CANADIAN DISSATISFACTION. LONDON, March 6. - Sir Richard Webster, formerly Attorney-General in the Minsitry of Lord Salisbury, gave notice in the House of Commons today that tomorrow he would ask the Government what steps they proposed to take to bring the matter to a conclusion, in view of the great and growing dis-satisfaction in Canada over the delay in the settlement of the claims for the seizure of sealing vessels in Bering Sea.

TOURISTS IN TROUBLE. PORT SAID, March 6.-The Belgian steamer Friesland, from New York on Feb. 6 with a party of tourists en route for Jaffa, grounded inside the breakwater as she was leaving this port. AUSTRIA SHIVERING.

VIENNA, March 6.-Southern Austria is suffering again from the cold and heavy snows. The railroads and highways are impassable in many districts. Numerous villages are completely isoated. Trains have not entered or left Fiume for twenty hours. Abazia and Agram also have been cut off from all regular communication with the rest of the empire. Fresh food and fuel are greatly needed.

HANG UP THE KNOUT! BERLIN, March 6.-A dispatch from St. Petersburg says that an imperial edict has been issued abolishing the use of the knout in the infliction of punishment. Hitherto the peasantry have been completely at the mercy of the local judges. The issuance of this edict is due to the fact that statistics were submitted to the Czar showing that within the last three years 3,000 persons convicted of petty thefts have died from the effects of the knout.

THE IRISH LAND BILL. LONDON, March 6.-The Chief Secretary for Ireland, Mr. John Morley, in the House of Commons today, corrected a statement which he made in introducing the new Irish Land Bill on Monday last. He said that if a landlord did not assent to the price fixed by the land commission for a purchase by an evicted tenant or tenants it was not intended that the whole transaction should end. The Government intended that if a landlord did not object, after a prescribed time an agreement to purchase would thereby be assumed to have been made, and in case of disagreement as to price the land commission must de-

New York. A HOT FIGHT.

LONDON, March 6.-The Tokio correspondent of the Central News says a dispatch from Gen. Nodzu dated at Hai Cheng yesterday gives this information: As arranged the army attacked old New Chwang yesterday. The fighting began at 10 o'clock in the morning. Both divisions had entered the city by noon. Part of the enemy had fled to Yingkao, but the greater part still occupied the houses and streets, and obstinately resisted the Japanese troops. The street fighting was desperate, but the Japanese won their way gradually street by street, until by 11 o'clock in the evening they had completely routed the enemy. The Chinese left behind 1,-880 killed and wounded, 600 prisoners, eighteen guns and great quantities of rifles, ammunition, banners and provisions. The Japanese loss was somewhat above 200 killed and wounded.

DIS. FROUS FLOODS IN HUNGARY BUDA-PESTH, March 6.-The Temesvar district has been threatened for severa days with floods from the swollen water-ways. The peasants held meetings to consider the best means of saving their crops, and decided eventually to cut the dykes of the Bega Canal, thus giving vent in the territory of the Royal Dutch Company, which owns much land and thousands of cattle in the district. The company was warned. It posted a force of its employes at a point where the peasants planned to cut the dyke, and instructed them to warn off everybody attempting to approach the canal. The peasants attacked the employes with scythes and clubs, dispersed them after a hot fight, and cut a deep ditch through the canal bank. They were obliged to flee for their lives when the water burst through. Thousands of acres of land were under water within a few hours. Some 7,500 of the company's pigs were drowned, and 10,000 cattle are in imminent danger. The company will sue the Government for damages. The Ministers of the Interor and Agriculture will in estigate the

PERILS OF THE NORTH SEA.

Bit of Ocean Full of Anxiety ger and Navigator.

The passage of the North Sea, or German Ocean—for it is equally well known by both titles—is looked upon with dread by the navigators who have to prave its dangers, says the Boston

Transcript. The sailors of the North German Lloyd call it the sea of murder, in allusion to the marine disasters with which its history bristles. The captain of the liner whose destination is Liverpool feels that the perils of his voyage are practically over when he reaches Queenstown. The commanders of the sister ships of the Elbe, on the other hand, realize that the most dangerous part of their journey is yet to come, for ahead of them is the narrow and crowded English Channel and the equally crowded and tempestuous North Sea. The unruly waters are open to the fierce sweep of the wind that is so dreaded in Europe - that from the northeast. Only those who have experienced these marrow-chilling, pneumonia-breeding, blasts can realize their anger and their power. The Gulf Stream, which surges up the channel and around the northern end of the British Isles, meets the icy currents from the Arctic regions. Storms, varied by dense fogs, result from this combination. The east coast of England forms a deadly lee shore for the shipping caught in the prevailing winds. In addition to these natural dangers, the North Sea is crossed and recrossed by dozens of steamer "lanes." It is also the seat of the great herring fisheries, with their thousands of smacks and schooners, that, lying at anchor here, there and everywhere, are by no means the least of the dangers which menace the navigator. Here, too, there are hundreds of Scotch and English coasting craft, which stand well out to sea to avoid the dangers of the coast And, lastly, the mouth of the Thames spreads funnel-like into the North Sea, adding to the total perils with its fleets of incoming and outgoing

THE SWIFT ST. CLAIR.

How a Port Huron Man Would Utilize Its Water Power.

PORT HURON, Mich., March 6.-Dr. Myron Northup last night presented to the Chamber of Commerce the model of a scow rigged with paddle wheels, which he believed could be used to supply motive power for dynamos. plan is to place scows on the St. Clair River, the power generated by the wheels revolving in the rapid current, he thinks, would drive several large dy-namos on the rear of the scow, while a cable run from the dynamos to land would carry power for several large fac-tories. The only objection urged was that four months in the year the wheels would have to revolve in ice.

FOR a short distance a lion or tiger can outrun a man and can equal the speed of a fast horse, but they lose their wind at the end of a half-mile at the most. They have little endurance, and are remarkably weak in lung power. Their strength is the kind which is capable of a terrific effort for a short time. It would take six men to hold a lion down, even after his legs were tied so that he could not use his paws.

DISSOLUTION ON THE CARDS.

QUEBEC, March 6.-The report that there may be another session of Parliament before dissolution has been conclusively disposed of for everyone down here. Ever since it became a moot question whether the Government was going to dissolve or meet Parliament again the Evenement here, which is edited by Mr. Joneas, M. P. for Gaspe, one of the most faithful of the Ministerial henchmen, has fought tooth and nail against an appeal to the country be-fore another session to legislate for the benefit of the Manitoba colleges. Mr. Joncas on Saturday was at Ottawa, when he wired to his paper that the game was up, that it was useless for the advocates of another session to deceive themselves any long-er—that dissolution had been decided upon irrevocably. And to prove that his information was authentic and that he fully believes in its truth, Mr. Joncas announces in the Evenement that he leaves in a couple of days for Gaspe to complete his organization for the elec-

CASE. TORONTO, March 6.-J. D. Edgar, Q.C., and M. P. for West Toronto, has written the following letter to the Globe on the "Manitoba School Question," and it will appear in that paper tomor-

To the Editor of the Globe: Sir,-In your article of the 4th inst. upon the Manitoba school question there is much admirable comment upon the situation with which patriotic Canadians should find no fault. I do not think that you exaggerate the difficulties and dangers which surround the subject, and your appeals to all parties and creeds and races to try and keep it free from party and sectarian bitterness are eloquent and timely.

You are inclined to attach much weight to the conclusions of the Privy Council, and to commend them to the consideration of the people of Manitoba in full confidence that the latter will be not only just but generous to the Catholic minority of the Province. Beyond all question that is the most desirable manner of disposing of the dispute; and it would doubtless be more agreeable to the complaining Catholics who are sturdy Manitobans themselves to obtain relief in that way than by any exercise of Federal powers.

To promote the Provincial regulation of this dispute should be the first object of the Dominion Government. If object of the Dominion Government. If they adopt any language now towards Manitoba which sayors of either die had meant that he compared the Pat-Manitoba which savors of either dictation or threat they will enormously aggravate the difficulties in the way of a settlement. To my mind a grave and solemn responsibility rests upon the Ottawa Cabinet at this moment. As I read the law, in the light of the latest decision, they have vast powers of interference, but those powers should only be brought into play as a last resort if all efforts at conciliation and negotiation shall

While I recognize the rights of minorities as sacred things to be guarded and protected, it is the part of states manship to use care and judgment in stretching out the strong arm of Federal power for that purpose.

At this critical juncture, when we are on the eve of a severe election contest when the electors are partly blinded by the light of battle in their eyes, it would be unpatriotic to hurl into the political arena an arbitrary and premature decree from Ottawa as an ultimatum to Manitoba in the school ques tion. If that course were adopted the conclusion would be irresistible that in sheer despair the Cabinet was willing to excite the fiercest passions of creed and race among the people in order to withdraw attention from their political record.

The step could only be taken in the hope of attracting the support of Catholic electors irrespective of party. That calculation would assuredly fail. The ruse would be seen through at once and all patriotic Canadians, Catholic and Protestant alike, would treat with scorn and indignation a cowardly and traitorous Administration who in at tempting to secure a party advantage would sow the seeds of hate and discord among the Canadian people. Yours, etc.,

J. D. EDGAR.

LATE CANADIAN NEWS.

The extimated expenditure of the Hamilton police commissioners this year is $46,000.

The Orange Grand Lodge of Western Ontario will convene in St. Catharines next Tuesday. Samuel Burnett, one of the pioneer settlers of Huntingdon, has died at the age of 89 years. Mr. J. D. Ronald, accepted Toronto's offer of $5,000 for a steam fire engine. The engine was shipped from Brussels

The object of Lord Aberdeen's visit to Toronto is to inaugurate a movement for the establishment of a boys' brigade similar to those in Great Britain. In future there will be no permanent appointment of the medical staff of the Protestant hospital at Ottawa. They will be appointed for three years. Mr. J. Bedard appeared before Judge Andrews in the Superior Court, Quebec, under the grave accusation of having connived in the sequestering of documents from the records of a very important case.

It is understood that among the bequests made by the late Col. Alan Gilmour is the munificent donation of $25,-000 to the Protestant hospital at Ottawa. The Old Men's Protestant Orphanage is to receive something like $5,000.

General and Mrs. Herbert have left for England. The major-general has been granted two months' leave of absence, and will lay before the War Office his progress report of the work done upon the fortifications at Esquimalt.

The following license commissioners have been appointed: West Middlesex-James Cox, Malcolm McGugan, Adam Clark. Haldimand—James Mitchell, Robert Buckley, John Lynch. South Norfolk—John Murphy, James Mc-Bride, Thomas L. Gilies. A Belleville dispatch says: The grand jury have returned two true bills against J. D. Ronald, of Brussels, Ont., on the charge of attempting to bribe R. T. Houston, a member of the council of the village of Tweed to purchase a fire engine in which he is interested.

The Chatham council has decided to impose a license fee of $65 to $25 on hawkers and peddlers. This is aimed at Italian fruit vendors, who spend the summer in town and peddle their fruit through the streets, to the detriment of the regular trade.

The steel gang on the T., H. and B. finished laying tracks through section 20 on Tuesday evening. The rails are now less than four miles from Carth street, Hamilton, and it is confidently expected that Friday night or Saturday morning at the latest will see a T., H. and B. engine at Garth street.

Pointed Speeches by Messrs. Gibson and Ross

In Reply to Attacks of Opposition Members on the Government's Policy-The Budget Debate Still Gn.

(Special to the "Advertiser.") TORONTO, March 6.-It was a bad day for some critics today. Two Ministers spoke, and each in his own way disposed most effectually of the assaults made upon him. Late at night—at 10:30—Hon. Geo. W. Ross rose to reply to ome of the attacks thrown out against the Education Department. Seldom, if ever, has the Minister of Education been in better form, and the House was treated to an exhibition of what Parliamentary fence should be. Poor Mr. How-land's well-turned classical allusions got him into trouble. Mr. Ross was administering a sharp rebuke to the member for Toronto for his sneer at the Patrons as barbarians, and on Mr. Howland's saying that he had not used that word the Minister retorted that his classical rons to the Goths and Vandals of old. Mr. Howland had referred to still more ancient times, and tried to point this out. "Jerusalem was plowed over," he expostulated.

"I am sorry for Jerusalem," replied Mr. Ross, with great solemnity, and the House roared. Academically Mr. Howland was correct, but he will not probably be in haste again to interrupt Mr. Ross in full torrent.

Mr. St. John was unwise enough to interrupt and came off the worse for it. The whole speech of the Minister was a powerful vindication of the public school system of the Province.

School system of the Frovince.

Hon. Mr. Gibson, too, gave a capital exposition of the pittlessly analytical method of debate, and most effectually he dealt with the well-known charges of waste in the supplies of public institutions. The total yearly cost of these is $763,000, and the loose way in which the charge is usually worded would lead people to think that from 10 to 25 per cent of this entire sum—to take Mr Marter's estimate-could be saved. But Mr. Gibson showed how one-third of this goes in salaries, how $189,000 is spent for goods actually bought under tender; how $59,000 more is spent for meat, which is procured by a system which Conservatives and all have admitted to be better than the tender system; and how of the residue the tender system could possibly be used only by an expenditure of $82,000—a wonderful shrinkage. Mr. Gibson then defended the present system, and incidentally gave a complete and telling answer to Mr. Haycock's challenge for the Government to compare the cost of Ontario asylums with those of Michigan, a State of about the same population.

It was a fine example of informal, calm logical debate, as Mr. Ross' speech was of the fighting sort of oratory.

The debate on the budget is by no means ended yet, nor were these the only speeches delivered. For the Liberals Mr. Gibson, of Huron, and Mr. Davis, of North York, made excellent speeches, while Dr. Meacham, Mr. St. John and Mr. Gurd delivered speeches which drew forth the effective replies from the pair of Ministers.

Mr. Alanson Cooke will be the choice of the Conservatives as a candidate for Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c.

Second Session of the Missionary Auxiliary-A Visit From the Children.

THE WOMEN WORKERS.

WEDNESDAY MORNING. The second business session of the annual meeting of the Huron Woman's Auxiliary met in the Synod Hall at 10 a.m. today. After the devotional exercises the minutes of the preceding session were read and the roll called. Mrs. Boomer read a letter from an Algoma missionary, asking that the Huron Woman's Auxiliary would continue to remember Algoma, and specially its much-needed superannuation fund; also a letter in a similar strain from the Bishop of Mackenzie River. Mrs. Kains read a letter from Mrs. Swainson, written in warm commendation of Huron's lady missionary in the Northwest, Miss Wilson, and deploring that failing health had compelled her to resign

Mrs. Newman, last corresponding secretary for Huron, and Miss Wilson were warmly welcomed, and spoke a few words of kindly greeting.

Two very excellent papers were read, one by Miss Battersby, of Port Dover, strongly advocating systematic giving, and urging the duty of giving at least a tenth; the other by Miss Ermatinger, of St. Thomas, giving a most interesting account of a visit made by her to Tunis, and an account of mission work among the Jews there.

The meeting was then addressed by the Bishop of Huron in words of kindliest appreciation and encouragement, the Woman's Auxiliary being described as the most alive and progressive of all the diocesan organizations. The bishop approved the decision of the meeting to reserve to the Woman's Auxiliary the designation of its own funds, and promised to do all that with him lay always to help the Woman's Auxiliary with his counsel

The special thank-offering for the consolidation of the church in Canada was then brought to the bishop, who read the texts inscribed on the envelopes. The amount of this thank-offering was $172 47. The meeting then adjourned to the next room, where luncheon was provided. WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON'S SESSION. After an interval for lunch the session was resumed at 2 p.m. The question drawer was opened, leading up to an animated and profitable discussion relative to the details of auxiliary work.

Miss Montizambert, the general Dorcas secretary, gave much valuable information, and Mrs. Tilley spoke earnestly on the need of undertaking all the work in a spirit of prayer. Woodstock was named as the place of meeting of the board of management next October. A touching incident of the afternoon was the presentation by the Bishop of Huron, on behalf of the St. Paul's Woman's Auxiliary branch and Sunday school, of a life membership certificate to Miss Cross in token of their appreciation of her loving service among them. At 4:30 the children of the mission bands of the London branches were marshaled into the hall, carrying their banners and singing. The various presidents of these mission bands are to be most heartily congratulated on their success in training these little ones. The order and attentio of the large gathering was wonderful After a few introductory words from th bishop of the diocese to the children, the were addressed by the bishop of Moosonee who gave them a graphic description of his great northern diocese, where there are neither horses nor roads, and of the hardships and terrible isolation endured by his listen to him asking the little ones for their prayers, that men might be found to offer themselves for work in those far Resolutions of thanks were passed to the dean and chapter, to the organist and choir, to the ladies of London for their most graceful hospitality accorded to the delegates, and a resolution of condolence to the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, mis-devoted missionaries. It was pathetic to sionaries in China, placed by the war in a position of great danger. The benediction, pronounced by the bishop, closed this happy and successful eighth annual meeting of the Huron Woman's Auxiliary. FOR THE GOVERNOR'S PRIZE.

TORONTO, March 6.-The curling match for the Governor's prize, a handsome silver cup, took place today at the Victoria Club, the competition being confined to the two best clubs in the Province, the Hamilton Thistles, winners of the tankard, and the Oshawas, winners of the consolation prize. The Oshawas had the best of it throughout, save at the outset, and won by 13 points. DEATH OF EDWIN FORBES. NEW YORK, March 6. — Edwin Forbes, the artist and writer, died this morning in his 56th year. He was born in this city. At the breaking out of the civil war he became special war correspondent for Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly. He was present at most of the principal engagements of the war, and supplied his paper with many drawings made upon the field. A bill was introduced in Congress a few years ago providing for the purchase by the Government for $100,000 of all Mr. Forbes' original sketches of war scenes, which were intended to be placed in the publie library at Washington. Although the bill was favored by Gen. Sickels and Gen. Butterfield, it failed to pass. As a painter of horses Mr. Forbes ranked high the system and break up colds, headache and fevers without unpleasant after-effects use the delightful liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is estimated that 200 tons of ostrich feathers have been exported from Cape Colony during the past 30 years, valued at $50,000,000. Mrs. Celeste Coon, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "For years I could not eat many kinds of food without producing a burning, excruciating pain in my stomach. I took Parmelee's Pills according to directions under the head of 'Dyspepsia or Indigestion.' One box entirely cured me. I can now eat any. thing I choose without distressing me in the least." These pills do not cause pain or griping, and should be used when a cathartic is required. Frank Emery and James Buck, employes at the Watrous engine works, proves at the Watrous engine works, Brantford, were on Wednesday engaged in unloading a planer from off a sleigh by a holst. In doing this the planer slipped to one side and tipped the sleigh over, the planer coming against the two men. Emery's leg was broken near the ankle, and Buck was badly bruised, but it is thought not seriously. Why will you allow a cough to lacerate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave, when by the timely use of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided? This syrup is pleasant to the taste, and unsurpassed for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc.

AN OLD SETTLER GONE.

Squire Caverhill, of Lobo, Passed Away at a Ripe Old Age-Helped to Build the First Mill Erected on the Site of London.

It is with general regret that the "Advertiser" announces the death of Thos. Caverhill, justice of the peace, Lobo township. In Mr. Caverhill the district loses one of its sturdy pioneers, and the 'Advertiser" loses one of its earliest subscribers and one of its earliest club agents. In fact, Mr. Caverhill commenced his subscription with the very rst weekly issue. He was one of those sterling pioneers whose early settlement in this part of Ontario has had much to do with its advancement. Mr. Caverhill was born at Rigg-Head Farm, Forthorwald parish, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, on Feb. 6, 1812. He was the son of Dr. Caverhill, and came with his parents to New Brunswick in 1820. The year 1834 found Mr. Caverhill, then a young man of 22, hewing timber for the first mill built in London, on the site of the present city. It was then a wilderness of forest, with a few scattered settlers in the bush, with bears, dear and the primitive Indian for neighbors. In 1837 Mr. Caverhill settled in Lobo township, on a farm now known as Orchard Hill. Here he resided continuously ever since, and raised a large family. De-ceased was a man such as a publisher loves to have as a subscriber. He believed in keeping perfectly in touch with the promoters of the paper, and organized the first club of subscribers to the "Advertiser" in Lobo. While his health remained good he was a frequent visitor to the office of this journal, and ever a welcome one. He was a life-long Liberal. Mr. Caverhill held a commission as lieutenant, and served in the rebellion of 1837. He died on Wednesday last, passing peacefully to his rest, after an illness of two years and six months. He was 83 years old and leaves a family of four sons and three daughters: William H., on a farm in Lobo; Arthur E., head mathematical master, Collegiate Institute, St. Catharines; Walter A., on a farm in Lobo; Edward T., on the old homestead Jane, wife of Wm. Paterson, Denfield Eliza, wife of James Elliott, Wilton Grove, and Susan, at home. Although the roads were well nigh impassable the funeral, which took place on Friday, was very largely attended. The sons and two sons-in-law acted as pall-bearers. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Lawrence, of Vanneck, assisted by Rev. Norman Lindsay, of Ivan. The reverend gentlemen spoke in the highest terms of the departed, both as a Christian and as a

In this age of invention there seems few avenues left for the aspiring genius, and yet the patent office is continually with its throngs of applicants. # Whiskard's Unity of the Empire town hall was filled last night to listen to Hon. David Mills' address on "The Unity of the Empire." It proved a most attractive topic in the hands of the member for Bothwell. After a brief introduction by the chairman, Mr. Mills men - There are so many questions of great public importance upon which we differ from our political opponents, which are associated with practical legislation and administration, that we sometimes forget that there are still larger political questions upon which it is important that the people should be well informed, and in reference to which public opinion should be intelligently and wisely directed, in or-der that all sections of the British empire may be more closely drawn together, if this should be in conformity with their best interests, and if it can be secured without interfering with the progressive development of each colony, however weak or unimportant at the present time that colony may seem. There has been a good deal of discussion on the subject of the unity of the empire during the past five years. That discussion, though it may in a subordinate degree be beneficial, has not suggested anything which is likely to lead us into any path which can terminate in any important practical results. The closer union of the different parts of the British Empire will certainly not be brought about by a constitutional act. The empire of the future must grow into closer unity, arising from a clearer conception of a community of interests than has hitherto existed. Nor do I think that the proposed based upon differential duties would in the smallest degree contribute to such a result. It is not by such antiquated contrivances, the principles of which had their origin in a darker age, that a great empire can be permanently constituted, which is in the future to lead mankind. The notion that one state can best promote its own interests by making war upon the interests of every other state was finally given up by England when she adopted a policy of commercial freedom, and the success which has resulted from the adoption of a commercial policy so just to others and so advantageous to herself has been so great that every motive for returning again to thraldom has disappeared. The proposal put forward by the advocates of Imperial Federation that she should abandon the way which advantageous to her, by which her wealth and her population have been so rapidly increased, and her dominions so constantly extended, must have been a cause of great astonishment to her statesmen; that any such scheme could. in a great colony like Canada, have been seriously entertained by any portion of its population is, indeed a matter for surprise. It is not in any such way that the unity of the empire can be promoted. In fact, every such proposal is sure to become a disturbing element in the union as it now exists; it causes a lawge number of our people to inquire whether if there is to be a change such a change as that proposed is the best. They find at the very threshold of the scheme a barrier against trading with a country at their door; a country, if trade were unrestrained, would certainly become their largest and most profitable customer. I think, then, we may very well assume as a starting point that a closer union between the different parts of the empire can never arise if we begin with a policy in direct amagonism to the policy now firmly established, and which has long since become a settled tradition and habit of the statesmen and people of the United Kingdom. The English have extended their commerce into regions which it could have never reached under a system of protection. The commercial marine of the United Kingdom has gained enormously on the commercial marine of all the rest of christendom since free trade has been adopted, and it shows a total unacquaintance with the history of the commercial and industrial life of the United Kingdom to suppose that any statesman of it would for a moment entertain a proposal to put an end to the growth of British trade by re-

The Dangers Which Threaten It-Canada's Interest in Continued Union—The United States Also Vitally Benefited-Irish Home Rule a Factor—Russia Alone the Motherland's Great Rival-Critical Advances Made by the Bear -A Peep Into the Future-Hon. David Mills' Masterly Review.

THE FOLLIES OF PROTECTION and the enmities of the mercantile system. I know that it is the practice of some of our people to look upon the acts and the policy of the Government of the United Kingdom as old fashioned, antiquated and extremely conservative, and quite unsuited to the democharacter of our population cratic and the exceptional circumstances of a new country. They regard themselves as greatly in advance of the mother country, whereas in law reform, in the principles of representation, in the principles of ministerial responsibility, in commercial and social legislation, and for the most part in the sphere of state authority, the Parliament of the United Kingdom has always taken the lead in those matters, and still leads the whole English-speaking population of the world. If you examine the constitution of the courts of judicature and the proceedings of those courts you will find that the States of our neighboring Republic, which have most closely followed English legislation, are those in which justice is most promptly and most satisfactorily administered. So that no portion of the English-speaking race have shown greater progress in everything relating to the commercial and industrial life than the people of the United Kingdom. When we look at the extent of population, the rapid accumulation of wealth, the magnitude of her commercial interests, and the rapidity with which they continue to grow, I think we can form some idea of the astonishment of the British people at the self-conceit and the ignorance of those who expect to convert the statesmen of the motherland to their way of thinking, and who aim at TURNING BACK THE NATIONAL LIFE

a hundred years. It is true that society there is segregated into orders. They have certain privileged classes, some of whom have inherited their distinctions. Those classes are the survival of a state of society that is passing away. Governments, for the most part, are not called into existence to alter the social fabric. They govern society as they find it; but where an institution of government has survived the condition of things, which made it useful, the nation

WALLACEBURG, March 6. - The it, or bring it into harmony with the country; and other institutions of the country; and we dare say, the people of the United Kingdom will do with the House of Lords. We have here our privileged classes. They have been created by our Customs Act. They have taken hostages in Parliament for the preservation of the advantages which have been conferred upon them. I would indeed be surprised if they were now satisfied with the results. In England the aristocratic class, while they impede, muti-Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentle- late and defeat important legislative measures in the direction of social re-forms, have not interfered with the growth of commerce or the develop-ment of industry. These interests are too powerful to be checked with impunity, and in respect to them the Lords count for but little more than

A MONKEY ON HORSE-BACK. Society moves on in much the same way as if they had no existence. As a second chamber, the House of Lords is very defective. It has no hold on the national sympathies. The great mass of Noncomformists of the United Kingdom are not represented in the Lords. Five-sixths of the people of Ireland are not there represented. Nearly the whole of the Lords are politically of one party, and are not in touch with the great ma jority of the people; and, as they are now constituted, never can be. When their political opponents are in office they indiscriminately oppose all distinc-tive measures of the Government; and when their friends are in office they are no effective check to ill-considered or arbitrary legislation. So that on all questions involving party conflict they are either mischievous or useless. But the constitution of the House of Lords is only remotely an Imperial question; it is one for the consideration of the people of the United Kingdom only; and I have no intention on this occasion either to discuss the probable effects of a change or to say what that change ought to be. It is only when a question of Imperial politics arises that the de-pendencies of the United Kingdom become specially interested and may claim a right to be heard in respect to their solution. In the sixteenth century the independence of England was endangered by the supremacy of Spain. In the eighteenth century she was engaged in a conflict with France for the

FIRST PLACE AMONG NATIONS. For a time able and ambitious men directed the colonial and foreign policy of France. The French Government were then in the possession of the Valley of the St. Lawrence and a great portion of the Valley of the Mississippi French statesmen sought to confine the English colonists, in numbers sixtyfold those of France, to the Atlantic slope. The English colonists resisted the English and French waged war. The ench possessions in North America became English. The statesmen of France had no public opinion behind them. The Government was absolute. And when the King became tired of war, and disliked the burdens which it imposed upon his treasury, he made peace. There was no public opinion compelling him to persevere. The nation had no vote in shaping its own destiny. The gain of the French possessions in North America, through the genius of the elder Pitt, during the seven years war, was far more than counterbalanced by the loss of all the original possessions of the crown on this continent through the arbitrary conduct and unconstitutional pretensions of the King. This loss, which was a few years later followed by the great war of Napoleon, once more threatened the supremacy of the British Empire. The French Empire went down before the combined hostility of all Europe. The genius of Napoleon led him to despise his enemies and to underestimate the power of mere numbers, to whom he had taught caution by his repeated victories. Russia gained enormously by that war: but she did not at once, as she has since, become a menace to the rest of Europe. The statesmen of the United Kingdom, by the adoption of free trade, the repeal of the navigation laws, and the deermination to make the prosperity of the British people to rest solely upon their own individual energies for success, has introduced a policy which has led to an increase of population, wealth and commerce far beyond anything knewn in the previous history of the United Kingdom and to the growth and exension of the colonies in a manner before unprecedented. The British Empire today far surpassses, in almost everything which goes to constitute power, any state in ancient or in modern tines.

There is today but ONE GREAT RIVAL, and that is the empire of Russia. Fussia came into existence about the same time as England. In the earlier period of its history it experienced far greater trials, far greater disasters, than any of those which have fallen to the let of England. England had her wars, and invasions of Danes and Normans. But in time these adventurers were absorbed into the rest of the population. The Norman invasion modified and strengthened the institutions of the country. The Wars of the Roses weakened the aristocracy and consolidated the monarchy. The civil war under Charles I. checked the growth of arbitrary power and increased the power of Parliament. But Russia has been both subjugated and plundered by Tartar hordes, and driven into the flozen north; in time she has risen from her calamities stronger than she was before. She has extended her borde's at the expense of Sweden, Poland and Turkey in Europe, and at the expense of Turkey, Persia, China, Japan and the Tartar tribes in Asia. Today Rissia holds nearly one-half the contineit of Europe and two-fifths of the contnent of Asia. Her empire is territofally united and embraces about three imes the area of the United States and wice its population. The Government's an absolute monarchy, tempered by asassination. Russia is a military enpire, and the opinions and aspirations d her most powerful military men have a paramount influence upon her policy. Russia has never abandoned any scheme upon which the hearts of her uler have been set. No failures have, it this respect, any influence upon her. At the very beginning of her history she endeavored to acquire Constantinope by the force of arms. She has frequently since made war upon Turkey with the same design. The common interests of Europe have held her in check, and has refrained from challenging their united hostility; but she has not abandoned her intention; she only wats a more fitting opportunity.

SIX ARMIES PERISHED. before she made herself master of Samarkand. There she consolidated her power, and has since extended her dominions 400 miles southward along the

She has won whole provinces from Persia, and she has converted the Caspian Sea into a Russian lake. She has extended her borders eastward and southward over Turkestan, Bokhara, Khiva, Merv and a part of Kashgar, and she has now entered the Pamir country upon the head waters of the Amoo Daria, upon the very borders of India. She has nade military preparation again and again to obtain possession of these countries at the very time she in the nost formal manner denied that she had any such intention. She has on several occasions attempted to enter into offensive treaties with the Ameer of Afghanistan, when her statesmen declared that that country was wholly beyond the sphere of Russian influence. She has endeavored to make treaties with the Ameer with a view to the invasion of India, and she has gone on establishing herself in Tashkend, Khokand and Bokhara, with a view to the onquest of India. Her military officers in these districts have, from time to time, prepared plans for the conquest of India and have submitted them to the Government at St. Petersburg. Not the slightest reliance can be put upon any promise made by the Russian Government or upon any assurance which any Russian Minister will give. No Russian Minister is in the least embarrassed at being caught in falsehood. He asumes that it is as legitimate to in-trigue, or to lie, as to fight, and it is far ess costly, and to Russia far less uncertain in its results. Russia has suceeded in having several of the Balkan provinces wrested from Turkey. She appeared as the disinterested friend of the oppressed and the humane protector of the persecuted Christian populations of those regions. After they had acquired an autonomy she WORRIED AND HARASSSED THEM with a view to making domestic government possible, and of forcing them to practically submit to her authority. She has had her paid intriguers in every Balkan State, and she has bribed officials and military officers until the Balkan Governments have been completely demoralized, and the instruments of her treachery she has protected, when discovered, against the con-sequences of their crimes. Gen. Kaulbars, of the Russian army, was kept in Bulgaria for the very purpose of ruining the prince who was at the head of the Government because he did not sedulously labor to put the Government in the hands of a Russian party, and thus betray the country which he aimed to govern well. There is not to be found modern European history more shameless conduct on the part of a great power than that of Russia in Bulgaria If we look at the conduct of Russia in Central Asia we shall find that it is as high handed, as arbitrary and as selfseeking as in Bulgaria. Indeed, it has been more violent because it has been farther removed from observation. In 1864 Russia first succeeded in crossing the great sand belt which separated Southern Siberia from the city of Tashkend. This city was the largest of the Tartar cities in Central Asia. She took possession, and has made it the center of a great military district. Here she has amassed military supplies and maintains a large garrison. It was after this acquisition that Gen. Tchernayeff wrote to St. Petersburg that the conquest of India, that many looked upon as fabulous, was beginning to lift itself before his eyes. In 1868 Bokhara was brought under Russian control, and the Emir became a vassal of the Czar. In 1873 the independence of Khokand was destroyed, and the country was annexed to the Russian Empire. In 1881 Merv was incorporated also, and immediately after a considerable section of country which belonged to the Ameer of Afghanistan was seized by Russian troops, and the Russian boundary was pushed many miles within the territories which the Russian Minister himself admitted, in 1873, belonged to Afghanistan. Russia today menaces the liberties of the world. I know that it is said that an understanding has been reached between the Government of England and the Czar of Russia. That may be so. There may be good faith on the part of the Czar. The Government is autocratic and his will is said to be law. But in a Government constituted as that of Russia is, being a great military empire, within which every province has its civil functions, dominated over by military chiefs, the active and persistent energies of such a Government is vested not merely in the Czar, and his Ministers at St. Petersburg, but in the military officers in the distant provinces These officers have for centuries been given a comparatively free hand. They have a discretion limited only by failure. No act which extends the borders of the empire is likely to meet with disapproval, and as long as Russia remains a Military Government so long will she continue to be actively aggressive. RUSSIA WANTS INDIA. It has been again and again suggested by British statesmen that it would be better to have Russia as an ally than as an enemy. I don't dispute this; the limitary line which is being drawn through Central Asia is an attempt to come to an understanding with her. But as long as the Government of Russia continues to be a Military Government she is not likely to find herself ation other matters about which to think, and the interests of the populamarked out by engineers. She desires the acquisition of India. She is poor. She thinks it has enriched the United Kingdom, and in her possession it would enrich her. She thinks that the wealth which it would afford her would soon enable her to make herself mistress of Persia and Turkey to the west, and of China to the east. She thin with India in her possession she would soon become as powerful fast becoming on land. Both Germany and France are geographically restrained from further growth, and within a few years there will be, under the present order of things, but three great powers in the world-the British Empire, the Russian Empire and the Republic of the United States. If the British Empire were to lose its present maritime ascendancy, the United States, instead of progression in wealth and population as she does at present, would in a large degree he wholly dependent n a large degree be wholly dependent for her growth upon the natural increase of population. Much of the trade in which her people engage, at the present time would, under altered circumstances, become coasting trade within he empire of Russia, and from which American shipping would be excluded. The English population would be reduced by nearly one-third by the loss of India alone. If you were to add to lative and executive departments of this the loss of the colonies and the natural consequences which would arise from the loss of commercial ascendancy, the population of England would soon reach that point when the production of her own soil would be adequate to the supply of meat and breadstuffs to her own people. You might have immigration from the overcrowded districts of Europe to the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris; You might, under the altered circumstances of Russia, have a European population looking eastward to the plains of the Amoo Daria, instead of to the unoccupied lands of America. No one who has not with some care considered the question is likely to realize THE TREMENDOUS REVOLUTION which Russian ascendancy would work cern them, and in time they must be in the relation of this continent to Eur-

She has obtained Saghalien from Japan. | Kingdom has increased far more rapidly than it did before. You can measure with a good deal of accuracy the prosperity of a country by the increase of its population. Where a country becomes prosperous, and the daily laborer earns better wages, there are not only fewer people idle, but there are fewer who remain unmarried. The laborer marries earlier in life, because he has less hesitation about his ability to support his wife and his children; and we accordingly find that not only has the population of Great Britain increased enormously, but an enormous immigration from the United Kingdom has gone on during the past half-century. Destroy the prosperity of the United Kingdom, reduce the laboring classes to their former condition of penury, and it is no exaggeration to say that within a very few years immigration would almost cease. You will see from what I have said how much the general prosperity of the English-speaking race everywhere depends upon the maintenance of English prosperity. Today the Government of the United Kingdom puts no obstacles in the way of the trade and commerce of any other nation. The only obstacle is that which open competition in an open market may occasion. Under the present policy of no other country would this be so. There is not a state in Europe, or in America, which may not enter into any port of the United Kingdom upon terms of perfect equality with any subject of her Majesty. An American merchantman is as free to trade at Bombay or Calcutta as a merchantman from Liverpool. Can this be said of Tonquin or Anam, which are under the Dominion of France? I do not hesitate to say that neither the United States nor any British possession which might escape conquest would make as much progress in 50 years as under the present order of things they may make in Will anyone who has considered the subject pretend to say that we have not an interest in the maintenance of the

UNITY AND INTEGRITY OF THE

EMPIRE? And our neighbors to the south of us have scarcely less interest than we. When I speak of the unity of the empire I do not mean that we are to have any central authority representing and acting formally for the whole. I mean that we should remain under the same sovereign, with liberty to grow into a greater measure of self-government, with liberty to grow towards each other, into closer bonds of union, from a clearer appreciation of our community of interests. Growing into, trusting each other, and into the exercise of sovereign authority by those most largely interested-a unity that is the product of growth rather than of any legislative contrivance; a unity resting upon the strong conviction that it is vital to our well-being that we should remain together as allies, equally qualified to the extent of our interests to deal with Imperial affairs—to exercise sovereign authority. Now will anyone pretend to say that because a war might originate in connection with matters with which we have no immediate concern, that therefore, we should do nothing to protect ourselves against the possible dangers of foreign invasion? That is not my opinion. If I have made my position clear that the unity of the empire is. in the present condition of the world, vital to our prosperity, surely it is only reasonable that we should do whatever may be necessary for our own protection as a part of it. The English fleet, in case war upon British ascendancy should be made, will doubtless give to our commerce upon the high seas the same protection which it will extend to that of the United Kingdom. But what about our sea ports? What of St. John, of Halifax, of Victoria, of Vancouver? Will any one pretend to say that it is a rational proceeding to leave any of those places with their present

INADEQUATE DEFENSES? I say no; and there is scarcely a year that has passed when we have not misspent far more than enough to do all that in this respect may be required. It is with the growth of free states as it is with individuals; the son that reaches manhood, and expects his father to do everything for him, and who under-takes nothing for himself, will soon acquire habits of mental imbecility which will render him incapable in the future of managing his own affairs; and a dependent state which adopts a similar policy will in the end be cursed with like intellectual decrepitude. The time will soon come to such a state when it would prefer to be dependent rather than to assume the responsibilities and to make the sacrifices which self-government morally imposes. Let me further remind you of some other matters necessary to the political and racial unity desirable to meet that conflict which the present order of things, should it continue, makes inevitable. I have briefly pointed out to you that the United States has scarcely less interest in the well-being of the British Empire and in its continued unity than has Canada or Australia. We all know how greatly the feeling of the American people towards those of England has improved. The prejudices and the enmities resulting from the war of independence and the war of 1812-15 have worn out. The great civil war, in no small degree, has given to the present genertion do not permit the people to entertain the same feelings towards those who waged the last war against them that they did to those who waged the others. There is but one source of hostility which has not been dried up-it

s that feeling of wrong and injustice which THE EXPATRIATED IRISHMAN carries with him across the Atlantic. It is my strong conviction that when local self-government is conferred upon the people of Ireland, when Irish discontent is thereby allayed, the last impediment in the way of complete unity of interest and the feeling between the United Kingdom and the United States will be removed. We are of the same race; our religious opinions, our liter-ature and our habits of thought are much the same. We speak the same language. Our constitutional system is better than theirs, for it is, in point of time, a century in advance. And our constitutional system is such that it adjusts itself to the progress of society. With us justice is more promptly administered, the laws are more strictly enforced and crime more certainly punished. That our system is more flexible than theirs cannot be doubted. It se cures unity of action between the legisgovernment, which theirs does not; but however this may be, each may think as he pleases, without any unfriendly feeling towards the other. But there are among us many persons who are of the opinion that our ultimate destination is separation. I don't think this at all ecessary to secure sovereign authority and the full stature of a free state. Our powers of self-government are constantly being enlarged. They keep pace with our necessities, and when we attain the maturity of a sovereign state we shall have its attributes, and still remain within the pale of the British empire. Anyone who has watched the growth of the empire will see that the great dependencies are intrusted more and more with the settlemnt of those external relations which specially contrusted as the parties having the chief ope. and they will work out by the law of evolution the most perfect, the most satisfactory solution of the relation in which the different parts of this great empire shall stand towards each other. Let me say to you that the whole face of modern civilization and of modern commerce IS SEEN THROUGH ENGLISH EYES. With the disintegration of the empire all this would come to an end. It is English policy which has in so large a degree permitted every independent state to pursue its own interests without restraint. With Russian ascendancy this would not be so, and all our prospects of political growth would be as certainly ended as if we were a Russian province. It is by the unity of the em pire that we have the privilege of growing in numbers, in wealth, and in sovereign authority. We certainly can secure for any ground of difference which we may have as respectful a hearing and as favorable a settlement as if we were an independent state. Our position today is not inferior to that of any South American republic. We are relieved from some of the burdens which separation would impose, and we can afford to assume by way of defense on our own soil some of the expenses which in that event we would incur. With our increased claim to authority there must be a corresponding growth of our responsibility. Let us then like men assume our true place in the empire, growing with its growth, partaking of its good fortune, sharing in its authority, proud of its devotion to liberty, and fully appreciating the advantages which its ascendancy has secured to the world, feeling assured that its growth must bring to us our full measure of sovereign authority.

-We have just received the first number of "La Revue National," published at Montreal, with J. D. Chartrand as editor. Bound in good style and illustrated with some fine engravings, "La Revue National" has a prosperous and well-to-do air at the start. The aim of the editors is to render their magazine not partisan, but to make it a selection of interesting articles on literature, history, the arts, sciences, finance, industry, etc. In proof of this statement we find on the title page the names of such widely separated men as Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Lieutenant - Governor Chapleau, Mr. Louis Frechette and Mr. Benjamin Lutte. "A Ma Petite Louise," by Louis Frechette, the most gifted literary man that Canada has yet produced, is but a forerunner, we hope, of many other poems from the same pen. "La Revue National," if continued in the same tone as this, the first number, is almose certain to bring the success which we most heartily wish it.

GENERAL ELECTIONS AT HAND. It is probable that the date of the Dominion general elections will be announced and the writs issued within a week or ten days. The men now in power dare not face a Parliamentary investigation into their recent conduct, into their deficit, into their bungled trade treaty with France.

THE LONDON ASYLUM. In his annual report on the London Asylum for the Insane, Dr. Bucke, medical superintendent, remarks on the continued success of the "Intermittent downward filtration" plan for the disposal of the sewage of the institution. Of the whole four acres of which the sewage field is composed only about two acres are available for cultivation. Yet ly the whole, except what is used by it appears that the value of the crop on this small plot of ground is not less than $1,059, as against $850 last year. In detail the produce of the field and its cash value was as under: Lettuce, forced.... 1613 doz at $ 40 $ 65 63 Lettuce, forced... 161½ doz at $ 40 Radish, forced... 78 doz at 30 Beans, forced... 40 qts at 10 Beans... 19½ bush at 1 50 Cucumbers, forced 12½ doz at 50 Cucumbers... 1,138½ doz at 8 Peas, green... 73 bush at 1 25 Cabbage, early... 117½ doz at 60 Tomatoes... 226½ bush at 40 Pumpkins... 5 doz at 50 Muskmelons... 339 doz at 50 Muskmelons... 339 doz at 80 Watermelons... 16½ doz at 30 Peppers... 7 doz at 50 Peppers... 7 doz at 50 Peppers... 7 doz at 50

The yield of the two acres appeared to Dr. Bucke so exceptional that he asked the bursar to look into the prices appended to the various fruits and vegetables. Dr. Sippi's reply is that the prices given are below the wholesale market value in this city. Absolutely no paid labor is used in producing this crop, Mr. Flynn, the officer in charge of and published." the sewage system, merely attending to the disposal of that refuse. Dr. Bucke highly compliments him on this work.

Dr. Bucke points out that for still another year the officers of the asylum here used no restraint or seclusion and no alcohol, making eleven years' disuse of the former and twelve of the latter. More than 800 of the 1,028 patients in the asylum are employed in some useful maner every lawful day. The aggregate amount of work accomplished is enormous, and the benefit to the patients is as great. Dr. Bucke seems to be a great believer in alternate employment and healthy amusement as aids to the recovery from mental disease, or, in case of chronic patients, as helps to make life more enjoyable. In this connection he pays a merited compliment to Dr. Sippi, the bursar, for the great pains he takes in organizing the musical talent of the asylum, and turning it to account, by untiring energy and admirable perseverance, for the benefit of the patients. During the year the patients had no fewer than 110 evenings of amusement in their large concert hall, including lectures, concerts and theatrical performances, by kind-hearted citizens, "at homes" and dances. The Western Fair directors are also praised for sending a free invitation to every patient to visit the exhibition. As many as were able were permitted to enjoy the Regarding religious services, Dr. Bucke makes an important anouncement. Each Sunday morning in the year, he says, there is a Protestant service, and every second Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock a Catholic service. The patients gladly attend these, and all who are mentally fit are allowed and asked so to do. The services of the clergymen of all denominations are given gratuitously. It has been said that some are paid and others not. This is not true, and Dr. Bucke repeats (what he said before) that none are paid anything either directly or indirectly. They all give their time freely, and the asylum inmates are deeply indebted to them for this genuine Christian charity. This pointed rebuke to the anti-Catholic orators sent out by the Conservative leaders in the last Provincial elections is well-deserved.

A FINE SCHEME.

If the bill making it a penal offense to ask candidates for office to buy tickets to balls, picnics, etc., should become a law, Middletown business men would be tempted to organize a score or two of independent parties and nominate themselves for office the day after an election, and thus be in a position to stand off ticket sellers every day in the year.-Middletown Argus.

ANNA'S HUBBY

Well Remembered in Winnipeg-Creditors Have a Lively Recollec-tion of the Count. (Winnipeg Free Press.)

The Count de Castellane, who on Monday wedded Miss Anna Gould and her many millions, is well remembered to quite a number of Winnipeggers, who are just now eagerly discussing his rare good fortune. It is learned that De Castellane was one of the leaders of the swell, but impecunious, French colony which flourished here in 1892, his particular chums being Count De Simencourt, who conducted a butcher stall in the city market, and Count De Bouverie, who is now in San Francisco. A Free Press man was this morning shown the autograph signature of Anna's count, which appears on the city assessment roll for 1892. When the assessor for that year reached No. 225 Garry street he found it tenanted by the noble count and two of his cronies. The assessor had some difficulty in spelling the name of this scion of the French nobility, and his excellency, growing impatient, took the book himself and wrote in a neat, round hand, "Florens De Castellane, count." On the rolls the count is assessed as a tenant and for two horses owned by im. His name was duly placed on the 1892 voters' list.

Several Winnipeggers are delighted to hear of the Count De Castellane's good uck for excellent reasons. No doubt new that his excellency is in receipt of the Gould millions, he will be good enough to iquidate numerous claims which he left unsettled. There are quite a number of hese and the amount is considerable, or rather, was considerable, for, under the altered circumstances any amount is trifling to the count. Mr. Hample, the caterer, will probably send his excellency a gentle reminder of an unpaid claim with a request that he will condescend to order it liquidated, and Mr. Patterson, the liveryman and horsedealer, will also at once open communication with Anna's titled husband. Various other people in the city who had written off their claims will now write them on again and the count will shortly have many reminders of his stay here-numerous little notes that will no doubt recall the haloyon days when his excellency was a true Bohemian and exceedingly hard up.

EGANVILLE, Ont., March 7 .- A terrible accident by which a young man lost his life occurred yesterday morning at Lake Clear, about eight miles from here. The blow struck him on the stomach causing internal injuries which resulted in death in a few hours. Mr. Martin was a young and active man and universal regret is felt.

street , Toronto: My six-year-old daugh ter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears and on her face; her head was on fire with painful, burning itching, which was made worse by constant scratching and tearing it with her hands. We spent money without stint in constant endeavor to afford the little sufferer relief, every adver-tised remedy was tried; innumerable treatments with soaps and medicines and specific treatment by physicians having high endorsements in such diseases were of no relief in her case. A short time ago I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, the first application of which showed the curative effect of the ointment; only one-half of the box has been used, with the marked change of an entire disappearance of the eruptions, and I can confidently say my child is permanently cured. THE CHAMPIONS PLAY LONDON.

The final hockey game for the season of 1894-95 was played at the Princess Rink last night, but owing to other attractions the attendance only reached about 300. The London club, though bowled out of the Western Ontario championship, has played some splendid games this season, and to give the admirers of hockey a farewell match which would be fully in keeping with the previous matches, they see cured the Ayr club, the champions of the district. London did not expect to win, and expectations were realized, but the defeat was one of which the home players are not in the least ashamed. The match was by no means as exciting as some of the contests which have been fought on the good ice at the Princess. The first half was of such a character that the spectators were kept in the best of humor, for London did well, but in the second half a damper was put on the enthusiasm by remarkably slow playing. Referee Alex. Furness called the teams to time at 8:30, and the following lined up:

LONDON. Becher Southam Brown Macbeth Lind Beltz

Cover point Forwards

POSITION.

J Elliott Goal Point Codling R Henderson A Henderson R Elliott Hilburn

With the puck once on the move the play was in earnest. Scientific hockey a body believed to be that of Perchundy, was shown by both teams, Hilburn provdon's forwards shared an equal amount of glory. After ten minutes' play A. Henderson shot the rubber between London's stakes. Ayr's friends yelled and whistled until their wind was gone, but the demonstration was insignificant compared with what followed six minutes later when Bob Lind tallied one for London. Becher was caught napping by Hilburn shortly afterwards, and Hilburn scored an easy goal, the puck rolling through it at a snail's gallop. Lind here secured a goal on an off side play, but it was not counted, and A. Henderson and Southam for alleged improper conduct were ruled off the ice for five minutes. The two succeeding goals were made by Hilburn and Macbeth in six and two minutes respectively, and the half closed 3 to 2 in Ayr's favor.

The second half was slow, but when George Macbeth, after ten minutes, rushed the puck half way down the rink and by a long shot tied the score the enthusiasm was unbounded. "What's the matter with Macbeth?" and the usual response could have been heard a block away. The Ayr team retaliated by scoring in less than a minute, and seven minutes afterwards made the score 5 to 3. Lind's left eye was cut by coming in contact with R. Henderson's left elbow, but the damage was slight.

GOLD GALORE.

Fabulous Wealth in Prospect for Two California Youths.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 6.—The Desert Chief, the Desert Queen, Chief of the Hills and Dry Lake Valley mines, located near Indio, and discovered by the McHaney boys, William and James, are probably the richest gold mines ever discovered in the world.

It is said that there is more than $1,- 000,000 of gold in sight, and old mirring men say that the mines will make multimillionaires of every man interested. A hatful of the ore has been put through a three-stamp gold mill, and yielded $953 in gold. The gold was first discovered in an old cave located in a canyon, which had evidently been inhabited by a tribe of Aztecs. The cave was strewn with human bones.

True Bill Against Welter and Hendershott.

The Prisoners Arraigned and Plead Not Guilty.

Their Trial Begins This Afternoon-Chief Justice Meredith's Remarks to the Jury.

ST. THOMAS, March 6.- The attention of the court has been taken up today with civil cases, and it is not likely the case of the Queen vs. Hendersott and Welter will be reached before tomorrow afternoon. It is rumored that the Crown have lately secured very damaging evidence particularly against the prisoner Welter. A large number of expert medical witnesses are here from Toronto and other places. The city is fast filling up with jurors, witnesses and parties from the surrounding country anxious to hear the trial.

In his address to the grand jury, speaking of the Hendershott murder, Chief Justice Meredith said that it was not necessary for a person to be present at a murder to be guilty of the crime. There may be a promoter and an actor, and the one who procured the other to commit the murder is just as guilty as though he committed it himself.

The first case taken up by the court was an action for damages for injuries received, brought by Robert Ferguson against the Townships of Southwold and Yarmouth.

TRUE BILL IN THE HENDER-SHOTT CASE.

A true bill was brought in by the grand jury against Wm. David Welter and John D. Hendershott of wilfully murdering Wm. Hendershott on Dec. 14, 1894. The prisoners were then brought into the court room. They were requested to stand up. The clerk of assize read the indictment and they were asked individually if they were guilty or not guilty. Both prisoners answered in a clear and firm voice that they were not guilty. They were then asked if they were ready for trial. They replied that they were.

The trial will start at 1:30 tomorrow.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S CRISIS. Its Real Cause Explained to England by

Sir William Whiteway. LONDON, March 6.—Sir William Whiteway, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, has cabled a letter to the Times, complaining of the misrepresentations in regard to Newfoundland's finances made in the English press. He declares that the decline in the revenues in January and February were attributable to causes other than the financial crisis, such as reduced purchasing power, owing to the limitation of the market for exports. This, he says, would have been materially averted had the Imperial Government ratified the Bond-Blaine Convention, which he considers it was morally bound to do since it had authorized further negotiations.

The absence of the United States markets for Newfoundland's exports and the complications arising from the imperial recognition of the French fishery claims, contributed largely to the crisis. Continuing, Sir Wiliam says:

"The spirit of the Newfoundland people is apparently little understood. I believe they would starve rather than surrender their independence. The descendants of the Newfoundland fisher-men who manned the fleet which gained Great Britain her maritime supremacy are naturally embittered to see that fleet now employed to drive them from the fisheries-theirs by right of birth-for the accommodation of Frenchmen. After referring to the fact that the Government has not yet responded to Newfoundland's request that it guarantee the interest on its debt in order to tide the colony over its difficulties, Sir William concludes by saying that if the colonists must still trust to their inherent pluck and the resources of the country, they must only passively submit, although they may more bitterly feel their heartless treatment by the Imperial Government.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Results of the Attempted Bank Robbery at Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 6.—At Adele, the county seat of Dallas county, 22 miles from here, the bold bank robbery this morning was followed by the oursuit of the amateur bandits, the killing of one, and the formation of an angry mob, which surges about the county jail tonight and threatens to have the life of the surviving robber. The funds of the bank were saved by the presence of mind of the cashier, who after being shot closed the door to the vault and turned the combination. Following are

THE CASUALTIES: Dead-Orlando P. Wilkins, robber, from Patterson, Madison county Ia., aged 30, shot by pursuers.
Injured—S. M. Leach, cashier of the bank, seriously injured in the left shoulder and neck; C. D. Bailey, merchant, shot in the shoulder; J. M. Byers, prominent citizen, shot in hand and arm; R. S. Barr, postmaster, shot in the left arm; J. L. Simpson, citizen, and Cecil Dexter, a boy, slightly wounded.

The robbers, Orlando P. Wilkins and C. W. Crawford, were farmers living in Patterson. They entered the bank just as Cashier Leach was taking the money from the vault. Wilkins fired at Leach, who staggered, but recovering he flung the currency and gold on the counter into the vault and closed the door. Wilkins fired again, wounding Mr. Bailey. The robbers then scooped the loose silver into a sack. It amounted to $267. By this time Sheriff Payne arrived and opened fire on the robbers, who made a rush for their buggy, Wilkins firing as he ran and wounding the other citizens mentioned. The robbers started to drive across the country. They were hotly pursued, and after a chase of twelve miles their wounded horses could go no further. Crawford secreted himself in a clump of timber, but was soon sur-rounded and surrendered. Wilkins took refuge in a barn. To repeated orders to come out he made no reply. Then Crawford was forced to saturate a straw stack near the barn with kerosene and start a fire. When the flames closed about Wilkins, he made a rush across the open space for the timber, but soon fell, wounded by a bullet from a rifle. Then the mob lost control of itself, and the robber was riddled with bullets. The corpse of Wilkins and his living companion were later taken back to Adele, where, this afternoon, Crawford made a full confession. He claimed that had been forced into the job by Wilkins, who threatened to kill him if his nerve weakened. Tonight the biggest crowd ever seen in Adele is upon the streets there. Every man carries a rifle, shotgun, pistol or club. Sheriff Payne has the jail protected by a large and well-armed posse All the wounded are doing well burned to death in her home on St. Helen's avenue, Brockton, a north-western suburb of this city, on Saturday morning, was tonight arrested for the murder of his wife.

The police today discovered the remains of a five-gallon coal oil can jammed against the furnace, and this strengthens the theory of the Crown that the death of Mrs. Dicks was the result of a plot on the part of Dicks to secure the heavy insurance of $19,000 on the life of his wife.

Then B went on with the work, but at the next meeting of the council they paid the full amount to the engineer and appointed him the engineer under the act of 1894. If the council had not lowered the charges B would not have done the work. Now the full amount has to be paid in taxes. Has B any redress? Ans. The case is the more remarkable in that the disease in question has always been looked on as incurable, and the matter has been considered worthy of an investigation by the newspapers here, who have devoted an unusual amount of space to the result of their inquiries, and have published several interviews with Mr. Kent and members of his family. The case is being watched with great interest, not only by the friends of Mr. Kent, but by the medical fraternity of the city.

Queer Pranks That Western Medical Students Play.

They Rob Their Seniors of Their Studies -Three Sorry Freshmen-A Midnight Experience With the Police.

Some freshmen at the Western University are excelling themselves in freshness and turbulence this year, and on Monday night last a characteristic prank came within an ace of landing three of the "freshies" behind prison bars. Ever since the beginning of the term they have considered the choice articles for dissection apportioned to the second year and other advanced students as their special property, and at Christmas time two bodies taken from the dissecting room. The faculty was indignant, and the boys received ample warning of what would happen if the action were repeated. However this did not allay the feelings of the men who were thus robbed their studies, and they did not cherish any more brotherly love to the freshmen than the law allows. The dean of the faculty, Dr. Moorehouse, was particularly indignant. Late on Monday night last a cutter containing three young men drove up to the York street entrance of the university, and they prepared to enter the dissecting room, which stands in the rear of the building proper and is connected by a closed passage way. A policeman happened along at the same time, and after watching the young men for a little while he became convinced that they were not there with any good intent and corralled the three. He took them to the police station, but no charge could be laid against them, although their actions had certainly been suspicious. The proper authorities were telephoned to about the matter, and the result was that three very crestfallen youths were released from custody only to be severely lectured by the lecturer in the course of next morning's studies. There is jubilation now among the men who lost their "property" about Christmas time, and their cup of joy is overflowing. All three culprits are out of town men who have a perfect faith in the supposed divine right of a freshman to the whole earth.

SUDDEN DEATH

Of Robert C. Bredin, a Well-Known G. T. R. Engineer. Had Been Ill for Two Weeks With Grippe

-Heart Failure the Cause-Was

On the Grand Trunk for

Nearly Twenty Years The employes of the Grand Trunk Railway, from Windsor to the Falls and Toronto, will be shocked to learn of the unexpected death of Robert C. Bredin, of this city. Mr. Bredin was compelled to withdraw from his duties about two weeks ago. He appeared to be suffering with the grip, and was treated for such an ailment. Mr. Bredin was not confined to his bed, as on Tuesday last he was out for a walk and also did a little work about his home, which is at 307 Simcoe street. Yesterday, however, he suffered a relapse, and his medical attendant was sent for. In the evening the doctor was again called, but did not respond, and at 12 o'clock today Mr. Bredin died very unexpectedly while his wife was watching at his bedside. After death another doctor was summoned, and stated that it was due to heart failure. Deceased was a native of this city, and at an early age entered the employ of the Great Western Railway. He rapidly advanced and was soon in charge of an engine, and became well known from one end of the western division to the other. Mr. Bredin was 37 years of age and leaves a wife—former-ly a Miss Cockburn, of this city—and one child. Ex-Ald. Maurice Scarrow is a brother-in-law of deceased. Engineer Bredin, of the Air Line, St. Thomas, is father of deceased, and Mrs. Rowland, of the same place, is a sister. Mr. Bredin was a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters, Canadian Order of Chosen Friends and Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He was also connected with Missionaries From the Extremes of Both Speak in Cronyn Hall—One From Africa and Another From the Far North-An Interesting Meeting.

Another large and most successful meeting was held last evening in Bishop Cronyn Hall, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Missionary Association. The room was full to the utmost. and the speakers were listened to with deep interest throughout. The object of the meeting was to uphold and promote generally the cause of missionary work. The speakers were all well versed in their subject, being men who had "gone through the fire," and severally suffered from the climatic extremes of heat and cold; for one speaker's work lay as far north as it was possible to go, and again another had traversed the fiery plains of what was "Darkest Africa."

After opening exercises and a few introductory remarks from the Bishop of Huron, who was in the chair, the Rev. A. H. Wright, of Fort-a-la-Corne, Saskatchewan, was called upon to address the meeting. He told those present how years ago he and his little band had left Winnipeg and merely set out towards the setting sun, and then they had built a little hut scarce worth the name of a shanty, and in that wild, almost unknown, country they had been God's standard bearers. Indians had come to them to hear news of the world, and they had told them of the message of salvation. Mr. Wright then went on to say that the question had been raised: Can an adult Indian be brought to the love of Christ? Yes, decidedly. He who had worked 22 years in Manitoba and the Northwest was certain of it. The lecturer went on ably to describe instances of conversion among the Indians which were most touching. He closed his address by thanking the ladies present for all their good work, and he would leave them all a message from his Indians, who said to him when he left them, "Thank the praying ladies." After the hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," had been sung the Rev. Mr. Jeanes, of Dungannon, spoke long and ably. He said he was sure the victories of the cross were not ended, and would not be until conflict had merged into victory and labor had ended in eternal rest, and O! happy omen that sees you, the women of the Church of England, taking such a stand in this cause. The lecturer said that one could not appreciate the result of mission work unless one reviewed the state of the country before the work came "Look at the gloom of Africa 50 years ago, when the slave trade flourished, and thousands of men, women and children were kidnapped and brought down to the coast by stealth. But now how different. On the site of the principal slave market was a church, and the Word of God already abounded." Mr. Jeanes then gave some of his own thrilling experiences in Africa, until he himself, from want of food and the intense severity of the climate, had been obliged to return home. He then gave details of missionary work at Frere Town, Mamboya and Zanzibarhow now there were hundreds baptized in the true faith, and churches, schools, Bible classes and even a fife and drum band had all been formed. The lecturer then spoke of the brave men who had already laid down their lives in the cause, and more especially of the late Bishop Hannington, a name of which we may well be proud, together with Livingstone, Mackay and others, who consecrated Afric's soil with their blood. Mr. Jeanes closed by telling those present the secret of success was individual, and who knows that there might not be a Hanningtos, a Livingstone or a Gordon amongst you present, or amongst you ladies a Florence Nightin-Rev. J. A. Newham, the bishop of Moosonee, next addressed the meeting. He described his diocese as "all that land which lies round Hudson's Bayan enormous district, four or five times as large as Great Britain and Ireland.' He had one clergyman who when he went to his parish had to go home to England, return again in a whaling boat, which deposited him somewhere near the north pole. In his district there were no horses, and one had to get about entirely by canoeing, and then the journeying work could only be done in the summer time. The bishop then exhibited some views of the far north by means of a magic lantern. These views were of a highly interesting na-ture, showing the rather primitive dwellings of his missions, specimens of norses had been sent in unnit for work the Esquimaux natives, herds of reindeer and all the most interesting fea-tures of Arctic life. One of the most interesting was a photograph taken of the bishop's own house, which, after a flood, huge blocks of ice threatened to destroy. There was the poor little house FLOUR—Straight rollers, Toronto freights, followed at $2 60 to $2 70.

The School Argument Finished. OTTAWA, March 7 .- The hearing of the Manitoba school appeal case was finished this morning. Mr. J. S. Ewart closed his reply to Mr. McCarthy, using in his arguments very little of what was new.

Sir Charles Habbert Tupper asked Mr. Ewart what form he would suggest for a remedial order, and Mr. Ewart replied that he would suggest the whole Cabinet deal with the matter. This closed the proceedings, after which the Cabinet adjourned.

She spoke briev, almost sharply, with the calm decision that reassures even while

Without a word Roderick obeyed; allowed Mr. Black, who had listened in silence, to give him is hat and coat, and throw a plaid into the carriage after him. Will you not go, too, Mr. Black? You had better. He is quite stunned.

Yes. my lady: but I know him-he's brave lad, he will bear up alone. And I must go elsewhere."

The old man grasped the young man's haud with a sudden "God bless you!" then Roderick sprung into the carriage and drove

Oh, that awful drive' sitting like a stone, watching mechanically the trees and moors and hills stip by, his watch in one hand, counting the half hours—no, the very min-utes—as they crawled along: in the other hand clutching Lady Symington's note, ready to be given to the doctor as soon as

And then the drive back, with the cale brated man to whom 'the case' was only a case, and who talked cleverly and cheerfully and indifferently of that and many other things, till he saw he was scarcely heard, and then, with a natural human sympatny for the white, set face beside him, dropped into silence and a book; for years Roderick never saw the title of that book without a shudder.

A "ray of hope" he learned there was.

Only a ray! and three hours before the icle world had seemed to him to be flooded with sunshine. He asked no questions, made no remarks. Mute and unappealing he sat, half stunned, half blind, like a man to stay. who has suddenly received sentence of death—death utterly undeserved and unex-pected—death in the very midst of life, so that reason refuses to take it in as a reality, and the mind is conscious of neither terror nor pain, only a dull sense of something having happened, or being about to happen, which one can no more escape than one can escape from the falling rock or the advancing breaker, either of which will bring certain and instantaneous doom. They reached Blackhall, and he heard at the front door the doctor's question, "Is she alive?' and Lady Symington's affirmative answer; then he staggered in, and Janet had to fetch her master a glass of water, and put him into the arm-chair, quite blind and dizzy.

But he soon recovered himself, and went back to listen at the foot of the staircase. "It will be a hard fight-a hand to hand fight-but we'll beat, I trust," the doctor was saying, with a thoroughly professional look on his clever face, and a gleam of his keen eyes, often seen in men like him when they brace up all their skill to do battle with the great enemy. Then he and Lady Symington both vanished, and Roderick

Hour after hour he sat, no one coming near him. Once Janet knocked at the parlor door and asked if she might bring in baby, whose crying disturbed the mother. Roderick assented, but took no notice of his son: indeed, at the moment he almost felt as if he hated him. Kind Janet was the only person who paid the least attention to the young heir of Blackhall. Never, never will little Henry's father forget that day-a lovely April day, half storm half sunshine, toward evening wholly sunshine. And that mad bird, that loud-voiced mavis, singing incessantly in the sycamore tree-he covered his ears to deaden the sound. All the sound he cared to hearand his very soul seemed concentrated in listening-was the moving of feet in that room up-stairs, where the terrible battle for life was going on, and during which he seemed himself to be dying a hundred

He did nothing, absolutely nothing, hour after hour; what was there for him to do? Once, catching sight of the pile of lettersthose happy letters, which nobody had thought of posting—he rose mechanically in order to put them away somewhere, and in order to put them away somewhere, and in looking about found his wife's workbasket, just as she had left it, the needle still sticking into the unfinished frill. Would it ever be finished? With a gasp and a wild stare round, as if to call her—to appeal to her—she, who had never before forsaken him thus, been missing when he called—her wanted her, or silent when he called-he seized and kissed it. Then he put everything in its place again, including her gar-den shawl, which he folded up with his helpless hands as tenderly as if it had been a living thing, and sat down again in the same chair, with his head dropped on his

Presently he had to arouse himself, and speak a few common-place words to Sir John, who came to fetch Lady Symington home to dinner; people must dine, and the dear old lady looked exhausted. She went up to Roderick and kissed him-bade him hope still-while there was life there was hope; but nevertheless urged upon him that last solemn prayer, which often seems to bring back the very blessing it resigns—
"Thy will be done."
"I can't say it—I can't" he answered—

· After that he seemed to grow quieter, and ready to accept everything. By and by the doctor came down to him for a minute, with an anxious face but a cheery voice.

"Take heart, my dear fellow. As I said, while there's life there's hope. Do not go near her; quite useless, as she knows nopody. By and by I'il fetch you, should there came a change."
"A change? For the better?"

"Yes. Or what they call a lightening be-Death-and her! The two ideas seemed impossible — irreconcilable, Roderick turned away from the old man, who did not mean to be cruel, and said that he had seen many a worse case. But Roderick heard it all as one in a dream, and directly afterward, hearing the sound of a carriage and believing it was only Black—faithful old Black—who always meant well, but the sight of whom would almost madden him just then, he bolted out of the long window, and went and hid himself in the darkest depths of the glen. depths of the glen.

Then all hope died out of Roderick's old seat in the parlor, waiting in a sort of stupefaction for the final blow, and repeating to himself over and over again a line which seemed persistently to best time to nothing in his overstrained brain—Othello's piteous moan.

"My wife! what wife?—I have no wife!" Perhaps even now he, too, had no wife. All the sweet days were over, her brief happiness was ended, her young life done. The candle burned itself out, and the moonlight, creeping in between the undrawn curtain, was beginning to fill the room with a pale, shostly light, when Roderick heard the door open, and some one enter very gently and hesitatingly.

"Well?" he said, not lifting his head, not doubting it was the summons of doom. No answer; but the intruder came close to him-touched him.

"Who's that?" he said, almost fiercely; "who's that?"
"It's me, Rody; it's your mother."
"Oh, mother, mother!"

For one moment her arms were round his neck and his head on her shoulder. Then he thrust her violently away. "I don't want my mother; I want my wife.

What of my wife? Is she alive?" "Yes. And she will live. And I thought I'd be the first to come and tell you. Do you hear, Rody? she's safe—quite safe. Both doctors say so. Thank God! thank God!

Oh. Rody, my son, my son!"
Once more she opened to him those fond mother-arms which no man can resist-no man ought to resist-and let him sob his heart out there, patting him, kissing him, treating him almost as if he had been a mere child, and sobbing herself the while with undisguised, uncontrollable emotion.

"How did you come, mother? Since when have you been here?"
"Ever so long, my dear."

"I was never told." "No; I went straight up to her. It did not matter, she knew nobody. The doctor is a friend of mine; he let me be with her, He knew I understood. I nearly died myself when you were born. Oh, Rody, what you must have suffered this day!"
"Nevermind me, it is my wife we must think about. I beg your pardon, moth er, but I must go and see her, my wife whom you hate, whom you were so cruel to. But I love her. She is more to me than anything or anybody in this world. I don't know why you come here. I never asked you to come. Still, I thank you for coming. But there is not the least occasion for you

"On, Rody-Rody! Me-your mother!" She burst into tears, such tears as it is terrible to see an old woman shed.

And Mrs. Jardine was an old woman now. The struggle between her heart-and it was a good honest heart after all-and her fierce indomitable will had told upon her severely, Could her son have seen her face he might have traced there the wrinkles of many added years. As it was, he felt that the hand which grasped him shook as with

A REMARKAELE RESCUE.

Important Events in the Life of Mrs. Patrick Dewey.

Her Husband's Death and Her Own Narrow Escape-A Story of More Than Ordinary Interest.

Napanee (Ont.) Beaver. Milsap is a little country settlement about four miles from Newburgh, Ont. Among the oldest and most esteemed residents of the locality is Mrs. Patrick Dewey, who bears her 71 years with a cheerfulness and vivacity that might be envied by many, a score of years young-er. Mrs. Dewey had always enjoyed good health until five years ago. At that time her husband was stricken with paralysis, and the worry and constant watching over his sickbed brought on disease. She began to waste away, was subject to severe headaches and spells of dizziness, and then her trouble was still further aggravated by an attack of rheumatism. Troubles do not come singly. Her husband was stricken with a second and third stroke of paralysis, and Mrs. Dewey's arduous task was increased. In searching for health for herself in order that she might be able to devote more of her time to her stricken husband, Mrs. Dewey tried many medicines, but with indifferent results. While reading the Beaver one night she read of a case similar to her own cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and determined to give them a trial. She sent for a supply and soon after beginning their use felt beneficial results. At this stage her husband died, and Mrs. Dewey lost in her overwhelming grief, forgot her own ills and the medicine she had been taking. A severe attack of la grippe ensued, and her friends thought she would soon follow her husband to the grave. Her system was run down until she was but little more than a skeleton. In this condition Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were again resorted to, and Mrs. Dewey gradually regained her health and strength, and now no trace of her illness remains. Her neighbors look upon her recovery as a miracle, and Mrs. Dewey herself dethe grave, and she loses no opportunity of recommending them to others. These pills are a positive cure for all troubles arising from a vitiated condition of the blood, or a shattered nervous system. MANITOBA SCHOOL APPEAL CASE.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy Gets Through-Argument Will Close Today. OTTAWA, March 6 .- There was a large attendance to hear the Manitoba school appeal case, which again came up in the railway committee room, House of Commons, this morning.

Mr. McCarthy, who again resumed his argument, covered a good deal of the same ground as he did yesterday. He explained what he meant by national schools, which were non-sectarian as compared with schools which were controlled under the church. He dealt at length with the greater efficiency of state schools as compared with the others, and read from the religious exercises used in the Manitoba schools to show that they were not Protestant schools, but of a non-sectarian character. He said that of all the provinces Quebec stood the lowest in respect to education. That was because the church had control of the schools. The Cabinet rose at 1 o'clock.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy closed his argument in the Manitoba school case this afternoon.

Mr. Ewart commenced to reply, dealing with the historical part of the argument until the Cabinet rose at 4:30 p.m. The argument will be closed tomorrow.

IMPORTANT DECISION

Affecting the Ownership of the Toronto Opera House. [United Press Dispatch.]

TORONTO, March 6.-If C. A. Shaw, exmanager of the Toronto Opera House, ever owned a purchasable interest in the theater, that interest was declared by the court today to have been legally conveyed to his father-in-law, Samuel Perrin, the present owner, who resides in Detroit. That conveyance was made in March, 1887. Mr. Perrin claimed that it was made to perfect the title and rectify a mistake in the conveyance to him of the property by ex Ald. Thos. Pells, its original owner. His son-in-law, he declared never had in any way interest in the

Mr. Shaw's father, Charles Shaw, of London, believed that his son had an interest in the property to the extent of $20,000, and that he conveyed this interest to his father-in-law, "without considera-tion," and for the purpose of defraud-ing his creditors. Five months ago he brought suit against his son to set aside the conveyance on this ground for the purpose of realizing on a $5,000 judgment he holds against his son for money loaned. His action was today dismissed with costs. Mr. Shaw, however, intends to appeal.

MARCH-IDEAL.

Now surely old March, swift hammers along, With a heavier tread, and a wilder song On his lips, Chill wrapped in his mantle of wint'ry gray, He shivers along, to see what he may,

As he skips
O'er the carpeted les, with manner jocose,
As keen as a hound, half-famished, fresh loose

From the slips, Undaunted, he bounds o'er the snow-clad main. Now humming a tune to his mad refrain,

On the airy wings of the anger'd blast,
That bears him along in his arms held fast,
While they sweep
O'er the withered old bough that shudders and shakes, And sighs in bewilderment as she wakes From her sleep.

Then away to the moor, where the ice-bound Detained by winter. is cumbered and still In her trap; They rattle along through the woodlands bare, Now hailing a tree, or starting a hare Till weary and fagged, enough it will do.
To forest and glen he waivers adieu
With his cap.

Come, come, to old winter he gruffly will speak, Tight button you coat, and away we will For behold!

My daughters are coming, sweet April and May. Their garments are thin, and they droop if we On the mould,
So off as companions together they go,
And vanish amid the mountains of snow,

How blythe those maidens come tripping Young spring in their arms and a vernal song For their lay,
As they dance in glee o'er the wakening grass,
Where the withered flow'rs revive as they pass On their way,
And the earth rescunds with a welcome ring,
As the brook flows on and the wild birds sing From the spray.

Recognizing that it is of the utmost importance to the success of the great singer that the system should be kept fresh and elastic, Mr. de Reszke says of the great tonic wine "Vin Mariani :"-" With pleasure I state that 'Vin Mariani' is an excellent tonic, specially useful to singers.' This is in harmony with the testimony of many other prominent singers and orators, all of whom agree that "Vin Mariani" has the special virtue of strengthening the voice, besides possessing the power to build up body and brain, enfeebled from excessive strain or overwork.
