn wad be but a wee laddie now, still I ken how it wad ha been wi' me had he parted wi' aught. There! lad, there!"

He had thrown his head down upon arms on the counter, and his frame shook with a man's dry sobs. The gentle touch of her hand was on his hair and the comforting tones of her voice were in his ears, speaking to him as though he were a child.

"Aye, lad, and ye'll take th' siller au' gae back t' her,-there! there! An' if ye're been wrang, why, there's mony a day left to fill wi' gude, brave deeds, and there's money as 'll gie ye th' hand o' welcome back. An' she'll be sae glad t' see ye; her hand has been lonesome for the touch o' ye, lad, and her eyes dim for th' sight o' ye; an' if ye'd been to th' mouth o' hell, her luv wad still be yours, lad. I ken, lad—I ken—because—I

There was a tenderness in her voice, as Fruit for Health.

The approaching warm weather suggests questions of diet which control the general nealth and make or mar personal comfort to an enormous degree. What shall we eat or drink and what avoid to insure health, to increase the enjoyment of living, and to do caused the doors to be closed. He then this economically, without adding to our usual expense, is a question inviting enough

The way of life becomes very easy if we once divest ourselves of the ideas of extrava-gance and usage common to our condition. The only effective way to modify habits is to

Although fruit as a common article of diet is making great advances among us, its use is by no means as general as it might be. The reason why it has made such rapid strides is due in no small degree to our great need of it. The increased consumption of cereal foods containing starch in large quantities has promoted the use of drugs and less aperients to correct irregularity of habit. Ripe fruits provide us with a form of sugar which taxes the digestive organs least and a series of dilute acids of decided solvent action in the medium of nature's own distilling. No wonder so many cures

The common error of regarding fruits as too watery comes from a misconception of the use of water in the animal needs. Every one knows that the purity of water governs the degree of health we enjoy, and that water of suspicious or less good quality does not serve us so well. While water alone will not repair the body's waist, since it contains no food constituents for the formation of new bone and muscle, it can and does make the food we eat more effective, because good water improves our digestion and decreases the body of its effete matter by taking it through the excretory organs. The more we can do to feed rationally, by the use of as much raw vegetable substance, as fruits and salads, the less concern we shall Eating every kind of fruit we can afford, in its season, and the dried fruits, like dates, figs and bananas, as reserves at all seasons of the year, three times a day, in the place of some of the forms of cereals, as to white bread and pie, will enable us to form new habits of diet of priceless value to comfort and health. Very much of the discomfort we suffer in warm weather proceeds from the impaction of masses of undigested starchy matter derived from soft bread, potatoes and pie. If we must have these things every consumer should see that they reach him in as finely divided a state as possible, and so cooked as to develop to the fullest extent the browned surface of breat crust and fried potatoes. A Vision of Heaven.

BEAUTIFUL LITTLE STORY OF A SCOTCE MOTHER AND CHILD. They sat together on the warm, sparkling and, the mother and the child. The tiny golden head nestled against the protecting reast, the wan face lit by the evening sun the eyes were closed, and a smile parted the loodless lips. The maiden slept.

The mother watched beside her sleeping child-and she, scarce more than child her self, murmured a mother's prayer, "Lord Jesus, save my little girl." Again and again she repeated it, "Save my little girl." Softly she drew the threadbare tartan shawl round the slender frame. Gentle as was the motion it roused the sleeper. The

One year, when his field was particularly rich in large and excellent onions, he brought his cot-bed out into it, that he might sleep at night on his field and protect his property against thieves. A few nights' experience showed him that no therefore, gave up sleeping out-doors, but left his cot bed behind him as a precaution, as he thought. In the morning he found all his onions gone. In sorrow and consternation he ran to the nearest justice and made known the robbery. The judge demanded that he should bring either the thieves or witnesses. The poor man, unable to do so, explained that only his cot-bed had been left; nothing else was there to bear witness against any thief. The judge ordered the cot-bed brought into court. This was done. As the cot gave no answer to the questions put to it, the judge ordered that it be beaten for "contempt of court." At this the attendants at court and spectators began to laugh loudly. The merriment rose to an uproar sentenced each to pay one pound of onions, and to arrest until the payment was made. allowed to go out and buy onions with which to pay his fine, the poor gardener was called in, and requested by the judge to examine the onions, to determine, if he could, if any of them were from his garden. He declared that undoubtedly most of them came from his field. As they nearly all had been bought from the same dealer, the judge issued a warrant for the arrest of that dealer. At first the thief denied his guilt, but soon sed. He was condemned to be flogged, and all the onions paid as a fine were given to the gardener, who was thus richly paid for his trouble. The judge's wisdom was recognized everywhere, and his judgment Translated for the Literary Digest.

The Middle Aged Woman. It is the easiest thing in the world to est thing in the world, says a recent writer, later on, to dress suitably for that trying period when autumn is just shading into winter. If any woman wants to make a grandmother of herself (though I have never found that woman yet), the problem is easy enough, for there are endless suggestions for the wearer of snowy locks and spectacles, bu nation to dress in style, there are difficultie "Wear dark, rich materials," the fashion plates vaguely advise, with that light-hearted disregard for probabilities and pocket-books which distinguish them; and as to what she shall do for rich materials if she herself is not rich profound silence is observed. It is safe to say that more middle-aged that of gayety in dress. "Black, black, black!" mourned a fastidious foreigner from the capital of fashion at an assembly of middle-aged American men and women. "Do ze not know it take ze young complexion?'

A mistaken belief that black is the kindes of colors to faded face tints and gathering crows' feet-in reality it is the most merc less-leads the woman in her forties and fif ties to neglect soft stone and navy blues dark reds and olive greens, the rich autumn leaf browns, which are so often far more be coming than the perennial blacks and grays.
Of course, harsh striking scarlets, purples rose pinks, and bright greens are manifestly unsuited to the period of the sere and yellow leaf; the colors selected should be either deep or delicate garnets and olives, or else enders and turquoise blues.

Two Colossal Children. The quaint little town of St. Nicholas, East Flanders, boasts the possession of two children of such extraordinary abnormal growth as to put completely in the shade all similar infant prodigies of the past or pre-sent. These Brobdignagian youngsters are boy and girl. The older, Master Clement edst, is fifteen years of age and weighs no less than 420 pounds; the circumference of his body is six feet six inches; he measures thirty-six inches around the leg and twenty-eight inches around the arm. His sister, Bertha, is eight years old, and turns the scale at 224 pounds. In spite of their dimensions their activity is remarkable, for they trip and skip about with all the agility of other children of an equal age. It is an astonishing sight to see these infant mountains of humanity romping about in country lanes with other children of the village. One would imagine them to be the offspring of a race of giants, so high do they tower over the heads of their little playfellows. Their appearance is interesting, both having extremely handsome and regular features. Bertha, like other girls of tender years, delights in nursing a doll, which seems ludio rously out of place and proportion in the arms of the young giantess. The couple are attracting the attention of the country round, and on fine days crowds of people flock into the quiet little town in order to catch a glimpse of these colossal children. Nutrition and the Nerves.

Anything that affects the general nutrition of the body will injuriously affect the nervous system.

So long as the digestive organs are not in a healthy condition the process of building up of tissues and of removing wasted tissues from the system cannot go on as it should to insure health.

Whoever, therefore, is suffering from nervous debility must first of all do something that will restore the digestive organs to their normal condition. The great merit of Hawkers nerve and stomach tonic is that it brings about this important change, and restores healthy action to the digestive organs. It effect upon the nervous system is very marked. The person taking a course of this remedy according to directions and with a due regard to regular habits will regain lost appetite, food will be digested without distress, restful sleep will be enjoyed, the nerves invigorated and health fully restored. These are not idle words. The happy experience of thousands is behind them. Be advised, therefore, and if your system is out of order secure a supply of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic.

It is sold by all druggists and dealers at 50 ots. per bottle or six bottles for $2.50, and is manufactured only by the Hawker Medicine Co. (Ltd.) St. John, N. B., and New York City.

"If I look like that woman," said she holding them at arm's length, "then the fewer counterfeit presentments of me in existence the better. I have always said that no one should be photographed after 50, and I never should have consented only Jack west with him. Better leave well enough alone and send down my portait there to posterity." This with a rather conscious plance at the beautifully executed painting of a fair young matron in the prime of he beauty, for Aunt Alice has been a beauty and a toast, and one cannot wonder that she is annoyed at such an unpleasant reminder of the flight of time.

"Come with me to the photographer's, aunt," I pleaded, "and let me pose you and arrange things, and I promise you if you are not pleased with the proofs we will never ention the subject to you again." It took a little urging to get her consent, but Jack and finally our joint entreaties prevailed, and I cerried her off in triumph. We went to a younger photographer, one more open to suggestions than the one she had first chosen, and who had made the great mistake of proceeding which resulted in a large head of the sitter. Few faces over 40 will stand this test. I wheedled this young and progressive photographer into doing just what I wanted, and he gave us a "small head on a carte de visite." We had a light background, and Aunt Alice wore a particularly becoming ing. Wrinkles disappeared as if by magic, and the straight, beautiful features and pretty, wavy white hair made a most pleas ing picture. Aunt Alice had to confess that she was satisfied.—N. Y. Tribune.

give the Salisbury government a larger majority than its most sanguine friends hoped for or expected. The tory victory has been sweeping and emphatic, showing a decided change in sentiment since the last election, all over the Kingdom. Everywhere the government candidates have gained seats, ased their former majorities, or reduced the liberal majorities. It is now estimated that the straight conservatives will have a clear majority over all parties, which would clear majority over all parties, which would enable Salisbury to do without the assistance of his liberal union allies should he so wish. In the last parliament the Irish home rule members held the balance of power and the government was very largely at their mercy. In this one they will cut but a small figure, while the question of home rule itself has now, to a very large extent, become a dead served.

asking themselves the cause of their crushing defeat, and the result is being anxiously studied with the view of learning the lessons which it might teach. Their papers assign one principal cause for the result. Lord Salisbury's government, the leading liberal organ declares, floated into power on beer. The advanced stand taken by certain of the liberal leaders on the temperance question is set down as the chief cause of their overwhelming defeat. As we stated last week, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the late leader of the liberal party in the House of Commons, made local option, or the right of each community to veto the liquor traffic, a prominent feature of the liberal policy, and to this more than to any other cause is attributed the crushing defeat which that party has sustained. This seems a queer thing to defeat one principal cause for the result. Lord tained. This seems a queer thing to defeat a party for. The liberals, it seems, propose tained. This seems a queer thing to defeat a party for. The librals, it seems, propose to give the people power to regulate the liquor traffic to suit themselves, and the people have declared with emphasis that they do not want the power. They have, so to speak, voted want of confidence in themselves. The result is a clear and unmistakable indication that John Bull will have nothing to do with prohibition. He wants his beer and will have it. He has, therefore, served notice upon the politicians to let the liquor interest alone, a notice they will be very likely to obey for several years to come. Of course there are other causes which helped to bring about the result. The English people are evidently tired of home rule and the interminable squabbles of the Irish factions; while the disappearance of Mr. Gladstone has helped to disintegrate the party which his imposing personality sustained and so often led to victory.

It is worthy of note that in the new parliament and government are quite a number of men in whom the people of the dominion have an especial interest. Lord Lansdowne, who was Governor-General of Canada from '83 to '88, is a member of Lords. The Marquis of Lorne, who also was our Governor-General from '78 to '83 has just been elected to the House of Commons as a liberal unionist. Both these gentlemen were formerly liberals, but they left that party on the home rule issue. General Laurie, who represented Shelburne county in the Canadian parliament for several years, has also been elected as a conservative in one of the districts of Pembroke, Wales, and Hon. Edward Walls, and the intellect is certainly most remember of eighty-three, she retains to a represented Shelburne county in the Canadian parliament for several years, has also been elected as a conservative in one of the districts of Pembroke, Wales, and Hon. Edward Walls, and Hon. Edward lected as a conservative in one of the districts of Pembroke, Wales, and Hon. Edward Blake has been returned without opposition from his Irish constituency of South Langford. Mr. Blake is the only one of these who will be in opposition. As an Irish home rule member his opportunities and entire field of usefulness are much more limited than would otherwise be the case with a man of his great abilities, which doubtless accounts for the fact that he has not thus far gained any great degree of prominence since entering the field of Imperial politics.

Horse Notes.

Matters on the Bridgetown Driving Park are progressing in a manner affording considerable satisfaction to the Board of Directors and others interested. Mr. Wm. Crabbe, the care-taker, is much pleased with his surroundings, and is receiving from week to week new horses for training. Mr. Crabbe has already secured the reputation of being one of the most expert drivers and of the provinces, and left here last night for Yarmouth with Sir Brenton, who he drives in the 2.32 class on Friday.

counts for the fact that he has not thus far gained any great degree of prominence since entering the field of Imperial politics.

All of these, however, are staunch friends of Canada, and although the occasion seldom arises now when we need to have friends at court, yet should such a time occur, we can rely upon the interest of these gentlemen in the dominion and their good will towards our people, to see that all Canadian interests are carefully protected.

—If the last vote given in the Canadian parliament on the Manitoba school question is any indication of the sentiments of the members, the Catholics of Manitoba are likely to get everything they are asking for. It should have been a test vote, as the resolution was moved for the purpose of giving those opposed to remedial legislation a chance to place themselves on record. It expressed the opinion that the Canadian parliament was unwilling to grant separate schools to the Catholics of Manitoba, either at this of the next session, and after being discussed for several hours only two members could be found willing to stand up and vote for it. These were Mr. McCarthy, the mover of the resolution, and his follower, Colonel O'Brien. If there were other members who agree with these gentlemen on that matter, they missed an opportunity of placing themselves on record on that occasion.

In accordance with this resolution, the following were appointed:—The Rev. E. M. Hill, and the Rev. A. M. Phillips, Montreal; the Rev. G. O. Gates, of St. John, N. B.; the Rev. J. S. Smith, of Halifax; and the Rev. J. A. R. Dickson, of Galt, and Mr. Thomas Renny, Toronto.

One motion was passed, though not without considerable debate, of sympathy with Manitoba in her struggle for free public schools, many feeling that this was a political question with which such a meeting had nothing to do.

A resolution that occasioned much surprise to Bostonians, was the recommendation that every Capadian Christian Endeavorer refrain from using the street cars on Sunday. This was carried unanimously. THE JUNIOR RALLY.

The Junior rally on Saturday afternoon was a grand success. The seniors were excluded from the floor of the hall and from the platform, and thousands of children sat in their places. At the close Mr. Clark was called to the platform and loudly cheered. Perhaps the keynote of the whole convention was struck by the Rev. J. A. W. Stuckenburg, of Cambridge, in his address on "Christian Personality." "The most marked sign of the times," he said, "was the prominence attained by personality. The important question was not what a man believed or did, but what he was. It was true that faiths and theories, and ideas mademen, but a deeper truth was that a man's theory and faith and idea, depended on his character. Environment does not make a man. A man makes his environment. Faith character. Environment does not make a man. A man makes his environment. Faith in Christ made a man willing to do his will, but on the other hand, unless a man was willing to obey Christ in everything, he could never believe in Him. To be a Christian was simply to be Christ-like. Through all the din of the world's machinery we looked for the man who gave meaning to it all. The great spiritual power in the world was the bible, translated into Christian personality, and nothing on earth equalled God, as found in man, his image.

An enthusiastic Canadian rally was held in Phillips Church, South Boston, on Saturday night. The theme of this meeting was the need of Dominion organization. At the call of the chairman Mr. G. J. Ferguson, of Toronto, rousing speeches were given by the Rev. A. M. Phillips, Montreal; the Rev. J. S. Sonning, Toronto; the Rev. J. R. Dobson, Montreal, and the Rev. Thomas Corbett, Kirkland, N. B., and at the close the following resolution was adopted:— Blotters, Legal Paper, Blanks, etc., etc.

The committee, consisting of Messrs. W. E. Palfrey, O. P. Goucher, S. R. Morse, junr., and S. C. Hall, who got Miss Hext here, have also secured the Johnson-Smiley Combination Co. for a date in August. These gentlemen deserve credit, and the entertainments being of such high order should be well patronized.

Notwithstanding the busy time of the year a large and very appreciative audience greeted Miss Effie Elene Hext on last Saturday evening. The entertainment was of a high order; in fact, with a few exceptions, was the best the town has been favored with for years. Miss Hext came particularly well recommended and expectations were high, but everything said was amply justified by the performance. Her selections, embracing the pathetic, humorous, and heroic called for a wide range of power, each of which were equally well rendered and received. The rendering of the chariot race in Ben. but everything said was amply justified by the performance. Her selections, embracing the pathetic, humorous, and heroic called for a wide range of power, each of which were equally well rendered and received. The rendering of the chariot race in Ben Hur, by request, was especially thrilling. The programme concluded with statuesque posings, in Greek costume, forty-five in number, portraying different human emotions. These were finished and graceful, and perhaps the most interesting part of the evening. The Valley Cornet Band was present and with their usual good taste added much to the evening's entertainment.

The Gilbert Exceptions. Angus D. Gilbert, who now stands convicted of the murder of Alice M. Sterling, was informed this week that his exceptions were allowed, says the Boston Globe. This means that the supreme court will pass upon the case in November. It was not many hours after the private sessions of Judges Dunbar and Sheldon that he received intelligence of what had transpired. "Well, that means considerable to me, and who knows but liberty," he said to one of the keepers.

knows but liberty," he said to one of the keepers.

Lawyers Doherty and Leach took exceptions at the trial to certain rulings of the presiding justices and to the remarks of the mother of Alice. There was a hearing Friday morning before Judges Dunbar and Sheldon to determine the form in which the exceptions should be sent up to the supreme court. After an hour's deliberation the exceptions were allowed by the court, but in a modified form from what were asked for by the counsel for the defendant. The bill of exceptions as allowed contains the further fact that the outbreak made by Mrs. Alice Sterling, mother of the murdered child, was not in response to any question and was stopped as soon as possible. As the supreme court does not come in until November next, the case cannot be argued until that time, unless a special session is held.

FIFTH ANNUAL CONVENTION IN SESSION IN BALTIMORE, MD.

Baltimore, Md., July 17.—The fifth annual meeting of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, opened here this morning, under the presidency of Mr. J. H. Chapman. Several thousand delegates, largely women, met in an immense tent in Druid Hill Park, where addresses were delivered by eminent ministers and laymen. The work of the Union resembled somewhat in method the Christian Endeavor Society with denominational teachings. Ontario has a large representation. Quebec a small one. Banners and badges are seen everywhere, the Union Jack and Stars and Stripes being equally displayed. The Baptists number about 4,000,000 in the United States. The sessions of the Union will continue until Saturday. The great heat interferes with comfort. Two medical tents with a staff of doctors were wisely provided, many persons having already been prostrated by the heat. BALTIMORE, MD.

Victoriavale's Clever Men. "L. E. B." in the last issue of The Outlook has the following relative to the successful men born at Victoriavale:—

ful men born at Victoriavale:

"Few places of the same size claim to have sent out more successful men than our little valley situated between two ridges of the Month Mountain. Among others might be mentioned Rev. S. E. Miller, now of the Baptist church at Essex Junction; Rev. Thomas Reagh, of one of the Episcopal churches in P. E. I.; Frank Andrews, ex. M. P.P., now post-master at Middleton; A. R. Andrews, M.D., now practising in the same town; Dr. O. A. Parker, a rising young dentist of Wakufield, Mass; I. C. Craig, an inspection of Schools, and A. P. C. Fale, specialist physician at Bridgewater. I might mention another, now deceased, who in his short life gained more wealth than any of the before mentioned. Guy Phinney, son of our neighbor Caleb Phinney, who at one time taught school in the valley. From this profession he advanced to be worth half a million. All reared within two miles of one another these got their first education at the Victoriavale school. They now hold lucrative positions and have good reputations for sobriety, industry and integrity."

London, July 18.—Henry Irving, the actor; Walter Besant, the novelist; and Lewis Morris, the poet; took a train for Windsor this afterneon and were formally invested with their rank of knighthood by the Queen.

Ladies who have deferred completing their Summer wardrobes will be particularly pleased with this number, for the styles were never more dainty and appropriate. A special article is devoted to Dressing for Stout Ladies, and another to Bathing and Swimming, with illustrations of the Latest Fashions in Bathing Costumes. Mrs. Roger A. Private Hayhurst has always been considered a wonderful shot, and in 1889, while a member of the lat V. B. lancers, won the Prince of Wales' prize, and some two or three years afterwards moved to Canada. Here, under the rules, he was considered a green shot, and in 1893 entered the nursery of the P. Q. R. A. and won the first prize and many others through the meetings. The same year he was a competitor at the D. R. A. meeting and again as a nursery man won the first prize, but also came in among the top ones, and last year won his place on the Bisley team, a position that he has filled with honor to himself and the Dominion of Canada.

London, July 20.—The Canadian team was second in the contest for the McKinnon cup, their score being 30. All the competitions to-day were seriously affected by the rain and by a high wind which prevailed. Chamberlain, of Canada, won the second prize in the Barlow contest. THE CHURCH.

Chicago, Ill., July 15.—Roman Catholic members of the Knights of Pythias, Oddfellows and Sons of Temperance, were authoritatively placed under the ban of the Roman Catholic Church by a published order which went into effect yesterday, and was read from all the pulpits of that Church in this diocese. Archbishop Freehan has been notified by Mgr. Satolli that the edict is to be observed to the strictest letter. It affects eight thousand Knights of Pythias and several thousand Oddfellows and Sons of Temperance.

Montreal, July 20.—For some time the presence of a gang of fire bugs in this city has been suspected, owing to the number of fires the origin of which was enveloped in mystery. Detective Carpenter, of the Canadian secret service and Crown Prosecutor

Several other suspects are being shadowed

MOTOR IN BALTIMORE.

Baltimore, July 16.—The officials of the Belt Line Railroad are jubilant over yesterday's successful test of the giant electric motor. The result leads the authorities to believe that the days of the steam locomotive are numbered.

The electric motor left Camden station and entered the tunnel drawing 13,000 tons in the shape of 23 cars and two banked engines, and the trip was made in five minutes, or at the rate of 17 miles an hour. It required two steam locomotives to draw the same train afterward. and will be arrested.

They are suspected of having caused fires within a very recent date for which over $100,000 in insurance was paid out. The most recent of these was the destruction of Boyd, Ellis & Co., wholesale stationers. The firm recently dissolved and Boyd is now on his way to England. Drugs which caused spontaneous combustion, worked in connection with clock work, was the method used for starting the fires. A quantity of these drugs was found in the possession of Jenkins. Several well known firms are implicated.

LATER INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS. Montreal, July 21.—Andrew Boyd, of the late firm of Boyd, Ellis & Co., wholesale stationers, who is now on his way to Liverpool on the steamship Mariposa, will be brought back to Canada at the instance of Crown Prosecutor Quinn. He is wanted by the authorities in connection with the trial of Charles Jenkins and John Hayes on a charge of incendiarism. The destruction by fire of the above named firm's warehouse a few weeks ago gave the clue to the detectives few weeks ago gave the clue to the detectives in running down the firebugs. It is reported Jenkins will turn queen's evidence. The police have failed to establish any connection between the men arrested and the New York firebugs.

McCallum's Progress. HIS LITTLE BOAT WAS SIGHTED IN FOG BY THE WITTERIND.

The sailboat, with Captain McCallum on board, which visited St. John a few months ago and sailed from New York on June 13, bound for Queenstown, was spoken on the night of July 9, in lat. 41 deg. 21 min., long. 59 deg. 28 min., by the North German Lloyd steamer Wittekind, which arrived at New York on Friday from Bremen. Captain Cuppers, of the Wittekind, reports that on July 9, 652 miles east of Sandy Hook, at 10.39 p.m., a small boat showing one blue light, was sighted right abreast the steamer. Captain Cuppers, thinking it might be a boat's crew from some wrecked vessel in need of assistance, turned the ship's head about and bore down to the little craft, which proved to be Captain McCallum's boat, proved to be Captain McCullum's boat

The Nerito Floated. Halifax, July 18.—The American Wreck-Halifax, July 18.—The American Wrecking Company's tug, D. J. Jones, arrived today with steamer Nerito in tow. The Nerito went ashore on a sand bar at Sable Island last year, and efforts were made to get her off, without success. It was expected she would prove a total loss, but as she remained intact the Americans undertook the job. The vessel is damaged on the port side, but is otherwise uninjured. She is a fine vessel, built at Sunderland in 1891, 320 feet long, 42 feet beam, 25.6 hold; is 1893 tons net, and 2920 tons gross, and was formerly owned and 2920 tons gross, and was formerly owned by the Columbia Navigation Co. It is un-derstood the American Wrecking Company will receive 75 per cent. of the value of the vessel, which will make temporary repairs here and proceed to New York.

He Has Found Garnets. Mr. Daniel Lonegran, of Dalhousie, is in Kentville, and exhibits dozens of specimens of a hard mineral in twelve-sided blocks about the size of a small filbert nut. The surface of the specimens is perfectly regular, and each one is exactly the same shape, and the skill of an expert lapidary could not make an improvement on the beautifully cut sides and corners. The stones are almost black on the outside, with reddish spots, and one of them which was broken open exhibits the latter color to a marked degree. The stones are undoubtedly garnets, and were broken from the centre of a large granite rock. Mr. Lonergan had some specimens still imbedded in pieces of rock.

141 People Drowned. Spezza, Italy, July 25.—A terrible accident occurred near the mouth of the gulf of Spezza to-day. The steamers Ortigia and Maria P. ran into each other, and the latter was so badly damaged that she sank in a very short time. She had on board in addition to her crew 141 passengers from Naples. All were drowned. The passengers, panic stricken, rushed hither and thither, calling upon the saints to save them. The steamer, it is said, filled so rapidly that it was impossible to cast free and launch the small hoats on board of her or on the Ortigia.

Fishermen's Models.

In a seafaring and fishing province like Nova Scotia, one of the most important questions is the build and shape of the vessels engaged in the trade, the safety of the mar-sible, and when changes of line occur con incres and the profits of the owners being alike involved. Some time since the Dominion us; second when the line is intended to be vernment offered two prizes for the best straight, let it be absolutely so. These rules designs and specifications of vessels suited for fishing and general purposes when not engaged in fishing. The judges gave gratuitously three days to the consideration of the matter. The first prize, $400, was awarded A great many in following fixed rules and $200, to M. L. Oliver, Digby. The report of the judges might well have been published, as it suggested some changes in design and equipment worthy of consideration. While realizing that the best design for a fishing vessel is not compatible with that of a good carrier, they were called upon according to given more beauty, and expense could often the specifications of the depth, to consider | be saved. speed, safety at sea and at anchor, carrying A consideration of the natural condition designed for speed, while wanting in carrying capacity and safety; others were remarkable for capacity while wanting in speed. One great object of the judges was the demand for safety under all circumstances, as well as other requirements. Among other suggestions the judges made were: "That if our fishing vessels would adopt the plan of carrying a sufficient amount of and are often caught in a gale afterwards with serious results.

"They have noticed in some of the sail plans submitted with the models a disposi-tion to overspar many of the fishing vessels. From their personal experience and observa-tions they are led to agree that over masting is in too many cases responsible for the dis asters that occur so often to that class of vessels. Experience has proved that many of our vessel will sail quite as fast after their

Hours of Sleep.

One of the greatest mistakes of parents and those who have charge of children is that they are likely to allow the little ones too little sleep. With one excuse and an other the youngsters are up later at night than they should be, and, as they must be off to school betimes in the morning, and sleep ten or eleven hours, and to do this they must be put to bed early enough at | land; but straw or hay is better, for it denight, so that they may get this amount of uninterrupted rest. But it is a difficult thing to give the children the amount of sleep they require, because there is almost always something going on in the evening that interests them—someone comes in, there is a new paper or book, or something is being talked of that they like to hear. They plead and entreat to stay up just a little longer, and with a spirit of indulgence the parents yield. Of course, this means but one thing -too little repose and a curtailing of the hours of rest that nature Imperatively demands. It is no wonder that children are nervous, fretful, and difficult to get along with. The nerves, inherited from dyspeptic will add much to the horse's comfort. parents, are keenly alive to every sound; and their temper, none the best, or they are irritated by being called out of bed when

We need not preach the courage to diethat is common enough—but the courage to live, to be honest in spite of poverty or negl'ect; to be true, though all is dark excep where God shines in; to be faithful though heavens fall and hearts break, and friendships turn to gall. Yes, we must teach prehended, to be ahead of the times, to fol low the voice of God though it leads into the wilderness; to tell the devil to his face that he lies, and also to give him him his dues-

I wouldn't give a farthing for the triumphant faith of the death hour, unless it comes from that triumphant faith that makes our life full of noblest daring that is willing to fling aside honor, wealth, the praise of friends, rather than impair for one moment the soul's integrity. Oh, for such a courage -the courage to think, to act, to tell the harsh truth, to overthrow splendid falsehoods, to disown sweet lies, and to banish nderest associations rather than to check n the least the free movement of the sovereign soul. We all must die with more o less equanimity, but we cannot live in the full splendor of our being except by courage and determined exertion. "But I never see a fly in your house," said her friend. "How do you manage it? For my part, I must confess that, screens or no ens, my summer means to me one long battle with the little pests."

"My remedy is quite a simple one," said the good housekeeper, "and I learned it years ago from my grandmother, when I used to watch her putting bunches of lavender flowers around to keep the flies away. My method is simpler. I buy five cents worth of oil of lavender at the drug store and mix it with the same quantity of water. Then I put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the room wherever flies are apt to congregate, especially in the dioing room, where I sprinkle it plentifully over the table linen. The odor is especially disagreeable to flies, and they will never venture in its neighborhood, though to most people it has a peculiarly fresh and grateful smell."

"I shall certainly give it a trial," said the "My remedy is quite a simple one," said "I shall certainly give it a trial," said th

Getting Best Results in the Fruit Garden Whoever has picked the most luscious wild raspberries and blackberries and has noted the conditions under which they grew, has seen that a loose soil and abundant mois ture are prime essentials to perfection i these berries. It has been found by experience that the greatest aid the gardener has n'securing a light, loose and moist soil, even in the heat of summer, is a heavy coating of the ground with mulch. Applied to the soil, not in a thin coat that soon disappears, but in a very thick one, it keeps down seeds, smothering that most troublesome of pests, witch grass, and creates beneath it a sur prising condition of the soil. If one will take the trouble to draw aside a thick coat of mulch, he will be surprised to find beneath it as light as though the harrow had just drought the soil will be well filled with mois ture, drawn up from the regions below. In using mulch care should be taken to avoid that having weed seed, unless the plot of land is to be kept permanently mulched there may be duties to perform, they are called long before they have finished their the raspberry rows if straw or hay were not morning nap. As hot weather approaches the flies be come troublesome. Horses and cattle particularly are annoyed by this pest, which is of far greater importance than most people think. In fact, fly blankets or nets are as much a necessity as the heavier ones are in winter, for horses used at work or driving, and also in the stable. A darkened stable is usually too close and

The Lack of Lime in Grain.

While corn is a food that has its missio in winter, it will do more harm than good Wheat may be classed with corn. These grains are good because they are concentrat ed, and enable the hens to cat enough from which to derive their warmth, but though they contain a proportion of nitrogen they are very deficient in the mineral elements There is less than a pound of lime in one thousand pounds of wheat, and if a hen is compelled to subsist on grain entirely, how is it possible for her to furnish eggs which are not only covered with a shell of lime but also contain within themselves the substances that are changed into bone, blood, flesh and fat.

-Very few growers now care to carry ro bushes in the greenhouses through two seasons' growth. Hence even the rose is treated practically as an annual plant. The young roses are propagated during the late winter months, kept in pots, until about June, depending upon the condition of the plants and the market for flowers for the exact time, when the old plants are all thrown to the rubbish heap and young ones set in their places, with new virgin soil for another winter's crop.

If she has an oil cloth on her floor she adds a gill of kerosene to her scouring water, dips a mop in a pail, passes it quickly over cloth and with this slight effort leaves it bright and polished almost as new, and an oilcloth treated in this manner will outlast one scrubbed up in the old way twice over. Perhaps, however, the most valuable qualty yet discovered in kerosene as a household agent is its power of cleansing soiled clothes. A bar of soap should be shaved up into a quart of warm water, and allowed to stand until it has quite melted. Into this stir one tablespoonful of kerosene oil and set "So I hear," said the bug. -There is a sort of fad now among women n the way of a novel refreshment. This onsists of a raw egg, dressed with pepper, salt, and vinegar, as one would prepare raw oysters, and taken in times of exhaustion and fatigue. It is not uncommon to see, in restaurant, two or three women who are in town for a heavy day of shopping partak-ing of this food tonic. It is claimed for the egg that it is a meal in itself, containing all the elements of nutrition.
