VERDUN WILL NEVER BE TAKEN, SAYS THE ITALIAN COMMANDER

General Cadorna Pays Fine Tribute to the French Defence--France Believes Germans Have Lost all Hope of a Successful Attack.

Paris, April 5.—"Verdun will never be taken. This is the sincere and positive statement of General Cadorna, said a member of the Italian generalissimo's suite to the Uddine correspondent of The Petit Journal. "General Cadorna," he continued, "returns to Italy from his visit to France full of enthusiasm for France for what she has done and for what she is now doing."

"What we saw on the French front is simply magnificent. France and Great Britain have heaped up all along the line innumerable machine guns so many men and munitions that nothing that the Germans could now do, it seemed to us, could possibly catch the French-British higher command unprepared."

HAVE LOST HOPE.

Paris, April 4.—(Cable to The New York Times).—"The Germans have abandoned hope of taking Verdun and are continuing their attacks to reassure their own population and prevent a French offensive elsewhere," is the official theory of the renewal of the Verdun operations expressed by a senior officer attached to the war office staff. The officer continued:

"We base our opinion on two factors. First, the disposition of the enemy's lines along the western front; secondly, the character of the recent fighting before Verdun. Thus we know that the line opposite the British is strongly held, whereas, with the exception of the Champagne danger point, the German forces facing us have been considerably reduced to permit heavy concentration against Verdun. The enemy knows as well as we, that Joffre will not wish to remove his troops de choc from Verdun while the opportunity of concentrating his own forces remains open. The persistent reinforcement and improvement of the British army, sooner or later they will reach a point at which even the unweakened German line cannot withstand them, and the world will see that whatever is happening at Verdun, France has still sufficient troops to support the allies' offensive."

ARE GETTING CAUTIOUS.

"What I mean by the character of the recent fighting is this: The Germans have abandoned their usual system of reckless sacrifices to gain important successes for comparatively cautious attacks against points where no great advantage is possible. On March 9th they flung

SPANISH BOAT IS TORPEDOED

British, Norwegian and Danish Boats Also in Difficulties.

London, April 5, 10:35 a.m.—The Spanish steamship Vigo of 1,137 gross tons, was sunk in the Bay of Biscay by a German submarine, according to a Lloyd's report. The crew were set adrift in a boat and later picked up by the British steamship Polo and taken to Gibraltar.

Lloyd's also report the sinking of the British steamship Bendue, with the loss of one of the crew. The Vigo was owned by Gonzalez and Fernandez of Villagarcia. She was built in 1876 at Middlesbrough and was 250 feet long and 32 feet beam.

The Bendue was of 3,681 gross tons and was built in 1900 at West Hartlepool for Hault and Co. of that port. She was 347 feet long and 51 feet beam.

SUBMARINED.

ADVANCE FROM SALONKI

Paris, April 5.—A Havas despatch from Salonki, dated April 4, says that artillery was active along the line of contact of the advisory forces during the day. Small skirmishes took place on the Gievski front, and resulted in the capture of a few German and Bulgarian prisoners by the French.

FATHER SHOT AS ACT OF MERCY

Louisville, April 5.—"I shot Papa to put him out of his misery; it was an act of mercy," hysterically explained Ann Lee Stitzel, after she had fired a bullet into the breast of her father, William Stitzel, 75, a Federal veteran of the Civil war at their home here last night. Mr. Stitzel died thirty minutes later at a hospital.

For several weeks Miss Stitzel is said to have brooded over her father's loneliness and growing infirmities. Physicians who have attended the young woman believe she is suffering from dementia. When his daughter entered the room, with her revolver in hand, and without a word fired one bullet into her father's body, Miss Stitzel is held in custody at a hospital on a charge of murder.

Rome, April 5.—General Zupelli, the minister of war has resigned on account of ill-health. THE GERMAN MENACE

The widespread suspicion that serious events are impending, and that the cancelling of the soldiers' leave is not merely a general precautionary measure, has not been allayed by a statement appearing in the Amsterdam Telegraph, which says that the cause of the order is to be found in extensive movements and concentration of German troops on the Dutch eastern and southern frontiers. The press criticizes the government severely for failing to take it more fully into its confidence.

When the order was first promulgated, the public generally jumped to the conclusion that it was occasioned either by recent submarine attacks on Dutch ships or by the decis-

GERMANS LOST GROUND AND MANY SOLDIERS

Yesterday's Fighting at Verdun Bad For the Huns.

Paris, April 5.—In yesterday's fighting around Verdun, the Germans lost considerable ground and again sustained heavy casualties, notwithstanding the new formation of their attacking parties.

At 3 p.m., after the Germans had been battered by several hundred tons of projectiles, a thin line of riflemen debouched from Chauffour wood, a little to the northwest of Douaumont. The Germans advanced by short bounds toward the French trenches, situated about 300 yards south of the village. A second and a third line followed at equal distances, with small supporting and attacking columns in the rear. This formation has been noticed during the last few days, and is regarded by the French as proof that the Germans have been sorely punished in their previous assaults in series ranks. The first change proved ineffective. The first line advanced to within 50 yards of the French trenches and there had to drop to the ground under heavy blasts of shrapnel and sustained musketry fire. The second and third lines attempted to advance to the support of the first line, but were stopped far in the rear by machine gun fire.

The Germans in the first line were in a most critical position. Shrapnel worked havoc among them. To charge was out of the question, and as long as they remained at the point exposed to a decimating fire. The second and third lines were little better off, for they were within range of the French 3-inch guns. The entire attacking force finally adopted the only safe course, retreating under a raking fire to Chauffour wood. They left half their number on the field. At least three regiments took part in the attack.

Chauffour wood proved to be an insecure shelter, for the French artillery, increasing its range, covered that entire area. It demolished shelters and piled up the German losses. The action of yesterday is regarded by military critics as of great significance, showing that the Germans, even with their new formation, are unable to escape the furious responses of French artillery; that the French

CHANCELLOR MAKES SPEECH

Von Bethman-Hollweg Reviews Fully Military and Political Situation.

Berlin, April 5 (by wireless to Sayville).—Chancellor Von Bethman-Hollweg indicated in his speech to-day that any suggestions of peace on the basis of destruction of Prussian military power would make possible only one answer—the German sword. The chancellor stated that if Germany's adversaries desired to continue the slaughter of men and devastation of Europe, the guilt would be theirs and that Germany would have to "stand it as men."

Berlin, April 5 (by wireless to Sayville).—In the Reichstag to-day the Imperial Chancellor Dr. Von Bethman-Hollweg made his most comprehensive speech of the war. He reviewed the military and political situation, the use of various means of warfare and German-American relations.

The Chancellor, whose address was delivered to a crowded house, also spoke of the questions presented in relation to the principle of nationalities, considering the Polish, Lithuanian, Belgian and Flemish. He insisted upon the necessity of guaranteeing the peace of Europe after the war, and also of securing this result by giving to these races opportunity of free evolution along the lines of their natural individualities and mother tongues.

At the conclusion of his address the chancellor elicited great applause by saying: "The spirit of union shall lead us, as it shall lead our children and grandchildren, through the struggles of their fathers toward a future of strength and liberty."

REVIEW MILITARY SITUATION

The chancellor began his address with a review of the military situation. He stated that since his last speech in the Reichstag, the Dardanelles campaign had ended as a failure, that the Serbian campaign, with the assistance of Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria had been brought to a victorious conclusion and that Montenegro and Albania likewise were now in the hands of Germany's allies, that the British attempt to relieve Kut-el-Amara in Mesopotamia had been vain; that the Russians, although they had succeeded in occupying Erzerum, with superior forces, had found their advance checked by strong Turkish

Thirty Divisions of the Enemy at Verdun, and They Lost 150,000 During First Month of Battle.

London, April 5.—Col. Repington, the military correspondent of The London Times sends that journal the following account of his visit to the Verdun front: "The Germans now have thirty divisions around Verdun. At a moderate estimate, they suffered 150,000 casualties during the first month of the battle. They are getting no rest. The French are assuming superiority in artillery. They continue their fire all day and all night. They hold every road, reserve position, ravine, wood, and possible billeting zone under their fire. No German within five miles of the French guns can be sure of a moment's rest; and while the 250,000 German infantry suffered the bulk of the losses, there are probably 125,000 men of the artillery supply and other arms and services who also suffered much."

CARPETED WITH DEAD.

The whole northern front is carpeted with German dead. A French patrol went out by night to examine one of the foremost German trenches which had been reported full of men by our air observers. The trench, in fact, was full of Germans, but all were dead.

In every unexpected corner machine guns watch to strike.

"The chief theatre of fighting remains in the northern front. It is on this front that the main masses of German artillery are posted in two main groups—one about Septarges, the other around Beaumont. Flank positions on the northern flank, namely

HOSPITAL BOARD HELD MEETING

Some Tenders Are Let—City Council to be Asked to Submit By-Law.

The regular meeting of the Hospital Board was held yesterday afternoon.

Present, Warden Harris, in the chair, Mayor Bowby, A. K. Bunnell, George Kippax, Dr. Secord, R. Sanderson, F. D. Revell.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT. Following are extracts from the monthly report of Miss Forde:

Admissions 142, discharges 139, births 7, deaths 10, isolation (diphtheria) 6, operations 99, patients in residence 74.

The regular monthly meeting of the House committee and the Women's Hospital Aid, was held as usual on Tuesday, March 28th, in the board room. Seven members were present.

Among other matters brought up, was that the laundry was in need of improved equipment.

A number of tenders had been received for supplies and that of G. W. Brander for drugs was recommended, and of T. Mintern for meat, both being the lowest.

For bread J. McHutchison, Whitaker Baking Co., and J. Johnston had all tendered at the same price and it was decided to share the contract between them and turn about.

Seven tenders had been received for groceries, and the committee asked leave to further consider them, as a careful comparison, to decide the lowest.

With regard to laundry equipment it was suggested that the matter be taken up with the Women's Hospital Aid, and that Geo. Kippax be asked to secure data.

The report was adopted. NEW OPERATING ROOM. Dr. R. Secord reported regarding equipment of the above, and he and Mr. A. K. Bunnell were authorized to take necessary steps.

MONEY BY-LAW. Mr. A. K. Bunnell reported on financial matters. The hearty thanks of the board were due to the County for the splendid gift of $7,000 on capital account, and to Warden Harris for his cordial co-operation. It was now up to the citizens to vote the remaining $2,000 of the $5,000 needed. He would suggest that same, if passed, as he had no doubt it would become operative after October 1st, and that would free the city from any interest or sinking fund during the present financial year.

It was decided to forward to the city council a full financial statement, and to ask them to submit a by-law to the people at such time as they deemed expedient.

COAL TENDERS. A motion calling for tenders for coal was passed.

It was announced that Mr. Eddy had accepted terms to act as collector for the city and Brantford Tp. in the matter of accounts.

A number of certified accounts were passed, and the board then adjourned.

Politicians Made the Expedition. Advance Against Bagdad Should Never Have Been Undertaken.

London, April 5.—(Cable to The New York Sun)—Austin Chamberlain, secretary for India, yesterday declined the suggestion "that the advance against Bagdad had been ordered by ignorant politicians against the advice of the commander-in-chief in Mesopotamia."

Republicans and Progressives of the Second West Virginia district have agreed upon S. B. Montgomery as candidate for Congress.

GET RID OF HUMORS

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other eruptions come from humors, which may be either inherited or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old reliable medicine, helps the system to discharge the humors, and to improve the digestion and assimilation.

From your druggist get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which may be confidently relied upon to do its work. It purifies the blood, tones the stomach, and builds up the whole system. It goes to the roots of diseases, and its beneficial results are permanent. It sets things to rights in the system. SOCIAL EVENING

This week the young people of the village at Marlborough Street, took the form of a social evening. The pastor occupied the chair after the opening exercises, and address was delivered by Rev. Stratford Hockeyists Join 64th Battery

Stratford, April 5.—Three members of the White Star hockey team, for the past two years local Senior City League champions, went to Guelph on Monday and joined the 64th Battery. They are Tom O'Connell, Albert Bart and George Campbell. Bart has been O.H.A. senior goal-ender for the past two seasons.

Canadiens Double Score on Portland

New York, April 5.—The Canadiens world's professional hockey champions, took the lead last night in a two-game match here by scoring six goals to three against the Rosebud team of Portland, Oregon. The second contest will be played to-night.

Hamilton Soldiers Will Play Lacrosse

Hamilton Spectator: Although lacrosse has never been a popular game here, it is likely that the soldiers will help to make it so this summer. The Mounted Rifles have arranged to have a team and the Tigers and 172nd are about ready to organize. Another team will be formed and a league of four teams will furnish some good sport here. Properly played, the game is an interesting and exciting game and the soldier boys would, no doubt get good support when they make an attempt to introduce it among their other sports this year.

Drizzle Makes the Leafs Work Indoors

Jersey City, April 5.—At this writing there appears to be little prospect of a cessation of the drizzling rain which has been falling here for the past twenty-four hours. The Leafs took light work indoors yesterday, but Manager Birmingham constantly called his men against too violent exercise on the board floor of the gymnasium. He thinks that board floors are conducive to that base of the ball player, "charley horse," but predictions of the weatherman offer little encouragement for to-day.

Carrying Munitions.

Frankfort-on-Main, Germany April 5.—The German Passenger Airship company, Limited, of this place, in its annual report just issued says that while the war has put a stop to the company's regular business, the works have been fully occupied on war orders (manufacture of parts for Zeppelins) and that the gross earnings for the year were $715,000. As the company was burdened with a heavy debt, 1915 earnings made it possible to write off a substantial amount. The company has also derived revenue from leasing its sheds at various points like Baden-Baden, Hamburg, Dresden and Potsdam to the military authorities.

Berlin, March 24.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Nearly 900,000 women are now at work in Berlin, doing almost every kind of work, and earning much better money than they ever had before, even in the days of the war. They are doing this because of the need of ammunition. Yet there are thousands of women thus employed to-day, who do not seem to mind the work, and who are earning, relatively, a great deal of money.

German Leaders in Bulgar Port

Berlin, April 4.—The Berliner Tageblatt prints a letter from its correspondent at Varna, the chief naval port of Bulgaria on the Black Sea, in which he says the Bulgarian troops and German general and lieutenant colonel, and a German naval officer, are attached to the small Bulgarian port which has its home station at Varna.

CHAPTER XIII
Sir Everard was on his homeward journey. He was speeding back to England without a thought now of fellow passengers or any of the little distractions which relieve the tediousness of travelling. The paper lay unread on his knee; his eyes were fixed on the flying prospect before him. He scarcely noticed the hubbub and confusion of one of the stations where a company of tourists were unable to find accommodation in every space—first, second, third class—where they could possibly be stowed. The conductor of the party made profuse apologies and begged the passengers to overlook the inconvenience, which he assured them would only be for a short time, as the party was to alight at five stations farther on. Sir Everard scarcely heard him; his thoughts were busy elsewhere.

The train rushed on. Tunnel after tunnel was passed, and station after station. They were about to steady out of one when the excited conductor, wildly gesticulating, rushed up to him. He had just learned that the train would not stop at the next station, where the tent cries he was urging them from the carriages. Sir Everard found his self again rushing onwards, but the train almost alone. A handsome, middle-aged lady and a few other people were the sole occupants of the carriage.

He had started early that morning after a slight and hurried meal, a before the exodus of passengers to place he had asked the guard to see a cup of coffee to him in the train. The rush was hurried, the boy who carried it had to stand back, and it was only at the last moment it was thrust into him. The lady was nearest to the door and she took it from him. She shook her head and she hurriedly seized the tray, and some coffee was spilled in the saucer. With many apologies she hurriedly returned it to him. He hastened her to get it back again and then passed the tray to Sir Everard.

When he had finished his coffee he pulled his hat off and he rubbed his forehead. A pleasant drowsiness overtook him, and he soon lost to outward things. The train, confused and unsteady, sped on. He thought he was falling and climbing and falling again. He felt cold and there was a sharp pain in his head. Days and weeks months seemed to pass by in a flash. He awoke with a start and looked around him.

He could not tell where he was. Everything was strange. He was in a room, lying in bed, feeling weak and confused. He was surrounded in bandages and in his head he found it banded too. A man stirred in the room, and a woman came in. "What are you?"

"I can't talk to you now, sir, I have had an accident, and my order not to let you speak until you are better. Then I will tell you everything." "Am I in England?" "No, sir—France. But I am Scotch, and I am in charge of you must not let you say any more."

Sir Everard was so much confused to persist. He lay and tried to sleep. When he awoke the same was still beside him. He was a woman, standing noiselessly by his head, a skillful and soothing touch, short, was the perfection of a Sir Everard was his weak and attendant, but he did not care to inquire when he felt less feeble.

With manly apologies for her awkwardness, she hastened to pour it back again and then passed on the tray to Sir Everard.

When he had finished his coffee he pulled his cap over his eyes and settled himself to sleep. A pleasant drowsiness overtook him, and he was soon lost to outward things. Then, dreams, confused and unhappy, troubled him. He thought he was falling, and limbing and falling again. He felt cold and there was a sharp pain in his head. Days and weeks and months seemed to fly by him as he felt the cold and the pain. At length he awoke with a start and looked around him.

He could not tell where he was for everything was strange. He was in an unfamiliar room, lying in bed, feeling weak and confused. His right arm was swathed in bandages and motionless, and when he touched his head he found it bandaged too. Some one stirred in the room, and a man, a stranger—came forward.

"Where am I?" Sir Everard asked faintly.

"With friends, and I am taking care of you. Make your mind easy. You are safe."

"Who are you?"

"I can't talk to you now, sir. You have had an accident, and have been ill for a good while. My orders are not to let you speak until you are better. Then I will tell you everything."

"Am I in England?"

"No sir—in France. But I am Scotch, and I am in charge of you. I must not let you say any more."

Sir Everard was too much confused to persist. He lay and tried to think and drifted away again into sleep. When he awoke the same man was still beside him. He was always wanting, stepped noiselessly about, and had a skillful and soothing touch—in short, was the perfection of a nurse. For days which he could not count Sir Everard was too weak and dazed to feel curiosity. He knew that a physician visited him, and that there were consultations between him and the attendant, but he did not care to make enquiries. Finally, there came a morning when he felt less feeble.

"What is your name?" he asked, looking at the man, who had come to his bedside at his first movements.

"Macdonald, sir."

"You have been a good nurse."

"Thank you, sir."

"You have pulled me through, I believe."

"I hope so, sir."

"Am I allowed to ask questions?"

"The Doctor will be here soon and he will tell you."

"He is English too, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir—Dr. Marshall. He is settled here."

"He hadn't much hope of me at first, I suppose?"

"You got a nasty knock on the head and were a bit wild for a while, but you have come out of it all right. I don't think you should talk of it any more now."

"I won't. I ought to be a tractable patient when I owe my life to you."

Macdonald administered some nourishment, and Sir Everard fell into a deep, healthful slumber, from which he awoke greatly refreshed. Doctor Marshall, an alert young Englishman, was standing noiselessly by him. Sir Everard stretched out his uninjured hand to him with a smile.

"I have turned the corner, Doctor. Thanks to you and my friend Macdonald. Now I have a great many questions to ask."

Doctor Marshall felt his pulse, looked into his eyes, and nodded.

"You will be fit to be moved in a week or two," he said. "You have a splendid constitution and that has stood you in good stead."

"That and good doctoring and nursing. When I am stronger I shall try to thank you both, but now I want you to talk and enlighten me as to my whereabouts and other things. Is now, I hope?"

ALLISON COMING BACK TO OTTAWA

Has Arranged to Make His Appearance Next Week.

Ottawa, April 5.—Col. John Wesley Allison, the central figure in the Kite charges, is coming back to Canada to give his evidence. A telegram was received to-day by an official of the Davidson Commission from Colonel Allison, in which he announced that he might be expected in Ottawa next week. The message of course shows the present whereabouts of the Colonel.

The arrival of this message is the first answer to the Liberal complaint by the Royal Commission appointed by the Government to investigate the Kite charges would not be able to conduct a fruitful enquiry because the witnesses were in the United States. The chief witness will be in Ottawa next week, when General Sir Sam Hughes will also, it is expected, have reached the capital.

Colonel Allison testified before the Davidson Commission in December with reference to the purchase of revolvers from the Colts Arms Company, and according to statements made since his evidence on that measure, Macdonald disclosed the facts. The commission has endeavored since to have him recalled, but without success. Col. Allison having been reported to be too ill to appear. Following his attendance before the Davidson Commission, it is likely that the Public Accounts Committee of the House will seek to have him as a witness.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Don't scold your fretful peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and miles from his lodgings. There was extraordinary activity displayed in the search. Doctor Marshall's house was ransacked, and every possible and impossible place of concealment. The description of every station in the vicinity was telegraphed to every station in France, and detectives were set to work. The river was dragged for miles, but all that came to light was a handkerchief from which the name was torn, still further down the stream.

Macdonald was detained for some time and his past history was strictly enquired into. He willingly gave every information. He declared that he had never seen the injured man, but he saw him on that journey, and that it was through his pity that he declined to render assistance to a stranger.

Doctor Marshall stated that all the parties were stranger to him. He testified to Macdonald's fatigues and attention to the injured man, but said the concussion was a severe one and had caused him grave anxiety from the first. He had thought the patient somewhat improved during the last few hours, and he had, perhaps, allowed the vigilance of the watch to be too soon relaxed.

There was nothing further to be done. If the patient had merely wandered away he would certainly have been found. He was without his coat, and his arm and head were still bandaged. His flight was discovered early in the morning. Doctor Marshall visited him late the previous evening, and Macdonald's conclusion that could be the only one was abandoned. In the search was abandoned. In the end the excitement died away and he returned to Edinburgh, where a corresponding clerk to a large business house.
