Come To Me Little One.

Come to me little one, drowsy and dear,
Marian will wrap me her darling white,
I am so lonely when twilight is here,
Lie on my bosom and snuggle and snore.

I have no little one, dearie, like you,
No little head to hold close in the night,
No little dimples of the lovely hours through
No use to wake for when God sends the light.

But how are real, and all snuggles are true—
Life is so full of baby like you!
All things are wonderful under the sun,
Would they might be so when childhood is done.

Wide little eyes that are questioning me,
Life is so strange to you than to me,
The secret worth knowing I never shall see,
The end of the rainbow I never shall see.

So, little drowsy one, snuggle and snore,
Lullaby, baby, lullaby—
There always is peace in the dreams that are Lullaby, little one, lullaby—
—Mrs. Parker.

Swinging Bridge.

BY EMMA HOWARD WRIGHT.

She lifted her eyes then and looked at him strangely, as she replied:
"Yes, I will become your wife."
"With an exclamation of joy, he stopped, drew her into his arms and kissed her passionately.
A tinge of color crept into her pale cheeks, then, very gently, she withdrew herself from his arms and said:
"Come, let us go on," she said, and in her eyes, as they lingered upon his radiant face, there was a look like pity.

They left the hill and walked along the road beside the creek for a time in silence.

"When will you marry me, Mary?"
he asked at length, turning eagerly toward her.

"Oh, not for a long time," she replied shrilly. "It is much too soon to think of being married."

"Too soon to think of being married?" he laughed, joyously. "I don't see that at all. I have been thinking of it for years."

"You have always been sure that I would marry you?" she asked.

He flushed a little, then he laughed again.

"Why, yes, I thought you would after you grew tired of flirting with me," he replied. Her eyes still lingered upon his face with an expression he could not fathom. She was wondering if he would really marry her if he knew the truth. "Perhaps you think I took too much for granted," he remarked, after a moment, glancing at her deprecatingly. "But you have known right along that I loved you and every one expected us to get married some day," he added, triumphantly.

She smiled faintly. "Then it appears that every one has done what you have done—taken things very much for granted!"
she declared.

"Well, so it seems," he admitted.
"But you haven't told me, Mary, when you will marry me. There is no reason for delaying our marriage. I shall be quite able to support a wife very comfortably. Stephen has said he will make over to me a half share in the farm when I marry."

"A silence, then the girl said, tense-
ly:
"He is very generous."

"Generous!" Ernest repeated the word slowly, and a change came over his face. The light, the happiness went out of it. He remembered that when in his happiness he had forgotten—how generous Stephen was. Oh, far more generous than the girl walking at his side had any conception of!

He glanced at her furtively. Would she have consented to become his wife if she knew? He put the question aside. He dared not seek to find the answer to it.

He walked on, silent and miserable, but Mary, absorbed in her own thoughts, did not notice the change in him. It was not long, however, before Ernest rallied from his depression.

What is the use of my worrying?

He asked himself with characteristic selfishness. "That won't mend matters. And Stephen wants me to be happy or he would never do what he is doing for my sake." He turned again to the girl, smilingly, and looked at her. "Yes, Stephen is very generous," he said. "And you see there is no obstacle in the way of our marriage."
She did not appear to hear him.
She was staring straight before her,
and he saw the color come into her face and then die away again, leaving her paler than before.

Ernest's eyes looked here and he —Stephen coming toward them on —Lillian, that one really—
—Mrs. Parker.

Ernest smiled, as he released Mary's hand.

"You are afraid that Stephen will see me making love to you," he said.
She half stopped and looked at him.
"Tell him," she said.

"Tell him what?" Ernest asked, a little bewilderedly.

"Tell him that I have promised to become your wife."

"Ernest started a little.

"Do you mean that I am to tell him now?" he asked.

"Yes, tell him—now," she replied.
By that time Stephen had reached them. He lifted his hat and reached her face very gravely, almost sternly, before he turned again to Ernest.

Since the latter had first come, a small boy, to Swinging Bridge Farm, he had found Stephen ever ready to sympathize with him in all his boyish troubles or perplexities, to participate in his pleasures, and so it had been during all the years from boy-hood to manhood. In the blue eyes lifted to his there was the same trusting faith that Stephen had seen so often in the eyes of the child and boy.

His face softened, a tender light made his grave eyes beautiful.

He stopped and laid his hand on Ernest's shoulder.

"I hope you will be very, very happy," he said, and then he rode on.

"Stephen is the best of the dearest fellows I'll ever know," Ernest exclaimed, a little unsteadily. "He has always been so good, too good to me."

"Come, let us go on," said Mary.
Tensely, neither spoke until they had reached the swinging-bridge.

Then Mary stopped and turned to Ernest. "Do not come any further with me," she said.

"I may come to see you to-night?"
queried Ernest.

"No," she replied, passionately, and turning from him, walked rapidly up the steps to the swinging-bridge.

CHAPTER IX.

In the small parlor of the post-master's house, Mary and Ernest stood facing each other.

It was the following evening.

Both were very pale, and on Ernest's face was dawning a look of pain that robbed it of its boyishness and seemed to age him years.

"Our engagement must end, Ernest," the girl was saying. "I cannot become your wife. I do not love you."

"You do not love me?" he repeated, slowly, staring at her with a mixture of bewilderment and anguish. "Then why, why did you promise to become my wife?"

"You have the right to demand an explanation," she replied. "And I must tell you the truth, hard as it speaks to your heart, it is to do so."

"I have not continued with an effort. I have not done you a wrong, Ernest, but I have been guilty of a most unwomanly act. I think I must have been mad, mad with humiliation, tortured with the knowledge that I had betrayed my love to a man who had never sought it."

Ernest started.

"You love some one else?" he murmured, hoarsely.

"Yes," she replied, while the color crept painfully into her cheeks. "I love some one else."

It was a moment or so before his lips could frame the question that quivered upon them.

"Who is it?"

"Don't tell you that?" she cried, passionately. "Do you not know—enough?"

"No," he replied, almost roughly. "I must know all."

"I love—Stephen."

He stood staring at her for a moment, then turned abruptly, walked to the window and stood there looking out into the moon silvered night.

Mary, with a sigh of relief, sank wearily into a chair. It was over.
She had made her humiliating confession and was free.

It was some little time before Ernest returned to her. An acute thrill of remorse went through her as she looked up into his pale, changed face.

"Won't you try to forgive me?" she asked, softly.

'Yes,' he replied, 'I forgive you.'

"You are very generous," she murmured. "I do not deserve that you should forgive me." For an instant she hesitated and then went on resolutely: "I met Stephen on the swinging-bridge the day before yesterday, I thought he was free, and that there had been some mistake. He could not but read in my face that I loved him.
And afterward, I—"
He interrupted her with a passionate gesture of pain.

"Don't!" he exclaimed. "I think I understand—all. Tell me, do you still love Stephen in spite of that?"

"Yes," she replied, "I still love him."

"A woman's love does not easily die."

"Stephen is in every way worthy of your love." She started and looked up at him questioningly. He was pale to the very lips, but there was a steadfast purpose in the eyes that met hers, as he went on: "Ever since I first came, a little child to Swinging-bridge Farm, Stephen has been a brother to me in the best sense of the word, unselfish, patient, forbearing, loving and kind. The time has now come when I can repay him, to some extent at least, for all he has been, all he has done for me. He loves you."

"Why do you say that?" she interrupted him, passionately. "You are wrong, quite, quite wrong. Why, he has never given the slightest sign that he cared for me."

"No, because he knew that I loved you. You see, his voice grew a little tremulous with emotion, Stephen has never thought of himself when it was a question of my happiness.

"You woman's heart, your womanly instincts have guided you aright in loving Stephen. He is worthy of your love. I am not."

"Worthy of my love?" she cried, with exceeding bitterness. "He,
a breaker of the laws, a moonshiner!"

He shook his head with a faint smile.

"No, it is not Stephen who is a breaker of the laws, a moonshiner. It is I."

A solitary figure was standing up on the swinging-bridge in the moonlight.

Stephen was so absorbed in thought that he did not notice the approach of Ernest until the latter spoke his name.

"Stephen, you are home early," Stephen said, as he turned toward him.

"Yes, I am home early," Ernest repeated, a little mechanically.

"I have just come from town myself," Stephen continued. "I have some news for you which I think you will be glad to hear. If I pay a fine, that will practically settle that affair of the drum on the mountain that night, is purely circumstantial, and the Federal authorities might not be able to prove their case. So they have decided upon a compromise. You see, and he smiled, "things are not so bad after all."

"I am glad I shall not have to go to jail," Ernest said quietly.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"I mean that I do not intend to accept this sacrifice at your hands," Ernest replied. "A great sorrow has come to me, Stephen, but I think it has made a man of me. Mary Graham has broken our engagement."

"Why has she done that?" Stephen exclaimed.

"Because she does not love me."

There was a great commotion in Stephen's grave eyes as he laid his hand gently on Ernest's shoulder, and said: "This is hard, bitterly hard, upon my poor Ernest," he said.

"She has given her love to some one worthy of it than I," said Ernest, steadily. "I bring to you, Stephen,
your heart's desire."

He passed on, leaving Stephen alone on the swinging-bridge.

Summer Months Fatal to Small Children.

Every mother must know how fatal the summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and stomach troubles are all common at this time and many a precious life is snuffed out after only a few hours illness. As a safeguard mothers should keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes on suddenly, will bring the little one through safely. Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Inverary, Ont., writes:—"My baby was sickly for over a week with stomach and bowel troubles and cried night and day. Nothing helped her till I began giving Baby's Own Tablets, but her stomach and bowels were all right and she is a big healthy child with fine rosy cheeks. The

Jacob Gould Schurman, president

Observers of History-making epochs will do well to turn their attention just now to Spain, where the government and the clerical party are crossing swords in a conflict that is of greatest interest not only to the people of Spain, but to the whole civilized world.

In the judgment of the Spanish premier, the time has come for the government to declare itself definitely and positively on the subject of religious toleration. Heretofore the Roman Catholic church has been supreme in the country. Even superceding the state in power. Notwithstanding the most self-sacrificing efforts of a noble band of patriots, this ancient kingdom has been fast passing from its proud position as a world power and taking rank with those nations that do not count.

Already the government has declared that other religious bodies have the right, not only to exist in Spain, but also to display the tokens of their faith publicly upon their buildings. Now it is proposed that there should be a limit to the number of Roman Catholic corporations and institutions, and that the understanding shall be made plain and unmistakable that in all matters the power of the church shall not exceed that of the state.

The whole situation is now the subject of conference between the state authorities and the vatican. And the government of Spain hopes to be able to carry its point without an open rupture with the church authorities. But even should this not be possible, the announcement is made by the Premier that he will not recede from the position already taken by his government, and will fight the matter out to the bitter end. The hope of Canadians will be general that in the effort now being made the Spanish government may be successful.

The commission held a session in the college chapel, at which the royal commission was read and the work of the commissioners clearly explained by the chairman, which was to do all in their power to bring the resources of Canada under intelligent control.

Professor Haley said he had been professor of physics for eighteen years, and during that time there had been increased use of apparatus and laboratory work. He explained the relation of physics to domestic science and manual training. His department had about two thousand dollars' worth of apparatus, and there was some original research.

Mr. Alexander Sutherland had been for six years instructor in manual training, surveys, etc. He engaged to give the commission a written statement on the value and results of technical training.

Principal DeWolfe said that at Acadia Seminary they have work in designing and a course of domestic science which is acknowledged by the council of public instruction. The work in household science is developing, and does not interfere with progress in other branches.

Dr. Tuttle explained the courses in sociology, combined with economics. At the close of the inquiry Dr. Catten gave a formal welcome to the visitors, to which Dr. Robertson happily replied, saying that on this, his third visit to Acadia, he was glad to see such evidences of growth.

Mr. Robertson Joins Royal Board.

It is officially announced that Mr. William Robertson, president of the Union Bank of Halifax, will represent the interests of the shareholders of that institution on the board of the Royal Bank if the proposal made for the purpose of the Union is approved by the shareholders. That is part of the agreement under which the Royal Bank makes the purchase on the terms announced exclusively in the Star yesterday. The present directors of the Union Bank of Halifax will act as advisory board of the Royal Bank of Halifax.

The present policy of the Union Bank of Halifax in respect to the business being carried out by the Royal Bank of Canada, and the advisory board being retained by the Royal Bank of Canada is the best evidence of their intention to safeguard the interests of the customers of the Union Bank of Halifax.

It is also agreed that all the present staff of the Union shall be retained for a period of one year at a salary not less than now received by them. -Montreal Star.

If the hardback were an ornamental plant instead of being a "noxious weed," the way in which it deals with in Wolfville would be most commendable. There is no doubt but that the conditions here are decidedly favorable for its growth as the fine specimens which are in evidence both on public and private property abundantly testify. Along the sides of streets and in back yards they flourish, and if prompt action is not taken we can reasonably look forward to the crop being greater next year than has been.

An immediate and aggressive campaign for their destruction should be inaugurated, in which the town government ought to lead and every citizen be glad to help in ridding the town of this nuisance.

Census of Forest Products.

The census of the forest products of Canada to be taken on July 1, 1911, will embrace square, waxy or flat timber, logs for lumber and miscellaneous products.

In the first class are included ash, birch, elm, maple, oak, pine and all other timber cut as square, waxy or flat, and in the enumeration will be reported for cubic feet and value.

Logs for lumber, which are included in the second class, are in such woods as elm, hickory, hemlock, oak, pine and spruce. They will be enumerated in the census by quantities of 1,000 feet board measure, with value in the same unit.

Miscellaneous products of the forest include bark for tanning, fence posts, firewood, hoop and hog poles, masts and spars, piling, pot and pearl ashes, railroad ties, staves, stavebolts and heading, telegraph poles (including telephone and other poles for electric wires), wood for pulp, and the furs and skins of forest animals.

The census of forest products will be taken chiefly from farmers and the lessees of timber limits.

R. B. Angus Chosen Bank President.

Mr. R. B. Angus, senior director of the Bank of Montreal, was elected president at a meeting of the Board of Directors this morning, in succession to the late Sir George Drummond.

Mr. R. B. Angus is one of the most influential of the financial magnates of this country. He came to Canada from Scotland in 1857, and took a position on the staff of the Bank of Montreal. He was young and energetic, and his ability and sterling character soon advanced him in the service of the Dominion's chief banking institution. In 1862 he took charge of the Chicago agency, and some time after was appointed one of the agents in New York City. Subsequently he became local manager at Montreal, and in 1869 he was appointed to the position of general manager. His tenure of that office was marked by tact, foresight and the fullest appreciation of opportunities for extending the influence of the institution. In 1879, Mr. Angus retired from the service of the bank in which he had risen so rapidly to the top, to assume a position in the management of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway.

Probably the most important step taken in 1880, when he entered the syndicate formed by Lord Mount Stephen, Lord Strathcona and others, having for its object the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a work finally accomplished in 1885. How the great undertaking was carried out to completion is a matter of national history. He is at the present time a director in many of the leading Canadian corporations, and his advice is invaluable. -Montreal Star.

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

Appendicitis Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBERG, ONT., Feb. 17th, 1910. "Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella, (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation.

We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and would be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done, we were ready, but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some "Fruit-a-tives" and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her.

"Fruit-a-tives" saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health." J. W. FOX, (Father), LILLIAN FOX, (Mother).

Words cannot express the gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Fox. And Miss Ella will always remember "Fruit-a-tives"—the discovery of an eminent physician, and the only medicine in the world made of fruit. 50c. a box; $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Famous Stallion Nelson Dead.

Nelson, one of the most remarkable and best known trotting and breeding stallions in the country, who once held the old-fashioned high-wheel sulky record, and later the bicycle sulky record, has died at Sunnyside Farm, Waterville, the stock farm of his owner, C. Horace Nelson. He trotted all over the country, and went many last miles in his twenty-seven years.

Nelson was foaled in June, 1882. His sire was Nelson Koffe, 2:11, by Tom Rolfe, 2:33, and his dam, Gretchen, by Gideon, 8:45. He was bred by C. H. Nelson, who trained and drove him himself in all his important races and exhibitions.

Given as a colt Nelson attracted attention by winning in fast time the two-year-old stake at the Maine State Fair at Lewiston, which in those days was an important trotting centre. The next year he won the three-year-old stake at Lewiston, and established the half-mile track stallion record of 2:26 3/4 which was not broken for many years. As a five year old Nelson set the New England five-year-old record.

In 1890 Nelson was shipped to the Eastern Maine State at Bangor, where he lowered the half mile track record to 2:15 1/2. From Bangor he was taken to Kankakee, Ill., where he lowered the world's mile stallion record to 2:12. Two days later on the same track he clipped half a second off this record, and two days after this, at Rushville, Ind., trotted in 2:11 3/4.

It was one of the most notable features of Nelson's records that long train rides did not seem to upset him. His owner, who always rode in the car with him, said Nelson loved to travel, and that he would look out of the grating over the half opened door at the country flashing by.

One week after his performance at Rushville, Nelson cut his record to 2:11 1/4 at Terre Haute, and twelve days later at Cambridge City, Ind., to 2:10 3/4. From there he was shipped to Chicago, where he was the lion of the National Horse Show.

Nelson was taken west again the next fall, and old horsemen tell of the enthusiasm that greeted him everywhere. At every track at which he appeared his stall was decorated with flowers. It is said that no horse had made such a conquest of the country.

This was the day when trotting was at its height and running races were incorporated in the program as novelties. After this Nelson raced little. He was too fast for the best steppers, and for exhibitions could be used only for the purpose of showing his record to 2:10. The next fall Nelson again was driven in exhibition all over the country and at Trenton, N. J., lowered the half-mile track record to 2:11 3/4.

In the fall of 1893 he established his record of 2:00 at Rigby Park, Portland, Me., which is now a desolate strip of waste land overgrown with weeds.

A track meet of all kinds of field sports open to amateurs of Western Nova Scotia will be held at Middleton on Aug. 12, proceeds going to start a rink building fund. The prize list will include a fine selection of cups, shields, medals, &c. Track teams are being arranged in the different towns and individual entries accepted. Entries will be received until 10 p.m. by Fred I. Tanner, Middleton. Notice re trains and other information later.

What Do You Know About It?

That's what a customer asked me recently about a patent medicine I had sold for years, and I was forced to admit that in reality I knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising.

Some of the claims made were so extravagant that of course I could not take them seriously, but concluded I had better find a line of remedies I did know something about.

NYAL'S FAMILY REMEDIES are manufactured by a House with a solid reputation of over half a century. The formulas are exceptionally good ones and are freely furnished to the Drug Trade. Patrons of the bank are glad to see him in his place again. Mr. Glenney, who has been acting manager during Mr. Munro's absence, left for Halifax on Monday. He has been a most courteous and obliging official, and made many friends during his residence in Wolfville.

At Rest. The funeral of John How who died Wednesday in San Francisco was held at the Episcopal church at 1 o'clock today, the services being conducted by Rev. Nicholas. The services were attended by a large number of friends, many of whom had been fellow workmen of Mr. How and who held him in high esteem. The interment was in Arbor Vitae cemetery, where after the casket had been lowered to the grave, the beautiful floral emblems, the tribute of his friends and employees of the railroad, were heaped over the newly made mound. The above is taken from a late number of the Modena Daily Tribune, of California. Mr. How was a son of the late Professor How, Vice-President of Kings College, Windsor, and brother of Rev. H. H. Howe, Annapolis, and Mrs. Fred Beckman, of Anherst, and Mrs. John Donaldson, of Port Williams. He is survived by a wife and one daughter. He did not long survive his mother whose interment took place in the old Windsor cemetery on the 11th of July. For over twenty years he held a responsible position in the Railway Department at Danville, California. Three years ago he and his family visited his old home and mother.

Narrow Escape at Evangeline Beach. A narrow escape from drowning occurred at Evangeline Beach on Friday last, when Miss Belle Carver, daughter of Mrs. Rufus Carver, of Windsor, was swept beyond her depth while bathing, and would undoubtedly have been drowned but for the prompt action of Mr. W. Marshall Black. When Mr. Black reached Miss Carver she was going down for the third time, and fainted when her rescuer reached her. Miss Carver, who is a fairly good swimmer, while attempting a greater distance than usual and swimming as she thought parallel to the shore, gradually got away and beyond her depth. In attempting to reach bottom she failed and becoming frightened called for assistance. Mrs. Boyd, of Truro, who has a cottage at the beach, was the first to realize the danger of the young lady, and at once acquainted Mr. Black, who immediately started to her rescue, calling for a boat as he ran down the beach to the water. Mr. Black had a long swim before reaching the drowning girl, hampered as he was by his clothes, and a long swim back to shore with her. He received no aid from the boat until he had waded to the shore with his unconscious charge and placed her in the care of friends. Prompt assistance was rendered by Dr. Elizabeth Broach, of Atlanta, Ga., who is occupying a cottage, and Miss Carver quickly recovered and aside from the shock suffered no harm. Her mother, who with her family, have been occupying a cottage there for the month of July, was nearly frantic until she saw her child restored to safety. Mr. Black was none the worse for his experience. It is twenty years since he did any swimming and on the last occasion on which he went into the water with his clothes on was in Halifax some years ago, when he pulled an old gentleman out of a foundering boat. Miss Carver's father, the late I. Fred Carver, one of Windsor's most prominent business men, was drowned about 15 years ago at the Stillwater lakes, near Windsor.

Horton Academy. We presume that the announcement made in a Halifax morning newspaper recently that Principal Robinson had resigned, is correct. The announcement is not altogether unexpected, as it was generally known that Mr. Robinson was to be appointed inspector of schools for Kings and Hants counties whenever the next vacancy, through the resignation of Inspector Roscoe, should occur. We should be very sorry to learn of the retirement of Inspector Roscoe, who has in every sense of the word, been an ideal official, and we have no expectation that any one will be able to thoroughly fill his place; still we are in hopes the report in re Mr. Robinson is correct. He has had a long experience in the public school system of the province as pupil, teacher and principal, and being a man of great personal energy, tireless progressiveness, winning personality, we anticipate for him much more than an average success. We commend the local government for their foresight in securing Mr. Robinson. His successor at Horton Academy has not been announced, at least we have not heard anything to that effect, but we have no doubt but that the Board of Governors have their eye upon a man of teaching experience, who will eminently follow in the splendid line of teachers who have made the Academy what it is, an excellent home for boys seeking an education.

That Temperance Law.

To the thoughtful person it is becoming quite apparent that the first intention of the provincial government in respect to the new temperance law was to have gone to the people in June before the act came into force, and the temperance people had a chance to learn its 'gold brick' nature by its operation. However it was a case of demonstrating the truthfulness of Bobbie Burn's saying: 'The best laid plans of men an' mice gang at a-gles.' Something happened after the bill was introduced, and had made considerable headway in its journeyings through the two houses—the regrettable physical collapse of Premier Murray occurred. Had it not been for that the country previous to July 1st, when the act came into force, and it, the act, would have been heralded by liberal press, and liberal speakers, as the greatest piece of temperance legislation ever enacted in any civilized country, not barring Switzerland, where there is national prohibition. It is now twenty-one days since the act came into force, but so far as The Citizen can learn, the government has not up to this date, July 21st, fulfilled its part—appointed a general inspector. Because of this the municipal inspectors are inactive, afraid to move. The law without the appointment of this official is a dead letter on the statute.—Truro Citizen.
