

EYES OF WORLD TRAINED ON LIEGE; NO NEWS YET OF NORTH SEA FIGHT

THE WHELPS OF THE LION QUICK TO HEAR THE SUMMONS TO WAR

Canada's Sons Flock to the Colors—Contingent of 25,000 Men Will be Raised of Which 21,000 Will be for Foreign Service—Britain Enquires About Available Food Supplies.

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—Reports received by the Militia Department this afternoon indicate that the enlistment all over Canada is proceeding smoothly, and the numbers who are applying bear out the forecast made some days ago that far more than the total number actually required will volunteer. Altogether there will be twenty-five thousand men mobilized at Quebec, and of these twenty-one thousand will be sent across the Atlantic as soon as the word comes from the Imperial government. There will be ample work for the remaining four thousand in Canada for garrison and patrol duty. There will also be available for a second army contingent from the Dominion. According to the opinion of military authorities here there is a strong probability that a second army contingent will be needed from here.

Military experts believe that there will be a prolonged European land campaign on the continent before the issues of war are finally decided.

Problems of the Hour.

One of the problems which has met the recruiting officers, and referred to Ottawa for consideration, is that of pay, pensions, insurance and the care of families dependent upon those who go to the war. Active service pay will apply as soon as the troops are under arms. For privates it is one dollar per day. There is now a pension act on the statute books, and there is no question but that pensions will be granted to the families of those who are killed, to those who are incapacitated, and that there will be special legislation in this respect when parliament meets. It is understood there will be some action taken in regard to insurance. At the time of the South African war, Lord Strathcona became personally responsible for the insuring of one of the contingents.

All Offers Accepted.

The offers received from New Brunswick, Manitoba, Calgary and from Hamilton Gault, the Montreal millionaire to raise and equip supplementary regiments at their own expense as well as all the other offers of assistance from public or private sources have all been accepted. Any additional regiments that are raised by such means will be supplementary to the main force of twenty-one thousand men to be raised by the government authorities.

The railway companies already have their passenger agents planning for the mobilization, and the experience gained at Passawamusset is now invaluable. One of the important duties of the department is in arranging for guarding all public works and the channels of communication against attempt by the Germans or Austrians now in Canada to blow up bridges, public buildings (canal locks, etc.). It is realized that there is a very serious need of this, and hundreds of plain clothes men are being sworn in, or on instructions from the department here, are now stationed all over the Dominion. Every big railway bridge is guarded and extra precautions are being taken in outlying districts, such as those along the Transcontinental Railway and in the Northwest.

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—Orders have been issued by the government that all German consulates in Canada must close forthwith.

BRITAIN ASKS ABOUT FOOD SUPPLIES.

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—The Canadian government has received from the Imperial government requests for forward information as to the amount of food supplies available for immediate export, and which may be used by the British troops. It is understood that orders for oats and hay and other commodities needed by the war office have been placed with the government here to be filled, and forwarded as soon as transport arrangements can be made.

GERMAN REPRESENTATIVE IN WASHINGTON GIVES HIS VIEW OF BRITAIN'S COURSE

Declares Sir Edward Grey's Conditions Were Intolerable and Consequently Germany Could Not Accept—Great Britain Would Practically Have Bottled Up Kaiser's Navy.

New York, Aug. 7.—Prior to Germany's attack upon Liege, Sir Edward Grey tried to impose upon Germany conditions which Great Britain could have obtained only after a successful war, according to a statement issued here tonight by Daniel von Hantmann, head of the German embassy in Washington, in the absence in Europe of Count Von Bernstorff, the ambassador. These conditions, said Mr. Hantmann, would have led to absolute inactivity on the part of the German fleet.

The statement of the German charge d'affaires, was prompted, he said, by the almost complete absence of news from official sources in the fatherland, owing to the present European conditions, including cable censorship.

"It is erroneous to assume," said Mr. Hantmann, "that the English declaration of war was exclusively caused by Germany's invading Belgium. Negotiations in London had preceded the German attack on Liege. During these negotiations Sir Edward Grey promised that England would remain neutral only under these conditions. First, Germany is not allowed to commit any act of hostility against the French coast in the North Sea. Second, German troops are not allowed to pass through Belgian territory.

"To the question put by the German government, whether Great Britain would undertake to respect Belgian neutrality during the whole war, no answer was given.

"Sir Edward tried to impose conditions which would have secured to Great Britain, without running any risks, all the benefits which it could have obtained only by a successful naval war. The acceptance of these conditions would have led to the bottling up of the whole German fleet, forcing it to absolute inactivity.

"Knowing, on the other hand, that a great number of French officers had crossed the Belgian frontier in about fifty motor cars, rushing up to Liege, which was a flagrant violation of Belgian neutrality, knowing further that Antwerp was ready to open its most important harbor to the British fleet and landing corps, Germany was reluctantly compelled to refuse compliance with the British conditions."

NOT ANY TOO FRIENDLY TO THE GERMANS

New York Port Officials Show Sympathy With Britain.

SUPPOSED NEUTRALITY IS MERELY OFFICIAL

British Liner Can Sail Unmolested But Formal Obstacles May Confront Some of the Foreign Vessels.

New York, Aug. 7.—Unless the local customs officials acting against the shipment of goods to the port of New York, there will be sailings tomorrow of a number of foreign-registered vessels some of them carrying reservists.

The British liner Olympic of the White Star fleet, was given her clearance papers tonight for Southampton. To other ships intending to sail, however, no permission to get under way has been given. Collector of the Port Malone will decide tomorrow morning on their right to depart, after he has reviewed the instructions received from Washington and compared them with the reports of his inspectors regarding the cargoes and passengers on the ships.

The Red Star liner Vaderland has been placed at the call of the Belgian consul here for reservists, and may be detained under Secretary Redfield's ruling that ships must not be used for transporting reserves for a foreign army or navy. Under the same ruling, it was said tonight, the Fabre liner Ssels Anna, crowded with French reservists, may not be permitted to sail for Marseille.

The battleship Florida lies at the entrance to the upper harbor to guard against any attempted dash to sea by a vessel without clearance papers. The Olympic will not be molested when she passes out. She is a British reserve ship, but apparently the customs authorities have decided she does not come under the ban against reservist-bearing craft.

Several German vessels lay tonight at their Hoboken piers apparently ready to sail. It was denied officially here tonight that the German government has requisitioned any of these liners, or that it intends to do so.

From the same source came the statement that so far as known officially in Germany circles in Washington, the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm, which sailed heavily loaded and without passengers on Monday night, did not go forth to supply fuel to German cruisers off the Atlantic coast. Furthermore, it was said if the German cruisers had been communicating by wireless with this side of the Atlantic such messages have not reached the German embassy in Washington.

The continued reported presence of these German cruisers was reported by incoming steamers tonight. The captain of the steamer Denbigh Hall, for Oran, Algiers, said he heard code messages between German warships during the past four days. Communication with the cruisers from the wireless station at Sayville, Long Island, has ceased since a United States sloop was placed in charge.

The Cunard liner Lusitania, yesterday reported to have been pursued by German cruisers on her way to Europe, sent back word by wireless today that all was well with her. The German reservists here apparently have deposited of getting back to the fatherland. There are 66,000 stranded in New York. They were notified today to return to their homes until further notice. Similar instructions were given to 10,000 Austrian and several hundred Dutch reservists.

Another German Trick.

Paris, Aug. 7, 7.30 p. m.—Julius Cambon, the French ambassador to Germany, while on his way from Berlin to Copenhagen, was compelled to pay over 1000 marks in gold to the major accompanying him before he was allowed to cross the German frontier, according to official reports.

TALES OF TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER OF ENEMY BY BELGIANS AT LIEGE

Mown Down by Hundreds in Front of Our Trenches," Say Wounded Belgians—80,000 Men in German Line of Attack—Liege Still Holds Out After Noted Struggle.

HEROIC BELGIANS NOW FEAR EPIDEMIC.

Brussels, via Paris, Aug. 7.—Many of the people of Liege have made their way out of the city fearing an epidemic more than the bombardment.

German prisoners, whom a correspondent questioned, acknowledged the courage and tenacity of the Belgian troops who are now opposing the German advance. The prisoners were treated with consideration, and on the way to Brussels were supplied at the station with beer and bread.

The excitement at Brussels, since the arrival of the wounded, has increased, if such is possible. There is much opinion, however, concerning the military situation. The events before Liege are considered as nearly the raising of the curtain, and that Belgium may once more be the theatre where the destinies of Europe will be decided.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF GERMAN REVERSE

Berlin, via London, Aug. 7.—The official German account of the siege of Liege says: "On Wednesday the German advance guards penetrated along the entire Belgian frontier. A small detachment tried a coup de main with great boldness at Liege. Some of the cavalry entered Liege, with the intention of seizing the commander of the forces, who only saved himself by flight.

"An attempt on the fortress itself, the fortifications of which are modern, was unsuccessful. Our troops are before the fortress, in contact with the enemy.

"A hostile foreign press will characterize the enterprise, which cannot in the slightest influence the larger operations, as a defeat. However, it is a unique act of heroism in the history of war, and a sign of the heroic gallantry of our troops."

GERMANS WERE MOWN DOWN BY HUNDREDS

Brussels, via London, Aug. 7.—Trains filled with wounded and fugitive combatants arrived here this morning from Liege, and neighboring towns. The military trains, with prisoners on board, were sent from Liege to Antwerp.

The Belgian troops appeared to be in the best of spirits when they left Liege. They declared that if there had not been ten German men to one Belgian not one Belgian would have got through their lines. Though in good spirits, the Belgians were partly exhausted, having fought for fifty hours without rest.

Some of the wounded Belgians, eye witnesses of the fighting said they saw Germans mown down by hundreds in front of the trenches and entanglements by the gun and rifle of the Belgians, but they were replaced by others, who crawled forward like weasels. In certain places in the fighting zone the ground was covered with dead, the burial of which, it was said, would take at least a week.

80,000 GERMANS FACED LIEGE.

London, Aug. 7, 7 p. m.—It was officially stated this evening that the Germans had 80,000 men before Liege on Wednesday, and that in all probability this number had been considerably augmented since the forts were manned.

ASKING RESPITE TO BURY DEAD.

London, Aug. 7, 9.30 p. m.—Official despatches state that Liege still holds out, and that the Germans have asked for a twenty-four hour respite to bury their dead.

GERMAN RESERVISTS NOW IN DOMINION TO BE HELD HERE

Will Not Be Permitted to "Join German Colors" but Will Be Secure from Annoyance if they Behave Themselves.

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—German army reservists now in Canada will not be allowed to leave the Dominion. The government announced after a cabinet council tonight, that it would take this course.

The following statement was given out: "In accordance with instructions received from the Imperial authorities, German officers or reservists attempting to leave Canada for the purpose of joining their colors will be arrested and detained. Arrangements for this purpose have been made at all ocean points on the Atlantic and Pacific as well as at various other towns.

MINOR NOTES OF THE WAR

Foreign Legation for France. Paris, Aug. 7.—The French war office is arranging to accept foreign volunteers, beginning August 21. They will be organized into a foreign legion.

Frenchman Shot as Spy. London, Aug. 7.—Karl von Lavinsky, an American, who arrived in London today from Germany, asserted that he saw a Frenchman taken from a train under the suspicion that he was a spy, and shot on the station at Essen, in the presence of all the passengers.

Jap Warship Guards C. P. R. Liner. Yokohama, Aug. 7.—The C. P. R. liner clear before ten a. m. tomorrow.

DEFENCE OF LIEGE THE GREAT FEATURE IN THE EUROPEAN WAR

Request for Armistice Not Granted by Heroic Governor of Belgian City—Britain Speedily Clearing up German Merchant Marine—French Troops Inflict Heavy Defeat on Kaiser's Army.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY

The siege of Liege is the outstanding feature of the European war. The latest advice, received by way of London in the form of official despatches, say that Liege still holds out against the attacks of the Germans.

The Germans have asked for a twenty-four hour armistice to bury their dead, but the governor of Liege, Lt.-Gen. Leman, has not acceded to this request, so far as is known.

On the authority of the Belgian war minister, the German casualties in the battle around Liege number 25,000 according to their own admission.

An official statement, issued from Berlin, described the attempt on the Liege fortress, unsuccessful, and the assault of the Germans as "a unique act of heroism," and that it will have not the slightest influence on the larger operations of the German army.

German diplomats have been using their utmost efforts to win Italy to the German side by negotiations and a direct appeal to King Victor-Emmanuel, but without success. The Italian ambassador at London, in thanking a great assembly, including several peers and members of parliament, which gathered in front of the embassy, said that Italy had declared her neutrality, and would adhere to it.

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, denied that there had been any engagement between the German and British fleets in the North Sea.

FRENCH DEFEAT BAVARIANS. London, Aug. 8.—1 a. m. (Asa's Press)—A Brussels despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company gives an unofficial report that a Bavarian corps has been defeated by the French at Marrahah, north of Luxembourg. Many prisoners are said to have been taken.

BRITAIN "GRABBING" GERMAN SHIPS. London, Aug. 7.—11.40 p. m. (Asa's Press)—The capture of German merchant craft continues at a rate gratifying to Englishmen, who predict that the war will speedily result in driving German commerce off the sea.

Late this afternoon the German steamer Haida, timber-laden, was towed into Leith. This is the fourth German prize brought into that port. Lloyd's agents at Bordeaux report that the German steamers Consul Horn and Acturus have been seized there by the French government.

Since the outbreak of the war a number of German ships, which were lying in English harbors when war was declared, have been taken. According to an English authority on international law, such vessels can be retained only while the war lasts. When peace is signed they must be returned to their owners.

BELGIANS HAD A GOOD SLEEP AND THEN TROUNGED GERMANS

London, Aug. 7, 10.45 p. m., (Associated Press)—A Brussels despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says the militia of the garrison at Liege, who retreated on Thursday, so that the men could get some sleep, took the offensive Friday by a turning movement in Belgian Luxembourg, where they routed a German cavalry division.

THE WAR NEWS

In the absence of confirmed news from the North Sea, regarding the clash which ere this, must have occurred between the British fleet and the German armada, the people of Canada, in common with those of all other parts of the Empire, are naturally anxious, though not at all apprehensive. Rumors which have gained a wide publicity, and which appear to be circumstantially supported, indicate that there has been a victory for the British fleet. In opposition to this is the statement by Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, that there has been no fighting except what has been officially reported. There has been no report of a general or decisive engagement, so there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of Mr. Churchill's information.

On the other hand, the arm-chair strategist may point to the fact that, assuredly, there was a day or two ago, a powerful German fleet in the North Sea, and that, because of its presence there, the English fishermen who derive their livelihood from those waters were advised not to go forth. Yesterday permission was given that they might again pursue their calling, a fact indicating that what danger existed has been removed. The British Government would hardly expose the North Sea trawlers to the risk that would be theirs in the neighborhood of a hostile battle fleet.

Another interesting, and possibly significant despatch of yesterday brought the information that a mighty French dreadnought, waiting at Toulon to go to the assistance of the North Sea fleet, if necessary, had been instructed to proceed to the Mediterranean, and the inference was that all danger from the Germans in the North Sea had passed and she was at liberty to follow another design. Also, yesterday, a London despatch stated that "the Admiralty announces that the British coastwise shipping on the East Coast is now safe, because the British fleet has engaged the Germans on the high seas and the German fleet is now being chased toward the coast of Holland."

In addition to these despatches, which might almost be regarded as at least semi-official, there are multitudinous stories of firing heard in the general direction of where the opposing fleets were supposed to have been. Such reports have been received from many points on the East Coast of England as well as from Holland. While it is not wise to arouse false hopes in the minds of the people, yet, considering the many reports of conflict, and the preponderance of power which the British fleet is said to have over the foe, it is but fair to assume that there is more than a little foundation for the reports of British victory in the first naval engagement of the war. If this prove to be the case, even though the success to Britain has not been quite as sweeping as the reports would suggest, it should have a powerful effect upon shortening the war. With Britain trouncing the Germans on the sea, Britain's allies meeting with victory in proportion to the efforts of the German war lord ever held hope of emerging from the struggle with any measure of success, that hope must speedily be disappearing.

It must be apparent even to the blood-crazed Kaiser that his period of European domination is approaching an inglorious termination. And now that Britain, after exhausting all efforts for peace, has entered upon a campaign against him, it is to be hoped that it will be followed to the point where the German boy shall forever be removed as a factor in world politics and policies. It is possibly too much to wish for the complete dismemberment of the German Empire, but, at any rate, thousands of peaceloving people the world over will join in the hope that the lesson to be taught the Kaiser will be sufficiently severe that its effect will be lasting. For years he has occupied the position of a "desperate disease" in Europe. Such diseases require drastic remedies. This is the psychological moment for their application.

THE AGED EMPEROR OF THE AUSTRIANS.

One of the outstanding figures in the present European struggle is Francis Joseph, Emperor of the Austrians. It was he who struck the match which set all Europe ablaze with the fires of war. He is the eldest officer now living who can boast of the distinction of having commanded an army in the field. He received his baptism of fire in the battle of Santa Lucia, prior to his accession to the throne, when barely eighteen years of age, while serving as a volunteer. He is now seventy-seven years of age, and has seen the later found Austria in a state of insurrection, Vienna in the hands of the rebels, and the imperial family and court in hiding within the walls of the stronghold of Olmutz. His first task was to recapture Vienna, which was only accomplished with a good deal of bloodshed, and then he found himself confronted by the revolution of all Hungary, which was crushed with no little difficulty, with the assistance of a Russian army. Four years later his troops occupied the Wallachian principality, and it was his ultimatum to Russia, in December, 1855, that compelled Emperor Alexander II, to come to terms and to thus bring the Crimean war to close.

In 1859 Austria was once more at war, this time with France and Italy. After the first Austrian defeat, Francis Joseph hastened to the front assumed control of the army, and commanded in person at the great battle of Solfenro.

In 1864 Austria joined Prussia in a war upon Denmark, to compel the latter to surrender the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein to the father of the present German Emperor. In accordance with the decree of the German Confederation and two years later Emperor Francis Joseph found himself engaged in war against both Prussia and Italy. The last campaign after that, that Austria had to its record, until the declaration of the war with Serbia recently, was that which the Emperor had to undertake thirty-four years ago in order to establish his hold upon the Ottoman province of Herzegovina and Bosnia, which had been assigned to his care and administration by the Congress of Berlin of 1878.

It was an occupation which was vigorously resisted by both the Moslem and Serb population. The wars of 1859 and of 1866 were disastrous to Francis Joseph. For in the first he lost his Italian province of Lombardy, and was compelled to submit to the de-thronement of the Hapsburg dynasty in the Grandduchy of Tuscany, and the annexation of the latter to the kingdom of Italy, while the war of 1866 cost him the city and province of Venice, which although he had defeated Italy at sea and on land, he was obliged by Prussia, which had vanquished Austria at the battle of Sadowa, to abandon to the late King Victor Emmanuel.

Strangely enough in these days of fickleness neither defeat nor loss of territory have ever interfered in the slightest degree with the affection of the Austrians for their Emperor. Indeed the popular manifestations of loyalty have been most pronounced when the Austrians felt that their Emperor had been subjected to some great sorrow or distress. Napoleon III, one day commenting on this phase of Austrian character, said that Francis Joseph was the only monarch in Europe who did not risk losing his crown through the defeat of his arms, and who could afford to return to his capital after suffering military disaster assured of a more affectionate welcome than ever from his subjects. When Napoleon III, was defeated at Sedan in 1870, his people, especially the inhabitants of Paris, overwhelmed him with execration and promptly proclaimed the downfall of his throne, the exile of his dynasty and the establishment of the present Republic. It is probably well for Francis Joseph that his people hold this characteristic, for, with events in Europe moving with the rapidity of the last few days, it is more than likely that the subjects of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy will be called upon to accept themselves to another taste of defeat, rather than the victory for which they hoped.

UNSATISFACTORY ALL ROUND.

(St. John Globe.)
 After Mr. Baxter's recent appearance before the Dugal commissioners a week ago, the Globe, suggested that when he gave his evidence the proceedings, if not illuminating, would be spectacular. Results verified the prediction. The proceedings were spectacular. They were not as illuminating as the public desire, but a little additional information given this morning proved the truth of charges long ago made by the Globe that politicians were concerned to conceal to hush up the investigation. Further, it justified, at least, in a measure, things said by Mr. Baxter in his sensational outburst of Friday, and apparently then denied by Mr. Carvell, who was not in the witness box. After Mr. Baxter had told his story, substantially the same story as Mr. Gould had previously told of his retainer by Mr. Gould and of his reasons for returning the $500, Mr. Carvell sought to get Mr. Baxter to say that the investigation of Valley Railway accounts by a committee of the Legislature decided him to make the return. Mr. Baxter's frank statement that before the committee began its work he had told several members of the House of his relations with Mr. Gould, and that the return was made to him by him for the deal with Valley Railway matters, made examination along that line unprofitable. Mr. Carvell took a new course in that Mr. Baxter for some information about the authorship of the fore-shores bill, and Mr. Baxter related with suggestions that Mr. Carvell told about the negotiations to stifle the investigation. The net result was a denial by Mr. Baxter that he had dictated the bill to a Miss Kirk, a stenographer; a denial by Mr. Carvell that he was personally concerned in negotiations to stifle the investigation, although he knew there had been such negotiations, and an appeal to Mr. Fowler to supply June, when Mr. Fowler told with a statement that "so far as he knew" Mr. Carvell had no connection with the negotiations. Perhaps the commissioners have not fast enough into this question, but it is of little less interest than the charges themselves, and the time seems to have come when the facts should all be made clear. The denials of Mr. Carvell and Mr. Fowler, which are really not denials at all, cannot be considered specific enough to be satisfactory. Why not give the public the whole story of proposals as outrageous as any in connection with these crimes against the people? Why was Mr. Fowler drawn into the matter?

HISTORIC DAYS IN CANADA

On this date, August 8th, in 1782, Samuel Hearne, the gallant explorer of the Canadian north, was defeated by the French at Fort Churchill on the western shore of Hudson's Bay. Hearne was one of the bravest and most daring of the many explorers who have invaded the northern wilderness, and he has been called "the father of Arctic exploration." Late in 1770 Hearne, at the head of a little band of men, plunged into the untrodden forests to begin his search for the distant "Metal River" of aboriginal legend. In the following year he discovered Great Slave Lake and retraced hundreds of miles in canoe and on foot, he discovered the Coppermine river, and traced it to its mouth in the Arctic ocean. He was the first white man to gaze out upon the ice flows and green waters of that northern sea. Hearne was also the discoverer of Great Slave Lake and traveled through a large part of the country west of Hudson's Bay, where white man had never been before. He found that a vast barren, and not a narrow strip of land, as has been supposed, lay between the Atlantic and the Pacific. Hearne claimed this wide stretch of country for England, and he felt that it was his duty to hold it. The French, however, claimed the territory, and on August 8, 1782, Hearne and his little company of two or three men were surprised by 400 marines from the French man-of-war La Sceptre. Outnumbered ten to one, there was nothing for Hearne to do but surrender the fort. It related that Hearne's redskin ally, Chief Matonabee, was so stricken with grief that he went into the forest and committed suicide. Hearne was held prisoner for a little while, and on his release he returned to England, where he died ten years later, in the case of his skill in his story of his Canadian career is one of the most wonderful works of his kind ever written.

FIRST THINGS THE AMERICA'S CUP

The first race in American waters for the America's Cup, which was also the first attempt of English yachtsmen to "hit" the trophy, was held forty-four years ago today, Aug. 8, 1870. It was in August of 1851 that the yacht America captured the coveted trophy in a race around the Isle of Wight. The cup was turned over by the New York Yacht Club, but the British sportsmen made no attempt to recapture it until the Cambria was sent over in 1870. The Masie, the American defender, had no trouble in defeating the challenger. In 1871 the Livonia was sent over, and was defeated by the defenders Columbia and Sappho. The next attempt was in 1876, when the Countess of Dufferin

THE HUMAN PROCESSION GEN. MILES 75 TODAY.

Lieut.-Gen. Nelson Appleton Miles, hero of many battles and former head of the United States Army, was born in Westminister, Mass., Aug. 8, 1823, just three-quarters of a century ago today. The distinguished warrior has only one accomplished soldier, but he has since achieved fame as a writer and has been given honorary degrees by Harvard and other universities. He began his career in the regular army as a cadet at West Point, where he was a clerk at a salary of $5 per week. On the outbreak of the war between the States the young clerk, true to the traditions of the old colonial family from which he sprang, lost no time in enlisting in the army for the defense of his flag. He was among the first to raise a company of volunteers, and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Twentieth Massachusetts Infantry. The following year he was made colonel of the Sixty-first New York infantry. His gallantry won rapid promotion, and at the end of the war he was a major-general of volunteers, although only twenty-six years old. He took part in all the terrible engagements that marked the campaign of the Potomac, and he was the first to surrender to Lee at Appomattox. He was wounded three times, once very seriously. When the struggle was over, young Miles decided to continue his military career, and entered the regular army of the United States as a colonel. In 1868 he married Mary Hotel Sherman, daughter of Gen. William T. Sherman. A little later he was sent West and took part in a number of campaigns against the hostile redskins, notably those against the savage armies of Sitting Bull, Crazy Horse, Chief Joseph, Natchez and the blood thirsty Geronimo. In his recently published memoirs, Gen. Miles says of Geronimo and Natchez: "There has seldom appeared a more ruthless marauder than Geronimo. He had the most determined face and piercing eyes that I have ever seen. Natchez was the hereditary chief of the Apaches, a tall, slender young warrior, whose dignity and grace of movement would become any prince." Gen. Miles finds the real Americans on the Pacific coast in the pioneers who first went to that remote region were a resolute body of men and women, and the generation that has grown up there are well-educated, intelligent and patriotic. "Although he fought the Indians and reduced them to subjection to the great white father at Washington, Gen. Miles admits that the redskins have been the victims of many injustices at the hands of the conquering palefaces. Of his own opinion of the Nez Perce and the Nez Perce, Gen. Miles says: "Another cruel injustice was to be enacted. It would require a volume to record the history of the Nez Perce Indians, their loyalty to the government, their hospitality and kindness to the Lewis and Clark expedition in 1804 and their treacherous attack on the white man and ever been killed by a Nez Perce. Long before 1877 the government had, for certain considerations, granted them a reservation. They prized this little section of their native land more than all other earthly possessions. The solemn injunction of Chief Joseph's father to him was never to gave up the valley where his ashes were to rest. Yet the greed of the white race was too strong to permit the Nez Perce to retain the Wallowa Valley, their most cherished home. So Miles was sent to force the Indians to submit, and in the end he brought Chief Joseph to the white man's terms, and forced from him the solemn promise, "From where the sun now stands, I will fight no more against the white man."

GEO. W. FOWLER IN STRONG ARGUMENT BEFORE ROYAL COMMISSION YESTERDAY

Reviews evidence in Timber Limit case and shows fallacies of Dugal charges — Mr. Carvell's reply very weak — M. G. Teed bombarded prosecution at morning session.

The investigation into the charges made by Mr. Dugal in connection with the crown lands administration was concluded yesterday when the counsel on both sides presented their arguments to the commissioners.

Mr. Carvell in his opening up presented a rather ingenious argument whereby he tried to show that extortion had been practiced in connection with the collection of the crown fund.

Mr. Teed presented a straight forward statement in regard to the scope of the enquiry and the legislation providing for the appointment of the royal commission.

George W. Fowler made an eloquent speech in which he reviewed the evidence and from the word of different witnesses pointing out that neither extortion or coercion had entered into the matter of raising the fund. He reviewed the statements of campaign funds and showed that they were quite common in connection with other movements besides political campaigns.

The Valley Railway matter will be continued next Friday morning at ten o'clock and at the session yesterday Mr. Carvell announced that he would not argue the case until the books of the company, now in New York, were produced.

Morning Session.

Mr. Carvell read a statement from The Standard at the morning session of the enquiry concerning the evidence of J. B. M. Baxter on Thursday afternoon. Mr. Baxter was notified that Mr. Teed would make a statement and he appeared in court. E. S. Carter was sworn. He told of being in Fredericton as Liberal organizer and of obtaining information concerning the contribution of $15 a mile to the campaign fund. In regard to the question of a proposal to settle the charges had been made, he had never made such a proposal and he had no knowledge of it being made. He had never heard of $10,000 in connection with the matter. One lumberman had told him that the charges had been paid for the expenses paid. He never knew of any document such as mentioned by Mr. Baxter.

Cross examined by Mr. Baxter witness said he had never consulted Mr. Pugsley either directly or indirectly in reference to the matter. In reply to Mr. Teed witness said he had been Liberal organizer for four or five years. He considered a campaign fund necessary for the payment of expenses. He could not say from what source the funds had been derived.

Mr. Carvell.

Mr. Carvell was then sworn. He said no proposal had been made to him by any Conservative or Mr. Fleming in any way settling this enquiry. He has never heard of any proposed payment of $10,000.

In reply to Mr. Baxter witness said that two lumbermen had told him that the matter might be settled with Mr. Pugsley, but witness did not think any terms had been mentioned. Witness had heard that a prominent St. John Conservative had approached Mr. Pugsley on the matter and the resignation of the timber charges were mentioned. A lumberman had asked witness to drop the timber charges and his position was for Mr. Fleming to resign and he would have to make an admission.

To Mr. Teed witness said he had been in active politics for twenty years and there was more money spent in New Brunswick than there should be. He believed that money was used in elections.

Argument in the timber charges was then begun.

Mr. Stevens read the charges as made by Mr. Dugal. He argued that Mr. Fleming did not know of the methods employed for the raising of the fund. He outlined the evidence relating to the collection of the fund. Mr. Stevens read a statement on extortion and corruption. He thought the fact that lumbermen contributed the additional money was evidence that the privilege they were securing was worth more than the amount fixed by the government. He suggested as a cure for corrupt campaign funds that the names of all contributors to the funds, including the names of those who had been paid, be published as well as the accounts of expenditures. If it was a crime to contribute to campaign funds it was less a crime for contractors under the government to contribute to private parties.

George W. Fowler.

George W. Fowler, C. C. M. P., followed and discussed the evidence and charges in some detail from a legal standpoint. He stated that campaign funds, he admitted that they were necessary and he had known them on both sides of politics. He suggested as a cure for corrupt campaign funds that the names of all contributors to the funds, including the names of those who had been paid, be published as well as the accounts of expenditures. If it was a crime to contribute to campaign funds it was less a crime for contractors under the government to contribute to private parties.

David Smith, Quartermaster Sergeant of Gordon Highlanders, in St. John on furlough.

David Smith, quartermaster sergeant of the Gordon Highlanders, a famous Scotch regiment, who arrived in St. John three days ago, received a cable yesterday ordering him to join his regiment.

Sergeant Smith came to Canada on furlough, and has been consulting James Gilchrist, secretary of the Farm Settlement Board, with a view to buying a farm in New Brunswick upon which he could settle down when he left the army. As New York fans scan the daily box scores of the Yankee games the impression grows that Frank Chance is the best player in the American League. Mr. Carvell referred to the difficulty he had in securing witness' consent to come to court, and he had been disappointed in many witnesses in connection with the arrangements made by the local government party.

The Present Question.

The question at present involved was whether or not this fund was raised by improper means and whether Mr. Fleming did wrong in connection with its collection.

Some persons perhaps not having the leaning towards this particular enquiry might have contributed unwillingly but still as long as it was not extorted it was practically a free will offering.

The evidence of Mr. Burchill, who was a pillar of the Liberal party in this province did not show extortion. He said that he had been asked to contribute to the fund and he had done so. He said that he had been asked to contribute to the fund and he had done so. He said that he had been asked to contribute to the fund and he had done so.

Mr. Carvell thought that the strongest evidence against Mr. Fleming was the evidence of Mr. Berry, which had not been given. He referred to Mr. Fleming's statement that he had been asked to contribute to the fund and he had done so. He said that he had been asked to contribute to the fund and he had done so.

RETAIL PRICES FOR HOUSEWIVES TODAY

There was a moderate supply of provisions in the country market yesterday, retail prices being about the same as last week in most cases. Meats were retailed as follows: Lamb, 12c to 22c; beef, 12c to 22c; pork, 12c to 22c; veal, 12c to 22c.

In the poultry department chickens were selling at $1 to $1.75 a pair; fowl $1 to $1.50; ducks $1.50 to $1.75.

The following are some of the prices of vegetables of which there was fair supply: Peas 20c, peak beans 40c, cauliflowers 10c to 25c, each; squash 6c, lb.; beets and carrots 4c, bunch; tomatoes 10c, lb.; cucumbers 6c, each; onions 8c, lb.; potatoes 40c, peck.

In the fish market the supply was moderate. Cod and haddock were quoted at 5c, lb.; halibut 15c, salmon 20c to 25c, mackerel 8c to 10c, each; shad 25c, each; herring 10c, crated supply 24c, dozen, smelts, none scarce, 15c, lb.

After being very plentiful at the beginning of the season there was a scarcity of mackerel until quite recently when fair catches have been reported. Although the season for salmon has advanced the fair halibut taken have been of good quality and find a ready sale. The salmon fishermen at Lunenburg have now knocked off, and the demand for this fish is being supplied by the harbor and lower St. John river fishermen. The season for salmon however is nearly over, closing on the fifteenth of this month.

London, Aug. 7.—Complete silence reigned as to military movements on both Germany's and France's part, and it assumed that both armies are concentrating for a decisive battle. No hint as to where they will come into contact has been given.

A Belgian airman thus describes the German attack on Liege: 'After a terrible cannonade the German infantry approached en masse and reached the glacis of the forts, where the heavy defensive guns were unable to reach them. General Lemah sent artillery to a point where the invading infantry could be shelled and the Germans were swept from their feet. This occurred several times during the day and night.'

A patrol of Uhlans performed a remarkable exploit by hiding into the town. Belgian officers recognized them as Germans and a desperate fight ensued. Several on each side were killed. "Red Cross automobiles arriving at Brussels, report that the ground before the forts is covered with dead and wounded Germans. Early today the Belgians entrenched at Liege slaughtered another large force of Germans. The defenders made a show of evacuating the outer fortification. The Germans accepted

The Empress of Britain and Victorian which were due to sail Thursday and Friday postponed their sailings till today. A report from Montreal stated that all the boats booked to sail from Canada during the week would leave Quebec today under convoy of a couple of British war ships, but the local shipping offices had no special information in regard to this report.

Alarmist Report

An alarmist report appeared in one of the local papers the other day to the effect that as a result of the war the coastwise service between Canada and the United States had been demoralized, that freight rates on lumber had advanced, and that schooners could not be obtained to bring American coal to St. John. Interviews with local shipping brokers failed to elicit any information in support of this alarmist report. Schooners are not in demand for carrying lumber to the United States at the present time, because the American lumber market is very dull and no orders are being placed there. One broker stated yesterday that he was trying to charter three vessels to bring coal to St. John, but did not know that there was any particular demand for vessels for this trade.

ST. JOHN MEN ENLISTING FOR SERVICE AGAINST GERMANY

Local Militia Officers receive formal notification from Ottawa, of formation Infantry Brigade - Hundreds volunteer at Armories.

The most important development in local militia circles yesterday was the receipt of orders from Ottawa to enlist men for foreign service. According to the instruction received here the first Canadian contingent to embark for overseas services will be composed mainly of infantry and artillerymen, the intention being to only enroll one squadron of Canadian cavalry. No word has yet been received as to the number of men St. John and the province will be expected to enroll, and officers of local regiments intend to enlist all the men they can. The names of volunteers for foreign service will be sent to Ottawa by next Tuesday, and from these lists the first Canadian contingent will be selected, and those chosen for foreign service will proceed to Quebec where the various units will be organized.

WAR PICTURES, IMPERIAL TODAY.

The Imperial last night introduced another batch of those Patrie topical films dealing with the soldiery and personages prominent in the present awful European conflict. It was a most interesting picture and lasted over fifteen minutes. The same film will be shown in the programme today, although it has not been advertised. It was a fortunate "pick-up" in pictures, such as is often the case in matching programmes. The film shows the waters at Kiel, Germany during a regatta, types of Serbian, Bulgarian, Greek, British, French German, Italian and Russian soldiers. Gives views of the rulers of England, Germany, France and other countries, shows the launching of an Italian dreadnought, shows the burning of dead on a battlefield and is filled with views that touch the present situation on many sides. This will be an extra in today's bill, as before stated.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN.

HAROLD MAC GRATH.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Kathlyn Hare, believing her father, Col. Hare, in peril, has summoned her, leaves her home in California to go to him in Allah, India. Umballah, pretender to the throne of that principality, has imprisoned the colonel, named by the late king as his heir, because he fears the American may claim on his royal rights. Upon her arrival in Allah, Kathlyn is informed by Umballah that her father being dead, she is to be queen, and must marry him forthwith. Because of her refusal she is sentenced to undergo two ordeals with wild beasts.

John Bruce, an American and fellow passenger on the boat which brought Kathlyn to Allah, saves her life. The elephant which carries her from the scene of her trials becomes frightened and runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party.

After a ride filled with peril she takes refuge in a ruined temple. The holy men and villagers, believing her to be an ancient priestess, rise from the tomb, allow her to remain as the guardian of the sacred fire. But Kathlyn's haven is also the abode of a lion, and she is forced to flee from it, with the savage beast in pursuit. She escapes and finds a retreat in the jungle, only to fall into the hands of a band of slave traders, who bring her to Allah to the public mart. She is sold to Umballah, who, finding her still unsubmissive, throws her into the dungeons with her father.

Bruce and his friends effect the release of Kathlyn and the colonel. Umballah's attempt to recapture them is unsuccessful, and the fugitives are given shelter in the palace of Sala Khan.

Supplied with camels and servants by that hospitable prince, the party endeavors to reach the coast, but are overpowered by a band of brigands, and the encounter results in the colonel being delivered to Umballah. Kathlyn and Bruce escape from their captors and return to Allah, where Kathlyn learns that her father, while nominally king, is in reality a prisoner.

Kathlyn's resourcefulness and bravery are the means of rescuing him, and once more they steal away from Allah, but return broken hearted when they learn that Winnie, Kathlyn's young sister, has come to India. Umballah makes her a prisoner. She is forced to enter the palace and in turn is crowned queen of Allah.

One attempt to get Winnie out of the closely guarded palace almost costs Kathlyn her life, but the second plan succeeds, and Kathlyn and Winnie, their father, and Bruce find a hiding place in the home of their Indian friend, Ramabai, and his wife Punndita. There is the lawful queen of Allah and public sentiment in her favor is growing. The people at last weary of Umballah's rule, rise against him, with Ramabai, at their head, and the colonel and Bruce fighting under him. Kathlyn has been left at home, but when tidings that the revolutionists have been defeated reach her she rushes out and assumes command of the scattered forces. Her presence inspires them with fresh courage and under leadership the tide is turned and the rebels are victorious. To escape from the hands of those who have become free and caused a panic, Kathlyn enters a deserted house and climbs to its roof. When she sees over the parapet to call for aid she is seen by Umballah, who is fleeing from the rebels. Mad for revenge, he sets fire to the house and Kathlyn's refuge is cut off. She is surrounded by a mob of soldiers who threaten her with death, but a loyal servant sacrifices himself and saves her from the latter danger.

Ramabai has long suspected that the real king of Allah did not die, as was announced to the people, but is being held in some vile dungeon. When he discovers her surroundings he corrects the colonel, and Bruce hasten to the hide-out which the king has been imprisoned, and the feeble old man is escorted to the palace.

body because then he had no time to mourn Lal Singh.

Bruce's camp was, of course, in utter ruin. Not even the cooking utensils remained, and of his men there was left but Adh, whose leg still caused him to limp a little. So Bruce was commanded by no less person than Kathlyn to be her father's guest till they departed for America. Daily Winnie rode Ramabai. He was such a funny old pachyderm, a kind of clown among his brethren, but as gentle as a kitten. Running away had not paid. He was like the country boy who had gone to the big city; he never more could be satisfied with the farm.

The baboon hung about the Colonel's heels as a dog might have done; while Kathlyn had found a tiger cub for a plaything. So far awful peace reigned at the camp.

They found the much sought document in the secret chamber in Umballah's house (just as she intended they should); and the king had it legally destroyed and wrote a new will, wherein Punndita should have back that which the king's ancestors had taken from her—her throne.

After that there was nothing for Colonel Hare to do but proceed to ship his animals to the railroad, thence to the ports where he could dispose of them. Never should he enter this part of India again. Life was too short.

High and low they hunted Umballah, but without success. He was hidden in the city and was sinisterly alive.

Day after day the king grew stronger mentally and physically. Many of the reforms suggested by Ramabai were put into force. Quiet at length really settled down upon the city. They began to believe that Umballah had fled the city, and vigilance correspondingly relaxed.

The king had a private chamber the window of which overlooked the garden of brides. There with his shebet and water pipe he resumed his old habit of inditing verse in pure Persian, for he was a scholar. He never entered the serana or harem; but occasionally he sent for some of the women to play and dance before him. And the woman who loved Umballah was among these. One day she asked to take a journey into the basars to visit the sister. Ordinarily such a request would have been denied. But the king no longer cared what the women did, and the chief eunuch slept afternoons and nights, being only partly alive in the morning.

An hour later a palanquin was lowered directly beneath the king's window. To his eye it looked exactly like the one which had departed. He went to writing, absorbed. Had he looked closely, had he been the least suspicious...

This palanquin was the gift of Durga Ram, so-called Umballah. It had been built especially for this long-waited-for occasion. It was nothing more nor less than a cunning cage in which a tiger was huddled, in a vile temper. The palanquin bearers, friends of the dancing girl, had overpowered the royal bearers and donned their costumes. At this moment one of the bearers (Umballah himself, trusting no one) crawled under the palanquin, and opened the door. The furious beast sprang to the window. The king was too astonished to move, to appreciate his danger. From your harmless palanquin this striped fury!

The tiger in his leap struck the lacquered deck, broke it, and scattered the papers about. Kathlyn, Ramabai and his officers were just entering the corridor which led to the chamber when the tragedy occurred. They heard the noise, the king's cries. When they reached the door silence greeted them. The room was wrecked. There was evidence of a short but terrific struggle. The king lay dead upon the door, the side of his head against the wall, his turban and garments were in tatters. But he had died like a king; for in the corner by the window lay the striped one, a jeweled dagger in his throat. Ramabai was first to discover the deserted palanquin, and proceeded to investigate. It did not take him more than a minute to understand what had happened. It was not an accident; it was cold-blooded murder, and back of it stood the infernal ingenuity of one man.

Thus fate took Allah by the hair again and shook her out of the pastoral quiet. What would happen now?

This!

On the morning after the tragic death of the old king, those who went early to worship, to propitiate the gods to deal kindly with them during the day, were astounded to find the doors and the gates of all the temples closed! Nor was any priest visible in his usual haunts. The people were stunned. For there could be but one interpretation to this act on the part of the gurus: the gods had denied the people. Why? Wherefore? Twenty-four hours passed without their learning the cause; the priests desired to fill them with terror before they struck. Then came the distribution of pamphlets wherein it was decreed that the populace, the soldiery, all Allah in fact, must bow to the will of the gods or go henceforth unrequited. The gods demanded the reinstatement as regent Durga Ram; the deposing of Ramabai, the infidel; the fealty of the troops to Durga Ram. Twenty-four hours were given the people to make their choice.

Before the doors of all the temples the people gathered, walling and pouring dust upon their heads, from Brahmin to pariah, from high caste matrons to light dancing girls. And when the troops, company by company, began to kneel at the outer rim of these gatherings, Ramabai dispatched a note to Colonel Hare, warning him to fly at once. But the messenger tore up the note and flew to his favorite temple. Superstition thus won what honor, truth, and generosity could not hold.

All this happened so quickly that not even a rumor of it reached the Colonel's bungalow till it was too late. They were to have left on the morrow. The king dead, only a few minor technicalities stood in the way of Ramabai and Punndita.

Bruce and Kathlyn were fencing one with the other, after the manner of lovers, when Winnie, her eyes wide with fright, burst in upon them with the news that Umballah, at the head of many soldiers, was approaching. The lovers rushed to the front of the bungalow in time to witness the Colonel trying to prevent the intrusion of a priest.

"Patience, sahib!" warned the priest.

The Colonel, upon seeing Umballah, made an attempt to draw his revolver, but the soldiers prevented him from carrying into execution his wild impulse.

The priest explained what had happened. The Colonel Sahib, his friend Bruce Sahib, and his youngest daughter were permitted to depart in peace; but Kathlyn Memasah must wed Durga Ram.

When the dazed Colonel produced the document which had been legally canceled, Umballah laughed and declared that he himself had forged that particularly document, that the true one, which he held, was not legally destroyed.

Ahmed alone escaped, because Umballah had in his triumph forgotten him.

Where was the document he had given to his friend Hare?

"Superstition," went on Umballah, "the sword which bends the knees of the laymen, has and all ways will through the eyes!"

In the vault outside a bell tinkled, a gong boomed.

"When I give the sign," continued the schemer, "declare the curse upon all those who do not bend. A word from your lips, and Ramabai's troops vanish, reform, and become yours and mine!"

"While the king lives!" asked the chief priest curiously.

"Ah!" And Umballah smiled again.

"But you, Durga Ram?"

"There is Ramabai, a senile king, and I. Which for your purposes will you choose?"

There was a conference. The priests drifted away from Umballah. He did not stir. His mind was proud and haughty, but for all that his knees shook and his heart thundered. He understood that it was to be all or nothing, no middle course, no half methods. He waited, wetting his cracked and swollen lips. When the priests returned to him, their heads bent before him a little. It represented a salaam, as much as they had ever given to the king himself. A glow ran over Umballah.

"Highness, we agree. There will be terms."

"I will agree to them without question."

Life and power again real power! These dodging, dodging fools should serve him, thinking the while that they served themselves.

"Half the treasury must be paid to the temple."

"Agreed!" Half for the temple and half for himself, and the abolishment of the seven leopard. "With this stipulation; Ramabai is yours, but the white people are to be mine."

The priests signified assent.

And Umballah smiled, in secret. Ramabai would be dead on the morrow.

"There remains the king," said the chief priest.

Umballah shrugged. "The abolishment of the seven leopard. The chief priest stared soberly at Umballah's head. The king would be, then, Umballah's at last."

"He is ill!"

"He is moribund . . . Silence!" warned Umballah.

The curtains became violently agitated. He heard the voice of the young priest outside raised in protest, to be answered by the shrill tones of a woman.

"You are mad!"

"And thou art a stupid fool!"

Umballah's hand fell away from his dagger.

A man in tatters appeared suddenly in the great arched doorway. His turban came down almost to his eyes and a neckcloth covered his mouth. All that could be seen of him in the matter of countenance was a pair of brilliant eyes and a predatory nose. He threw a quick, piercing glance about, assured himself that such devotees as he saw were harmless, then strode boldly if hurriedly toward the rear chamber, which he entered without ado. Instantly the indignant priests rushed toward him to expel him and give him a tongue-lashing for his impudence, when a hand was thrust out, and they beheld upon a finger a great green stone. They stopped as suddenly as though they had met an invisible electric current.

The curtain fell behind the man in tatters, and he remained motionless, for a space. A low murmuring among the priests ensued, and presently one of their number—the youngest—passed out and stationed himself before the curtain. Not even a privileged dancing girl might enter now. He became the center of the group; his gestures were quick, tense, authoritative. At length priest turned to priest, and the wrinkled faces became more wrinkled still; smiles.

"Highness," said the eldest, "we had thought of this, but you did not make us your confidant."

"Till an hour gone had not occurred to me. Shall Ramabai, then, become your master, to set forth the propaganda of the infidel?"

"No," said the man who did not speak loudly, but sibilantly, with something resembling a hiss. "No!"

"And shall a king who has no mind, no will, no strength, resume his authority? Perhaps we bring more white people into Allah, perhaps we give Allah eventually to the British raj?"

Again the negative.

"But the man who does not speak loudly, but sibilantly, with something resembling a hiss. Umballah smiled. "What brings the worshiper here with candles, and flowers and incense? Is it love or reverence or superstition?"

The bald yellow heads nodded like porcelain mandarins.

"Patience, sahib!" warned the priest.

He could not fool his relations; they would know. The laws of the dark peoples have always amazed me, because if you dig deep enough into them you are likely to find common sense at the bottom. We must search Umballah's house thoroughly. I wish to see Ramabai and Punndita in the shadow of their rights. Can't destroy a document off-hand and make a new one without legally destroying the first. Well, let us be getting back to the bungalow. We'll talk it over there."

At the bungalow everything was systematically being prepared for the homeward journey. The laughter and chatter of the two girls was music to their father's ears. And sometimes he intercepted secret glances between Bruce and Kathlyn. Youth, youth; youth and love! Well, so it was. He himself had been a youth, had loved and been beloved. But he grew very lonely at the thought of Kathlyn's eventual going to another home, and some young chap would soon come and claim Winnie, and she would have no one but Ahmed, if only he had had a boy, to bring his bride to his father's roof!

Pictures were taken down from the walls, the various wild animal heads, and were packed away in strong boxes. And Ahmed went thither and you, a hundred cares upon his shoulders. He was ason, I want this wretch Durga Ram spread out on an ant hill.

And then, without apparent reason, he began to call for Lakshmi, the beautiful Lakshmi, the wife of his youth. He ordered preparations for an elephant fight; rambled, talked as though he were but 20; his eyes dim, his lips loose and pendulous. And in this condition he might live ten or twenty years. Ramabai was sore at that.

"What has gone is a part?"

"A part, Durga Ram," said the chief priest. "With Ramabai spreading Christianity, the abhorred creed which gave people liberty of person and thought, the future of his own royal stool in imminent danger. 'A part,' he reflected, 'to you, Durga Ram, the throne; to us half the treasury and all the ancient rites of our creed restored.'"

"I have said it."

Umballah followed the dancing girl into the square before the temple. He turned and smiled ironically. The bald fool!

"Lead on, thou flower of the jasmine!" lightly. But the priests smiled, too, for Durga Ram should always be more in their power than they in his. There was tremendous excitement in the city the next morning. It seemed that the city would never be permitted to resume its old careless indolence. Swift as the wind the news flew that the old king was alive, that he had been held prisoner all these months by Durga Ram and the now deposed count-

NOT POSTPONE THE OLYMPICS

President James G. Merrick, of the Canadian Olympic committee, just home from the Olympic council in Paris, is not of opinion that the Olympic games of Berlin, due in 1916, are to be abandoned because of the European war. The conflict cannot last long, because of its most destructive nature under the conditions of modern warfare, and the preparations that are already well under way could be taken up without irreparable loss by the interruption. The Berlin stadium, where the games were to be held, is completed, and has been the scene of local competition.

Las Angeles, Aug. 7.—Billy Nolan, who has handled a number of champions in his day, doesn't believe Ritchie will ever gain the lightweight championship. He is a nice, clean boy who takes good care of himself and he is game to the core, but he will never be lightweight champion again."

THIRD DESPERATE ATTEMPT BY KAISER'S TROOPS TO BEAT DOWN BELGIANS' DEFENCE

Special Cable to The Standard. London, Aug. 7.—A Central News Despatch from Brussels today states that it is officially announced the Germans have retreated from Liege after two days of the most severe fighting in which the German losses were enormous.

The retreat, it is understood, was carried out in the wildest disorder. Brussels, Aug. 7.—120,000 German troops were hurled upon Liege late this afternoon, in third desperate attempt to capture the city. Re-inforced by fresh troops that arrived shortly after the Kaiser's forces retired, last night, and camped on the left bank of the Meuse, General Von Emmich's regiments moved forward en masse.

Under cover of their artillery the German Infantry then dashed forward and within a short time had captured Bressoux, a suburb of Liege, only a short distance from Fort Fleron. At the time this dispatch is sent, desperate hand-to-hand fighting is going on in the street. The forts about Bressoux are unable to fire upon the combatants, for fear of killing Belgians as well as Germans.

Brussels, Aug. 7.—(Via London).—Le Peuple says the bombardment of Liege had caused six or seven fires in the city up to seven o'clock last evening. The heaviest firing occurred yesterday afternoon. German officers then came to the city with a white flag, and demanded the surrender of the place.

London, Aug. 7. (Central News).—In the House of Commons this afternoon Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced that the engagement off Harwich, which resulted in the loss of the British cruiser Amphion, through striking a German mine and the sinking of the German mine layer Koening Luise was the only action that had taken place in the North Sea up to the present time.

Mr. Churchill's statement disposed of countless rumors which have been in circulation here concerning naval engagements in the North Sea.

GERMAN FLEET MASSES AT HELIGOLAND, THE KAISER'S GIBRALTAR, TO PROTECT KIEL

(Special Despatch to the New York Herald from London.) On both sides of the English Channel, on both shores of the North Sea, all eyes are strained for the sound of heavy guns. The first problem in the war is the command of the sea.

Germany must control the sea if she is to hold England and France apart. European waters must be swept of German naval craft before any step can be taken for the sending of an expeditionary force for land operations in co-operation with France.

This far, the only operations of the German navy I have heard of have been in the waters of Finland and in the Mediterranean. But the Kaiser's battle ships, in three squadrons, are in the waters either of the Baltic or the North Sea.

A portion of his fleet, perhaps all, a few days ago passed through the Kiel, or Baltic Canal from the Baltic Sea into the North Sea. It is supposed to have rendezvoused around the great modern fortress of Heligoland, that rocky island at the mouth of the Elbe which, as an act of amity, was transferred by Great Britain to Germany during Lord Salisbury's administration.

Heligoland now is a mighty naval station, provided with disappearing sheds for aeroplanes and balloons, and is a rendezvous for torpedo boat destroyers and submarines.

A glance at the map will show the enormous strategic advantage to the Kaiser of the Kiel Canal. This canal extends through the Province of Schleswig-Holstein from the River Eibe at Brunsbittel to Kiel Bay in the Baltic.

Should the enemy get in possession of the canal at any time, the German navy would be forced to fight, but once through the canal he would be safe unless the enemy sought him by the long and round-about way of Skagerrack, the Cattagat and various passages to the east of Denmark.

There has never been belief that the Kaiser would oppose his fleet to the British navy, but rather that he would trust to night attacks by small craft, and the strategic situation afforded by the Kiel Canal makes the naval problem in the North Sea of most absorbing interest.

THE MODERN HOUSEKEEPER AND HER OPPORTUNITIES

Written by Miss Imogene Josiah of Sussex, N. B. and read by her before the Fredericton Branch of the Women's Institute.

King Solomon has defined a virtuous woman as one "who looketh well to the ways of her household," and King Solomon has accounted a wise man, and certainly King Solomon should have been an authority upon that constituted an ideal woman in this same chapter of Proverbs, the wise King enumerates some of the qualifications of the good housekeeper. It is a long chapter and one virtue follows upon the heels of another in rapid succession, and we find today many modern "who men" who lay down rules and qualifications no fewer than those of Solomon. And so whether King Solomon be to blame or not for starting this thing, certain it is that the housekeeper has always had a strict code of morals and a high standard to live up to. Problems of Modern Housekeeping. The problems of the household are more difficult today than they ever have been, for each advance in science, each modern invention, has brought in its train new responsibilities and new duties. With the increase in conveniences has come increased cares. The old home, which manufactured for its needs within its walls demanded chiefly labor and manual skill. The modern home equipped with electric stoves, incinerators and vacuum cleaners, demands of course, much less manual skill, but vastly more mental qualities. The well trained and efficient housekeeper of today must be a business woman to the tips of her fingers, and she must realize that her business is not bounded by the four walls of her home.

WOMEN'S PART IN THE WORLD'S WORK

Women are to have hereafter a much larger part in the work of the world, than they have had hitherto. They are going to occupy a great many positions and undertake a great many responsibilities that the men of the past generations never contemplated. But it seems highly improbable that society will for any length of time relax its demand on women for the particular service to which in the best civilizations we have yet known she has given her strength, the building and care of the home. In whatever fields she may display efficiency in this one she must not fail. Young women desiring a "career" would do well to realize that the biggest career they can have is the career of home-making. A woman with business instincts cannot have a wider scope for her abilities than in the management of the home.

A Demand for Efficiency

The demand for efficiency in home management is the most insistent demand of our Twentieth Century Times. Home-making has now become a science, and many young women look upon it in the light of a profession. Realizing the importance of their position from an economic standpoint and as disabusers of the public wealth, they are getting systematic training in the up-to-date colleges of our country. Every woman is inherently a home-maker, and the best thing for her happiness and the welfare of society is a thorough training for this work. Home-making is not a simple kind of labor, but a serious many-sided study, brimful of a knowledge of science, and art and the ideals of culture and education. The idea of Some Educators. There are educators who insist that a woman will be a better and happier home-maker if she is taught definite ways to apply her art, her knowledge of chemistry and geology to the real problems of the home. They ask—Why teach art without showing her how to bring art into the furnishing and decoration of her home? or—Why teach chemistry without teaching the right or wrong combination of food materials? They ask—Why teach psychology without teaching her how to train her children's minds, and why teach Sociology and Economics without showing her how to manage home finances and her relation as a purchasing agent to the great world of finance? There are, however, very few colleges as yet, teaching Home Economics to a level with other sciences, and the practical work of home Economics can be taught side by side without sacrificing the value of either. But it is not until Home Economics becomes dignified as a science and studied, that the young women of today will recognize and accept the dignity of home-making. Then only will housework cease to be a dull and dull drudgery, and become a fascinating and profitable profession. A fine antidote against the unsatisfactory "career" and the reluctance to give attention to and take pride in those things which a woman's part in life make imperative for her to know. When women begin to realize that home-making is a business proposition, when they understand that as consumers, they can control industrial conditions, the feebler cry "Votes for Women" will cease to be a mere slogan.

A Growing Demand for Efficiency

If the home is going to survive, it must do so on a reorganized basis. No industry dependent upon unwilling, uninterested workers can be a success, yet everyone admits the discontent among the mass of housekeepers. As at present operated, housekeeping is distasteful to the brightest, most intelligent women, and is only endured in a dull way by the masses of women. This is because they do not consider their vast opportunities—they have not had the necessary training and they are not efficient. But there is now a growing demand for better training. Lectures on Domestic Science and Home Economics are increasing by the hundred. The growing demands among householders that hand labor be replaced by machinery, has created an immense market for labor-saving devices; and the Universities—especially Cornell and the University of Wisconsin are giving more attention to the practical side of the question. Most significant of all, perhaps is the fact increasing interest which is being taken in the rural Women problem. Until lately, the government has seen fit to do little for the rural housewife, while many dollars have been spent to decrease the toll and increase the results of man's work on the farm. The farm kitchen has remained in the same archaic state as in the days when men gathered wheat with the crude scythe—while the barn has been filled with wonderful new machinery. Clear minded and far seeing men

"Let us not misuse this power, let it always help, not hinder." And so it will surely come about that your power shall grow and your influence be a lasting and a beautiful thing, blessing yourself and others. Such a way shall all of us become women of influence and of an influence sweet to remember. By such means shall the life of each of us stretch away like a shining river, farther than we can see, blessing as it goes, receiving and giving as it flows, and happiness of many lives and many cargoes of precious things to enrich and bless the lives of those whose faces we may never even see.

ENCOURAGING WOOL GROWING

Mr. James D. Thompson, overseer in the wool department of Messrs. Bates & Innes, Ltd., has just returned from Shawville, Que., where he has been the past week in the interests of the firm, grading and buying the wool brought together by the Pontiac Wool Growers' Association, under the auspices of Macdonald College, Que. This movement was started about a year ago, and Mr. J. K. King, Macdonald Demonstrator, and Mr. Macmillan, extension lecturer of the Live Stock Department of Macdonald College, have been visiting the farmers in Pontiac county and demonstrating to them how to clip and prepare the wool for the market. Formerly no care was taken after clipping the wool, and as a consequence the wool was marketed in a very unsatisfactory condition. Its value for manufacturing purposes was lowered through being mixed with straw, chaff, etc., and where it had been washed, it was felted so much in the process that the feling properties of the wool were destroyed. Now farmers have been instructed not to wash the wool, but to send it unwashed so that the fibres will be clean and where it had been washed, as he could grade it into the qualities required for the different grades. The result of the effort put forth by Macdonald College has been that 12,000 lbs. of unwashed wool was brought into Shawville in four days, and another 5,000 lbs. of washed wool will be in the 12th of the month. The wool was graded into four different grades by Mr. Jennings.

WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITIES FOR INFLUENCE

There are today playing important parts in the world's affairs, and the women of today are no longer content to sit and work samplers. She longs for influence and long to have her life. Far from deprecating in our girls or women of today the longing to be women of influence, and do to it, I am not speaking of nor approving that blind over-meaning passion for power which is a natural and beneficent thing the longing to have a recognized place among our fellow beings. Fairy Tales That Have Grown True. Cinderella had to go to the ball in silks, ash girl though she was, even as her sisters want to it: the kind desire that the awkward young swan had, who believed himself to be only an "Ugly Duckling" when he watched the great stately swans swimming upon the lake and wished to be like them. And, you remember, Cinderella did, after all, go to the ball—and danced with the Prince, and wedded him we are told, afterward, and the Ugly Duckling grew in time as graceful and as beautiful as the Great White swan he admired. But these are fairy tales you say. Yes, but there is something very over-looked, namely that fairy tales—the ones that last from generation to generation, and do not die, are facts of life are quite as fairy tale as fairy tales themselves, and you do not think of them in that way. The stories of Cinderella and the "Ugly Duckling" are truths as old as hills, told in a fairy manner, and you who have lived what has seemed to you an obscure life, occupied with homely tasks, like Cinderella and the Ugly Duckling, are people of more influence and of more power than you think of. You, too, are a person of "influence." I only ask you to realize that this gift of influence is yours and mine. I only ask you to realize that there is no matter how lowly our lives may seem. Each morning as we face the dawn and turn our steps to a new day, we must say to expert wool grader for the Dominion, assisted by Mr. Thompson, and their opinion was that they had never handled a better grade of wool suited for the different classes of fabrics made in the country. Mr. Jennings and Mr. Thompson demonstrated the different qualities to the farmers, who took a lively interest in all that was said, and there is likely to be a great competition amongst them next year so as to obtain the higher prices. A report was given each of the quality his wool graded (also the breed of his sheep) and the price for each grade. The Pontiac Association also keeps a copy and one is sent to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, where it is kept on file, and next year they will be able to tell whether the farmer has improved the quality and bettered the marketing conditions of his wool. Next year the Association expect to handle as much as 100,000 lbs. of wool.

Clipping the Eyebrows. The practice of clipping the ends of the eyebrows to make them grow longer is a very old one, and it was once a popular fashion. It is now, however, a very rare thing, and is only done by a few people. The reason for this is that it is a very tedious and painful process, and it is also a very dangerous one. It is dangerous because it can lead to infection, and it can also lead to the loss of the eyebrows. It is tedious because it takes a long time to do, and it is painful because it involves the use of sharp instruments. The danger is also very real, for if the eyebrows are clipped too short, they will grow back in a very thick and bushy manner, and this can lead to a very embarrassing situation. It is also dangerous because it can lead to the loss of the eyebrows, and this is a very serious matter. If the eyebrows are lost, they will not grow back, and this can lead to a very serious condition. It is therefore a very dangerous practice, and it should be avoided at all costs.

There is nothing so effective in Anaemia as 'Wincarnis.' FUR PRODUCERS LIMITED is a promising, profitable proposition—it is built upon a sound business basis; the board of directors is made up of reliable men; the most successful fox raisers in Prince Edward Island are caring for the foxes; it has the lowest ranching arrangement of any company in existence, and the highest protective features have been adopted, which means good production and good production means good dividends.

FUR FARMING ONLY SOLUTION OF PROBLEM

Wild birds, fish and beasts cannot withstand exportation for commercial purposes.

M. Vladimir Gerasimoff, a special commissioner of the Czar of Russia, reported to his government that in the fall of 1912 he made a trip to Prince Edward Island for the purpose of investigating silver fox farms. He states that the new fur industry transplanted to the farms is about twenty-five years old. About the year 1900 several fox farmers succeeded in solving in some degree the problem of fox breeding by keeping the animals in semi-domesticated conditions and the results of their experiments attracted a wide attention.

"The natives of the Island," he says, "have the honor of creating the new line of fur industry, and the results are such that they will be of great value for Russian northern territory. The question of the possibility and profits of this new rural industry is fully solved. The results obtained are of more practical importance and wide application than appeared at first. It is now widely known that a great natural resource has been discovered in the form of game and fur bearing animals, which are diminishing in numbers everywhere with astonishing rapidity."
The main cause of this sorrowful fact Mr. Gerasimoff thought is explained by Mr. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Gardens, who wrote: "No wild species of bird, reptile or fish can withstand exploitation for commercial purposes. The final solution of the problem must be game and fur farming, as measures directly intended to nearly establish the balance of nature upset by the destructive acts of man."

THE BREEDING OF FOXES IN RUSSIA TOO

Primitive farms already established and successful for under government aid.

The principle of breeding instead of trapping has been applied by the Canadians to the fur industry. The task was difficult to successfully solve, but the results clearly show that their point of view was right. Upon the most careful calculation in the last half of this decade, the number of silver black foxes annually born on Canadian ranches will surpass the number of such foxes trapped in the wild state, and in the next decade the annual crop on fox farms will surpass the present catch of Russian sables. The capital now employed in hunting and trapping wild animals can in the case of several species be better employed in fur farming.
As to the practical importance of the success of the Canadian fox industry, it is necessary to have in view that the methods used in breeding foxes are applied now by analogy with corresponding changes for breeding other fur bearing animals, namely skunks, martens and minks; but the cheapness of their pelts is a great obstacle to their profitable raising. In this relation, Russia is in a better condition, having large supplies of white and blue polar foxes, which must be a profitable species for commercial fur farming in Russia, and the establishment of such an industry is helped by the existence of primitive fur farms in the northern part of Russia during several decades.
Among the valuable fur bearers

THE COMMENCEMENT OF FOX FARMING IN P. E. ISLAND

A short review of conditions surrounding the start of the industry—Valuable furs made possible.

The raising of silver foxes in captivity was commenced in Prince Edward Island in 1887, but the industry did not become general till within the last four years. The great success of the business has been due to the very advantageous natural conditions and the skill and experience of those engaged in the industry. The soil of Prince Edward Island is especially favorable to the production of the finest furs where the animal has, like the fox, the burrowing habit. Cold and humidity are, according to experts, essential to the development of the best fur, and these conditions obtain in the ideal degree in Prince Edward Island. By means of a very intelligent observation and experiment carried on for over a quarter of a century the fox rancher of Prince Edward Island have brought the science and the art of breeding to the highest development attained anywhere. Careful selection has been practiced with a score of generations of foxes. The result is that the silver black foxes raised in captivity are a distinct type, the largest, blackest and most valuable in the world.

KARAKUL SHEEP AS FUR PRODUCERS

Some authorities have stated that the United States imports $14,000,000 worth of fur sheep skins yearly. One New York house imports $250,000 worth. It is estimated that Canada uses 30 per cent. as much fur as the United States. Persian Lamb, Astrachan and Krimmer are used by both sexes and are recognized as the most serviceable and beautiful furs for both men and women that can be purchased. The delicate and beautiful Baby Lamb fur is used for opera cloaks and minks among the world's precious furs.

The furs produced by the Karakul sheep are as valuable yearly as all the Silver Foxes, Cross Foxes, Mink, Otter and Skunk combined, yet they are produced from a fully domesticated animal which costs no more to feed than common sheep. They live on grass and hay, yet the skins of each one will average higher prices than Mink skins, and some as much as Otter skins.
The fur produced by the Karakul sheep is possible with governmental assistance to the new born industry in the form of Government Experimental Fur Farms, Government Stock Farms for the selected breeders and the organization of fur auctions.
