Claim That There Is No Foundation for Alarmist Rumors-Marchand Does Not Figure in the Document.

Paris, Oct. 24 .- A semi-official note issued last evening says: "There is no foundation for the alarmist rumors regarding the relations between France and Great Britain. It is equally incorrect to say that extraordinary measures have been taken at any of our naval ports. The French Fashoda yellow book just issued is voluminous, but it does not include Major Marchand's report, which will be published later. The dispatches were largely anticipated by the English Fashoda blue book. The diplomatic conversations recorded show a curious endeavor on the French side to represent that Marchand's mission was quite as important as Gen. Kitchener's on the ground that the struggle was against the khalifa and barbarism.

FASHODA NOT INCLUDED.

On Sept. 18. M. Delcasse, the foreign minister, informed the British ambassador to France, in explicite language, that France did not regard Lord Salisbury's claim to the Soudan by virtue of conquest as applying to Fashoda, on the ground that the Marchand expedition went to the relief of the French expedition under Capt. Liotard, which dated before the declaration in the House of Commons by Sir Eward Grey, as to the policy of the British Government towards the Soudan, and at a time when the equatorial provinces were lost to civilization. In fact, M. Delcasse argued that unless Great Britain possessed the sultan's mandate, as well as the khedive's, to acquire all former Egyptian provinces, France considered herself equally entitled with England to possession of any point occupied by French officers. Judging from the yellow book dispatches, the foregoing represents the French standpoint, and M. Delcasse contends that as Marchand reached Fashoda first, England has no right to demand an evacuation of Fashoda prior to negotiations.

SIGNIFICANT REPLY. Sept. 30, M. Delcasse declared to matum, and while he could afford to sake of the Anglo-French entente, no one could doubt what would be the reply of France to such a demand. The subsequent dispatches relate to conversations between Baron de Courcel, French ambassador in London, and Lord Salisbury, the latter contending that the capture of Khartoum entitled Egypt to the possession of all the mahdi's dominions, and the French ambassador arguing that Major Marchand had captured Fashoda before Gen. Kitchener took Khartoum, and the force of burghers sent against that France had for a long time held several posts in the Bahr-el-Ghazal.

THE FINAL MESSAGE. A final dispatch, dated Oct. 12, from Baron de Courcel to M. Delcasse, records a conversation with Lord Salisbury, in which the French ambassador claimed access to the Nile through the Bahr-el-Ghazal, and asked an amicable delimitation of the respective spheres of interest of the two powers, in reply to which Lord Salisbury indicated that struction, for resigning and thus comit would be necessary for him to consult his colleagues.

A PUZZLE. Baron de Courcel, having represented that it would be impossible for Major Marchand to retire until it was settled where he should go, and how the evacuation was to be effected, Lord Salisbury, after reflecting very seriously, said he was not sufficiently acquainted with the geography of Africa to reply for the present regarding delimitation, and moreover, that he could not enter into projects of that nature without consulting his colleagues. Baron de Courcel concludes the dispatch of Oct. 12 by saying: "I quitted him on the explanations, which were pronounced in a conciliatory and friendly tone."

A GRAVE SITUATION. London, Oct. 24.-The French yellow book on Fashoda seems to indicate an intention on the part of the French Government to utilize the Marchand affair as a means of raising the whole Egyptian question.

The London press admits the gravity of the situation revealed by the yellow book, but the papers are unanimous in declaring that it is impossible for Lord Salisbury to consent to any negotiations until Fashoda is evacuated, but French Foreign Minister M. Delcasse, with equal firmness, declines known that Mr. Gladstone's sons have to withdraw Marchand without preitorial, says Lord Salisbury has not replied to Baron de Courcel's pretensions with the decision which might have been hoped for.

MORE HOPEFUL FEELING IN PARIS.

Another dispatch says that Baron de be undertaken will cause his retirement oda on condition that France be granted a Nile outlet on the River Bahr-el-Gazal, one of the tributaries of the tures of Mr. Gladstone's career that the Nile, entering it about 150 miles southwest of Fashoda at Mokrem-el-Bohul. Most of the special dispatches to the London morning papers say that on Sunday the feeling in Paris was decidedly more hopeful, owing to the widespreed idea—which the yellow book confirms-that Lord Salisbury had not flatly refused to entertain Baron. De Courcel's suggestion of compensa-tion for the evacuation of Fashoda.

RUSSIA'S ADVICE. The Berlin National Zeitung says if learns that Count Muravieff, the Russian foreign minister, has recommend-ed to the French Government a peaceful settlement of the Fashoda question, as Russia does not consider a war will serve the interests of France.

NOTEWORTHY CHANGE. London, Oct. 24.-The Paris correspondent of the Sunday Times says: The change in tone of the press is notworthy. It is now certain that the Fashoda question is left out of all negotiations between France and England, and that both governments have grasped the double fact that England means to stick to her programme, while France is certainly entitled to facilities of access on the Nile.

Orders have been received at the French military and naval arsenals to prepare for the arrival of a large body of troops. M. Lockroy, the minister of marine, explains that the movement of troops to Cherbourg is merely one of relief forces for Crete and the colonies. M. de Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, in a letter on the Fashoda situation to the Matin, explains the intensity of English feeling in the matter of reconquering the Soudan as based upon . their thirst to avenge Gordon. Gen. Kitchener, sirdar of the Egyptian army, who commanded the successful Anglo-Egyptian expedition to the Soudan, and Capt. Barrateri, who brought Major Marchand's report to the French Government from Fashoda, sailed from Alexandria for Marseilles on the same steamer.

At the Head of 40,000 Warriors, Besides Artillery.

The Abyssinian Army Being Rapidly Mobilized-Kaffirs Defeated-The Crisis in Spain.

London, Oct. 24.-King Menelek is on the warpath, with 40,000 warriors and several batteries of artillery. His object estensibly is to chastise the rebellious chief Ras Mangascia, but the remainder of the Abyssinian army is being rapidly mobilized, which is scarcely necessary for the purpose of crushing a mutiny. A good deal of anxiety prevails in Rome and Massowah, and the frontiers of the Italian colony of Erithrea are being hastily reinforced. Capt. Cola, who was sent to King Menelek's court to negotiate a settlement of several small matters, has been kept cooling his heels at Ab-disababa for six months, and his mis-On Sept. 30, M. Delcasse declared to Sir Edward Monson that such a demand would be equivalent to an ultidesires a pretext to abandon Erithrea sacrifice France's material interests, so long as her honor was intact, for the he has decided to afford that pretext by continually worrying the Italians. CRISIS IN SPAIN. Madrid, Oct. 24.-The newspapers here regard a ministerial crisis as imminent, and they urger the ministers to sink their differences in view of Spain's many difficulties. Several of the papers violently attack Senor Gamazo, the minister of public inplicating the situation. Considerable speculation was caused here by the holding of a long conference between the queen regent and Gen. Polavieja, former governor, of Cuba and of the Philippines.

COMPOSITORS ON STRIKE. Brussels, Oct. 23.—The compositors' strike at Antwerp is extending. Most of the newspapers are unable to appear. At the bottom of the strike is the struggle of the syndicate of compositors against the American and Cancomposing machines, which, since their introduction at Brussels exhibition last year, are being introduced to the horror of the compositors, who imagine their profession ruined. CABLE NOTES. The Emperor and Empress of Germany left Constantinople for Palestine at 4:10 Saturday evening. They received an ovation from the crowds of people assembled to witness the departure of their majesties. The Vienna Neue Freie Presse states' that another nurse, who was in ateendance upon Herr Barisch, the assistant in the bacteriological establishment of Prof. Nothnagle, has been attacked by the burbonic disease. Mueller, who attended Herr Barisch, is dead. The three nurses, who have developed symptoms of the disease, are somewhat improved. The Emperor of China is believed to be afflicted with an incurable kidney disease. Snow has fallen throughout European Russia, except in the Crimea and Sensational Testimony at the Coroner's Inquest.

In the Case of Harold Frederic's Death -Rheumatic Fever Was Followed by Syncope.

London, Oct. 23 .- The inquest over the remains of Harold Frederic, the newspaper correspondent and author. who died suddenly on Wednesday morning at Henley of heart disease, was adjourned until Wednesday next. The evidnce presented was somewhat sensational. Mr. Frederic's daughter Ruth said her father did not believe in doctors. She added that it was with his consent, but under the influence of others, that Mrs. Mills, a Christian scientist, was summoned to attend him. Kate Lyon, a member of Frederic's household, testified that the deceased had asked her to call in Mrs. Mills, and the latter came to the house and expounded the system followed by the Christian Scientists. On the same day Mr. Frederic dismissed the doctors who had been in attendance on him. Most of Mrs. Mills' treatment, continued the witness, was what is known as the "absent treatment." At the request of friends of the sick man the doctors were again summoned, but the deceased informed them that when they had previously been attending him he had not followed their directions. Mr. John Stokes, Mr. Frederic's amanuensis, stated that he had informed Kate Lyon she might be charged with manslaughter if Mr. Frederic should die without receiving medical treat-Drs Brown and Frieherger, the nhysicians who had attended Mr. Frederic, said the deceased had suffered from Russia will seize that port and hold rheumatic fever, and that he was paralyzed on one side. His death, they asserted, was due to syncope. Both declared their belief that with proper treatment the patient would have recovered. The inquest was adjourned until Wednesday, when it is expected Mrs. Mills will be examined. POLITICAL POINTS

Epidemic of Typhcid-High Prices for Many Things-Hardships of Travel -A Picturesque Life.

Dawson City, as it really is, is pictured in two interesting letters just re-ceived from Mr. F. W. Herring, who left London to seek his fortune early in the spring. One letter is dated Aug. 27, and has been delayed in reaching Lon-don. The second letter was written on Sept. 17, and reached here on Saturday. The writer has sent trophies to his friends here to show what pure gold in the nugget is like. They were taken from bench claims—i. e., on the hillside. From the prices of general commodities of life given in these letters, it will readily be seen that free lunch counters ere unknown. Mr. Herring writes:

Dawson, Aug. 27, 1898. As a friend is leaving for the outside via St. Michaels, a few lines might interest you. In the first place, Dawson is a hard place to write up. The first boat up from St. Michaels only arrived on the 24th ult., bringing a different class of passengers to those who came over the Dyea or White Pass trails. Their clothes show that they didn't work their passage, and hardships are unknown to them. The ambition most men had to get here seems to have left them. Men on the trail who worked day and night to get here, on their arrival seemed to consider their work done, where in reality it had only just begun. The creeks in all directions are all staked, which discourages the newcomers, and causes them to disband, which eventually means three out of

RETURN HOME

The streets of Dawson are full of men peddling off their outfits, trying to raise money to return home, and goods at the present time, in some lines, are cheaper than Seattle prices. In some cases it is heartrending, especially those who have lost their outfits. Wages have fallen, and good men can be hired for $5 a day. I paid one man $20 a day two weeks ago; today he works for me for $10. They are walking up and down the front street day and night, especially at night. The nights have been as light as day, but now are beginning to darken at 11 o'clock. It is raining today-the first heavy rain I have seen in Alaska. The Yukon raises very fast, and the current is very swift, although the river front of Dawson is an edy, which gives the boads a chance to land. The St. Michaels boats are having a hard time trying to reach Dawson. The rain is expected to help them, as most of them are on sandbars. One boat, which left for St. Michaels two weeks ago, is now high and dry. She, with 250 passengers, and gold dust, through bad pilotage, ran into a slough and will stay there until the river raises next spring. The pa ed up by passing boats and carried on to Circle City.

Cholera morbus is very bad here. Twenty-nine men died in one day, and everyone has a touch of it. I think myself it is the water or change of food. I have gone back to pork and beans, and feel all O. K. again. It is astonishing how men hasten to get out of Every man seems to fear death will overtake him, or some other mysterious accident. For my part,

THERE IS MONEY HERE. and lots of it, if men will work and not get discouraged. I feel sure that If a man has his health and works with a will he cannot help but do well; but to those who are tender and particular as to their appearance, my advice is to stay away from Alaska. The old saying, "You can't judge a man by his clothes," is proven here. We all look alike-overalls and sweaters being the principal dress; but the moment a man opens his conversation you can judge mostly every time a well-read man and a gentleman. The "Chicawkas," or new arrivals, are not proving to be such a bonanza to the saloons and dance houses as was expected. Gambling dens are in full blast in every saloon, but no "sure-thing game" is allowed, the Northwest Mounted Police preventing it. Drinks of all kinds are now 50 cents; meals so much strength to get through at all. are $1 50; bunks, $1, finding your own blankets. I have a real bunk, with a mattress made of flour sacks filled with shavings, and since I've had it I somehow can lie in one position for a long time. I assure you it is a treat.

The King salmon are now running, and the fisherman catch them, averaging about 50 pounds each, worth $1 a Yesterday I saw the four Indians who killed the two Americans early in the spring. They have been sentenced to be hanged.

The Bank of Commerce, also the Bank of British North America, have agencies here. Twenty-five cents is the smallest coin, and figuring is comparatively easy on that account, especially now as gold dust is only $16 to the ounce. It is very discouraging to a poor man who receives $5 in gold dust. He starts out and buys four different articles at $1 each, weighing out four times, and he has only 50 cents left for his fifth purchase. The man who does a small business on 50 cent to $1 sales and gets his pay in dust-if he cells $200 worth in a day-at night he will find $210 to $220 in his gold can. We all use a tin can for gold dust. An English sovereign goes for $5 here. There is a stampede on today up the pedes. Indian River was the last, and I hear that it turns out pretty fair. Fine hotels are being completed, one being a three-story double frame, filled in with sawdust. Coal oil is now $3 per gallon; common hinges were $3 50 a pair last week.

MEN ARE GOING CRAZY, but there is nothing in chasing stam-

BRAINY BUSINESS SCHEME. A mad dog or two caused trouble last week, biting 40 or 50 others. A thought came to me that it would be a good scheme to buy up all the dog chains. I got all I could at 75 cents to $1 each, and out came a circular ordering all dogs to be chained up. Dawson had a dog catcher, and dog chains sold as high as $10 a chain, some as low as $4. There is a fortune here for any one who can corner any one line. SPRING WATER, 50 CENTS; HAY

$450 PER TON. We had a surprise the other day in seeing a real live cow—as the boys call her, a lady cow—that gives fresh milk twice a day, and the lucky man who owns her gets $1 a quart. Then again he pays $50 a ton for hay. Spring water sells at 50 cents a pail, and men are making good wages carrying water about one mile.

Stealing is getting very common. People are begining to move out, and when the last boat leaves the exodus will be great. One thing very strange, is that the Hebrew cannot get a footing here. The honest miner seems to fear him, and is backward in handing over his sack to weigh out. We now have a telephone from here to the Bonanza and Eldorado mines, and the "Hello!" girl gets $15 a day. Bread is now three loaves for $1-little loaves, not like your London loaves. Everything is American. They pay duty and make money Canadian goods I see sometimes, and had the pleasure of smoking a London-made cigar. It was a Line & McDonald. make, and sold for 50 cents. Miners predict an early downfall for Dawson, as a 5-cent piece appeared last week.

An amusing incident occurred on the Fourth of July. The hundreds of Yanks celebrated in great style. At night every man carried his gun and fired hundreds of cartridges in the air, scar-ing every dog in the vicinity. They started the dogs running up and down the front street. The men fired all the time, and scared the poor brutes to death. They ran in all directions, the men yelling and shooting. In the center of the street is a ditch about twelve feet across, and the men blocked the streets so that the dogs had no alternative but to jump the ditch. This fun kept up for hours, until the poor dogs, thoroughly exhausted, laid down or crawled away and hid.

A large steamer left today loaded with passengers and dust, and as she cast loose the band on board started up the tune "Home, Sweet Home." The boys on shore didn't say much, but many turned away in silence to ponder over what they left home for.

The Second Letter. In the letter of Sept. 17, Mr. Herring

I have had made a steel stove, which cost me $30, and as stovepipes are $1 25 each, I paid $12 for sufficient pipe to do me. I also paid $60 for a cord of wood. I paid $12 for a pair of leather shoes. I disposed of my dogs and bought a large black Dane, paying $75 for her, but she is a beauty to draw, and pulls like a horse. Every day I put 50 pounds on her back, and she trots along, wagging her tail as if she carried nothing. It is very lonely here, and I find my dog good company, as well as a great help at packing to and from the stores. Here is where you find men with good warm hearts. doctor has a bath-house at the back of my store, and I assure you one appreclates a good bath after a week of so much dust and dirt. The streets have been very dusty. We took a boat, and away we started up-stream. Scarcely had we pot. started when it began to rain, and it simply poured, so hard, in fact, that we could scarcely light a fire on the bank as we went along. It was cold, and we had no shelter. We were glad, indeed, when we arrived at our destination, but it is of the return trip I want particularly to speak. After starting for home it again began to rain-a regular drenching rain. Our boat in the meantime had been taken by someone, and there we were, with 60 miles of water ahead of us, and no It poured rain, and was cold enough to freeze the very marrow in one's bones. We camped on the Yukon all night, by the side of a smoky, half-dead fire, which could not keep out the rain, or provide us any shelter In the early morning we cut logs, dragged them to the riverside, and tied them together with fine boughs and cedar poles, thus making a raft. On it we jumped, for a 60-mile ride on a very

I think we shall be satisfied to remain at home in future, and if our friends want to see us, let them try the experiment of that water route in such weather. FOOTBALL.

In football, as in less important games, the way that Hamilton has of being cock-sure of winning, without any warrant for such a comfortable complacency, is characteristic. The Young Tigers had it on Saturday afternoon when they tackled the London Juniors at Tecumseh Park. This Hamiltonian air distinguished the players throughout the greater part of the game. There was no need of any system of numbering or lettering to enable the spectators to distinguish the players. Even before the game these Young Tigers showed they were undeniably true Hamiltonian Tigers, and appropriated victory by their right divine. That the game was theirs, the result of the first half left no shadow of doubt in the minds of the visitors. They went on the gridiron after half-time sure winners. But they reckoned without their The confidence was misplaced. The Cockneys had two points in the lead at the close of the game, and the spectators thought of the beginning and the end. It was beautiful, they said, and cheered themselves hoarse.

The game was one of the semi-final series for the Ontario Rugby football championship, and the victory puts London in the finals. Next Saturday the home team will go to Toronto to meet the winners of the Brockville-Varsity matches.

The game at Tecumseh Park was in many respects the best witnessed here for a long time. It was fast and clean. From the start the Tigers rushed the play, but the home team put up a stubborn opposition. Grit and clever combination work won.

A strong, cold wind was blowing first half, and this the Tigers had in their favor. A cyclonic rush at the outset carried the ball dangerously near the London goal, and after a short struggle Jarvis secured a kick into touch, scoring the first point. In quick succession Goff scored a touchdown, 4 points, and Fitzgerald a goal on try, 2 points, and a kick into touch, 1 point, making a total of 8 points for the Tigers. This all happened in the first ten minutes, and by that time the home team was thoroughly warmed up. Capt. Frank Hobbs played a magnificent game at quarter-back. He would invariably gain a lot of ground after a scrimmage. Macfie and McNee also distinguished themselves in their combination work, and the entire team worked with fine effect. The pigskin ounts are much less than in the past. was gradually forced out of London's GOLF. territory and toward the close of the half Hobbs placed 4 points to London's credit by a touchdown. SECOND HALF.

The Tigers started in again with a rush at the beginning of the second half, and for a time managed to keep the ball pretty well where they wanted to. But the Londons' clever tactics prevented scoring. As before the ball was gradually carried towards Hamilton's goal line. It was a desperate struggle, scrimmage after scrimmage taking place near the line. No time was lost in discussion or over injuries, but it was a hot contest. Finally Hobbs tied the score by making another touchdown. It is surprising the num-ber of times Capt. Hobbs has to be tackled before he can finally be held. A lead of 2 points was gained by a kick into touch and a rouge by the home team, and time was called, the score

HEART PAINS

The Heart and Nerves are Often Affected and Cause Prostration of the Entire System.

A Kingston Lady Testifies to Her Experience in the Use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

People who suffer from any disease or disorder of the heart nervous system, such as Palpitation, Skip Beats, Smothering or Sinking Sensations, Sleeplessness, Weakness, Pain in the Head, etc., cannot afford to waste time trying various remedies, which have nothing more to back up their claims than the bold assertions of their proprietors. These diseases are too serious to permit of your experimenting with untried remedies. When you buy Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, you know you have behind them the testimony of thousands of Canadians who have been cured by their use. One of these is Mrs. A. W. Irish, 92 Queen Street, Kingston,

Ont., who writes as follows: "I have suffered for some years with a smothering sensation caused by heart disease. The severity of the pains in my heart caused me much suffering. I was also very nervous, and my whole system was run down and debilitated. Hearing of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills being a specific for these troubles, I thought I would try them, and therefore got a box at McLeod's Drug

"They afforded me great relief, having toned up my system and removed the distressing symptoms from which I suffered. I can heartily recommend these wonderful pills to all sufferers from heart trouble."

A Land of Free Speech.

It gives us noble pictures of the true statesman,

Not less the dogs of Faction pay, Would serve his kind in deed and Certain if knowledge bring the sword. knowledge takes the sword eway.

But the highest kind of statesman is the man called to exercise his function as the representative and leader of a free people. Hence two of the poems out of those which are devoted to the strength and beauty of freedom. They glorify not the license that runs to riot and destruction, but the liberty which is an essential condition of the highest life. Some of the verses, though well known, are worthy of frequent quotation. Thus does the poet express his boast concerning his native land:

The also the pledge of its safety and permanlence. There may be small reactions, and "rest and be thankful" back. It is recognized that no party has a monopoly of patriotism, and that all classes have a share in the national life.

This wholesome life is the result of many centuries of struggle, for not by any quick, easy process are nations fitted for the highest freedom. The civil war, the revolution, not to go back beyond what we call the modern period, played their part in creating the present constitutional Mfe, and in teaching the nation lessons which are not likely to be soon forgotten. "Tolerative acts" would be of little use without the spirit of true tolerance, and that spirit must ever be a gradual growth. But there can be no doubt that as the result of this long, painful process, the problem of social authority and individual freedom has been more fully solved in Britain than in other European countries, and it may be than in other countries where there is more of the name and pretense of freedom. There is still work to be done there along the same lines; in fact, in this sphere there is no finality. Political and social conditions are ever changing, and the nation must show its vitality by its power to adopt itself to new condi-

In the same direction is the testimony of the Russian ecclesiastic, that while constitutional government has largely failed elsewhere, it has in Britain met with those conditions through which alone it can attain the highest success. The London Spectator, speaking of the inflammatory language now common in France, declares that in England such talk would do no harm, while in the neighboring country it might lead to revolution and war. All these are testimonies which bear out this claim that Britain is pre-eminently the land of free speech and of a wise toleration. That this has its evils may be admitted, since it seems that human life cannot be free from evils; but the point is, the evils would not be cured, but rather exaggerated by a system of coercion. England has had its Titus Oates conspiracy, Gordon riots, Chartist agitations, and must again pass through grave crises; but to have learned to have faith in freedom, and to recognize that men of other, surely that is a great gain, and gives the right temper for needful conflicts. A wildly radical paper may, royal family. Well, that is all right ment knows better than to advertis the paper and make a martyr of editor by sending him to prison.

So it is in the individual and social life. A man can say what he likes, but he must pay the penalty for talking foolishly or extravagantly by loss of influence. It is well to allow men to speak freely, but you are not called upon to attach great importance to idle, ill-considered talk. But one must distinguish. When a man like Plimsoll waxes furious, and seems to play the fool, wise men recognize that there is evil to be remedled, and that a noble heart is spending itself wildly against the bars of selfish interest and indifference. This man makes a scene and creates a sensation, not for mere notoriety, but because he is indeed "the seamen's friend." The public men of England speak under the sense of responsibility they feel that in a very real sense they must commend themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God, and that they are called to subordinate personal convenience, and party interest, to the common weal

The right of free speech has in England been fought for as a sacred duty, and while there is no country where as to be an inspiration and and has been the subject of many

While He Gathered in the Cranberry Crop.

Port Jervis, Oct. 24 .- The Rev. W. H. Burley, pastor of the Methodist Church at Hainesville, N. J., twelve miles south of here, is the owner of a large cranberry marsh near New Brunswick, N. J. Last week he went to the marsh to gather his crop, leaving his wife Anna to look after the spiritual needs of his congregation. Last Sunday she preached morning and evening to crowded houses. The farmers, with their families, drove from long distances to the church, attracted by the novelty of the pastor's wife turning preached, and were astonished and pleased at her two logical sermons. conducted the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, as the pastor was still

Britain and France began to dispute over Egypt, nor during the most acute stage of the Niger differences between those two countries, has the situation different opinions should trust each looked so ominous as today, in spite of the hope expressed in the sober journals of both countries that the year in and year out, rail against the matter would be amicably arranged. It is a fact that the French naval and in England. Those who feed on that military authorities are making feverkind of diet can have it. The Govern- ish preparations for war, and though calm reigns at the British dockyards at Portsmouth, Chatham and Devonport, it is only the calm of preparedness, and significant orders have been ariving there from the admiralty, indicating the belief that Great Britain and France are on the brink of war. A STATE OF FEVER.

Mr. De Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, writes today: Never before has there been witnessed such a state of fever as is now prevailing in Great Britain, nor so great an exaltation of public feeling over a matter of foreign policy, while on her side France is promptly and rapidly, without looking forward or backward, preparing to fight any power provoking her. The French statesmen, however, still cling to the hope that the Marquis of Salisbury will offer some exchange which will enable them to retire from Fashoda, without apparent sacrifice of dignity. This hope is based on a conversation between Salisbury and Baron de Courcel (the French ambasador at London), which figures in a most important dispatch in the yellow book which the French Government will issue at once.

It is learned by the Associated Press that Baron de Courcel in this dispatch says Lord Salisbury, during the conversation referred to, asked him what were the desires of France in the Soudan, to which the baron replied the French wished for an outlet on the Upper Nile. Lord Salisbury then responded that he could not promise anythe pulpit is a greater power, or a leagues on such a matter. vigorously combat this impression, and "solid vote." It is the consensus of such illusions. They declare that the evacuation of Fashoda must precede anything else.

The Times, referring to the Fashoda question, says: It is not we who are trying to humiliate France, but it is France that seeks to put a great humiliation upon us. We have beaten the khalifa and have effectually occupied the provinces he usurped. We are now asked to clear out at the orders of an exploring party of nine Frenchmen, who owe their escape from destruction to our military success; or, if we are kindly permitted not to clear out, we are to pay a compensation for our title to what we have wrested from the khalifa. This is not a thing we can consent to discuss upon any such highhanded summons. We are there in effective occupation, and there we intend to remain. Punch hits off the popular feeling in this matter in a cartoon representing John Bull being pestered by a French organ-grinder outside his doorstep. The organ is labeled "Fashoda," and a monkey in French military uniform is siting a tiny drum. The organ-grinder asks: "What you give me if I go away?" John Bull-"I'll give you something if you don't."

DREYFUS AND ANTI-DREYFUS AGITATION.

The French socialists are organizing a vast demonstration, to take place on adherents to meet there, with the rallying cry of "Vive l'Armee." A collision between the two factions is anticipated, view of which the prefect of police is taking measures on a gigantic scale to preserve order. In addition the military authorities are preparing for trou-We are all at times impatient, and ble and the garrison of Paris will be nary socialist meetings have already resulted in conflicts with the police. SIGNIFICANT ADMISSION.

The French naval preparations were at first declared to be mere routine arrangements, but they are now admittedly directed against Great Britain. The minister of marine, M. Lockroy, is dispatching orders to all the naval stations along the coast, and he is receiving reports as to their condition. The French dockyards and arsenals are working at full pressure, hurriedly preparing warships and torpedo boats for active service.

But in his list of new prefects issued this week, he shows Moderate officials have mostly been replaced by Radicals. This has exasperated the Moderates, who. declare the ministry has thereby signed its own death-warrant. Interpellations from deputies on the government's policy at home and abroad are pouring in. M. Cavaignac, the former minister of war, intends to attack the government on the question of the revision of the Dreyfus case, opposing its reference to the court of cassation, on the ground that the army has in the council of appeal its own court of cassation.

BRITISH CONFIDENCE On the British side a feeling of absolute confidence is displayed. "Everything ready" is the burden of all the statements from naval quarters. In fact, the British navy has practically been on a war footing for a year past, and an authoritative announcement to this effect has come from the secretary of the admiralty, Mr. McCarthey. Referring to the preparations on the other side of the channel, he said: "So far as the British admiralty is concerned, the ships, officers and general administration are ready now to meet the wishes of the country."

A prominent dockyard official, in an interview, declared that the circumstances of the present crisis had been fully provided for in the mobilization He added that the British scheme. naval authorities had all their ships ready, and could commission a squadron of cruisers and have them off the French coast in less than 24 hours. This official also pointed out that the British naval maneuvers were put off this year. He added that the British ships at the present moment have a larger supply of coal on board and available and a larger stock of provisions than ever known before,

A GRAND ARRAY. The British admiralty list today shows nine British battleships and eleven fast cruisers are lying in the nel squadron, which was last reported of the Empress of Germany. off Villagarcia, Spain, consisting of battleships and five cruisers, constitutes the most modern and powerful homogenous fleet of warships affoat. Telegrams from Balmoral intimate that Queen Victoria is following the trend of events with much chagrin. Her aversion to war in the declining years of her reign is well known, and is an appreciable factor in the situation. The Austrian and German newspapers are closely following the dispute between Great Britain and France, and while they express the hope that it thing, and must consult with his col- is that the French position is untenable reap the fruits of victory.

SERIOUS SITUATION.

Another correspondent cables: Short of an actual declaration of war, the French premier, M. Brisson, is not strong enough to climb down from his untenable position, while the British prime minister. Lord Salisbury, is absolutely precluded-by his own colleagues' public declarations, as well as by the unanimous feeling of the country-from receding an inch from the demand for the withdrawal of Mar-chand from Fashoda. A heated controversy is in progress by the London and the Paris press over the accuracy of the statements made by the latter that negotiations had been under way since Lord Salisbury restated the British case in his dispatch of Oct. 3. Public feeling here is exasperated by the alleged inconclusive character of Marchand's report. It is regarded merely as a French trick-a belief to which the Times of today gives countenance.

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS. Meantime military and naval preparations are being pushed forward here steadily. The Birmingham small arms factory has received an order for 80.000 Lee-Metford rifles, and the government factories are working overtime turning out ristes under the utmost pressure. At the weekly muster of the volunteers in London Saturday the number of men who turned out was 30 per cent in excess of the average, and this without any special appeal. Enlisting with the shows a still further increase throughout of the country, while in London an exceptionally large access of recruits to the volunteer regiments is reported. Orders have been given at the government dockyards to keep the slips clear as far as is possible. None but essential repairs will be undertaken unless they can be completed within 48 hours. The great private yards throughout the British Isles have been called upon to report what warships are under construction for foreign powers, how soon they can be made ready for sea, and what accommodations are available for urgent repairs to warships. The admiralty officials claim that the British fleet is in a condition of complete preparedness. new 46-ton gun, mounted on 25 British battleships and cruisers, which, it is claimed, can pierce three feet of the hardest armor known, is the sheet anchor of the British naval experts, The Duke of York has forwarded an application to the admiralty for employment as captain of a first-class cruiser in the event of war.

OTHER DISPATCHES. Current rumor credits Mr. Chamberlain, secretary of the colonies, with & statement made in the course of a The Brisson ministry appears to have conversation on the steamship Majestic, to the effect that a war with France is inevitable within a few years, and might as well come now, when England is ready and has a

Mr. Chamberlain is said to have added that there are several disputes with France which war alone will definitely settle, among them being the future ownership of Egypt and Morocco and the French shore question in Newfoundland. Persons are supposed to know Mr. Chamberlain's views at first hand doubt if he would have committed himself in the manner suggested in a mixed company on an Atlantic liner, but admit that there is not the least improbability that the opinion attributed by rumors

THE CROSS IN CONSTANTINOPLE. In Berlin Emperor William's tour of the east is followed with the keenest interest. One of the most significant political features of his majesty's stay at Constantinople was the hoisting of the German naval ensign with the cross beside the Turkish crescent. since the conquest of Constantinople flags having a cross upon them have been never officially hoisted there. In Berlin it is understood that there is danger of a meat inspection bill to exclude American products, under sanitary pretexts. The agricultural department will undoubtedly present a bill to congress, if American products are attacked, providing for the sanitary inspection of adulterations of German wines and the dangerous colors used in toys, woolens, etc., and of the adulterations in dyes, chemicals, and other such products. Many Americans hold that German imports require careful sanitary inspection in both countries. Company Refuses to Recognize the Men's Union.

The Latter Asks for a Higher Rate of Wages.

Propositions Signed by the Men and Since Objected To-What Will Be the Next Move?-Company Said to Have Asked for Police Protection.

There is trouble brewing among the employes of the street railway company, and just where it will all end cannot be seen at present. For some time there has been a growing discontent, and this culminated on Friday night, when the men met at midnight and organized a union. Lttle can be learned from the employes as to what took place at the meeting, but they have decided to enforce the claims they make upon the company. In other words, there will be a strike if their demands are not conceded, or their grievances in some way redressed. The employes find fault with the manner in which certain men have been discharged and with the wages they receive, and the hours they work.
About three weeks ago the old men say, they agreed to work twelve hours per day for six days, but that the company then went to the relief men and stated that as the old men wanted twelve hours, there remained only five and five and a half hours for the relief men. The latter were told that as a result of the old men working twelve hours, the staff of the relief and substitutes would have to be greatly reduced. The proposition, though it met with favor from the older hands, was not relished by the younger men, as about twenty of them were to have been discharged. Discontent grew, and to even things up, the coinpany placed the old men in the position of the relief and substitute men every alternate two weeks. This action added fuel to the fire. The older men considered this unjust, as they had worked their way up, on small pay and short hours, and it was unreasonable, under the circumstances, to place the new comers on the same level with themserves, while only raying them 121/2 cents per hour. A set of propositions was submitted by company for the men to choose from, sign, and abide by.

One of these propositions was signed by one class of employes and the other one by another class. On the authority of these documents the statement was made in Friday's Advertiser that the men "were satisfied."

The following propositions were submitted to the men, only two of which were signed:

PROPOSITION NO. 1

The old men of the company to have 9 hours a day and the privilege of a day run. The relief, 8 and 81/2 hours, including a night relief.

WHAT MR. CARR, THE MANAGER, SAYS.

Mr. C. E. A. Carr, the manager of the London Street Railway, when seen this morning, said: "The management is not aware of any trouble. We have heard that trouble was brewing, but that is all. We have received more applications for work this morning than we know what to do with, by men who are willing to work for They would endeavor to secure a conof them citizens of London. We do not fear a tie-up of the system. You may say that the men who remain not be done, later developments would loyal to the company will receive the same fair consideration they have always received." When questioned regarding the deputation, Mr. Carr said, the deputation was headed, to begin with, by a discharged employe, who was dismissed from the company's em- following letter, accompanied by the ploy on the order of the city engineer, petition embodying the demands of the who wrote me some very strong letters. The company will be pleased to treat with the men as individuals, and adjust, if possible any grievance they may have. "The compay," said Mr. may have. "The compay," said Mr. Carr, "will not recognize any combination."

Mr. Rezin Orr, of Detroit, secretarytreasurer of the Amalgamated International Association of Street Railway Employes of America, was interviewed orter of The Grigg House last night. Mr. Orr said: "The conditions existing here in London have produced the organization. gether and applied for a charter, and There are 97 employes. received one. and 95 of them have become members of Division No. 97, of the Amalgamated Michael Richard Westby, Michael Delisle, Geo. Pickle, and M. Kerr, and instructed to seek a conference with Manager C. E. A. Carr, and present their demands. When they applied at the office of the London Street Railway Company, Mr. Carr refused to admit them. They attempted to hand him a paper, and he refused to accept it or receive them. When I arrived here from Detroit I went down to Mr. Carr's office alone and endeavored to secure a conference with him regarding the situation, and his words that he would have nothing at all to do with the organization or their representatives. Another meeting was held on Saturday night, at Labor Hall, at which the entire membership of 95 was present, together with six members of the Trades and Labor Couneil, viz.: Messrs. Frank Plant, Joseph Marks, Wm. Burleigh, Wm. Hunter, Wm. Pace and John McLean, all of states, meeting the committee were instructed to proceed on behalf of Division No. 97, in their endeavor to secure an adjustment of their grievances."

"What is the grievance? What caused the trouble?" the reporter ask-"The men," said Mr. Orr, "were not

The company run 20 cars, and this necessitates the employment of 40 men-or 80 in all, including the relief men. The old men of the company worked ten hours perday at it, and received 15 cents per hour, or $1.50 per day. The relief men worked seven and seven and a half hours at 121/2 cents, or about 87 cents per day. They were dissatisfied with these hours, and the men sought a change. The company, in making the change, considered the company first, and the men second. The company placed the relief men on the day runs of ten hours at 121/2 cents per hour, or $1 25 per day, and the old employes on the relief runs of seven and seven and a half hours, at 15 cents per hour, thus putting about $60 every alternate week into the company's pocket. The wages of the older employes was reduced about 45 cents per day, and the wages of the relief men and substitutes raised from 87 cents to $1 25. This did not increase their wages any; they merely worked more hours at | birds. the same low rate.'

RUMORS ABOUT PROTECTION. The company are placed in a little different position in London than most other places. They carry her Majesty's mails. To interfere with these is an offense of a very serious character. The company, it is alleged, fearing that there might be trouble, applied to the police for protection. This, it is said, was done because, if the present employes struck, the men might be disposed to prevent the running of the cars. The police authorities, when asked about the matter, would not deny or affirm the rumor, but simply stated that the "police protected everybody."

PRESIDENT MAHONE COMING. President W. D. Mahone, who was called from Cleveland to Toledo on Saturday night, has been sent for, and will likely arrive in time to attend the meeting of the employes called for tonight. Mr. Orr said this morning that any action which the men might take would largely depend on circumstances. decide what action would be taken.

THE POSITION OF THE MEN. The deputation appointed at Saturday night's meeting waited on Manager Carr this morning and handed him the men:

THEY ARE FAST FRIENDS

Lord Rosebery on the Relations of Britain and the United States.

Perth, Scotland, Oct. 24.-Lord Rosebery, the Liberal leader and former premier, in receiving the freedom of the city of Perth, referred in the most cordial terms to the "good understanding between Great Britain and our kinsmen in the United States." Continuing, the speaker said he believed the whole history of the ill-feeling which existed was one vast misunderstanding. "Since 1779, by the madness of one government, and the want of wisdom of another, Great Britain had waged two wars against the United States. in neither of which were we conspicuously successful. But throughout my life I have never been cognizant of an unfriendly feeling in this country towards the United States. On the other hand, the Americans, in whose territory the wars were fought, and with whom the recollection was most painful, have always had a sense of abiding soreness. But I am glad to say that after more than a century of misunderstanding, the United States has discovered that we are not enemies, but friends. I could not but believe that when they realized the position they would see that it was a great future before the two great nations going hand in hand, and that it was their duty, function and destiny to perform a great service, not actually in behalf of other nations, but in behalf of humanity and civilization."

Lord Rosebery then referred at length to the Fashoda question, his remarks having the same tenor as his previous utterances on the same subject, he

"If I were a British minister now, no man should rob me of one shred or jot of the honor to which the great work of civilization, culminating at strong enough to bear the weight of its cine. laurels, I am willing to take any share it may hand over to me."

A DINNER PILL.-Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food par-taken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment, it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convey the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with indigestion.

FIGHTING IN FORMOSA

Between Japanese Troops and Native Savages-Desperate Engagement -Over 200 Killed.

Chicago, Oct. 24 .-- A special to the Record from Tacoma, Wash., says: The steamer Victoria brings the news that two more battles have been fought in Formosa between Japanese troops and the native savages, who seem to be bent upon exterminating all the Japanese on the island. So serious are the disturbances, numbers of the European merchants are fleeing to Amoy by every steamer.

A month ago, 1,000 of the aborigines attacked and set fire to four of the principal Japanese military stations. After eight hours' desperate fighting, more than 200 were killed. On the following day a large band of natives advanced to Hankyo, burning the stations at Tako. Japanese troops reached Hankyo at the same time, and surprised the aborigines in their headquarters at Anko, which was burned. In another battle, scores of natives were shot down.

The Formosa rebels have been supplied with arms and equipments by the Chinese, hundreds of whom have landed from Amov.

Norwegian Bark Wrecked and the Crew Saved-Perils of a Ship's Orew-Steamers Missing.

Port Colborne, Ont., Oct. 24.-The barge Lizzie Lane was sighted yesterday drifting down the lake under bare poles. Two harbor tugs left to her assistance, and succeeded in towing her to port after several hours' battling with the heavy seas. The Lane was in tow of the steamer Oronoco, and her other consort, the Granada, which left Buffalo Friday night, all coal-laden for Duluth. When near Long Point she encountered a fierce southwest gale, breaking up the tow and sending the two barges adrift. The Lane soon became dismantled in the storm and no doubt would have foundered only for the timely assistance of the tugs. FISHERMEN HAVE A CLOSE CALL.

St. John's Nfld, Oct. 24.-Fears are entertained for the safety of the Moravian mission steamer Washington which has been collecting products from the mission stations among the Labrador Esquimaux. A DEADLY DRUG

The Effects of Cocaine-The Increasing Use of It.

The British Medical Journal calls cocaine the third great scourge of the world, alcohol and opium being the first and second. This is sustained by the increased frequency of cocaine cases in hospitals, asylums and courts of law. Cocaine takers are usually past 30, and most of them have taken alcohol and opium for their effects before cocaine was used. Very few persons become cocaine takers without previous addiction to drugs of some kind. Persons of the tramp and criminal classes who use this drug are increasing in many of the cities. The peculiarity of cocaine is that it produces apparently nothing at first but a slight degree of exaltation and sense of comfort and agreeable bodily activity. There is no mental confusion; the only symptom is good humor and general satisfaction. The hypnotic effects, when they appear, are not prominent, and there is no headache, nausea or confusion the next day. After a time the mental exaltation merges into slight hallucinations and delusions. The senses seem to be very acute, and thought flows with great rapidity, and impressions of fear of danger begin, not sharply de-fined as in the delirium of alcohol, but vague and confused in form and ob-Halifax, N. THE BRIDE OF

Catherine went up the wide staircase to her beautiful room on the first landing; but having entered that luxuriant chamber she did not, as so many heroines are represented to have done, first lock her door, and then fling herself upon the bed. She put on a thick furtrimmed jacket and an exquisite little black hat, and also a pair of thick, wellfitting boots, and then, having equip-ped herself for a walk without the as-sistance of her maid, she went into her bathroom and rang a bell, which brought her maid speedily to her.

Martha was a tall, strongly-built young woman, clever at her needle and at hairdressing, also active, energetic, and quite devoted to her young lady.
"Martha, I am going into Pontivor to see my old women and bedridden patients, and I must have tea, and cakes, sugar, eggs, and a couple of bottles of port wine. Do you think you can carry a large basket this cold morning?"

"Oh, yes, miss," the girl answered, "I can earry anything today. I am in spirits, Miss Catherine. William has come home safe to Swansea, and will stay a fortnight after Christmas. suppose you can spare me for a few days to go to my aunt's? I shall see him then; his home is quite near."

"You will see him every day and all the day, of course, Martha," Catherine answered kindly; and, she added, after a moment, "You must feel very happy at the prospect of seeing your true love again. I suppose you have no doubt of his being your true love, Martha's eyes widened in surprise. "I never doubted it, miss," she said; "and I humbly hope that I may never have reason to doubt him.

"I hope you never may," Catherine answered, with a wintry smile-a very strange emile, Martha thought. "And, now, Martha, please to make haste," Catherine said, speaking briskly. "I will go my rounds with you and the basket; after that, I must cross the river and go on alone to Pontivor church; I have promised the Longmores to help them to decorate it; there will be plenty of flowers, and heaps of ivy and holly there. Papa sent a cartload yesterday. I shall be busy until late in the afternoon. Papa has asked a few friends to dinner at five, so that I must be home in time to dress for that early hour. I have an awfully busy day before me."

In short. Catherine Hilliard had made up her mind to be busy and active and energetic, and throw her had been been supported by the state of the short of the state of the trouble to the winds. She did not pause to ask herself in what manner Mrs. Crosby had received her information. Oliver had written to her through the Miss Longmores, the vicar's daughters. One of them, then, probably, had somehow discovered his faithlessness, and had communicated the fact to Mrs. Crosby.

"I was unkind to betray the secret," she said to herself, "but it could not

Catherine crushed the note contemptuously in her hand and smiled scornfully to herself. "I understand," she said, "he is going to tell me of his rich widow. I will spare him that trouble." along the frost-hardened park of the Darran, towards the village of Pontivor. Martha followed, carrying the basketful of dainties for the sick poor.

"At least I will try and make those poor creatures happy and comfortable," Catherine said to herself, "although my own heart is breaking-breaking. What am I saying? I never was so happy in life! What a mercy I have found out in time, and shall not be obliged to listen to his paltry excuses.

Thus the poor heart tortured itself, and cried out that its bitter pain was no pain.
The village was reached, and now, for some two hours. Catherine was busy among her poor old people.

Most of the cottages were very clean; the stone floors well swept, the hearthfires bright and cheerful. There was no abject poverty among the miners of Pontivor, for the colliers' wages were high, but there were certain delicacies in the shape of cakes, dried fruits and wines, which it was the custom of the Darran people to distribute occasionally among the sick, and at Christmas-time these gifts were doubled. Catherine read to the poor people, chatted to them cheerfully, won their hearts completely. At last the basket was emptied, and it was time to go on to the church.

"You can go back now, Martha,"

Catherine said to her maid. "I must go on to the church." "I hope you won't have any snow miss, before you return," Martha said, looking up to the murky, leaden sky.

The wind blew bitterly keen down the mountains; there was snow on the tops of them all, and the sides looked black and ominous, yawning here and there where there was entrance to a

There was a great pit on the other side of the village which had not been worked for years until the month before this story opens. At that time it had been discovered that an excellent vein of coal lay in an hitherto unsuspected corner; and now, lo! and behold, miners were at work there night

This great pit belonged actually to Oliver Leslie; it had been left him in the will of his great uncle. Up to the present time. however, he had regarded the Glanpaith colliery as valueless, only in the little note which Catherine had torn into little pieces, he had

Catherine had been thinking, and thinking hopefully. of the Glanpaith, when she had stood at the window, after breakfast, and stared at the grim mountain at whose feet it lay. "Now, let him grow rich on the Glan-paith, and marry his detestable widow!" said poor Catherine to herself. Martha had gone home. Catherine stood on the wooden bridge which spanned the stream dividing Pontivor village from Pontivor church and parson-

The church was a pretty one, rather new-that is to say, it had been built within the last 50 years or so, since Pontivor had become a mining district. The parsonage was a long, low, slate-covered house, smothered in roses during the summer, and with Virginia creeper during the autumn. Now it looked bleak and desolate enough. The garden beds and lawn were spotted with snow. Every flower was dead. "Not more desolate than my heart," said Catherine to herself. At that very moment a figure passed out of the parsonage house, and walked down the garden towards the large, painted wooden gate—a tall, slight, yet stalwart figure Catherine's heart stirred wildly. Was it love? Was it hate? Ah! he was coming there to tell her of his widow.

He looked up all at once, saw her, waved his hand, walked on rapidly towards the bridge. She made no response; but, hastening over the bridge, entered the church, which was quite before Oliver had time to reach She entered, and paused a moher. ment. What angry, violent, revengeful feelings were those she was carrying into the house of prayer?

They had lighted a couple of lamps, Somebody was playing the "Stabat Mater" exquisitely. The noble music thrilled through Catherine's soul. How divine an ecstasy must have inspired the musician's soul when he wrote that

She looked round. Not a soul in the church to be seen; only the floor was strewed with branches of holly and wreaths of ivy, and there were steps and a ladder in the aisle. Another mo-ment, and Oliver stood before her. Oh! that moment! the glorious Christmas music pealing through the church, the dim light falling on altar and pillarhe, the loved of her soul, standing by, ardent, anxious—and she, turned to stone by the words she had heard, looking on the flashing dark eyes as false beacon-lights, ready to lead her soul astraw.

"Darling, did you not see me 'when you were on the bridge?"

"Catherine, what is the matter?" He tried to take he hand, but she drew it away and stood aside.
"Ah! you have altered your mind! You have taken a worldly and sensible view of the matter! Is it so, Miss Hil-His tone was very cutting and severe. He folded hie arms. How blind we are! Catherine thought his tone insulting. She never doubted that he had sent for her to tell her of his engagement to the rich widow. She supposed he had meant to be pitiful, and courteous towards her; she was most thoroughly enraged at this supposition. "I have taken a very sensible riew of the whole matter, Mr. Leelie. I wonder now how I could have been so foolish as to listen to your senseles proposi-tion that we hould continue to regard our engagement as binding, notwith-standing your most pitiful circum-stances. I beg to tell you now that I have resolved to discard the preposter. ous idea at once and forever!'

Ah! what wrath possessed her, that unhappy Catherine! With the image of the widow before her mind, seeing Oliver changed, heartless, mercenary, with the bitter knowledge that he had shown her letters about for his friends to laugh at this impassioned young creature, feeling herself outraged, knew not how to place bounds to her scorn and indignation.

Oliver Leslie was a handsome man, with a noble and somewhat haughty presence. This beautiful girl had first won his heart, and now had flung it from her and was trampling on it -trampling on it as any cruel, careless child may trample on a worm. "I will not let her think me such a worm," said the young man to him-

Poor bleeding hearts! poor blinded eyes! The pride of these two young persons was breaking their heartsmight ruin their lives. Neither of them would ask for a word of explanation from the other.

"I think you very wise, Miss Hill-liard," Oliver said calmly. He waited a moment, then added: "In acting thus you obey the wishes of your adopted May it be for your happiparents.

His voice broke with emotion. Catherine thought that, delighted to be rid of her, he was about to offer her sage advice on the duty of obedience.
"My happiness, Mr. Leslie," she said with a forced laugh, "can be no concern of yours. Allow me to suggest that this interview should cease. The Miss Longmores are to help me to decorate part of the aisle and the font. We expect friends at the Darran at 5. My time is hardly my own this after-

Oliver took off his hat, and saluted Catherine with as much ceremony as if she had been a princess. Then he left the church, and the unhappy girl was left standing alone.

METHODIST MILLION

The Twentieth Century Thanksgiving Fund-The Preliminary Announcement.

The Christian Guardian, the organ of the Methodist Church of Canada, publishes this week the preliminary announcement of the fund committee of the twentieth century $1,000,000 fund, appending the names of A. Carman, chairman, and John Potts, general secretary, to the latter of whom all subscriptions are to be addressed. The fund is to be known as the "Twentieth century $1,000,000 thanksgiving fund," and is to be divided among educational institutions, missions, superannuation and supernumerary funds and local church debts. A contributor may designate the object to which he wishes his contribution to go. To gain unanimity of effort, the annual conferences of the Methodist Church are asked to take measures to complete the organization of every district and circuit. It is also advocated that a date be set apart to be known as the twentieth century fund Sunday, and that the second Sunday in October, 1899, be that date; that public meetings be held in all the churches on that day, at which the scheme shall be definitely brought be-fore the congregations, and offerings then and there solicited; that immediately after these meetings a thorough and systematic canvass be made, and the whole effort, including the payment of all contributions, be concluded by Oct. 1, 1900. All adherents of the church are asked to contribute and not to allow the funds to be wholly made up of the contributions of the wealthy. At the same time it is directed that the customary givings to the church be in no way impaired. The announcement concluded with the statement that the movement is one of "the entire connection, and is expected to be simultaneous throughout all the annual confer-

The name of John L. Sullivan was the magnet that drew two large audiences to the Grand Saturday afternoon and evening, though John L. himself proved to be the poorest part of the show. Sermons by Rev. J. W. Pedley, Rev. Jos. Edge and J. S. Stuart.

Mr. Edge on "Tramp Evangelists"-Mr. Stuart on Christian Giving-Mr. Pedley's Advice to Young Men-Various Church Notes.

Rev. J. W. Pedley.

And the king said, is the young man Absalom safe?" (II. Samuel, xvii., 29). This was the subject from which Rev. J. W. Pedley preached an impressive sermon at the First Congregational Church last evening.

"'Is the young man safe?' This," said the preacher, "was the supreme question for David. The father's heart got the better of him. The safety of his son was more to him than the fate of a kingdom or the result of a battle. His son had the heart of a rat, a sneak thief, a poltroon, a liar, yet his father loved him. In this he is a type of God. David's question is tragically common. Through all the ages since, in every land the question has been repeated. In many a home the old folks sit about the fireside and wonder if the boy is safe. Safety is a big term. It covers body, mind, soul. No one is safe till he is safe in all three. Because Absalom was in danger, the question was asked. All young men are in danger. Young manhood is in a critical time, and therefore dangerous. The young life which has been guarded and watched and guided goes forth alone-an anxious time. Companionships are fateful; principles are established; habits are adopted then. Are the young men safe? The state, the church, the exchange, the school, literature, art, labor, the great institutions of modern life are looking at the rising race with a critical eye. The young men hold the future. Are they safe? A serious question. What David asked about Absalom, God asks about us. He is anxious. Jesus said, 'Follow me.' That way lies safety for time and eternity."

Rev Joseph Edge.

The anniversary of the Sunday school in connection with the Wellington Street Methodist Church was marked by special services yesterday. Rev. Dr. J. V. Smith preached in the morning, and the pastor, Rev. Joseph Edge, occupied the pulpit in the evening. Rev. A. G. Harris and Rev. John Morrison also took part in the afternoon service, which was of a very interesting character. The music was under the leadership of Mr. Frederick G. Simpson, and was exceptionally good.

Rev. Mr. Edge, in his sermon, outlined the requirements of a model Sunday school. The first necessity was that every parent be identified with the church, he said. Parents should take an intense interest in the things their children are doing. They should take an intense interest in the equipment of the Sunday school. They should see that their children are equipped with the necessary literature. They should have a knowledge of the lesson the child is studying. They should know the teachers, and should sometimes, at least, get into the Sunday school and see how things are going on. There should be a good set of officers, who would be at their places regularly, and who understood and loved children. Three requisites for teachers are that they admit they are sinners, submit to their surroundings, and commit the seed God has given to the soil at hand. The general motto should be "Aim high; aim at Christ," and nothing else. Music calculated to attract was another es-

After elaborating on each of these points, the speaker said in conclusion: "The time has come when our Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools should evangelize the world, and we can give tramping evangelists their walking tickets."

Rev. J. G. Stuart.

In Knox Church, South London, the pastor, Rev. Jas. G. Stuart, preached in the evening from the text, "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thy increase."-Prov. iii., 9.

He pointed out that the duty of Christians in regard to the use of property is here distinctly taught and enjoined. The underlying principles are God's ownership and our stewardship in the use of our possessions. God not only claims us, but has a proprietary right in all that we have. He elaborated the thoughts that God is the absolute and universal owner of all, that he has the right to lay down the laws of conduct for us, because we are his offspring, and his is the sovereignty of parental love: that we hold our property in trust from him, being stewards of the Lord's heritage, and are responsible for our use of it to him. To honor the Lord with our substance should be an ever present purpose in regard to our possessions. How is this ac-complished? First, in acquiring property. Employ honest methods, so that every dollar you earn is clean; not got by robbing, fraud, deceit or oppression. Confine your gains to a legitimate increase of your substance. Avoid the God-dishonoring methods that so often obtain in the commercial world. Learn that "an honest man is the noblest of God."

Second, in the expenditure. Our substance is general -to be used, not to be hoarded; to be spent, not to be tied up in a napkin. He then noted some of the legitimate uses of our possessions, giving the scriptural authority. It may be employed in supporting oneself, family and poor relations, in paying all pecuniary obligations, as wages, debts, etc; in paying cus toms and government dues; in relief of the poor, and, lastly, for the worship and work of God. We cannot see any more worthy way of honoring God than spending our means to carry out the designs of divine love and mercy. In the third place, honor the Lord by adopting his methods of giving, and taking our instructions from his word. Our giving should
