CIGHT DAYS' WEEPING AT CEN-TRAL AFRICAN WEBDINGS.

Anyone who set out to find the st peculiar people in the world uld have to go among the wilds of ntral Africa. There in the wirgin, wastes and forests are ckless wastes and broken bes who are almost completely un-ociated with marriage ceremonies Bahuma tribesmen in Ankole nda. usually purchases his wife by ens of a dowry of a certain numof cattle, which are paid to the ide's father. There is no native w forbidding him to have more than wife, but a man must be very

The women are unusually fat, as ulence is looked upon as a sign beauty. Girls, before marriage, not allowed to walk about, and are ouraged to drink as much milk they can in order that they may come as fat as possible, before their filanced husbands come to claim facin. The fatter they are the bigger marriage dowry the parents receive. Many of these women almost lose the power of walking.

A bride shows that she accepts the ridegroom as her husband by taking mouthful of milk and squirting it over him. Up to this time she has probably never seen the man, so that there is no question of love; expediency and custom alone prompt the parties to enter their new estate.

When the bridegroom brings his bride home she is accompanied by number of girl friends, who remain with her two or three days. When the bridegroom goes to see his bride the girl friends contest his entrance; they fight him and his companions biting and scratching them.

The pretended protest is very probably the remnant of an old custom of marriage by cauture, and the Rev. John Roscoe, in "The Soul of Central Africa" (Cassell), describes ceremony still more resembling those of the barbaric ages.

When, in the other case referred to the bridegroom goes to take away his bride a strong rope is produced by one of the bride's relatives and tied to the bride's leg. Sidee are then Thosen by members of the bride's and bridegroom's clans and a tug-of-Par takes place. The bride's clan truggle to retain their sister and the bridegroom's clan strive to carry her

During this contest the bride stands weeping because she is taken from her old home and relatives: it is the correct thing to do. The bridegroom stands by her, holding her hand, and when the final pull is given, in his favour, he slips the rope from her ankle and hurries her away.

At the age of four mo usually bespoken in marriage. Some father in another clan presents her parents with one or two cows and she is thereupon betrothed to his son. A girl is the special care of a mother, who gives her a name, taking her to the door and pointing out the four corners of the globe as the quarters from which her wealth comes.

Among another tribe—the Bageau the girls are not more than ten when they begin to prepare for marriage. This preparation consists of a lengthy and painful process of cutting marks in the chest and forehead. They carry about large needles with which they make the wounds. Ashes are then rubbed in, thick hard lumps being raised.

These markings the girl considers essential. Men too consider them as a sign of beauty in a wife. No man would think of marrying a girl who did not show these markings, and the girl is not admitted into the society of her elders until they are completin deadly enmity except during the festival, after harvest, where all feast and drink together for as long as the native beer lasts.

A young woman always sleeps across the foot of the bed of the King of the Bunyoro tribe, so that his Majesty's foot might rest against her and run no risk of touching the end of the bed, or of being exposed. In the early morning the girl gets up and anoints the king's toes.

The rain-makers of the Bunyoro often find it a hard task to keep their jobs. If they fail to bring rain when called upon, the king makes them sit in the broiling sun, where they have to eat specially salted food, which brings on agonies of thirst. When

Bird's Record Flight. THREE THOUSAND MILES WITH-

OUT A REST. a black-headed albatross, starting from a small Sollitary island near Japan, followed the steamship Wenatchee across the North Pacific for six days and seven nights. A too-hearty breakfast tossed to i by a passenger caused the albatross to turn back on the seventh morning, after it had escorted the vessel for three thousand miles.

The Wenatchee is a new boat, and in the open sea averaged seventeen knots per hour, but the storm bird did not tire. It flew in great circles round the steamer, and because of its peculiar black head, in contrast to the natural silver-white plumage, it was easily distinguishable from other thetrosses in the wake of the big Mid Hall and Snow.

The wind one stormy day roared in a gale, beating the ship with snow, hail, and rain, but despite the troubled elements the albatross continued to fly alongside, sometimes screaming shrilly. Many on board believed the bird alighted in the rigging at night, but the crew of the watches declared they observed the albatross flitting at intervals through the rays of the cabin's lights. Meat and bread tossed to the bird during the day were picked up from the waves without the great wings being furled.

Let the B. I. S. get through tonight and they will have gotten a good grip on the silverware for keeps. That is why the Guards are determined to stop their onward march, and behind them will be the full support and sympathy of the remaining seven teams in the league. It is thought that the biggest crowd in years will be present tonight to see the clash. No changes are reported so far in either lineup, but the Harps may switch their men around again so as to checkmate some of the Guards' speed artists. Mr. Hunt, the official referee will control the game which begins at 7.30 promptly.

Never was swimming more popular, and that is why the aquatic enthusiats want a swimming race on Regatta Day. This was always a most exciting event, and coming as it did at the interval it just filled the bill nicely. Come on, Big Chief, it's up to you.

Long Joe Murphy of the Cubs had the B. I. S. tied up in knots in last night's game for the Kilbride trophy presented by Sir R.A. Squires. Of the first 12 men to face him, he sent back 10 to the bench hitless. The game was intended to be five innings but the boys decided to give the fans a full ride for their fare and so stretched it out to seven. Two missed pep flies by Johnson and a passed ball by Keefe sent the Irishmen skyward and runs had been shoved across. It was not until the sixth that the Harps found Murphy's offering when they got two runs over. The game eventually ended with the Cubs 11 against 2 to the credit of the B.LS. Mr. Chesman controlled the game to everybody's satisfaction as usual, and Mr. Skinner looked after the scores.

(I.C.M.)

The tourist traffic of Newfoundland has had a great deal said and written in its favour, by those who were eminently competent to express an op present time there has not been as as was hoped for. Of course, some ten years ago, when that beautiful ship, sion, and that still more beautiful ship, the "Stephano," was added, the passenger traffic of Newfoundland generally, and the tourist traffic in particular, received the greatest im petus, it had hitherto received from any source. True it is, that many conflicting opinions had been expressed as to the utility of such palatial ships being placed on this route, but the fact of them being put there, was a literal and practical demonstration of the faith which the Red Cross Company had in the development of tourist traffic in Newfoundland.

The reader is aware, that those splendid ships, had only begun their career, and had just established their name, and the popularity of the route, when the war with its accompanying tragedies, disorganized passenger traffic, and demoralized society. Of the fate of those ships, we shall not now write, as the story is deeply im beded in the hearts of the people; and the tale of the tragedy has been bathed in tears indelible. The setback to tourist traffic, which the destruction of those ships meant, may not be estimated: but there cannot be any doubt whatever, that the loss has been very great, and that the trade and commerce of Newfoundland have suffered severely because of it. Those ships are now of the past; and what has been lost, may not readily be regained; but at the same time there still remains the undeveloped attractions of Newfoundland. The advantages which those attractions offer are worthy of wider publicity than they have hitherto received. But there must be development in this direction, and tourist traffic must some day turn to our shores. Our position is outstanding in this aspect, Garden Party on August 9th is that fog; nothing heard passing; Bar. and Newfoundland fills the bill as no other place can do. The advent of such a ship as the Silvia is therefore to be hailed with enthusiasm; and her arrival will surely mean a busy tourist season. Newfoundland needs development, and has scenic beauties as well the Tuesday's express for Hallfax and as her health-giving properties, should become better known. These conditions may be late in coming; but it not require the vision of a prophet to see, that as the century grows, the tourist traffic from such city as New York to the city of St. John's must develop. We believe that t is with vision before them, and with faith in the future of Newfoundland, that the Red Cross Steamship Company have commissioned the Silvia, and placed her in this service; hence to her agents "well done." To those who have travelled this route in for-

trip, the good ship Silvia is a welcome The trip itself is unique, and it affords sight-seeing, as well as seagoing, and presents sufficient of the ocean, to convey to lands-people an idea of what sea-faring life is like, and also affords opportunity for lovers of the natural and the rugged, to behold the headlands and capes, which have played such a prominent part in the colonization of North America. Besides all these, the trip is so equally divided, that there is no chance of monotony. The run from Export Co. St. John's to Halifax is usually com- S.S. The shipping and sights which meet the eye on the Hudson Sound, in the vicinity of New York, are alone worth a trip. Such a trip is both health-giving and educational, and whether it be made in part or on the round. it is money well spent. It is therefore pleasing to hear that large numbers of tourists are booking at New York, for the Silvia's first trip, and that the chances of the good ship being well patronized, and becoming very popular, and of this route becoming better established, because of being better known, are very encouraging. Newfoundland needs all the communica tion from outside, that can be brought to her, and St. John's needs all the accommodations, offers a resting trade she can get; and if we are to advance and if Newfoundland is ever to get out of the rut in which she. has too long been groping, then she must welcome to her shores every avenue of expansion and capital. We are not increasing as we ought to, Pet Evaporated Milk (full size), neither is our trade nor our commerce developing with any marked degree of advance.
