

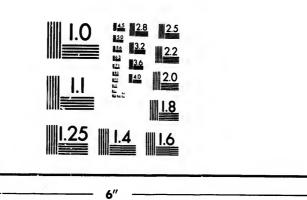

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

STANDAM SEMINATION OF THE SEMI

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET W/BSTER, N.Y. 14580 (716) 872-4503

STATE OF THE STATE

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series. CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadian de microreproductions historiques

(C) 1983

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.			qu'il de c poin une mod	L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de fiimage sont indiqués ci-dessous.
	Coloured covers/ Couverture de co				Coloured pages Pages de coule
	Covers damaged/ Couverture endor				Pages damaged Pages endomm
	Covers restored a Couverture restau				Pages restored Pages restaurée
	Cover title missin Le titre de couver			\checkmark	Pages discolou Pages décoloré
	Coloured maps/ Cartes géographic	ques en couleu	•		Pages detached Pages détachéd
	Coloured ink (i.e. Encre de couleur			V	Showthrough/ Transparence
	Coloured plates a Planches et/ou ill				Quality of print Qualité inégale		ion
	Bound with other Relié avec d'autre				includes supple Comprend du n			re
	along interior ma La re liure serrée p	ht binding may cause shadows or distortion ng interior margin/ e liure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la tortion le long de la marge intérieure			Only edition available/ Seule édition disponible Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata
	Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/ il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.			,	alips, tissues, e ensure the best Les pages total obscurcies par etc., ont été filr obtenir la meille	possible ima ement ou pa un feuillet d' mées à nouve	age/ rtielleme errata, u eau de fa	nt ne pelure, Additional commo
	item is filmed at th ocument est filmé	au taux de réd	uction indiqué ci-	dessous.	anv.	·	SAV
	14)		18X	22X	26X		30X
	12X	16X	20X		24X	28X		32X

o ti si o

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when eppropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., rnay be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avac les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture an papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'iliustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'iliustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle emp.:elinte.

Un des symboles sulvants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

1	2	3

1
2
3

1	2	3
4	5	6

peiure, 1 à

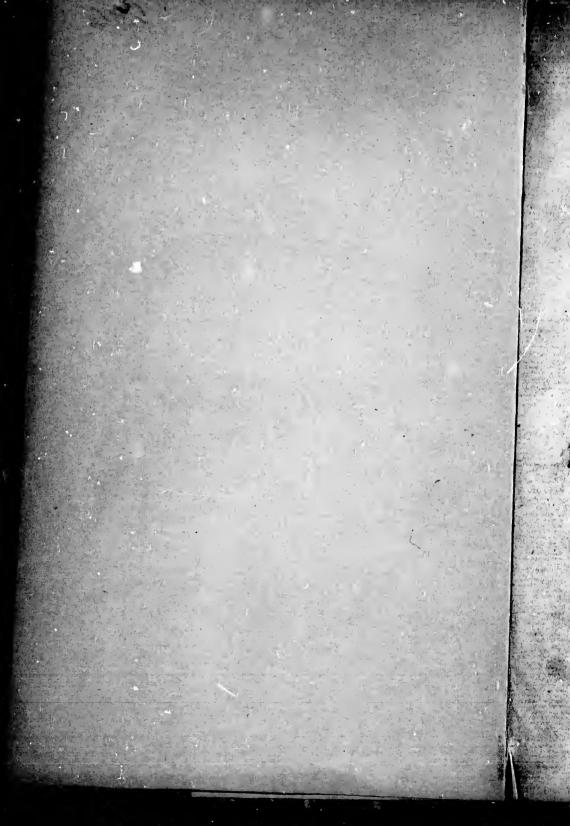

rrata o

ta:is du odifier

une

mage

32)

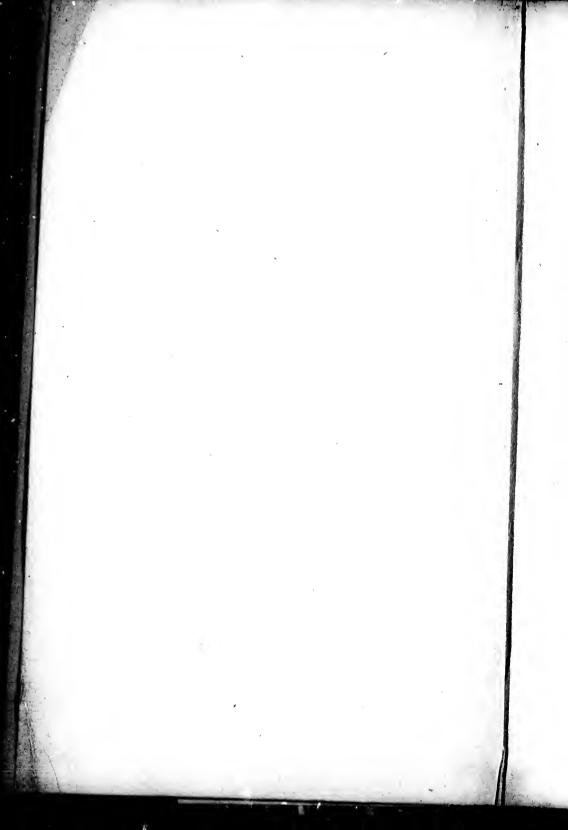

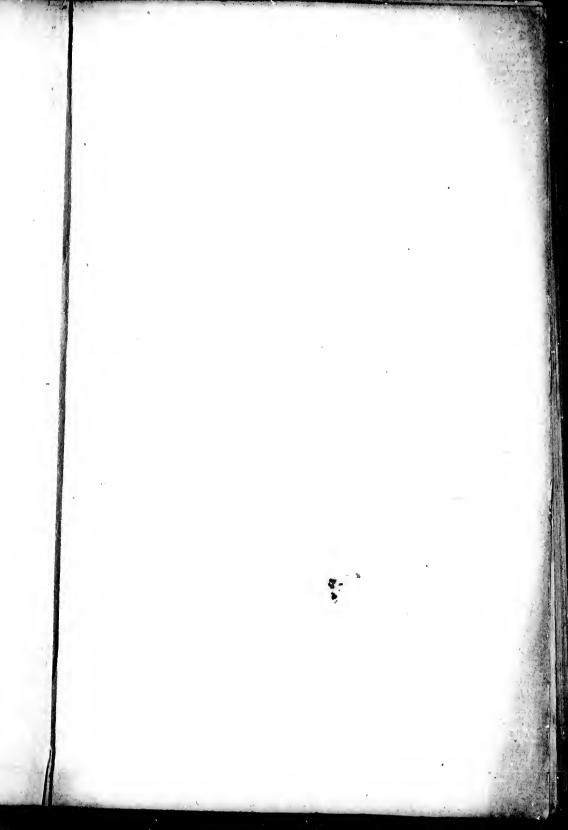

THE

BEAUTIES

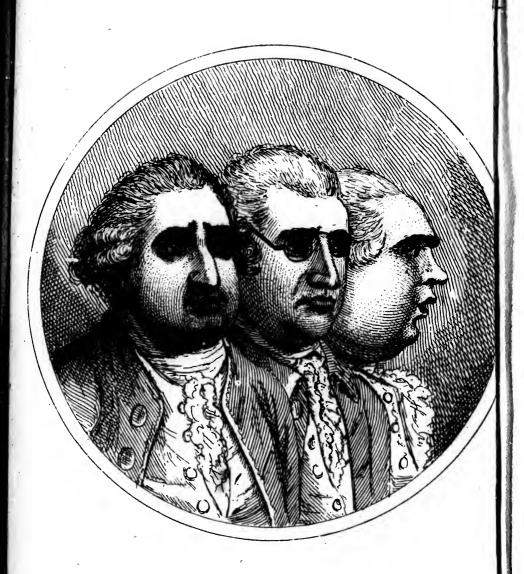

OP

FOX, NORTH, AND BURKE,

FRONTISPIECE

BEAUTIES

O F

FOX, NORTH, AND BURKE,

SELECTED FROM THEIR

SPEECHES,

Erom the passing of the QUEBEC Act, in the Year 1774;

Down to the PRESENT TIME;

WITH

A Copious INDEX to the Whole

AND

An ADDRESS to the PUBLIC,

SPECTEMUR AGENDO

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR J. STOCKDALE, OPPOSITE EURLINGTON-HOUSE, PICCADILLY.
M,DCC,LXXXIV.

2014/8/1/2015

Alfrida .

• • •

To the PUBLIC.

North, the Right Honourable Charles James Fox, and Mr. Edmund Burke, having been justified under a pretence that the American war was the cause of their difference, and that when it was at an end, no reason any longer subsisted against their asting together in the service of their country, the following publication is submitted to the impartial and dispassionate reader, as at once the most direct and sairest means of exposing the sutility of such a defence, and indeed of every argument in savour of so unnatural a junction.

In the course of the ensuing pages, the hardest of belief must be convinced, that the difference between Ld. North, Mr. Fox. and Mr. Burke, was not occasioned by a variation of sentiment on any one great national topic, or political point, in particular: it was the system of Lord North that Mr. Fox and Mr. Burke continually opposed, and invariably reprobated. Every sheet teems with this this most glaring fact. Those Gentlemen not only condemned the American war, as an outrage against the constitution, humanity, and common fense, and not only repeatedly pledged themselves to call Lord North to account for the consequences of it, but publicly accused him of being a Tory, and hence AN ENEMY to the liberties of the people--- of ignorance, laziness, incapacity, absurdity, and want of foresight, as a MINI-STER---of possessing neither knowledge or conception of the art of FINANCE--- of being deceitful, ambitious, ungrateful, avaricious, treacherous, and vindictive, As A MAN--- of having lost us Thirteen Colonies, increased the national debt one bundred millions of money, and ruined us in the West-Indies--- and of baving formed a design against our rights and happiness AT HOME. They despised him equally as a MINISTER and a MAN. In his PUBLIC SITUATION, there is fearcely a crime they did not impute to him; and, as AN INDIVIDUAL, they held his character to be so extremely shocking, and highly offensive, that Mr. Fox even went so far as to declare, " he should deserve to be branded as the " most infamous of men, if ever he approached his "THRESHOLD;" while Mr. BURKE treated with the most inestable contempt the idea that Lord North

n

d

n

01 ſu

N

cł

ar

B

u ti

th

bu

pi

no

ſp

W

na

m

T

North (to use his own expression) would ever be able "to take HIM by the PAW."

en not in out-

y, and ledged

for the im of

to the s, inca-

MINI-

concep=

ceitful,

berous.

lost us

lebt one in the

defign

They and a ere is him;

chahighly

as to

as the

ed his

with

Lord

North

Whether LORD NORTH deferved the abusive epithets applied to him by Mr. Fox and Mr. Burke, or the complaints they made of him, or not, is a matter that cannot be left at this time of day undecided upon. It is, however, scarcely necessary here to consider whether what was said of him, and to him, was well founded, or not: it is sufficient for the present purpose to know, that Mr. Fox and Mr. Burke, THEY heaped every charge on the noble Lord that he is loaded with; and that THEY, Mr. Fox and Mr. Burke, BOTH OF THEM, are men of honour, and above uttering that which is not strictly agreeable to truth and justice.

Confident as the People of England are of this, a COALITION with such a man could not but create a more than ordinary degree of surprise. Had Mr. Fox and Mr. Burke joined the noble Lord for the purpose of effecting any one specific public object previously agreed upon, from which any certain good would have accrued to the nation, the motive and tendency of the junction might possibly have reconciled it to the people. The moment, however, it was found that those persons viii To the PUBLIC.

persons had linked themselves together for the Government of the British Empire, the Coalition immediately struck every one as a monster of the most alarming kind; nor can it at all astonish, that it should have produced those twin brothers in folly, oppression, and despotism, the Receipt Tax and East-India Bill, and have drawn on those who formed the Coalition, the displeasure of the Sovereign, and the censure and contempt of the public.

Shakspeare Tavern, Friday, Jan. 9, 1784.

THE

BEAUTIES

O F

FOX, NORTH, and BURKE.

June 8, 1774.

On the Quebec Bill.

MR. Burke, in the most pointed manner, attacked the noble Lord (Lord North) as to his candour and conscience; and in the richest vein of humour, which kept the House in a continual roar of laughter, contended, that he possessed neither one nor the other.

December 10.

Mr. Fox faid, it was proper to include Ireland in all the debates upon American taxation, in order to afcertain the Parliamentary right of taxation over every part of the British dominions.

R

January

THE

OR THE

nor can ion, and EASTnose who

the Sove-

t of the

January 23, 1775.

Mr. Fox repeatedly called to know who was the man that advised the measures pursued against America, and said, it was HE who ought to answer to his country for the mischief and expence that might ensue.

January 26.

Mr. Burke lamented the miseries of a civil war, incurred by the precipitate ignorance of the Minister—trade destroyed—the revenue impoverished—the poor starving—manufactures stagnating—the poorrate running into the land-tax, and both devouring the estate. He said, that, whenever the black and bitter day of reckoning should come, he would convict him of such a chain of blunders and neglects as would bring vengeance on bis bead.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox, speaking of the American war, said, that the contrary effect of what the Minister had promised, was foretold; but that the Minister, forsooth, in his usual negligence, avowed, that when he was pursuing a reasure of the last degree of importance, he thought it treasonable in him, though the strength of the words he afterwards disavowed, yet he thought it would be blameable in him so much as to enquire what the effects were to be of his measures. He believed it was the first time any Minister dared to avow that he thought it his duty not to enquire into the

Ameto his

A. 1775.

il war, Iinifter
d—the poorouring ck and d coneglects

I, that I profooth, ne was
tance, rength ought nquire

He red to e into the effects of his measures: but it was suitable to the whole of the noble Lord's conduct, who had no system or plan of conduct, no knowledge of business; that he had often declared his unsitness for his station; and he agreed that his conduct justified his declaration, and that the country was incensed, and on the point of being involved in a civil war by his incapacity. He pledged bimself to join Mr. Burke in pursuing bim, and bringing bim to answer the mischiess occasioned by his insufficiency, his inconsistency, and incapacity.

Same Day.

Lord North faid, that as to Mr. Fox, who discovered in him so much incapacity and negligence, there was a time when he approved, at least, fome part of his conduct.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox, in reply to Lord North, observed, that it would readily be believed that his private resentments had not affected his public condust, when he might have long since justly charged him with the most unexampled treachery and falshood.

Same Day.

He charged all the disputes with America to his negligence and incapacity.

February 8.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North) was all hurry, till he had effected measures for rescuing

B 2 General

General Gage out of the very dangerous fituation he was in; that he now imagined he had got him into a state of security, and meant to proceed more coolly and deliberately, because he dreaded that the defeat and destruction of that General and his troops would be wholly attributed to his Lordship's rashness and negligence.

Same Day.

Lord North replied, that it was impossible for him to escape the centure of the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Fox), let him act as he might.

March 8,

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North) was uniform. From the beginning, his Lordship had taken care to lead the House blindfold, and would, he was certain, continue to do so, till he found some personal convenience in acting otherwise.

May 18.

Lord North said, he stood up in his place to assert, that if the refractory Colonies could not be reduced by the present force to obedience, he should think it a right, proper, and necessary measure, to arm the Roman Catholics of Canada, and to employ them in that service.

Same Day.

His Lordship said, he would venture to affirm, that the dispute with America was not so alarming as some people apprehended. He had not the least doubt ion he into a lly and at and uld be

s and

4. 1775.

or him tleman

would, d fome

affert, educed hink it rm the em in affirm, ling as e least doubt doubt this dispute would end speedily, happily, and without bloodshed.

October 26.

Mr. Burke reported some expressions of Lord North on American affairs, some time since, such as, he would bring the Americans to his seet, &c. and contrasted them with some late events in America, which caused a great deal of laughter.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox described Lord North as the blundering pilot who had brought the nation into its present difficulties. The Minister, he said, exulted at having brought us into this dilemma. He has reason to triumph. Lord Chatham—the King of Prussia—nay, Alexander the Great, never gained more in one campaign than the noble Lord has lost—he has lost a whole continent.

Same Day,

Mr. Fox took occasion to describe the distinction between Whigs and Tories, and mentioned the prefent Minister as an enemy to freedom, declaring him to be a Tory.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox rallied Lord North on the rapid progress he had made in misfortune, having expended nearly as large a sum to acquire national disgrace, as that great and able Minister, Lord Chatham, had expended in gaining that glorious lustre with which he had encircled the British name.

Same

Same Day.

Lord North said, he held the pity and contempt of the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Fox) in equal indifference.

December 1.

On the American Prohibitory Bill.

Mr. Fox enumerated the several contradictions and evasions of the Minister, since the commencement of the present session, and contrasted these with his Lordship's declarations the preceding session. He observed on the doctrine of unconditional supremacy, that it went to this: tax America to any amount or in any manner you please; if she complains, punish her with pains and penalties of the most cruel and unrelenting nature; and if she resists such tyranny and barbarity, then sit down day after day, in merciful deliberation on the most potent and expeditious way of starving or massacring the devoted victims.

i

a h

ſι

0

q

tł

di

h

as

Same Day.

Mr. Burke observed, that the present was a retropective bill; for by it the Minister inflicted punishments for acts thought innocent at the time they were committed. Our Saviour sent his apostles to teach and proclaim peace to all nations; but the political apostles, to be sent out by the Minister, would be the harbingers of civil war, in all its most horrid A. 1775.

ntempt of equal in-

l. tions and with his ion. He fupremay amount lains, punost cruel h tyranny, in merl expedidevoted was a rected putime they postles to but the Minister, its most A. 1776.] FOX, NORTH, AND BURKE.

horrid and hideous forms, accompanied by fire, fword, and famine.

February 29, 1776.

Mr. Fox faid, that the noble Lord (Lord North) was never to be found twice in the same temper, nor of the same opinion.

May 6.

Mr. Fox attacked the Minister on his breach of promise ever since he came into office.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke took a short view of the American war from its commencement, and jocularly observed, that, if he had not the highest opinion of the probity and integrity of the noble Lord (Lord North) and his colleagues in office, he should be inclined to suspect that they were secret friends to America, and had been bribed to betray the honour and interest of this country.

May 8.

Mr. Burke, in a committee of the House for enquiring into licences granted by the Admiralty, said, the conduct of the noble Lord (Lord North), in producing a few partial accounts of no moment, and holding all those back that were of consequence, was as insolent and contemptuous as it was unprecedented.

May 10.

On a motion for putting the Americans on the fame footing as the people of Ireland, Mr. Burke took a review of the measures pursued by the Minister since the commencement of the session. He called on Lord North to tell a single act that had been done within that period. His Lordship, it was true, might say, that 'e had voted ten millions out of the pockets of the people. He might boast that he had taken twenty thousand Germans into pay, and turned our British transport vessels into German hospitals. He might defire the representatives of the people to tell their constituents, that, in return for such lavish grants, new taxes had been laid on them, and a four-shilling land-tax rendered perpetual.

November 6.

Mr. Fox observed, however absurd and inconsistent the Minister had shewed himself in other respects, in his measures respecting America, and his professed contempt for Parliament, he had been perfectly uniform and consistent.

November 29.

Mr. Burke said it was in vain to contend against the Minister; for the country gentlemen had abandoned their duty, and placed an implicit confidence in the Minister. But that should neither now, nor bereaster, prevent him from performing his duty; for let the noble

Mr. Burke the Minif-He call-had been was true, at he had nd turned tals. He people to ich lavish

nd a fourconfistent spects, in selfed cony uniform

gainst the pandoned ce in the hereafter, or let the noble

noble Lord (Lord North) be in, or out of office, when the measures which he was wildly hurrying the nation into, were totally proved to be ruinous and destructive to the interest of this country in their consequences, his Lordship might depend upon ir, that he would be made responsible for measures he had carried into execution, under the sanction of such a confidence.

February 10, 1777.

On the fecond reading of the bill to empower his Majesty to secure and detain persons charged with, or suspected of, the high crime of treason committed in America, &c.

Mr. Fox faid, that the present bill served as a kind of key or index to the design that the Minister had been some years manifestly forming; the objects of of which he had rendered visible from time to time, as opportunity ferved, as circumstances proved favourable, or as protection encreased, and power strengthened. It resembled, he said, the first scene in the fifth act, when some important transaction, or circumstance, affecting the chief personages in the drama, comes to be revealed, and points directly to the denouement. This plan had been long visible, and, however covertly hid, or artfully held back out of fight, was uniformly adopted, and steadily pursued: it was nothing less than robbing America of her franchifes, as a previous step of introducing the same fystem of government in this country, and, in fine, of Spreading.

fpreading arbitrary dominion over all the territories belonging to the British Crown.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox dwelt a confiderable time on the invaluable advantages derived from the Habeas Corpus act, which he called the great Palladium of the liberties of the subject, expressing, at the same time, his astonishment, in the boldest and most animated terms, at the insolence and temerity of the Minister, who could thus dare to snatch it from the people, by a mandate manufactured by himself, though sanctioned by the Sign Manual.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, the Minister is credulous in the extreme, because he is fearful; and he is fearful, from a consciousness of his crimes.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, I am not surprised at any thing. The tone of the Minister is become firm, loud, and decisive. He has already assured us, in this House, that he has nearly subdued America, and from what we are able to collect, he means to extend bis conquests nearer home.

April 16, 1777.

On a motion for paying the King's Debts.

Mr. Burke was severe upon the noble Lord (Lord North), and said, that the time of bringing in this demand demand was full of indecency and impropriety; that, when we were going to tax every gentleman's house in England, even to the smallest domestic accommodation, and to accumulate burthen upon burthen, nothing but a servility of the House, and a thorough considence in it, and an experience in our carelessness with regard to all our affairs, could make the Minister desperate enough to tell us, 'tis in such a time we had not provided sufficiently for the splendour of the Crown.

7.

23

0

Same Day.

Mr. Fox, after describing what he termed the wanton prosusion of Ministers, for a series of years back, in the several great departments of state, and the shameful prodigality which prevailed in the disposition of the revenues of the civil list, predicted a day of reckoning, when probably the Minister would be brought to the punishment be deserved.

April 18.

Mr. Fox said, Sir Robert Walpole was deemed the father of corruption; the present Minister is his equal, if not in abilities, at least in his art of managing Parliaments. He has improved on the founder of this corrupt system; he has carried it to infinitely a greater extent: but, then, he has had the address to lose half the empire, as one of the first happy consequences of his experimental improvements.

May 14.

Lord North observed, that the expences of the American war were certainly enormous, but they were necessary; and that the arts of designing men (looking at a certain Right Honourable Gentleman) had wrought upon our subjects in that country to throw off her obedience and constitutional dependency on this, and to resist our lawful authority by an appeal to arms.

November 25.

Mr. Burke severely reprobated the contract the Minister had formed with the Princelings of Germany as mean and humiliating, and expressed his astonishment that the Minister had condescended to the indignity and vileness of courting the alliance of a few traders in buman sless.

November 26.

Mr. Fox faid, that the faithful page of History would hand down to posterity the pusillanimity of a Minister, who consented to set Spain the example of disarming, though the honour of the navy, and consequently of the nation, had been violated, when the rudder of an English man of war was forcibly taken from her at Port Egmont.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke was warmed at the idea of suspending the Habeas Corpus At, and said it would enable the Minister to cut down the sence of liberty, and enslave every British subject.

November

November 28.

Mr. Burke said, that he had never heard the noble Lord (Lord North) behave with fo much candour, generofity, and spirit, as he had shewn in agreeing with his friend (Mr. Fax's) request for laying before the House certain papers. He had published a bond wherein he granted all; but in the end was inferted a little defeafance, with a power of revocation, by which he preferved himself from the execution of every grant he had made. His conduct, he said, reminded him of a certain Governor, who, when he arrived at the place of appointment, fat down to a table covered with profusion, and abounding with every dainty and delicacy that art, nature, and a provident steward could furnish: but a pigmy physician, who watched over the health of the Governor, excepted to one dish, because it was disagreeable; to another, because it was hard of digestion; to a third, because it was unhealthy; and in this progressive mode robbed the Governor of every dish on table, and left him without a dinner; alluding to Cervantes' humorous account of Sancho Panza, in his government of Barataria.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, that ever fince the Minister had prefided, the most violent, scalping, tomahawk meafures have been pursued—bleeding has been his only prescription. If a people deprived of their antient rights rights are grown tumultuous-bleed them! If they are attacked with a spirit of insurrection-bleed them! If their fever should rife into rebellion-bleed them! cries this State Physician: more blood! more blood! ftill more blood! When Dector Sangrado (faid he) had perfevered in a fimilar practice of bleeding his patients-killing by the very means which he had used for a cure—his man took the liberty of remonftrating upon the necessity of relaxing in a practice to which thousands of their patients had fallen facrifices. and which was beginning to bring their names into disrepute. The Doctor answered, " I believe we have carried the matter a little too far; but you must know that I have written a book upon the efficacy of the practice; therefore, though every patient we have should die by it, we must continue the bleeding for the credit of the book."

December 3.

Mr. Burke expressed the tumult and perturbation in his breast, occasioned by the information given to the House by the Minister. A whole army compelled to lay down their arms, and receive laws from their enemies, was a matter so new, that he doubted if such another instance could be found in the annals of history. The effrontery with which it was told, excited no less astonishment than indignation. Ignorance had stamped every step taken in the course of the expedition; but it was the ignorance

777.

hey

em!

em !

 cd !

he) his

had onto:

ces,

nto

we ou

ffioa-

be on.

to

n-

VS

10

in it

1-

e

e

 \mathbf{f}

of the Minister, and not to be imputed to General Burgoyne.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox expressed his happiness at being prevented from speaking immediately after the fatal tidings that had attended General Burgoyne. Rage and indignation so swayed his breast at that time, that, if he had attempted to speak, his words must have been unintelligible. An army of 10,000 men had been destroyed through the ignorance, the wilful ignorance and incapacity of the noble Lord; and it called so loudly for vengeance, that, if no one else would move it, he would take upon him the task of moving directly for an inquiry into the affair.

December 5.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord (Lord North) seemed to contrive the most lame, absurd, and inconfishent measures, to give him an opportunity of shewing his aptitude for defence, and his quickness at reply.

December 10.

Lord North said, he did not yet despair of gaining America!

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, the noble Lord in the Blue Ribbon (Lord North) had discovered the prettiest method imaginable to recover America. It was, he would confess, a new way; but what of that? It is a forcible, and, for that reason, a successful one? How does his Lordship mean to treat? Why, we have been been beaten pretty tolerably. One General, and his army, are lost; the other is surrounded, and in danger: when the other shall be lost, then will be the time to treat. We have been unsuccessful almost in every thing; but it feems, by the noble Lord's new logic, we have not yet been unsuccessful enough. He was very fevere on his want of candour, and his eternally shifting his ground, so as never to permit himself to be tied down to any engagement. If treaty is spoken of, his Loidship wishes for it, and the end proposed by it; if war is spoken of, his Lordship promises success: in short, whether it be conquest, unconditional submission, treaty, conciliation, taxation, fovereignty, or treating with rebels with arms in their hands, he is for every one of them, and for none of them, but that which answers immediately the temporary purposes of debate; that of voting in a majority; of keeping his place, by keeping his friends together; of urging the violent, foftening his antagonists, and meeting exactly the ideas of the moderate.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke was remarkably severe on Lord North, and dwelt upon his Lordship's expression, that he meant to make propositions of peace; and appealed to the good sense, experience, and observation of the House, whether it was within the most distant views of probability to expect that be, whose impotence, incapacity, obstinacy, or inattention, had been the cause d his danbe the oft in s new rough.

and his ermit

, and f, his it be it be iciliarebels them, s imhat of keepolent,

y the North, nat he bealed of the views e, in-cause

of

of every measure, no matter whether it was accommodation or coercion, was the proper person to propose any measure leading any way. The plea, he contended, was monstrous; the expectation in the highest degree improbable and absurd.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox controverted every thing that had been faid by the noble Lord (Lord North), and feemed, from motives of generous pity, to direct his galling attacks against the great Financier, sooner than press too closely on the American Minister. He reprobated the idea of the noble Lord's offering himself to be a negociator, being, he said, well convinced that the Americans would never listen to any treaty coming from his Lordship. He was obnoxious to them; and if he persisted in retaining his station as Minister, it would most certainly prevent every accommodation, which came recommended to them by a man whom they suspected, detested, and despised.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke took notice of the zeal of the noble L rd, (Lord North), and the warmth of his bosom for the public weal. He supposed it to be that zeal, warmth, and ardour, that had induced him to assist, if not devise, the raising of men without the knowledge of Parliament, and by that means to act unconstitutionally for the good of his country.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord (Lord North) reminded him of Pericles, who, exhausted with misfortune, wasted with disease, and lingering with pain, walked abroad, bedecked with amulets, charms, and saws of old women. The loan, now unfilled, and unpaid, was his disease, and the charitable contributions of his friends were his amulets and charms. He was ready to grant, that voluntary donations might be fairly interpreted as proofs of a people's affection, but they were no less so of their real poverty. Private and public life exhibited pregnant proofs, that solicitations on one hand, or benevolences on the other, were the common effects of pride, poverty, and pity.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, that the use the noble Lord (Lord North) employed the word constitution in, brought to his recollection Dean Swist's application of Whitshed, a prostitute Irish crown lawyer's motto on his coach, Libertas & natale solum; which would be applied by every man according as his own ideas led him, or as his interest pointed out. Just so with the noble Lord (Lord North); the idea annexed to the word constitution by him was very different from its true import in a limited monarchy. He might mention it as often as he pleased, and ring the changes upon the constitution, constitutional, &c., but he might as well vainly expect, that his garter would preserve him from the gout, or his ribbon expel a fever, as to imagine, that 77.

cr-

r, id

n-

ı-Ie

٦t

٦, į.,

it

e

to prostitute the word constitution would prevent an investigation into bis conduct at some future period.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, it would be happy for the Minister, if the last war could be forgotten; to the end that the contrast of the present disgraces might not strike the nation so strongly, and render the Minister, the contriver of our missortunes, the execution of the People.

January 22, 1778.

Lord North said, that if the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Fox) had not spoke treason, he had gone very near it.

January 27.

Mr. Fox animadverted on an expression made in the House some time ago by the noble Lord, "that be "was an unfortunate Minister." He played upon the word above an hour, and in the course of his speech recapitulated every mistake, or supposed error in the Minister, with the continued repetition of this expression, "If the noble Lord had been so fortunate as to have done this, or if he had not been so unfortunate as to have have mistaken that, neither the Nation, nor the Minister, would have exposed themselves to the necessity of an inquiry."

February 6.

Mr. Burke shewed the monstrous expense of employing the Indians; that one Indian soldier cost as much as five of the best regular European troops;

 D_2

but

but the Minister thought that inhumanity and marder could not be bought too dear.

March 9.

Lord North positively denied that any war could break out between this country and France.

March 19.

Mr. Fox thought Lord North's ignorance of a treaty having been figned between France and America, deferved a censure of the highest nature.

May 6.

Mr. Fox asked the House, if any man in his senses would give a vote of credit to a Minister, who was always the last who learned what he should have been the sirst to know?

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, it was impossible to estimate the guilt of a Minister, who could tamely suffer an hostile squadron to carry unmolested destruction to the British army in America. The disgrace of a Burgoyne was, it seems, to be atoned by the deseat of a Howe; and the want of information respecting the France-American treaty is compensated in the ignorance of D'Estaing's sailing and destination. Was there any thing more wanted to seal the fatal character of the present inauspicious Ministry? or could be any longer hope to be trusted with the treasures of a nation he had so shamefully betrayed, and of whose situation even the noble Lord himfelf feemed to entertain very little confidence?

Same Day.

Mr. Burke faid, it was idle to pretend that the destination of the Toulon sleet had been so long a fecret, or that it was criminal, if true. American pilots had long been engaged to conduct it; but we had lost the advantage of the wind by the crime of the Minister. Were we therefore to give our purseftrings to his will, and retire in confidence to cultivate our gardens, smooth our lawns, and assume the little offices of rustic magistracy? Could we trust the fole guidance of the ship of state to a pilot, whom we have lately detected in the basest torpor whilft the danger threatened—who left her to the mercy of the waves, quitting the decks in the very moment that called for his skill and activity-and who was not to be found when the fquall came on? Alas! the rudder was lashed, and Palinurus gone to fleep!

Same Day.

Mr. Burke lamented that his country should be reduced to the poor dependence of hopes and prayers, the arms of old women; and that a British Minister, instead of acting the statesman, and timely exerting the strength of the nation, should dwindle into a priest, and piously offer up his prayers for the salvation of his country!

May 28.

Mr. Burke charged Lord North, in the most direct terms, with the loss of America.

November

uld

778.

der aty de-

fes alen

ilt ile rine

of ny

er he

n

November 26.

Mr. Fox faid. I know that views of fucceeding to fome of the offices of state will be assigned as the motives of my conduct in opposing the Minister; but we are now in fuch a fituation as to make me neglect fuch confiderations. Nobody is more fensible than I am of the necessity of unanimity at this juncture, and I wish I had an opportunity of supporting a Minister with justice to my country; but that can never be with the present one. I know him too well to do fo; and will, as my duty directs, give him every opposition that my situation, my opportunities, and my talents, whatever they may be, will enable me. I know that my doing fo will be called clogging the wheels of government, at a time when they ought to be affifted by every man; but we are reduced to that paradoxical fituation, that I must chuse of two evils, for they have not left us any power of chusing any good: it is a paradox, in fact, and I will take that part which appears to me to be, though bad, the best; I will consequently use all my abilities to remove the present Minister, by using every means in my power to clog him in the House, to clog him out of the House, and to clog every thing he engages in, while he fills that place he fo much difgraces. I will do so, because I think this is less ruinous than to fubmit any longer to his blundering administration, and his blundering system of politics.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, his Majesty in his speech tells you, that your efforts have not been attended with all the fuccess which the justice of our cause, and the vigour of our exertions, feemed to promife. The speech, on all hands, is allowed to be the speech of the Minister; it is parliamentary to confider it so; and I will tell the noble Lord, that that is not fast, that it is not founded, and that the speech is false; that you had more fuccefs than you deferved, and that you ought to be happy at the iffue of your exertions, and contented that things are no worfe: you had every fuccess that could be expected from the noble Lord, and more, for you have escaped: your fleet was sent out under the brave and able Commander Admiral Keppel; twenty fail only to meet thirty ships of the line; the fleet on which your dependence refted, and which alone flood between you and an invasion: the noble Lord (Lord North) gave every chance of its being destroyed by inequality in numbers, and your navy at one blow totally ruined.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) made it a point of his honour to keep in his office year after year, though his administration had been a series of misfortunes to his country; and in the very moment of additional calamities, he goes into the cabinet, and advises his Sovereign to bestow on him a most lucrative vacant place, the Wardership

of 778.

the er; me nsi-this but bim give or-

vill led ien

are ust

ny ct,

ре,

all ng

le, ng

ch :fs

g

ş.

me

of the Cinque Ports. And why? Because, in another year, the Crown might have nothing left to give, if his Lordship continued to govern.

December 10.

Mr. Fox remarked upon the proposed impartiality of the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North), and the directive spirit that inspired his political conduct as first Minister. Every kind of proposition for raising a regiment, and every proposer, came equally well recommended to him; he was ready to meet every man on his own ground; he that came for money should have it, and he that desired none should be bound to his bargain.

The noble Lord said, no partiality had been shewn. He could tell one instance at least, which directly contradicted that affertion. A noble relation of his (the Duke of Richmond) had offered to raise a regiment without a single shilling of expence to Government, but bis offer had been refused. Not that either; it was treated with a silent contempt, for a syllable of answer was never returned, not so much as to acknowledge the receipt of the letter.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox was farcastically severe on the Minister for affecting to open the motion by way of avoiding confusion, who had shewn no scruples in involving a whole

78.

ewn. Aly his egiernthat or a uch

fter ding ng a nole whole Continent in the worst state of confusion an empire ever experienced.

25

December 11.

Mr. Fox believed there was a fatality in the American war, which corresponded with that of Xerxes against Greece. Lord North he compared to the Minister of that Prince, who, vindicating himself, might have said, I promised to build a bridge over the Hellespont; I built it: I promised to sail through mount Athos; I sailed through it: I promised to supply your army with all necessaries; I performed my promise: and yet the whole army of near two millions of men mouldered away; Persia was stripped of its inhabitants, and its resources exhausted; and Greece, notwithstanding, maintained its independence.

March 3, 1779.

Mr. Fox faid, the Minister had evaded every thing which could possibly lead to an inquiry into his conduct, by refusing every document for his acquittal or conviction; every thing that might lead to proofs of his guilt or innocence.

March 8.

Mr. Fox begged leave to anticipate one of Lord North's great arguments, or rather pillars of debate. Says the noble Lord, "I was not the author of the American war. America rebelled. I am not answering and the same of the five rable.

fwerable for the French war; it was the perfidy of France that made her abet our rebellious subjects. I did not encourage the Bostonians to destroy the tea, nor to rise, nor to fight, to declare themselves independent, &c." though the noble Lord is conscious that he did not take a single step through the whole business, that the next on the part of America, or France, was not literally foretold: which amounts just to this, the noble Lord consounds the cause with the effect; he presumes that the effect took place before the cause, and that the cause followed the effect.

When the first disturbances, relative to the destruction of the tea fent to America, broke out in that country, the noble Lord's language in the blue ribbon was, " Pass the Boston Port-Bill, and the necessities of the people will oblige them to submit." Well, the noble Lord was mistaken, the people did not fubmit. Says the noble Lord again, "Send a few regiments, and force the Port-Bill down the throats of the discontented and the mutinous with powder and ball:" that recipe not proving efficacious, fays the noble Lord, "We will hold out terms to them;" which gave birth to his Lordship's celebrated conciliatory plan. The conciliatory proposition was, however, treated with the contempt and derision which it merited. It imported this, "Give us as much as you please, we will accept of it, and take afterwards as much as we think fit in addition:" that is, "Give us fomething, and we will then scramble for as much more

1779.

v of

s. I

, nor

dent.

e did

that not

, the

; he

ause,

fruc-

that e rib-

e nemit.''

e did

Send

n the

with

cious,

ms to

rated was, which ch as

wards Give much more

more as we can get of you, either by force or stratagem." The noble Lord, sinding himself bastled in all his plans, at length grew angry and disgusted. The whole force of this country was to be tried; the most vigorous measures were to be pursued; every thing was to be carried by the hand of strength, and America was to be brought to the feet of Great Britain, in a state of unconditional submission. This high, this boastful language proved as vain-glorious, and the attempt as unprosperous as any other, to bully and deceive, to cheat and frighten!

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, the Minister acted under the dominion of the grossest and dullest ignorance, and was, therefore, unworthy of public trust or considence; or, from sinister, concealed, or corrupt motives, and further urged by some powerful criminal influence operating upon his mind, had wilfally missed, and, by a studied series of delusions, and a preconcerted plan of impositions, had imperceptibly dragged, or rather allured, this infatuated country, to the very verge of destruction.

This was a dilemma, from which neither the blind confidence, or studied plausibility, of the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, could extricate him. The alternative was, the Minister was either ignorant, or treacherous. If ignorant, was there a gentleman in that House, who would trust his nearest and dearest concerns to fuch a man? If treacherous, where was the man who would be mad enough to trust his most important concerns to a man, who, he was perfuaded, would facrifice him to his own dishonest and corrupt views?

Same Day.

Mr. Burke was fevere upon the language of the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, relative to the collective responsibility of Ministers, and the individual irresponsibility of each, for matters transacted in his respective department; a language, he contended, equally new in that House, and out of it; for it amounted, in fact, to an avowed irresponsibility, both individually and collectively. The Chancellor, the Secretaries of State, the First Lord of the Treasury or Admiralty, according to this doctrine, might do or fuffer any thing, without being amenable to the Parliament or Nation. If they are over-ruled in the Cabinet, fays the noble Lord, they cannot be responsible; if they are not over-ruled, neither can they be responsible: so that whatever any Minister had done, or hereafter might do, he was by no means answerable for; because the evil or mischief transacted was transacted in the company of others. Who are those others? That no man can tell: the advisers of the Crown are enjoined to fecrecy. They may be the advisers or abettors of the greatest of all posfible mischiefs, or any Member of a Committee or Council may confent to be the instrument of carrying it into execution; but what of that? The initrument

q.

213

nis

ernd

he

ec-

ıal

his

d,

it

ty,

he

or do

he

he re-

an

ter

Lis

ed

re

ers be

of-

or у-

n-

nt

strument may perpetrate the mischief, though, as one of the King's advisers, he may disapprove of it, with impunity: if he is a mover in it, he is equally beyond the reach of public justice, or parliamentary censure; because it cannot be deemed bis act, but that of the Majority to whom it is proposed.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, in his usual pithy and humorous manner, related a faying of the late Sir Godfrey Kneller, that a thief was not to blame; but the person who left the thing stolen in his way, which operated as a temptation to him to commit the criminal act. He begged leave to tell another flory, he hoped no less humorous and applicable. Two men with cloaks went to an eating-house, and one of them stole a piece of flesh meat, and concealed it under his cloak.—Oh! iaid the master to one of them, you are the thief; restore me my meat. No, says the thief, I am not; I give you leave to fearch, having previously shifted it to his companion. The latter being questioned in the fame manner, returned it with equal dexterity to his colleague. So it was with the confidential fervants of the Crown; -- if any one of them is charged personally, it is not his ast, but that of his brother advifers; and if the whole body is charged, another rifes and answers for his share only, but leaves the nation to find out and fearch for the real authors: for the noble Lord tells you, that every thing is determined termined by a majority not known, nor whom no persons but themselves are ever permitted to know.

March 11.

On a motion for excluding Contractors.

Mr. Fox faid, the parliamentary effect of contracting was two-fold, and both the action and re-action tended to destroy the independence of the House. He then stated the mutual obligation between the Contractor and the Minister. The noble Lord in the blue ribbon faid, first, to the Contractor, "I give you a good contract, on condition that you give me a good vote:" and, in the fecond place, the Contractor re-acts upon the Minister, "I have given you a good vote, give me a good contract; I voted for you the other night, in direct contradiction to my fenses; I voted that the had forty-two ships ready for sea, when we had but fix; and I voted that the French fleet did not confift of thirty-two ships, when Admiral Keppel had but twenty; though both the facts lay upon the table. I have voted all this to do you fervice, and I expect you will not hesitate to do me the same favour, and give me a good thing; therefore you must not quarrel with me for two-pence a gallon on rum, or a halfpenny on a loaf of bread."

And fays the Minister to another, "You know I gave you an advantageous contract, worth to you 20,000l. therefore I must have a sure vote in you." Here is the worst of all ties; a double influence, a reciprocity which is truly alarming. But perhaps the infignificant

10

n

e

e u

d

S

٠, er d

e

d

)-

n

٠,

C

u

n

I

u

fignificant advantage of feventy five per cent. is nothing in the confideration of a huddling Treasury Board, who have currency and feeling always at their elbow.

March 18.

Mr. Burke shewed the absurdity of the arguments used by the Scotch, in justifying their violent conduct; and exposed the supineness of Government upon the attacks of the Scotch rioters on the peace and property of his Majesty's Popish subjects in that part of the empire. He hoped that Government was not dead, but asleep. At this moment he looked directly at Lord North, who was asleep, and said in the scripture phrase, "Brother Lazarus is not dead, but sleepeth." The laugh upon this occasion was not more loud on one side the House than on the other.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox charged the noble Lord (Lord North) in the blue ribbon with an act of public perfidy, with a breach of a folemn specific promise. He reminded the House, that, in February, 1775, his Lordship moved his conciliatory proposition, and pledged his house to the House and nation, that he would never agree any measure which would go to enlarge the offers therein made; yet, at the end of three years, after facrissing thirty millions of money, and thirty thousand lives, his Lordship, in the same assembly, not only solemnly renounced all claim to superiority, revenue, and internal legislation, but consented, by the

the mouth of his commissioners, to the giving up the monopoly of the American trade, the appointment of governors, and all subordinate officers; and the royal prerogative of keeping up or sending an army in any part of the empire his Majesty may think proper.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox animadverted on the conduct of the noble Lord (Lord North), whose arrogance, he said, was unpardonable. His unreferved contempt of the whole body of the people of England without doors, was no less ungenerous than indecent. To treat his best benefactors in so haughter a style, as to lump them indifcriminately under the pellation of populace, and coffee-bouse readers, was a language that did not become any Member of that House, much less a Minister, who, to be able to serve his country, should always endeavour to make himfelf popular, and fecure the good opinion of the people in his favour; much less a Minister, who had led them into those dirty ways, which it would be very difficult to wade through, without the utmost danger of surrounding perils. Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, that the noble Lord (Lord North) had not only broke his word to that House, in every single promise he gave, but likewise to the only dutiful Province in America, that of Nova Scotia.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke laughed at the pretended exertion and vigour of the Minister, ridiculing Lord North's perfonal

t

1

fonal character of indolence, which, he faid, was to be taken as the barometer of ministerial exertion, and ministerial vigour. He declared, that, so far from aiming at the places of the present Ministry, they were not worth accepting, and were places of great danger.

April 28.

Mr. Fox brought the whole controverfy on the American war to this iffue—The commanders have done their duty, they want to prove it. Ministers are conscious of their incapacity and guilt, they attempt to evade; they shrink and fly from the inquiry, conscious, that, if gone into, it must terminate in their dismission, and consequent punishment.

May 3.

Mr. Fox said, he believed in his conscience, that it would have been happy for his country, that the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) had never been born.

May 6.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord (Lord North), who had been with so much propriety compelled to sit down, was modest enough, however contradictory it might be to some of his affertions, to acknowledge it; but says the noble Lord, the Opposition it is that has created and somented all the discontents. Is the noble Lord serious, or has he rather had recourse to his celebrated argument of tu quoque? "It was not I that did it, but it was you." Such an answer fwer is just on a line with the noble Lord's politeness, and wit, and pleasantry. He has a great example in this line of debate; the noble Lord, I mean, in the blue ribbon. He is sometimes more angry than his noble stiend (Lord George Germaine), and, when he pleases, be can be almost as witty.

May 13.

Lord North very warmly infifted upon it, that every national calamity had its fource in the Opposition supported by the Right Honourable Gentleman.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, to the abusive part of the noble Lord's speech, he had but one answer to give, applicable to Administration in a body: that Opposition were well warranted to reply to them, in the words of a celebrated author (Sv. 125 Gulliver), a little altered and enlarged, where, at the conclusion of his well-known Travels, he fays, he could bear them well enough, in some respects; he could make allowances for their incapacity, folly, corruption, love of place and emolument; he could pity them for their blunders, their wants, their weaknesses, and gross stupidity; he felt for their miserable situation, knowing not whether to rush headlong on certain ruin, or retreat with fafety; but, despicable, unprincipled, and detefted, as they were, he had learned nevertheless to treat their persons with respect: yet when fuch men grew infolent and abusive, urged their claims of merit, for what they deserve an axe; when. when he beheld fuch men, in the very midst of these dire disasters and national missfortunes, endeavouring to contend that those missfortunes do not exist, or, if they do, that they ought justly and solely to be attributed to Opposition; we see a lump of desormity and disease (rooking at Lord North), of folly and wickedness, of ignorance and temerity, simitten with pride, immediately breaks all measures of patience; it being hardly conceivable, that so much pride, vice, and folly, could exist in the same animal.

June 11.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) now talked of treating with Congress;—formerly his language was, that he would treat with America, and not with Congress.

Tune 16.

Lord North said, that Count d'Almadovar, the Spanish Ambassador, had just delivered to Lord Weymouth, one of his Majesty's Secretaries of State, a Manisesto, from the Court of Spain; which, with a Message from his Majesty, he should lay before the House. The Ambassador, he said, bad been recalled.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke reminded the noble Lord (Lord North) in particular, and the ministerial side in general, how light they had made of the probability of such an event. Whenever we have talked of a Spanish war, in addition to that of France and America, with what contempt has the Minister heard it! with what scorn

F 2

has near ake

ion, iem
and ion, tain
rinned
yet ged
exe';

700

lite-

ex-

an.

han

hen

that ofi-

ble

ap-

osi-

the

), a

fion

has he scouted the idea! Good God! with what joy is it that he has triumphed, as it were, in our ignorance and folly! Spain, we were told, time after time, and have no interest in joining our enemies.

A ver proceeding fome time in this strain, the Honourable Gentleman was called to order by the Speaker, who asked him, if he had any motion to make? if not, he could not suffer him to proceed.

Mr. Burke faid, Sir, I could make a motion—THE IMPEACHMENT OF THE MINISTER (pointing to Lord North) Would be a very proper one.

June 22.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North), after owning that we had no foreign alliances, had triumphantly fpoken of unanimity, and congratulated Gentlemen on that fide of the House, upon having allied themselves with those that sat on the other. This was an affertion for which there was not the finallest foundation; and it was impossible for him to state, in any phrase that language would admit of, the shock he felt when he ventured to suggest what was most exceedingly grating to his ears, and, he doubted not, to those of every Gentleman who sat near him. What! enter into an alliance with those very Ministers who had betrayed their country, who had profituted the public strength, who had proftituted the public wealth, who had profituted, what was yet more valuable, the glory of the nation! THE IDEA WAS TOO MONSTROUS TO BE ADMITTED

79.

oy

0-er

ohe

to

E

to er i-

d

g r.

e

n

f,

lt

e

t

e

0

FOR A MOMENT! Gentlemen must have foregone their principles, and have given up their honour, BEFORE THEY COULD HAVE APPROACHED THE THRESHOLD OF AN ALLIANCE SO ABOMINABLE, SO SCANDALOUS, AND SO DISGRACEFUL!

Same Day.

Lord North said, the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Fox, after reprobating the whole of my public conduct, is pleased to hold out several strong inducements for me to retire from public business. He offers me a full indemnity for all my past crimes and transgressions, as a public man; for which I am greatly indebted to him, though unfortunately I cannot, or will not, follow the advice thus given me. However, let me retire whenever I may, I shall have the pleasing resection to console me, that I have not bettered my fortune a single shilling.

July 2.

Mr. Fox faid, he would take the opportunity of flying a farewel word or two to the Minister, for the present session. He attacked the noble Lord in the blue ribbon with his usual asperity, and begged he would not have the impertinence to talk of unanimity and spirit; because, he said, it was impertinent and insulting to the last degree, for any set of men to recommend that to others, of which they were themselves incapable of holding out an example.

November 25.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord at the head of the Treasury

Treasury could not surely be in earnest, when he declared that the American war had nothing to do with Ireland. Did not that ill-sated project appear most conspicuous in every circumstance of the present situation of that kingdom? What stripped Ireland of her troops? Was it not the American war?—What brought on the hostilities of France, and put Ireland in fear of an invasion? Was it not the American war?—What gave Ireland an opportunity of establishing a powerful and illegal army? Certainly the American war: as much so, as that the noble Lord in the blue ribbon was accountable for the consequences of it.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox was extremely fevere on the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, as Minister. The only chance he had ever had of being right, was when the noble Lord departed from, or, rather, expressly contradicted, his general line of conduct; it being always the fortune of the noble Lord to set out wrong, and trust to chance for striking into the right road.

February 8, 1780.

Mr. Burke said, my noble friend (Lord George Gordon) supposes I have been made a cat's paw by the Minister. [Here Mr. Burke laughed very much.] I suppose, said he, that before people take a cat by the paw, they must have a pretty good opinion of the pliant and tractable nature of the particular animal; for there are cats so sierce, indocile, and intractable,

t d

t f tractable, that it would not be fafe to meddle with their paws. Now I do not know that the Minister has ever found me of a very pliant nature; and I believe he will never think of seizing my paw.

February 11.

Lord North said, the Honourable Gentleman (Mr. Fox) was a powerful advocate in any cause, however arduous and difficult. His rapidity of speech, his severity of censure, and choice of words, made him an enemy to be dreaded: for his part, he feared the Honourable Gentleman, as an antagonist—yet, notwithstanding this, he would rather have him for an opponent than a commentator.

February 21.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord (Lord North) prodigiously admired his Plan of Œconomy; but when any part of it came under consideration, the noble Lord himself was the first to condemn it. He liked the whole, but when it came to be divided, he was sure to condemn every thing.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, with respect to the influence of the Crown, the people, he knew, would have it lessened; and, for his part, he was of opinion, that it ought to be entirely destroyed.

March 5.

Mr. Burke adverted to the noble Lord's (Lord North's) observation, that he would speak in the preserverset tense, that he had been supported by

by the Country Gentlemen; and said, the noble Lord need not be in danger of a grammatical error when he used any language; it was a solecism in politics he ought to take care to avoid; for he acted in direct opposition to all true sense in politics, in direct opposition to every writer on Government, and to all bonest and dishonest politicians the world ever produced.

March 21.

Lord North having moved, "That notice be given that the capital flock or debt of 4,200,000l, and all arrears of annuity die and payable in respect thereof, from the Public, to the United Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies, be paid on the 5th of April, 1783, agreeable to the power of redemption in the said act;"

Mr. Fox rose to give a negative to the motion. He asked, whether the noble Lord was not content with having lest America; or was he bent upon not quitting the situation in which he then stood, till he had reduced the British Empire to the consines of Great-Britain? What good could the present motion be attended with? or, rather, what evil might it not produce? The motion was a threat, and the idlest of all possible menaces, because it was made at a time when the noble Lord knew in his own mind, that he neither intended, nor was capable of carrying it into execution. Why then throw it out, unless the noble Lord wished to rule that Lord wished to rule that Lord wished to rule that East-India Company's possessions in India, and to deprive 30.

ole

al

m

he

S,

nd

0-

'n

d

£

1-

;,

O

THIS COUNTRY OF THE AMPLE REVENUE SHE RE-CEIVED THROUGH THE COMMERCE AND TRADE OF THAT COMPANY? It was ridiculous, it was dangerous to threaten, when men dared not perform what they threatened. Let the noble Lord, let the House, turn their eyes to the probable consequences of that theeat. Good Goo! what a scene of anarchy and confusion, diffress and ruin, would it not occafion! Supposing even for a moment that the noble Lord really intended putting his threat in execution, and was capable of doing it, must not the public fuffer confiderably? How was the money to be paid off? Did not the noble Lord know, that he was obliged to pay the debt at par; and therefore, as the 4,200,000l. flood at the interest of three per cent. and three per cents, were at fixty, the public must necessarily lose a clear forty per cent. by every 1001. they paid off. But how was the noble Lord to fecure the revenues which the public were to derive from the territorial acquifitions of the Company? How was he to get them home? Did not the noble Lord knew that the Company was the best medium through which they would pass? Had he a plan for a new Company? And had he a defign to effablish a new Company on the ruins of the present one? Was that the noble Lord's gratitude to THOSE TO WHOM HIS COUNTRY WAS SO HIGHLY OBLIGED ?

Same Day.

Mr. Burke execrated the narrow idea of bargaining with the East-India Company as if we were treating with an enemy, and on the supposition that we had a right to their territorial revenues. He reprobated the intention to give notice to the Company, according to the motion, As the most wicked, Absurd, Abandoned, Profligate, Mad, and Drunken intention ever formed!

April 24.

Mr. Fox faid, the Minister himself, and his prostitute followers, spared no pains, had scrupled at no means to traduce, calumniate, and lower the character of those who opposed them.

June 6.

Mr. Fox faid, he was a friend to order, but could not support Government, because the Minister was acting upon a system, that, however well a man might wish to society, he could not support him; for he had dissolved all the bands of society, and had disgraced every one who had acted with, or under bim.

November 30.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North) does not vindicate Ministry against the charge of treachery and falshood, and his argument is this: We are false and treacherous, and we will not employ those who know us to be so. There may be ingenuity and wit in such replies; but there is little judgment. The Prime Minister is contented with the praise of being able to raise a laugh.

in

February 20, 1781.

Mr. Rurke faid, so many and such great revolutions had happened of late, that he was not much surprised to hear the loss of the supremacy of this country over Ireland spoken of as a matter of very little confequence. Thus one star, and that the brightest ornament of our orrery, having been suffered to be lost; those who were accustomed to inspect and watch our political heaven, ought not to wonder that it should be followed by the loss of another.—

So ftar would follow ftar, and light and light, Till all was darkness, and eternal night.

0

c-

1d

as

an \mathbf{d}

or es

rу

ſe

10

it be le

У

March 26.

Mr. Fox went particularly into the contract that had been made for rum with Mr. Atkinson. His deduction from it was, that the noble Lord (Lord North), as Finance Minister, was highly criminal in his own personal conduct, in so grossly deceiving and fraudulently imposing upon that House; that his baseness in conceasing the real terms was only to be equalled by his guilt in agreeing to them; and that, if no other fact than that of concealment alone were to be adduced against him, it was sufficient to prove, that he had made a corrupt bargain, and with an evil design, namely, for the purpose of bringing in his creatures and dependents.

April 9.

On a motion for refolving the House into a committee, to consider the propriety of the Crown taking into its own hands the territorial acquisitions of the East-India Company;

Mr. Burke could not help faying, that the noble Lord (Lord North) had, in the course of his speech, advanced several things to which he could not subscribe. The claim, he believed, was unfounded;—and he warned the noble Lord against beginning, by an act of violence, a butiness which would require all the moderation, as well as all the wisdom of the legislature, to adjust.

May 8.

Mr. Fan faid, no man had an higher respect or veneration for the Country Gentlemen than he had; he knew their value, he loved, and revered them. He was bound to them by sentiment, as well as opinion.

Same Day.

Mr. Fax faid, it was the Trained Bands, under the well-known command of the Muster-master General, who carried every question in that House; it were those that were in possession of great emoluments of pensions and inefficient places; it were the contractors, and the who were amassing fortunes by their servility, and growing rich by the support of measures which made other people poor. These formed the motley group which the noble Lord (Lord

8 .

mwn

ui-

ble

ch,

ub-

; by ure

the

ve-

; he

He

on.

der

fler

fe;

olu-

the

by

of

hele

ord ord (Lord North) was pleafed to honour with the name of Country Gentlemen.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox, speaking of Lord Thurlow, said, he was able; he was honest; and he possessed a noble and independent mind. His colleagues hated him for his virtues, they envied him for his abilities; they teazed him, and threatened him; they took every occasion to make his situation uneasy. But, from his own great mental resources, his spirit broke forth, expressive of the injuries intended him, and the contempt in which he held them.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, it was evident that the Minister was equally mistrusted and despised, not only by the people at large, but, what was more, by all the sirst characters in the two military professions, the navy and army.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, that, as he had devoted in and and talents to the people, and of course to promote the good of his country; so, whenever he should be called by them, both were at their service to command, so far as the constitution and the laws authorised the call and acquiescence; he meant, so soon as any direct into ad was made on that constitution, and those invaluable and inestimable blessings and privileges it was meant to secure and defend.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke faid, it was always the conclusion of every harangue, whatever was the beginning, when argument was exhaulted; when evalion failed; when law had no more quibbles to confound, nor eloquence to confuse: " Oh! save the noble Lord (Lord North) is still the last!" He trusted this argument would not always prevail, when it came to this short issue, whether we must part from the Minister, or from the Empire.

Same Day.

Mr. Fex faid, the more unfortunate and disastrous we were, the greater likelihood there was of the prefent Minister remaining in office. It was his blunders, his misconduct, and misfortunes, which had proved his best recommendation. In proportion to each, his support and power increased; and if any just and certain estimate could be made, or drawn from experience, as foon as the public affairs came to be wifely, or fuccefsfully administered, from that very moment, his power, consequence, and existence, as Minister, would be at an end.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the condition under which he (Lord North) acts, is positive. It is determined, that the wealth of this country shall be dislipated, the blood of our fellow-citizens spilt; to what purpose? Merely to support his power, and that of his adherents.

81.

of

en

d;

or rd

u-

is

r,

JS

e-

3-d

y

n

May 9.

Mr. Burke (on a motion for confidering the propriety of taking the East-India Company's territories into their hands) said, that the conduct of the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) had been highly difrespectful to the House, as well as injurious to the country; and when the present motion was disposed of, he should think it would be proper to move to enquire into the conduct of the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, with respect to the East-India Company.

May 23.

On a motion for a Participation of the East-India Company's Profits.

Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord (Lord North) would not accede to the proposition of the Company, because they did not admit that the public had a claim upon them; fo that the argument cut double, like a two-edged fword: for it must either be folved thus, " If you admit the claim of the public, I call upon you, in behalf of your creditors, to pay their just dues;" or thus, "If you do not admit the claim, why then I will take that by force, which you deny I ought to receive as a right." Most admirable reafoning! The noble Lord will neither beg, borrow, nor receive, as a due; but he will have it nevertheless, and seize upon that by rapine and plunder to which be bas no title, and cannot justify his receiving in any If the Company should say to the Minister, in direct terms, " Sir, you have no right to this 600,0001.

600,000l. you attempt to extract from us;" then to be fure his Lordship would come down to Parliament, and pronounce them the most impudent violators of old agreements that ever were heard of: but if they do not express themselves in this manner, if they say nothing upon the subject, as in the actual instance at prefent; why then, how does the Minister conduct himself? He says, notwithstanding these men are filent, I very well understand their intention, and am fure, notwithstanding their taciturnity, they mean to contend that the public have no right to the fum claimed; and therefore, being certain that this is the case, I will make sure of the money, and feize it by main force. So that, whether the poor proprietors speak or not, it makes no matter'; the effect is the fame, with this little difference only, that, in the one instance, they might deserve the treatment they received; in the other, it was replete with unprovoked cruelty and injustice. The Minister had talked in the fame style again and again, and the confequence was, our present miserable and degraded situation!

Same Day.

Mr. Burke termed the regulations of the East-India Company, established by the act of 1774, a design to obtain money under a pretence of establishing a political reform; and now he (Mr. Burke) said, the noble Lord (Lord North) wanted to take away their trade, as he had formerly taken away their patronage and their purse. Eundem negotiatorem, eundem dominum! He had better carry (Mr. Burke said) all the business business of Leadenhall-street at once, and transact it at the Board of Treasury. His reasoning to justify the force and violence he was using, he pronounced shamefully pitiful. The reasoning of the lion in the sable was less censurable. "This, I seize," says the lion, "because I have got teeth; this, because I wear a mane on my neck; this, because I have claws; and this last morsel, not because I have either truth, reason, or justice, to support me, and justify my taking it, but because I am a lion."

Same Day.

On the same Motion.

Mr. Burke said, the present motion was the daring effort of a Minister determined on rapine and plunder, without regard either to truth, honour, or justice; a violent and shameless attempt to rob the Company, in order to pursue the purposes of the most lavish waste, and the most prosligate corruption.

Same Day.

On the fame Motion.

Mr. Burke conjured the House not to join the noble Lord (Lord North) and his adherents, saying, "Let us not deduce European supplies from Asiatic rapacity; let us shew ourselves awake to the calls of reason, and alive to the impulse of equity!" He concluded with saying, that he was sure, notwithstanding bis endeavours, and those of every friend to justice, to prevent the motion from being agreed to,

 \mathbf{H}

that

to

of hey fay

nce onien

on, iey

to hat

and ro-

fect the

ney ked

the nce

dia gn

eir 1ge ni-

he efs that fuch would be its fate; yet, in discharge of bis duty, he would move an amendment. He therefore moved, that the sonowing words be added to the motion, "No grounds having been laid before "the Committee, on which the right of the public "to a participation of the territorial revenue of the "East-India Company is founded; or, if they have such "right, no grounds to shew that they have a right to this particular proportion of their profits."

Same Day.

On the same Motion.

Mr. Burke said, he not only held, that the Company's territorial acquisitions belonged entirely to themselves, but, with respect to the bills so much talked of, he really believed they would be drawn with more alacrity on the 600,000l. than on the Exchequer: there was not in his idea a single Asiatic plunderer, who did not know the noble Lord in the blue ribbon better, than to think of drawing on any fund in his disposal for a single shilling. His Lordship was so notoriously lavish, that the 600,000l. would be gone in a moment.

May 30.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North), who talked so very fluently, and affected so much candour, had contradicted facts, which he had again and again afferted.

Same Day.

Mr. Fax faid, the conduct of the noble Lord in the the blue ribbon was continually at variance with his fentiments.

Same Day.

He (Lord North) had repeatedly pledged his word, as a gentleman, that he would never agree to any proposal that might be made hereafter for granting the Americans better terms; and no doubt the perfonal declarations of a perfon of his Lordship's birth, rank, abilities, and fortune, were objects of real regard: but after all these declarations his Lordship had, in the year 1778, brought in a bill to Parliament, for enabling Commissioners to propose the most extravagant terms to the Americans; terms by which they would have had the power of taxing England, while their own country would not have been taxed by the English Parliament.

Same Day,

The noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) could not in fact make peace with America. He dared not do any thing of the kind. He had been a gentleman born, bred a man of honour, and had lived in those habits of life that precluded him from shewing himself, after he had violated his word. What was the fituation in which his Lordship stood?

In the year 1775, when his Lordship came to the House for the conciliatory bill, he explicitly and repeatedly declared, that farther than that he never would go: yet this very fame Lord, the First Lord of the Treasury, this oftensible Minister, had him-

H 2

felf

n

10

81.

bis re-

to ore

lic

the

ch

tht

y's

es,

he

la-

re

ho t-

if-

0-

a

n

felf come down to the House, in the year 1778, and moved for the bill which sent out Lord Carlisle and the other Commissioners to America, to make an offer to her of taxing herself. This the noble Lord had done; the very same Minister that had, upon pussing the conciliatory bill, assimed, in order to get it passed, that he would never go heyond it. "Some gentiemen (said he, may object to this conciliatory bill, under a notion that I will come afterwards, and move for something more; but in order to remove their scrupies upon that head, I am a gentleman born, a man of honour, a great Minister, in whom parliament may could be; and I here pledge myself, that I will not, upon the sacredness of my word, ever go farther than this conciliatory bill.

This Lord, however, did himself, in the year 1778, go farther, and appoint a commission to give up the dependency of America.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, there was no accounting for the credulity, the fervility, and the meanness of Parliament, in either believing, or submitting to receive all the monstrous and incredible stories which they had been told by the Minister (Lord North), in any other way, than by referring to the means which influence possesses, the emoluments of contracts, and the profits of a loan. It had no doubt been the study of the Minister to tell his friends, that their payment, like his own bread, depended on the American war.

31.

8,

Ne

ke

rd

on

to ne

nd ve

an

m lf,

d,

8,

be

1-

e

у

У

d

y

The American war begot extraordinaries; extraordinaries begot loans; loans begot douceurs; and douceurs begot me 'ers of parliament; and members of parliament again begot all these things. There was a mutual dependence amongst them absolutely inseparable. Thus, the power and the security of the Minister was generated by that war which was the ruin of the country.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, if any one should ask the Minister out of the House concerning the majorities he found; and he should be inclined to answer the question fairly and directly, he would immediately say, "Do not I give them an extravagant loan to divide amongst them?"

Same Day.

Mr. For faid, it was impossible that peace with America could ever be obtained but by a renunciation of that system which the present Minister (Lord North) had with to much foreitude adhered to; and here was another obstacle arising from the noble Lord's feelings. "Oh! space my beautiful system," he would cry. "What, shall I part from that, which has been the glory of the present reign, which has extended the dominions, raised the reputation, and replenished the sinances of my country! No, for God's sake, let this be adhered to, and do with all the rest what you please; deprive me, if you please, of my poor situation; take all my power, all my honour and consequence, but but spare my beautiful system: Oh! spare my system."

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the Minister knowing this fact, knowing that he lived and must die with the American war, had encountered shame, and embraced it, in order to its continuance. A love of office had forced him into all those vile measures of contradiction and absurdity, which had brought infamy on the present age, and would bring ruin on posterity.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the Minister found it necessary to protract the American war, to avoid every tendency to pacification; because he knew the continuance of it was necessary to his remaining in power and place. He facrificed honour and duty; he facrificed the interests, and perhaps the existence of the country, to the temporary gratification of his avarice and ambition.

Same Day

Mr. Fox faid, supposing the Minister (Lord North) conversing with dependent members of Parliament, at his levee, on the subject of continuing the American war; in case any remonstrances should be made on that score, what would the noble Lord say? "Why, you know that this war is a matter of necessity, and not of choice; you see the difficulties to which I am driven, and to which I have reduced my country; and you know also, that I am, in my own private character, a lover of peace. For what reason then do I persist, in spite of conviction? For your benefit alone! for you I have violated the most facred engagements! for you rejected the suggestions of reafon! for you a thousand times forfeited my honour and veracity in this business! and for you I must still persist! Without the American war I shall have no places, no emcluments to bestow, not a single loan to negotiate; nor shall I be able to retain this poor fituation of mine, that I have long held thus difinterestedly .-- Put an end to the American war, and you undo all. My power will be miferably leffened, and your pay as miserably reduced. As to myself, why, I am perfectly indifferent about that; I get a little, and it is my happiness, thank Heaven, that a little contents me.

June 8.

Mr. ΓM faid, the revenue was, and ought to be confidered as diffinct from fovereignty; at least, it ought not to be afferted, that, because we had sovereignty, we had also a right to collect the revenue in our own way, without consulting those who were to pay it. By the experience we had in the American contest, we had furely discovered, that robbery was not only difgraceful, but that it was also ruinous. Had not the noble Lord yet felt enough of the confequences of robber; ? In the beginning of that struggle, so disliked was the principle, it was even faid, that if the Colonies were to fend us revenue, voted

31. vf-

Wcan in ced and lent

y to ency of it lace.

e in-, to ion.

rib) ent, menade Thy.

> and am try; vate

> > hen do

in their own affemblies, we ought not to accept of it. Now, however, that maxim was abandoned with respect to America, and we saw, by the letter of one of our governors in the London Gazette, that we were happy to accept of revenue voted in any manner. It was abandoned with respect to America, but it was yet ventured with respect to the East Ladies. He (Mr. Fox) reprobated the whole of this conduct, as impolitic, absurd, and abominable. The acquisitions of territory had been made for the purposes of commerce, under the express sanction of a Charter; and, unless Government paid the expence incurred in the conquests, they had not a right to them.

June 11.

Mr. Fox faid, in what light ought the bill (for paying into the Exchequer the balances in the hands of public accountants) to be regarded, but as an act of the greatest cruelty, of the greatest violence, of the greatest oppression? as the act of an indolent Minister, who sleeps over the public concern; who is profuse and extravagant beyond all bounds in his corruption one day, and rapacious, and hurries after money the next; who cares not how much he wastes, provided he can by any means, no matter how unjust, bow unwarrantable, seize upon more, to use to the same wicked and detestable purpose.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke faid, the noble ord (Lord North) had been ſ.

it.

e-

of

re

Ιt

as

He

as of ce,

le/s sts,

for nds

act

of

Ai-

is or -

10-es,

ift,

me

a Ca

n

been fuckled with the milk of the Treasury and Exchequer; he had grown fat upon it; and he was enamoured of, and attached to, the old habits. "Train a child in the very that he should go, and in his old-ege he will not depart from it." This was exactly the case with the noble Lord; he had been brought up among the abuses of the Treasury and Exchequer, and he could not now depart from them.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the whole evil (of not collecting the balances in the hands of public accountants), he infifted on it, lay with the Board of Treasury, and the noble Lord (Lord Norto) in the blue ribbon, whom he charged with the grossest indolence and negligence.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke, in a speech of the most poignant ridicule, charged the noble Lord (Lord North) with having, on that day, given at once the most explicit evidence of his activity and negligence, of his capacity and incapacity. He had shewn, that, as First Lord of the Treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer, he had been negligent or incapable of his duty; and at the same time he had shewn, by his speech of that day, that he had both the talents and the industry to comprehend what his duty was. He had been incapable or negligent in the execution; but he was active and able in the conception of his trust.

If he (Mr. Fox) knew what the language of defpair was, the noble Lord (Lord North) had talked it, and that in the warmest and most expressive manner, by impudently daring, at a time when the country was spending millions upon millions in carrying on the war, to stand up in his place, and to boast our having been able to act on the defensive. He used the word impudently, because he knew no other word in the English language, which so properly expressed the sense he had of the noble Lord's conduct.

November 27.

Mr. Fox faid, the address moved for was the most extraordinary ever feen;—he must pause a while on the audacity of the Minister, (for he could give it no gentler term,) in daring to put fuch language, as he had, into the mouth of the Sovereign. If men were unacquainted with the nature of our constitution, and knew not that the speech was contrived by a Cabinet Council, what would they pronounce the prefent speech from the throne to be? What! but that it was the speech of some arbitrary, despotic, hardhearted, and unfeeling Monarch, who, having involved the flaves, his fubjects, in a ruinous and unnatural war, to glut his enmity, or to fatiate his revenge, was determined to perfevere, in spite of calamity, and even of fate. In short, this was the language that the speech really spoke: " Much has been lost; much blood, much treasure has been squandered:

dered; the burthens of my people are intolerable; but my passions are yet ungratisted; my object of subjugation, and of revenge, is yet unfinished, and therefore I am determined to persevere." This was the language; and for this language the Minister is answerable.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord in the blue ribbon had afcribed the American war, and all the calamities of it, to the speeches of Opposition. Oh, miserable and unfortunate Minister! oh, blind and incapable man! whole measures are fo framed, and with such little fore-fight, and executed with fuch little firmness, that they not only crumble to pieces, but bring on the ruin of his country, merely because one rash, weak, or wicked man, in the House of Commons, makes a speech against him! What a miserable statesman must be be, who frames his measures in so weak and wretched a manner, as to allow for no contingencies of fortune, nor provides for the rash passions; and fay, if it pleases the House, the wicked passions of men! Could be expect that there would be no rash, no weak, no wicked man in the House; or was he so rath, fo weak, and fo wicked, as to contrive meafures of such a texture, that the intervention of any unforeseen circumstance would break them to pieces, and with their failure destroy the empire of which they have the government.

I 2

Same

ked
nanntry
the navthe

lin

fled

31.

de-

nost
e on t no
s he were ion, abifent it it ard-inunre-alalanbeen nan-

ed;

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, that Ministers must expect to hear of the American war, and the calamities of it, again and again. They would be obliged not only to hear of them in that House, but he trusted, that by the aroused inaignation and vengeance of an injured and undene people, they must mean of them at the tribunal of justice, and explate them on the public scaffold.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke with great warmth reprobated the language of the noble Lord. He averred that it was impudent, it was audacieus; it was fomething worse—it was insulting in his M. jesty's Minister, this same noble Lord (Lord North), to look Parliament in the face, and talk so impudently as he had heard from his mouth. He said, if there could be a greater missortune than those we had undergone, in the difgraceful contest we were engaged in, it was hearing the Minister rise up in the great assembly of the Nation to vindicate his measures; it was the most alarming part of our condition; it was that which froze up his blood, and harrowed up his soul.

Same Day,

Mr. Eurke said, he could not but speak a few words on those rights, which had cost us so much, and which were likely to cost us our all. Good God! exclaims the Honourable Gentleman, are we yet to be told or the rights for which we went to war? Oh, excellent ŗ.

ar

in

ar

10

12 -

ıΕ

ΙE

n-

as

ne

in

m

er

if-

hg

a-

n-

20 ds

nd

X-

be

X-

ne

Same Day.

right, we must do it.

Mr. Burke exclaimed, Oh! infatuated man! (looking over to Lord North) miserable and undone country! not to know that right signified nothing withput might; that the claim, without the power of enforcing forcing it, was nugatory and idle, in the copyhold of rival states, or of immense bodies. Oh! says the stilly man, still of his prerogative of dominion over a few beasts of the field, there is excellent wool on the back of a Wolf, and therefore he must be sheared. What! shear a Wolf? Yes. But will he comply? have you considered the trouble? how will you get this wool? Oh! says he, I have considered nothing, and I will consider nothing, but my right. A wolf is an animal that has wool; all animals that have wool are to be shorn, and therefore I will shear the wolf.—This was just the kind of reasoning urged by the noble Lord, and this the council given by him.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke faid, that a day of reckoning would come, and whenever that day came, he should be able, by impeachment, to bring upon the heads of the authors of our calamities, The punishment they deserved.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, the address moved for was a delusion; and he was not a little amazed to hear the learned Lord (Lord Advocate) make it an argument, that, if it was a delusion, it could not last above a week. Good God! did the noble and learned Lord know so very little of the Minister, as to imagine, that the shortness of time, which a delusion could exist, was any reason for his not practising it? The noble Lord dealt in cheats and delusions; they were 81.

old

the

ver

on

ed.

y >

zet

ıg,

is ol

ble

10,

Y

u-

E-

e

a

d

the daily traffic of his invention. A week! the noble Lord had often held out a cheat for half that time; for a day only; nay, for a fingle hour. He had practifed cheats upon the House, which died away even before the debate ended to favour which they were contrived. Had not the House seen the noble Lord cheat upon the subject of the conciliatory proposition? Had they not witnessed his dexterity in laying down his own cheat upon that occasion, and his adopting another which he thought he played off more advantageously? The noble Lord would continue to play off his cheats on that House, as long as he thought it necessary, and had money enough at command to bribe gentlemen to pretend that they believed him.

November 30.

Mr. Fox attacked Lord North, and with great warmth accused him of making the most shuffling shuffle that ever was attempted in the most shuffling times.

Same day.

Mr. Fox said, that, with respect to the letter which the noble Lord (Lord North) had received from the Honourable Admiral, acquainting him, that the capture of Saint Eustatia was a very rich one, and that it all, every farthing of it, was the property of the Crown; he could not but admire, that such a Minister as we had, who was an eld Minister, and a full-grown Minister, should come to the House, and tell them, that he had received a letter from the Admirate that he had received the had receive ral, informing him, that every thing at Saint Eustatia was the property of the Crown, in answer to the proposed inquiry. From such conduct, the Minister might naturally be concluded a very young man, with a large napkin under bis chin. The letter he thought more proper to have been sent to the Attorney General; but he supposed the noble Lord, who acted on the occasion as a lawyer, and sent word to the Admiral that the property was all his, as the Attorney General would have done, bad taken a fee for his advice.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord, with regard to the question before the House, might do as he pleased with it. He might cut it and mangle it just as he pleased; but though he should cut it into a thousand pieces, if he got but any part of it, it would be sufficient for him. But the noble Lord had divided his motion in a manner that put him in mind of a murderer, who, having amputated all the limbs of a child, threw them different ways, in order that the sather might be employed in picking them up, instead of pursuing the murderer.

February 1, 1782.

Mr. Burke, in the feverest and most pointed language, attacked the noble Lord (Lord North), for declaring that the contract made with Mr. Townson, by the Board of Ordnance, for 400 tons of salt-petre, was a matter in which he was not immediately concerned.

r c h

to

M

cb

wit low me

N and

oth

cerned. What! (fays he) is it not the business of the First Lord of the Treasury to see that money matters of fuch consequence should be stated fairly and justly, previous to their being brought before the House? Was it not his business to have enquired into it? Most certainly it was; and I am convinced too, so important a transaction could never have been done without his management and confent: in which case, I say, be has CHEATED the public. [Mr. Burke was here interrupted by a loud cry for Order !]

February 4.

Mr. Fox faid, that the noble Lord in the blue ribbon (Lord North) had no hand in making the contract for falt-petre with Mr. Townson, was what he could readily believe; for if he had, he would have made it at the highest price, namely, 153l. per . ton; the same as he did the contract for rum with Mr. Atkinson, where he suffered himself first to be cheated, and then, in return, cheated the public.

February 19.

Mr. Fox faid, the Minister had found out the true wit of the levelling principle, and discovered that lowering all men to his own baseness, was the only means of keeping the people in humour with each other.

February 22.

Mr. Fox was exceedingly severe on the Minister, and was glad to find that he had discovered who that K evil

ura he ad 17or n, e, n-

d.

782.

ista-

the

fter

vith

ght

ne-

on

Ad-

ney

bis

the

fed

he

 \mathbf{nd}

uf-

his

evil spirit was that conducted all our mischiefs; it was a person in a higher situation than the noble Lord in the blue ribbon; for the noble Lord was only his pupper, and acted as he was told.

Same Day.

Lord North said, the conduct of the Right Honourable Gentleman, and Opposition, was of the most unaccountable nature. They were constantly calling on him for explanation, and for information, in respect to this and that measure; and yet, in the very same breath, trey said, they would not give the smallest credit to a word be said. This conduct, he shid, was a paradox; it was contradictory and puerile.
Such inconsistent investive was the strongest proof that office, and not the measures of the Miner, was the primary cause of the attacks of Opposition.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke blamed the noble Lord's (Lord North's) conduct for the whole of his proceedings respecting the loan. The last year he made an INFAMOUS bargain in a bungling manner; he now wished to make a bargain equally advantageous, to influence with more safety: and he declared, that Parliament ought, if they were honest, to curb a practice, which, above all others, was destructive of their independence.

March 4:

Mr. Fox faid, the nation would not fuffer lofs, difgrace, and calamity, without calling their rulers to a the antly tion, in the e the control of that as the

2.

it ble

was

ecting iOUS ted to huence ament which, inde-

s, difrs to a fevere severe account. Would they now suffer loss after loss, and difafter after difafter? Were they so habituated to defeat? Had Ministry made them fo familiar with forrow, that they could now bear any lofs without at all complaining? He hoped not. He had that day heard of another loss-be meant St. Kitt's was taken. He defired the M nifter would inform the House if it was true that this calamity had also come upon us, and where he meant to stop-when he would confess that he had done enough. his foul, he (Mr. Fox) believed, that fuch was his accurfed obstinacy, that even when he had lost ninetenths of the King's dominions, he would not be fatisfied till he had mangled and destroyed the last miserable tenth also-pride and oblinacy were so predominant in his nature.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, the people heard of our triumphs without pleasure; they heard of his Majesty's victories without any gladness; the stocks remained the same; the faces of men wore the same gloom: but that, on the instant a victory was gained over his Majesty's Ministers, whom they considered as the greatest enemies of their country, their joy was immoderate, the funds were immediately advanced, and the credit of the nation raised, because a prospest opened itself of the Minister's going out of place.

Same Day,

Mr. Fox faid, the end of the American war K 2 coming coming as it did, had completely and effectually deflroyed corruption; the reign of it was over. If the conquest had come sooner, before we had been so instigated against the baneful consequences of a system of corruption, perhaps there might have been contrived some paltry and insignisheant COALITIONS, that would have made the system more palatable.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, our affairs were fo circumstanced, that Ministers must lose their places, or the country must be undone. He would therefore let them enjoy those emoluments which they held so dear, provided he could fave his country: for this end, he was willing to ferve them, in the business of peace, in any capacity, even as an under commis, or messenger. But, in so doing, he defired it might be underflood, that HE did not mean to have any connenion with them: From the moment when he SHOULD MAKE ANY TERMS WITH ONE OF THEM. he would rest satisfied to be called the most infamous of mankind. He could not for an infrant think of a COALITION with men, who, in every public and private transaction, as Ministers, had shewn themselves void of every principle of honour or honesty: in the hands of fuch men, he would not trust his honour, even for a minute!

32.

le-

he fo

m

on-

d,

try

n-ro-

he

ce.

ner-

n-

HE

M, ie

ld

N

n

 bf

 \mathbf{f}

ηÇ

Same Day.

Lord North said, the Honourable Gentleman was kind enough to offer his fervices in a negotiation. but he would not take any part of the affairs of the public with the present Administration; and the reafon he affigned was, that he could not trust his honour in their hands for a moment, that were without any principle of honour or honesty. Those were good and fubstantial reasons, and better certainly could not be affigned; and the same should serve him against the Honourable Member. He would never employ a person who publicly declared that he could not have a confidence in him. He was intitled to SAY JUST AS MUCH OF THE HONOURABLE GENTLE-MAN, AND THEREFORE HE WOULD NOT TRUST HIS HONOUR IN THE HANDS OF THAT GENTLEMAN; and, thinking of him as he did, he was determined never to all with him as a negotiator.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, he did not wonder the noble Lord (Lord North) was at a loss about new taxes; for what fresh burthen could he add to this unhappy nation? We were already taxed, if we rode, or if we walked; if we stayed at home, or if we went abroad; if we were masters, or if we were servants; if we drank wine, or if we drank beer; and, in stort, we were taxed in every possible way. Thus, after being taxed in the manner mentioned, he had endeavoured to see how the account would stand, when viewed in a mercantile form, and the first thing was, Debtor by loss, for a Creditor fide, and what rendered it more curious v.s, that there it stood Creditor by Loss; we had purchased one Hundred Million worth of national disasters; and the whole, when in one view, appeared as follows:

Debtor by Lofs.

One Hundred Millions of Money.

Creditor by Lofs.

One Hundred Thousand Men, and the loss of Maffachusets

Pennfylvania

New-York

Virginia

Maryland

South Carolina

North Carolina

Florida

Georgia

Delaware

New Jersey

Rhode Island

Connecticut

New Hampshire

St. Vincent

Grenada

Dominica

Tobago

St. Christopher's

Senegal

Pensacola, and

Minorca;

Which, at a moderate computation, produced to this country annually,

Four Millions and Fifty Thousand Pounds!

After

82.

ted

ous

ıad

nal

red

nd

 \mathbf{d}

7,

У,

r'

After all this, Mr. Burke said, the noble Lord had told them, he would continue in his office out of gratitude to the people. Gratitude! the noble Lord's gratitude! Oh, Sir, said Mr. Burke, addressing himfelf to the Chair, the noble Lord's gratitude is like that of another fallen angel like himself, described by the Poet:

The debt immense of endless gratitude, So burthensome, still paying, still to owe.

So with the noble Lord; his debt immense of gratitude was endless, and could never be discharged; and therefore he had presumed to fly in their face, and to insult them with such language as ought to be reprobated by every man who had a sense of the decency due to Parliament from the noble Lord, and how ill it became him, of all men, to say, that he would continue in his office out of gratitude.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox attacked the noble Lord (Lord North) with uncommon warmth. The noble Lord had, at length, confessed himself totally exhausted in point of finance, and no longer able to raise taxes to pay the interest of a debt occasioned by his cursed American war: the people were burthened, and so loaded with innumerable oppressions, that even the poble Lord was at a loss how to distress them any farther. His constituents, he said, felt severely the evil effects of the noble Lord's administration; and, indeed, the whole nation selt them too severely; for he

he had, by a determined obstinacy to keep in place, ruined above nine-tenths of the British dominions, and seemed equally determined to ruin what little remained. The noble Lord had lately talked of his gratitude, and that he only stayed in office to see his country righted. In the name of God, what good could the country expect from a man, whose whole administration had been one continued series of blunders? From the noble Lord's confession, he had proved himself, what he always took him for, viz. an ignorant and a bad sinancier; a man totally unacquainted with the resources of the country, and certainly unsit and unworthy of the office he beld.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, the greatest piece of delusion the noble Lord had been guilty of, was the keeping the nation in a profound darkness with respect to the state of their affairs. He deluded them by a set of taxes, which they were led to believe were sufficient for the purpose intended; therefore the public suffered him to go on, not knowing their situation: if they did, long before this would they have cried out, and have awakened from that state of lethargy which had been so disgraceful to them, and so ruinous to their country.

March 8.

Mr. Burke faid, the noble Lord in the blue ribbon had declared that he never would quit his office until he could quit it with honour; he therefore congratulated

82.

ce,

ns,

tle

his

nis

od ole

of

ıd

z.

C-

Įу

lated the House on the happy prospect they had of keeping the noble Lord in office; for if he never quitted his post until he could quit it with bonour, he would be bound to say, that he would remain in it till the last hour of his life.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox, in an excellent speech of argument and explanation, declared, that he would be an infamous man, who should, upon coming into place, abandon the principles and professions which he had made when out of place. He was happy to say, that every principle he ever held had been adopted by a majority of that House, the decision of which had given fanction to his opinions,

Same Day.

Mr. Fox said, it had been thought that he gave out, that there would be formed an Administration of proscription. This he positively denied; on the contrary, it was the desire of those with whom he had the honour to act, to form an Administration on the broadest basis; an Administration which should take in all that was great and dignisted in the empire; to collect all the ability, the talents, the consideration, and the weight of the nation; to draw within its arms every man of influence, every man of popularity, every man of knowledge, every man of experience, without regarding his particular opinion on abstract points, and unite and employ all this body of strength to one great end, the deliverance of the empire. He had faid only, that he could form no connection with the present Cabinet; THAT HE SHOULD BE INFAMOUS IF HE DID.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox faid, in explanation of his description of the broad-bottomed Administration which his friends desired to form, that he would proscribe no men of any principles, in the present dreadful moment, but the five or six men who were now, and had been, the considertial advisers of his Majesty in all the measures that had brought about the present calamities.

March 11.

Mr. Fox faid, the noble Lord (Lord North) had talked in a taunting manner, and had jeeringly called the majority a glorious majority: however he might be inclined, in general, to be diverted with the noble Lord's pleafantry, Mr. Fox faid, he could not approve pleafantry at an improper time. God knew, that was no hour for merriment; and he begged the noble Lord to remember, that his jests had already cost the nation dear enough.

March 20.

Intimation of a Change of Ministry.

Mr. Burke faid, that that was not a moment of levity or exultation; he regarded it with a calmness of content, a placid joy, a serene satisfaction: he looked forward with sear and trembling; but the present

ady

A. 1782.] FOX, NORTH, AND BURKE. 75

present was a moment of great awfulness; and every Gentleman who expected to form a part of the new Administration, or intended to support it, ought to question themselves, examine their own hearts, and fee whether they had been acting upon principles that were strictly right, and upon which they could continue to all in power, as firmly as they had continued to all upon them, while out of power. If, upon fuch an examination, any Gentleman found he could not, that man, be he who he would, ought not to accept of power. The prefent, he farther faid, was that peculiar period of men's lives, when their ambitious views, that had lain fecretly in the corner of their hearts, almost undiscovered to themselves, were unlocked; when their prejudices operated most forcibly: when all their defires, their felf-opinions, their vanity, their avarice, their lust of power, and all the work paffions of the human mind, were fet at large, and began to shew themselves. At such a time, let will take care what they did, how far they went, and will limits they prescribed to themselves.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, that a most wonderful deal of eloquence had been heard within the House, and men of the sirst and rarest talents had exerted themselves extremely to bring about what the noble Lord in the blue ribbon had that day declared to be near at hand. But neither the abilities of the one, nor the eloquence of the other description of persons, had tended fo much towards the accomplishment of that which was fo near at hand, as the spirit of the people, and the conduct of the independent members, who best spoke that spirit. They had seen for a length of years a spirit of corruption going on; and they had feen it with melancholy minds; for, from the immense power of that corruption, from the tower with which it was furrounded and fortified, they faw no hopes of ever being able to overthrow it. For a long time, therefore, they were inactive by dejection; they were rendered submissive by despair; and this fatal torpor gave new and additional strength to the enemy; it gave them the most decisive advantage of all others,—the appearance of stability, by which the weak were feduced to join them, and the wicked were confirmed. When you were thus erroneously and criminally negligent, they were fafe; but when at length, urged by the accumulated diftreffes of your country, when you faw there were no expectations from your patience, and that there was even no prospect from hope, you aroused from your lethargy, and teftified the force of independence. When you joined together in one voice, one mind, and one action, you found that that only which lived by your fubmission, sunk instantly beneath your attack. He begged them, therefore, to recollect what their conduct had been hitherto, what their conduct had principally accomplished, and what ought to be their conduct in future. The removal of Ministers was one great point gained; but the end that every

2.

of

he

11-

or 1;

or, he

d,

it.

le-

۲.,

th

n-

bу

he r_

; i[-

10

as

ar

e.

h

r

every lover of his country must look up to, and ardently defire, was not by any means achieved by the mere removal of Ministers. Much, and the most essential part of the work remained to be performed, and nothing could ensure the completion of the business, but the steadiness of the House, and, above all, the firmness of the independent members: the new Administration was the work of their hands; it was their duty to give it that support, without which it was impossible for it to subsist. There was a certain fatality attending human nature, which very often defeated the belt of purposes; for the greatest virtues were frequently accompanied with the greatest defects: independence, and public spirit, were attended with indolence and fupineness; and those gentlemen who had effected the great change of Ministry, might lose all the benefits which might have been expected, by indolence and inactivity. Their support should be zealous and unremitting: no administration could exift long without fupport; and when, abandoned by the independent interest, Minusters had hitherto reforted to the detettable means of corruption; but in that they were not fo much to blame as the independent gentlemen who fusiered them to do it. Government could only exist in two ways; by its purity, wisdom, and success, which secured to it the love and support of the virtuous and independent; or it must exist by means of corruption, which brought to its aid the needy and the profligate: and as Government must be supported—the independent gentlemen tlemen ought to take to themselves blame, if they forced a virtuous administration to resort to corruption: he repeated it, therefore, that their support ough: to be fleady, uniform, and active; and the more fo, as the Ministers who were retiring, were not going out in consequence of an address of that day ; they were not tired of their places, and their Sovereign was not tired of them; and therefore the work of the independent gentlemen would be incomplete, if they did not refolve to support their own administration with zeil and perseverance. The necessity of this advice made him the more earnest in giving it; and he hoped in God now to fee an administration formed, not only of independence, but of folid, fubstantial, and permanent power. He hoped, in God, that we should now have an opportunity of perceiving bow much more beneficial to a country, as well as honourable, A GOVERNMENT OF VIRTUE WAS, THAN A GOVERNMENT OF CORRUPTION.

April 8.

Mr. Secretary Fox said, that not a single day would be lost, until restraining the influence of the Crown, and settling upon more equal grounds the representation of the people, was fulfilled. To correct the abuses in influence and representation, would be the steady endeavours of his Majesty's Ministers.

April 9.

Mr. Secretary Fox faid, every one who had heard the the learned Lord (the Lord Advocate) fo ably and fo powerfully state our situation in the east, would perceive that he held up a mirror, which reflected our situation in the west. The effects of the pernicious fystem, which thank God was at last destroyed, were now felt in every corner of the empire; but his Majesty's present servants were determined to govern by more virtuous means. There was one propofition made by the learned Lord, he faid, did not meet his wishes; and that was, THE TAKING FROM THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY, and placing under the direction of the Crown, the entire management of our territorial acquisitions in the east. This he could not approve of, consistent with his regard to the Crown, and the constitution of this country. would afford to Government fuch ample means of corruption and undue influence, as might in the end overthrow the whole constitution, and deprive us of our best and dearest rights; and on this account, HE THOUGHT IT WOULD BE MORE PRUDENT TO LEAVE THE APPOINT-MENT OF ITS OWN SERVANTS TO THE COMPANY.

ÿ

1-

d,

in

of 15 s,

C

d n

April 15.

Mr. Secretary Fox acquainted the House, that he had a message from his Majesty, and he presented the same to the House. It was read by Mr. Speaker, and was as follows:

"GEORGE R.

" His Majesty, taking into consideration the supplies which have been given with fo much liberality, and supported with such uncommon firmness and fortitude by his people in the present extensive war, recommends to his faithful Commons the confideration of an effectual plan of economy through all the branches of the public expenditure; towards which important object, his Majesty has taken into his actual confideration, a form and regulation in the civil establishment, which he will shortly cause to be laid before this House, defiring their affistance towards carrying the fame more fully into execution, His Majesty has no referves with his people, on whose affections he rests with a fure reliance, as the best support of the true honour of his Crown and government; and as they have hitherto been his best support and refource upon every emergency, so he regards them as the most solid and stable security for an honourable provision for his person and family.

G. R."

Mr. Burke then rose, and in a most elegant speech congratulated the House, and the kingdom, on the happy æra when his Majesty, freed from that secret and injurious counsel which stood between him and his people, now spoke to them in the pure and rich benevolence of his own heart. The message which they had just heard, was the genuine essuin of his Majesty's

e fuprality, is and e war, onfideigh all owards n into in the to be ice toution. whofe e best d gos best

1. 1782.

?." peech

fo he ty for ily.

h the ecret and rich hich his fty's

Majesty's paternal care and tenderness for his subjects. It was what good subjects deserved from a good King; and every man would rejoice in, and bleis the day. when his Majesty, restored to the dignished independence of his elevated fituation, was able to speak to his people in the language of his own heart; to participate in their fufferings; to praise and reward them for their fortitude. IT WAS THE BEST OF MESSAGES TO THE BEST OF PEOPLE, FROM THE BEST OF KINGS.

July 9.

Conversation on the Division of the Cabinet.

Mr. Fox faio, one would naturally imagine, in an administration formed on the principles of the men distinguished by the Rockingham's, that upon the decease of that great man, whose virtues, whose nobleness of thinking, and whose firm integrity bound them together, the man would be fought, and appointed to fucceed him, who most resembled him in character, in influence, in popularie : fuch at least were his ideas, and the eyes of all men were naturally turned to the Duke of Portland. Inflea of that noble person, however, the Earl of Shelburne was selected, of whom, if he meant to describe the character, he could not truly fay he bore any kind of refemblance to his predecessor; perhaps the exact reverse might come nearer the picture. Perhaps it might be asked, why, thinking as he did of the Earl of Shelburne, he came with him into office at all? To this he must answer, that he had strong obiections ijections to it, and both with respect to him, and to another noble person, (the Lord Chancellor) the only thing that could make him submit to associate with them in office, was the satisfactory pledge which he had for the integrity of administration, of which he made a part, in the noble Marquis being at the head of it.

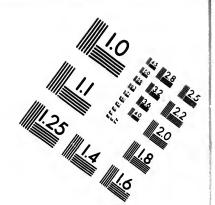

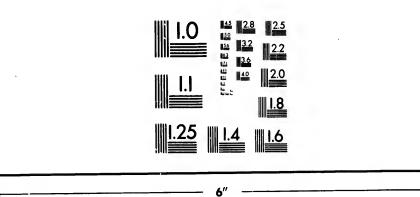

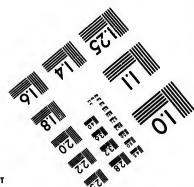

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580 (716) 872-4503

The country had now an administration, which could not be a popular one. It was the administration of a man who could not think of reformation with temper, however loudly he might speak about it; a man who would declare, that the influence of the Crown ought to be diminished; but who would at the same time say, that the King had a right to use his negative in passing laws, and would threaten with the exercise of that negative all those that should move any bills that went to retrenchment. Such was the man now at the head of the Treasury; THE PRINCIPLES OF THE LATE MINISTRY WERE NOW IN THE CABINET, and the next thing he should look for, WOULD BE TO SEE THE LATE MINISTERS AGAIN IN OFFICE.

March 28, 1783.

Lord North said, that notwithstanding the severe resections cast on the coalition, it would be found that neither party had given up their sentiments, yet they could act together for the public good. The Honourable Mr. Fox and himself undoubtedly agreed

o

y

e

e

d

h

n

f

d

o

n

d

ıs

E

Y

۲t

E

e

d et

e

d

n

on many great points; and as they were known to the House, there was no occasion to repeat them.

Same Day.

Mr. Fox got up and defended nimfelf on the coalition between him and Lord North: he faid, if none were to be admitted to take a part in the admimistration, as mentioned by the noble Lord, but those whose political sentiments never disagreed, it would be difficult, indeed, to form an administration.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke rose, and in a full, clear, and manly way, vindicated the parliamentary conduct he had observed for a period of more than eighteen years: he had constantly voted on the same side with those noble and sirm supporters of the constitution (the house of Cavendish), and he trusted he always should; he had been blamed for joining the coalition, but be made no doubt a time would come, when he should have it in his power to convince those persons, who now railed so bitterly against it, that they were entirely wrong, and doing more hurt than they probably expected, or could compensate their country for.

April 25.

Mr. Fox took notice of a charge just made, that a coalition had been formed for the purpose of seizing upon the reins of the Government. He insisted upon it, that it was a rash expression; for the late Ministry had been driven from their station, the same as he hoped every Ministry who acted wrong would be, by a majority of that House. It was by a majority of that House that the former Ministry were removed; and of which all ranks approved. The late Ministry had been removed in the same manner; but be certainly could make allowances for bonourable Gentlemen seeing things in different lights; it was extremely natural; different situations threw different colours on the same objects. Gentlemen, he was aware, were led, from different circumstances, to see the same things in different points of view, and to colour them accordingly.

Same Day.

Mr. Burke said, that, if he held improper language in that House, he might be called to an account for it in a parliamentary way: if called to an account out of the House, he would answer it in a Gentleman's way; but no danger, no bullying, no threat, should ever prevent him from doing his duty; and he pledged himself to God, to his country, to that House, and to the unfortunate and plundered inhabirants of India, that he would bring to justice, as far as in him lay, the greatest delinquent that India ever faw. With regard to loofe accusations, he was far above them. When he charged Mr. Hastings, he would do it by alleging fome specific fact of criminality. To act otherwise, was something worse than acting ungenerously; it was to act the part of a calumniator, a part which he would never confent to perform.

perform. Mr. Burke reasoned a good deal in terms of Painting, upon overcharging a picture with colour, in order to hide an imperfect outline; and declared he would take care that his drawing should be correct and perfect, before he put on any colouring at all.

December 1.

Mr. Fox said, an Honourable Gentleman under the gallery (Mr. Martin), to whom an abuse of the Coalition seemed a fort of luxury, wishes that a starling were at the right-hand of the Chair, to cry out, Disgraceful Coalition!—Sir, upon this subject I shall say but a few words:

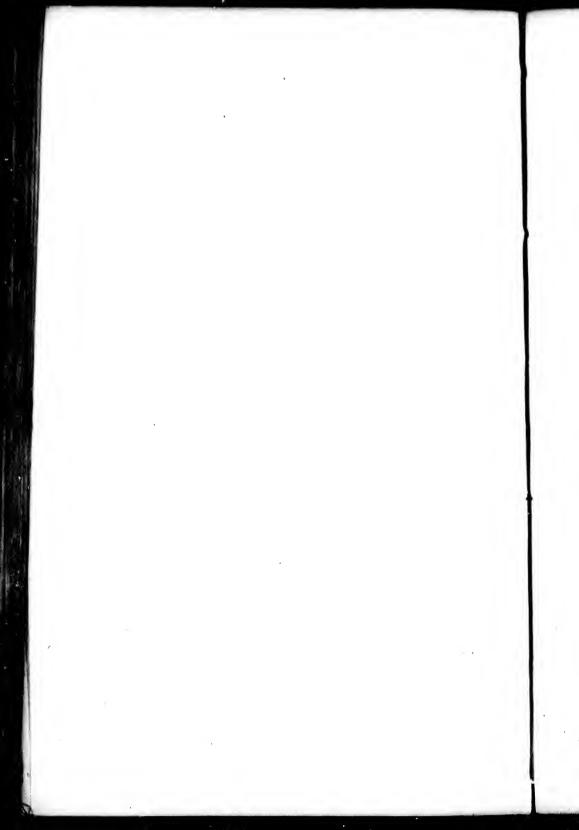

The calamitous situation of this country required an administration whose stability could give it a tone of sirmness with foreign nations, and promise some hopes of restoring the saded glories of the country. Such an administration could not be formed without some junction of parties; and if former differences were to be an insurmountable barrier to union, no chance of salvation remained for the country, as it was well known that four public men could not be found, who had not, at one time or other, taken opposite sides in politics. The great cause of difference between me and the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, is no longer in existence; HIS PERSONAL CHARACTER STOOD HIGH, and we preferred uniting with the noble Lord.

December 22.

Lord North went into a defence of the union of parties parties upon which he had last come into office. He faid, he hoped what was now obvious, would at least prove an ample justification of what had again and again been called a curfed coalition; and that it would be feen, that curfed coalition was not, as it had been stated, an infamous abandonment of principle, from an eagerness to grasp at power, a temporary junction of no folid basis, and held together for the fole purpose of a temporary tenure of place. It had been pretty much the habit of fome gentlemen to rife for the fole purpose of talking of the coalition in terms of reprobation, and in terms of fcandal; they had, indeed, been fufficiently liberal of attack, but abundantly sparing of argument: but as he had a long while observed, that certain words had been got by rote, rather than that new matter of argument was started against the coalition, when it had been lately recommended to have a Starling brought, for the express purpose of being placed on one side of the Speaker's chair, in order to cry out, Coalition! cursed coalition! he could no otherwife folve the proposition, than by supposing, that from the tedious repetition of the same word, so often by the same person, the gentleman wished to be eased from the fatigue of the office he had imposed upon himself, and therefore proposed to do it by deputy. There would henceforth, however, he trusted, be no occasion for the deputy nor the principal, because he conceived, that after what the house then saw, all abuse of the coalition would be at an end. His Lordship recapitulated the r

SERIES OF FACTS,

Candidly submitted to the consideration of those who have the effrontery to attempt to justify, and the hardiness to support the Goalition formed between Lord North, the Right Honourable Charles-James Fox, and Mr. Edmund Burke.

1st. THAT Lord North, who became a Minister in 177c, and quitted in 1782, contrived in that period to double the national debt, to lose thirteen Colonies, and all our West-India islands, except Jamaica, Barbadoes, and Antigua.

2d. That his Lordship proposed and carried the India Regulating Act of 1773, to which, as the Duke of Richmond most sensibly observed, we owe all the misfortunes that have happened to us in India.

3d. That Mr. Charles James Fox, from 1770, to 1774, supported all the measures of Lord North.

4th. That Mr. Edmund Burke and his party were at that period the avowed opposers of Lord North: That in particular they applied the epithets injustice and robbery to the regulation and reform proposed by the India Bill in 1773; and that the very Mr. Edmund Burke, who in his late speech abused the Company and their servants for their transactions seventeen years ago, was in sact their avowed sup-

N

porter

porter and champion against Lord North and General Burgoyne, in 1773.

5th. That from 1774, Mr. Charles James Fox united with Mr. Edmund Burke and his party, until they drove Lord North from the helm: that in this period, they abused him in the most gross and scurrilous manner-of which almost every page in the parliamentary history will afford ample proofs. It is ridiculous and abfurd, and untrue to affert that the American war was the only subject of difference between them, for they opposed all his measures, they threatened to impeach him, they accused him of eating his words, and renouncing his principles—They accused him of indolence, ignorance, folly, and even treachery-Mr. Fox declared he would not remain in a room alone with him; and he pledged himself as folemnly as a gentleman could pledge himself, to be called the most infamous of men, if ever he united with the noble Lord, or any of those men who had brought this country to ruin.

6th. For two months after Lord North was turned out, Mr. Charles James Fox scarcely ever appeared in the House of Commons without depicting in the strongest terms the miserable and distressed state of this unfortunate country; that every hour he was in office, he had more and more reason to curse the folly or the ignorance of the late Ministers; their waste of public money, their neglect of the navy, their mad war with Holland, their employing the three last days they were in office in providing for their dependants, the only proof of activity they gave; that viewing and knowing all these things, things, though not of a fanguinary temper, their bleeding country required that they should be brought to public punishment.—Mr. Edmund Burke was at all times ready to cry "Hear, hear," or to join his right honourable friend in these lamentable strains.

il

is 1

15

hi-

he

eeу

tŧу

en

in

as

be

d .

id

t,

e ſĿ

e

e

C

7th. The famous bill of reform, by which Mr. Edmund Burke and his party so effectually gulled the public, instead of saving two or three hundred thou-fand pounds a year, when passed, did not save above thirty thousand at most.

8th. When the Marquis of Rockingham died, Lord Shelburne became the Minister. Mr. Fox and Lord John Cavendish resigned. The former abused Lord Shelburne, though not so very grossly as he had formerly abused Lord North. However, there was one expression in his abuse of that day, which surely no Englishman will avoid laying particular stress upon. "That he should not wonder to see Lord Shelburne coalesced with the old Ministry, only that the nation would not bear to be so insulted." And Mr. Edmund Burke, by way of saying the worst he possibly could of Lord Shelburne, declared, that he would, if possible, be a more destructive Minister to this country than Lord North.

9th. After Lord Shelburne had made a peace, Mr. Fox, to get possession of power again, actually joined with that very man and his party whom for eight years past he had invariably abused, as the author of all our calamities, in order to pull down the person who had given us what Mr. Fox pretended so heartily to pant for, peace, and a diminution of the public expences.

noth. Can the most ignorant man in this kingdom misunderstand the motives for the coalition? Was it not an agreement of many very needy men, several of them not possessing a shilling of property in the kingdom, in order to share the little plunder left in a country almost beggared by the folly and misconduct of one of the parties, or the intemperate opposition of the other?

11th. Distressed as the country was after the coalition took place, would not Mr. Fox and Lord North have saddled the nation with an additional burthen, amounting to forty thousand pounds a year, if our gracious sovereign had not opposed the measure, and refused to sign the message?—Can this sact be denied or explained away?

tith. That the patronage of Ministers being circumscribed by the loss of America, and the coalition standing on no other basis but that of mutual convenience and self-interest, spite of all Lord North's bluster, a plan was formed for seising all the property of the East India Company, and throwing it into the hands of the Ministers.

INDEX.

INDEX.

A.
AMERICA, the Author of the Measures against it thought by Mr. Fox bound to answer for all the Mischief and Expense of it	_
A fingular Way of recovering it, afcribed to	2
Lord North	15
Lord North suspected, detested, and despited by it Lord North centured for sending Commissioners	17
to treat for Peace 51,	52
American Disputes, charged to Lord North's Negligence and Incapacity	3
Lord North is of Opinion they will end freedily, happily, and without bloodfred
American War, Lord North's conduct respecting it ar-	5
regined by Mr. Fox	6
alfo b, Mr. Burke	6
Lord North's Reatons for continuing it -	54
Accurfed Obstinacy Lord North charged with it	67
Arbit ary Po er, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with a Defign of (preading it throughout the British Empire	10
Andacty, Lord North reprehended for it Avarice an Ambition, Lord North accused of both -	58
Axe, Lord North pronounced by Mr. Fox deferving one	23
one, more than from an end of the first of a contract of the	3 5
В.
Blundering Pilot, Mr. Fox describes Lord North as such Breach of Promise, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with a	5
Lreach of it	7
Bribery, Mr. Burke suspects Lord North of it -	7
Burke, Mr. charges Lord North with Indignity and Vileness	ŢI
censures Lord North for suspending the Habeas Corpus Act compares Lord North toSancho Panza's Physician	12
imputes the Capture of General Burgoyne to the	13
ignorance of Lord North	I 4
charges Lord North with a most remarkable In-	- 1
stance of Silliness	15
accuses Lord North of Impotence	16
charges Lord North with raising men without the Knowledge of Parliament	17
	1 X

	Page
Burke, Mr. threatens Lord North with an Investigation	1 age
into his conduct	18
reprobates Lord North's employing the Indians
accuses Lord North of Ignorance respecting	-7
the Toulon Fleet -	2.5
ridicules Lord North	21
charges Lord North, in the most direct Terms,	2.1
with the Loss of America 21
his Opinion of Responsibility	28 is put in Mind, by Lord North, of a Story of Sir Godfrey Kneller	30
detects Lord North fast affeep -	-31
pronounces the Places of Ministers not worth
his Acceptance	33
talks of impeaching Lord North -	35
defies Lord North ever to take him by the Paw	38
accuses Lord North with acting in direct Contradiction to all honest and dishonest
Politicians that ever lived	40
denies we have a Right to the territorial Revenues of the East-India Company 41, 44, 48,	49
reprobates the Minister's conduct to Ireland	3
Lord North freezes his blood, and harrows
his foul	60
threatens Lord North with impeachment	62
represents Lord North as a cheat -	62
charges him with m king an infamous Loan	66
fums up the Total of Lord North's Losses	69
his Opinion how Government ought to be	- conducted	74
his Panegyric on the best of Sovereigns	80
С.

Candour and Conscience, Mr. Burke contends, Lord North has neither one nor the other	I
Cheat, Lord North represented as one 62,	64
Goalitions, Mr. Fox speaks against them	68
Galition, Mr. Fox declares he should think himself the most infamous of Mankind, thould he ever join Lord
North,	68
Lord North defends his with Mr. Fox 82, 86,	87
Corruption, Lord North charged with having lost half the	•
Empire by it	11
Credulous Mr. Fox pronounces Lord North	10

Page

2 I 2 I

-31

3 49

68. 7

	Page
E.
East-India Company, Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against meddling with their territorial Revenue	55
Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants	79
	•
F.
Fox, Mr. charged by Lord North with indifcriminate	·
Cenfure	4
his Contempt and Pity held by Lord North in equal Indifference	6
alarms the House at the Views of Lord North	10
menaces Lord North with a Day of Reckoning	II compares Lord North to Sir Robert Walpole for Corruption, and charges him with having lost Half the Empire by it	11
a severe Charge brought against him by Lord
North	12
accuses Lord North of Pusillanimity	12
likens Lord North to Doctor Sangrado	13
threatens Lord North with an Inquiry into the Capture of General Burgoyne	15
ascribes to Lord North a singular Way of recovering America represents Lord North as suspected, detested, and	15
despised by America	T /7
pronounced Lord North the Contriver of our	17
Misfortunes	19
charged by Lord North with having gone very	• 9
near speaking Treason	19
ridicules Lord North 10	-7
pronounces Lord North deserving Censure -	20
charges Lord North with being the last to learn
what he should be the first to know -	20
accuses Lord North of having betrayed the Nation	20
declares he will never act with Lord North -	24
arraigns the Conduct of Lord North, respecting Admiral Keppel	23
accuses Lord North of Avarice and Ambition	23
charges Lord North with Partiality	24
compares Lord North with the Minister of Xerxes	25
pronounces the Views of Lord North to be dif-
honest and corrupt	27
charges Lord North with an Act of public Perfidy	31
accuses Lord North of contemning the People of England	31

1 11 1 13.	27
Fox, Mr. thought it would have been better Lord North	Page
had never been born	33
pronounces Lord North deserving an Axe —	35
disidains the Idea of joining Lord North —	37
pronounces Lord North impertinent and infulting	37
ascribes the raising an illegal Army in Ireland	31
to the ill Conduct of Lord North —	37
Lord North would rather have him for an Op-	57
ponent than Commentator	38
thinks the Influence of the Crown ought to be	Ĭ
entirely destroyed	38
alarmed at the Conduct of Lord North towards	•
the East India Company	40
condemns Lord North's System	42
censures Lord North for the Contract for Rum
made with Mr. Atkinson	43
describes Lord North's Country Gentlemen -	44
his Opinion of Lord Thurlow	45
charges Lord North with disgusting the Army
and Nevy	45
arraigns Lord North of Misconduct, Blunders,	_
and Misfortunes -	46
censures Lord North for sending Commissioners to America to treat for Peace - 51, attacks Lord North for his Abuse of his Loans	_ 52 affigns to Lord North Reasons for continuing the American War
exclaims against touching the territorial Revenue	54
of the East-India Company	ــ بــ
accuses Lord North of Robbery	55
cries out against Lord North's Mode of cailing	5 5
in the Balinces of public Accountants -	56
represents Loru North as being suckled with the	50
Milk of the Treasury	56
charges Lord North with acting impudently -	58
reprehends him for his Audacity	58
threatens Lord North with the Scaffold -	60
represents Lord North as a Shuffler	63
compares him to a Murderer	64
represents Lord North as a Cheat	64
accuses him of Baseness	65
calls him a Puppet	65.
Motives imputed to him by Lord North	66
charges Lord North with accursed Obstinacy	6 7 '
speaks against Coalition	68
would think himself the most infamous of Mankind should be join Lord North - 68, 72,	74

Lord North declares as much of Mr. Fox paints Lord North as a wretched Financier Secretary Mr. promifes to correct the Influence of the Crown thinks the India Company should have the appointment of their own Servants dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again Lord North defends his Coalition with him 82,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North H. Habeas Corpus Att, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insplent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insplent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North both Indianity and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insplitting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed a India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenue Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr. Fox chinks they should have the Appositional Revenue Mr.	I N. D E X, paints Lord North as a wretched Financier Secretary Mr. promifes to correct the Influence of the Crown thinks the India Company should have the appointment of their own Servants dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again Lord North desends his Coalition with him $2,86,8 desends his Coalition with Lord North - 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus Act, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Institute and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indiente and Temerity, Mr. Burke accused North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Institute of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	# 157 1 1 1 1 C 5 7	Pag
Secretary Mr. promises to correct the Influence of the Crown thinks the India Company should have the appointment of their own Servants dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again Lord North defends his Coalition with him $2,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus At, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North both Indeence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with of both Indeency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Injulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Insulate of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Treland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Lord North declares as much of Mr. Fox	69
thinks the India Company should have the appointment of their own Servants dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again 1 Lord North desends his Coalition with him 82,86,8 desends his Coalition with Lord North 83,8 desends his Coalition with Lord North accused of it 1. Ingovernment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox charges Lord North 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct 1 towards it 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct 1 towards it 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox chains loudly against touching 1 their Revenue 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of their own Servants 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of their own Servants 91,000 lent, Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke in mind 1 linsuance of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 91,000 lent, Mr. Burke in mind 1 linsuance		71 thinks the India Company thould have the appointment of their own Servants dreads his feeing Lord North in Office again Lord North defends his Coalition with him $2,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North - 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus Act, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolente and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox I Injulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Institute of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated 4 Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Instructed of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind pointment of their own Servants dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again Lord North defends his Coalition with him $2,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North - 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus Att, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North - 3 Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Grown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		78 dreads his feeing Lord North in Office again Lord North defends his Coalition with him 82,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus Att, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North 3 Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Insolence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed insolence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed india Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenue 41, 44, 48, 44 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants 79 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted 5 Impeachment, Lord North streamed with it 6 Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind
Lord North defends his Coalition with him 82,86,8 defends his Coalition with Lord North 83,8 H. Habeas Corpus Act, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North 3 Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North - Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indianity and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both 1 Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox 1 Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox - 1 Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox be destroyed 3 Institute of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3 India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenue 41, 44, 48, 44 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants 7 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted 5 Impeachment, Lord North streamed with it 6 Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		79
H. Habeas Corpus At, Lord North censured for suspending it is a lignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inguiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Institute of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of the Crown, Mr. Scoretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	dreads his seeing Lord North in Office again	82
H. Indicate Corpus Act, Lord North censured for suspending it is a lignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Institute of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenue Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insurance of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind
H. Habeas Corpus At, Lord North censured for suspending it I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolente and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Institute of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impeachment, Lord North faid to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Insurance of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	defends his Coalition with Lord North - 833	85
I. Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impueachment, Lord North threatened with it Insure of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		•
Inpotence, Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Instuence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North strid to have acted Impudently, Lord North strid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	ч Н.	*
Inpotence, Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Instuence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North strid to have acted Impudently, Lord North strid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Habeas Corbus A.R. Lord North censured for suspending it	12
Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Insolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Insolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Instuence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Apposition of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North streatened with it Instrument of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind
Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Infolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 44 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	ī.
Capture Impotence, Lord North accused of it Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Infolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 44 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Ignorance of Lord North, the Cause of General Burgoyne's
Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Infolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed india Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 44 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		14
Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North Infolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		16
Infolent, Mr. Burke pronounces Lord North Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vilenes, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Injusting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Instructed of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Impeachment, Mr. Burke talks of it to Lord North
Infolence and Temerity, Mr. Fox charges Lord North with both Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted Insurance of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		_
Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so influence of the Grown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed india Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insuence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		7
Indecency and Impropriety, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of both Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Insulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3 India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impudently, Lord North threatened with it Insurance of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		10
Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox		10
Indignity and Vileness, Lord North charged with both Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox		10
Inquiry into it threatened by Mr. Fox Injulting and impertinent, Lord North accused of being so Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3 India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3 India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it ———————————————————————————————————
Influence of the Crown, Mr. Fox thinks, ought to be destroyed 3. India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it — — — 44. Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49. Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue — 5. Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants — 70. Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated — — 4. Impudently, Lord North said to have acted — — 5. Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it — — 6. Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it — — — 76. K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Injulying and impersioned I and North accused of heing so
India Company, Mr. Fox alarmed at Lord North's conduct towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants pointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Influence of the Custom Mr. For thinks ought to be defroyed	37
towards it Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants pointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	India Campany Mr. For slammed at I and Nowth's accorded	30
Mr. Burke denies we have a right to their territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 49 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue - 5 Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants - 70 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated - 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it - 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind territorial Revenues 41, 44, 48, 4 Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue - 5 Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants - 79 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated - 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it - 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		40
Mr. Fox exclaims loudly against touching their Revenue 5 Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants - 79 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind their Revenue Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated Impudently, Lord North said to have acted Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		49
Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Appointment of their own Servants - 79 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated - 4 Impudently, Lord North said to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it - 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind pointment of their own Servants - 76 Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated - 4 Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promifes to correct it - 76 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		55
Ireland, Lord North's Conduct to it reprobated - 4 Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it - 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	Mr. Fox thinks they should have the Ap-
Impudently, Lord North faid to have acted - 5 Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it - 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it - 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		79
Impeachment, Lord North threatened with it 6 Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 7 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		43
Influence of the Crown, Mr. Secretary Fox promises to correct it 78 K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		-58
Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		62
K. Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind		_
Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	rect it	78
Kneller, Sir Godfrey, Lord North puts Mr. Burke in mind	T of a Story about him
O	of a Story about him -	3¢
	O,

Page

Land-Tax, Mr. Burke accuses Lord North of having rendered a Four Shilling one perpetual ————————————————————————————————————
M. Murderer, Lord North compared to one M. Murderer, Lord North compared to one Cience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Fallehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rahnels charges Mr. Fox with inciserminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodhed agreat deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom said to have spent more in digracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Sa- viour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the Murderer, Lord North compared to one M. Murderer, Lord North compared to one N. North, Lord, charged with a Want of Candour and Confeience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciseriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom 5 said to have spent more in digracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the North, Lord, charged with a Want of Candour and Confeience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciteriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indiscrence his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the North, Lord, charged with a Want of Candour and Confeience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciteriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indiscrence his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the North, Lord, charged with a Want of Candour and Confeience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciteriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indiscrence his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the North, Lord, charged with a Want of Candour and Con- ficience threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodihed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in digracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Censure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom said to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the threatened with Vengeance his general Conduct arraigned accyled of Treachery and Fallehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom staid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the his general Conduct arraigned accused of Treachery and Falsehood is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashnels charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the
is charged with Negligence and Incapacity accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter saised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the accused of Rashness charges Mr. Fox with inciscriminate Censure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with Ame- rica will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter saised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have speut more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Sa- viour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the charges Mr. Fox with inciferiminate Centure arraigned on leading the House blindfold thinks it proper to arm the Roman Catholics is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned 6 his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's 6 charged with Breach of Promise 7, 32 never twice in the same Temper, or of the
is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faild to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the
is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faild to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the
is of Opinion that the Dispute with America will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faild to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the rica will end speedily, happily, and without Bloodshed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the without Bloodihed a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Sa- viour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the a great deal of Laughter raised at his Expence described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the described as a blundering Pilot charged with the Loss of a whole Continent pronounced a Tory, and an Enemy to Freedom 5 faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the faid to have spent more in disgracing the Nation, than Lord Chatham in spreading a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the a Lustre around it holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Sa- viour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the holds the Contempt and Pity of Mr. Fox in equal Indifference 6 his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned 6 his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's 6 charged with Breach of Promise 7, 32 never twice in the same Temper, or of the in equal Indifference his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Sa- viour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the his Conduct respecting the American War arraigned his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the arraigned - 6 his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's - 6 charged with Breach of Promise - 7, 32 never twice in the same Temper, or of the his political Apostles compared to our Saviour's charged with Breach of Promise never twice in the same Temper, or of the viour's - 6 charged with Breach of Promise - 7, 32 never twice in the same Temper, or of the never twice in the same Temper, or of the
never twice in the same Temper, or of the lance Opinion 7
fulp-sted of being bribed - 7
his Conduct pronounced insolent and con-tempthous 7
charged with having rendered a Four Shilling Land-Tax perpetual Shilling Lang-Tax perpetual of threatened to be made responsible for all his Measures 8
accused of the Design of spreading arbitrary Power throughout the Empire 9

ge

7.

.

	, 1 P.	₃g e
North, Lor		10
		10
	.)  * 1	10
	C 1 C T 1 1 T	10
	the Children of the Children o
		I
	compared to Sir Robert Walpole for Corruption; and charged with having lost Half
		I 12
•		12, 12
	censured for suspending the Habeas Corpus A& 1	2
•		3
	likened to Doctor Sangrado 1	3
	the Capture of General Burgoyne imputed to his ignorance 1	4
		5
	1 11 1 0 00000 0	5
	a very fingular way of recovering America	_
	C 12 Landa Landa	5
	accused of Impotence, Obstinacy, Incapa-	,
		6 reprefented as Suspected, Detested, and
	D. C. C. I.L. America	7.
•	accused of raising Men without the Know-
	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	7
	reminds Mr. Burke of Pericles - 1	ś threatened with an investigation into his	• 8 pronounced the contriver of our misfortunes 1
	charges Mr. Fox with having gone very	,
	near speaking Treason 10	0
	ridiculed by Mr. Fox 19, 20
	his employing the Indians severely reprobated 10 4	denies any War can break out with France 20	•
	pronounced deserving an Axe 20
	charged with being the last to learn, what	_
0.0	1 0 111 1 6 0 4 1 1	_

		,
	charged with Ignorance respecting the Toulon Fleet 2.
	ridiculed by Mr. Burke - 2.	Ţ
	charged in the most direct terms with the	_ Lofs of America 2
	Mr. Fox declares he will never act with him 2
,	censured respecting Admiral Keppel - 2	_
	accused of Avarice and Ambition - 2	3
24 1 X -	O 2.

		_
North Lord	, charged with Partiality -	Page
210110	compared with the Minister of Xerxes -	24
	his views pronounced dishonest and corrupt	25
	accused of wanting to throw off all refnantibility	27
	accused of wanting to throw off all responsibility	y 28 puts Mr. Burke in mind of a Story of Sir
	Godfrey Kneller detected afleep	30
		31
	charged with an Act of Public Perfidy	31 accused of contemning the People of England Mr Fox thinks it would have been better	31
	he had never been born	33
	pronounced deferving an axe	35
	Mr. Burke talks of impeaching him	35
	Mr. Fox disdains the idea of joining him	37
	declares he has not bettered his Fortune a fingle Shilling — —	37
	pronounced impertinent and infulting -	37
	the illegal Army of Ireland raised through	_ his bad Conduct	38
	Mr. Burke denies he will ever be able to take him by the Paro — —	38
	would rather have Mr. Fox for an Opponent than Commentator -	39
	accused of acting in direct Contradiction
	-to all honest and dishonest Politicians
	that ever lived	40
	Mr. Fox alarmed at his Conduct towards
	the East India Company — —	40
	his System condemned	42
	Mr. Burke reprobates his Conduct to Ireland
	his Contract with Mr. Atkinson for Rum	., feverely centured	43
	what his Country Gentlemen are	44
	affronts the Navy and the Army
	pronounced full of Blunders, &c	45 46
	Mr. Burke denies his Right to meddle with	7
	the India Company's territorial acqui-
		, 48
	his Conduct in fending Commissioners to	, -
		, 5 2
	attacked for his Abuse of his Loans —	52
	charged with Avarice and Ambition	54
	his Reasons for continuing the American	J#
	War affigned — —	51
	accused of Robbery	54
		55
, ,		72
	Dy MII DUING	, , ~

INDEX

		Page
North. Lord	, his Mode of calling in the Balances of Public	64
,	Accountants cried out against	56
•	has been suckled with the milk of the Treasur	w 56
1	charged with acting impudently	3 20
	reprehended for his audacity -	58
		58
	Mr. Fox threatens to bring him to the Scaf	fold	60 freezes Mr. Burke's blood, and harrows up
	his foul	60
	threatened with impeachment -	62
	represented as a cheat 62	, 64
	as a shuffler	63
	compared to a murderer	64
	accused of baseness -	65
	called a puppet	65
4.	imputes motives to Mr. Fox	66
•	charged with making an infamous loan	66
	accurfed obstinacy	67
	Mr. Fox declares he should think himself the	0/
	the most infamous of mankind, if he fhould ever join him - 68, 73 declares as much of Mr. Fox - 69
	the total of his losses summed up	69
	painted as a wretched financier	71
	accused of want of feeling	74
	Mr. Fox dreads sceing him in office again	81
	defends his coalition with Mr. Fox 82, 86	, 87
	P.
Promise. M	Ir. Fox accuses Lord North of a breach of it	7
	y, Lord North accused of it -	12
	r. Burke reminded by Lord North of him	18
	Lord North accused of
	d North charged with an act of it -	24
Dublic Acces	intants, Lord North's mode of calling in their	31
1 worth Meton	balances cried out against	-6
Dust t To		56
Fupper, Lo	rd North called one	65
	R.
Rashness, M	Ir. Fox accuses Lord North of it	4
Roman Cath	polics, Lord North thinks it proper to arm them	4
	S.
C. J. D
	za's Physician, Mr. Burke compares Lord	-
	th to him — — — —	13
	octor, Mr. Fox likens Lord North to him	13
Scaffold, N	r. Fox threatens to bring Lord North to it	60
Shuffler, Lo	ord North represented as one	63
	ord North accused of a most remarkable in-ftano	ce of it — — — —	15

27.4	at 1 of 2 s page 1 of art at Thillian 2 . t. F. C	1.5
Taxa	tion, Mr. Fox thinks it proper to include Ireland in	JAI
43.5	all Debates upon it hery and Falfood, Mr. Fox accuses Lord North of	1
Tria	thery and Falshood, Mr. Fox accuses Lord North of
and the same of	DOM	3
Fox	Mr. Fox pronounces Lord North one Mr. threatens to make Lord North responsible for all	5
-00-	his meafures —	9
Toxe	his measures bold, Mr. Fox cannot bear the Idea of approaching Lord North's
cir.		37
2,1361	1 Dies Mil. Pox s opinior of mili	15
	v .
Fing	sance, Mr. Burke threatens Lord North with it	2
29	X. ************************************
Zo:		25
	the planetarial at a milkin the part
10	editional anital and a state of a
	11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11
47	11. (11. 12. 12. 12. 12. 12. 12. 12. 12. 12.
1, 1	70.1 . 10 128.0
F 12	- quilza an initial and a company	•
3	geria the man to
3 8	ri ga milito di mali e la calabadi e la c
16	The state of the s
		14
1	" " . I the second of the property of a bree hold is	1,147
3.1	CHI TO THE STATE OF THE STATE O	6
100	the creation of the contract o	1
1,5	ti pin ni mata ni
	of the estimated to the control of t	1
5.	and the second s	sG.
.b.	Broke Mr. For accel of the Starth of it	P.C
-	man Cathel's, Lord No. hotolike in super to arm than
	is Prices of Frank, in Bucke compares Lord	7774
EI	a. mild of the the state of the
1 4	i main the content of	No. of Part
20	and the state of t
AA TO A	eddy ford North accepts of a most remarked that
45	tile small it	2000

Page

I

- 3 - 5

> 37 45

> > 2

25

. . . .

Rojh Rome

6 Com.

Sent.

