Stella Mordant;
The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

"The 'Kingfisher,'" said the lady. "It belongs to my brother Cecil—Lord Lisle. That was the ship which was here just now. My name is Cecilia. Will you tell me yours?"

"Stella Mordant," replied Stella; then she pushed the hair from her forehead, and looked at her companion with sudden and feverish eagerness. "Where—where are we going?" she asked.

"To England," replied Lady Cecilia.

Stella uttered a faint cry of dismay.

"To England? Oh, no, no! I want to go back to the island!" she wailed, tears welling to her eyes. "I must go back! Indeed, indeed, I must!"

CHAPTER XXI.

"No, no; say nothing! I will wait!" Ralph stammered as he led Mary back to the ballroom.

Mary answered not a word; indeed, she could not speak for the painful beating of her heart. She was a girl still, fresh from school, and a proposal from any man she did not love would have agitated her; but that Ralph, the earl, should tell her that he loved her and ask her to be his wife, and at the very moment Edward's letter was hidden in her hand, was nothing less than terrible.

The man to whom she was engaged for the next dance came up as she and Ralph entered the room, and Ralph, with a bow, resigned her to him.

For a space he stood looking round the brilliant scene vacantly, then he turned and went to a small room at the back of the hall which he had furnished as a kind of "den."

He locked the door, and going to a sideboard, he got some brandy, and drank a wine-glassful.

The spirit steadied him a little; and he needed steadying, for his hand was shaking and his head was in a whirl, and he could scarcely realize what he had done.

The old-fashioned villain of the novel and melodrama, who calmly and coolly sits down and plans out a scheme of villainy in a very rare bird indeed, and seldom found in real life; which is a pity—for the novelist and dramatist. As a matter of fact, such men as Ralph Rattton are quite as much the creatures of impulse as good men; and Ralph had acted on impulse in telling Lady Mary that he loved her and asking her to be his wife. It was the excitement of his success; the dancing—and the champagne—that had impelled him to the rash act.

Surrounded by his titled and aristocratic guests—some of the least worthy had flattered and almost paid court to him—with the music singing in his ears, the scent of the flowers stealing over his senses, he had forgotten that though he was the Earl of Rattton, he was the husband of Nita, the music-hall artist; and the sight of Lady Mary in all her fresh, girlish beauty, the fascination of her refinement and girlish charm had helped him still farther to forget that dismal fact.

But he remembered it now, as he sat fingering the brandy glass and staring moodily at the carpet.

He was already married, and he had asked Lady Mary to be his wife; had proposed to her! Had he been mad for the moment? Yes, that was it, he must have lost his head for the time being. But the thing was done now. It was true that she had refused him, and for an instant or two he felt relieved. There was no great harm done. She had not only refused him, but promised not to say anything of his proposal; and he knew that she would keep her promise.

But after a while the feeling of relief gave place to one of disappointment. The one thing a man finds it difficult to get is just the thing he wants; and Ralph wanted Lady Mary all the more badly for her refusal.

It seemed to him as he sat there and listened to the music floating faintly from the ball-room that nothing of all he possessed would be of any value to him if he could not get her.

"What's the use of being an earl and owning all this property, if I'm doomed to be a bachelor, to live alone all my life!" he muttered. "I might just as well be a common, ordinary person; in fact, I should be a deuced sight happier. And everybody will expect me to marry. I ought to marry, and in my own sphere. How beautiful she is! She's the loveliest woman I ever saw!"

He refilled his glass and drank the contents slowly, and as the brandy sent its insidious glow through his frame and mounted to his brain, his evil courage mounted also.

"Who knows anything about—about Nita?" he mused. "No one; and no one is likely to know. She hasn't found me all these months, and it's very improbable that she will ever find me. Perhaps—perhaps she's dead, or she may marry again; nothing more likely. She's a good-looking girl, and—and the sort of people she associates with aren't too particular in asking questions where they take a fancy. It's likely she's given me up for good, and taken up with somebody else. Anyhow, I'll—yes, I'll risk it," he wound up with oath, as he filled the glass for the third time. "Lady Mary's worth taking some risk for. With her for my wife—"

He gazed before him with half-closed eyes, and sank into a delicious reverie. With such men as Ralph, passion takes the place of love, and there could be no question of his passionate desire for Lady Mary.

"But I must go cautiously," he muttered. "She's refused me; seemed as if she didn't care for me. But perhaps she was only startled, or it's the proper way for ladies of her high class to receive a proposal. Her father would be on my side. He thinks no end of me, and wouldn't object to me as a son-in-law. And, d—n it! I'm a good match for any of them—the best of them!"

He rose and went to the fire-place, and gazed at himself in the Venetian mirror.

"I'm not so bad-looking, either; but the strongest thing in my favour is that I'm the Earl of Rattton and worth a million. By George! she ought to have jumped at me. Why didn't she? There can't be anything between her and that conceited, self-satisfied beast, Edward Bryan?"

He scowled at his reflected face, then seeing how hideous the scowl made him, he forced a smile, and went back to the ball-room with it still on his face.

The dance was drawing to a conclusion, and some of the guests were already preparing for leaving. They came up to him to say good-night, or, rather, good-morning, and they one and all congratulated him on the success of his entertainment.

"You have done the thing very well, Lord Rattton, and we have had a delightful time," said the young duchess. "It has been quite Londonish in its splendour and its completeness; and I am quite sure we are all very grateful to you."

Ralph bent over the small ducal hand and murmured appropriate acknowledgments of her grace's graciousness; but he was watching out of the corners of his eyes, for Lady Mary.

She came up presently on her father's arm.

"Sorry to go so early, Rattton," said Lord Hatherley, genially, "though, by Jove! it's late enough! But Mary's rather tired; and she's not as used to it as some of the London belles who are here to-night. You have had a tremendous success, tremendous! But I knew you would!"

Ralph glanced at Lady Mary under half-closed lids.

"I hope Lady Mary has enjoyed it, and that she is not overtired," he said.

Mary stood with downcast eyes; but she raised them for a moment and looked at him gravely as she thanked him and wished him good-night.

When she and her father got into their carriage, she leant back and folded her hands over her bosom, upon which lay Edward Bryan's letter, to which she had not given her eyes. Her head was still in a whirl, and Ralph's words were still ringing like a strain of discord in her ears. His proposal had seemed to her like an insult, like an outrage; but she told herself that she had no right to so consider it.

Why should she be angry or resentful? He did not know that she had already given her heart to Edward Bryan, and not knowing it, he was within his right in telling her that he loved her, and asking her to be his wife.

But though she reproached herself for her angry and resentful feeling against Ralph, the earl—had he not saved her life!—she shuddered as she thought of him.

come in, Molly. Here is this young fellow—only come into his own a few months—coming out of a somewhat obscure, and I've no doubt somewhat squalid past, and at once he fits into his proper niche and takes his proper place in society. I must say I admire the way in which Ralph carries his honours. One would not have been impressed if he had been—well, loud and effusive; but you see that he carried himself and behaved as one in his position should behave. Say what you will, there is some mysterious power, some—er—instinct in good birth which enables a man to face and overcome all difficulties."

Mary did not respond. Edward's letter was lying like a sentient thing on her bosom.

"This affair must have cost a very large sum," went on Lord Hatherley, in the way men of his age have a habit of doing, communing with themselves rather than addressing the listener. "A tremendous success; but it does not matter; he is very rich and will not feel it. He looked very well to-night, don't you think? I don't think there was a handsomer man in the room; do you, Molly?"

"I—I don't know. I didn't notice," said poor Mary, upon whom this laudation of Ralph the earl jarred unpleasantly.

Lord Hatherley sighed.

"Lucky young beggar!" he said, quisingly. He was thinking that the girl whom Ralph should choose for his wife would also be lucky. She would be a countess, and richer, even richer than most noblewomen. It was only natural he should think of Mary. Ralph had saved her life; he was always very attentive to her, was always running in to see them. The Hatherley estates would go away from Mary to the young boy at Eton. It was only natural that the fond father should be anxious for his beloved daughter's future, and reflect how safe and even brilliant it would be, if—if—she were to become Ralph's wife. But he said nothing.

He was the last man in the world to hint of his half-formed wish to Mary; he said nothing, but the wish grew and grew as the carriage travelled the short distance. If he had known that Ralph had proposed and Mary had refused him, Lord Hatherley would not have put any pressure on her; for he held that love was sacred, and marriage something more than a mercenary contract.

He kissed her more tenderly than usual as she wished him good-night, and Mary clung to him for an instant with a mute, appealing embrace, her eyes filling with tears which she hid from him.

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed from That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

No Drugs To Take—A Direct Breathing Cure

Statistics Prove Ninety-Seven Per Cent of Canada's Population is Infested With the Germs of Catarrh.

This disease is most dangerous owing to its tendency to extend to the Bronchial tubes and lungs, where it causes Consumption. Unfortunately the people have had faith in sprays, ointments and snuffs, which can't possibly cure, and in consequence catarrhal disease has become a national cure. Science is advancing every day, and fortunately a remedy has been discovered that not only cures but prevents Catarrh. This new treatment "Catarrhose" has sufficient power to kill the germs of Bronchitis, Catarrh and Asthma. It contains pure pine essences and healing balsams that go to the remotest part of the nose, throat and lungs, carrying health-giving medication to every spot that is infested or weak. You don't take Catarrhose like cough mixture—you inhale its healing vapor at the mouth and it spreads all through the breathing organs, soothing and curing wherever Catarrh exists. This is nature's way of supplying the richest balsams, the purest antiseptics known to science.

A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes. A harsh cough is eased in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system.

For Asthma and Bronchial Irritation nothing can equal Catarrhose—every physician and druggist says so, and we advise our readers to try it as treatment if suffering with a winter ill. The complete outfit costs $1.00, medium size, 50c., at all dealers.

Home Lessons.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In perusing your issue on Saturday evening, I was interested in "The Thoughts of the Child," and one portion arrested attention: I refer to the part dealing with "Home Lessons." Now, I have no children myself, but I am often invited to friends' houses in the evening, and after tea, the children get out their books, and proceed to "do" their lessons. It has often struck me how so-called lessons, or home lessons, are a pure farce, they are really gone through in a slipshod way, and have no real educational value. In a great many cases, parents have not sufficient education to help their children, and resort to the children have come to them to help them with something they do not understand. I will give an example: I was at one friend's house one night, and the mother asked her boy if he had done his home lesson, and was told he had not, and she asked him what it was, and she got his books, I was greatly amused when the boy informed her that he had to draw a map of Australia. Being interested in the subject, I would be able to help him, but I found that he had not the slightest idea of the subject, his teacher at school not having given him any instructions in mapping. So I proceeded to try to give him some help, but found that to proceed along recognized lines, it would take me well all night, so I advised the mother to frankly tell his teacher in the morning that he was not able to do that particular lesson, as he had not been taught anything about it. But the boy with that non-sensible British doggedness, set about his task, and managed to draw a good copy (for the first time) of a map of Australia, and I was informed on enquiry later that he had a special prize from his teacher, the manner in which he had done that lesson. In other homes I have seen repeatedly appealed to to explain something the children did not understand, and it has been apparent to me that the school teachers are lax in this respect. I think that when parents are paying for their children's education, they should be pleased to see some of their children right with their school home lessons. When a man (or woman either) has done their school work, they generally are not in a hurry to do what they are paid to do, to do for them. If children have to do lessons at home, and parents to help them, why send children to school at all? I have touched, but lightly on this subject, and should be pleased to see some else who have children going to school, give their views on the matter. I might say, in conclusion, while I went to school, over a period of nine years, I did not take a lesson to do at home. We three teachers in our school, with average attendance of from two hundred to two hundred and thirty school days, and although this was in England, I cannot see why the difference in numbers should make a difference in numbers, especially as the average teacher seems to be much lower in Newfoundland than in England.

St. Patrick's Daenary was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday morning, the contracting parties being Mr. Joseph Ashley, Engineer of the R.M.C. and Miss Mary Woods, of Halifax, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Father Pippy. The bride, who was handsomely attired, was attended by Miss Eva Gaul, whilst the groom was supported by Mr. P. McGrath. A reception was then held at the residence of Mr. J. Attitude of the Swiss.

Rome, May 2.—Next to the question whether Italy will join the war on the side of the Allies comes that of the attitude of Switzerland in such event. The republic is credited here with a preponderance of German sympathies, added to which she has the lesson of the fate of Belgium before her eyes.

On the other hand, Italy centres her hopes in the sturdy independence of Switzerland and her pledged word to be neutral, also her fear lest she lose the Italian and French cantons at the end of the war, should she give way to the enemies of the allies.

The situation is most critical, but Switzerland may escape the fate of Belgium owing to her superior strategic position and the present weakness of Germany and Austria. It is felt in Rome that the war still may have many unpleasant surprises.

BUYING AT HOME.

I bought some rags of Tailor Skaggs, and paid him when I got 'em; ne wept with glee; "For now," said he, "I'll pay my bills, dot r o 'em." So on the run he took the man, and paid the corner grocer, whose trade was bad, and who was sad, because the wolf drew closer.

And then my goods brought ade to beds and girls beyond the counting; each trouble ceased, and joy increased, and kept on mounting mounting. You see, my friend, if you should spend your coin with local dealers, you're spreading glee and ecstasy, to beat the sunshine splendors.

HER LUCK!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"My goodness," cried the girl who had been saying something sharp about the departing guest, "he stopped right outside. I'm afraid he heard me through the open window. If that isn't just my luck! I'm always getting caught like that!" "What a queer idea of luck some people seem to have!"

The girl with the sharp tongue calls it "her luck" because she sometimes gets caught saying sharp things about people. Should a man spend most of his time out of doors call it "his luck" if he occasionally gets caught in a shower? Should anyone who is always playing with edged tools call it "his luck" if now and then he cuts himself? Should a girl who is always saying sharp things about people call it "her luck" if now and then one of them overhears or in some other way gets wind of her ill-natured remarks?

Such a Temptation.

The temptation to say sharp, witty things about people the moment they are out of earshot is very strong to many of us. It is so easy to be sharp and witty over the peculiarities that the very best of us have, and the joke seems to take on a particularly delicate flavor from the fact that its object has so recently "left his character in our hands."

The first stratum of courtesy, the stratum to which almost all of us have attained is not to say unkind things to our friends. The second stratum is not to say unkind things of our friends. It is surprising how few people keep themselves uniformly on that level. And she never said a word. While I was visiting a friend of mine one of her neighbors came to call, bringing her little girl. The child was strikingly unattractive, almost repulsive. No one could help being painfully aware of the fact. When the callers had gone I expected to hear my hostess comment upon the child as ninety-nine people out of a hundred would have done. Not one word of disparaging comment or even of that condescending pity that is worse if anything, did she speak. I can't tell you how much I admired her.

That is the fine flower of courtesy—to hold back ones tongue from the sharp criticism, the witty unkind thing we might have said, and the people who have that flower in their hearts will never need to complain of "their luck."

Questions and Answers. "How often does the average person need to go to the dentist to keep his teeth in good condition?"—M. A. C. Reply.—You remind me of a favorite epigram of an efficiency engineer about his problem of men and labor. "There is no average man." The dentist to whom I propounded your question said practically the same thing. It depends on the character of your teeth. Some people come to him for inspection every month, some every three months, some once in six months. You will soon find out if you need to go oftener. In the meantime brush your teeth thoroughly (up and down, as well as across) and you use dental floss, and you may have the pleasant surprise of a clean bill of health next time you screw your courage to the sticking point and get ready for a siege in the dentist's chair.

The Law of the Lusitania Case.

The rule of maritime warfare which imposes upon the commander of a ship of war the duty of providing for the safety of the passengers and crew of any vessel he may elect to destroy is plain, unmistakable in its application to every case, and it has been everywhere and by all civilized nations accepted as a binding obligation. The rule is of such universal acceptance and assent that the text writers for the most part mention it only in passing allusions, as when Holland says that "if ship and cargo belong beyond question to the enemy" the captor may "after taking off the crew sink the ship." In the rules relating to the destroying of prizes adopted by the Institute of International Law at Turin in 1822, it was declared that "in any case the captor must remove the persons on board." The German Government in an official document at the beginning of the war called at France and England for allying themselves with Russia, a nation of "unkultur" and barbarism, yet in the Russian special instructions to naval commanders issued in 1900 it was declared that the commander of the imperial cruiser has "the right to burn or sink a detained vessel after having previously taken therefrom the crew." In all discussions of maritime warfare the obligation to save crew and passengers is assumed, precisely as in any competent criminal law it would be assumed that in all countries murder is made a punishable crime. The man in the street may have some possible excuse for ignorance of this humane usage of war, but it is something more than surprising to hear from the lips of Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, these insinuated excuses or palliations of the dastardly crime committed by Germany in destroying the Lusitania without warning and with such brutal indifference to the fate of her company that there are more than 1,400 names in the list of the dead.

We cannot overlook the fact that the Lusitania was a British ship flying the British flag and subject at any time to be put into actual naval service of the Government. Indeed, it is stated that at the time she was attacked she was carrying military reservists to England for service in the British Army. True, the passengers went aboard a belligerent ship with full knowledge of the risk and after official warning by the German Government. When on board a British vessel they were on British soil. Was not their position substantially equivalent to being within the walls of a fortified city? If American citizens stay within a city besieged or threatened and the enemy attacks, what should our Government do if our citizens should be injured? We overlook nothing, we take full account of all the facts—that the Lusitania was an enemy ship flying the enemy flag, that she was carrying munitions of war to the enemy, and had on board reservists sailing for service in the British Army. These undisputed facts gave the commander of the German submarine the right to destroy the ship. Nothing could give him the right to destroy or to imperil her crew and passengers. Senator Stone stumbles into a comparison with the status of neutrals within the war and against under siege. But international law requires the besieging force to give notice of bombardment. The officer in command of an attacking force, so runs the language of The Hague Convention, "must, before commencing a bombardment, in cases of assault, do all in his power to warn the authorities." Neither in law nor in custom is there any extenuation for this act of monstrous inhumanity, no exception, no condition, can be had to shield it from the full force and condemnation it deserves and has received. And the warning advertisement published by the German Embassy here, being notice of an intent to commit a crime, is of no moment, no condition, can be had to shield it from the full force and condemnation it deserves and has received.

The rule of mercy to the crew and passengers of captured merchant ships of the enemy rests upon the universal principle that the operations of war are carried on against armed forces, not against the enemy's peaceable citizens or subjects, certainly never against neutrals. It rests upon the principle of the instructions for the government of the armies of the United States in the field during the civil war, a code prepared by Dr. Lieber and revised by the hand of Abraham Lincoln, in which it was declared that men in arms remain "normal beings responsible to one another and to God." Germany snapped her fingers at the laws of war and at the law of morality when she did this deed of blood. She put herself outside the domain of law, and it is a frequent comment upon her behaviour that by that act she confessed herself to be an outlaw nation. We know now how she makes war; that discussion is ended. Had we known on Aug. 1 what is now made so painfully clear to us we should have no doubt have taken a different course. We passed over in silence the lawless violence and carnage visited upon Belgium by the German invader, although many prominent Americans insisted that we should then have registered our firm protest against cruel spoliation in violation of neutral rights under treaty signed by the spoiler. We should have protested, doubtless, against the promiscuous sowing of mines in the North Sea by Germany, we should have shown less forbearance in the cases of the Fryars at the Cushing, the Palaba and the Gulfight. Now that we are warned that Germany has resolved to make war in disregard of the laws of God and man, like a Malay running amuck, we know what to do. The time for protests has passed. It becomes now our duty as a nation to demand that Germany shall find means to carry on her war without putting our citizens to death. It is a demand in which other neutral nations will have the right to join, for aboard the Lusitania there were Danes, Swedes, Greeks, Italians, and other neutrals. It may be said that in this demand we should call upon Germany to surrender her right to fight her enemy in her own way. It is precisely that. Her own way is that tigerish ferocity of which neither her neutrals nor her enemies have believed her capable. Beyond the pale of law she has no right, and she went far outside all law when she prearranged and executed the destruction of the Lusitania. It may be said that the presentation of such a demand might involve us in war with Germany. We are not of that opinion. There are measures short of war which may be taken to assert the rights and manifest the just resentment of a nation. And they are measures which the men of power in Germany would not lightly disregard unless they are lost in madness.

But if the despatch without warning of torpedoes against the great Lusitania with 2,000 human beings on board is to be accepted as a true manifestation of the German spirit, if Germany proclaims it, if she has deliberately determined that all the world shall know that this is the way in which she proposes to make war, that this is her attitude toward beyond that of course, we must take notice that the complete defeat of Germany and eradication of the military spirit of Germany are essential to their peace and safety, and they will feel that they have tenfold greater reason for desiring, and in the extreme emergency for helping to bring about, that saving consummation.—New York Times, May 9.

ASQUITH'S STATEMENTS.
LONDON.
Premier Asquith announced in Commons to-day that the Government has decided to contemplate which includes construction of the Government on a broader personal basis. "Nothing has been arranged as yet," he said, "to avoid a possible division. I wish to make clear now three things:—
"First—The changes in the positions of the Prime Minister or Foreign Secretary."
"Second—There will be of any kind in the policy, but as regards the continuation of the war with energy by means of every resource."
"Third—And of great importance to my honourable friends and I have no doubt, to you, any reconstruction of the Government that may be taken in the future for any reason taken as indicating any attitude of surrender on the part of any person or body of persons, their political ideas or their attitude towards the war. If any arrangement is taken in the House will have the opportunity of expressing its views thereon."

If any arrangement should take place which would remain undisturbed, it will be settled when the war is over."
Speaking at the Guildhall at a meeting called to discuss the proposal to call upon the help of the Motherland, Mr. Asquith said:
"We do not believe at the hour of the fruit of a victory, Imperial policy, say there is no part of Empire but would suffer rather than become subject to other sovereignty. They have rallied to our standard, they have violated every law, man, and has gone down to such depths of unmanliness that the enemy has mobilized himself all the Powers and that are at the back of the free men, let us never forget what we are achieving, and still more fighting to avert, but fighting with spiritual weapons, never with an increasing and munitions more necessary."

LONDON, May 19.
The French Government reports operations prevented by rains and thick mist.
The Russian Government reports engagements in Shavli region and Poland; and repulse of attacks in Galicia with severe loss to the enemy.
The Black Sea fleet has destroyed thirty-seven ships and the Kosiu pier and railroad.
The Admiralty reports news from Turkish sources that submarine AE-2 Royal Australian Navy, was sunk when entering the Sea of Marmora on April 30th, and the officers and seventeen men of the crew taken prisoners. As there has been no communication from the vessel since April 26th, the loss must be presumed.

A report from Cairo states repulse of enemy attacks and further progress in the Dardanelles. Every day sees improvement in the Anglo-French position. The enemy is reported as having lost very heavily.

ASQUITH'S STATEMENT.
LONDON, May 19.
Premier Asquith announced in the Commons to-day that steps were in contemplation which involved a reconstruction of the Government upon a broader personal and political basis. "Nothing has been definitely arranged as yet," he said, "but in order to avoid a possible misapprehension, I wish to make clear here and now three things:

"First—The changes will not affect the positions of the Prime Minister or Foreign Secretary.
"Second—There will be no change of any kind in the policy of the country as regards the continued prosecution of the war with all possible energy by means of every available resource.
"Third—And of great importance to my honourable friend behind me and I have no doubt, to the Opposition, any reconstruction of the Cabinet that may be taken in any quarter for any reason must not be taken as indicating anything in the nature of surrender on the part of any person or body of persons or their several political ideals.
"This is as far as I can go now. If any arrangement is made, the House will have the opportunity of expressing its views thereon.
The references of the Premier to the prosecution of the war, were greeted with prolonged cheering.
The Prime Minister was followed by Mr. Bonar Law, Leader of the Opposition, who said:

"I think it only necessary to say on behalf of my friends and myself, that at the stage we have reached our only consideration with regard to the further steps to be taken is the interest as to what is the best method of finishing the war successfully, leaving out of our minds all considerations, political or otherwise, beyond that, of course, if such arrangement should take place, it is obvious that our convictions on other subjects will remain unchanged and will be settled when the war is over."
Speaking at the Guildhall to-day, at a meeting called to thank the Colonies for the way they have rallied to the help of the Mother Country, Mr. Asquith said:

"We no doubt are at the gathering hour of the fruit of a wise and far-sighted imperial policy. It is safe to say there is no part of the British Empire but would suffer annihilation rather than become subject to any other sovereignty. The Dominions have rallied to our standards to defeat the machinations of an enemy who has violated every law of God or man, and has gone down step by step to such depths of unmeasured infamy that the enemy has mobilized against himself all the Powers and influences that are at the back of the free spirit of free men. Let us never for a moment forget what we are fighting to achieve, and still more what we are fighting to avert. But war is not fought with spiritual weapons, and never was an increasing flow of men and munitions more necessary. The

LONDON, May 19.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS SEVERED TO-MORROW.

PARIS, May 19.
The French Government has been informed that diplomatic relations between Italy and the Austro-German Allies will be severed to-morrow. A message, sent by courier from the French Embassy at Rome, states that when the Italian Parliament meets to-morrow the Premier will present the Green Book giving the cause of the diplomatic rupture.

COMMUNICATION CUT OFF.

ROME, May 19.
Communication with Trieste, the principal seaport of Austria, was cut off to-day.

ROUMANIA AGAIN.

BUCHAREST, May 19.
Roumania's entrance into the war will follow that of Italy. The Roumanian Army is on a war footing and will strike at Austria through Transylvania. A ministerial council was held to-day, at which the Premier presented his colleagues with the latest information received from the Roumanian Envoy at Rome. It is understood that this was to the effect, that the Italian Cabinet had decided for war.

RIOTING IN POLA.

ROME, via Paris, May 19.
Forty persons were killed and several hundred wounded by the police and Austrian troops in quelling the uprising in Pola. Many persons are said to have been suffocated at the navy yard where the outbreak began. The homes of Italian subjects are said to have been sacked by the authorities.

ARRIVED NEAR AUSTRIAN FRONTIER.

MOBILIZING CONTINUES.

BASEL, May 19.
The mobilization of troops is continuing rapidly in Upper Italy, and many trains are leaving Milan carrying soldiers in the direction of frontier posts.

WILL LOOK AFTER DIPLOMATIC INTERESTS.

WASHINGTON, May 19.
Austria and Italy have asked the United States to care for their diplomatic interests at Rome and Vienna, in the event of the severance of diplomatic relations. The American Government has instructed its Ambassadors at the two capitals to be ready to do so. It is regarded here as assured that if Italy and Austria declare a state of war, it will be extended also between Italy, Germany and Turkey. In that event the Rome Government wishes the United States Ambassadors at Berlin and Constantinople to take over its diplomatic interests. As yet there has been no request from Germany to have the United States act for it in Rome. Germany is reported to have asked Switzerland to take care of her interests. Information received here would indicate Italy's entrance into the European conflict, and the opening of her Parliament is expected to develop clearly Italy's interests in the war.

IN THE DARDANELLES.

CAIRO, May 19.
An official announcement was made here to-day that on Sunday a detachment of Lancashire territorials landed at the Dardanelles with a battery of howitzers, which immediately went into action and also spiked the Turkish ammunition trains. On May 12th, a Turkish attack on troops of Brigadier General Cox was repulsed. The Gurkhas attacked the Turks and gained a mile of ground, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

ALLIES LAND FRESH TROOPS IN DARDANELLES.

LONDON, May 19.
An Athens despatch dated yesterday, says that it is reported at Mytilene that the Allies disembarked fresh troops on Monday night near Kum Kale, on the Asiatic coast of the Dardanelles.

TURKS SENDING REINFORCEMENTS.

LONDON, May 19.
A message from Mytilene, forwarded from Athens to the Exchange Telegraph Co., says the Allies silenced the Turkish fortifications of Kilit Bahr, on the European side of the Dardanelles, and Narrows, nearest Constantinople. The fall of Nagara, on the Asiatic side across from Kilit Bahr, is said to be imminent. The Turks are sending reinforcements to their positions along the Gulf of Smyrna.

WILFUL MURDER.

RAMSGATE, May 19.
A coroner's jury to-day returned a verdict of wilful murder against Emperor William, in the case of Leonard Smith, who died as the result of a shock following injuries sustained in the Zeppelin raid of Monday. The coroner suggested that the jury fix the responsibility on those persons whom it regarded as being to blame for the war waged in this manner.

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT.

TENEZDOS, May 19.
All day Monday, there was carried on a heavy bombardment of Kilit Bahr and Chanak Kaleses. The Australian forces are now most securely entrenched to a depth of about two miles back from the firing line. A spirited attack was made by Ghurkas in the capture of one of the Turkish positions, when they encountered the Turks in overwhelming numbers near Szedel-Bahr. The Indians discharged their rifles and crept unseen towards the Turks' trenches, using the Kilkrit with deadly effect. The Turkish panic-stricken. The Allies' difficulty in dealing with the Turks' gun-positions is explained by the statement that the Turks are employing guns which disappear by rail into shelters bored in the rock.

RULES OF THE ADMIRALTY.

WASHINGTON, May 19.
A new warning in the interest of safety for merchant ships navigating the North Sea waters around the British Isles and vicinity has just been issued in London. The warning takes the form of an Admiralty announcement which cancels previous notices, and establishes a modified set of instructions based on changed conditions. It announces the establishment of three mine fields on the East Coast of England, and provides for the movements of ships around either the Northern or Southern ends of the British Isles. The new notice provides for both the Northern route and the use of a new Northern route along the West Coast of Ireland to the Faroe Islands, and thence by a route North of Shetlands to the North Sea.

PARLIAMENT ADJOURNS.

LONDON, May 19.
Parliament adjourned to-night until June 3rd. Before its next meeting the new cabinet will be formed, and its first act will be to challenge a vote of confidence from the House of Commons to demonstrate its position as representing the whole House. The Liberal members held a meeting

Ever Ready Hot Water, Night and Day.

FOR THE NURSERY.

"The bath ready for baby, when baby is ready for the bath" should be an adage of every housewife—who should also keep in mind that any trouble saved to the nurse makes for a well-ordered, contented household.
Gas Water-Heaters, whether of the instantaneous or Circular type, offer the convenience of available hot water " upstairs, downstairs, and in my lady's chamber,"—without any labour at all—independently of the state of the kitchen fire.
The cost is reasonable.

FOR THE BATHROOM.

An uncertain supply of hot water in the bathroom is a frequent cause of annoyance.
Hot water can only be secured, usually, by getting the cook to act as sculler, but at what a cost!
Think of the coal that is wasted—the fatigue of coal carrying—the after labour of grate cleaning—and the discomfort of a hot kitchen in warm weather!
A Gas Water-Heater is economical, because it only heats the water actually required; and labour-saving, because there are no coals to carry, no fires to clean, no ashes or dirt to remove.

The master of the house has hot shaving water and a hot bath when ever he wishes without delay or trouble.
HOT WATER FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

When "Spring cleaning days" engross the busy housewife then the convenience of an unlimited supply of hot water on the upper floors is a matter of great importance.
Latter-day domestic are difficult to keep unless due consideration is shown by saving them unnecessary drudgery in the category of un-necessary drudgery may be included the toil of carrying hot water or coal upstairs, and also spoking.

The gas water-heater renders such labour superfluous.—may12,1f to-night and expressed confidence in Premier Asquith, who explained the Government's position to them. The Conservatives also held a party council.

RAMMED AND SUNK.

QUEBEC, May 19.
Eight lives were lost of a crew of fourteen when the Government steamer Christine was rammed and sunk off the island of Orleans, shortly after dark last evening, by another craft.

BRITISH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

CARDIFF, May 19.
The British steamer Drumcece, which left Barry yesterday, has been torpedoed in the English Channel.

GERMAN LOSSES.

LONDON, May 19.
A telegram from Salonik says that the Germans have lost 43 officers and 600 men fighting in the Dardanelles during the last six days. In the vicinity of Constantinople, trains have been stopped owing to a shortage of coal. No food supplies are reaching the city and distress is increasing.

AMSTERDAM, May 19.
The Cologne Gazette says it has been learned from Berne, that the Austrian and German Consul Generals left Rome yesterday with their staffs.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

LONDON, May 19.
The Daily Telegraph, regarding the following appointments in the Coalition Ministry as almost certain: Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty; Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for the Colonies; Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary for War; Earl Kitchener and Lloyd George, Secretaries for War; Lord Kitchener performing the military part, and Lloyd George, the civil duties of the War Office.

Mr. Morine suggested that an additional clause be added, and was informed by the Premier that the clause was already prepared and was being added to the Bill.

Amusements. "CALIFORNIA AND YOU." Go to the Crescent to-day and hear Mr. Delmonico sing the classic ballad: "California and You," and see the big picture programme the Crescent is showing, everybody who attended yesterday was charmed with the show.

WITH BRITAIN'S FORCES. Owing to the tremendous reception accorded the Boer War picture at the Casino Theatre the past three days the management has decided to place it for production again to-night. This decision was arrived at by the fact that so many saw and were pleased, and that so many others who had not the opportunity of seeing one of the greatest war pictures ever shown here, might be given a chance. Let then the opportunity be taken advantage of to-night by those who missed this picture, of visiting the Casino and seeing a realistic production of a struggle that raged between Britain and Boer in South Africa. Let everyone get an impression and realization of war, of the meeting of masses of soldiers, of the onward—ever onward charge of cavalry and infantry in their desire to place the Grand Old Flag in captured positions and thereby let its folds unfurl in defiance to the enemy.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END. Complete change of programme. The latest and best pictures only are shown. There will be a special programme at the Empire Day with a little new singer in the Nation's battle song: "Oh, we don't want to lose you, but we think you ought to go," she is a little dandy. The clever "Little Squires" sisters will appear at Rossley's East End in the ported pantomime: "The old woman who lived in a shoe." This is a condensed version; the costumes are positively clever, and the plot is the great contest Friday night, there are a good many names and lots of talent.

THE GREAT COMPETITION. The contest on Friday night promises to be the best yet. The reserved seat tickets are on sale at the Rossley East End Theatre from 11 a.m. until night. There are lots of names and ticket holders and reserve seat people will be admitted by the side door; all seats are reserved, so that there will be seats for all who are in time, then extra seats will be provided. The dramatic sketch by Mr. Ballard Brown and Miss Midge Locker: "The Heart of a Girl" will be a revelation, for better act could not be seen. The pictures also are very good. The great military feature in two reels: "The Army Surgeon," a delightful photoplay, and several others, all first class. On Monday there will be a great show, entitled "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," elegant costumes, all new.

THE BRITISH THEATRE. The new theatre is steadily increasing in popularity, and yesterday's performances were attended by large and appreciative audiences. The songs by Miss Ellsworth and Mr. Cameron were well received, and both will be heard in new songs to-night. An invitation has been extended to the boys of Mount Cashel Orphanage to attend the matinee on Saturday-afternoon, when a special programme will be given. The Church of England orphans were present on Saturday last, and spent a pleasant afternoon. "The County Melody" which is being shown to-night is a picture of exceptional interest and shows the influence of music on the human heart. A special programme is in preparation for Empire Day.

How Warships Cut Cables

IT IS NOT SO SIMPLE AS IT SOUNDS.

The plucky dash of H.M.S. Amethyst through the Dardanelles, in order to cut the submarine cable linking up the Turkish forts on the European with those on the Asiatic side of the Straits, serves as a reminder that, despite the advent of wireless telegraphy, cable cutting in war is still under certain circumstances, a matter of great importance, worth sacrificing valuable lives to accomplish. In the days before Marconi had perfected his wonderful invention, it was, of course, even more vital than it is now. To sever an enemy's submarine cables, and to thereby isolate it from the rest of the world, including its own colonies, was then one of the prime objects of a naval commander.

Thus when war broke out between Spain and the United States of America on April 23rd, 1898, Admiral Dewey immediately cut the cable between Hong Kong and Manila, and hurrying with his battleships to the latter place, attacked and destroyed the Spanish fleet lying at anchor off the city before its commander was aware of his presence in the neighborhood.

Cables are Cut in Two Places. Dewey's feat in this instance was undoubtedly a smart piece of work, for cable cutting is by no means so easy a job as it sounds.

Briefly the method is as follows: The cruiser detailed for the work steams slowly at right angles to the cable route, dragging after her a special kind of grapnel, like a five-pronged anchor with shears attached, which grip and cut the cable at the same time. This grapnel is connected with the cable-cutting ship by a strong rope formed of strands of steel and hemp interwoven and attached to which is an instrument called a dynamometer, that shows when the cable is hooked.

By steaming once or twice backwards and forwards, the cable can be cut in two places at, say, half a mile apart, and the severed portion can then be dragged away by another kind of non-cutting grapnel, and left lying on the ocean bed at some distance away, where it is, of course, impossible to locate it, rendering any attempt to repair the damage a very difficult and laborious operation.

Such is the usual method adopted for destroying an enemy's cable in comparatively shallow water and was probably that followed by the Amethyst, with possibly certain modifications due to the proximity of hostile forts, and the presence of mines. In the case of ocean cables submerged at great depths, however, the mode of procedure is somewhat different.

They Take Many Months to Repair.

A similar five-pronged grapnel is used, but it is a non-cutting one, and simply grips the cable, holding it fast. The fact that it has been hooked is, of course, notified to those on board by the dynamometer, when the ship is immediately stopped and the cable hoisted up towards the surface. It never reaches the surface, however, for presently the lifting strain becomes too great, the cable snaps of its own accord, and the two ends flying wide apart, the severed cable settles back to the ocean bottom obliquely, leaving a gap of possibly a thousand yards or more between the portions.

Of course, the wilful destruction of a deep-sea cable after this fashion is a very serious matter; how serious may be gathered from the fact that it cost somewhere about £60,000 to properly repair the damage done by Dewey to the Hong-Kong-Manila cable mentioned above. The Aden-Dombay cable, again, broken accidentally in a depth of 1,900 fathoms, was only repaired after 251 days of strenuous work, in the course of which 76 miles of new cable were used. While a repair of the Lisbon-Cornwall cable, broken in the Bay of Biscay in 2,700 fathoms, took 215 days and used up over 300 miles of new cable.

In view of these figures it is not surprising that several attempts have been made to arrive at an international agreement for making all submarine cables neutral in time of war. So long ago as 1888, indeed, a conference having this end in view was held in Paris, and in the following year a convention was signed at London by the representatives of no fewer than twenty-six States, including all the great European Powers.

Nevertheless, the experience of the present war, as well as that of others which have preceded it, has shown pretty conclusively that there can be no such thing in practice, however beautiful in theory may be the principle involved.

The New Brunswick Legislature has passed the liquor license act by making the hours that bars may sell from eight a.m. to 8 p.m. daily, except Saturdays, when closing is at four p.m. It was also made illegal to sell liquor to soldiers or officers in uniform, or partly in uniform.

PURITY FLOUR

And Its Keeping Qualities

SOME people find it necessary to buy a considerable quantity of flour at one time—sufficient to last for a long period. Naturally they are anxious to procure a flour of the kind best adapted to lengthy storage.

There are two important reasons why PURITY FLOUR possesses these qualities. One is that it is made entirely from Manitoba Hard Wheat. The other lies in the fact that its careful milling necessary to produce "Purity" absolutely excludes all low-grade particles of the wheat berry. It's the high grade Manitoba Hard Wheat Flour that keeps—stands longest storage. That's "Purity."

"Purity" flour may cost a little more, but is more than worth the difference. Try it. Watch results both for quality and yield.
