LOST OPPORTUNITIES. Business Firms of

WOLFVILLE

The undermentioned firms will use you right, and we can safely recommend them as our most enterprising business men.

It is not that my friend is gone,
That I no more his face can see; It is not that I'm sad and lone,
And life seems but a muckery; It is not this that grieves me most.
Nor that I lose a gem so rare; It is not that my soul is lost,
Amid the storms as vessels are.

It is not that the grave has hid
So much of hope, or joy, or bliss;
Nor that beneath the cofin lid
Still lies the form that I must miss.
Tis this that strikes the deepest blow,
'Tis this that makes the cruelest sor
That while he lived on earth below,
I did not love and prize him more.

I knew if I would give it heed,
That life held many a secret pain;
That loving word and kindly deed
Would be as sunshine 'mid the rain. Would be as sunshine 'mid the rain.

The little gift I might have brought—

Ah, was withheld all thoughtlessly;

Why was my heart so dull, untaught,

When earth's poor gitts might needed

be?

Why did I lack in tenderness?
Why did his worth so little prize?
Why oft so slow with my caress?
Must death alone unseal mine eyes?
I might have given a fond embrace
Instead of that cool passiveness;
I might have kissed his well-loved face
When o'er it stole that anxiousness.

Through all the oratorio of history we bear the voices of women, whom no man could compel to silence We hear the could compel to silence. We hear the sorrowful notes of the song of Japhta's daughter, mingling with the tender voice of Ruth, "standing breast-high amid the summer corn,"—tremulous with a woman's fear, but resolute with sublime purpose, comes the voice of E-ther, carrying her life before the golden scepter for her people's sake; we hear Elizabeth speak with a loul voice and no man can silence her; women bring their little ones to the Saviour, in the face of bisciples' rebuke, and he does not censure them for "usurping authority over a man;" a woman washes his feet with her tears, Joanna, Mary, Susanna, and many others "minister to him out of state the saviour state of the saviour speak in the same fate!
