(The Golden Penny.) Our Colonial readers will this week note with interest the award of "The Golden Penny" "Medal for Bravery" to one of themselves, in the person of the Rev. C. W. Rose, B. A., of Port Mait-land, Nova Scotia. The incident which gained Mr. Rose not only this recog-nition, but also the Medal of the Roy-al Humane Society, took place on Lake Darling, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia. With the intention of visiting an island in the lake, six young men-put off in a rowing boat, and when some 300 yards out the boat was cap-sized, throwing them all into the wa-ter. Two of the men could swim a little, and started for land; two clung to the upturned boat, but the remain-ing two sank. Hearing the cries of those on the boat, Mr. Rose ran to the place, but could find nothing ex-cept an old punt partially filled with water and without oars, but into this he got, and, paddling with his hands, reached the scene of the accident. Here the two men on the bottom of the boat pointed out the spot whero their comrades had sunk in 15 ft. of water. At once diving Mr. Rose brought up one youth and got him in-to the punt, and again diving brought up the other. Both were, of course. -Resolutions were recently adopted by the Halifax Board of Trade asking that no government subsidy be paid unless the railway construction in the east begin at Moncton, that its export and import trade be through maritime province ports and that freight rates via Halifax and St. John be as low as via any other Atlantic ports. veek -St. John Globe:-Rev. Both were, of course, unconscious, but on being landed and properly treated recovered. Mr. Rose also saved the two men who had clung to the boat. It was a noble deed, per-formed at great risk, and showed that, even in this remote corner of the Em-pire, Britain's sons are possessed of that courage which is one of the char-acteristics of true manhood. Mistaken economy is almost a strict-ly feminine attribute, and it is one of the few things for which man is not re-sponsible. In most cases it is born with the woman. Cript, brings out the fact, known to all who use the temphone, that the low tones, and not the loud ones; are generally most effective in making the message understood. Father O'Hallaran had a telephone wit into the newspace in connection that some women are, have been, and always will be extravagant; but it is equally certain that a vast number more of them are only too economical. They are not, however, saving of their far less valuable pennies. It is said that a woman can not sharpen a lead pencil. It is true; but why can't she? Because she never has anything to sharpen one with. There is the carving-knife, of course, but there are the large, clumsy and suppos-edly sharp knives with which every well appointed kitchen is provided Then, too, there is the broken-bladed pocket-knife that the head of the instrument, and it was only the next day when Pat, dusting out the church, heard the ringing of the telephone bell. Taking down the receiver Patrick was pleased to hear Father O'Halloran's familiar voice asking him something or other about his work. In essaying to answer he remembered that his rever-ence was a long way off, and therefore he shouted into the transmitter at the ion't understand you, Patrick," aid the telephone. It don't understand you, Patrick," aid the telephone. Man't hear what you're saying, Pat-rick." The had by this time lost something of his patience, and as he stood gath-ering his breath for a fourth blast, he couldn't refrain from solliquizing in a low tone: "Ah, may the divil fly away wid the ould foo!!" But Pat to when heard Father O'Halloran's uoped the telephone like a hot po-to when heard Father O'Halloran's sors, although no one has made proverb about it. Possibly there is Possibly there is nothing in domestic life more exaperating than scissors that will not cut; yet, with the possible exception of the professional dressmaker, women persist in making the same pathies truggles, year in and year out, to haggle-no other word expresses it-our garments with scissors that will not actual suicide, at least to the purchase of a scissors by the wholesale. Then, there is the matter of nails. The masculine person that invented the lead-pencil story asserted, at the same time, that no wonan was ever able to hit the nail on the head. He was, in a measure, right, but wh? Only because it requires a skilled carpenter to drive the kind of nails that a with she hasn't nails; indeed, she has only too many. "'Weil,' said Gough, a little con-fused, i suppose the point of the story lies in the deftness with which the young man made the old one call himself an ass. "'But,' said Gough's friend, 'the old poet didn't mean that he was the ass. He meant that he was the horse.' Gough could say no more.

AN UNEXPECTED INFERENCE.

This valuable collection often weighs as much as two pounds. As every man knows, one can buy beautiful, smooth, new, shining nails of any desired size at the rate of five cents per pound, and it is truly sur-prising how many nails there are to the pound. Indeed, this fact alone should appeal to the bargain-hunting instinct that is supposed to lurk with-in every feminine bosom. Yet, how many women buy nails? Possibly six in each State-the rest use scrap iron. It is a proud moment in a woman's life when her best beloved asks for a string. It is a request that she has an atcipated, and the ball is ready. But, when a trusting man asks his woman kind for string, what does she get? A little, tightly wound wad of coton twine of varying thickness, tied every foot or so into knots with trail-ing ends lett long to preclude accident. The dear, economical little woman has spent four dollars' worth of time mak-ing a two-cent ball of string. If hand-led cautiously and wrapped a great many times around the bundle, the re-sult of her economy may hold out un-til the carrier of the bundle gets safe ly around the first corner, but the man has grave doubts. Of course he is too much of a gentleman to mention them; perhaps that is why so few woman re-alize that they are living in a world where it is possible to buy for ten ti One stormy night, when the roads were wellnigh impassable, a son of Erin came into a doctor's office and desired the dispenser of physic to go and see a friend who was "jis' a-dy-in'." This salt as found in commerce contains from 15 to 16 per cent. nitrogen; hence, in a dressing of 200 lbs. of this material to an acre we contribute to the land as much nitrogen as would be contained in 3 tons of good barn-yard manure and all this is in a soluble and immediate-ly available form. Being in this very soluble form, its effects are not last-ing and if the fertilizer is not prompt-

CLIMATIC DEFENCE.

Remember that sunshine and air

Remember that sunshine and air build up the health and defend one from colds. People cannot live in her-metically sealed boxes and those who sleep with their windows slightly open suffer less with colds and headaches than those who carefully exclude the air. Don't accustom yourself to too great carefulness about draughts. If you do you are sure to take cold whenever-and it won't be seldom-sitting or standing in a draft for a few minutes is unavoidable. Dress your-self sensibly with sufficient covering next your skin and then, unless you are an invalid, live an ordinary life of small risks like your neighbors. Thus you will enjoy the best of health and consequent happiness.
