Saturday Will Be Overcoat Day for Men

We are pioneering today just as much as in the day we established a men's clothing business based on honor. We have consistently barred out all unworthy grades, discontinued methods looking only towards the dollar in sight, and stoutly encouraged manufacturers whose first thought was to make their clothing as well as they knew how, whose efforts towards style and better finish were constant as well as intelligent. Our reward has been most encouraging. A men's clothing business steadily increasing from week to week and month to month, ever growing steadily. October is the great men's outfitting month. We see wonderful business ahead, and our autumn lines are now at top noich of completeness

THE RICHELIEU BY-ELECTION. With a by-election approaching in Richelieu, Mr. Bourassa mournfully recalls a meeting in that riding in June, 1911, which acclaimed the denunciation of the Laurier naval law and the "not less nefarious policy of Mr. Borden." "They were encouraged on that occasion," he says in Le Deyour, "by an important Conservative member, Mr. Blondin."

Mr. Blondin is now the deputy choice of Mr. Borden and his colleagues for that high office.

Mr. Bourassa also recalls a meeting at St. Eustache, at which Messrs. Monk and Nantel denounced the pronaval purposes

two of the most important portfolios

In the Borden cabinet. The by-election in Richelieu will take place before the Government has disclosed its naval policy. The position of the Government candidate is more comfortable now than it will be later. He is not obliged to defend any course of action, or invent one of his own. He can denounce the Laurier policy, and ask the electors to take him on trust. With such shining examples of consistency before him as Messrs. Monk, Nantel and Blondin, he need not be particular.

THE PENALTY OF OVERWORK.

Discussions and movements seem to be all started by the doctors nowadays. Last month it was Dr. Schaefer with his manufacture of life. A while age Dr. Metchnikoff started the sour milk furore and the conquest of old age. Dr. Osler's joke about a lethal chamber for sexagenarians is still echoing liament should sanction nothing that wheel or from hypochondria resultant upon giving up work and having nothing else interesting to do, that in their youth they should learn to play and keep it up later on. Having learnt in youth to be young they never will be old; however much their arteries may steam at the party conventions. softening the learned doctor does not speak. His advice must obviously be addressed to people under 50, under 40 or 30, indeed, as an ex post facto prescription will do no more good to quinquegenarians than to others. Here is some good advice:

"Work is eventually harmful if it is done intensely and intensively with the mind concentrated upon practically one line of activities. All treadmill activity, if it closely and almost solely engrosses the attention, leads to degeneration. Interest in the cultural phases of life, in art, literature, music, social problems, politics, even religion, disappears in is almost beyond recall."

It is often said that few friendships are made after 40, and Dr. Dana helps to explain why. The age when friendships are most readily made is precisely the age of unselfish enthusiasms. Nothing draws men together like common tastes that can be shared without rivalry. Nothing, on the other hand, keeps men apart more hoplessly than absorption in personal interests. There may be respect, confidence, good fellowship, but it rarely goes very deep. Each is increasingly preoccupied, increasingly limited to things that concern himself and no one else, increasingly incapable of a hearty spontaneous interest in what Dr. Dana calls "the cultural phases of life." It is a had sign when one who used to enjoy a good book or a lively argument finds it harder and harder to drop his work and take pleasure in such diversions. There is a hardening of the mind like a hardening of the arteries, but luckily At can be warded off by beginning in time. The great danger is that if allowed to run on it makes the victim helplessly dependent upon the narrow range of activities to which he has been so long restricted. This is the predicament not only of the successful money-makers who are so often sectured for not stopping when they have enough, but of multitudes of hard-working people who have no money to spare, but who none the less ought, simply as a "business proposition" to learn to relax in order to save their strength and lessen the risk of a breakdown.

Many hints can be got out of "Who's Who," where the recreations of the famous, all doubtless over 50, are gravely catalogued at the tail-end of their achievements. One professor, not so very far away from here, gave in his pastimes as golf and composing Kaiser's attendance at the Swiss mahow to be young, and happy though a professor. Golf seems to be indicated without company—that way madness lies. It may be noted as axiomatic that one man's play is another's toil. Rockefeller probably feels moneymaking to be a life-long game, all play and no work, fleecing the public.

But Dr. Dana's point is to enjoin some diversion from the beaten routine; if the specialty be itself a game, perhaps work would be the best kind of play. Dr. Dana uses "play" in a broad sense of anything to relieve and broaden life by variety of interest. Learn to relax, he says, in order to save your strength and to remain a man rather than become a machine, wear out in time and be fit for nothing but the junk-heap. Keep young by loving letters and arts, making friends for the consignment of paper bags as well as money, and in the end gain from Sydney.

THE C. P. R. STOCK ISSUE.

The objection to the C. P. R.'s 'melon-cutting" is thus stated: the company offers 600,000 shares of new stock to shareholders at $175 per share, whereas if the stock were sold at the market price (which is about $100 more), a smaller amount could have been issued and there would have been less share capital upon which to earn dividends. In other words, the company propose to water speaker of the House of Commons, the the stock and use the water as an argument against the reduction of freight

If the company's financial expedient opened the way to such an abuse, it would be the duty of Parliament to inposal of an emergency contribution for terfere to the extent of its power. But seemingly the company has the right Messrs. Monk and Nantel today hold to do as it proposes under permissive legislation passed 20 years ago, Apart from this, its rates are now under the control of the railway commission. which can easily take into account these melon-cutting operations. past, present, or future. It ought to be possible for Parliament to decree that the capital put into the shareholders' pockets, instead of into the road, by these devices, shall not be considered in the fixing of rates. It would protect the public as effectively as interference with the company's method of raising money and its treatment of its shareholders. It is clear that but for the expectation that the precedent of other stock issues would be followed, the market price of C. P. R. stock would be much lower-perhaps fifty points-than at present. The same depreciation would happen if the new This is a fact that is not given its just weight in the arguments for prohibitory legislation. But certainly Parwould give the company a lever for Now it is Dr. C. L. Dr. Drummond's Treatment of Faust Legend [By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

To revert to the subject which I was discussing the day before yesterday, I wonder if many of my readers have happened upon the story of the French-Canadian Faust? There have been many burlesques on the Faust legend, but I imagine that Dr. W. H. Drummond, the poet of the habitant, has written quite the cleverest of them all. His poem is entitled "The Devil," and relates the story of the dealings of a habitant, Louis Desjardins, of Bord a Plouffe, with Mephistopheles—only Louis didn't usually call him by that title. Louis had a farm which was very tantalizing; do what he would, work himself to the bone. he could not seem to get ahead, for,

Twas lak a swamp, de farm he got, De water ev'rywhere-Might drain her off as tight as a drum, An' back dat water is boun' to come In less'n a day or two-ba gum! 'Twould mak' de angel swear.

So one winter night, when Louis was in bed, he said to himself that if the devil should suddenly appear and say to him, "Tiens! Louis! You won't have to work any more, your hard times will be at an end, and you'll be able to live like a Grand Seigneur, if you will only agree to be ready to come with me when I call for you after forty years!" he would say yes, most joyfully. No sooner thought than done! The devil appeared before him and bound him over to the forty-year contract. Good times began for Louis the very next day, W'en Louis get up next day, ma frien', Dere's a lot of devil sign-Bar'l o' pork an' keg o' rye, Bag o' potato ten foot high. Pile o' wood nearly touch de sky, Was some o' de t'ing he fin'.

Suit o' clothes would hav' cost a lot, An' ev'rything I dunno, Trotter horse w'en he want to ride, Eatin' away on de barn outside, Stan' all day if he's never tied, An' watch an' chain also.

The swamp dried up, the crops were always good, the chores did themselves, and so Louis lived in luxury until the close of the fortieth year. Then on a dark and stormy night the "Not in a car," said Bobby, "It does devil suddenly appeared in the room. Poor Louis, with the innate courtesy of his race, thought he would try to ingratiate himself with his black-haired visitor. He pressed him to take some "w'isky blanc," made "back on St. Laurent." At first the devil refused, but the smell of the sugar and spice rich man gave him a "character" and overcame him and he took a glass or two. Louis could not persuade him to take too much, however, and he said:

> "For tam is up wit' you, Louis, So come along, my frien', wit' me."

Then the quick-witted but everpolite Louis thought of another scheme. If he could only get his visitor to try the strong Canadian bacco he might win out. So he said:

'No hury-wait a minute, please, We'll have a smoke before we're t'roo.

'Twill never hurt mese'f or you To try a pipe, or mebbe two, Of tabac Canayen."

Willing to be sociable, the devil accepted the invitation, and now I quote the remaining e which tell how Louis came it over Mephisto

'Wan pipe is all I want for me, We'll finish our smoke downstair," De devil say, an' it was enough, For w'en he tak' de very firse puff He holler out, "Maudit! w'at stuff! Fresh air! fresh air!! fresh air!!!"

An' oh! he was never sick before, Till he smoke tabac Bruneau-Can't walk or fly, but he want fresh air:

So Louis put heem on rockin' chair, An' t'row heem off on de road out dere-An' tole heem go below.

An' he shut de door an' fill de place Wit' tabac Canayen, An' never come out, an' dat's a fac'-But smoke away till hees face black-

So dat's why de devil don't come back For Louis Desjardins

An' dere he's yet, an' dere he'll stay-So weech of de two'll win, Can't say for dat—it's kin' of a doubt,

For Louis, de pipe he never leave hees mout'. An' night or day can't catch heem out,

Do not laugh unless there is something really worth laughing about. Notice how many of your friends laugh from pure nervousness. It is a waste of vitality and of magnetism. Learn to smile without laughing, and to smile with your eyes more than your lips. All this tends to develop self-poise, and self-poise is one of the essentials of personal charm.

Some children COMMAND their parents to fetch and carry objects for pleasure and rarely say "thank you" unless reminded. It is an easy matter to teach a small child to say "Pardon me, but I think you have made a mistake," where the child is confident, to an elder or a companion who has made a mistake in relating some incident. Every child has a right to express its have almost gone to the other extreme opinion, that is the way childish minds expand; but when they say, "That's no such thing," "No you didn't, either," and the parent allows the flat contradiction to pass as proof of the child's smartness, then a great evil is being countenanced and abetted. Our children are rarely taught to listen respectfully to their elders. They whistle, sing, and interrupt, and walk away in the midst of conversation without making an apology. Boys sit in the presence of older people who stand; they rush into and out of a room where there is conversation or music, with no apology, and usually unrebuked.

The closer to the bone the fingers press the greater the chance that the oozing capillary will be emptied and closed. Next, the head is nitched forward and the nose allowed to fill with blood, the patient breathing through the mouth. After about five minutes the pressure can be somewha

Instead of sewing frills of lace into the sleeves of your dresses stitch the lace to strips of narrow tape and baste that into the dresses. It can be easily taken out and laundered.

About Pineapples

Pineapples do not grow on trees. Imagine a plant four feet in extreme height from the ground to the tip of leaves, a single stalk at the surface, but dividing at once into swordlike blades or leaves fifteen in number, from the centre of which is the fruit. This stem is short, and the crown of the fruit when fully grown is a foot or more below the At the end of a year and a half from planting each plant produces a single fruit, even as a cabbage plant produces a single head. But the pineapple does not die after fruiting once. the stem below the fruit and among the long, narrow leaves a sucker appears. ## DEVORE'S GREAT CATCH OF CADY'S LINE DRIVE IN NINTH WINS GAME

Rube Marquard, Giants' Great Southpaw, Gets the Verdict Over Buck O'Brien in Sensational Pitchers' Battle at Boston.

RED SOX STARTED RALLY IN NINTH BUT COULD ONLY SCORE ONE RUN

Not a Boston Player Reached Third Base For Eight Innings-Murray's Double and Two Sacrifices Gave Giants First-Fletcher Bats in Winning Run in Fifth.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 10.—This particular world's series promises to establish a new record for furnishing exciting finishes and producing heroes.

There were both this afternoon, the thrills coming in the ninth inning when Boston got one of the two runs that were needed to tie the score and placed men on second and third with two out. Enter the hero in deep right, wearing the namee of Josh Devore. Forest Cady, Boston's big catcher, who had relieved Bill Carrigan when Manager Stahl started to put in the pinch hitters, came to bat at this interesting juncture where a base hit meant victory for Boston and anything else that would enable a man to score from third would tie the count and give the Red Sox the edge on New York's fast-tiring pitcher.

MARQUARD GROOVED ONE. Cady let two bad ones go by and then took a toe hold to hit what ball players call the "cripple" and the "old percentage ball," because it is aimed over the plate by pitchers who do not want to get further in the hole. Usually it is a breach of big league etiquette to jump on the "cripple." but when a hit means the game it is just the one to be smited a mile.

There was nothing lacking in the anthusiasm of Cady's wallon in this in-

There was nothing lacking in the enthusiasm of Cady's wallop in this instance. He is a big man and a strong one, and every ounce of his weight was behind a swing that met the ball squarely on the frontpiece. If ever there was a more solid, screaming hit than the line drive which left Mr. Cady's bat its author must have been Swat Milligan, of fictional fame. Out to right centre went the ball, leaving a smoking trail of scorched atmosphere behind it. That any fielder could get near it did not seem possible, and nobody paid much attention to Josh Devore, who went in flying pursuit.

It happens that Devore is a very fleet young man, who sometimes makes remarkable catches and who was nursing a grouch because the newspapers up to this time had not been devoting much space to his stellar performances, largely because there hadn't been any. Right here was where Joshua decided that he would jimmy his way into the headlines and call forth much big type.

Running with his back to the plate he managed to get his hands on the ball as it sped over his shoulder. For a moment he juggled it and appeared to be about to let it fall, and with it the game, but he got a fresh grip and clung like a vice, and the contest was over with New York a 2 to 1 winner.

No more splendid fielding feat ever has been seen in a world's series game, and none ever has appeared at a more opportune moment. Both of the Boston runners, who were waiting delivery could have walked home had Devore falled to reach the ball, as it was hit almost to the fence, and with two men out, the fellows on the path had nothing to do but to dash for the pay window as soon as Twice in the game New York got O'Brien into positions from which he could not escape without paying the toll of a run. In four other innings the Giants got men on first at the outset, but couldn't push them around, the periods thus begun being the first, third, eighth and ninth. Except in one instance, no especially brilliant fielding stunt was needed to lift "Buck" out of peril.

The southpaw not only had a lot on the ball, but he got it over the plate as well, passing only one man, and him not that Boston did not get him enough runs that Boston did not get him enough runs to win, for he pitched a game that would have landed victory in either of the first two battles of the series. He happened to be opposed by a pitcher who was even better, however, and the few runs that New York scored proved ample.

One thing that can be said for the spitball pitcher is that he was cool under fire. At one time he had the bases filled, with three balls and only one strike on the batter, and two out. To have passed the man at the plate would have forced in R. S. Hays, John Beattle, W. D. Bright, until the eighth. Boston had somebody on the sacks in all but two innings, and opened two sections with hits, yet when I came to the supreme test McGraw's man was so far superior to the batters opposing him that their efforts to hit were pathetic. Only two Bostonlans reached second base in the first eight chapters, and none attained third until Lewis passed this station on his way home in the furious and fervid ninth, The Red Sox could not hit the ball the man at the plate would have forced in the forced in the sacks still crowded dying on the easiest sort of chances. Pastor First Presbyterian Church The football season has opened for another year. Some people may not know exactly what this means; there are tens and hundreds of thousands of people on this and other continents for whom there is only one season, and only one kind of football -for them it means: Rugby is being played in the land.

All the major leagues played their first games last Saturday. The scores were indicative of the play, and the final results were on the whole according to our expectations. The warm weather was delightful for the spectators, but it was in part responsible for the warm feeling displayed by four of the teams. Let us hope this is an end of such warmth for this season at least.

Mrs. Gibson Discovers Why Pitcher Joe Wood Pays No Attention to Mash Notes; The Reason Lives in Kansas City---Woman Writer Interviews Red Sox Star.

BY IDAH McGLOYNE GIBSON Written for The London Advertiser

"Ask Joe Wood about the girls sending him mash notes," said Jake Stahl, with a laugh. I had caught Stahl unawares and made him own up that foolish girls were the bane of the ball player's life, but he disclaimed getting them, and referred me to the Red Sox star pitcher.

Just then, a youth with shoulders of a heavyweight boxer, the mouth and smooth skin of a boy, and steely blue eyes which look you straight in the face, strolled up. He wore a rah-rah suit of clothes and a dinky hat, both hands in his trouser pockets and a most engaging smile.

"Let me present Joe Wood, our star pitcher," said Stahl,

"No wender the girls send you mash notes," thought I, but I asked: "What do you say to the girls who write you?" Wood turned repreachful eyes upon Stahl, as he stammered: "I pay no at-

"Where does the reason for your raying no attention to them live?" was my next question.

"That's right," chuckled Stahl. "Grill him good." The boy-for the 22-year-old pitcher who has made such a phenomenal rec-

"Well, if you mean the REAL girl," he said, "she lives in Kansas City," It must have beene a boy and girl affair, for young Wood lived and was graduated from the high school in Kansas City. He started to take a law course at college, but as he says, "baseball became rather interesting about that I'll bet she is the same girl that writes to the man who murders his wife or gets in jail for having too many of them." From which it will be seen that the girl letter writers do not get much satisfaction out of Joe. Wood has an ambition to become the greatest pitcher of all time. He did not say this while I was talking to him, but I could see it nicely embedded in the back of his closely-cropped head, just the same.

You can see from this that Wood is nursing an ambition which it looks as if he would accomplish. Holding the American League record for pitching, at 22, after only two years' experience in fast company, he is likely to surprise the oldest baseball statistician before he is 25. At present he is very level-headed, very enthusiastic and very much determined to play the game for all it is worth, and he stands for a type of young baseball player which does honor to the profession. 102, 1; Guy Fisher, 116, 2; Sebago, 106, 3. #### Answer to Query

Sporting Editor, Advertiser: Dear Sir,-Will you be kind enough to give an answer to the following questions:

A pool, which involves 21 people, is got up, and tickets are given out numbering from 20 to 40. Each man draws at a dollar a draw. In order to win the pool the number on the ticket must correspond with the number of runs scored by both teams in the world series. CHAPTER XXV. As He Said He Would. The widow leaned far over the side. Oh," said she, "the man is naked."

"Oh," said she, "the man is naked."
"As truth," agreed Bertie. "You might retire, you know."
"I won't look," promised the widow, turning her back and peering over her shoulder. "But is he near my lamb now? Will he, can he save him?" Unfortunately, yes, mamma," said

Bertie and Henry leaned over the rail and watched the rescue, the long, easy strokes of the swimmer and the amusenent on his face as a wave carried the struggling dog within reach and he grab-bed the little woolly back. 'Saved!" cried Bertie, and turned just in time to grab Mrs. Armitage, who was turning to see over the rail, by her fat shoulders and whirl her around again. Safe, dear lady, but look the other way Our hero is clothed in the seafoam and his own nobility, nothing else.' Henry was already disappearing down the companionway, the yacht was stopping, and the crew standing by on the ower deck to lend assistance to rescued and rescuer. The evening was warm and sultry What little breeze there had been during the day had gone down with the sun, while the ocean heaved and moaned in long, green swells and ran softly whispering up the beach and splashed against the rocks with hardly a flake of foam. The sun, sinking behind the hills, cast long orange and pink streaks across the waves, and turned the small white clouds overhead into a dainty, rosy mass of Bartlett and Billy strolled down the winding street of the little seaside town, out on the pier and stood idly waiting for the evening mail boat to arrive. Henrietta and the general were coming on the evening boat to spend the autumn in a small which the general was pleased is "shooting-box." But Bartlett's to call his "shooting-box." pleasure at seeing Henrietta once more was mingled with worry and uneasiness over Billy and the Watermelon. He smoked thoughtfully and watched Billy warlly, tenderly. She leaned against a pile and gazed over the vast unrest of the ocean to the distant horizon, with whom she was thinking, whom waiting for more and more eagerly every day now as August drew to a close and still he did not come. But this evening he had come, he was in the same neighbornood, drunk and probably hungry. When they met, as they must, and that shortly, would he make a scene, become loud-mouthed, foul, abusive? It would be hard on Billy, and Bartlett wished vainly that he could spare her. But it was best that she should know, should understand fully and with a sudden quick cut it would be over with, the June madness when one is young and pretty and care-free. Billy a shiftless fool. Yet the boy was clever in getting out of a tight place, and Bart-lett admired cleverness intensely, not being slow himself when it came to a hard bargain. The boy had gentle blood in his veins, too, more's the plty. It was simply a case of a good family gone to seed. Poor little Billy and her puppy Poor little Billy and her puppy A most unfortunate affair, the whole mistaken, unhappy business!

"There comes the Mary Gloucester," said Billy, breaking into his thoughts She nodded toward the yacht, steaming majestically around the headland, penmajestically around the headiand, pennons waving gaily and the bright awning a splash of color in the after-glow.

"The Mary Gloucester," chuckled Bartlett. "That woman hasn't the sense of her ugly poodle dog."

"I know," said Billy, "that is why I have always been so afraid of her."
"Why afraid of her?"
"For a mother," explained Billy unfortunately, but characteristically saying the wrong thing wrong thing.

Bartlett flushed. "You just admitted that she was a fool. Do you think I would marry that kind of a woman?"
"Men always do," said Billy. "A fool's bad enough, but a fool and money are simply irresistible."

"You know too much for your age said Bartlett coldly. "I don't exactly know illy. "I just see it."
"Billy, have you ever seen me___"
"Yes, father. That night in the pavilior

t the Ainsleys'-"That will do, Billy."
Billy was hurt. "I don't mean to be nasty, father; but you asked me "There comes the mail boat," inter-cupted Bartlett firmly.

Billy looked at it and sighed. It was the last of August and Jeroboam Martin had not come. Had he forgotten her in two short months? Bartlett laid his hand tenderly on her houlder. "Forget him, girlie. He's not

"He said he would come," whispered Billy.
"If he doesn't dear, you have me. have stood together through everything for eighteen years, and will stand still,

Billy bent her head and rubbed her cheek against the hand on her shoulder with a half laugh and a half sob. With the first sight of the smoke on the horizon heralding the approach of the principal event of the day, the arrival of the evening mail, a crowd had begun to gather, the usual motley crowd of a sum-mer resort on the coast. Townspeople hung indifferently on the outskirts, while the summer visitors, in dainty dresses and baggy trousers, sunburnt, jovial, in-defatigable, pressed to the front. The deratigable, pressed to the front. The hum of talk and laughter grew as the crowd grew, good-natured, meaningless chatter. The sight of the Mary Gloucester, steaming gracefully into port, was great. chatter. The sight of the Mary Gloucester, steaming gracefully into port, was greeted with a gay flutter of handkerchiefs and straw hats, and Billy and Bartlett, standing where the yacht would dock, were soon the centre of the laughing, merry crowd, eager and ready to welcome home the stout widow, her unfortunate chaperon and the two "supplements," as a village was called the fat Henry and recommend them at every opportun-side a tall youth, and on the other two, side by side and apparently in no very good humor. "Three, by George!" cried Blatts, a prosperous brewer from Milwaukee. "She left here with two and returns with three.

left here with two and returns with three. Where did she get him, Bartlett?"

But Bartlet did not answer, did not hear. The gang-plank had been lowered and he was watching in dumb fascination the tall youth walking beside the widow, her ridiculous dog in his arms. It was Jeroboam Martin, in an immaculate white suit of Bertie's. His hat was off and his hair, after the swim, gleamed soft and yellow. For the sake of the widow upon whose boat he found himself, he had shaved as well as be could with Henry's razor, and while his cheeks were smooth shaved as well as re could with Helity's razor, and while his cheeks were smooth enough, he still were a small yellow moustache and goatee. Both were brushed until they shone like his hair, and they lent a fascinating and distinctly foreign air to his long, thin, clever face. In his air to his long, thin, clever face. In his arms was the little dog with its enormous bow of sky-blue ribbon. Bartiett wondered if he were going mad and seeing things that were not so. At two, or thereabouts, he had seen Martin, dirty, shabby, tired, and had given him money on which to get drunk. At seven a yacht, which had not been in Westhaven for over a week, carefully deposits the youth, clean, fresh, well-dressed, at his very side. Was he mad?

Billy, too, had seen, but did not wonder. She knew he was a tramp, for he Billy, too, had seen, but did not won-der. She knew he was a tramp, for he had said he was, but she never thought of him or pictured him other than well-dressed, well-cared for, gently blase and a bit languid. She looked at him now over the heads of the intervening crowd, and her heart did not question how he came there, only rushed out to him with the gladness in her eyes, the joyous smile on her parted lips. He had said he would come, and there he was. Further she did not question. Their eyes met over the heads of the people, eager questioning in is, joyous answer in hers.

Hastily he dropped the pup with the sky-blue bow upon the wharf among the plebeian feet there assembled, and, reaching Billy's side through the crowd, grab-bed both small hands and stood laughing down at her. "Billy," he whispered. "Oh, you Billy!"
There was, there must be some explanation, Bartlett told himself desper-martin. Bartlett thad not slept with the youth for nearly a week without being pretty familiar with the long lank form, the thin, careless face. And it was equally impossible that the forlorn piece of hymnority who had stood that afternoon humanity who had stood that afternoon in the drawing-room and inquired for Billy was not Martin. They were one and the same, and once more he and Billy had met on equal footing. To ask the boy again to get drunk was an absurdity. "I suppose I can give him a job where he won't have much more to do than draw his pay," thought Bartlett hopeless-ly dazedly

The Watermelon dropped Billy's hands and turned to her father in well-bred greeting, but their eyes met and in the H. E. Pearce, of Kansas City, M. greeting, but their eyes met and in the Watermelon's was grim defiance. He had seen Billy again, and nothing could part them now. All his humility and repentance had gone, and in their place was his old-time arrogance and sublime self-assurance. Fate in the form of a little white dog had brought him and Billy together again, with the Watermelon still clean, still well-dressed, and to all outward appearances the same as the outward appearances the same as the other gay youths of Billy's acquaintance. With head up, jaw shut, he scorned to lower himself for anyone. He would prove himself worthy, not unworthy, of Billy. Out of his repentance had grown his manhood. He was no nameless hobo of the great cropy of the unemployed He. his manhood. He was no nameless hobo of the great army of the unemployed. He was Jeroboam Martin, son of the late Reverend Mr. Martin, in temporary financial embergasement, that could be great a Superior at Sup Reverend Mr. Martin, in temporary financial embarrassment that could be soon remedied. He would work for Billy, and they would be happy on his wages. He drew himself up and held out his hand. Bartlett could take it or not, as he pleased. The Watermelon had sought or desired no man's favor, and Jeroboam Martin would not stoop to do so.

For one second the two stared at each other grimly square laws shut, lips until more removed. At the suggestion of his brother, larges R. McNamara took the name of the suggestion of the suggestion

FORTUNE TELLERS

PARKS AT WINONA Police Threaten All With Prosecution If They Advertise in Newspapers.

> LONDON, Oct. 10 .- After a period of flaunting prosperity and immunity the fortune tellers of London's West End are "up against it" once more. Some have so far recognized the fact as to retire with their spoils to quietude till the spasm of police activity is over. Those necromancers, crystal gazers, sand diviners, palmists, clairvoyants, psychometrists and colorscopists who remain have quit advertising and are more modest in their activities than for two years past. The situation is peculiar. When questions were asked in Parliament about the immunity which these people have long enjoyed, successive home secretaries have replied that there could be no conviction because there was no fraud. A gypsy woman could be sent to prison for defrauding a servant girl, but an eduant could not be said to be deluded through her ignorance. The police seem to have swept this argument aside, and are now calling on the "professors" and "madames," telling them that they will be prosecuted as rogues and vagabonds if they continue to advertise in any way whatever. Two detectives are at present occupied in this

New York, Oct. 10.-The trial of Lieut. Chas. Becker was distinguished late this afternoon by Louis Krause's identification at the bar of the court of "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, and 'Whitey Lewis' (Frank Muller), as three of the four men who shot Herman Rosenthal dead in the doorway of the Metropole, "Dago Frank" Cirofici he was not sure about, but he pointed to Jack Sullivan as the man who bent over Rosenthal's body, and who then turned with a laugh to the murderers. The identifications were paid. Defendant has to pay $13 and made under the most dramatic circumstances. Krause, who is a waiter, had just testified emphatically, and with every appearance of sincerity, that despite the threats of roughs gathered in Forty-third street, he had stayed and had seen the murder and had seen Bridgie Webber running toward Broadway. District Attorney Whitman gave his witness a chance to demonstrate the accuracy of his memory.

Gunmen in Court. Mr. Justice Goff directed that the four gunmen and Jack Sullivan, linked with Lleut. Becker, as accused murderers, be brought from the They entered, laughing or sneering, according to their manner left the witness chair, and Krause when called upon to point out 'Whitey unhesitatingly and rapidly Lewis" touched that gangster on the houlder Lewis laughed in his face. He laid his hand on "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, and kept it there a moment unper-turbed by Ros iberg's black glances. Some of Mr. Mc-Intyre's questions indicated that the defence will try to show that Rosenthal was shot by Harry Vallon, now one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution. Under rapid headway after the selection just before noon of the juror, the fourth day's session of the trial produced the testimony of six witnesses. The state took murder by calling the policemen, Wm. Brady and Dennis File, Dr. Dennis Taylor, an ambulance surgeon, Flower Hospital; Dr. Otto H. Schultze, the coroner's physician, who performed the autopsy on Rosenthal's body; Jacob Hecht, a waiter in the Metropole restaurant, and Krause, the waiter, who was called to identify the gunmen, so that the state can go ahead with its work of connecting Lieut. Becker with the crime committed by the gunmen. For that general purpose, ness tomorrow morning Giovanni the Montengrins succeeded in rushing Stanich, an Austrian, who, like the position after prolonged fighting Metropole, who saw the shooting, and negrins were repulsed by the Turks who later identified several of the before the latter were finally overmurderers. It is not unlikely that come. Both forces suffered heavily in Jack Rose will take the stand some time tomorrow. But the plans of the district attorney are subject to change in that particular. Mrs. Herman Rosenthal, it is expected, will be one of the main witnesses tomorrow to tell the story of her husband's re-lations with Lieut. Becker.

The Riordon Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, was formed of the Riordon Paper Mills, Limited (established 1859), and G. H. Perley & Co. (established 1899). The Company has 1,184 square miles of timber limits (valued at $2,055,800) in the Province of Quebec on the Rouge River (a branch of the Ottawa River). The plants are located at Hawkesbury and Merritton, Ontario (pulp and paper), and Calumet, L'Annonciation and St. Faustine, Quebec (lumber). The total annual capacity is 37,500 tons sulphite pulp, 6,000 tons ground wood pulp, 6,000 tons paper and 15,000,000 feet lumber (B.M.)

Net earnings of the Company for the past three years average $226,410, over two and one-half times interest on the present issue of bonds, despite the fact that the Calumet mill was not in operation during the greater part of 1911, as it was being rebuilt in steel and concrete. With the additions under way and the benefits to be derived from the new capital, the earnings for 1912, according to the estimate of the Managing Director, will amount to $300,000, three and one-third times bond interest

The management of the Company has been practically continuous for the past 50 years. All the directors are either practical pulp and paper merchants or experienced lumbermen, ensuring the competent supervision of all affairs of the Company.

Of the $2,500,000 Bonds authorized, $1,000,000 are held in the treasury and can be issued only to the extent of two-thirds of the actual cost of extensions and additions to the fixed assets of the Company. The repayment of the entire issue, either before or at maturity, at 105, is an important feature, assuring an appreciation of five points to purchasers at par.

SAYS NO HARM MEANT

Girl Asked Flippant Question and Was Showered With Hot Liquid.

"Clarence street is a most prolific ource of litigation," remarked Police Magistrate J. C. Judd this morning. His orship had occupied a couple of hours of his time on Thursday morning with the trial of a fight on the south end of that thoroughfare, and today he was called upon to settle another dispute emanating from the same neighborhood. Gulda Mottis, wife of Max Mottis, a Hebrew, was summoned yesterday morning to tell why she threw hot water on Pearl Jacobs, daughter of Mrs. Annie Jacobs, of 243 Clarence street. She did not respond, and an officer was sent down to learn the reason, as it was asserted that Mrs. Mottls was ill. She was found washing, however, and had a rather nice little time today explaining her delinquency.

The evidence showed that the Jacobs girl facetiously asked Mrs. Mottis "Where $40,000 and $50,000. A time limit was is New York station?" whereupon she set for the installaton and a penalty of received a pail of hot water over her $100 a day was to be 'assessed the head. She was scalded rather severely company for delays beyond that time. and required the attention of Dr. F. P. Drake. Mrs. Mottis asserted that while The machinery was not installed she was bothered by the children it was within the limited time, and the water not her intention to injure them. She explained that she threw the dish water the amount due the company. The last over a high board fence, not knowing that the youngsters were on the other side. While she gave her evidence through the interpretation of her husband, the magistrate believed that during the argument with the children she swore in excellent English.

The fine was made $3 and costs, and witness fees $3.50.

SUES A SURGEON OVER A NAPKIN

For Two Years Mrs. Ginther Carries About Cloth Before She Learns the Truth.

LIKE A HUMAN SPOOL

Now She Wants $10,000 From Noted Practitioner Who Performed the Operation.

New York, Oct. 11 .- Young Mrs. Charles Ginther, of Newark, N. J., defendant is Dr. Charles Ill, head of the surgical staff of St. Martin's Hospital of that city. He is one of the most famous surgeons in the country. He performed an operation upon her in 1910 and sutured up his incision, it is alleged, without making sure that all the surgical dressings had been removed by his attendants. To be sure, Mrs. Ginther didn't know she was carrying the napkin about with her until two months ago. Who would? It is scarcely to be supposed that, knowing she was toting about a foot length of linen, internal-

But she decided, after finding it and getting over her first feelingsof amazement-that she had suffered $10,000 worth of serious discomfort. It was a grave operation that was performed upon Mrs. Ginther in 1910. Dr. Ill was assisted by several of the sister-nurses of St. Martin's, who are noted for their skill and carefulness. The operation was a success and after a few weeks in the nospital Mrs. Ginther was able to return to her home at 55 Cottage place, in better health than she had had for years.

She was perfectly well until the latter part of last July, when an apparently trifling eruption appeared upon her skin, close to the scar left by the incision through which the operation had been performed.

She did not pay very much attention to this until one day she saw a bit of lint protruding from the end of the old incision. She pulled this out, and was surprised beyond belief when it grew to an inch, two inches, W. G. Kerr Was Given Purse of Gold four inches and finally eight inches in length. Then she was afraid to go any further with the linen, and hurrled back to St. Martin's, where she showed the strange souvenir to Dr. Ill. He used the knife again and withdrew the rest of the napkin. It was intact, even to he red embroidered laundry mark. Mrs. Ginther recovered from hock and pain of the second trifling so she sued yesterday. It. is not charged in her complaint that Dr. Ill personally was responsible for the napkin being sewed up within the woman's side,, but since is blamed for the queer accident,

They were on the lake when a blizzard came up and in the darkness they lost their way. #### THE WAR SITUATION

Lonodn, Oct. 10.-Except for the fighting opposite Podgoritza, which is described in Montenegrin dispatches as a "great battle," the situation in the Balkans is unchanged. The allies have not started to support Montenegro, and the contents of the note of the powers to the Porte are unknown.

There are rumors in Constantinople and St. Petersburg that the powers are making fresh and more energetic moves, but it is not known what steps they are taking to stop the war. If the rumors are true, they may have been prompted by the rapidly growing uneasiness at Vienna and Berlin, that once the war starts going it cannot for long be confined to Turkey and the Balkan States. The newspapers of these two capitals did not attempt to conceal their distrust of Russia, which is widespread and deep-seated, and is described as one of the most profound and disturbing features of the situation.

The Novoe Vremya publishes the alarming report in St. Petersburg that Austria has begun the mobilization of four army corps, which, says the Russian paper, are undoubtedly intended for use in the Balkan States. If Austria makes any move toward intervention, 80,000 Russian troops are ready to move, says the Detroit, Oct. 11.-Attorney James Murtha, who closed the arguments on Thursday for the defence in the trial in recorder's court of Dr. George A. Fritch, charged with the murder of Maybell Millman, devoted considerable attention to assailing the testimony of Mrs. Messenger, who claims she saw the Millman girl in Dr. Fritch's office, and Joseph W. Aug. 27, 1909. Assistant Prosecutor Jasnowski will follow Mr. Murtha Friday morning and close for the state some time during the forenoon session, after which Judge Phelan will charge the jury.

Mr. Murtha placed great stress ipon the fact that Leach had said nothing concerning the Millman affair, and his connection with it until after the body had been found fered in connection with the girl's death. He said there was nothing to prove that Leach knew anything about the case at all until after the newspapers had for days reeked with it. The attorney for Fritch insisted that a man who told one story before the grand jury and another at the trial could not be believed. Mr. Murtha also picked out discrepancies in the testimony of Mrs. Messenger, who testified that she went down town to go to the gas city or of Sarnia using or not using office and taken suddenly ill went to the lake water, That can be decided the Fritch office, where she talked the Millman girl just before

NEW CARDINALS VATICAN PROBLEM

Disposal, the Question of Foreigners Is Uppermost.

U. S. SHARE STILL SCANTY

Prelate in Rome, of Whom the Pontiff Is Very Fond, Said To Be Likely To Gain the Honor.

Rome, Oct. 10 .- A question is again on the tapis at the Vatican, which has caused animated and learned discussion during the last thirty years, namely, that of giving to the different Catholic sections of the world better representation in the Sacred College, which, as is known, is a kind of senate of the Church. If the Pope were to be compared to a temporal ruler, each cardinal would represent a viceroy.

Leo XIII. was the first Pope who gave a large representation to non-Italians in the Sacred College, as under him. for the first time, the foreign cardinals surpassed the Italans in number. Now the situation is again to the entire advantage of the Italians, there being thirtyfour princes of the Church who are Italians, against twnty-six foreigners, thus making the total sixty cardinals, which leaves ten hats vacant, as the plenum of the Sacred College, by the present constitution, is seventy. This number, however, has never been reached, a pontiff wishing, in case of unexpected developments, to have a hat or wo at his disposition.

By appointing eight more foreign cardinals. Pius X. would equalize the foreign and home proportions without reaching the plenum. No one denies the necessity that, as Rome is the seat of the Papacy, the Italians should have a larger share of the red hats than foreigners, but between this and giving them an overwhelming majority there is a great difference.

As things now stand, Italy has one cardinal for every million inhabitants, while France has one for every eight million, Austria and Spain one for every three intilion, Germany one for every twenty-four million. England and Ireland one for every five million, the United States one for every nineteen million, South America only one for her forty millon Catholics, whie Central America, Canada, Poland, the whole of Africa, the whole of Asia, and the whole of Australia have no representative in the Sacred Col-

For the working of the vast and complicated machinery of the Church in Rome it is necessary to have about wenty-five cardinals living here. These, called cardinals of the Curia, are now Italians, with the exception of four-Merry del Val and Vives Y. Tuto, who are Spanish; Van Rossum, Dutch, and Billot, who is French. Even these cardinals of the Curia, it is remarked, might do more profitable work for the church if a larger portion were foreign. American interests, for instance, have een represented first by the late Cardinal Satolli, who was the original apostolic legate at Washington, and now by his two successors, Cardinals Martinell and Falconio; but the need is felt of a born American, and a prominent ecclesiastic, very dear to the present Pope, who is already occupying an important position in Rome, and whose name is mentioned for archbishop of one of the most important sees in the United States, s regarded as the most likely American Cardinal of the Curia.

With regard to Canada, there might e a repetition of what occurred for the United States at the 'last consistory. When it was wished to raise to the purple the head of the archdiocese of Boston, that of New York, who had such great merits, could not be overlooked. In Canada, Mgr. Bruchesi, archbishop of Montreal, is practically in the same position as was Archbishop O'Connell. but his appointment to the high dignity cannot be made without overlooking Progressive Move By Canadian Church Announced at the Victoria Convention.

Toronto, Oct. 11.-Modelled after the University of Toronto, a university and various residential colleges will be founded by the Methodists of Canada and the United States, the Baptists of the United States, and the Friends of England, at Chengtu, the centre of the West China mission field.

Rev. T. E. E. Shore, D.D., Rev. Professor R. P. Bowles and Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M. P. P., will represent the Methodists of Canada on the board of governors. The project was definitely decided upon at a meeting held in the Wesley buildings yesterday, and the announcement was made last night by Rev. Dr. Goucher, of Baltimore, who will be the president of the board of governors.

The occasion was the 76th anniversary of the granting of a charter to Victoria University by King Wiliam IV., and a large gathering of riends of the college and students ssembled in the University chapel to ommemorate the event.

In the absence through illness Chancellor Burwash, Mr. Jusice MacLaren, vice-chancellor, presided. He said it was probably the first time during the long connection of Chancellor Burwash with the college that he had not been able to be present on the occasion of their char-er day. President R. A. Falconer, of the University of Toronto, who was warmly received, especially by the student body, spoke of the remark-able record made by Victoria Umversity in the last academic year. His tribute to the venerable chancellor, who, he said, had been largely responsible for bringing about the happy federation between the various universities of Toronto, was greeted with prolonged applause. Professor J. C. Robertson, dean the Faculty of Arts. gave an outline of the work accomplished at the congress of the universities of the Empire, held in London, England, in July, and made the presentation of medals, prizes and scholarships. The gathering closed with an interesting lecture on "Carlyle" by Professor Pelham Edgar, and refreshments in the Alumni Hall.

The trip is being made in the special car of the receivers and the private car of President Schaff.

Officials scent in the visit o Schaff a scheme to huy or lease the Pere Marquette. The road of which he is at the head is part of the Hawley system, built up by the late Edwin Hawley. Schaff is also director in several other of Hawley's rapidly-extending lines.

The receivers say that they are merely making an inspection of the to see what is most needed and that President Schaff is merely a visitor.
