Which of these men uses the AutoStrop Safety Razor?

Take a look along the line and pick him out. Judging from appearances they all use the AutoStrop. It's smooth-shaving comfort brings a smile to every man's face.

In Camp, on Transport, in the Trenches a man is far from the corner store, and he needs a dependable razor, one which sharpens its own blades and doesn't go dead on his hands. The AutoStrop is more than a razor, more than a safety device. It strops, it shaves, and is cleaned without taking anything apart, without even removing the blade. And like a perfectly stropped ordinary razor, the blade improves with use.

Would you go the Front with a rifle which would play out after firing ten shots, or a pipe which would be no good after filling it a few times? Then what about your razor? Will you be forced to grow a beard because it hurts to shave, or will you take an AutoStrop with you and be perfectly independent of new blades, (because you can strop them) and thus be equipped for the entire campaign.

WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XVIII.
"I've Found Him!"

"All right!" she exclaimed. "What will you have?" and, tossing down a glass of champagne, she sang, with a "go" and a spirit which would have won her as much applause at the Palace as her trapeze business, one of the popular songs of the day.

Her audience clapped, and knocked the table—very much, dear reader, for all their aristocratic refinement, as the audience at a "friendly lead" in one of the stunts would have done; but Seth remained silent, his eyes fixed on the table-cloth.

"My cousin don't like that kind of thing," she said, without glancing at him. "This is more in his style," and in lower tones she sang a song in some gibberish which was unknown to all but Seth, whose eyes flashed, his face did not move a muscle.

"What language is that, Bella?" asked Sir Harry, with a laugh, as the applause subsided. "Italian? Spanish? It sounded like the last, I fancy."

"Never your mind," she retorted. "It's a lingo my cousin understands, so he's cleverer than you."

Then she broke out into the last comic ditty, and had them worked up to a pitch of languid delight, when suddenly—so suddenly that her words came into the middle of the chorus (in which they all joined) and could be heard above it—she said, sharply:

"That's enough, I'm tired. You can go."

"Oh, but by Jove! It's early yet, Bella!" remonstrated the young lord. "Early or late, I'm tired," she retorted, with a smouldering savageness. "You haven't been hanging by your heels or doing the big drop, or you'd be tired. Anyway, I'm tired of you. Baby, it's time you were in bed. Good-night, all of you."

"Come on, she'll be in one of her tantrums in another moment," said Sir Harry, in an undertone.

They laughed, got their hats, and, wishing her good-night, sauntered out, his lordship lingering a moment to pay the bill—Seth eyeing the pile of gold, as the waiter deftly swept it up, with a keen hunger—and the two were left alone.

"Shut the door," said Bella to the waiter; then, when it was closed behind him, she sank into the chair, and leaned her head on her hand.

She waited with the same impassive silence, and it almost seemed that she had forgotten him, when suddenly she raised her head and looked at him. Her face had grown pale and haggard, and there was a weary, worn look in her expressive eyes.

"Well!" she said. "What have you followed me for? How did you find me?"

He looked at her with an expression half-sullen, half-threatening. "Find you! Yes, I'd trouble enough. I've been looking for you for months. I might have known you'd come to London."

"You might," she said, with a tired kind of contempt. "But London's a big place."

"Yes, I shouldn't have found you even now, if I hadn't seen a likeness of you in one of the shop windows."

"Ah, yes! I see!" she said, shutting her lips tight. "And now you've found me you want money, I suppose?"

"Of course," he assented, roughly. "And suppose I don't choose to give it to you?" she demanded.

"Then," he began, but he stopped as she sprang to her feet and looked down at him with her black eyes flashing angrily.

"Look you here, Seth!" she said, slowly, and between her white, even teeth. "You know me by this time, and you know whether you can frighten or bully me. You tried it once, and you know the result! I'd rather die!"—she caught up one of the knives and flung it down again with a gesture of defiance—"than be the slave of any man, least of all of you!"

He took a bunch of hothouse grapes from the plate, and picked them off one by one, keeping his small, dark eyes fixed on her watchfully.

"I'd rather die!" she repeated. "If you think because I'm up in the world you're going to live on the money I risk my life for, you're mistaken. I'm not afraid of you, Seth; I'm not afraid of any man living—"

"Cept one," he remarked, quietly, watching her keenly.

"It's a lie!" she retorted. "I wasn't afraid of him, and you know it! Afraid! No, it's him that has cause to fear, and to fear me!" She shook herself with a catlike motion. "But I don't want to speak of him. The time'll come when I'll show you, and him too—but that's neither here nor there. You've come after me for money, and I've told you that you won't get any. I've done with you and yours—"

"No gyp can get clear of her people," he said, as if he were stating an established fact beyond question.

She laughed defiantly. "That's rubbish," she said, promptly. "All that nonsense is dead and gone. What, do you think I'd own a set of dirty tramps?"

He sprang to his feet, his face flushed for the first time.

"You better keep that between your teeth, my girl," he said, threateningly. "Then don't you drive me to it," she retorted in a more subdued tone. "How much do you want—five pounds?"

He sank back in his chair, and resumed the grapes with a laugh. "I want twenty times as much."

Her eyes flashed down on him. "Then you may go!" she said, resolutely. "A hundred pounds!" scornfully. "Why should I give it to you—what harm can you do me?"

"Perhaps I can do you some good. Oh, I don't want you to give it to me for nothing. I'll sell you something fair and square."

"You'll sell me something?" she repeated, frowning. "What do you mean? Speak out."

"All right," he said, tossing the grape-stems on the cloth. "I'll sell you some news, my girl."

"News!" she echoed, leaning forward, her eyes fixed on his face.

"Yes," he said, with a confident nod. "News you'll be glad to pay me more for than I've asked. I've found him."

She sprang upright, and, clutching his arm, bent down till her face, deadly white, was close to his, her black eyes flaming with intense excitement.

"You've—you've found him!" she breathed.

"I have," he said, coolly, shaking his arm free of her steel-like clasp.

"Come outside!"—he glanced at the door—"come out of this, and I'll tell you!"

CHAPTER XIX.

"Love Came Too Late."

Mr. Bartley Bradstone, as he left the garden after his remarkably unpleasant interview with Harold Faradeane, decided to strike while the iron was hot. He had got the net round Olivia; he resolved to draw it tight. From that evening he kept a close guard on himself, and his manner changed—for the better. In fact, to the casual observer he would have passed as a remarkably good-tempered man. He was polite to the servants, deferential to the squire, attentive to Miss Amelia, and to Olivia was devoted and reverential.

Not only the Grange people but outsiders noticed the change.

"Bradstone has improved since his engagement," said Lord Carfield. "But daily intercourse with Olivia Vanley would tame a savage and educate a bear!"

He watched Olivia as a cat does a mouse, and she was quite afraid of expressing a desire for anything, lest he should rush off and procure it for her.

To Harold Faradeane, too, his manner was quite friendly; and he had plenty of opportunity for showing it, for Faradeane came often to the Grange now.

Sometimes he would walk in after breakfast, sometimes before they had finished. In the latter case, he would sit and talk with the squire until the treat was over; then go round the stables with him, or ride over to some farm on the estate. And Olivia noticed that whenever Harold Faradeane came her father's face brightened, and lost something of its anxious look. In fact, the old man had conceived a great liking for the handsome, grave-voiced owner of The Dell, a liking that grew day by day into a warm friendship.

To Olivia, Faradeane's bearing was one of quiet, respectful courtesy. At first the color had risen to her face, and her heart had leaped at his approval; but though his appearance always sent a thrill through her, she learned to master her emotion, and greeted him as calmly as he greeted her.

Sometimes he would be persuaded to walk over and dine with them, and on those occasions she put on one of her best frocks, and was more than usually careful with the thick coils of hair which nestled like a crown of silk on her shapely head. Often she stood before the glass when her maid had left her, and looked at herself with a strange, absent air, seeing not the reflection of her own face, but his, as she recalled it on the day he had bent over her and taken her in his arms.

Then she would sigh heavily—and ah! so wistfully and wearily—and go down to the drawing-room to see his tall, patrician figure and handsome face beside the plebeian one of Bartley Bradstone, her future husband.

All through the dinner Bartley Bradstone would covertly watch the two, even while he was apparently engaged with his plate or in talk with the squire; but his sharp, suspicious eyes never detected the slightest hint of any understanding between her and Faradeane. Always pleasant and courteous, sometimes witty and amusing, Faradeane never singled her out for any special attention of any kind; and Bartley Bradstone guessed nothing of the scene in the woods, had no idea of the effect upon Olivia which every word of Faradeane's, every smile of his, produced.

The days sped on without anything of consequence occurring, until Bartley Bradstone struck.

One evening, just after the post had come in, Olivia went into the study to get a fresh supply of notepaper, and found the squire pacing up and down, with an ashen face and tightly-drawn lips. In his trembling hand was an open letter, which, at her entrance, he crushed up and thrust into his pocket.

"Papa!" she said in a low, anxious voice, and going up to him instantly, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing, nothing, dear!" he said, and his voice sounded harsh and strained. "That is, I have had a troublesome letter."

"Let me see it, dear," she said, putting her arms round his neck.

"No, no!" he said, hurriedly. "It—it is nothing you would understand; only a business matter."

"But let me see it, dear," she pleaded. "I may be able to help you; at any rate, I can share the trouble with you," she added, sweetly.

But he shook his head. "No, no; you could not help me. It—it is an old affair, that has cropped up; it will be all right, but it has taken me by surprise. Leave me now, dear. Bartley is waiting for you."

"Shall I tell him to come to you? He understands business, at least," she added, with a touch of bitterness he did not notice.

"No," he said, with a faint tinge of color coming into his white face. "Why should we worry him? Go now, dear; I would show you this letter if it could do any good, but it could not."

A Paris Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair.

In Paris the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats, which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The French are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant dressing, and is sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50 cents.

Everyday Etiquette.

"I spent the week end at the lovely country home of the Deans, and I feel so sad to think I cannot return their hospitality. You see I have no home to entertain my friends in. I do wish I could show my appreciation," sighed Ruth.

"I should think it would please your hostess to send her one of the latest books, or a box of chocolates, or perhaps a few sheets of music, or a late record for the graphophone, as all of these mentioned articles are inexpensive, and yet difficult to get in the country," suggested her girl friend.

Silk girdles trimmed with fur promises to be in favor for autumn.

Soft girdles tied to the left of the center in front, and caught with a rose or two, make a pretty finish to the waistline of many of the newest dresses.

There is no material more serviceable in that it does not muss and is not easily soiled, than silk jersey cloth, and this is what many of the newest children's dresses are made of.

FRIDAY, September 1, 1916.

Von Hindenburg.

It is not without reason that the London papers regard with satisfaction the crisis in Germany that has resulted in the dethronement of the royal favourite Falkenhayn and the elevation in his place of the popular idol Hindenburg. Not that there is cause for rejoicing at the appointment itself, for Hindenburg has given proof of far greater abilities than his rival; but there is a wealth of meaning in the mere fact that it was possible. Matters must be desperate indeed when popular feeling has acquired strength enough to bend and break the imperial will. Nor could the agitation have been confined to the people, great though their idolatry of Hindenburg is; it must have found considerable echo in the ranks of the army and in the supreme army councils. There is good reason to believe that it did. Last January Germany still strongly held the initiative and choice of directing it. Broadly, the choice lay between "finishing Russia" and breaking through in the West. She chose wrongly, disastrously. Verdun was the colossal blunder of the war. It was followed by another almost as great, the Trentino offensive. To both adventures Hindenburg was strongly opposed, and their failure has vindicated his judgment. It is the hour of his triumph, but a triumph that brings with it the fruits of the errors he sought to prevent.

The surmises of the London papers concerning his immediate plans, though merely conjectures, are founded upon a good knowledge of his methods and strategy. Two prophecies, radically different, are made. One is that he will put into execution his plan of shortening the far-flung lines. We think the former can be dismissed as too improbable. It is six months too late. We need not concern ourselves to speculate what would have happened if Hindenburg had had his way when he wanted it; it is enough that he did not, and that Russia has come by the route which with such effect that we have won Roumania, and probably Greece, over to our side. Austria's plight is such that once appreciable progress is made by Russia and Roumania south of the Carpathians, the armies north of them must fall back. Lemberg will be evacuated and as a consequence Kovel also. The extreme danger, therefore, of pushing the attenuated line from Riga to Brest-Litovsk further east is apparent. Rather do we expect to see the whole line fall back very soon to a much stronger defensive position, because a much shorter one.

The other alternative, a falling back in the West, is far more probable—in fact, it will have to come sooner or later. And we can well believe that it will need a personality like Hindenburg's to still the German people while the process is going on. The most interesting question to the Allies is how far such a retirement can be carried out, and with what success. It is familiar enough in the East, but there has been nothing of the sort on the very different Western front since it first assumed the position that it has preserved almost unaltered for two years. If the Germans withdraw from the salient on the Somme, say from Arras to St. Quentin, they may carry out the movement successfully and take up another and shorter position. On the other hand, it may not be so easy. It cannot be done without much of the open fighting for which the Allies are spooling. The moral effect upon Germany of such an admission of defeat would be tremendous; what remains to be seen is whether the British and French could add to it a military effect which would not need the assistance of any other factor whatever to bring about the complete overthrow of the German arms in the field.

Rev. Bro. Kennedy.

We understand that Rev. Bro. A. P. Kennedy, of the Mount St. Francis Order of Christian Brothers, will be leaving here permanently, either tomorrow evening by the Red Cross steamer or by Sunday's express, en route to New York, where he has been appointed a member of the Executive Council of the Order of Christian Brothers, the best known and esteemed Christian Brother in the country. He taught school here for thirty-three years, during which period he was Superior of the Order for several years. He made countless friends in the community amongst all classes and creeds, and for many years was a member of the C. H. E. Board. His final departure from our shores will be lamented by the pupils of the Christian Brothers' schools to-day and deeply regretted by the thousands of ex-pupils who now occupy positions of trust and emolument in the various walks of life, and who always sought and cherished his kindly advice. However, his loss here will be a gain elsewhere. Bro. Kennedy's many friends wish him a fond good-bye and God-speed.

Canada Not Yet Exhausted.

Krenz Zeitung (Berlin).—We must warn the public against looking at the situation too optimistically. England has developed during this war a vigour and energy such as she never has shown before in her history, not even in the Napoleonic wars. Nations are asked to believe that she will give up the whole enterprise before she is completely defeated and before all her means of fighting are exhausted. Herr Morant believes that this is a war of exhaustion against England; that she cannot produce more recruits than are necessary to drag the war along; that India can hardly provide more recruits than are required to fight in Mesopotamia, Egypt and Salonica; and that Canada and Australia are already exhausted of men. This view to say the least, is optimistic out of all proportion to reality. There are no grounds at all to warrant the conclusion that Canada cannot send any more troops; on the contrary, the dispatch of troops from the Colonies still continues. Besides, South Africa will also send troops to Europe immediately the campaign in East Africa is finished. It is not without reason that British statesmen speak of the rich sources of supply in men and material within the Empire. England, moreover, is still very strong as regards finances, and even Russia and Italy are not yet exhausted financially. We must pay no attention to any rumors about England's "exhaustion" until there are positive signs of it. Not merely are any such signs quite lacking at this moment, but on the contrary everything goes to show that England is still resolved to go on fighting with all her might.

Caught Red Handed.

Shortly before last midnight a 40 year old laborer was caught getting away with a full barrel of corned beef from the store of James C. Baird, on George Street, by Sergeant Savage and Constable Simmons, who had been lying in ambush for the burglar, and pounced upon him when they saw their own time. The accused was brought to the lock-up and was held 210 or 30 days this morning by Judge Morris.

Passing of Hon.

H. J. B. Woods.

One of St. John's most exemplary citizens in the person of Hon. Henry J. B. Woods entered into his rest early this morning at his residence on King's Bridge Road. Jaundice was his complaint and he suffered from many severe attacks during late years. Deceased reached the advanced age of 73 and his lengthy career was marked by honour and integrity. Born in St. John's, October 20th, 1842, he was the son of the late John and Mrs. Woods. He was educated at the General Protestant Academy. He first received his commercial training in the office of W. H. Thomas & Co., later entering the office of his father, Mr. John Woods, who was at one time here a large ship-owner, coal merchant and lumber dealer. In 1880 he became a partner in the firm which subsequently did business as John Woods & Son. Then Mr. Woods entered the political arena and was twice elected in the Whiteway Government as representative for Bay de Verde district and appointed to the Executive Council with the portfolio of Surveyor-General. Some fifteen years ago he retired from public life and accepted the position of Postmaster-General, which important post he filled with credit and efficiency up to the hour of his demise. In fact it may be said that he died in harness. Mr. Woods was recognized in this community as a man of ripe experience, keen observation and withal a high character. There was no more active worker in the city. He was prominently identified with Newfoundland Methodism and held the responsible position of Hon. Secretary to the Board of Governors of the Methodist College for nearly a half century and was one of the most active workers for the well being of that institution. He was an active member of Cochrane Street Methodist Church and was Secretary for many years of the St. John's and Newfoundland Auxiliary Bible Society. Mr. Woods also occupied the position of Superintendent of the large and flourishing Sunday-School associated with Cochrane Street Church since its inception in 1882. His estimable wife, who is still living, was Hannah, daughter of the late John Bemister, Sheriff of the Northern District and for many years member of the Executive Government as Colonial Secretary and Receiver-General, under the Hoynes and Carter administrations. He is also survived by three brothers, Sydney and Chesley of this city and Rev. Alfred Woods, of Boston, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. William Bulley, of the Western States, and Mrs. Joseph Pippy, this city; also seven daughters, Miss Millicent Woods, Mrs. Arthur Peters, Mrs. Arthur Mews, Mrs. A. Marshall, Mrs. E. Lindsay, Mrs. (Rev.) Peter Bryce and Mrs. (Rev.) Rice, besides a large circle of friends. The Telegram extends its deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

A Pimply Face or Poor Complexion Quickly Restored
 Thousands of young men and women would be handsome and attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lotions and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These disfiguring blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.
 A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cures come from a blood-purifying medicine like Ferreroze. The minute Ferreroze strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expelled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutriment and health giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferreroze complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system carrying health, energy, and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in physical strength, an all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferreroze to-day—Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

German Prisoners Recaptured
 One Declined to Surrender and was Shot Dead.
 Amherst, August 25.—Three of the German prisoners, who escaped on Wednesday from the train while being conveyed to the government experimental farm, have been caught. One was secured last night on the road near Nappan. To-day the farm party were sent out as usual with the guards, in charge of Lieutenant White. A sharp watch was kept, and Lieutenant White discovered that after their dinner, which is prepared at the cook house, quite a quantity of food was left. He at once got in communication with Colonel Morris, the officer commanding, who instructed him to quietly have three men on guard.
 The men concealed themselves in the cook house, and within twenty minutes after the party had left, two of the escaped men came out of the nearby woods and opened the door, only to be met by the armed guard, who ordered them to surrender. One of them did so, but the other, though repeatedly warned and ordered to stop, made for the woods, where one of the guards shot him through the head, killing him instantly.
 The four men who escaped belonged to the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm. One of them, August Meyer, was one of the men recaptured after tunneling their way out last January.

Belvidere Orphans' Collection.

"He Who Gives to the Poor Lends to the Lord."

How often, dear reader, have we read or heard these words and what effect have they had on our generosity? No doubt we have heard them repeated many times, but with our customary indifference we have given them merely a passing notice, we have pondered for a while but soon forgot. However, as we approach the first Sunday of September, we are annually reminded of the Collection to be taken up in the Catholic Cathedral and Protestant Churches for Christ's Poor who are being attended to, and looked after by the good Sisters of Mercy at Belvidere Orphanage. In this Institute one finds children of all ages—from the babe of tender years to the grown-up girl, who deprived of a kind father or loving mother were thrown on the world, and must long ago have come to ruin, morally as well as physically were it not for the care of these good Sisters, who have provided a home and a shelter for these destitute ones.

It is beyond question, that there have been made many demands on our people during the year; still we feel sure and have no hesitation in saying that no demand is so great, no request so urgent, no object so deserving our consideration and our assistance as the support of the Orphans at Belvidere. Every one—at least every head of a family knows full well how difficult it is to make the two ends meet in the upkeep of the household nowadays. Judge then for yourselves, what the labours of the Sisters must be to provide for those who have been deprived of the bread-earner, and thrown on the hard, cold world unable to do for themselves. "The poor you have always with you." Our Blessed Redeemer has left them as a legacy to his Church, and true to her charge she has never neglected even the least of her band, but has spared no pains to make ample provision for their upkeep and to do all possible to alleviate their sufferings and to compensate for her care and attention for the loss which the poor ones have sustained. Following then the example of our Foreign Mother, Holy Church, let us give freely and generously of this world's goods which we may possess to the Orphans' Collection, and we may rest assured that when the hour of reckoning comes that He, who has said "Since you have done it to one of these the least of My brethren, you have done it unto Me," will not forget our little sacrifice made for the Orphans, and will reward us a hundred fold in the Kingdom of Heaven.—Com.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous and artificial light may be performed under the Welsbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and draw in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rush of the currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air. Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom appreciably greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-lighted rooms is frequently lower. jly17,m,w,f

Local Stokers Trouble-Givers.

The incessant trouble given by local stokers to ship-owners, who suffer considerable expense and inconvenience thereby, gives rise to the likelihood of foreigners being brought here to replace the Newfoundlanders to do duty in the stokeholds of steamers. Although stokers in Canada, excepting those in important services, are paid less than the men engaged on local shipping, yet to man the latter is sometimes next door to impossible and when the local stokers do sign on they invariably hang up steamers.

Those Foolish Hates.

By RUTH CAMERON.

she intensely disliked.

Hence the expression. And such an expression! Her mouth drew down at the corners, her whole face became sour and disagreeable instead of sweet and serene. The change was startling and saddening. She wouldn't admit she hated her.

It showed what havoc the habit of hate can work when indulged. Perhaps that is too strong a word. I am sure she would not admit she hated that girl. If she admitted anything it would only be that she disliked her.

Hate is an ugly word, and one to which we do not like to plead guilty. If anyone asked you how many people you hated, you would probably say, "No one," yet there might be a great many people whom you would freely admit you disliked.

Suppose then, we call it the habit of dislike. Under either name it is a terrible habit. Nothing sours the disposition more quickly than to indulge in it. She Disliked the Girl At The Drug Store.

I once knew a naturally sweet-tempered woman, who fell into the habit. She conceived all sorts of dislikes and she let them fill a big place in her mind and heart. Some were caused by some slight, real or fanciful. Others were utterly unreasoning, and directed against people who shouldn't have mattered a particle to her.

For instance, she got a "hate" on one of the girls at the nearest drug store, and would walk three blocks farther to do an errand to avoid meeting her.

Her life was rather empty and she let these dislikes fill a large place in it. She was always saying, "I can't bear so-and-so," or uttering some little sarcastic remark when the name of any one of her bete-noirs was mentioned. You can't think how the habit changed her, how unlovely it made her appear.

Her Life Was Too Empty. And then, a great trouble entered that too empty life and proved anew the old adage about clouds and linings, for it drove all the meannesses and littlenesses out.

The older one grows, the less one can afford to be dominated by dislike.

Youth covers a multitude of sins. Old age uncovers them. Don't let the dislike habit get hold of you.

Drive it out when you first discover yourself indulging in it. There are some people whom we just can't like, but we needn't dislike them. We needn't think about them. Don't give them the power over your thoughts that you give to anyone you dislike. That is doing them too great an honor and yourself too great a harm.

Remember, "Malice drinks one-half its own poison."

"To Proud to Fight" Explained by Lewis

Senator Says President Merely Adapted an Ancient Quotation Signifying Magnanimity.

(Special to The New York Times) Washington, Aug. 10.—The statement by Charles E. Hughes at St. Paul yesterday that "we are not too proud to fight," an allusion to a remark made by President Wilson in a speech in Philadelphia on May 19, 1915, four days after the Lusitania was sunk, roused the fire of Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois when he read it in his newspaper this morning and led him to make some remarks in debate later in the Senate on the meaning of the original sentiment. Mr. Lewis went into the derivation of the expression, "too proud to fight," and gave President Wilson praise for using it.

"We who admire the independent intelligence of Judge Hughes," said Senator Lewis, "deplore that he has surrendered to the yelp and bark of Blanche, Sweetheart, and Tray in the refrain of 'To proud to fight' in their attack upon President Wilson, charging the use of the expression as a confession of weakness or cowardice on the part of the President, speaking for himself and his country. I had hoped that Judge Hughes might be saved from the exhibition of ignorance displayed by so many lesser but anxious assailants of that which they did not understand.

"The expression 'too proud to fight,' used in Philadelphia by the President to an audience of courageous, Christian people was the adaptation of an old quotation from the classics—ancient as the Scripture. Its meaning is known to be that of a brave people, filled with the consciousness of their right and their superior strength, were too proud to fight when a concession of what was right would bring justice to all—too proud to use brute strength to overcome a weak people when, through an understanding, on the basis of humanity, the rights of all would be preserved and the friendship of all maintained. The President presumed on the intelligence of his audience to understand.

"The expression is an adaptation of the line from the Latin, 'non dimicare est vincere,' meaning 'not to fight is to conquer.' Lord Chatham used it on Jan. 20, 1775, in Parliament, in his speech on the removal of the English troops from Boston. There he applied the 'too proud to fight' adage to the condition of America in her weakness compared with Great Britain, as our strength is compared with Mexico's. Said Chatham: 'Ally the ferment prevailing in America by removing the obnoxious, hostile cause—obnoxious and unserviceable—for their merit can only be in action. "Non dimicare est vincere."

"Charles Sumner, in the United States Senate, in the Trent affair, sustaining, on Jan. 7, 1862, President Lincoln, who had declined to permit a controversy over a principle contended for by an opponent, fixed in international law, but which our nation had in haste violated, and which, had we gone to war, would have involved us in a conflict to establish that which we knew was not the principle of right but the principle of force, said: 'In this surrender—it such it may be called—the national Government does not even "stoop to conquer." It simply lifts itself to the height of its original principle. The early efforts of its best negotiators, the patriot trial of its soldiers * * * may at length prevail."

"Concerning this speech of Mr. Sumner, in his adaptation and construction of the phrase, 'too proud to fight,' one of his American historians, Mr. Morse, has this to say: 'The speech was generally approved by men of all parties on this side of the ocean. It smoothed the ruffled sensibilities and turned apparent humiliation into triumph.'

"I often regret that President Wilson cannot find it compatible with his sense of the dignity of his position to sometimes enter into explanations—not that he should descend to make defense where accusation is made from sources absurd and ridiculous, but that he should demonstrate to the great mass of his fellow-mankind how, prompted by malevolence in some instances and by ignorance in others, the sources of the assaults upon him do not wish a just discussion of real issues.

"As the present campaign progresses, let us all hope that, out of respect to the dignity of the contest, there may be an end to the display of frenzy or foolishness, indefensible malice, and further unnecessary ignorance."

McDONNELL—BONIA.

On Thursday morning, at 9.30, at St. Joseph's, Salmonier, Miss Mary Joseph McDonnell, daughter of Margaret and Francis McDonnell, and Mr. Alfred Bonia, son of William Bonia of St. Mary's, were united in Matrimony by Rev. J. Rawlins, P.P., St. Joseph's, after Mass in the Parish Church.

The bride was prettily attired in white embroidered voile, with veil, and wreaths of lily of the valley, and carried a bouquet of natural flowers. She entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, and was attended by her sisters, Misses Sarah and Clara McDonnell, and Mary Ryan, who were neatly attired in white.

The groom was supported by his brother, Peter Bonia, and William and Michael McDonnell, both cousins of the bride.

After the ceremony the party drove to the residence of the bride's parents where breakfast was served to a large number of friends.

The day was spent merrily and at 4 p.m. the newly married couple attended by some friends left for their future home in St. Mary's, where they were heartily welcomed by the parents and friends of the groom.

The many and valuable presents received by the bride were proofs of the esteem in which she was held. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Bonia many years of wedded happiness.

CHARLES AND I.
I met Charles Hughes in Estes Park, where large and rocky mountains be; and I shall treasure each remark that this great man addressed to me. The gems of thought from great men's lips are the pearls we humbler men should prize, nor can the passing years eclipse the observations of the wise. "I shall be glad when summer's ceased," he said; "the heat has been a strain; but now the wind is in the east, and I predict we'll soon have rain. In May and June it rained too much, and then the siege of drought began; wheat shriveled at the hot wind's touch, and corn appears an also ran. The talk of issues never stops, and issues oft have little worth; I think the weather and the crops are all that count for much on earth. If we have rain when rain's desired, and sunshine when such shine we need, man gets all things he has desired, and all our theories run to seed. In politics man's toll is vain; his problems vex him, then they pass; give us a million-dollar rain, and nothing else will cut much grass."

LONDON, Aug. 31. Bulgarian regiments, says a dispatch, attacked the Serbians in close formation after the German style, near Lorowitz, and suffered severely. BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Aug. 31. It was officially announced to-day

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Words of Encouragement to Childless Women.

Motherhood is woman's natural destiny, but many women are denied the happiness of children simply because of some curable derangement.

Among the many triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its marvelous power to overcome such derangements, as evidenced by the following letter:—

Worcester, Mass.—"I suffered from female ills, and was advised to have an operation, but a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and who has six children, told me to try it. It has helped me so much that I am now well and have a baby boy who is the picture of health, and I thank the Vegetable Compound for my restoration to health."

—Mrs. BERT GARVEY, 20 Harker St., Worcester, Mass.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice—it will be confidential.

that the British casualties, killed, wounded and missing in all theatres of the war during the month of August, totalled 4,711 officers and 123,234 men.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Aug. 31. A British official reads: In the vicinity of the High Wood to-day, the enemy left his trenches, intent on attack, but was stopped by our machine gun fire and no attack developed. There was some minor activity of little importance on both sides about Souville St. Vaast and Loos salient early this morning; also heavy bombardments at various sections during the day. Among the prisoners mentioned in this morning's communication are eight officers.

NO CHANGE.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 31. An official issued this evening says there has been no change in the Western Russian and Caucasus fronts.

VIGOROUS PROTEST ADDRESSED TO RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT.

BERLIN, Aug. 31. The German Government, according to the Overseas News Agency, has addressed a vigorous protest to the Russian Government against the barbarous treatment to prisoners of war, asking for an immediate cessation thereof. It is announced that if a satisfactory answer is not received from the Russian Government after a fixed date, reprisals will be taken by the German Government.

WIN AND LOSE.

PARIS, Aug. 31. The Germans attempted a bold stroke in Furroy forest, in Lorraine, last night, but were immediately thrown out of a French trench they had penetrated, it was officially announced to-day. The night was calm on the greater part of the front.

EXPLORERS CRUISING.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31. Officers of the American Museum of Natural History have been advised that Donald B. MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, who left here in 1913 in search of Crockerland, is expected to arrive with the remaining members of his party at St. John's, Nfld., or Sydney between Sept. 20th and Oct. 1st. He will be accompanied by Dr. Hovey, who was in charge of the relief expedition sent by MacMillan on board the power schooner George B. Cluett, in 1915. The explorers are returning on the Danish steamer Danmark, chartered for the purpose by the American Museum of Natural History.

Your Boys and Girls.

If it is impossible to nurse the baby, the best substitute for the mother's milk is cow's milk, properly modified. The formula for modifying it may vary according to the needs of the individual baby, and it is usually desirable to consult a physician on this point.

If you do not wish to do this, you might follow a formula recommended by an authority on the care of children. For a baby of two months the following will be sufficient for the six or seven feedings given during the day: Cream, six ounces; skimmed milk, six ounces; boiled water, twenty ounces.

Most people think it undesirable to sweeten the baby's food if he will take it without sweetening. If he has been used to being nursed and will not take the unsweetened milk, it is advisable to use sugar of milk, which may be bought at the drug store, instead of sugar. Whatever quantity is thought necessary, up to four level tablespoons, may be used. As the baby grows older, two ounces of skimmed milk may be added, gradually, every month. For each ounce of milk added, an ounce of boiled water should be omitted.

Board of Trade Fishery Reports.

Aug. 26th. From J. Butt (Blance Sablon to Forteau)—The fishery on this coast is about closed and the men have now started the making and drying of the catch. Twenty dories and skiffs and fifteen boats are fishing. Prospects are poor but there is plenty of herring. The total catch is 12,650 qts. with 150 for last week.

Aug. 26th. From B. Perry (Catalina South Head to North Head)—The catch to date is 5770 qts. and for last week 120. Thirty dories and skiffs and ten boats are fishing. Squid is very scarce but some boats with a plentiful supply, find a good sign of cod on trawls. Prospects are poor.

Aug. 26th. From T. O'Brien (Pt. Amour to Red Bay)—The total catch is 3250 qts. and for last week 50. All the traps and most of the trawls have been taken in. Herring is plentiful and the nets average half a barrel daily. Dogfish are numerous and the weather is stormy. Thirty dories and skiffs are fishing but there is no sign of cod.

Rev. Dr. Jones Lectures to L. O. A.

Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Thomas and Deputy Chaplain of the Provincial Grand Lodge, L. O. A., delivered a most interesting lecture at Victoria Hall last night, when he told of his recent visit to the Supreme Grand Lodge of British America, where it was his privilege to attend as Delegate from Newfoundland. In an interesting and most realistic manner he described the various places he had visited, including Niagara and Toronto, the latter known as the Queen City of Canada. The Rev. lecturer spoke of the many prominent people he met at the Grand Lodge, and emphasized several of the most important topics which had come up for discussion, some of which were of great importance to the Empire.

Past Grand Master Morrison moved a hearty vote of thanks, which was seconded by Past Grand Master Hutchings and carried unanimously and enthusiastically applauded. The lecture, which was in aid of the benevolent funds of Leeming Lodge, was largely attended, and a handsome sum was realized.

If Your Throat is Husky, Catarrh May be Starting.

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards Catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach and does little but harm digestion. It's altogether different with Catarrh—It cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhzone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and Catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhzone. Get the large dollar outfit which includes the inhaler, it lasts two months and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes, 25c. and 50c., sold everywhere.

Fine Weather a Valuable Asset.

The weather has been exceptionally fine the past three days, thus enabling farmers and fishermen to reap rich harvests and it is a profit to the country at large as well. We learn from some of our most experienced local farmers that the hay and vegetable crops this season are as good as, if not superior to, those of any previous year. As regards the fishery, the aggregate catch in and around St. John's has been most successful on the whole, some making good voyages. Present weather conditions ashore. Present weather conditions are ideal for fish curing purposes.

Middle Cove.

[Written on hearing a New York tourist on the Stephano praising Middle Cove.]

Bowring Park is beautiful
As everybody knows
There in the summer season
Our citizens do go;
But to-day I heard a tourist
Remark that he did rove
To see the rustic scenery
Way down in Middle Cove.

"We've many pretty places
"In New York," the tourist said,
"But none are half so charming
"As that to which I was led."
"To-day from St. John's City
"A few miles down the shore,
"The beauty of 'tis scenery,
"I'll think on evermore."

The audience around him
In rapt attention stood
And listened as he spoke on
The charms of hill and wood,
Of dale and vale and mountain,
And birds singing in the grove,
Which Nature have bequeathed
To dear old Middle Cove.

"New York," said he, "is wealthy,
"But most of it is art,
"And it pertains to harden
"The nature of the heart;
"There's no place like the country
"To spend some happy hours
"And stroll among the green fields
"Mid the fragrance of the flowers."

How proud I felt to hear him
Extolling my dear home,
And this is but a sample
You'll hear about the foam,
Detailed by those who visit us,
And to such sweet spots did rove,
As the tourist, who on yesterday
Did visit Middle Cove.

Sept. 1, 1916. JAMES MURPHY.
