meeting, said that he had never taken any especially active part in politics; but that his interest had been greater during the past four years, for he had been watching the course of the premier and the government, and he considered it an honor to work in the Liberal interests, and help that party to return to power. After hearing Mr. Gilson's able exposition of the manner in which the government had carried out their policy, he had no doubt those present would find it to their best interests to vote for Mr. Gilson, and indorse the Laurier Government. There has never been a period in London's history so prosperous as the past four years. There has been work for everybody. This condition was undoubtedly due to good administration of the Liberal Government. > There are four classes, especially, which should support the Laurier Government:

1. The farmers, because their interests have been well looked after. 2. The merchants, because the preferential tariff and good management of the country's affairs have increased their business.

3. The manufacturers, whose interests have been promoted by the prefeential tariff, and by reductions on raw materials, and otherwise.

4. The artisans, the workingmen, whose interests have been well kept in view by the Laurier Government. Tonight I shall confine myself to the government's record in relation to the industrial and wage-earning classes

It is justly claimed that the present government have done more for labor during the past four years than was done under the previous government in eighteen years.

It is impossible to go over the record of friendliness in detail, but I may mention a round dozen of instances, some more, some less, important, in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues have shown a sincere friendliness to wage-earners.

1. They instituted an exhaustive sweat-shop inquiry in its relation to goods manufactured for the government, such as military clothing, mailbags, and the like. That inquiry showthat sub-contractors had frequently given out work where there was no security against contagion, and where women and children were compelled to toil long hours, for one or two dollars a week, in one case on heavy military clothing at 2½ cents per hour. Here is Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King's report to the postmaster-general of the result of the inquiry:

2. "Most of the work on government clothing has really been executed by women and girls. Where these have been employed in shops their wages have been, on the whole, exceedingly low; and where the work was performed in homes the prices paid were often such as to necessitate long hours of labor for a very meager return. the case of those employed by subcontractors, the general rule has been to require a maximum amount of work for a minimum amount of pay. Exceptionally long hours and other objectionable features have marked course of employment of the workers in the homes, and of not a few of the The conditions under which much of the government work has been executed have been such as to prove injurious to the health and wellbeing of those engaged in it. There has been no proper or adequate inspection of the methods or the work itself, and, as a consequence, individuals and public alike have been exposed to continual risk from the spread of contagion as well as to harm in other ways." No. 2 in the Laurier record of friendliness consists in governmental action on the above report. This action consisted in making such government regulations as prevented thenceforth anything in the nature of sweating, in government contracts. Following is the statement of the conditions in the forms of tender hereafter: "With a view to suppressing the sweating system, and securing payment to the workingmen of fair wages, and the performance of the work under proper sanitary conditions, the contract shall be subject to the following regulations, and strict compliance Mulock gave notice of the following with the true spirit and intent of the resolution in the House of Commons: various provisions herein contained, will be provided." Then follow various regulations to enforce the principle agreed on. These apply to mail bags, leather and duck satchels, and other articles. The government next provided anti-sweating regulations in regard to militia clothing contracts, enforcing fair wages and sanitary conditions. By fair wages is meant the wages generally accepted as current in each trade for competent workmen in the district where the work is carried on. Third point of friendliness to wageearners—the creation of a department of labor. There had long been a department of agriculture. There is now a department of labor, with its own staff and its own recognized head in the person of Hon. William Mulock. This is a great recognition of labor. but no greater than its importance deserves, and its officers are men who are generally friendly to labor and who know the wants of labor. One of them.

Sixth sign of friendliness-the promotion by the Laurier Government, and the passage in the House of Commons, of a measure legalizing the trades' union label. But it did not become law. The reactionary Tory Senate threw it out. Hon, David Mills, the Liberal leader in the senate, fought hard for the measure, but unfortunately the senate was politically too much loaded up the other way. senate, too, will soon be Liberal, and then the label will be legalized. The House of Commons, which has a Liberal majority, voted for the legalization of the label. The senate, which has a Tory majority, threw it out. That is the difference

An amendment passed to the railway act by the Laurier Government gives to the railway committee power to take the advice of the members of the railroad brotherhoods when revising the rules and regulations of railway companies, instead of being confined to the guidance of theorists only, as heretofore. The clause reads: "The railway committee may, from time to time, appoint competent persons to advise or assist the committee in the revision of any such bylaws, rules or regulations, or any other matters coming before the committee, and any person so appointed funds in the hands of the general re-

Tenth-For the convenience of workers the Government has now ordered that on Saturdays the savings bank department of every town or city postcities, shall be kept open for the receipt of deposits between the hours of playment means to all classes of the 7:30 and 9 p.m. This is a great convenience to all wage earners, who may have deposits to make, as they do not now have to break into their working hours to make deposits of earnings.

Eleventh-I now come to an immensely important benefit and act of friendliness on the part of the Laurier Government towards the wage-earning classes. I refer to the fair wages regulation as applied to all public works. What it means is simply this, that all tenders for public works must be put in at fair wages.

On March 12, 1900, Hon. William Mulock gave notice of the following "That it be resolved, that all government contracts should contain such conditions as will prevent abuses which may arise from the sub-letting of such contracts, and that every effort should be made to secure the payment of such wages as are generally accepted as current in each trade for competent workmen in the district where the work is carried out, and that this house cordially concurs in such policy, and deems it the duty of the government to take immediate steps to give effect thereto. It is hereby declared that the work to which the foregoing policy shall apply includes not only work undertaken by the government itself, but also all works aided by grant of Dominion public funds."

Thanks to the Laurier Administration that is now the law of the land, and it the Pacific. A special fair wage officer has been appointed in the person of a known friend of labor, Mr. D. J. O'Donoghue, formerly of Toronto. Take practical illustration near home to show as to how it works; take the large armory and drill shed about to be erected at London. Among the wage earners likely to assist in the erecof an armory are carpenters, bricklayers, masons, stone-cutters. plasterers, painters, glaziers, blacksmiths, piumbers, tinners, sheet fron workers, electric wirers, felt and gravel ofers, slaters, steel workers and la-Mr. O'Donoghte was here the week before last, ascertaining and fixing what are to be considered as the ployer. In the two issues of the Labor Gazette, already published, are to be found dozens of cases where this regulation has been applied, with the wages rates appended. Twelfth-The next and extremely important measure to wage earners to which I shall refer is the passage of the act of conciliation and arbitration. As its name implies, the conciliation idea is to prevent strikes, or to settle them before they go too far, or in case of strikes, to settle them by arbitration. In other words, the Laurier Govvernment desire to make it as easy as possible, in the relations between emoyers and employes, to work out in practice the principles of the golden rule, and to substitute mutual good will for strife and violence.

I have now given you a dozen illustrations of the Laurier Government's iendliness to labor. Let me throw in ust one more for good weight. You ill remember that a combine bill was introduced in the House of Commons. But it was held by good legal authorities that under this measure trades unions might be at the mercy of any unfriendly persons who might choose to invoke the law by trying to class trades unions among unlawful combinations. In the criminal code amendments introduced during the last session of the Dominion Parliament the following exempting sub-section was rejected by the Senate and afterward inserted in the Commons: "Nothing in this section shall be construed to ap-ply to combinations of workmen and employes for their own reasonable protection as such workmen or employes. Three times the Tory Senate refused to insert this amendment, but the Laurier Government, and Hon. David Mills, the Minister of Justice, persisted until they compelled its adoption. So that the wage earners who may se to combine in trades unions for their reasonable protection, can now do so, as in Great Britain, without risk of legal prosecution, and this they owe to the Laurier Government. While I have spoken of these spe may be paid out of the unappropriated cial instances of beneficial legislation. the large fact stands out that the wage-earning classes have benefited materially by the general policy and good management of the government. Let me read you a few figures about employment in London before and office, and of the branch offices in after Laurier came into power, and think how much this increased

In 1896 the Liberal party had come before the people and asked to be sent to power, although their ability to govern successfully had not been tested. However, it had formulated a policy and presented it-for public approval or disapproval. The people were puzzled. Existing conditions were far from satisfactory, and there was no apparent relief offered. When they looked about them the electors found conditions that

No nation, no colony under the sun county is now enjoying; they ascribed to Providence all credit for it. To a certain extent the speaker agreed with them in this. The Laurier Government had not given good crops and season-able weather, but as "righteousness exalteth a nation," the Liberal Administration had put itself in such a position that Providence could look down and smile upon the land.

During the years preceding, of such a corrupt nature was the party in power that Providence had been obliged to chastise us and we could not prosper. It had been said that such words should not be heard on the political platform. What were the peo-ple there for, but to better themselves and gain knowledge, so that a more perfect legislation might be had? And speaking with all reverence, Mr. Gilson said that in his consideration there was not enough recognition of the divine hand of Providence in political

How had the Liberal Government done? Had it broken the pledges made before the election? The Tories claimed that it had done all bad, no good. Such a course on their port made him speak of the dark days when their own party was in power, when public wrongdoing was so common that the great English papers were led to speak of it in sorrowful tones. turning to the comprehensive charge that all, not seven or eight, but all of the Liberal promises had been broken, the speaker challenged any man -Mr. Edmund Meredith, Sir Charles Tupper, or any of the party-to prove where it had broken one pledge. For instance, in the matter of free trade, the Conservative press and speakers claimed that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had assured the electorate of the country that he would establish free trade. He had not promised free trade in its absolute form at any time, upon any occasion. He had said that he would make it the goal to which he was tending as rapidly as the conditions and circumstances of the country would warrant that condition of affairs. To throw down the fence of tariff completely when the neighboring country had a high tariff would simply mean political and commercial suicide. What Sir Wilfrid had promised, what he was doing, was to remodel the tariff so as to bring out the greatest sible good, and the least possible (Cheers.) When he had begun this, Sir Charles Tupper's poor heart was broken with pain, because of the absolute ruin of the manufacturing interests that was impending. His pain was intense when he foresaw the destruction of the country's trade. (Laughter.) But after a while trade had improved, work was plentiful, wages were increased, money was circulated freely, and all classes felt the quickening impulse of an awakened

Sir Charles saw the change that had ome over the country, and actuated by the political impulse, had doubtless said: "Well, they have made times improve, but they've turned thief and stolen the National Policy." (Laughter.) He was forced to recognize the abundant evidences of prosperity, although before the result of Sir Wilfrid's action was apparent, his diagnosis of the situation had been couched in the gloomiest of terms.

The reduction in the tariff had decreased the customs tax by nearly $3,-000,000. This sum would actually have come out of the pockets of the people of Canada. In considering this saving, Mr. Gilson paked to be told of one case where there had been a tax reduction of ever $300 during Conservative rule. During that time there had been an increase of the burden, instead of a decrease. (Cries of "Hear, hear.") With the Liberal saving the country had progressed with leaps and bounds.

Mr. Gilson's retrospect of Liberal achievements was varied, by an illusas a facile disseminator of questionable It was afforded by his change that Hon. Mr. Sifton, in consetion with others, had been concerned in the importation of liquor into the Yukon. The charge was denied, and Mr. Sifton began legal proceedings against the man who aspires to the premiership. The first trial was postned, and the second prevented by Sir hartes making an abasing confession to the effect that the whole story was untrue, and there no facts to substantiate it.

Conservative regime had increase $118,-000,000, or an average annual increase tives said. the Liberals were not going to increase. Well, had they? When ts in pretty dilapidated condition, said the speaker, he first goes to some exense to improve it and make it more valuable. The Liberals had to assume obligations amounting to nearly $2,000,-000 when they came into power, a legacy from the Conservatives. Apart from this, an unexpected expense had to be met when the contingents were sent to South Africa; $2,000,000 more. and even with that, the Laurier Administration had added only $7,000,000 to the debt in four years, an average yearly increase of less than $2,000,000. In this as in all comparisons, the Liberals stood first. The Conservative rule was an eighteen-year period of deficits; the Liberal regime was a period of surpluses

The management of the Intercolonial Railway, its extension to Montreal, and the excellent results that had accrued therefrom, were referred to by Mr. Gilson as an evidence of the economical policy that is actuating the Laurier The acquirement of the Drummond County Road and the talk met with such a reception on a former that its purchase occasioned was men-tioned. The Liberals, forsooth, had paid $12,000 per mile for the road, receiving it in excellent running order. Yet the Conservatives, who criticised this, had paid even as high as $123,000 per mile during some of their railway transactions. The result of the change had been that the road was now paying a handsome revenue, where before it was drawing from the funds of the tingent without calling parliament to-public treasury. (Applause.) Those contracts were immediately canceled, and by reletting by public tender $415,000 was saved. that caused a large reduction of the deficit during the first year, and its virtual disappearance during the second term of office.

Several other instances of the government's prudent and progressive action were mentioned more briefly. The opening of the Yukon was an undertaking that had cost nearly $3,000,000, yet who would say that the money was not wisely spent? The Liberals had been abused for doing it, but even now a large revenue from that district was helping to swell the public treasury. An improved transportation system and the establishment of cold storage were works that commended themselves to the intelligence of all patriotic Canadians. The latter's good results bore directly upon the increase in transoceanic trade. Canadian goods arrived in Great Britain in such excellent condition that the English taste was suited, and there was an increasing demand for Canadian butter and eggs, cheese, pork and other products. The change is clearly shown in the figures of the Conservative years and of the Liberal times. Then, during eighteen years, the total increase was keep the workingman from having any $66,000,000; during four years of the Liberal rule it was $82,000,000, a yearly average in the one case of $3,750,000, in the other $27,000,000. Mr. Gilson vigorously denounced all attempts to win an election by any means other than the free exercise of the franchise. His first act, he said. if he should be returned to parliament, would be to introduce a bill making voting compulsory; he would fine any man who canvassed votes, and would permit only the two candidates to conduct campaign meetings. He had asked Mr. Gilmour to go through the riding with him, but unfortunately he was content to remain in the hands of his committee. The kind of organization he wanted, he said, was for the people to read for themselves, think for themselves and act for them-

Another question to be considered, said Mr. Gilson, was Sir Charles Tup-per's habit of saying one thing in one part of the country and something different in another. A man should say a French-Canadian banquet in Montreal the premier said he had given to the country not an administration Catholics nor for Protestants, but a national administration. (Cheers.) Mr. Gilson said he had no respect for the man who would seek to stir up strife and discord in a nation. Tupper sa and thank God, he had died politically (Laughter.) Tupper said in Quebec that Laurier was too British for him. Laurier, says Tupper, should not have into insignificance before those given England preferential trade withas the taxing of all breadstuffs save Conservatives alike should band to-those from Canada. In spite of the gether to right this wrong at the earfact that Chamberlain had pronounced liest opportunity, and give the Liberal y was this impossible, Tupper said on the party justice. That was the loyalty of the Conservative party-a mere lip (Cheers.) Laurier knew that England would be in no hurry to ask Canada for aid when her request had occasion. Tupper has been praising other colonies because they were in advance of Canada in sending contingents, yet the fact is that Canada was the only colony to sent troops without previously receiving the sanction of parliament and its authority for spending the money. As Viewed in Britain.

The British papers to hand by the last mail have some references to the Canadian general elections, in which the motherland has no little interest.

The London Times, referring to what Its Toronto correspondent says as to the splendid position of the country under Liberal rule says:

"If half what our correspondent says about Canadian prosperity be true, we should imagine that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would be able to make out a very good case for his fiscal policy."

Of the Premier and the policy of his party, the chief Government organ (the old Conservative Standard) says it watches the struggle with calm and unprejudiced eyes, and adds: "We appreciate fully the fine spirit of imperial patriotism which led Sir Wilfrid Laurier to introduce into the fiscal system of the Dominion arrangements which operated-to give a distinct advantage to British products over those of for-The conclusion of the Standard is as follows: "Whatever the and we may be sure that a vast numin the contention between the two sides-the spontaneous token of goodcertain amount of compunction, since it has been impossible for us to confer reciprocal advantage on our American it. colonies. The action of Canada has unquestionably brought within the domain of discussion the general policy of an imperial tariff system, but as ye any definite solution must be regarded as reserved for a very distant and even problematical future."

That is the view taken by all Canadians not blinded by a partisan zeal that leads them to support a proposition to repeal the preferential fariff | and prosperity of the country in the until such time as Great Britain con- last four years, said: "It was a pure sents to revolutionize her trade systion of her food supplies and raw

The Westminster Gazette, another leading journal, has this to say of the premier and his opponents:

"We wish with all our hearts that Sir Wilfrid Laurier may hold his own and come back with an increased majority. Apart from the fact that his friendliness to the mother country (manifested both in the war and in the preferential tariff) commends our gratitude, it seems to us most desirable that a staunch imperialist, who yet knows how to conciliate the French Canadian, should remain at the helm at the present juncture. * * * We cannot enter deeply into this queson at the present moment, but we only say again that we can conive no stroke of policy more damaging to British trade or more mischievous to imperial policy. It would deprive us of the one chief advantage which we have in face of the world. and which disarms so much animosity that would otherwise be dangerous. It would reduce to absurdity all our professed affection for the policy of the open door."

Our contemporary can rest easy. The country is not going to vote to turn the dial back. The opposition policy of "smash" will be defeated. Why There Will Be No Change

"Business is less demoralized this season than it has ever been in a time of general elections in my experience of thirty years," said a leading lumberman, who employs many hands, in Toronto, the other day. "Ordinarily, a general election in Britain, and the uncertainties of a general election in Canada, added to those of a Presidential contest in the United States, would have paralyzed our business until such time as the contests were over, and the future of parties assured. This year, however, we are all busy as can be, and are not finding our business retarded one bit. How comes it? you ask. Simply because the defeat of the disturbing elements is discounted in advance by all shrewd observers. No one believes that in Canada the Opposition will be elected; therefore, every one knows that the preferential tariff will remain, and that business conditions will continue good, and progress for five years to come be assured. A similar view is entertained with regard to the United States. Everyone believes that McKinley will be returned again, and that there will be no tariff disturbances there. Indeed, business men everywhere have all along held that the conditions this year are such as to favor Governments and to prevent tendencies to injure business progress, and they have governed to the contrary, notwithstanding, rethemselves accordingly. You may say duced the expenditure of this country. that they are gambling on chances. I reply, they are gambling on what they believe to be a sure thing. Remember my prophecy on election night. I am no politician. I look at it from the dent, but show that the Government business side solely. I want no change, of the country, if indeed it was highly because a change would injure business, and I believe there will be no has dispensed, knew how to turn them change, because the sober-minded to the best advantage for the general

A Montreal dispatch says: One important factor in the coming contest, so far as this province is concerned, is the unprecedented demand for labor. Notwithstanding the high wages prevailing in all lines, many manufacturers and contractors are hampered by their inability to get a sufficient number of workmen. The Conners syndicate could not get enough men to work on their elevator foundation in the harbor, and the commissioners were compelled to advertise in the papers. Even this has not brought the desired result. Mr. M. P. Davis, the well-known contractor, who is proceeding to develop the water power at Sheik's Island, near Cornwall, is advertising for laborers at the high wages of $1 40 a day. Heretofore $1 to $1 25 was considered fair remuneration for that class of labor. The Shawinigan Water and Power Company, being behind in their work through the scarcity of laborers, are advertising in the where there is a large French-Canadian population of a more or less miwill afforded by the preferential tariff gratory character. Those are only a scheme will not be forgotten here. Our few instances showing the good times gratitude is, in truth, tempered by a here. Rightly or wrongly, the workingmen attribute this to the Government, and will be loath to vote against

Luck, Was It?

At Orangeville, Sir Richard Cartwright dealt in a masterly manner with some statements made by Hon. Mr. Foster. Finance Minister in the late Government. Mr. Foster, when the Liberals have pointed to the extraordinary and unexampled progress accident: the luck was on your side: tem and impose taxes on a large por- all luck, all luck; not the result of sent to him for distribution. To his your management at all." Well, sir, credit, be it said, Mr. Calvin refused ber when the luck went the other way, and very strongly, in 1878. I do not remember that at that time we were excused by the Tories because the luck was against us: very much the reverse. We were abused on every hustings because we could not turn bad times to good, prevent three succeeding bad harvests, and divert a world-wide depression. No mercy was shown to us then: no excuse was accepted; we were told we were files on the wheel, that it was the duty of the Government to bring good times, and that a good Government would bring

For argument's sake. I say to my Conservative friends that if they were right in 1878, and good government brings good times, apply that doctrine to 1896 and to what has been done from 1896 to 1900. Let us have our turn. We have got it; we mean to keep it. We have them on the run, and I venture to say that we will not only win this election, but having an honest redistribution of seats we will also win many future elections.

But, sir, if it was by accident, by interposition of Providence, that the times have shown such prosperity in the last four years; nevertheless, it was not by accident that we devised the scheme of preferential trade, that we completed the Intercolonial from about as dead-and-alive an affair as I ever saw in my life, into a vigorous, flourishing railway, likely to become a pro-table investment. It was not by accident that the Yukon was turned into a source of profit to the people of Canada, that we gave you penny postage for the empire-(cheers)-and reduced the rate on postage to every man who has a letter to write by one-third. It was not by accident, but with intention and forethought, that Mr. Fisher succeeded in greatly aiding and developing the agricultural resources of this country.

It was not by accident that we succeeded in opening up many new sources of wealth in this country; that we secured the denunciation of the Belgian and German treaties: that immigration under our auspices has assumed proportions such as it never has had for five-and-twenty years, and that we so arranged it that our securities are now made available for trusts investment in England, with the effect of adding several per cent. to the value of every Canadian bond, and as our loan matures we will have to float about $150,000,000, which we have

It was not by accident that we have very largely, as I will show, Mr. Foster

Now, sir, these things are not trifles; these are things which, taken collectively, add largely to the wealth of the country, and were not done by accifavored by the gifts that Providence Canadian everywhere agrees with me." | benefit of the people of Canada.

Still They Come.

Mr. A. T. Lepine, who in a byeelection in 1888, was returned as Conservative and workingman M. P. for Montreal East, has joined the Government ranks, and is doing yeoman service to secure the return of Mr. Prefontaine, mayor of Montreal, in Maisonneuve. The mayor will be returned. Another former Conservative M. P. who sat for Napierville, has also come out against the Opposition. It is the same all over the country. Thousands of former Conservatives are about to vote want of confidence in the Tuppers, and opposition to a change at the present inopportune time.

Don't stop the growing time.

"Where are the boys of the old brigade?" They are lining up to vote for a continuance of good Government and good times.

People today are not saying: "It's time for a change," as they did four years ago, but "Give us five years more of peace, progress and prosperity under Liberal administration." -Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance at Montreal.

If the Canadian independent industry ere swamped by the millionaire manufacturers of the United States, as is proposed by the Manitoba Opposition leader, 40,000 persons in this country would be deprived of their means of livelihood. This is the deliberate opinion of the Winnipeg Tribune, and believe it is well founded.

The Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) has given orders, an Ottawa dispatch says, that the Parliament Buildings be illuminated on the evening when the Canadian contingent arrives at the capital from South Africa, which is expected to be in the course of the next week or ten days. The preparations for a brilliant reception are now well advanced.

Even Mr. Gladstone had, in his day, to submit to personal insult from gilded fops for his alleged disloyalty, and yet Mr. Gladstone stands for half a century of the best in Britain's history.-Montreal Herald.

"Gilded fops" is a good term. It applies to those Canadian partisans who attempt to make political capital by misrepresenting the utterances of their fellow-citizens, and impugning the sincerity of public men of whose political sentiments they disapprove.

H. A. Calvin, Independent Conservative candidate in Frontenac, had a bundle of 500 bogus Toronto Globes to have anything to do with the clumsy forgery issued by the Tupper Conservaltive managers, who are trying to palm off Montreal Star tirades against the Government as the honest arguments of a fearless and independent public journal. What think the people of a cause that requires the perpetration of a penitentiary offense to buttress it up?

In Provencher, Man., Mr. La Riviere the Conservative candidate, is making his principal point against the present Dominion Government the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has in his Cabinet fewer French-speaking Ministers than were in the Conservative Cabinet. There you are again! That is the policy in a part of Manitoba. In Ontario there is an altogether opposite outcry by the Opposition. Every Opposition candidate is making his own platform. and race and creed cries are varied to meet the locality. Such a collection of contradictions will not be accepted by reasonable Canadians as a "platform" worthy of indorsation.

The opposition leaders have found it an impossible task to make the hardheaded Britisher believe that the Dominion Government is disloyal. Over the water they laugh at all such mischievous nonsense as is uttered by opposition politicians in the hope that they may mislead the unwary. The Christian World, a widely-circulated English weekly, for example, says: "Sir Wilfrid, who stands for 'freer trade,' has during four years in office made the tariff on British goods entering Canada 331/3 per cent, under that on imports from other countries, so giving the English manufacturer an advantage of one-third over his American and European rivals. This does not look like disloyalty."

The Duke and Duchess of York are about to start for Australia, where they will witness the birth of the new commonwealth. It will be an interesting experience for the future King of Great Britain and Emperor of India. The visit is expected to be a prolonged one and preparations are already in progress to give the visitors a hearty reception. We understand that before their return, next year, the Duke and Duchess will visit Canada, taking the trip over the Canadian Pacific Railway from Vancouver to Quebec. It is to be hoped that the news will prove true. Canadians are second to none in their loyalty to the throne, and they would be delighted to have Her Majesty's eldest grandson pay them a visit with his royal helpmeet.

A Nation's Prosperity.

A nation's prosperity is told by the figures of its total trade. The total trade of Canada under the eighteen years of Conservative rule increased only $66,000,000. During the four short years of Liberal rule it has increased $142,000,000. (Loud applause.) Even if this were the old national policy. would it not be wise to leave it in the hands of the Government which knows how to handle it?-Hon. W. S. Fielding.

Mr. John Charlton, in reply to a question addressed to him by Rev. Dr. Brethour, at a recent meeting in Tilsonburg, defined the attitude of the Government on the question of prohibition, which was the same as his own. While a temperance man, he said, and in favor of all measures in the interests of temperance, the plebiscite vote, being only a small percentage of the entire vote of the country, had not warranted the passage of a prohibitory law. This is the view entertained by all reasonable men throughout the country. It was not seriously combatted by Mr. Foster in the House of Commons. It is true that he grumbled at the Government because it did not consider it wise to attempt to pass a law to which the large majority on both sides were opposed. But when challenged by Sir Louis Davies to say what he would do were he given the power, Mr. Foster sat dumb as an oyster. His sole object was not to promote the cause of temperance, but to gain political capital. In this he has failed.

Cannot Hope For Success. [Toronto Saturday Night.]

I am inclined to think that the Conservative party cannot hope to obtain which to properly reorganize thempower while it presents worn-out and selves. more or less discredited men as the material out of which it would attempt to form a ministry if it had the opportunity. Abuse of Mr. Tarte of Mr. H. H. Cook, of whom the Conservatives until lately never lost an opportunity of expressing their political contempt, likely to be effectual. Wabbling with regard to preferential trade with Great Britain, vague promises on one hand to be more protectionist than ever, and on the other hand insidiously promising the western farmers to be more free trade than the free traders, can only cause disquiet and a disturbance of business. while other statesmen talk, talk, talk!"

The Free Press this morning has room for something about the late Kang Yi; about the national home reading union; about alcohol in illness; about beet sugar; about layer cake fillings; information that "quick boiling and careless skimming are the causes of cloudy soup"; that "baked cauliflower is an agreeable change in serving this vegetable." Mrs. Sarah MacVicar who died recently at her home in the township of Caradoc, Middlesex county, was the widow of the late Donald MacVicar. She came to this county from South Knapdale, Argyleshire, Scotland, in 1852, and was married a few months afterwards, settling in the home where she died on Oct. 14 inst. Her maiden name was MacCorkindule. Her husband died in 1876. The family consisted of four sons and two daughters. The two daughters are now dead, viz., Mary, who died in infancy, and Sarah Catherine, who died in 1887. The four sons are still living. They are: John, who is teaching in Alberta, N. W. Does Your Baking Powder Contain Alum?

Prof. Geo. F. Barker, M.D., Un rsity of Penna MAll the constituents of alun remain (from alum baking powders) in the bread, and the alum itself is reproduced to all intents and purposes when the bread is dissolved by the gastric juice in the process of digestion. I regard the use of alum as highly injurious."

Dr. Alonzo Clark: "A substance (alum) which can derange the stomach should not be tolerated in baking powder."

Prof. W. G. Tucker, New York State Chemist: "I believe it (alum) to be decidedly injurious when used as a constituent of food articles."

Prof. S. W. Johnson, Yale College: "I regard their (alum and soluble alumina salts) introduction into baking powders as most dangerous to health."

In view of such testimony as this, every care must be exercised by the housewife to exclude the over and over condemned cheap, alum baking powders from the food.

> Baking powders made from cream of tartar, w ich is highly refined grape acid, are promotive of health, and more efficient. No other kind should be used in leavening food. Royal Baking Powder is the highest example of a pure cream of tartar powder.

cluding 900 cattle, 1,500 sheep and lambs, 20 calves and 3,000 hogs. Export cattle—Demand petering out with the close of the season, nothing but the best being taken; exporters appear to be indifferent about any others. Cables are not very encouraging, doubtless due to the increased offerings by British farmers; a few loads were taken today at prices ranging from $4 25 to $4 621/2 per cwt. Butchers' cattle-Demand confined to supplies for present use, and buyers avoided any thing but choice cattle; whole tone of market was soft, especially for the lower grades, although no lower prices were quoted; picked lots were held at $\\ \frac{4}{5}$ to $\frac{4}{5}$ per cwt; choice at $\frac{4}{5}$ to $\frac{4}{5}$ and $\frac{5}{5}$ common to medium ranged from $2 to $3.25. Export buils in fair demand, with a preference shown for heavy animals; a bunch of export and feeding bulls sold at the level price of $3 40; choice heavy export bulls bring as high as $4 25, and are scarce at that. Feeders in fair demand, and prices are unwithout any particular strength; short keep were quoted at $4 to $4 25, but some dealers would consider the latter an exceptional price: heavy were steady, at $3 50 to $4, and light at $3 to $3 40. Stockers dull for Mght undesirable stock, of which many were offered; good stock of 400 to 800 lbs bring $250 to $3 per cwt, and there is no prospect of any immediate change in these prices; the lower grades are slow, at $1 75 to $2 25 per cwt. Sheep and lambs-Prices for sheep steady and unchaged; they range from $3 25 to $3 50 per cwt for export ewes; $2 75 to $3 per cwt for bucks, and $250 to $350 each for butchers; lambs have advanced, and are quoted at $3.50 to $4 per cwt, and $2.50 to $3.50 each; they are mather plentiful, but the demand is good. Calves-Steady and unchanged, at $2 to $8 each; receipts were moderate, and the demand was fair. Hogs-Prices unchanged, at $5.75 for selects; $5.50 for lights and fats, and $5.25, nominal, for corn-fed; dealers look for lower prices in a day or two; receipts large, but all sold readily to a good demand. OLD COUNTRY PRICES. London, Oct. 26 .- Quotations for cattle are unchanged at 12c to 13c per Ib, dressed weight; sheep, 12c to 13c per Ib; refrigerator beef is 9½c to 9¾c per

The Union Had Nothing to Do Two Anti-Foreign Chinese With the Strike or Row.

Statement of the Company-Report That Mill Hands Mave Joined the Striking Laborers.

Valleyfield, Que., Oct. 26.-All the cotton mill hands, to the number of 2,700, have joined the strikers, and the mills are closed down. The decision of the operatives complicates the difficult and serious situation.

The local labor union, through its treasurer, Mr. Dechene, denies that it has had a hand in the strike. people," he said, "have an interest in fomenting trouble, and have supplied the strikers with whisky, and now they are trying to drag our union in. At 11:45 p.m. there is no sign of hostilities. Up to this writing the riot act has not been read, all the justices of the peace steadfastly refusing to comwith requests that it be read. Montreal, Oct. 26 .- Mayor Langevin, of Valleyfield, arrived in Montreal at 9:45 o'clock this morning. Two hours dater Mayor Langevin returned to Valleyfield. "If I am asked to read the riot act I shall do so," declared Mr.

Langevin to a reporter at the Bonaventure station, "even if I leave my dead body there as a result." With regard to the report that he had refused to read the riot act when the mob assailed the militia, Mayor Langevin declared that he had made no re-fusal to do so. He was never asked by any officer or by any other official to read the riot act.

ALL QUIET THIS MORNING. Valleyfield, Que., Oct. 27-1 a.m.-At this hour everything is quiet. Another detachment of militia, c sisting of 100 rank and file of the th Rifles, Montreal's French-Canadian corps, arrived last evening, and were run right into the mill property before disem-barking from the cars.

THE COMPANY'S STATEMENT. Valleyfield, Que., Oct. 26. - A statement was issued by the Montreal Cotton Company this afternoon regarding the strike of the men employed on the excavations and foundations of the new mill. On Monday last some of the men struck, pending an increase in pay of 25 per cent. The company decided it could not grant the increase demanded, but expressed itself as willing to consider a nine-hour day instead of a tenhour day as a full day during the fall season. The strikers, however, refused to accept this, and remained out. On Wednesday a couple of men acting as a committee waited on the company officials, and stated that unless the was minister without portfolio in the increase of 25 per cent was granted, they would close down the works of company. The company again the declined to grant the increase demanded. Thereupon the strikers. armed with clubs and stones, beset the property of the company, and made it impossible for the company to bring death from suffocation. in the coal required for the operation of the mills. The promises were not fulfilled, however, the town not having at its command a sufficient force to maintain peace and order. The company thereupon requested the mayor and town council to call out the militia, which was done. Referring to the fact that the inside help has joined the striking laborers, the company says that no demands for any change in the condition of the unemployed had been

Bergeron, Conservative candidate for that district, speaking at St. Stanislaus yesterday, tried to blame the government for sending troops to Valleyfield. The truth is that the government had nothing to do with the dispatch of these men. UNDER THE WHEELS

Serious Accident to a London Township Farmer.

Hiram O'Neil, of con. 13, London township, near Birr, met with a very serious accident on the road to Lucan while drawing a load of oats on Thursday afternoon. It seems that the load was a very heavy one, and the binder rope, which was placed to make the load secure, broke, and Mr. O'Neil, who was sitting on the load, was pitched headlong onto the road and under the wagon wheels, which passed over his chest. His injuries are said to be very serious, and his life is despaired of.

SORE FEET .- Mrs. E. J. Neill, New Armagh Postoffice, writes: "For nearly six months I was troubled with burning aches and pains in my feet to such an extent that I could not sleep at night, and as my feet were badly swollen I could not wear my boots for weeks. At last I got a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and resolved to try it, and to my astonishment I got almost instant relief, and the one bottle accomplished a perfect cure."

The moulders who struck at the Massey-Harris Company's works several months ago, contend that the strike is still on, and want the action restraining them from interfering with employes to come to trial.

SWALLOWING GOLD LEAF. Minister Wu regards this act as the result of the disfavor which the high officials have received from the throne. London, Oct. 27.-Emperior Nicholas, says the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, "has received a letter from the Chinese emperor, asking him to take the conquered Manchurian provinces under Russian protection."

A St. Petersburg dispatch says: The remains of the Chinese troops in wide spaces of country around Muk-den (Manchuria), says Russian official dispatches, are broken up into guerilla bands, which are plundering villages and farms. Three explosions, which occurred at Mukden, Oct. 10, whereby 26 Russians were wounded, were deliberately carried out by the Chinese while the Russians were engaged in destroying the contents of a powder

With reference to the report of the fighting in the German hinterland of Kiao Chou, the German foreign office has received reports that the attitude of Kwang Shi Kai has not given occasion for complaint lately, and that the anti-foreign agitation in the Pro-vince of Shan Tung is now considered quelled.

The death of Kang Y1, which is confirmed, is an important event, as he was one of the ringleaders whose punishment was demanded by the powers. Although the dispatch says only that Kang Yi "dled" on the 18th inst., it is thought that his "death" was the natural result of the disgrace which has overtaken the anti-foreign and Boxer element. PLOT TO KILL PRESIDENT LOU-

BET. Lyons, Oct. 27.-The Nouv Elliste de Lyon says a plot to assassinate President Loubet has been discovered. It appears that a working electrician named Couturier entered the electric company's premises at Nimes and stole 2,500 francs. He was tracked to Orange, near Lyons, where he was ar-rested. Documents found on his person revealed, the paper says, an anarchist conspiracy to assassinate President Loubet on his coming visit to Lyons to unveil a monument erected to the memory of President Carnot. Couturier has, it is added, confessed to the police, who are now tracking his accomplices.

Where to Get Shoe Bargains

Boots and Shoes are being sold at the Bargain Shoe Store, 143 Dundas street, at less than manufacturers' orices. If you will require any new footwear this fall or winter, it will certainly pay you to purchase at that establishment now. The price you would have to pay for one pair of shoes at other stores would very nearly buy two such pairs at the Bargain Shoe Store. We are advised that while the present stock lasts, boots and shoes will be sold at lower prices than ever known in London before for such goods. It is not old, shelf-worn stock one is getting when purchases are made at that store, but new, up-to-date, reliable footwear. We would advise our readers to not let this opportunity pass. A good supply of superior footwear may be procured at the Bargain Shoe Store now for a very small outlay. The proprietor, F. A. Formal Ceremony of Taking Over the Transvaal.

Jacobsdal Was Not Captured by the Boers,

Though the Highland Garrison Suffered Severely.

Pretoria, Oct. 25.—The Transvaal was today proclaimed a part of the British Empire, the proclamation being attended with impressive ceremonies. The royal standard was hoisted in the main square of the city, the Grenadiers sionary, Prozesky, has been found presented arms, massed bands played guilty at Newcastle of all the charges the National Anthem, Sir Alfred Milner read the proclamation, and troops representing Great Britain and her colonies marched past.

THE JACOBSDAL AFFAIR. London, Oct. 27.-It now appears that Jacobsdal was not captured by the Boers. Advices received from Cape Town shortly after midnight say: Later news from Jacobsdal shows that 200 Boers unsuccessfully attacked the garrison. The Highlanders had 14 killed and 20 wounded.

When the first report was received it was regarded in London as a curious coincidence that the report of the capture of Jacobsdal by the Boers should the Orange Free State. be received concurrently with the expected arrival home from South Africa. of the City Imperial Volunteers, as Jacobsdal was the scene of the latter's first fight. KRUGER TO GO TO NICE. Paris, Oct. 26 .- Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal agent, who is in this city for a few days, was questioned by a representative of the Associated Press today with reference to the plans of former President Kruger. He said: "Most of the stories published on the subject are imaginative. Mr. Kruger is an old man, and not acoustomed to a cold climate, so it is likely he will sojourn in the neighborhood of Nice for the winter." It is asserted at Algiers that the has notified the Dutch consul in Algiers that Dutch cruiser Gelderland, on which Mr. Kruger is being brought from Lorenzo Marquez, will land him there, and that he will only proceed to France after a stay in Algiers, the Jength of which has not been decided. The Hague, Oct. 26-The government has submitted to the states general the that this statement has been text of the three secret dispatches which the Dutch minister of foreign affairs sent to Mr Kruger last year, dated May 18, Aug 1, and Aug 15, all of which counseled him, in the true interests of the Transvaal, to be as moderate and condiliatory as possible tovards Great Britain, and intimated that any appeal to Germany or any great power would be barren of result

TOO NERVOUS

Many Pale, Weak Men and Women Find Themselves Daily Growing Weaker and Fast Approaching Nervous Collapse and Prostration - Their Only Hope Is In the Use of

In sleep and rest alone can nature repair the daily waste of the body and score up the energies required for duties of the day following: If the nerves are weak and exhausted, and you lie awake, longing for morning to come, you know that you will arise tired and worn out, and one day nearer to nervous collapse, nervous prostration or paralysis.

Sleeplessness, irritability, headache, nearaigia, loss of energy and ambition, confusion of the mental powers, and feelings of lassitude and despondency are among the indications of an exhausted nervous system.

The first thought is to take some opiate to induce sleep, a grave error, indeed, against which many nervous and physical wreck could warn you. There is no rest, no restoration in sleep, or rather unconsciousness, produced by opiates, and the deadening effect on the nerves merely hastens paralysis or prostration.

The most natural and most thorough nerve restorative obtainable is that which is known as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills). It gets right down to the foundation of disease, and by form-ing new, red corpuscles in the blood, and rekindling the vitality of the wasted nerve cells, gradually and perfectly restores new life and vigor to the weak and run-down system.

There is no guesswork, no experimenting, and no faith required when you use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills). It is composed of the elements of nature, which go to form new nerve tissue, and can no more fail than can the laws of nature

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills) is no miracle worker. THE BANK THIEF

Alvord Believed To Be in Greater New York,

New York, Oct. 28 .- Friends of Cornelius L. Alvord, the absconding note teller of the First National Bank, think that he will surrender himself very soon. It is confidently believed the man is hiding in this vicinity, perhaps within the limits of Greater New York. Chief of Detectives McClusky, speaking of the case, said: "A circular describing Alvord and offering a reward for his capture, will be issued.

"When Alvord fled he did not take with him any package of money-he had not stolen any of the bank's secu-rities. He could not lay hands on them. He had not been at the bank since a week ago last Wednesday. There is no woman in the case except his wife. He had no accomplice; none was needed, his method was too simple. "What did he do with the money? Prince Chigi Fined $63,000-The Death of Sims Reeves, England's Great Tenor.

London, Oct. 27.-The Standard, in a paragraph, obviously inspired, announces that Lord Sallisbury will retain the double office of prime minister and secretary of state for foreign affairs, and that Mr. Joseph Chamberlain will retain the portfolio of secretary of state for the colonies.

FINED 315,000 FRANCS. Rome, Oct. 27. - Prince Chigi, who was found guilty of having violated the law against selling valued works of art in disposing of Botticelli's famous painting of "The Virgin and Child," was arraigned in court and sentenced to pay a fine of 315,000 frames, which is the price he is said to have received from an American for the painting, SIMS REEVES.

London, Oct. 27. - Sims Reeves is dead, passing peacefully away in his sleep in Worthing, England, Thursday night. He was born in 1821, the son of a village organist. His father found he could sing, and trained him persistently as a baritone. In 1840, Sims was compelled to sing tenor by accident one night, and discovered his unsuspected power. Ere long he was the premier tenor of the English stage, often receiving $700 a night, and frequently declining as much.

Sims Reeves was probably one of the greatest, if not the greatest tenor that England has produced. He was born Sooter's Hall, Kent, on Oct. 24, 1822. He received his first instruction in music from his father, and when not much more than a boy obtained the appointment of organist and director the choir of the church of North Cray. About the same time he took lessons on the pianoforte from J. B. Cramer, and subsequently was taught singing by T. Cooke, Hobbs and other distinguished professors of the vocal art. He made his first appearance on the stage at Newcastle, in December, 1839, taking baritone parts, and he next went to Paris to study. Shortly afterwards he made his first appearance in Italian opera at La Scala, Milan, in the tenor part of Edgarde in "Lucia di Lammermoor," and filled the same role at Drury Lane Theater, London, on Dec. 6, 1847, under the management of the late M. Julien. He appeared at Her Majesty's Theater as Carlo in "Linda di Chamouni" in 1848, and the next year appeared at the rival house, Covent Garden. He soon, how ever, abandoned opera, and devoted himself to the interpretations of oratoria and special compositions suitable for concert work. He was a regular figure on the platforms of Exeter Hall, St. James' Hall and the Crystal Palace. He will be long remembered by the patrons of the Monday popular concerts in London for his beautiful rendering of Beethoven's "Adelaide" and several of Handel's solos. He became so great an idol with the English public that his failure to appear when announced occasionally caused dis-turbances that approached closely to Bold Club Woman Accuses Her Compatriots of Nurturing Sweat Shops.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 26 .- The sixth annual meeting of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs is the largest ever held by that body, there being nearly 300 delegates present, besides as many visiting club women. A feature of yesterday's afternoon session was an address by Mrs. Mason, the one-time woman factory inspector for the State of Michigan, in which she strongly urged the need of women inspectors, and encouraged the idea of club women making it one branch of their work to secure them by means of the legislature. She said that women and girls employed in factories were suspicious of men inspectors, and fearful of losing their places if they talked, but would often give their confidence to a woman, and in that way improper and unsanitary conditions could be ing places be closed.

The question is also being agitated of appealing to the legislature to have more women physicians in insane asylums and other public institutions where women are detained, and on the boards of control of such institutions. Dr. Eliza Mosher, of the University of Michigan, addressed the women from her seat in the gallery, saying that she had held an official position in a Massachusetts prison, and knows the need of women among women.

STATE OF TRADE IN THE STATES

Points From Bradstreet's and Dun & Jo.'s Reviews.

Bradstreet's says: Despite some irregularities, growing out of unseasonable weather conditions, heavy price changes in leading staples, or increased conservatism in some trades as the election approaches, the general business situation, as a whole, is encouraging, and new elements of manifestations of strength appear from time to time. Perhaps the most notable feature of the week is found in the industrial situation, which has been distinetly improved by the apparently official and final action taken toward ending the anthracite coal miners' strike. Lines of trade which show improvement are those of shoes, leather and kindred products at the east. The situation in cereals shows little change, liquidation of tired-out bulls early in the week, on continued heavy receipts and lack of outside interest, and in corn, because of expected large movement of new crop to market shortly, being succeeded by some strength due to better foreign buying at the decline. Raw sugar is lower, on anticipated large increase in yield over a year ago, and coffee is off, on continued large receipts. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week, aggregate 4,932,978 bushels, against 3,796,643 bushels last week, 4.416.495 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899, and 5,-560,991 bushels in 1898. Corn exports for the week aggregate 3,365,651 bushels, against 2,886,993 bushels last week, 4,525,519 bushels in this week a year ago, and 2,424,376 bushels in 1898. Business failures for the week were 161, as against 223 last week, 211 in this week a year ago, and 219 in 1898.

Dun's review says: The elections mean a great deal to all business interests, and although confidence in the future is seen on every hand, it is but natural that men do not care to take unnecessary chances, and therefore delay new engagements as far as possible until after the ballots are counted. Corn is slightly weaker, while pork products have fallen sharply. Most other provisions are heavy, but linseed oil rose sharply to 75 cents. Hides were very active, with the average price at Chicago for ten grades 10.3 cents higher than at any time since last May. Leather also reached a higher level on good buying. The better tone of the boot and shoe market was sufficient explanation of the advance in materials. Sales of wool at the three chief eastern markets continue to increase. exceeding 5,000,000 pounds last week. Prices are not altered, and bids slightly below the market are refused. Failures for the week were 205 in the United States, against 190 last year. and 28 in Canada, against 23 last year.

BANK CLEARINGS. The bank clearings for the week in the Dominion of Canada were as follows: Montreal, $15,380,116, a decrease of 9.7 per cent; Toronto, $11,787,467, an | pear Queen's avenue. increase of 4.2 per cent; Winnipeg, $2,-284,910, a decrease of 28.8 per cent: Hallifax, $1,725,475, an increase of 9 per cent: Hamilton, $814,909 a decrease of 2.6 per cent; St. John, N. B., $871,811, an increase of 21.3 per cent; Vancouver, $6,150,706, an increase of 14.4 per Victoria, $673,293, an increase of 8.8 per cent.

American Attack Repulsed - McArthur's Troops Retire With Loss.

Washington, Oct. 26.-The war de partment today received a dispatch from Gen. MacArthur, giving an account of a fight, in which a detachment of American troops attacked a superior force of Filipinos. The dis-

V. Heidt, with 60 men of the 3rd Cavalry, attacked insurgents fourteen miles east of Narvican Ilocos, province of Developed a strong position occupied by about 400 riflemen and 1,000 bolomen, under command of Juan Villamor, a subordinate of Timos. A desperate fight ensued, which was most creditable to the force engaged, though under the heavy pressure of overwhelming numbers, our troops were compelled to return to Narvican, which was accomplished in tactical, orderly manner. Assistant Surgeon Bath and a civilian teamster, captured early in the fight, were released by Villamor. According to their accounts, the in-surgents are much stronger than reported here, and their loss, at a moderate estimate, is over 150. Our loss: Killed-First Lieut. George L. Febiger, Charles A. Lindenberg, Wm. F. Wilson, 33rd Regiment, U. S. V. I.; Andrew T. Johnson, farrier; Guy E. McClintock, 3rd Regiment, U. S. Cavalry. Missing -John J. Boyd, Samuel P. Harris, 33rd Regiment; Samuel Davis, Fred Schwen, 3rd Cavalry. Twenty-nine horses miss ing; some known killed. (Signed)

Despicable Tactics

[Catholic Register, Oct. 25.] Such persistent attempts to introduce religion into the political arena and make the public at large believe that Catholics as a whole are being discriminated against in these elections is wholly worthy of the Mail and Empire and the World. It was these two papers that in past elections by their arrant bigotry and anti-Catholicism forced the Catholic electors to leave the Conservative party in hundreds all over the country; was these two papers that by their "No Popery" cries drove Catholics to the support of the Liberals in Ontario. discovered and employers induced to of late in their editorials; if Cathosome reason for introducing the religious discrimination cry. Catholics are not massed into any political body as Catholics except in so far as the Mail and Empire and the World by their bigoted articles in the past have forced them out of the Conservative party. As individuals, Catholics will vote as they think fit. There is no necessity to stir up this religious cry; there is no cause for it. The two papers spoken of do seem to think it worth their while to verify any rumors before introducing them into their editorial page. When Catholics feel that they are being discriminated against they will assert themselves. They have not felt the necessity of doing so as yet in this election.

REWARD OF MERIT.

A New Catarrh Cure Secures National Popularity in Less Than One Year.

Throughout a great nation of eighty million it is a desperate struggle to secure even a recognition for a new article to say nothing of achieving popular favor, and yet within one year Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, the new catarrh cure, has met with such success that today it can be found in every drug store throughout the United States and Canada. To be sure, a large amount of advertising was necessary in the first in-stance to bring the remedy to the attention of the public, but everyone familiar with the subject knows that advertising alone never made any article permanently successful. It must have in addition absolute, undeniable merit, and this the new catarrh cure certainly possesses in a marked degree.

Physicians, who formerly depended upon inhalers, sprays and local washes or ointments now use Stuart's Catarrh Tablets because, as one of the most prominent stated, these tablets contain in pleasant, convenient form all the really efficient catarrh remedies, such as red gum, Guaacol, Eucalyptol, and Sanguinaria.

They contain no cocaine nor opiate. and are given to little children with entire safety and benefit. Dr. J. J. Reitiger, of Covington, Ky. says: I suffered from catarrh in my head and throat every fall, with stoppage of the nose and irritation in the throat, affecting my voice and often extending to the stomach, causing catarrh of the stomach. I bought a fiftycent package of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at my druggist's, carried them in my pocket and used them faithfully, and the way in which they cleared my head and throat was certainly remarkable. I had no catarrh last winter and spring, and consider myself entirely free from any catarrhal trouble. Va., writes: I suffered from catarrh nearly my whole life, and last winter my two children also suffered from my two children also suffered from catarrhal colds and sore throat so much they were out of school a large portion of the winter. My brother, who was cured of catarrhal deafness by using Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, urged me to try them so much that I did so and am truly thankful for what did so, and am truly thankful for what did so, and am truly thankful for what they have done for myself and my children. I always keep a box of the Hours 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. tablets in the house, and at the first appearance of a cold or sore throat we nip it in the bud and catarrh is no longer a household affliction with us. Full-sized packages of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are sold for fifty cents Office hours, 8 to 9:30 a.m., 1 to 2 p.m., and 6 to at all druggists'.

The Witness Speaks

Strong, Calm Statements by a Respected Montreal Journa on Some Public Questions.

A correspondent who is irate over the selection of a brewer to represent the party he supports arrays with some warmth his reasons for wishing to see the Laurier Government turned out. Our correspondent is a very excellent man, and as his reasons are such as influence many excellent men and women, it may be well to give them some heed. The first is "their Initial attitude towards the African contingent." We have no hesitation in saying that the initial attitude of the Laurier Government towards the African contingent question was entirely right. There is no paper in the country which has a better right to say this than the Witness, as for a quarter of a century it has been continuously pointing out the falseness of Canada's position towards the empire in contributing nothing to its defence. Being free from party trammells it was freer than most papers to speak plainly on this question. Neither parity, however, dared to moot the question of imperial defence among the people of Canada. Sir John Macdonald once at a dinner in England assured his audience that Canada would be found ready to do her share, but no challenge would induce him to say anything like that in Canada. When there was rumor of a war in South Africa a demand was raised that the government should at once going to be a war, or if there was one that it would amount to anything, what did this demand mean? It meant that the government of the country, at a time when there was no obvious call, should, either without the aid of parliament, or else at the cost of an extra session of parliament, reverse he whole attitude of the country toards the empire. We hold very prongly that the change would have seen in the right direction, but we sold equally strongly that the method I it would have been unconstituional. Had such unprecedented aclon been taken without both the learest occasion and without the learest evidence that the country ap-

Why was this demand made upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier by persons who, though they were forever posing as never made it at the hands of Sir John Macdonald? Simply because Sir Wilfrid was a French-Canadian and was in parliament largely with a They backing. French-Canadian hought he would never dare to carry out the proposal and that this would mbarrass him with his Englishpeaking supporters who were being worked up with the old cry of "traitor." That cry had previously been alsed on a tariff issue when the Librals wanted to open, as Lord Elgin raid done before them, freer trade reations with the United States. There are always a very great host of very tittle people who will quickly respond to and take up the cry of traffor just

HER HUSBAND WAS A DRUNKARD

Lady Who Cures Her Husband of His Drinking Habits Writes of Her Struggle to Save Her Home.

A PATHETIC LETTER.

'I had for a long time been thinking of trying the Tasteless Samaria Prescription treatment on my husband for his drinking habits, but I was afraid he would discover that I was giving him medicine, and the thought unnerved me. I hesitated for nearly a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's salary nearly all spent, I threw off all fear and determined to make an effort to save our home from the ruin I saw coming, at all hazards. I sent for your Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supper. He never suspected a thing, and 1 then boldly kept right on giving it regularly, as I had discovered something that set every nerve in my my body tingling with hope and happiness, and I could see a bright future spread out before me-a peaceful, happy home, a share in the good things of life, an attentive, loving hus-band, comforts, and everything else dear to a woman's heart; for my husband had told me that whiskey was vile stuff and he was taking a dislike to it. It was only too true, for before I had given him the full course he had stopped drinking alto-gether, but I kept giving him the medicine till it was gone, and then sent for another lot, to have on hand if he should relapse, as he had done from promises be-fore. He never has and I am writing you this letter to tell you how thankful I am. I honestly believe it will cure the worst

[From the Montreal Witness.] | as the London hue and cry used to join in the shout of "stop thief!" Stop thief! stop thief! a highwayman! Not one of them was mute:

And every soul that passed that way Did join in the pursuit.

Who were the people who raised this hue and cry as to the anti-imperial tendency of the Laurier Government' Who but the very people who are denouncing that government for reducing our protection against Great Britain, our open door customer and our military and naval protector; the same who say we should not do this until Britain shall turn protectionist, and that not to protect her own people but to tax her own people's food to protect us. Who was the piper of this treason cry, to whose music "entirely patriotic and disinterested" persons like "Elector, St. Lawrence Division," and his friends march and shout, but a in French, under precisely the same political auspices, dressed up the war news daily to the taste of the most anti-Brtish palate? It is a pitiful sight to see.

Another of the reasons of "An Elector, St. Lawrence Ward," for wishing to overthrow the Laurier Government is on the same treason! treason! lines. The identification of the government with Messrs. Tarte, Bourassa, Monet and Commissioner Perreault, of "Independence of Canada" button fame. It might perhaps surprise this treason shouter to learn that the late Sir Alexander Galt, one of our leading, wisest and most moderate Conservative statesmen, when offered knighthood, plainly stated that he could not accept royal favors without calling to the attention of the government that he was an advocate of the indepenoffer Great Britain a contingent. At dence of Canada. Not only was the that time, when almost no one in honor withheld, but it was later added Britain or Canada thought there was to with distinction, as the wearer of it well deserved. This is a free country, and the persons reprobated in the above category are without charge of treason, to advocate any future for their country they may think good. Messrs. Bourassa and Monet's utterances were repudiated by the government. Mr. Tarte is the only one of the lot with whom the government can be said to be identified, and he has never said anything but what a freeborn Briton of French blood might be expected to Here is what he said the other night in this elector's own division, and in the hearing of his own race and his own prospective constituents: "They say that I am disloyal, but spring. they do not prove it. I defy them to proved it, the opposition would have lies, purporting to be reports of various disloyal speeches made by me the party of imperial patriotism, had while in France. They are most unblushing falsehoods. The Canadian cans, most of whom are country, who would utter disloyal words, would be a traitor. That man is not myself. The traitors to Her Majesty Queen Victoria and to the British flag which floats over us, and grants us all our liberties, are those who try to set the various races in this country against one another. I am addressing a mixed meeting, and the English electors can judge by way my words are received by the French-Canadians in this meeting how far I express their views. I am a French-Canadian-I would be nothing else. My father was a French-Canadian, my mother a French woman. That was an accident of birth. and I could not help it. And I was born under the Union Jack. Yes, and I live under it, and enjoy and appreciate the liberties it represents. am a loyal subject of Her Majesty the Queen. I deserve no special credit for that. Why should we not be loval? Are we not happy? I have just returned, from Paris, where I had the opportunity of studying at close range some 42 different nations, and their form of government. And I found that no form of government was so satisfactory as ours; that no people were so free, and had so much reason friend. to be happy and contented as have we in this Canada of ours.

> "My traducers say that I tried to sell this country to France, and that if I did not deliver the goods it was not my fault. Just as if I and the French-Canadians are so lost to a sense of honor and all sense of selfinterest as to wish to transfer our allegiance from Britain to France! Where is the fool in my race who would for a moment wish to be ruled by France and under the systems which prevail in France? We are French-Canadians, but we are British subjects; yes, and loyal and devoted subjects of her beloved Majesty Queen Victoria.'

ment which are not mere treason cure for Dyspepsia. You see, they dishouting are the emergency rations and the "plebiscite fraud." The emergency rations were a fraud, but not committed by the government. The take after meals, because then you can minister of militia has a good deal to eat what you like best without fear of answer for in the bad management of the contingents at their departure, and cruel lack of care for the health of the men, but that he acted in wilful bad faith in making provision for the men in the field when they should be in extremities is a little beyond beseeing that his own son, since shot in a gallant charge, was among the rest. As for the plebiscite, we have discussed it fully elsewhere. We were always of opinion that prohibition was the right law for the country, and we have always blamed every government that did not make it law. When the Liberal party proposed to take the sense of the country upon it we could not object. It was a reasonable, thing to do, and it could not but be an educative thing. Yet, when the plebiscite had been taken we could not feel that the result had made prohibitory action on the part of the government easier, if indeed it had not made it unwise. Much to our surprise a whole section of the people showed itself practically a unit in position to the principle of prohibition. The evidence of this was chiefly negative; there was almost no spontaneous voice raised in its behalf throughout the whole French section of the province. After having so declared the French people of Canada would have resented any effort to impose prohibition upon them at the demand of another race. It is generally believed, and there is some ground for the belief, that such a law will not achieve the object at which it aims the contrary, eminently cooling and

We should gather from our correspondent's attitude on other correspondent's attitude on other questions that he cares very little what our French fellow-citizens may think in this or on that matter, but as Providence has placed us together with these people as fellow-countrymen, and as British wisdom has made this a self-governing country, we shall make a fatal mistake when we fail to carry them with us in everything that affects our common coun-

The Return Movement.

When Sir John Macdonald presented his National Policy resolutions to the House of Commons, one of the affirmations contained in them was that to the United States and repatriate many of these who had already left. This prediction was never realized; on newspaper whose after ego published the contrary, the exodus continued to increase. It remained for a Liberal government to inaugurate a policy which is not only keeping our own. people at home, but is bringing into the country large numbers of settlers from the United States. Take the following items, which we clip from the latest report of the Department of the Interior, by way of illustration: Mr. V. McInnes, of Detroit, reports that a party comprising 200 souls, headed by an ex-mayor of Detroit, have gone to make homes in Western Canada. They are all well to do, one having $10,000. Mr. McInnes reports that in all, last year, 3,923 settlers, with $548,000 of cash, and $301,500 or effects, left his territory for Canada. D. L. Caven, from Saginaw, Michi-

Beautiful Landscape At the Pan-American.

Charming Effects Produced at Buffalo's Exposition.

Artistic Use of Trees, Plants, Flowers, Lakes, Lagoons, Canals and Fountains.

Already the Scene Is Pleasing.

Work on Grounds Is at an Advanced Stage-Unusual Features of the Exhibits in the Various Departments.

A thing that is almost certain to surprise the visitor to the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition is the attractiveness of the scene which is already presented six months in advance of the opening day. This is due in no small degree to the landscape effects which are in a most unusual state of forwardness.

When the Paris Exposition opened visitors had to wade through shavings and rubbish of all sorts if they wished to see the exhibits. This naturally detracted a great deal from the enjoyment the exposition as a whole might have afforded. Judging by the progress already made there will be no hardships and inconveniences of this kind, no unpleasant sights or sounds to detract from the agreeable effect of the scene when the gates of the Pan-American Exposition open on May 1,

Already there are within the big fence which encloses the grounds seemingly boundless stretches of velvety lawn. A few months ago this was chiefly hard, dry, almost bare, clay. The work of the landscape architect and the horticultural department has wrought a remarkable transformation. The grass which covers these newly made portions of the site is as fresh and green as the grass of April or early May. The promenade bordered with poplars that surrounds the grand canal which completely encircles the grounds is already a delightful place for a stroll. The banks of the canal are green and inviting and the poplars have attained such a growth that they already afford a pleasing shade.

A large area on the west side of the grounds which, even in July, was a formidable clay bank is now finely graded and covered with grass and is as green and smooth as a billiard table. The shrubbery which has been planted is doing finely and the scene as a whole indicates that not only will the buildings be complete and the exhibits installed when the gates open, but the finishing touches will have been put upon the landscape and everything will present the appearance of readiness for the expected guests. Of course it is of the greatest advantage to the exposition to have as a part of the grounds the finest portion of Delaware Park, with its lake, wooded hills, winding roads and pathways and rare shrubbery, plants and flowers. this repesents a work of 30 years and an expenditure of millions of dollars. It would be folly to alter in any radical manner the character or adomments of this beautiful park. natural gardening and the buildings of the exposition which are situated in Delaware Park proper will not disturb to any material extent its present character but will add to, rather than detract from, the natural beauty of the landscape. Highly colored and formal beds would be out of place in the environments of this park. But as one passes from the Delaware Park proper into the newly-made park adjoining it where the principal group of exposition buildings is situated the scene changes. One scarcely knows where the old park ends and the new park begins, but the change is striking. Formal avenues take the place of winding roads. Straight line terraces with sharp angles, and a more gener ally formal arrangement of the landscape denote the gardens of the Orient and of Europe for centuries past.

Beds of flowering plants are introduced profusely to add to the brilliancy of the general effect. wide spaces on either side of the great esplanade, facing the buildings of the government group on the one hand and of horticulture, mines and graphic arts on the other, will be sunken gardens, surrounded by the choicest of flowers and bordered with such rare aquatics as the exotic Nymphaeas and the Egyptian Lotus. The fountains in the center of these sunken gardens, are now being constructed, the grading has been done and many of the beds of flowers are assuming shape.

In the space to the southwest of the horticultural group, across the grand canal, is an extensive area which is partly wooded and partly planted with shrubs. Here, and in an adjoining area which has been left mostly clear of trees and shrubs, some of the finest floral exhibits will be made. Nurserymen, florists and horticulturists generally realize the opportunity they will have at the Pan-American and are competing eagerly for places for exhibits. Thus the display of this character is sure to be the finest of its kind ever made and will greatly enhance the beauty of the landscape and the attractions of the exposition

The work on the horticultural building is making fine progress and the other buldings of the group, those of mines and graphic arts, are already completed. The conservatories con-necting the latter buildings with that of horticulture are among the beautiful architectural features of the exposition and when filled with rare plants next summer will be a great center of interest. The conservatories are now completed and will be heated so that early in the winter they can be utilized for plants. Although not modern constructed conservatories, they have all the requisites to the growth and welfare of any plants which it will be desirable to display. During the exposition these conservatories will be kept constantly gay with blooming plants and fine foliage, and, in fact everything new and beautiful in ornamental plants.

The many little lagoons bordering and running up from the mirror lakes. profusely planted with a great variety of water lilies and other aquatics, give the aspect of having been the work of years instead of only months. plants have made a vigorous growth and most of the varities are now, in October, in the flowering stage, all of which assures beyond a doubt a fine display next year.

On the borders and margins of all the new plantations of shrubbery, groups of hardy perennials have been planted, all the known hardy varieties are represented and of these 200,000 have been used. These will add a very natural and charming appearance to the grounds.

Indeed, it is scarcely possible to emphasize too much the attractiveness of this feature of the Pan-American Pretty Ethel Lee had a will of her own, and no one was more astonished at the manner of its expression than her friend, Madam Morrow, when Ethel plainly informed her that she declined to marry a man "old enough to be her father.

In her girlish fancy she had woven certain sweet pictures of her ideal love, whom she had never seen, but to whom she had been betrothed in infancy.

The nearest approach to this ideal was Dr. Macy, who had attended her in a severe sickness. Had he proposed she would have accepted him; but he

Her fancy, however, received a severe shock when she received a letter which informed her that her guardian would be there the next day to claim his little bride, while Madam Morrow, quite at a loss to account for this sudden change of sentiment, having been kept in blissful ignorance of the mischief wrought within the past few months, strove in yain to expostulate

Then she looked up, with a start, and gave ut-terance to a cry of surprise as she found herself face to face with Dr. Macy, whom she had not seen for the

For a moment she stood trembling, then, forgetting everything in the wild, passionate tide of mingled love and grief that swept over her, she extended both her hands. "Oh, Dr. Macy, have you come last?"

The young physician's hands closed over hers with a fervent, thrilling pressure; his dark eyes rested on her face, instinct with the sentiment she had longed to see there.

"Yes, my darling, I have come for you—for you only—to take you home," he answered. "Home! Where?" she repeated, be-

Mr. George Kennan, in his Siberian sketches, says Dr. Nathan M. Babad, in Frank Leslie's Popular Magazine for October, draws a powerful picture of these horrors from an American point of view. And yet how much of the more intimate character of that life escaped his keen observation. There is nothing in the whole history of Siberia more revolting, to my mind, than the death of Sigida and her fellow-prisoners. She was a beautiful woman, swept away by the current of Nihilism, and in due time gathered in together with others by the net of the Third Sec-Their treatment in the female prison at the hands of the Siberian officials was brutal in the extreme. Unable to get the ear of the higher authorities, the unfortunate woman decided upon a novel yet excruciating method of making their protest heard. They chose starvation as a weapon. For twenty-one days Sigida touched no food. This brought no results. Emaclated, on the point of insanity, Sigida, to draw attention of the government in some radical way, publicly slapped the face of Masikoff, the prison warden. Her fate, after this, defies description. She was first kept alive by the forcible introduction of food. With the last strength in her the poor woman struggled against it. But even she could not dream of what was in store for her. Two weeks later an ukase was issued subjecting all political convicts, men and women, to the punishment inflicted upon common murderers. Women were to be flogged as well as men, and Sigida was decided upon as the first victim. doomed to receive a hundred blows by the knout! The physician in charge declared his doubt as to her survival. But this did not matter, Col. Bobrovwas called upon to attend to the execution. He looked into her pale, haggard face, vulgarly felt her arms, and said with a cynical sneer: "Oh, she's all right! This one will survive more blows than that." And he actually ordered the execution to take place in his presence.

CITY OF MONUMENTS

Berlin Outdoes All Others in This Particular Form of Decoration.

Of all the cities of the world the richest in monuments is probably Berlin, even now, and if there is another city which can boast of more monuments than Berlin's 63 it is destined to be distanced by the German capital within a few years, says the New York World. For when the Avenue of Victory shall have been adorned with all the statues in contemplation, and when the monuments to Bismarck, Von Moltke and the Emperor Frederick shall have been completed, the "Athens by the Spree," as the Berlin-ers love to call their city, will possess ed the names on some of these monuments would have fallen into oblivion but for them. A few of the really great men have two monuments apiece, and one of them, Frederick the Great, is honored with three monuments in different parts of the city.

It is worthy of note that the scientist Helmholts, though recently dead, has already had two statues erected cal advantage. In 1888 an English 9.2- in his honor, one in front of the university, the other on the Potsdam bridge. In view of the military traditions of Prussia, it is rather surprising that of the completed monuments 32 are of civilians and only 29 of military men. The remaining two are of women, Queen Louise and Empress Augusta. Schiller was the first civilian to obtain a monument. An interesting statue is that of Jahn, the father of turning and turnvereens. The figure stands on a mound, the stones of which were sent from all parts of Germany, and even from America.

Among the others to whom Berlin has erected monuments are Goethe, Luther, the two Humbolts, Lessing, the scientists Siemens, Gauss and Roentgen (the discoverer of the X-rays), and the poets Chamisso, Uhland and Koerner.

There was no rapture in his voice or manner. He looked, as he said, pleased, and nothing more.

Little by little the color came to Lola's face again and words to her

"I cannot tell you how pleased I am to see you, Sir Kan," she replied. "You must stay for dinner—it will be ready in ten minutes."

"Yes, do, Sir Karl," said madame. "It will be like old times to have you with us again.' He had intended to go over to Deep-

'Surely," she said, "you could never think of leaving us tonight; it would be too unkind.'

"I did not come prepared to stay," he answered, still half hesitatingly. have been traveling all night and day and my dress is unsuited for ladies' company.

"We will excuse all that," returned Lola quickly. "There is no need even to mention it. Let me ring and order your horses to be taken to the stables. You will not refuse me. I am sure." "It is very kind of you, but—"
"'But me no buts!" laughed Lola.

"Now you must consent. I have heard you say that a line from Shakespeare would reconcile you to anything." He laughed, and with the laugh he yielded. It was pleasant to be welcomed so warmly by those two graceful women, to be made to feel that he had brought brightness and happiness with him, to know that their delight at was more like coming home than going to Scarsdale would be; so he yielded to the temptation or the impulse, and remained. Madame, noting her daughter's defight, felt her heart sink. She could see that Sir Karl did not care for her except as a friend; and it dawned upon her that an unfortunate love alffair would be the one thing in this world which would be most baneful to

They had a pleasant dinner. Madame ordered some of her choicest wines to be brought; the viands were recherche and the fruit was delicious. Afterward all three repaired to the drawingroom. The long windows opened on to the lawn, the thirf of which was smooth as velvet. The room itself was filled with the perfume of odorous flowers, and sweet with the breath of the sum-

Madame went to her couch. She was sure Sir Karl would excuse her; but the day had been warm, and she was tired. The fact was, her head ached for her daughter. And if a tete-a-tete after a long absence would be useful to Lola, she should have it.

"If I should forget myself, Sir Karl. and fall asleep," she said, "you will forgive me. Assure me beforehand of your pardon, and I shall be satisfied." "I can have no greater pleasure than to see madame comfortable," returned Sir Karl: and in a few moments he saw by the closed eyelide that he was virtually alone with Lola She made some half-laughing apology for her mother; but Sir Karl would not allow that one was needed.

"It is warm here," she said. "Let us go on to the lawn. I should like to talk to you after your absence."

That was just what he did not want to do, but he did not like to tell her There was nothing for it but for him to follow her on to the lawn. Then he wished that he had taken a cigar; for, as though the action was quite natural for her, she held out her hand for his arm. He gave it to her with a low bow, and they went off together toward the lime-trees. All around was still; there was no sound save the sweet one of falling water. It was the very night for poetry and "I am very glad that you are pleas-ed with them. Tell me one thing more. Do you care more for my friendship now than you did Would you feel reluctant to lose it now?" "Most certainly I should," he answered. "I should be more than re-luctant—I should be grieved. But why should there be any fear of such a thing?"

"I hope there is not," she said. "I was merely wondering, if you were to lose my friendship, whether you would feel it acutely."

sponded. "I do not see anything to prevent it." You were wrong in one respect," said Lola, raising her bright, beautiful "You anticipated finding me married on your return. See how true

I have been to our friendship." "Your marriage need not have impaired it," he replied. "If, however, you had married someone who objected to it, your clear duty would have been to put an end to it."

His thoughts hardly went with his words. He was wondering how Dolores looked with a widow's cap on her fair hair, whether she would be pleasand the emotion of the girl by his side escaped him.

She walked on in silence. At length she spoke. This was to have been a day of supreme happiness to her, and it did not seem to her as though it had fulfilled its promise "Is that all you have to say to me?" she asked slowly. He looked down at her with a smile. "Have I left anything unsaid which I ought to have said?" "You must be the best judge of that, Sir Karl," she replied. "I am pleased indeed to see you and hope you are equally delighted to see me."

"I have assured you of that," he said gravely. "You seem distrait and preoccupied, Sir Karl-as though your thoughts were hardly here.' "Then I am ashamed of myself," he answered; "that would be unpardon-able. The fact is," he added in a able. lower tone, "my mind is full of one great hope, and I am afraid that I lose myself in thinking of it."

Her heart gave one passionate throb: no doubt came to her, as to what the great hope was that filled his mind. It must be the winning of her love; the very fact of his mentioning it proved She bowed her head in silence; the words were unutterably sweet to her. Why did he not say more? Surely he would! But he also was silent for some moments. "Some day," he said then, "I will tell you, as we are friends, more of this great hope of mine. Now I must go, for it is growing late; and Scarsdale is some little distance from here." "Must you go?" she asked, with the least pressure of her hand on his arm. "I wish you could remain one hour This is, above all others, the night for a beautiful walk."

Who knew its beauty and its dangers better than he did? 'Do not wake madame," he said, "bid her good-bye for me."

"Shall I add that you will come the next few days; but I will ride over as soon as I can."

"I shall miss the pleasure of writing to you," she said; and the way in which she clung to his arm was almost caressing

"I shall be here to listen to all your pleasant little gossip," he replied. "Speaking is better than writing." "I could write more than I can say," she said, with a flush on her face, her eves averted.

He made no reply to that, but said "Good-night" to her gravely. When the moon rose an hour later. its beams fell upon a beautiful figure g, with its robes of amber silk and black lace, upon the dry, dewless turf, and upon a white despairing face, raised to the sky, while the silence of the night was broken by the solbs of a woman, who cried: "Give me his love, O heaven, or I

CHAPTER XVI.

Sir Karl gave a deep sigh of relief in the bright moonlight to Scarsdale. He had dreaded this interview with Lola, and now it was over. He had to Beaulieu first on his return to England; he would never have rembered it but for the coaxing little letter, he knew that he must keep his promise, and guard himself from peril as well as he could. However, it was over now; and he thought he had done a wise and diplomatic thing in telling Lola of his "one great hope." she should imagine that hope applied to herself never occurred to him: he thought he had let her see that his affections were fixed elsewhere.

Now all this would be plain sailing, and there would be no more mistakes. As a friend, this beautiful bewitching French girl was certainly not to be equaled; as a woman to love, she would not suit him at all. He was highly pleased with the result of his How well she had received that allusion to his hope! He had been almost afraid that there would have been a scene. He was delighted that she had listened in such sweet sympathetic silence to what he had to say. It was a good omen that she should be so complaisant. Now he could visit Lady Rhysworth with a light heart; by noon tomorrow he should see her.

That one thought was enough for him-"by noon tomorrow." He did not what he should say to her, or what the result would be—whether she would be pleased or not to see him, whether he should ultimately win her; he thought only of those few words-he should be with her noon tomorrow!"

Early the next morning he started for Deeping Hurst. He had not forgotten that Dolores had a little daughter, and he took with him some marvelous toys which he had brought home for the child. He felt sure that the way to Dolores' heart now would be through her little daughter. So he rode on, his heart filled with happy thoughts, until he reached his destination. He asked the servant who answered his summens if Lady Rhysworth was at home. He remembered that he had never seen her as Lady Rhysworth; nor had he seen her in her new home. He recalled his parting from her. What would his meeting with her be like?

Popularity of Blood and Thunder Stories Diminishes Annually.

Dies With Indians-Boys Nowadays Know the West Is hot Wild and Woolly-Change Their Taste.

[Chicago Tribune.]

Twenty-five years ago the dime novel was credited with all the shortcomings of masculine youth. The boy who read them was considered booked for the But in these days, when the bad. cigarette has been made to shoulder the sins of misguided youth, the dime novel, as a bogey man, has disappeared from its once high place as a corrupting influence among the young. the reason for this is that the dime novel itself is as nearly extinct as the dodo

In the light of trade of the "book manufacturer" the reason for this is easy. The Indian has disappeared from ed to see him, how she would greet the warpath. The James boys are him, what her first words would be; dead. The Youngers are in State's prison for life. The woolly West is a good deal safer than are many of Chicago's residence streets after dark.

CAUSE OF THE CHANGE. Always the book manufacturer has kept just behind a news sensation. When Sitting Bull was standing nearly all the time and when Captain Jack of the Modocs was raising Cain and hair on the Pacific coast then the dime novel was in its heyday. In the massacre of Custer and his band of troopers the dime novel manufacturer made thousands. But today the dime novel is about as attractive to its former constituency as would be a novel dealing with scenes and characters in the stone age. A boy cannot be fired with the embition to kill cords of redskins when he knows that most of them are now wearing cast-off army overcoats and trading government rations for forty-rod whisky. Most of the stages of the West have degenerated into the three-seat spring wagon driven by a farmer who sits on a pouch of United States mail and spits tobacco juice over the front wheel. To hold up such a vehicle and make even a million dollar haul would have no heroids in it. The West has lost its settings for the dime novel and having lost it, the penny dreadful literature has reverted to the East again and to the slums of the great cities.

DETECTIVE STORIES POPULAR. With the passing of the dime novel a great "literary" field, once followed and productive, is now waste. Time was when men who wrote for the dime novel publishers rode in carriages and had valets if they wanted them. In the minimum of time they turned out manuscripts that brought nearly the maximum for hack work. But today a man with a thrilling, blood-curdling story of the West could not sell it at any price. "Old Sleuth"-Harland P. Halsey, of Brooklyn, who died less than a year ago-has left behind him the nearest substitute for the dime novel. It costs only half as much, however, and it Yes. I shall be busily engaged for of New York life. Piles of this man's manuscripts were left in the safe of a New York publishing house, and every sixty days one of his stories is issued, averaging close to 75,000 copies before the plates finally are taken off the These stories of the Sleuth" series deal with men who are marvels of detective skill. They are capable of disguising themseleves until their mothers wouldn't know them, and they come out of tight places with an easy confidence that sends little thrills up and down the backbone of the reader. When they are consulted in a great case they look for clews, measure all the surrounding things with a bit of tape, tell the com-plainant to keep "mum," and the next thing he knows the villains are in custody. FEW NEW PAPER-BOUND BOOKS. Of the books in paper covers, printed "for the trade," few of them are new. Before international copyright was secured the publishers in the United States grabbed every story as soon as it came from the press. Thousands of these books are now lying in vaults when he found himself driving home in New York, ready to be drawn upon at some future time. When they are drawn a new title and new covers will make them new books. These books of forgotten all about his promise to go 200 or 300 pages can be furnished to the retailer at a little more than 6 cents each. Some of the old weekly papers which which brought it all to his mind. Then ran from three to five serial stories all the time, are gold mines to the bookmakers. They go back through the

SUCH A CHANGE.

Not only in feelings but in looks. The skin is clear, the eyes are bright, the cheeks are plump. No more pain and misery, no more sick headache, no more jaundice. What worked the change? Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cured the disease of the stomach that prevented proper nutrition, and also cleansed the clogged and sluggish liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of lungs, heart, liver, and other organs which seem remote from the stomach because many of these diseases have their cause in a diseased condition of the stomach involving the allied organs of digestion and nutrition.

"I sent you s letter about a year ago," writes Mrs. J. Ellis Hamilton, of Farmington, Marion Co., West Va. "I stated my case as plainly as I could, and received a letter from you in a few days, telling me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Meddays, telling me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription'—a bottle of each. I used three of each, and feel like a new woman. Don't suffer any pain or misery any more. Before using your medicines I suffered all the time—had jaundice, caused from food not digesting properly. I would have sick headache three and four times in a week. Could not do the work myself. I commenced using your medicines as recommended for liver complaint, and think I am cured now. I asked our doctor if he couldn't cure me, and he said he could give me medicine to help me but the trouble might return any time. I doctored three years without any relief. Haven't had sick headache since I took the first bottle of your medicine."

files of these papers, most of them dead, and reprint the old serials that served to amuse and entertain another generation. Titles are always changed and if necessary a little editing is done to bring the stories up to date. There is nothing to pay for manuscripts, no royalties, and the excess over typography and paper is all profit. The Spanish war made a field for some new, cheap fiction, but it has been worked out. The suppression of "Sapho" on the stage made that book immensely in demand. It had been printed before the copyright law was passed and one house in New York printed and sold 1,000,000 copies of it while the sensation lasted. It is dead stock today. When Kipling was so dangerously ill more than a year ago his pirated works had an enormous sale, dropping off again as he grew better. Just now it is the regret of the book manufacturer that there seems to be nothing on the tapis which promises an awakening in the trade along such

I am a part of your being, As you are a part of mane; Kindred we are to each other, Kindred by ties divine.

I am a part of the glory And the wonder that no man knows, Crowned with the springtime's beauty, And the winter's drifting snows.

Mine are the pleasant valleys, And the mountain's dizzy height, Wrapped in the glory of morning, And the sunset's fading light.

Mine are the verdant pastures, And the hills where the cattle graze, And the far-off stretches lying Asleep in the noonday haze.

Mine are the rivers flowing With their waters to the sea; And the woods where the wind is sighing. They are all a part of me.

Mine are the purple asters, And the yellow daffodils, All of the perfumed sweetness That each fragrant petal spills.

Mine is the grass that's springing And the moss where they lie asleep, In the peaceful churchyard slumber-My weary wandering sheep.

I am the earth who loves you. With all of my treasures vast, And unto my peaceful bosom I will gather you at last.

The Moon-Baby. There's a beautiful golden cradle. That rocks in the rose red sky; I have seen it there in the evening air,

Where the bats and beetles fly; With little white clouds for curtains, And pillows of fleecy wool, And a dear little bed for the Moon-

Baby's head, So tiny and beautiful.

There are tender young stars around

That wait for their bath of dew, In the purple tints that the sun's warm prints

Have left on the mountain blue; There are good little gentle planets, That want to be nursed and kissed And laid to sleep in the ocean deep, Under silvery folds of mist.

But the Moon-Baby first must slumber For he is their proud young king; So, hand in hand, round his bed they stand. And lullabies low they sing. And the beautiful golden cradle Is rocked by the winds that stray With pinions soft, from the halls aloft, Where the Moon-Baby lives today.

But he wrote for a soul in a troubled Inspired by God's love in the cloud.

The artist stood at his easel, And 'neath his brush did appear A vision of hope and beauty. To fill the lonely with cheer.

Long had he stood in the garden, And watched with his heart aflame The marvelous colors of sunset-To him there the vision came.

And another sat at an organ, As twilight succeeded the day, 'Neath his fingers such wondrous music arose As only the angels might play.

It stole through the darkened chapel, It quivered on wings to a room, Where it brought to a mourning God's voice of hope in the gloom.

He, too, had watched the pageant, That preceded the coming of night, In his soul rose the exquisite harmonies That struggled for freedom and light.

To each came an inspiration, As he gazed through the gates of the west, And touched by the heavenly glory, Each gave to the world his best.

In making gelatine jellies it is well to remember that to one-fourth of a box of gelatine take one-fourth of a cup of water; to one-half of a box, one-half of a cup, and to one box, one cup. Let it soak fully one-half of an hour. In summer more gelatine will be required to solidify a given amount of liquid than in winter, and some fruit juices take more than others. THE PROBLEMS OF THE MANTEL. The young housekeeper is much better off in a house having only a mantel shelf over the fireplace than with an ordinary overmantel. In that case she can invest the fireplace with great interest and beauty, and lend it the charm of her individual tastes. making it from floor to ceiling a study tain laws should always be followed and the question of proportion never neglected. Architecturally considered, the space over the mantel shelf belongs to the rest of the wall space, and its decorations must be carried up to the ceiling, so that the lines of doors, windows and fireplace should be balanced. When the architect or builder, however, has left only a bare space over the mantel shelf the householder in her decoration should observe the general laws of decoration which he has laid down. Thus when a picture, mirror and bas relief is introduced over the mantel shelf it takes the place of a panel. Great care must be taken in placing it, so that no general rule of proportion is violated. Thus a picture or bas relief not filling the entire space should be so hung that the wall spaces above and below it are properly balanced. A small or unimportant picture is to be avoided, certain straight up and down or curved lines are always to be suggested.
