At every railroad station circulars have been posted, signed by the Filipino commander-in-chief, Antonio Luna, ordering all spies and bearers of news to the enemy to be shot without trial, and instructing that all looters and ravishers be treated in the same manner. Further, all towns abandoned by the Filipino troops are first to be burned. While deploring the existence of war, the oircular maintains existence of war, the oircular maintains first to be burned. While deploying alse existence of war, the direular maintains the undentable right of the Filipinos to defend their homes, lives and lands against "would-be dominators who will kill them, their wives and children," adding that this motive ought to impel all Filipinos to sacrifice everything.

TRENCH STORMING

Manila, March 28.—The Americans have fidvanced along the line of the Dagupan Railroad, driving the Filipinos from Malinta and Cycayan, where there were 3,000 inhabitants. Last night the brigades of General Otla and General Hale encamped in the enemy's trenches at Maycauyan and that of General Wheaton at Malinto.

General Wheaton's brigade formed a junction with the remainder of General McArthur's division at Malinta, and the latter, leaving General Wheaton there, marched along the railroad to Maycauyan. Sunday.

The insurgents broke their guns when compelled to abandon them.

The Helena and the army gunboats shelled Malabon and the country beyond, while the Monadnock focused all its batteries upon Paranaque for two hours, for the purpose of destroying the military stores there. A great smoke was caused, but as the insurgents are in possession of the town the results of the shelling are not obtainable.

The evacuation of Malabon was a plo-

The evacuation of Malabon was a ple-turesque rout, thousands of women, men and children, loaded down with house-hold goods, some with their dearest treasures—fighting oocks—under their arms, poured across the swamps in the arly morning.

An exploded caisson at the railroad bridge proved a bar to the Americans.

An exploded the Americans. Ten soldiers of the Oregon Regiment, thile searching for two of those killed while searching for two of those killed early in the fighting, sneaked into the city in the morning and found the place in a condition of chaos. The inhabitants seeing them, fled in a panic, thinking the American forces were in possision. The Oregonians shot several armed natives and then returned to camp.

The American forces did not occupy the following the first strength to strike Malolos.

Malobon is a city of desolation. The American soldiers have been forbidden to an enter the place for fear the natives may be lurking there.

A Straight Fush Back.

Washington, March 28.—Major Simpson, chief of the Military Information Bureau, was again busy yesterday assembling the latest information from the scene of the battle, and so arranging it on the military map of to show the progress of the engagement. It disclosed a complete change in the movement since Saturday. In two days the insurgent base, which was at Malabon, about five miles north of Manila, has fallen back to Malolos, about 20 miles north of Manila. At the same time the American lines have moved forward from Calocoan, about four miles from Manila, until General Otis reported yesterday that McArthur holds Marilao, 12 miles north of Manila. Thus the insurgent retreat covers about 15 miles, and the American advance covers about eight miles. A Straight Push Back.

Mr. Davitt Was Stoned.
London, March 28.—The Cork correspondent of The Daily News says:
"Michael Davitt. Nationalist member of Parliament for South Mayo, was stoned and several of his supporters were badly injured at a political meeting in Charley-ville, County Cork, on Saturday. The rival supporters of candidates for the county councillorship joined in the fight with clubs and stones. Mr. Davitt spoke amid a perfect hall of stones, and the meeting was finally broken up."

that in the recent Airican negonations England got the better bargain. Now the Newfoundland shore affair is under way, and France, feeling that she has a stronger position, expects England to make large concessions.

Sir Charles Dilke's proposal that France renounce the treaty rights as to Newfoundland in exchange for certain shadowy English claims in Madagascar will never be seriously considered here. Even supposing the French Cabinet is ready to adopt such a proposition—of which there is not the slightest likelihood—the country would absolutely refuse to approve.

This place was fortified and for 300 yards rom it there were trenches on each side of the track. These were taken possession of by the American troops. The movements of the Americans will be pushed in this direction.

The little British colony of Gambla, for instance, with its 2,700 square miles of area, juts into the French colony of Senegal, monopolising the most of the navigable length of the Gambla River. This time England may make up her mind that France expects the sacrifice to be made in Downing street.

Sunday's work of the United States troops consisted of storming the successive trynches. The Filipinos occupying them were completely hidden. The enemy poured a strong fire from every trench until they were disturbed by a flanking volley, when they would disappear into the woods and jungle, only to make a stand at the next line.

The American loss was remarkably small, seven being reported killed and 25 wounded. It is known that the Filipinos were so protected that they suffered little. WHEN I WAS A BOY.

Op in the attic where I slept
When I was a boy, a little boy,
In through the lattice the moonlight crept,
Bringing a tide of dreams that swept
Over a low, red trundle bed,
Bathing the tangled curly head,
While the moonbeams played at hide and seek the dimples on the sun browned cheek When I was a boy, a little boy! And, oh, the dreams—the dreams I dreamed

When I was a boy, a little boy!
For the grace that through the lattice streamed
Over my folded eyelds seemed
To have the gift of prophecy
And to bring the glimpses of time to be When manhood's clarion seemed to call—äh, that was the sweetest dream of all
When I was a boy, a little boy!

I'd like to sleep where I used to sleep When I was a boy, a little boy!

When I was a boy, a little boy!
For in at the lattice the moon would peep.
Bringing her tide of dreams to sweep
The crosses and griefs of the years away
From the heart that is weary and faint today
And those dreams should give me back again
A peace I have never known since then—
When I was a boy, a little boy!

"The butler?"

"The butler, and that brings me to the axplanation you asked for a moment age. The Eve of the Future. "The Eve of the Future" is the theme of a writer in the Paris Figare who is almost willing to admit that she will be an American type, the result of the intermingling of many races and the pursuit of outdoor sports. She will have, he declares, a straight brow, rather low than high; a neck well poised on sloping shoulders—a neck to wear high, narrow collars; slender arms, a waist that one could span with two hands, hardly any hips and an independent, manly carriage. "The arise." dependent, manly carriage. "The aristocratic air," he continues, "is not always linked with beauty. As a matter of fact 'blood does not always tell.'

"One finds the aristocratic type in all classes of the social scale—the rather long and finely cut nose, the firm chin, long, slender white hands, with slim and tapering fingers; tall, erect figure; long, narrow, delicate foot, made for pointed shoes; the whole person alert, elegant, snella, as the Italians say. We agree with the Americans in attaching more importance to the expression that to the shape of the features, and we prefer a spirituelle, mobile and vivacious face to features of perfect purity and perfect immobility. "After applying his eye to the hole he noiselessly inserted the muzale of the rifle in the aperture, took deliberate aim at his master's heart and fired. Poor Robertson! He never knew what hurt him."

Stanfield ceased speaking, and a painful silence fell upon us both. The movement of a lizard in the jalousies through which the shot had been fired sent a thrill of horror through my nerves. I fancied I could hear the battler's stealthy footsteps and see the gleam of the rifle barrel in the moonlight. So awfully real was my conception of the whole scene that at last, in sheer desperation, I spoke and so broke the speil.

The Sansinens factory was one or tase first to be established, and it is said that alroady more than $4,000,000 gold have been spent upon it. It oovers many acres, having vast cattle yards and sheep pens. Its slaughterbouse has more than an acre of floor space. It is but one storey, having stone floors and a corrugated iron roof. Stop a moment and watch the killing. It is so quickly done that in four minutes and a half by my watch a sheep will pass from active bleating life to the condition of a carcass, skinned and cleaned. It was ready for the meat shop had it not been that it must be first frozen and then sent over 7,000 miles of water to reach it. If sheep can understand and feel for their fellows, the killing is rather cruel. Scores of them look on awaiting their turn while their brothers and sisters are butchered. In each pen there are at least 50 sheep.

As soon as the sheep has been killed it is seized and carefully skinned. The entrails are thrown into one place to be cleaned and shipped to Germany for sausage skins. The kidneys and their fat are laid in another, for the kidney fat is used for making a sort of elemangarine, which is largely sold for cooking, and the kidney go to the markets of Buenos Ayres. The feet and heads are out off and

NORWAY'S NEW FLAG.

Its Adoption Will Be Fought by the A great strends have been added in Norway and Sweden by the recent action of the Storthing at Christiania in the matter of the Norweigan flag. The Storthing has voted that hereafter Norway's banner shall float without a jack—the symbol of the union with Sweden. Some say that should King Oscar vete the resolution two more diets must pass upon the matter before it can go into effect; others that the new flag will come into immediate use. Since 1844 the closest relations have been maintained between Norway and Sweden. At that time the flag of Swedish People. and Sweden. At that time the flag each mation was changed so that the jacl in the upper left-hand corner combined the colors of the other nation. For sev eral years past, however, there has been a growing feeling of discontent in No.

Oscar has striven to assuage. The two countries have entirely separate and distinct governments, but are ruled by the same King, Oscar of Sweden. Each country has its ewn Parliament, which passes laws for its respective country. All laws are subject to the approval or disapproval of the King.

The flag of Norway, with the jack left out, will be four red corners, with a Greek cross of blue through the center. The Swedish flag has four blue corners, with a jack of red, blue and yellow in the upper left-hand corner and a Greek cross of yellow in the center. The Norwegian flag had formerly the jack, which contained the bar of yellow as a symbol of the union with Sweden, but this will not appear in the flag in the future.

The deepest note which can actually be heard by human ears is produced by an organ pipe 33 feet long. If you throw a stone into a pool, you will see a number of ripples spreading after the splash in circles. If you blow a whistle or boat a drum you wake a right of the again kind drum, you make a splash of the same kind in the air, and the ripples spread out all round. When they break against the drum of the human ear, the brain is conscious of a sound. If the little waves or ripples in the air are quite regular in the proportion of 8, 16, 32 ripples per second, the results are perfect musical notes.

Now, the 83 foot organ pipe produces exactly 16 waves or vibrations every second. When the dead march in "Saul' is played, for instance, on the great organ of St. Paul's cathedral, that note may be distinctly heard, like the boom of artillery, shaking the whole building to its foundations.

But deeper notes than that can be felt.

lery, shaking the whole building to its foundations.

But deeper notes than that can be felt, though they make no sound. In the thunder of Niagara—a cataract which is roughly 167 feet high—a note is produced exactly the same as that from a 160 foot organ pipe. Listening intently, you can feel the shocks and actually count them as they beat upon the eardrum at the rate of eight vibrations a second.

Yet even that is not the deepest note, for when the volcano of Krakatoa blew up in Sunda strait every observatory in the world very shortly recorded the explosion. The delicate meteorological instruments actually recorded a note of four vibrations a second, which could not possibly have been heard by mortal ears.—London Answers.

Jenner as an Bater.

The late Dr. Jenner, the famous English physician, was a great teadrinker and very abstemious, never taking any stimulant except a measured glass of brandy when he had indigestion. Once for that cause he lived on stewed chops and rice for luncheon and dinner, with tea, for a couple of years; but ordinarily he was a great feeder.

Jenner was no smoker and had no hobby or recreative resource outside his pro-fession of any kind. He invariably refused society invitations, and, says Dr. Ben-tham, "his power of commanding sleep was marvelous."

"Webster was in the United States senate at the time and had delivered his masterly speech on the compromise measures, in which he sought to reconcile the differences between the sections. Its broad patriotism appealed to Mr. W. W. Corcoran so strongly that he sent the senator the sum mentioned the very next day in a letter expressive of his admiration for the man and the speech. Years afterward I saw the criginal of the reply sent by Mr. Corcoran's letter had been supposed to the receipt of Mr.

"On the contrary, move a muscle, and you are a dead man. Can you stand the strain?" The subaltern barely whispered, "Yes," and his face paled slightly. "Burke," said the major, addressing an officer acroes the table, "pour some of that milk into a saucer and set it on the floor here just at the beak of me. Gently, man! Quiet!"

Not a word was spoken as the officer quietly filled the saucer, walked with it carefully around the table and set it down where the major had been crawling in the leg of his trousers, slowly raised its head, then turned, descended to the floor and glided toward the milk. Suddenly the silence was broken by the report of the major's revolver, and the snake lay dead on the floor. "Thank you, major," said the subaltern as the two men shook hands warmly. The outward signs on the houses where some one has died in north Holland are original in the extreme. NOT AFRAID OF MAN.

Remarkable Tameness of Animals In

The slaughter of birds has almost entirely removed one of the delightful accompaniments of life in the rural east -the music of the feathered songsters. Apropos of this, it may be said that one of the most pleasant features of the drive or the most pleasant teatures of the drive through the Yellowstone National park is the apparent intimacy between man and the animal and bird life in the park. Thanks to the wise and stringent regulations, no shooting is allowed with-in its boundaries.

"The result," says an English tourist, "is positively charming. Hundreds of little chipmunks, with their gaudy striped backs, somepered impudently about or peered at the passing coach from the roadside. The squirrel did not bolt for the nearest tree, but nodded a welcome. All bird life treated us likewise. Even the lordly eagle hovered week, and the wild turkey stalked un-concernedly through the rank grass. We were fortunate enough to see a fine specimen of the wolf tribe. He stood, a beautiful creature, and watched us out of sight, showing only curiosity, not fear. Another time were perceived a doc and fawn grazing by the road. Not un-til we were within a few feet did they seek the shelter of the woods, yet not sees the shelter or the woods, yet has to fly. They simply moved aside. Here at least mankind was regarded as a friend—one who could be-trusted. The only animal who ran away was a brown bear. He turned tail at the sight of a ocaching party, yet it was quite a common thing for bears to approach close to the hotels at evening to feel on the refuse thrown out. It was an after dimer relaxation for the guests to watch them feeding. They munched and dis puted the choicest morsels, for the most part indifferent to the company. Only when we became inquisitive and ap-proached too near did they retire, and these animals were perfectly free and unfettered in their movements. It may read like a fairy tale, but it is solid way and steamed out for Cape York to land my faithful Eskimo assistants. As we steamed out through the western passage between Meteorite island and Akpudi we entered the fleet of countless bergs sweeping out of Melville bay, dazzling in their glittering brilliancy, and with the dancing whitecaps flashing between them in every direction.

Scarcely were we well within this arctic white squadron, threading our way between the stately cruisers, when one of my quick eyed Eskimos cried out, "Nannocksoah!" He had seen the bear for an instant far up on the top of a big berg, one of the tabular glants of Melville bay, peering over its precipitous face, but it had quickly disappeared. As we steamed slowly round the berg he came into view again, a beautiful white animal with contrasting black nose, moving leisurely along the surface of the iceberg. The captain and I both chanced a shot at him at long range, and the captain's bullet grazed his hind leg, making him whirl and snap savagely at the wound. Then he galloped awkwardly away and disappeared round a pinnacle of the berg. Circling the berg again, we discovered him in the water swimming vigorously, and several shots were fired at him, one of which took effect, and he apparently collapsed completely, yet a few moments later he was swimming off again, and it was only after I had a boat lowered that he was secured.

and he apparently collapsed completely, yet ja few moments later he was swimming off again, and it was only after I had a boat lowered that he was secured.

The fur of this animal was so spotlessly white and unstained that I gave orders not to have him lowered upon the deck, but kept him suspended from the tackle-until, a few hours later, we reached Cape York, and mooring the Hope against the face of a faciety he was swung out on to York, and mooring the riope against the face of a glacier he was swung out on to the surface of the glacier, covered with newly fallen snow, and there skinned and the beautiful pelt rolled up and packed away still unsullied. This was our last bear.—Lleutenant Peary.in St. Nicholas.

Professor W. J. McGee declares that two slow but interesting changes are taking place in Bering sea. The immense quantity of debris that is borne down the Yukon river from its sources and sides is being deposited in the sea beyond the mouth of that mighty stream, and its weight causes the bed of the sea to subside. A corresponding rise in the earth's crust is produced along the chain of the Aleutian islands. Now, not only are the islands themselves increasing in size in consequence of being lifted up out of the water, but new islands are being formed in the gaps between the others. In some instances the new islands are the result of the rise and in others they are the product of volcanic action. Most of the Aleutians are of volcanic origin, and they mark the position of a fold in the earth's crust that is predisposed to cruption. John Bourke, who figured in a wolf story recently oprinted by the Pembroke Observer, has written as follows that paper :"In a late issue of your paper the appears a startling tale about a man up a tree who feeds cutlets of birch bark to a pack of hungry wolves in an effort to induce them to go away out of that and is rescued at or about the critical noment by a fearless young man named Tim—Tim with the long gun. The whole thing is a fable, the joint production of the gallant wolf-slayer and a large bony man with a straight oack and pink whiskers, who button holed my poor friend at the Mackey House and started his wheels agoing: I don't blame Tim. It's a congenial defect. If I wished I could tell you himself, he told the truth about som thing or another and was obliged to knock off work and lie in the shade for several hours-but he' is a friend of mine and I'm not going to give him way. While his ability as a romaner is widely recognized in this locality his former work in this line was mark ed by a reckless freedom and want o forethought which caused its return, a la boomerang, to lay Tim flat on his back. The general excellence of his latest effort I can only ascribe to the really fine quality of the Mackey House malt. I have been told that a glass of good malt acts in this way on a buttonless mind. New, I never saw the Dumoiac road and never saw a wolf outside of a cage. Tim never wolf outside of a cage. If in never saw any more of a wolf than they put in a sleigh robe. I have been suggesting to a few beekeeper triends that they try my hive with 10 long trames, instead of 8. Try a few, if you think the hive is small. About three fourths of the beekeepers are using the 8 rame hive, and more would do so if their bees were not all ready in cross combs.

I have for a number of years advised

GOLD DOLLARS ARE EXPENSIVE. One of Them Costs About $1.00 When

Secured From Erckers.
One of the most inconvenient bits of money ever coined by the United States government was the 31 goldpiece, which closely resembled in site and weight the 5 cent piece to be seen in the provinces, and which were utterly useless and detestable as units of commercial exchange. When the government had collected nearly 20,000,000 of these gold dollars, some one in authority determined that a popular benefaction might be accomplished by the retirement of them or at least by ceasing to coin them.

The latter course was adopted, and in time business men forgot what they looked like and even refused to accept the stray spectmens. Coinage ceased on Sept. 26, 1896, and today a gold dollar sells for $1.80 at least, sometimes for more, and they are controlled by brokers at that. For some time none has been kept at the subtressury in this city, although constant requests for them have come from women and girls, whose motives were chiefly sentimental. They wanted them for decorative purposes, for birthday gifts to appreciative babies or for additions to outland ish bangles which at one time it was a girlish fad to have dangling on one's wrist, even as the wives of the king of Dahomey wear them.

With women entering almost every department of industrial commercial and professional life, lately wonoplized by men, their enfranchisement will probably follow as a natural conse quence, but whether it will come as a result of the present agitation remains to be seen. With the justness of their claim to the franchise co.ceded in respect to municipal elections, it will be hard for the government to refuse a lagely-signed petition for an extension of the principle to provincial and

It is said that brokers do a fairly profitable business annually in the sale of gold dollars. They supply them to banks, which in turn sell them to individuals. Tradesmen are more afraid of them shan they are of Columbian half dollars, and they look with suspicion on a person who presents one for the fraction of a dollar's worth of goods. There are two sizes of the coin, the smaller being the more common and the larger being the more common of the two. Those who call at the subtreasury for them are invariably advised not to pay such a premium, unless there is some very urgent reason why the possession of the coin is necessary.—Boston Transcript.

WEAVING SET TO MUSIC.

Japanese Tots Work Twelve Hours Japanese Tots Work Twelve Hours a

At Sakai, about half a dozon miles from Osaka, and some other towns in Japan where carpets, rugs and fabries of the same class are manufactured there are no large carpet factories, but hand looms may be seen in nearly every house.

The weaving is set to music. The children are taught to sing a sort of nonsense verse to a certain tune, the superintendent or head worker leading, and that air means a certain pattern, the deft fingers of the little workers rhythmically following the notes.

At the right moment the woman in charge of a loom hums a new tune, and the little ones instantly take it up and as quickly change the pattern to suit the music. It is consequently quite correct to speak of these productions as a "one tune," "two tune" or "four tune" carpet

The actual workers are for the most part children of from 7 years of ago upward, and from two to four, five or even six work at a single loom under the direction of an adult, generally a woman.

Some 5,000 boys and over 15,000 girls are thus employed. The children work 19 hours a day, and each carns about, penny in that time. Duration of Life. The ratio of length of adolescence to length of life in the shortest lived mam mals is proportionately less than it is in longer lived mammals. For example, the period of growth and development of the domestic mouse is, according to my informant, a breeder of these small rodents than the property of the state of the same lived in the same lived i formant, a breeder of these small redents about three menths. In other words, the mouse may be expected to live 15 times its adolescent period as a mature animal The Arab horse, according to a well known authority, arrives at maturity in about eight years. Its lifetime is about 40 years—that is to say, the animal lives four times the length of its adolescence as an adult. Man, on the other hand, who only completes his growth by the union of the eternal epiphysis of the clavicle to its shaft at the age of 25, has, after passing his fiftieth year, or "the middle arch of life," to use Dr. Farr's phrase, only another 25 years expectation of life. His potential longer-type accordingly foreshadows a period of Washington Maiden—I haven't looked Question Versus Question. A worthy Yorkshire canon, who had been greatly displeased by an act of disobedience perpetrated by one of his gardeners, sought an interview with the offender in order to reprimand him.

Survival et the Curieus Sect Started by Carlyle's Wife's Lever.

It is somewhat hard to realise that an age so materialistic as this, with its decay of faith 211 around, should still see such an organization as that of the Irvingte sect, or, to give its own name, the Catholic and Apostolic church. The sect was founded, as readers of Mrs. Oliphant well know, by Edward Irving, the young Scotch clergyman who was the teacher and then the sweetheart, who ought to have been the husband, of Jane Welsh Carlyle.

have been the husband, of Jane Welsh Carlyle.

The tragic story has often been told, among others by my unworthy self. Irving loved Jane Welsh, and Jane Welsh loved him, and in both cases they probably loved each, other to the end. But Irving had been lengaged to a young woman, the daughter of a fellow minister, before he had met the bright, black eyed, oll; askinged cross with the share tonema. an, the daughter of a fellow minister, before he had met the bright, black eyed, olive skinned gypsy with the sharp tongua the domineering character, the comfortable fortune, the flery and vehement nature of Jane Welsh, and the lady and her father held the young fellow to his bond.

Sick at heart, tired of suspense, stung in her pride by the suggestion of an interfering but well meaning friend that she was still dying for love of Irving, Jane Welsh was precipitated into her marriage with Carlyle. The sequel of the story was as tragic as its opening. Jane Welsh led what I have always regarded a life of torment with Carlyle, and in the end her heart burst, and she died in her carriage in Hyde park without a moment of preparation or warning, and Froude, looking at her face, from which death's effacing fingers had cleared away the heavy and harsh lines of sunless days and sleepless nights, of unrastisfied longings and muterevolts, declared that it was the most impressive on which he had ever looked. And Carlyle was left to loneliness and remorse, to that vain appeal to the deaf to hear, to the dead to feel and to the harshly treated to forgive by which so many of us pay the penalty of our unkindness te the living.

Irving ended, to my mind, almost as tragically. Popular preacher for awhile, with churches crammed to suffocation, and all the blare and tumuls of the elerical celebrity, he ended by losing his senses, and then—why, then he founded a new religion!

ical celebrity, he ended by losing his senses, and then—why, then he founded a new religion! Divers Are Had Tempered.

One of the peculiar effects of diving is that it makes one bad tempered, says a writer in The Outlook. As the irritability passes away as soon as one is drawn up, it is only reasonable to suppose that it is caused by the unusual pressure of air inside the dress, though in what particular way it acts I cannot say. My experience and that of other divers whom I have questioned is that the merest trife may make one furious. There is always something wrong. The lines are held too tight or too slack, or there is too much air in the dress or too little, or the boat is drifting too fast, or shells are not plentful enough, or the dress is leaking, or the face glass is not clean, and so forth.

I have occasionally become so angry at some imaginary trouble that I have given the signal to be pulled up with the express intention of "licking," every one in the boat. As I neared the surface, however, and the pressure decreased my fighting spirit would gradually wane, and by the time the face glass was unscrewed I would gradually wane, and by the time the face glass was unscrewed I would great manually wane, and by the time the face glass was unscrewed I would gradually wane, and by the
