LET THE DECORATION PROCEED. If anyone has neglected to decorate his place of business or residence there is still 24 hours during which the neglect may be remedied. To-morrow is to be the climax of the Queen's Jubilee, both here and in England, and, as the event is one of a century, and of the utmost importance to this country, it should be emphasized in a way that will create a lasting impression in the minds of all, especially of the young. We trust that special efforts will be made to decorate the streets through which the big procession will pass to-morrow. A few dollars spent in decorating private residences will go a long way towards giving the city a Jubilee and festive appearance. Let every house display some emblem in honor of Queen Victoria's record reign.

THIRTY-EIGHT MILES AN HOUR AT SEA. The extraordinary speed developed by the little vessel known as the Turbinia has been the subject of a great deal of interest and curiosity. All the claims that have been made for the vessel have been verified by actual experiment. At a recent meeting of the shipbuilding section of the Institute of Civil Engineers in London, Mr. Thornycroft, whose name is well known in connection with the development of the modern type of water tube boilers, congratulated the Hon. Charles Almonson Parsons, the designer of the Turbinia, upon her wonderful record of 38 miles an hour over a rough course. Prof. Ewing of Cambridge, who spent a week upon the vessel and made many tests and experiments in regard to speed, water and fuel consumption, etc., gave some very interesting information. The absence of complicated machinery (there being no reciprocating parts as in ordinary engines) made the duty of the engineer very easy; "in fact," he says, "there was nothing but a steam valve and a reversing valve that had to be worked. In 20 seconds after starting from a state of rest the steam turbine engines were working at a rate equivalent to a speed of 25 knots; of course, this did not mean that the ship responded instantly, but got under such headway in that brief time.

When asked about vibration, the Professor replied that it did not exist—"he did not mean a comparative quietude; but the phrase should be understood in its literal sense. Even at the highest speeds there was no vibration—nothing more than a hum from the fan, which was driven directly from the central propeller shaft." The Professor said that he had some idea of the vessel, but with a certain degree of skepticism, but that the trials had been entirely successful throughout, and he could now point to nothing that would form a set-off against the obvious advantages which were possessed by the turbine as a marine motor. These are very strong expressions, especially when we reflect that they are not sensational interviews, but the deliberate statements of experts, made in the presence of a fully competent and unpartisan jury. They indicate that a most important experimental departure has been made in the method of propulsion of ships, and which will probably exert a far-reaching influence in the future development of steam navigation.

THE PRINCE AND HIS TWO BOYS. The Prince of Wales is an enthusiastic Imperialist. He is anxious to bloom forth as the Emperor of the world rather than as a monarch of a kingdom. The Prince's attitude towards the Empire is manifested in the proceedings generally that he has taken since his accession to the throne. He has been very much pleased with the new policy looking towards the practical consolidation and unification of the Empire. Since his accession he has done much to bring about a closer union between the various parts of the Empire. He has been very much pleased with the new policy looking towards the practical consolidation and unification of the Empire. Since his accession he has done much to bring about a closer union between the various parts of the Empire.

Free trade may be the right kind of a policy for insular Britain, which does not produce more than one-sixth of its own food supply, but it does not necessarily follow that it is the right kind of a policy for Great Britain that is now being consolidated into a homogeneous organism. Just what the new Imperial policy ought to be is a matter about which there is more or less uncertainty. As a matter of fact, the Imperial policy has not as yet developed Imperialist statements, and until these are forthcoming we need not expect the formulation of an Imperial policy. Amid the general indefiniteness that prevails in regard to the new policy, there are a few facts which are almost universally admitted as being axiomatic and as forming the foundation upon which the policy will find its support.

The first axiom is that the Empire ought to be as nearly as possible self-contained and self-supporting. While Great Britain itself cannot be self-contained and self-supporting, it is generally admitted that the British Empire ought to be, and can be made to be, self-contained and independent in an emergency, of all other countries. This fact, we take it, is one of the leading planks of the new Imperial policy. Another axiom is this, that the different parts of the Empire desire to trade with themselves instead of with foreigners. This does not mean that foreign trade is not desired, but other things being equal England would sooner buy her food supplies from Canada than from the United States, and Canada prefers to import what manufactures she requires from England rather than from the United States.

A third axiom was enunciated by Lord Salisbury at the Imperial Institute dinner on Friday night, and it is this, that while the formation of closer trade relations between the different parts of the Empire may be highly desirable, the Imperial idea is not so much, if at all, dependent upon trade as upon sympathy and sentiment. According to this axiom Imperialism will go ahead, no matter what may be the outcome of the present agitation for the extension of Inter-Imperial trade.

While sentiment may be the dominating element in the Imperial idea the closer trade theory will act as a powerful factor in evolving the new policy. The enthusiasm with which Great Britain hailed our preferential tariff shows that Englishmen believe in trade as well as in sentiment. Traveling hand in hand trade and sentiment ought to form an irresistible combination and evolve a policy that will unify the Empire and greatly strengthen every part of it. We take it that a policy based on the principles underlying Imperialism will involve a judicious application of both free trade and protection, free trade as far as possible within the Empire and protection against the rest of the world. But just what should be the measure of the freedom of trade within the Empire and of protection without it is a point about which there will be no end of controversy. We in Canada must not lose sight of the fact that it is just as important, for Imperial as well as for local considerations, that Canada should be as prosperous as England. The interests of manufacturers in Canada must be regarded with as much consideration as the interests of those in Birmingham or Sheffield. If protection is necessary for the success of Canadian industry then Canada must have a protection tariff, even if it should interfere with freedom of trade within the Empire. The Empire must be strong in North America, as well as in Europe, and the Imperial policy ought to be shaped so as to encourage population and industry in this important part of the Empire as well as increase the output of British factories.

While the details of an Imperial policy will be worked out by the Empire have not as yet been forthcoming, it is nevertheless certain that such a policy can and will be evolved. It is only necessary to cite a few facts to demonstrate the possibilities of a broad Imperial policy. The absence of Mr. Edwards, proprietor of The London Echo, which is supposed to have the largest circulation of any daily paper in Great Britain, recently made this statement at a public function in England: "All the London papers are printed in America, and the same is true in America or France, and almost all of the paper that is used in the daily press of London is produced in America. Not only are the London papers using American-made ink, but in a few months they will be using American-made ink."

THE TORONTO WORLD

exist in the family. Perhaps the day is not far distant when San will feel it should not have something of the same kind during the Diamond Jubilee celebration. MEN AND THINGS. Nearly every country under the sun knows its own flag. Canada, even in this Jubilee year, seems to have some misapprehension of what constitutes the correct flag of this country. The Dominion ensign is simply the British red ensign with a shield in the fly. The red ensign is the flag of the British colonial merchant marine, all over the world, and is the flag for unofficial display on houses throughout the Empire. It is a red flag twice as long as it is broad, having the "jack" in the upper quarter of the whole area, next to the staff. The Dominion flag which the Canadian merchant service is authorized to fly, and which citizens of Canada should use is the red ensign with the arms of the Dominion, equal to one-quarter of the whole area, shown on a shield in the fly. Upon this shield the arms of the four Provinces which joined in confederation in 1867 are quartered. These Provinces were Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. This badge forms the escutcheon of the Dominion. The Dominion flag which is the red ensign with the arms of the Dominion, equal to one-quarter of the whole area, shown on a shield in the fly. THE INTERCOLONIAL DEAL

Severely Criticized by the Opposition.

EX-MINISTER OF RAILWAYS

Shows that the Drummond County Owners Make a Cool Million.

Mr. Spruille Also Takes a Hand in and Falls For of a Couple of Liberal Supporters—Mr. Powell Says the Price for the Drummond County Railway Was Pretty High—Mr. Blair's Defense—The Export Duty on Saw Logs, Wood Pulp and Metal Ores.

Ottawa, June 20. (Special.)—The whole of the morning session yesterday was taken up with discussion of the extension of the G. T. R. to Montreal. The question was thoroughly discussed and after the motion for six months' respite from Mr. Foster had been negatived, the bill was read the third time and sent up to the Senate.

Mr. Haggart's Criticism. Mr. Haggart then rose and criticized the arrangement with the Drummond Counties Railway and the G. T. R. at considerable length and with much vigor. He said that the Eastern Townships Bank held bonds of the company to the amount of $1,000,000, of which no more than $382,000 was originally invested.

Mr. Blair's Defense. Mr. Blair then rose and defended himself from the charge of having made an improvident bargain. He dealt with the argument that it was adding $7,000,000 to the public debt. He asked when the bills were to be presented. The fair way to put the matter was to say that the Government was increasing the annual charges and that was all that was being done.

Mr. Foster's Motion. Mr. Foster moved the third reading of the bill.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

The Effects of Lower Rates of Interest.

TRADE OUTLOOK IMPROVING

The Demand for Safe Investments Paying Four Per Cent.

Stocks, as a Rule, Are Much Higher Than a Year Ago—Comparison of Prices—The Exchange Market—The Wheat Situation—A Large Crop Expected in the United States—Railway and Industrial Stocks Active and Higher on Wall Street.

(From the Sunday World.) Speculation has been active during the week, and prices in many instances show advances. The feeling is becoming generally that a change for the better in business is near at hand. Railway earnings show considerable improvement, and the plethora of money is a factor in speculation that cannot be ignored.

The tariff changes are about completed, and the crops are looking better, owing to favorable weather. Stocks of general merchandise have run lower than usual, and should demands increase in conformity with the changed sentiment in business circles, we may anticipate more activity in our manufacturing industries.

The lower rates of interest will directly tend to promote new enterprises. The reduction in the rate for mortgage loans is telling adversely on the profits of our loan companies. Most of these companies have now got down to paying only 6 per cent. per annum to share-holders, while a few years ago they paid 8 to 12 per cent.

The incomes of capitalists have, therefore, been reduced, and many may be induced to invest their means in industrial pursuits to the advantage of the public.

The following table shows present prices of the principal commodities as compared with those of a year ago. It will be observed that with few exceptions current prices show a considerable advance.

Table with 2 columns: Commodity, Price per unit. Includes items like Wheat, Flour, Cotton, etc.
