Information received from Hampton last evening was to the effect that the remains of the man which had been placed in the main baggage room, were viewed by Coroner Smith of that place, and that he decided that an inquest would not be necessary. It also stated that the general opinion there was that the drowning was a case of suicide. The coroner said he had no apparent reason, it was said, for leaving the main road and going down the brook, which at the place where the drowning occurred, is open and quite shallow. Mr. Brown said that while conversing with him, Collins appeared to be a very nervous condition. The remains were looked after by undertaker Allen, and arrangements were made to have the remains sent to the city this morning.

Chief of Police Clark was the first to receive any notice of the accident in this city. On receiving a telephone message from Coroner Smith he notified the natives, all of whom were both surprised and grief-stricken on hearing the sorrowful news.

The deceased is survived by his mother, Mrs. James, and five brothers, James, William, John, George, and Robert, all of whom are in the employ of the same firm. His wife, Mrs. M. E. McDermost, of this city, is also a widow.

as the attack on the car. Both defendants, Way and Smith, were seen in this hotel. In the case of Way, he said, he would admit that there was evidence very much in his favor. In the case of Smith, however, the evidence was slightly incriminating. He considered that there was evidence of a prima facie case against all the young men. He said that with reluctance that he argued the case because it was a matter of regret that thirteen men in court to answer for acts which resulted in the death of a young man.

He also regretted that there were not more in custody for he considered that any of the ring-leaders were at large. He referred to Mr. Barry, who had been arrested, but there had been discrimination shown. The police had, in his mind, brought into court all those whom they had identified as being connected with the celebration. Regarding defendant Smith, he said that if he and the others had gone quietly to their homes there would not have been any trouble about their deal with. In the case of a mob it was not to get at the ring-leaders for they were under cover and there did their deal with. He said that the police had done much difficulty in finding a common room, especially when the whole path of the assembly from King square to the end of the street was closed. Without a dissenting vote the members of the common council yesterday decided that the bill and by-laws concerning the preparation of a bill for presentation at the next session of the legislature to enable the electors to vote at the next civic election in April on the question of city government by an elective commission, composed of a mayor and four commissioners. The resolution was introduced by Ald. Hayes and adopted without discussion. The resolution presented by Ald. Potts for a reduction in the number of aldermen was withdrawn.

The estimates were adopted as recommended by the treasury board with the exception of that for the maintenance of the police department which was cut down from $31,200 to $24,700. This reduction means that the proposal to add eight men to the police force cannot be carried out, but a sum was provided for five additional patrolmen, and for a patrol wagon.

There was a lively discussion over the matter of reinstating W. C. Dunham as deputy clerk of the market and a resolution to terminate his suspension was adopted by a vote of 11 to 5. One of the most exciting periods of the meeting was, however, in connection with Ald. Potts' resolution providing that any alderman wishing to accept a position in the gift of the city must resign at least thirty days before petitioning for such position. Ald. Potts declared that Ald. Vanwart, while sitting as a judge in the market investigation, had canvassed for the position of director of public safety. He gave as his authority for the statement Ald. Vanwart's own statement. Ald. Vanwart thereupon arose and said that Ald. Wignome had asked him to vote for him for the job. He added that Ald. Sproul had also asked him to vote for him (Ald. Sproul). This was followed by Ald. Sproul arising and telling Ald. Vanwart that he had been asked to vote for him as a judge in the market investigation, and that he had refused to do so. He said that he had been asked to vote for him as a judge in the market investigation, and that he had refused to do so.

CARNEGIE'S PEACE ANTHEM

International Hymn
TWO empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free,
One anthem raise,
One tongue, one faith, we claim,
One God, whose glorious name,
We love and praise.

What deeds our fathers wrought,
What battles we have fought,
Let fame record,
New, valiant passion, cease,
Come, victories of peace;
Nor hate nor pride's caprice
Unsheath the sword.

Though deep the sea and wide
Twixt realm and realm, its tide
Blinds strand to strand,
So be the gift between
Grey coasts and islands green,
With bonds of peace serene
And friendship spanned.

Now, may the God above
Guard the dear lands we love,
Both East and West,
Let love more fervent glow,
And strength yet stronger grow,
Blessing and best.

ST. JOHN, N. B., JANUARY 11, 1911.

CITY GOVERNMENT AND PROGRESS

One of the critics of civic government by commission has said that all persons who advocate a commission believe that it would cure all the evils or shortcomings that are complained of. As some of the people who believe in government by commission—that is, by commissioners elected by the taxpayers just as the aldermen are now elected but with additional safeguards—reasonable beings, they do not expect that any mere change in the form of government would result in any miraculous transformation of civic conditions, or would prove to be a sort of patent medicine cure-all.

THE SCHOOL CITY

A plan has been worked out in New York for the organization of children in the public schools into a miniature municipality or "school city." The children were organized into a perfectly miniature municipality governed exactly like large cities with a mayor, aldermen, police, street cleaning and health departments. The officers were elected or appointed as they are in New York and they performed their duties under the rules of the several departments of the municipal government of the city. The plan not only involves the question of discipline and control within the school, and of keeping school buildings and grounds in sanitary condition, but is of the greatest value in teaching by doing the duties of citizenship.

WHAT IS A COMMISSION?

There is published today in The Telegraph an article explanatory of civic government by commission. This article is the product of a careful and prolonged examination by the advertising committee of the Board of Trade which for some months past has been looking into the reasons leading to the adoption of the commission system in many cities, the nature of such commissions, and the results obtained by their adoption.

NOT AND COMMENT

Real estate is beginning to show signs of life. When the vacant lots are taxed the real estate market will be worth watching.

CITY GOVERNMENT

There is no more hopeful sign, so far as the affairs of St. John are concerned, than that the New Year should open with a very pronounced agitation for a better system of city government. It will be noted that those who have taken the most active interest in the study and discussion of the commission plan have not done so because they desired to attack the members of the city council, but because they desired a system under which any set of men could produce better results in civic administration than are possible under the existing system. It is said that a majority of the members of the city council are favorable to a plebiscite on the commission plan. They know the weakness and the inefficiency of the present system. They share in common with other citizens the desire that better methods may be adopted, if such better methods are available.

THE SCHOOL CITY

The city asks of its schools that they should assist each citizen to lead his best life in all that makes for civic citizenship. Every one feels that a city is great only as its members are developed. The city assigns particular tasks to different bodies of servants. The cure of disease and the direction of sanitation is given to the physician; the management of finance to the banker; the running of trains to the railway men; the leadership of the church to theologians and pastors; the direction of education to the teaching profession, and that education is not English up to the letter G, or even skill in mathematics, but citizenship. It knows very well what it wants and while it makes no effort to dictate the policy of any institution it yet calls upon each for a very definite service. Genuine growth is measured by the extent to which children recognize in the school the same moral motives and relations which obtain outside. This can be secured only when the school presents the same flexible, informal relations that obtain in every day life. When school duties and responsibilities are of a sort found only in the school, comparatively little is secured for the all-round development of character. When school conditions are rigid and formal as to be paralleled by anything outside, external order and decorum may be secured, but there is no guarantee of right growth in directions demanded by the ordinary walks of life. And right here has been the greatest failure of our schools. We have succeeded in securing external habits of attention and restraint, but no power of direction and initiative nor moral self-control. We have not succeeded in relating even the external habits of attention and restraint to conditions outside the school room.

And today, after two centuries of suffering, here I stand amidst you in this hall, repeating the same complaints, demanding the same justice which was claimed by our fathers; but no longer with the humble voice of the suppliant, but with the sentiment of our force and the conviction that Ireland will henceforth find means to do, without you, what you shall have refused to do for her. I make no compromise with you; I want the same rights for us that you enjoy; the same municipal system for Ireland as for England and Scotland. Otherwise, what is a union with you? A union upon parchment! Well, we will tear this parchment to pieces and the empire will be sundered.

MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS

To the Editor of The Telegraph. Sir,—I have read with great interest the letter from Appreciator in today's issue entitled Music in St. John. I am the Methodist minister in Oranmore, and I can endorse from my experience all Appreciator says. I am convinced that he is right in calling the teaching of music in the public schools the key of the situation. I came here this fall, after eleven years' experience as a class teacher in English elementry schools—city schools, although it is hardly necessary to specify, as country and city schools alike reach a high standard of proficiency in the divine art. This delightful state of affairs is due as much to sheer hard work and systematic training as to natural gifts in the children. There were a few scholars who appeared to lack a singing voice, and these had to be either trained up or fired out. The great majority, however, regarded the music lesson with pleasure.

MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS

When I had charge of Standard I, I received my scholars at the age of seven from the infant school, and they would then have a working knowledge of the Tonic Solfa Notation with easy intervals and time. Every day had its twenty-minute singing lesson, including at convenient intervals, time and tune tests separately and combined, exercises in voice production, and the correct singing of suitable songs, folk songs and national airs being of late in special favor. The upper classes, massed, would sing chorals in two or three parts, such as Wagner's Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, and Schubert's Hunting Chorus, from Rosamund.
