Fredericton, N. B., Aug. 23.—Bliss Randall, in spite of the danger of the disease, who lately contracted anthrax while skinning some cattle which died of the disease, is undergoing treatment at Victoria Hospital here and a lingering illness from infection is causing members of the medical staff and trustees considerable anxiety.

The medical staff were asked by the time board to report the case, and four members met this morning and passed a resolution which they forwarded to the trustees. It set forth that the disease is very dangerous and that the patient should be kept in a room for strict isolation.

The trustees met this evening to take action on the report of the medical staff and heard a statement from Dr. Atherton, who has charge of the case. He admitted that the case was very dangerous, but contended that Randall's case was yielding to the treatment and there was not the slightest danger of the disease spreading.

He further stated that he would not be afraid to have the patient in his own home.

A difference of opinion among the doctors led the trustees in somewhat of a quandary and they decided to refer the matter to the health committee.

If the health committee should deem it inadvisable that Randall should longer remain at the Victoria Hospital he will be sent to the home of his parents, where the disease is entirely new to the medical profession here.

THE CONSERVATIVE MEETING

Upon reaching St. John in his tour of the Dominion Mr. Borden came into one of the constituencies soon to be the scene of the fighting atmosphere which is so essential to successful political campaign of a bye-election.

Mr. Borden made an effective fighting speech, saying what he had to say with that dignity and deliberation which characterize his discussion of public matters.

And here beyond any question Mr. Borden dealt upon questions which have stirred a great majority of the people of this country to indignation.

Mr. Borden, as he goes from coast to coast, will find everywhere a hearty endorsement of his proposal that Canada must have a clean administration, free from graft and crooked elections, and under which the people shall have that old-fashioned honesty in public life which they undoubtedly at heart desire.

It will be said, and with truth, that the Conservative leader, in this campaign of exposure of the party in power and of high profession as respects his own party, sets up for himself and his followers a high standard of conduct.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL AT HAMPTON OPENED MONDAY

Hampton, Kings Co., Aug. 23.—The new Consolidated School Building at Hampton is sufficiently advanced in the estimation of the temporary Board of Trustees, who have had charge of the construction to warrant its being opened on Monday.

Pursuant, therefore, to the provisions of the School Act, the chief superintendent of education has notified the secretaries of the uniting school districts—Hampton Station, Hampton Village and "Hendricks"—that these districts no longer exist, the term of office of their trustees is ended, and that the new Consolidated School District of Hampton is now established. It is understood that a public meeting will be called at once for the election of a permanent board of school trustees, to whom all the existing school property will be handed over.

Meanwhile, the chief superintendent has notified the temporary board to proceed to open the school and carry it on until the work, which is still uncompleted, is finished. There will be no public demonstration on the opening day. The school will be opened after the grounds are graded, the garden laid out, and the equipment is complete.

The building is a handsome structure of wood on stone foundation, two stories high in front and three in the rear, with a large Assembly Room in the roof. It contains two school rooms on the ground floor for primary pupils, each seated with fifty single desks. In the rear, and opening from a cross hall, are the Domestic Science, Laundry, and Manual Training, the former supplied with a large cooking range, closets, sinks and tubs, with hot and cold water, and the latter with work benches for pupils who take the manual course.

The upper part has also two school rooms on the front, one desked for forty-eight intermediate pupils, and the other for sixty pupils of advanced grade. In the rear are two other school rooms, which can be thrown into one by opening folding doors. These are unfurnished and are intended to be brought into use as the demand for accommodation increases.

The school is in charge of the Hon. G. B. F. Stewart, who has been in charge of the Charlotte Street School, Fredericton, for the past four years. His associates will be Miss Margaret Stewart, Miss Phoebe W. Robertson, Miss Louise Welton, and Miss Clara G. Turner, the two latter being the teachers of the Manual Training School and the Domestic Science respectively. Miss Stewart has done excellent primary work in the McDonald School at Kingston, for the past three years, and Miss Robertson, after a successful career in teaching, has just graduated in Arts, from the University of New Brunswick, having taken the full four years' course.

The number of pupils registered in the school districts now united, was about two hundred, but large additions are expected from outside districts.

The late Theodor Tilton, who boasted that he had never had a pipe, cigar or cigarette in his mouth, used to declare that the most inveterate smoker he ever knew was Sojourner Truth, a famous freedman reformer and lecturer. He was wont to tell how one day when the venerable dame, then about ninety years old, was on a visit to his house, she sat smoking her pipe by the chimney corner, when George W. Bungay, the author of several excellent anti-tobacco tracts, called to see her.

"Lawks, honey, how so!" she asked. "Because, Aunt," he rejoined, "you know that, according to the Good Book, tobacco is one of the things that defile, how do you expect to get into heaven with your breath defiled by tobacco?" "Lawks, honey," answered the old negro, "when I go to heaven I spect I leave my breff behind me!"

NOTE AND COMMENT

Two thousand sons and daughters of the Maritime Provinces attended a picnic in Calgary on Thursday. If they had "hustled" as hard here as they do there they probably would have been considerably better off in the East.

Mr. Taft is for tariff revision—but not now. He regards the tariff as needing a whole lot of improvement—but he would not touch it with a ten-foot pole until after election. By that time he and his friends may exhibit a more benevolent attitude toward the schedules.

The Montreal Gazette (Con.) objects to Mr. Borden's proposal looking to the nationalization of telegraph and telephone lines, while approving the rest of his platform. The Toronto Globe is enthusiastic over the public ownership plank which is in line with the policy of Mr. W. F. Maclean, M. P. The Montreal Star is disposed to think Mr. Borden rather too cautious.

The Montreal Star (Ind. Lib.) thinks well of portions of the Conservative leader's address, but feels that both parties lack high purpose and moral driving force. Mr. Borden is to speak in St. John next Monday, and in New Brunswick on the following day, and many New Brunswickers will thus have a chance to hear him.

A Paris journal publishes a story that King Edward and the Kaiser are planning the dismemberment of France, Germany and the remainder of the world. Much other nonsense is printed in France just now. The country is overwrought because of the occupation of a large territory, what will Germany say about it? Would not the strength expended in Morocco be better held in reserve on the German frontier?

Parisian journalists, and the public gives ear to them, puzzled as it is by signs of hesitancy on the part of the government, are full of indignation. They are full of indignation at the pouring into Morocco enough troops to make quick work of the Moors.

CHARLES HAMILTON CAPTURED SUNDAY

Found Near Sandy Point Road and Taken Home by His Brother—Nine Days Almost Without Food.

Having subsisted for nine days on nothing but a few berries to eat and without a place of shelter Charles Hamilton, of 111 Newman street, was captured Sunday near the residence of Robert Turner on the Sandy Point Road and was brought to the city in a weak and exhausted condition. Hamilton was also sighted on Saturday by his brother William and his brother-in-law, John McCutcheon, in the woods between Milldeville and the Sandy Point Road, and they got hold of him, but he escaped as they were calling for help.

Sunday the men led a large party out from the city, and taking up the trail where Hamilton had escaped they followed through the woods towards Sandy Point. Near Mr. Turner's place they spied the wanderer, and started to run after him. His strength, however, being all spent he threw up his hands and collapsed. A coach was sent for and he was brought to his home, and Dr. W. F. Roberts called to attend him.

TOWN SITES ON THE G. T. P.

A suggestion worthy of thought is made, regarding town sites along the Grand Trunk Pacific, by a correspondent of the Toronto Globe. In discussing the prodigious distribution of lands in the West he says that "whatever excuse there may be for giving farming lands away, there is none for giving town sites. Some day the town sites along the line of the Transcontinental Railway will be worth many hundreds of millions of dollars.

Should not the government retain or acquire all those lands and rent them, and let the public get the benefit of the values they themselves have created?"

The matter is one of immediate interest in New Brunswick. The Toronto Globe points out that "while the Dominion government is in a position to collect this enormous profit from the sales of town sites in the provinces included within the old Hudson's Bay Territory, the Provincial governments in British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and New Brunswick hold a similarly advantageous position in relation to the parts of the National Transcontinental Railway comprised within their respective crown domains. The opportunity to do something in this direction with the Temiskaming Railway, which is a purely provincial undertaking, has apparently been allowed to pass unimproved, but that is no reason why steps should not be taken at once to secure for the people of this province their just rights along the thousand miles of the eastern division of the Transcontinental Railway lying between Manitoba and Quebec. All town sites in that region should at once be appropriated, laid out, and allocated only to those who are willing to occupy them for residence or business purposes. There should be no town lots left vacant in the hands of speculators."

While the policy of free homesteads may well be continued for some time yet, in the Globe's opinion, "the policy of allowing private speculators to make all the profit on town sites never had a ghost of a reason to justify it. Thirty years ago Mr. Sandford Fleming, in his official report on the route of the Canadian Pacific Railway, recommended the appropriation of town sites by the government. Had his recommendation been adopted then and acted on ever since the revenue from this source alone would by this time have amounted to more than enough to pay off that large part of the public debt which represents the cost of developing the West and supplying it with railways. There will be another batch of town sites along the National Transcontinental Railway, and there will also be many along the Canadian Pacific and their branch lines, it is surely time for the Dominion government to make immediate provision for diverting to the public treasury the difference between the value of farm lands and urban lands respectively, less the expense of management. It is needless to point out that for the towns themselves, this policy would obviously be advantageous, for they would not have to suffer forever the inconveniences due to the defective plans of obtuse or selfish private exploiters of vacant areas."

MAINE AND ITS THIRST

Maine has had a prohibitory law since 1832, yet the Bangor Commercial says of conditions today: "The express companies are bringing carloads of intoxicating liquor into Maine every day and still the editors of certain daily papers have been making an effort to convince the people that the Sturgis deputies are drying up the fountain that intoxicates. This, when it is known that New Brunswick has been making an effort to enforce the prohibition law against parties bringing liquors to Maine for illegal sale."

The Commercial, of course, is opposed to the prohibitory law. It makes the old assertion that in Maine prohibition does not prohibit, and the facts warrant the statement, although the state seemingly pays more attention to enforcing the anti-liquor law than it devotes to all of the other laws on the statute book. A Portland newspaper has been urging upon Bangor the necessity for drying up "the fountain that intoxicates." The Commercial's rejoinder is that the official figures show a gain of 718 arrests for drunkenness in Portland during the past seven months of this year, more than were made in the same months of that city in 1906. In view of this fact the Bangor journal suggests that Portland, instead of worrying so much about Bangor, should put forth all its efforts in trying to dry up its own intoxicating fountain.

The Commercial apparently desires "an enforcement of the prohibitory law not in a radical, fanatical way, but by the exercise of reason and common sense." Presumably it wants something like the Scott Act as it is "enforced" in several counties of New Brunswick.

The matter is one of immediate interest in New Brunswick. The Toronto Globe points out that "while the Dominion government is in a position to collect this enormous profit from the sales of town sites in the provinces included within the old Hudson's Bay Territory, the Provincial governments in British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and New Brunswick hold a sim-

WHEN GOD FORGOT

By
WELLS HAWKS

(Copyright, 1907, by the New York Herald Company. All Rights Reserved.)

THE sun burned like a yellow flame before the bellows. It hung so low in the desolate sky that it seemed almost within reach. Its rays burned with the fury of a furnace, and all earth beneath was parched and withered. The alkali plain was white and motionless. The clouds were leaden. Rising on one side was a great barrier of rock, gray, creased and chiselled by the changeless centuries. Beyond, immeasurable stretches of plain, must white not stifling, heat flaming and scorching.

In the distance the heat rose from plain to sky like a cloud of steam. No tree, no bush, not even a leaf—nothing but the white choking earth. One who has crossed the seas has seen the rolling waves change from day to day, from green to blue and blue to green, sometimes capped with white, again as placid as an inland lake; but this was changeless plain, drear and cursed. Far up the wall of rock there was a place which looked as if some dripping molten mass had burned and seared a crevice. Closer, and it was a tiny stream of water, hot and steaming, falling to a pool that seethed and bubbled like a witch's caldron.

Night came and the glare and heat of the sun was gone. A swift wind rushed across the plain, driving the dust before it like a cloud. The moon came out, but its silver light seemed but to mock. Stars twinkled from the deadened sky, but the light was dim and all unmeaning. Day again, and, as if there had been no yesterday, the sun burned with a new fury. And with it all there was an awful silence, a quiet so dread that all life seemed to have ceased and gone away, leaving but a plain of driving dust and hellish heat.

And into this there came a man. Walking with a slow, uncertain step of near defeated nature, he crouched close to the rock to keep from the withering heat that burned the dust until he walked a path of fire. His face was worn and haggard—thirst and hunger stalked along as his companions—but still shining in his eyes was the light of hope.

"I am tired of the world," he said to himself. "I will seek one of the lonely places of earth where man does not disturb, where I may live in companionship with my soul."

He had believed that those who lived nearest nature were nearest God, and he was in God's desert. He leaned against the rock and drew his hand across his parched lips. His temples throbbed and he could hear his heart beat like one hears an engine in a mighty storm at sea. He scanned the plain—dust, heat beyond man's measuring. He looked far up the rocky wall and the sun's rays glared from it like the flames from blazing coals. He gazed into the sky, it was meaningless and pitiless. The silence closed about him like doors of iron. No other thing in all the world but him seemed alive. He closed his eyes and a great heart deep sigh shook his body. Then looking, scanning, searching the chartless, mapless, unknowable plain before him, he exclaimed:

"It is the country God forgot," and as he spoke a moving, indefinable something came before him in the distance. He threw himself to the ground and watched this dot of black, intensified by the limitless white, grow to shape. It grew, it moved, and came close, and he lifted his face from the dust and exclaimed, almost aloud:

"It is a man!"

Still prostrate in the scorching dust, he watched the figure which, solitary on the horizon, appeared as if a giant. A man another man, and in this place of death! He felt his blood grow warm. Days had grown into weeks and he had not spoken to a soul. He knew not now the sound of his own voice. Still he watched and the man came nearer and every moment of the watching seemed a day to him. Nearer, nearer he came, and then like a figure thrown upon a white canvas the other man appeared to him who lay prostrate in the sand. He was tall and straight as the mountain pine. His face was hard and his features stood out like the carvings of a sculpture. The muscles on his arms were like cords. His eyes were like lantern lights, but the flesh was drawn and they were sunken deep into the sockets. His hair was like the wing of a raven. He was naked but for the breechcloth about his loins. He stopped for a moment and raised his hand to shield the blinding sun from his eyes. The man lying in the dust watched him. Suddenly his heart almost stopped and he trembled and grew cold, for before him and staring into his eyes, with eyes that had the fire of a panther, stood an Indian. He looked still closer and from the left wrist hung a chain, the broken shackle which had once held both arms together. The Indian stood motionless. The man rose slowly and facing the other stared at him in silence. And in this quiet there came into the being of this white man a thought, not from the mind, for it seemed paralyzed, but from the soul, and as it rose and filled his being it grew into articulate speech, and if it be so that soul can prompt the mind this was the thought:

"O, Thou God, who didst create, this meeting is for Thee. The soul of the wild and the soul that knows Thy will, and they are both of Thy making."

HE THREW HIMSELF ON THE GROUND AND WATCHED THIS SPOT OF BLACK

The Indian touched his lips. "Water, water," he said.

The man touched his own lips and exclaimed:

"Water, water."

In all the silence of the plain their voices sounded like the thunder and a thousand echoes smote the rock.

"Brother," spoke the white man.

"Me Apache—brother to you," repeated the Indian, and he laid his hand on the white man's shoulder.

The white man's eyes were turned toward the broken shackle on the Indian's wrist.

"Me once son of mighty, swift as wind! Me kill brother—no name—me outcast."

The white man answered with a look of terror. The Indian saw it, and, taking his hand, said:

"Me friend."

Day passed into the twilight of the plains. For miles they had journeyed side by side. Athirst and hungered, they leaned on each other. The desert grew deeper, and the dead fly from above the rocks, but it kept on in hurried flight as if aware of the lifelessness and deathliness of all beneath. They had stopped in the journey and with a rock the white man had beaten upon the iron handcuff to release the wrist of his companion. And now near night he broke from the wall a piece of rock and laying the arm against the barrier beat against the iron. Once he missed the stroke and the jagged edge of the stone cut into the flesh and warm red blood spurted out on the brown man. The Indian never moved, but the white man tore a piece from his shirt and bound up the wound, but the shackle still remained.

Then night came; not softly, as it does in the land of the living, but dropping its mantle all at once like one who suddenly falls into the black gloom of a pit. The white man and the Indian, weak and exhausted, lay side by side in the dust.

The silence of a sepulchre, but for their breathing, fell about them. They lay in the depths of the desert. The white man threw out his arm and his fingers touched something that lived. He turned and looked; it was the green leaf of a twig, parched and withered. He was about to pluck it from the earth when the Indian grasped his arm. The white man folded his arms, and the Indian closed his eyes. Memories of other days came into the wakeful moments of the white man, and before him a vision passed of those who lived where God had smiled upon His earth. The fleeting dream almost grazed him. Then nature took the struggle, and hunger and thirst attacked. His tongue seemed as if made of stone. He felt his body, and it was shrivelled and worn. The Indian slept. The white man by him lay with open eyes and watched the savag. A terrible thought came into his being. He felt weak and helpless. There seemed nothing before them but the dust and the heat. Was it death? There in the awful silence the white man lifted himself to his knees and, holding up his arms to heaven, prayed:

"Father, I call to Thee from the country Thou hast forgot. Thou didst make green and beautiful all else. Out of the bounty of nature the sun has warmed and the dew has moistened. O God, in this place of death two souls of Thy making perish. God, God, can You forget?"

The man bowed his head and covered his face with his hands. Then, lifting his arms, he cried aloud:

"Father, Father!"

Then, weak and shaking with fear, he fell prostrate on the earth. The Indian moved. Then, rising, he stood erect, and with outstretched arms and face lifted to the lowering skies he cried with the voice of a trumpet:

"Father of the white man, Thou say Father too!"

Then he fell to the earth.

The echoes hurled their voices against the rock as if a thousand tongues had spoken. Still lying on the earth, the two men were quiet and motionless and not another living thing breathed or uttered a sound. The moon hung cold and ated like a dead eye. With his face pressed close into the burning sand the white man, all but unconscious, seemed to cling to one thought that burned into his soul like a coal of fire. And it was this:

"Did He hear—can, oh, can He forget?"

Toward the east the clouds grew a darker blue and a lighter wave covered the face of the moon. Again the clouds changed to almost ashen hue, and as the veil passed from before the moon its silver was gone and it had a tinge of red. The breeze that had kept the sand blowing increased almost to a gale. The clouds grew darker and a deeper red came to the moon. Once the Indian lifted his face and, shielding his eyes, gazed at the solitary light in the heavens.

"It is the anger of the Great Father," he gasped, and with a sigh that shook his giant being he again threw himself to the earth.

Deep, rolling groans, as if thunder, sounded far away. The clouds grew blacker, but streaked with a dull, forbidding drab. The moon still reddened. Presently there was a fearful peal of thunder and all light was gone. The desert was in darkness, close and all enveloping like death itself. Then, as if some mighty levitation standing upon the rugged hills had dashed a torch, a great wave of light passed over the plain, so white, so penetrating that each grain of sand and each bit of alkali stood out like a jewel.

Then darkness. From beyond the wall of rock came a rumbling, louder and deeper until it seemed to come from the very bowels of the earth. And then into that awful place there came a strange light from the moon of red. Like the beacon of a lighthouse it sent forth a solid ray of light that seemed to rest fixed and steady upon the two immovable and almost lifeless bodies in the sand.

Then, as if a wave at sea had wandered from its portals and reached the desert, the plain moved gently, rocked softly. Another peal of thunder and the rolling of the earth grew more violent. One great shock seemed to send it rolling along like a tempestuous sea. It disappeared, and with the noise of a hursting of a shell there sprang from the earth a stream of water, hot and boiling, and with it clouds of steam. In a little while the steam was gone and the water fell cool and dripping upon the plain like a fountain. A few drops of crystal fluid fell upon the men

MARITIME BAPTIST WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION OVER

AMHERST YOUTH FATALLY INJURED JUMPING FROM TRAIN

Amherst, N. S., Aug. 23.—(Special)—

A serious accident occurred as the Royal Blues excursion train was returning from Truro last night. Frank Brown, one of the excursionists, trying to save a walk, attempted to jump off the train just as it was nearing the subway at Christie's crossing. The train was moving quite rapidly at the time, and evidently, the young man struck on his head, falling back on the track. Not reaching home with the others, search was made, and he was found lying unconscious by the track. He was removed to the hospital, where it was found that his right leg was crushed to a pulp below the knee, requiring amputation. He had also sustained a compound fracture above the right eye, and another at the back of the head, extending from above the ear to the base of the skull. He is still unconscious, and but slight hopes are entertained for his recovery. He is 18 years of age, employed with Rhodes, Curry & Co., a steady, industrious young man, and an adopted son of the late Thomas Brown.

MONCTON MAN INJURED AT TACOMA

Moncton, N. B., Aug. 23.—(Special)—

E. J. O'Brien, of this city, has received word of a painful accident which occurred to his son, Frank P., formerly an L. C. R. brakeman, now located at Tacoma, Wash. The young man was employed in a lumber mill, and had his leg caught in the ragged belt. He was hurled against the pulley, breaking his left leg in three places, the bone protruding from one. It was four hours before a physician could be secured, owing to the remote location of the mill, and ten hours before he was taken to the hospital.

Anniversary Celebrations at Newburyport, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Wilson, both natives of New Brunswick, recently celebrated the 15th anniversary of their wedding at No. 8 Maddison street, Newburyport, Mass. At the same time Mr. Wilson's brother, Herman H., observed his 21st birthday. There was a large number of invited guests present.

Herman Wilson was formerly in the employ of J. F. Williamson, Indian town, and now holds a responsible position with the firm of Gray & Davis, Amesbury (Mass.). A very pleasant evening was spent with music and song, and presentations were made to the host and hostess as well as to Mr. Wilson.

BORDEN SPEAKS THAT MIDDLETON Four Thousand People Gather at Open Air Meeting Saturday

SCORES GOVERNMENT Declares Again That It Has Shielded and Rewarded Corrupt Officials—Deals With Land Scandal Charges—Bergeon Makes a Hit and Hon. Mr. Foster in His Future Role.

LIPTON LIKELY TO CHALLENGE AGAIN FOR CUP (Continued from page 1) Philippines for sale in last Sunday's Herald.

Entombed Twenty Days. An interesting story is told here by special cable from Manila, illustrating the tremendous vitality of the human being. A woman, Anne Schoepfer, was imprisoned in a cave in the Alps near Leeches Les Bains, some days before she was discovered. The cable from Geneva says she recovered her senses yesterday and was able to tell the doctor a story of the terrible period through which she passed. Her doctor believes that there is every likelihood of her physical recovery. Her survival, he describes as the greatest miracle he ever saw or heard of.

Not Room Enough. When the speakers reached the platform they found about 2,000 people in the building and fully as many outside unable to gain admission. Mr. Borden thereupon put it to vote, and the largest audience ever seen in Middleton assemblage. Dr. Marshall presided, and introduced the first speaker, F. W. Hanwright of Halifax. Mr. Hanwright attacked the Laurier government with the people of Canada.

THOMAS WHITE DIED ON HIS WAY HOME Thomas F. White died yesterday on the P. & N. train while on his way home after a visit to Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. White who, on Jan. 1st celebrated their golden wedding, had gone to Scotland, to visit some six or eight weeks ago. He seemed to be in his usual good health up to the time they were about to leave the country, when he felt that he was suffering from a cold. He had been in the city, to meet him on arrival in Montreal. Mr. White arrived at his home in Halifax on his way back to Montreal. He was suffering from a cold at that time, and he had been in the city, to meet him on arrival in Montreal. He was suffering from a cold at that time, and he had been in the city, to meet him on arrival in Montreal.

Land Scandals. After touching on the Halifax, Truro and Moncton land scandals, Mr. Borden charged that millions were being made at the expense of the public domain. He said that the people had been deceived and that the present administration in power another moment. Mr. Borden said he believed the present administration in power another moment. Mr. Borden said he believed the present administration in power another moment.

Entombed Twenty Days. An interesting story is told here by special cable from Manila, illustrating the tremendous vitality of the human being. A woman, Anne Schoepfer, was imprisoned in a cave in the Alps near Leeches Les Bains, some days before she was discovered. The cable from Geneva says she recovered her senses yesterday and was able to tell the doctor a story of the terrible period through which she passed. Her doctor believes that there is every likelihood of her physical recovery. Her survival, he describes as the greatest miracle he ever saw or heard of.

Not Room Enough. When the speakers reached the platform they found about 2,000 people in the building and fully as many outside unable to gain admission. Mr. Borden thereupon put it to vote, and the largest audience ever seen in Middleton assemblage. Dr. Marshall presided, and introduced the first speaker, F. W. Hanwright of Halifax. He was suffering from a cold at that time, and he had been in the city, to meet him on arrival in Montreal.

BAPTIST MINISTERS GATHER AT WOLFVILLE Laid Corner Stone of Methodist Church Ceremony at Woodstock Performed by Rev. James Crisp, Thursday—Will Be Handsome Brick and Stone Building.

Woodstock, Aug. 23.—The corner stone of the new Methodist church in Woodstock was laid on Thursday. The ceremony commenced at 3 p. m. Rev. James Crisp, of St. John, the president of the conference, conducted the service using the "Form for Laying the Corner Stone of a Church," as contained in the discipline.

At the beginning he read a selection from Rev. Dr. Wilson's history of Methodism in the Canadian West, which appeared in the Telegraph some months ago and will shortly appear in book form. This was also an evidence of "enlightened patriotism" as the first preachers in Woodstock had done.

The laying of this stone may also be regarded as an expression of gratitude. In return for temporal prosperity and providential mercies God's people erect temples to His praise. The laying of this stone is a right that we should utilize all the resources of our country, but after all it is "righteousness that exalts a nation." We trust that here in this house many will learn the way of truth and rejoice in the ways of the Lord.

The Rev. R. G. Fulton read a list of things deposited in a box, he then placed the box in a place left for the purpose. The stone was laid with it and was hung by pulleys, was then lowered by the mason and Mr. Fulton handed the president a small token and with it gave the stone a few taps and said: "In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, I lay this corner stone of the foundation of a house to be built and consecrated to the service of Almighty God, according to the order and usages of the Methodist church."

Contributions were sung and benediction pronounced by the pastor, Rev. R. G. Fulton. The day was all that could be desired; bearing in mind the heat, an organ and choir and quite a number of people were on this platform and a large number of the congregation. The building will be of brick and stone. Much credit is due the pastor for the energy displayed in this important and costly undertaking.

Gaynor Going to Health Resort. Macdon, Aug. 26.—The United States circuit court of appeals has ordered Col. John F. Colonel Gaynor will be accompanied to the springs by two deputy sheriffs and will bear the expenses of the trip. The change is necessary, Colonel Gaynor's physicians say, to preserve his life. The road is a first class one.
