Old Time Farming

The Methods of To-day Contrasted With Those of the Past Generations by Mr. Benjamin Starratt.

Great changes have taken place in farming during the last half century. Old methods have passed away and new modes have come into use. Machinery has taken the place of hand labor. Much of the hard and laborious manual work has been eliminated by the use of labor saving devices. The hard-working farmer, as well as others, owes a lasting debt of gratitude to the fertile brain of the inventors. The young man of the present day knows but little of the heart-breaking labor of his forefathers.

This is especially true of farm work. Mowing and threshing machines, reapers, potato diggers, seed drills, and other labor-saving appliances have left him hardly enough for healthful exercise.

Besides this, the great improvements in the tools, formerly heavy, clumsy and exceedingly tiresome, now are so light and well balanced as to make their use a pleasure and enjoyment.

Previous to 1840, mowing and threshing machines were unknown. All the grass was cut by hand scythes. The heavy, old Griffin scythe, with a snath made from a crooked apple tree limb, was the implement used. Up by daylight and mow in the broiling sun till noon. In the afternoon, the mow was hauled in. The heaviest and most disagreeable part was in unloading, pitching it up over the big beam and stowing away in the close and sweating mow. Now, the farmer leisurely hitches up his horse in the morning and commences at 9 o'clock after the dew is off, rakes it with the horse rake and unloads with the horse, knocking off at six o'clock, instead of working till dark and holding the chores by lantern light as formerly.

Take the matter of fencing, cutting and hauling the poles, the heavy and unpleasant work with pitch cracked hands of putting it up in the cold raw March winds.

Marconi's Wireless

That wireless telegraph has not yet exhausted its store of wonders and surprises was proved to a London Daily Chronicle's representative in an interesting talk with Mr. Marconi at his London office. One approaches this man, who while yet in his youth revolutionized telegraphy in the expectation of meeting a typical and rather unassuming, who has but to wave his hands to work all manner of wonders by an unseen force. But there is nothing uncanny, and nothing to suggest study and midnight oil, about the tall, athletic, well-groomed young man, and in such perfect English that his Italian name is forgotten and you remember only that his mother was Irish.

"Oh, yes," he said, "I'll tell you what I'm trying to do and what are my hopes; but please don't make me seem boastful, and don't let us have too much of the I-I-I."

"We can send twenty-four words a minute across the Atlantic, or forty-eight when we can use the duplex system. But at present we can only send messages one way at a time. If an operator tried to send a message across while he was receiving one there would be great confusion, one man trying against another."

and Mr. Marconi waved his hand to suggest a grand collision of language in mid-Atlantic.

"But lately I have been experimenting with apparatus which will enable us to send a message in both directions at once. The experiments have been quite successful over a distance of three or four miles at Poole, in Dorsetshire, and I anticipate equal success before long across the Atlantic. That is one of my latest experiments. Another is to enable a ship approaching the shore or at other ship in a fog to determine exactly the position of the wireless station on shore or the course of the other ship. You can see, of course, how it will help a navigator if he is able to know not only that another ship is approaching, but the exact angle the course of that ship makes with his own."

"It is perhaps a little difficult to explain the idea to the general reader, but here it is roughly"—and Mr. Marconi sketched rapidly on his blotting-pad while he spoke. "We get, you see, a screen with a small hole in the centre. This is turned about in the direction from which the other ship or the shore station is known to be telegraphing, until the ringing of a bell, caused by the waves entering the hole in the screen, shows that the exact direction from which the wave is coming has been ascertained."

"I shall be carrying out experiments on these lines in the Mersey in a few weeks. The idea is being specially welcomed by shipping authorities on the St. Lawrence river, where fog so often hinders navigation."

MORAL REFORM CANDIDATE

Waterville, Kings Co., June 12.—A large delegation of the leading Liberals and Conservatives of Kings county met here today and selected Councillor John Donaldson as Union Reform candidate to contest this county in the coming federal elections. Several names were presented, but Mr. Donaldson receiving the highest number of votes, his nomination was made unanimous.

Preparations were made for a thorough organization of the county and an active campaign in the interest of moral reform will begin.

Canuck or Canadian

(New York Sun.)

"There seems to be a great deal of misapprehension about the meaning of the word 'Canuck,'" said a Canadian who is in business in New York, "and for myself and my fellow expatriates I wish to protest against the term."

"Most New Yorkers seem to have the idea that all persons hailing from Canada are Canucks, and many of them use the term as if it were one of opprobrium. Now a Canuck is a French-Canadian or habitant, and the samples of that type who have drifted across the border into New England certainly have done little to make the title one of good repute."

"But the Canuck in his native Quebec village is a pretty decent sort of citizen, and those who have read Sir Gilbert Parker's stories know, for Parker has recorded the habits and traits of those people with faithful exactness."

"These habitants have stuck pretty closely to the Province of Quebec, but there was not a living for all of them as the population increased, and French-Canadian population does increase at an amazing rate, with no consideration at all for economic principles as laid down by the theorists."

"This surplusage of humanity, largely improvident, naturally spilled over the border into New England. Many of the workers in the mill towns are these French-Canadian, and they rank in popular estimation not far above the dumb animals. There are no Canucks of this class in New York, but the name has got here and is regarded all too frequently for Canadian as straight English ancestry."

"Of late years these habitants have been invading the maritime provinces of Canada, where they are regarded no more highly than in New England. The French were cleared out of these provinces more than a hundred years ago and now the race is drifting back."

"Canuck means French-Canadian and nothing else. Will New Yorkers please remember that?"

Coal and Iron in Nova Scotia

The Halifax Correspondent of the Standard of Empire reports that in coal mining, manufacturing and fishing, the promise in Nova Scotia is for a season of great activity.

The coal shipments from Nova Scotia, which has the only bituminous coal fields at sidewater on the American Continent, are showing large increases, and the output from the collieries in 1908 is expected to exceed that of 1907 by a large tonnage. The total shipments for the first four months of the year with 1,176,169 tons for the corresponding months of 1907, were 1,344,717 tons, as compared with 1,085,000 tons for the same period of 1907. As the water shipments will be much more frequent and heavier during the next six months, the year's shipments will probably be close to a million tons larger than those of 1907.

The great steel making and blast furnace plants at Sydney Mines are in full operation. The superintendent of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, who has returned from a five weeks' tour of the United States reports that the steel makers of the American Republic, whose plants are running at from 15 to 25 per cent. less than their capacity, were surprised to learn that the Dominion Company's plant at Sydney was operating at its full capacity. The Nova Scotia Steel Company's plant at Sydney Mines has been turning out pig-iron at an unlooked for rate during the past few months. The furnaces were designed for an output of 160 tons per day, but the actual output has been nearly 200 tons.

Fifteen Month's With Cannibals

As one of the delegates to the Pan-Atlantic Church Conference at Westminster Abbey, London, in June New Albanus Indiana, who sent the Reverend Edmund A. Neville, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rev. Mr. Neville is a native of Melbourne Australia, and although still a young man he has travelled in all parts of the globe, and at one time was a captive for fifteen months on the island of New Guinea, north-west of Australia, near the equator.

In 1892 he joined an English party consisting of six young missionaries and a number of converted South Sea Islanders, which sailed from Australia for New Guinea, and after reaching the island, steamed in a launch up Fly River to an unexplored region, 600 miles from his mouth. They constructed their thatched huts and had settled down for their work among the natives when they were attacked one night by a savage band and the settlement was wiped out. Dr. Neville being the only survivor of the party.

The others were butchered as they slept, and Dr. Neville attributes his escape from death to the fact that he was sleeping in a hut apart from the others. He was not discovered until the lust for blood had been satisfied.

The bodies of his companions were roasted in great fires of wood, and they were devoured by the hundred or more savages, while he was compelled to stand by and witness the hideous orgy. After the feast, which lasted for several days, the band resumed its march from the smoking ruins of the settlement with the lone captive, who expected to be killed at any moment and meet the fate of his friends.

Far in the jungle the band finally reached a village where Dr. Neville fell ill of the fever. The white man, the first they had ever seen, was a source of astonishment to the women and children, and they exhibited a sort of rude tenderness toward the prisoner, and satisfied his wants as well as they could be understood. He began to gain sufficient strength to walk about his hut, and he discovered that the savages had carried him across the island and that their village was on the ocean's shore.

He determined to keep the good will of the band, until such time as an opportunity might be afforded to escape to a passing ship. Fifteen months passed, and one day he sat on the beach in his tattered pajamas and a straw hat, the only articles of clothing he had been allowed to bring with him into captivity. When a ship appeared in the offing, a steam launch, carrying a number of armed sailors, came ashore and began distributing beads and mirrors among the savages.

Dr. Neville was informed that they were from a Dutch gunboat which had been sent out in search of the missionary party. At a favorable opportunity he was separated from the blacks, leaped into the launch, which put back to the vessel and he was rescued.

During the months he was in captivity he noted down in a note book such cannibal words as he learned, using a burning stick to make the characters, and, in time, he had a list of several hundred words and phrases, which have since been published in a dictionary and have been of great use to missionaries. After he had fully recovered from his adventure, Dr. Neville went to Oxford, where he finished his studies and later engaged in missionary work in China, Japan, Singapore and Central America. He came to Canada and crossed to the United States and Niagara Falls, and he has held parishes in Pennsylvania, Texas, Mississippi, Colorado and Missouri, coming from Sedalia, Mo., a year ago.

Death by Drowning

George Connell, former Well-Known Barber of Bridgetown in Fit of Melancholia Ends His Life.

(St. John Telegraph.)

Suffering from an attack of nervous trouble, George Connell, aged thirty-one, either jumped or fell from the ferry steamer, E. Ross, as she was crossing the river from In-diantown Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock and was drowned. Attempts were made to rescue him, but he is said to have disregarded or failed to profit by the proffered help and sank, after swimming about ten yards following the steamer.

Gripping parties were at work yesterday but were unsuccessful in locating the body. There is a strong current where he went down.

Connell was a brother of Mrs. Thomas Cosgrove, 61 Adelaide street and formerly worked as a barber in the hotels here. He then moved away and was in business in Sackville, but returned about three weeks ago for a rest and was visiting his sister. Yesterday morning, accompanied by his little niece, a girl about twelve years of age, he went on board the ferry steamer at In-diantown and sat down on the bench at the stern of the steamer. He was leaning over the rail and reached so far over that the girl became alarmed. He then is reported to have said that he was going to jump and the little girl cried out in alarm.

Another passenger quieted her, saying that her uncle was only joking, but she ran across to catch hold of Connell. She tripped on a chain and fell and before she had regained her feet, Connell had gone over the rail. Captain Hal Maybes had the steamer rounded to, and he let out a rope for Connell to grasp, and a pole was also pushed out to the drowning man. Mr. Cosgrove organized a party and spent the afternoon in searching but without result. The tragedy came as a great shock to Mrs. Cosgrove, who is prostrated.

(Sackville Tribune.)

Sackville people will learn with genuine regret of the tragic death in St. John Wednesday of George W. Connell, who was drowned in the In-diantown harbor. Mr. Connell, who had not been in good health for some weeks, jumped from the

LIKENS AUTO TO TIGER.

Under the caption "A Plea for Justice," Mr. T. R. Lyons, Waterville, Kings County, publishes a letter in the Morning Chronicle. His letter is in answer to one published previously, entitled, "A Plea for the Auto." Replying to an expressed fear that tourists would stay away if legislated too stringently against in this regard, Mr. Lyons says:—

"Well, we are always glad to welcome the tourist to our Province, but let his vile car be quarantined the same as any other pestilence, and when he returns home he may take it with him. Suppose a Bengal tiger should escape from a menagerie in any one county in this province. Would the people stay at home in fear of being devoured, or would the men turn out in a body and hunt it down?"

THE HOME

Cook Box or Self-cooker

In countries where fuel is scarce and expensive it is difficult to prepare food that requires a long time for cooking, and some method must be found to economize fuel. In countries where fuel is cheap, little or no account is taken of the amount of coal or wood consumed, and no effort is made to economize. The result is a reckless waste of fuel, and no thought is given to new or improved methods of cooking common articles of food so as to save fuel.

This use of high-priced foods to the neglect of the cheaper but equally nutritious foods is due to ignorance of the principles of cooking. The erroneous idea being that food must be kept at 212 degrees F. to cook it, when it actually cooks better at a lower temperature. If meat is placed in boiling water and kept at the boiling point from ten to fifteen minutes the albumen on the outside is coagulated, and the crust thus formed will prevent the escape of the juice. The temperature can then be reduced to from 180 to 160 degrees F., and the meat will be cooked thoroughly. It will have a better flavor than when cooked at 212 degrees. If the meat is kept boiling the connective tissue is dissolved and the meat becomes stringy and tasteless.

During the last few years people have become more and more interested in scientific methods of cooking. Noting the great waste of fuel, the amount of time wasted in watching foods cook, the loss and lack of flavor due to over-cooking, many have become interested in European methods and economy, and, among other things, in the use of the cook boxes. Several firms are manufacturing boxes on the same principle as the cook box, and a Chatham, Ontario, firm makes them in several sizes, suitable for many purposes.

The principle of the cook box is this: If food can be brought to the boiling point, and then placed in a kettle or pail with a tight cover, and this kettle placed in a box lined with a non-conducting material, and then packed with some poor conductor, as hay or wool, so that the heat in the pail cannot escape, it will remain in the pail and cook the food. Food will be found hot ten hours after it has been placed in such a box. It will taste better than food cooked at a higher temperature and will not lose weight as long as it has been tightly covered. There will be no odor in the room, no escaping steam, no fuel consumed, no necessity to watch the food, as it cannot burn, it cannot boil dry.

It is not necessary to purchase one of the cook boxes in the market. Anyone can make one at practically no cost. Any box will do if it has a cover. Cut out a little larger than the kettle or pail that is to be used. Line the box with asbestos procured from the hardware store. Have ready some clean wool or hay to use for packing material. Place some hay at the bottom of the box. Place the food to be cooked in a kettle having a tight fitting cover. Place the kettle on the stove and boil the food for ten or fifteen minutes. Remove the kettle to the box, pack it solidly with the wool or hay so no heat can escape. Cover the box, fasten the cover firmly, and let it stand undisturbed as long as you would have cooked it on the stove. Just before serving, it can be removed from the box and brought to the boiling point, but this is not necessary.

When there is sickness in the home and hot water or hot fires are needed at night after the fires are out, this box is invaluable. Oatmeal, hominy, and many of the breakfast foods that require long cooking may be placed in the cook box in the manner described above, and will be found thoroughly cooked and ready to serve for breakfast. Dried peas and beans may be treated in the same way, and will be found ready to add to soup stock and serve in ten minutes. Steaks and boiling pieces are especially fine cooked in the cook box; they are better flavored than when boiled, and if vegetables are added they do not fall to pieces when cooked below the boiling point. Custards are delicious cooked in the cook box; there is no danger of curdling the milk, and the texture of the custard is perfectly smooth. Any woman can find innumerable dishes that can be prepared in the cook box, and thus save hours and hours of time and many a dollar's worth of fuel.

The moment a girl has a secret from her mother, or has received a letter she dare not let mother read or has a friend of whom her mother does not know, she is in danger. A secret is not a good thing for a girl to have. The fewer secrets that lie in the hearts of women the better. It is almost a test of purity. She who has none of her own is best and happiest. In girlhood, hide nothing from your mother; do nothing that if discovered by your father, would make you blush. Have no mysteries whatever. Tell those about you where you go and what you do. Those who have the right to know, we mean, of course. The girl who frankly says to her mother, "I have been there, met so-and-so. Such and such remarks were made, and this and that was done," will be certain of receiving good advice and sympathy. If all was right, no fault will be found. If the mother knows, out of great experience, that something was improper or unsuitable, she will, if she is a good mother, kindly advise against its repetition. It is when mothers discover that their girls are hiding things from them, that they rebuke and scold. Innocent faults are always pardoned by a kind parent. You may not know, girls, just what is right, just what is wrong yet. You cannot be blamed for making little mistakes; but you will not be likely to do anything so very wrong, if from the first you have no secrets from your mother.—H. L. Hastings.

In cases where the skin has a pronounced tendency to dryness the quantity of borax should be reduced. Pure glycerine should never be used on the skin, for it is altogether too strong, and will make dry patches. While it is undoubtedly one of the best bleaches it must always be reduced two-thirds with rose or distilled water. The idea that rose water being softening is a common error. Like glycerine it is drying if used full strength and should always be diluted either with glycerine or distilled water.

VACATIONS FOR MOTHERS, TOO.

People who work for themselves, especially mothers, often glory in not taking a vacation, in staying to what they believe to be their duty at home, in sticking solitarily to you, my conservative reader, a vacation is just as necessary as it is to the tired teacher or the faithful clerk; and for the same reason—that you may do more work when you go away, and do it more effectively. The duty which holds you will be better performed, the home that you are guarding will be better kept, and the cheerfulness, and contentment, and optimism which you need will be more readily summoned, if you take time—next year, but in the remaining weeks of this very summer—to drink in the stimulant of new faces, new landscapes and new experiences.—In Woman's Home Companion for August.

These are the gifts I ask,
Of Thee, Spirit serene;
Strength to do thy bidding,
Courage to face the road,
Good cheer to help me bear the

And, for the hours of rest that come
gray,
Ar inward joy in all things heard and seen.
These are the sins I fain
Would have thee take away:
Malice, and cold disdain,
Hot anger, sullen hate,
Scorn of the lowly, envy of the great,
And discontent that casts a shadow
gray.
On all the brightness of a common

THE SMART DRESSER.

"The small things that count in fashions as in life. The clever woman the smart dresser, is she whose wardrobe is up to the minute in the small things, those accessories without which even the most elegant toilette is incomplete. Her frocks and gowns are fetching, she will always appear well dressed. Nothing dates a toilette so quickly and so surely as its accessories. Costume changes are not so radical from one season to another in these latter days, but an accessory is long-lived indeed if it lasts a season out. Shabby belts, creased buckles on fine belts, belts that are too large and belts that look uncomfortably tight are frequently seen on otherwise well-dressed women, and girls, and attention to the waist line is a cardinal principle of neatness in dress."

OUR BELOVED.

"How doth death speak of our beloved
When it has laid them low;
When it has set its hallowing touch
On speechless lip and brow?
"It clothes their every gift and grace
With radiance from the holiest place,
With light as from an angel's face:
"Recalling with relentless force,
And tracing to their hidden source,
Deeds scarcely noticed in their course.
"This little, loving, fond device,
That daily act of sacrifice
Of which too late we learn the price.
"Opening our weeping eyes to trace
Simple, unadorned kindnesses,
Forgetting notes of tenderness,
"Which evermore to us must be
Sacred, as hymns in infancy
Learnt listening at a mother's knee.
"Thus does death speak of our beloved
When it has laid them low;
Then let love outdate the work
Of death, and do this now."

BAD BOOKS.

There is an evil that is continually increasing, the effects of which are as fatal as they are insidious, that is, the reading of books and other publications of an immoral character. The country is nowadays deluged with works of this description. Often they are written with such skill and they have such a charm about them that they ensnare the innocent and unsuspecting, whilst they feed the purrulent imagination of the vicious. As it would be impossible to draw up a complete list of such dangerous books and publications, we must content ourselves with a general direction. Whenever it is found that the reading of any book or other publication fills the mind with evil or dangerous thoughts, or when it seems to cast ridicule upon the teaching or practices of religion, it is necessary at once to cut off the source of temptation, and to fling away the book or publication, no matter how pleasing or interesting it may be. This direction is of the greatest importance for the young and parents should be most careful to remember and enforce it, for it is only too often noticed at the present time that children, even of tender years, are allowed to read anything that they like. Parents should remember that they have a grave responsibility in this regard.

Reciprocity of Press and Pulpit

The following from the Fairfield, Maine, Chronicle, is neatly done and has a wide application outside of Maine. He was the manager of a church fair, and one morning he walked into the newspaper office and said:

"I want an item this morning?"

"Of course," replied the editor. Whereupon the visitor laid the following note upon the table: "The ladies of the Street Church will give a festival at their vestry hall next Friday evening. Literary and musical entertainments will be provided, and a supper will be served to all who desire. The ladies in charge of the affair have had much experience in such matters and are sure to provide a good time. The admission will be only fifteen cents, and it is certain that no one can attend that amount to a better advantage. Be sure to go and take your friends."

When the editor read it, he said: "Oh, I see, an advertisement."

"No, not an advertisement," he replied. "It will interest a great many of your readers and help a good cause; besides we have spent so much money in getting up our entertainment that we can't afford to advertise it without increasing the price of the tickets. In such matters as this we ought to be willing to help each other."

"Well," said the editor, "if it goes into the local, I suppose you would read a little notice in your church next Sunday by way of reciprocity."

The visiting brother asked what notice, and the editor wrote and handed him the following: "The Weekly Chronicle for the coming year will be the best and cheapest family paper in Maine. Its proprietor has had much experience and has all the helps which a large outlay of money can secure. His paper has a larger circulation than any other in the country, and is to be furnished at only $2. It is certain that no one can read that amount to a better advantage. Be sure to take the Chronicle, and subscribe for your friends."

The manager hesitated and then said, solemnly, that he "doubted whether it would be judicious to read such a notice, but suggested that if it were printed, copies of it might be distributed at the door on the evening of the entertainment."

"Yes," said the editor, "but it might attract more attention in the middle of a sermon. It will interest a large number of your congregation and help a good cause, and besides so much money is spent on the Chronicle that the owner can't afford to print hand bills to advertise it without increasing the subscription price. In such matters as this, we ought to be willing to help each other."

600,000,000 Tons of Coal

Sydney, June 12.—Work at the new collieries of the Dominion Coal Company, numbers Twelve and Thirteen, is proceeding satisfactorily. The former the slope has reached a distance of eleven hundred feet, and the latter about forty feet, with air slopes well in progress. Both these collieries are on what is known as the Victoria Seam, which is nearly seven feet deep and of excellent quality. The slopes are about a mile apart, and about seventeen hundred feet to the rear. It is proposed shortly to open collieries on what is called the Linnox Seam, which underlies the Victoria. Underlying the latter and further to the rear is the famous Mullins Seam, and near the shore line the Atlantic, overlying all, is the Barrachois area, which was worked in former years. There are beneath the surface, it is estimated, about six hundred million tons of workable coal, which, at the rate proceeding in the Glace Bay district, will last about two hundred years. At Dominion No. 12 about twenty thousand tons have been banked, and shipment will commence about September first, when the branch line connecting the mine with the main line of railway will be completed.

This is the flour we good cooks know will make the Bread that's white as snow. It's just as good for Pies and Cake. And all my skill as Chef I'll stake On Beaver Flour's reputation; 'Tis the popular flour of the nation.

Beaver Flour
the original Blended Flour

THE FINEST STIMULANT.

"It always makes me smile," said Edward W. Bok, in an interview in the New Broadway magazine, "when some woman, a reader of our magazine, writes me and asks: 'What do you know about the needs, the life or the struggles of poor people—those who were born with a silver spoon in your mouth?' Bless her heart, she knows that I have been through it all. I know what it is to live on practically nothing, to scarcely leave the house at night, to go to the lot and pick up odd pieces of wood because we had not the four cents to buy a bundle of kindling; to pick up odd bits of coal; to go around afraid to stoop because of the patches in my clothes. Know it? O, yes, I know what it is to be poor."

"And it was fine, I tell you," said this man unexpectedly.

"Fine? You mean poverty?" I asked.

"O, yes," he said, emphatically. "The finest thing that ever happened to me, the finest thing that ever happened to a young fellow is to be poor. There is no greater stimulant than poverty—not as a condition in which to stay, but as a condition to work out of."

"That's what Edward thinks now, when he is drawing a fat salary; but at the time he was stealing coal and wood in those cellular trunks, it didn't strike him as being so fine. We observe all these fine things about poverty are ordinary notices. No one arises up to proclaim the joys of poverty when he has it."

Tack in Mouth Made Horse a Runaway

(From New York Herald.) To the Editor of The Herald: Runaways, so sudden and dangerous as to be fatal to life or limb, are of frequent occurrence. How many of these are caused by a sore mouth or an ulcerated tooth against which the unyielding bit is pulling is a question well worth considering.

Not long since, we learn, a pet horse, steady and tractable, earned the reputation of becoming vicious and a runaway. Accordingly his fate was sealed; his owner sold him. His distressing doom, while being broken of his "bad habits" need not be described here. Labeled as incorrigible, he passed from owner to owner, when an intelligent veterinary bought him. Examining his mouth, he discovered that the animal had picked up a tack with his teeth. It was imbedded in the jaw and the pressure of the bit became unendurable. It was removed and the gentle creature, forgiving its abuse and misunderstanding, became again the old time docile friend.

An ulcerated tooth could, without doubt, explain many supposed cases of hydrophobia, both in horse and dog, as instanced by the fine animal that crushed his groom in his stall, supposed to have become suddenly maddened. When subdued and examined the horse was found to be suffering intensely and in urgent need of a dentist.

Our safety as well as a higher sentiment should urge us to a better understanding of our mute companions.

How the Other Half Lives

"That sentiment of tender charity are innate among the poor can be seen from a case which presented itself among a group of little children at a school where we visited," writes Mrs. John Van West in her Christmas article in the Woman's Home Companion. "They were of the most destitute, this little class, but as regular as soldiers in attendance. After an unusual absence of two days, one of the small pupils, Mary by name, was closely questioned by the teacher on her return. Very reluctantly she responded that they had been without food at home and that she was ashamed to come hungry to school."

"No comment was made before the other children. Nothing further was said."

The following morning a small procession filed before the teacher's desk—a procession of little people, tiny, poor, ignorant. Yet not one of them came empty handed. One brought an apple, one a piece of cheese, one a roll, one a slice of meat. And each, as she put her meagre offering down, whispered to the teacher: "It's for Mary."

DORIES SHOULD BE PROVISIONED

Attention is being called to the importance of fitting dories used by the bank fishermen with a suitable supply of water and rations. The Morning Chronicle and Coast Guard have discussed the subject. The owners of vessels, they claim, should be compelled to protect the men who face the terrible hardships of the sea by providing them with a suitable food supply in the event of their being separated from their vessel. One would think that self-interest would so operate with the dory men as to cause them to take food and water on every visit to their trawls. Men are apt to be careless about these matters and unless a stringent regulation is enforced much future suffering will result every time a dory crew is lost.

The first steel ship to be built in Eastern Canada is nearing completion at New Glasgow, and will shortly be ready for launching from the yards of J. W. Carmichael and Company, Limited. The proposed City of Prince Rupert, which is to be systematically erected during the next four years as the terminus of the new Grand Trunk Pacific Continental Railway, will have from its natural advantages as fine a harbor as any on the Pacific coast. It is well sheltered, and the approaches to it are easy, and it is free from tide-rips and other inconveniences. It runs inland for ten miles in extent, and its average breadth is from a mile to a mile and a half. The new port will deal with the great agricultural and mineral resources of the northern plateau of British Columbia, and also with the wheat of the Edmonton country. The Allan Line have notified their readiness to run a service of steamers from Prince Rupert to Hong Kong when the railway arrangements have been completed, and it is claimed that this passage will be shorter by a day and a half than that from Vancouver.

Dwyer, of Halifax, has brought against him because Mr. Mack was fishing in a part of the Medway river that Dwyer contends belongs to him. Mr. Dwyer asserts ownership of the river bed and of the fish in the pools of this part of the river. The contention is that if Mr. Dwyer can claim and hold such property, then in a short time all our fishing privileges will be in the hands of the wealthy few. Mr. Mack is going to fight the case in our highest courts. It looks like the old fight—the masses versus the classes, over again, says an exchange.

LOWER GRANVILLE

Mrs. C. S. Bird and child came from Lynn on Friday and are with her mother, Mrs. R. P. Wade.
The community heard with deep regret on Tuesday that Robert F. Wade, one of our most generally respected people, had passed away that morning. It appears that the deceased, who had been in very poor health for several years, went out for a stroll. Not returning in a short time, the family became anxious, fearing he might have been taken with an ill turn. A search was at once instituted, and his remains were found on the beach in front of his farm. The supposition is that he went down to the shore and, being about high water, walked to the edge of the tide, and either stumbled or was seized with dizziness and fell in. Mr. Wade was a man more than ordinarily well informed, strictly honorable in his dealings, and very highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. He is survived by a widow, whom he married in Cardiff, two sons—Norman, who returned a few months ago from the Klondike, and David, now on a voyage from Buenos Ayres to Africa—and one daughter, the wife of C. S. Bird, proprietor of the West Lynn Drug Store. Two brothers are still living—Seth, residing in Bear River, and Israel, in Tasmania. The funeral took place on Thursday from the Episcopal Church.
