KILLING OF BENTON CAUSES SENSATION IN GREAT BRITAIN

Government Not Inclined. However, To Change Its Policy Towards Mexico.

PUBLIC MAY DEMAND IT

United States Known To Be Practically Helpless To Protect Foreigners in Mexico

[Canadian Press.] London, Feb. 21.-The Government

up to noon has not taken any action regard to the execution at Juarez of William S. Benton, the Scottish ranchman, beyond instructing Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador at Washington, to obtain from Secretary of State Bryan all possible information on the affair. Although the tragedy has raised a sensation throughout the British Isles, it has not aroused any disposition on the part of responsible members of the British Government to change their policy in regard to Mexico. There is no concealment of the fact, however, that the murders of British subjects in Mexico, unless they be followed by the punishment of the perpetrators and the payment of indemnities, are likely to arouse public opinion here to the point where it will demand that the British Government take a strong line. This fact had been impressed upon the state department at Washington by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, before any British lives had been lost in Mexico.

Great Britain's official attitude the matter is that of looking to the United States Government to protect her subjects, and it has no doubt that the United States will do its best, al- DOUBTS ABOUT ENGLISH though it recognizes that the United States is practically helpless to protect foreign residents in Mexico.

Some Inconvenience. This action will cause some inconvenience, as Charles Murray Marling, who was to be Sir Lionel's successor, has now been replaced as counselor of embassy at Constantinople by Henry Hamond Dawson Beaumont, counselor of embassy at Tokio. At the meantime Mr. Marling remains in England awaiting orders to proceed to Mexico. He and his wife have announced to all their friends that they are going there.

'PICTURESQUE CANADA" APPEALS TO HARVEY

Noted English Actor Talks to Canadian Clubs of Impressions of Dominion.

"The aspect of the picturesque in your daily life was the first thing that struck me on arriving in Canada," said Martin Harvey, the noted English actor, who addressed one of the largest audiences in the history of the Canadian Club at luncheon in the Tecumseh House Friday at noon. The dining-room was filled to overflowing, a large number being unable to obtain seats. The members of the Women's Canadian Club and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey were the guests of the

"You who have always lived her," said Mr. Harvey, "perhaps don't notice this picturesque aspect which adds to so much to the charm of life in your country. I think it is contained in your glorious winter climate, your furs, your snow-shoeing, your sleighing, and inevitable hockey. If I do not wax enthusiastic over hockey you will understand that when we play to thin houses the reason is always ascribed to a hockey match the same night.

"Another impression I have received is your respect for the land. No spectacle more depressing than that of land abused, land that presents the noisome aspect of soulless speculation. Then I have been impressed in Canada with the essential unity of the empire, your deepying loyalty to the King, your friendly British recognition of your brotherman no matter of what race, and your deeplown devotion to the Union Jack.

"I am glad to notice that although yours is a new country the time has arrived when in your life there is a place for art. The time always does arrive when a country realizes that man cannot live by bread alone, when he realizes a hunger for the things of art. ST. THOMAS MAN FOR THE RAILWAY BOARD

Samuel Price, K.C., May Succeed Dr. Mills-Broder Also Mentioned.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, Feb. 20 .- The ten-year period for which Dr. James Mills and Hon. M. E. Bernier were appointed commissioners of the Dominion Railway Board has expired. It is understood that these gentlemen will be continued as commissioners until the decision is given in the Western freight rates case, which will be in the course of a few weeks. Then they will be retired to private life. Dr. Mills was one of the commissioners who heard all of the evidence in this important case, and as he is the representative of agricultural interests on the board, the Government does not think that he should be allowed to go unti! the case is completed by judgment. Chairman Drayton is now drafting the judgment, and as soon as his work is completed the verdict will be given.

To Succeed Dr. Mills. It is reported that J. H. G. Bergeron. ex-member of parliament, will succeed Mr. Bernier, To succeed Dr Mills the choice between Andrew Broder, M. for Dundas, and Samuel Price, K. of St. Thomas, who is the law partner of the Minister of Labor, Hon. Thomas Crothers. Mr. Price has been employed by the railway department for the past year preparing a consolidation of railway statutes. This week is a finished, and will be introduced into Parliament shortly His appointment is being urged by his partner, Mr. Crothers.

Will Investigate Conditions in Southwest Ontario-Reports of a Combine.

Ottawa, Feb. 20 .- A vigorous campaign by A. B. McCoig, the Liberal leader member for West Kent for Ontario tobacco growers, has produced results. Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, after hearing the representations of Mr. Mc-.Coig, conferred with Hon. George E. Foster, minister of trade and commerce and District Superintendent Barrett, of the Department of Agriculture, has been commissioned to go to South Western Ontario and thoroughly investigate the difficulty which tobacco growers have been having during the past fe wyears in and subsequently a subcommittee from reports of a combine among buyers to keep down prices and it is understood that this will be one of the things which to receive attention.

Commercial Dispute, Thinks Burrell. "Mr. McCoig brought the matter to my attention personally in the first place an dsubsequently a subcommittee from the Commons agricultural committee consisting of its chairman, Mr. Wilcox and Mr. McCoig waited upon me in regard to the matter." said Hon. Mr. Burrell. "Un-I the facts are before us the matter somewhat nebulous to deal with. So far as I have been able to learn the dispute is purely a commercial one and the growers of the district find that they cannot dispose of their crop except under certain conditions which the buyers im-pose. If this is the case it is doubtful pose. If this is the case it is doubtful if we can interfere, but if, on the other hand, it is found that there is a combine to keep down prices then we will be in a position to take further action."

CHILD MEETS DEATH BY EATING POISON

Boy Swallows Strychnine Tablets Used as Medicine-Dies Almost Instantly.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ailsa Craig, Feb. 20. - The threeyear-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald, who live near Springbank village, East Williams Township, climbed up on a chair this afternoon, secured and ate a quantity of strychnine tablets kept for medicinal purposes, and died almost immediately afterward.

The fatality happened while the little one's mother was in the room. The boy, along with the young child of Mr. and Mrs. John Watson, neighbors, was playing on the floor. He crawled up on the chair and managed to open a medicine chest where the tablets were kept. Be-fore his mother saw what the child was doing he had opened the small receptacl in which they were contained and wa cramming the tablets down his throat. BACK in the sixties, A.D. 18......, when P.O's were few, a small boy was privileged by an indulgent uncle to follow behind a harrow, drawn by "Buck and Bright," who were doing the work, on the only field on the farm that could be said to be free of stumps. Along about noon (by the sun) a horn sounded, blown by a heart that was always ready with good things, "B. and B." stopped for dinner, the small boy got busy with his blue beech (no whips), and urged his team on to the end of the furrow to come back on the home stretch, but no response, save vigorous kicks and shaking of the head from the fellow who felt the bud. The Oxen held their ground, and when unhooked, as they had to be, made for home on the double quick, leaving the boy to wonder why he could not make that team do the best thing. On that farm is the third generation, and according to "Noah" there ought to be at least a fourth. In the place of the second growth log house is a brick mansion that for comfort, convenience, etc., puts Holyrood or Edinburgh Castle out of the count. ANOTHER DREADNOUGHT

"Kron Prinz" To Be the Last to Carry Twelve-Inch Guns.

[Canadian Press.] Kiel, Germany, Feb. 21.-The seven teenth Dreadnought for the German navy was launched here today and christened Kron Prinz by ... Crown Prince Cecille. The crown prince, who was to have delivered an address, was prevented from attending the ceremony by illness. He has not yet completely recovered from the attack of tonsilitis which caused him to be confined to his bed on February 16 by order of his physicians. Prince Henry of Prussia acted as his substitute. The Kron Prinz is to be the last German Dreadnought to carry 12-inch guns.

CHARGED WITH FIRING RELATIVE'S HOUSE

Gideon Jewell, of Chatham, Arrested on Serious Charge.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Chatham, Ont., Feb. 20.—Gideon Jewell was arrested here this morning on a charge of setting fire to the residence of his father-in-law last night. Jewell, it is alleged, attempted to commit suicide some time ago, and after he recovered his wife separated from him. He was under bond not to molest her, but has broken his parole in this connection, it is charged. Last night he came to Chatham from Walkerville and, it is charged, using coal oil and rags, attempted to fire the home where his wife is now living. He was remanded to jail for a week this morning. It is thought that he is becoming mentally incapacitated. His arrest followed a chase of several miles and was made only when a train was pulling out for Windsor.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION IN CHURCH AT CLINTON

Huron County Workers Celebrate the Great Victory of the Twenty-Ninth.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Clinton, Feb. 20.—The Huron Temperance convention met in the Ontario Street Church here today with an attendance of 120 delegates from nearly every municipality in the county. Following the address by the president, Frank Buchanan, a special service commemorating the victory of January 29 was held. The work of the convention was divided among three newly organized committees, business, law enforcement and legislation

At the afternoon session, following the adopting of the reports, a discussion was entered upon regarding the appointment of a field secretary. This, the convention by a big vote, decided to do, but by a resolution it was later decided to call another convention at a subsequent date to make the appointment and arrange for financing.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, A. T. Cooper; first vice-president, Frank Buchanan, Wingham; second vice-president, School Inspector Tom, of Goderich; third vice-president, John Scott, Exeter; secretary, J. A. Erwin, Clinton; treasurer, A. Cousens, Wingham. The W. C. T. U. entertained the delerates in the basement of the church, providing both dinner and supper.

IMPERIAL CITIZENSHIP. N illustration of the problems of A imperialism, and the difficulties that stand in the pathway of the Empire, may be found in the report of a meeting of Hindus given in a recent number of the Manchester Guardian. The meeting referred to was that of the Indian National Congress held at a place called Karachi, n Hindustan. During the sessions a resolution was introduced calling for the interference of the Imperial Government to secure for the Hindus of South Africa the rights of citizenship. Canada is not the only part of the British Dominions that has a Hindu problem to solve. And while the discussions in the Indian Congress had to do with the South African situation they would apply with equal force to our own country.

The proposer of the resolution stated that there was no desire to dispute over the rights of the self-governing dominions.

"It was justice that was wanted, and the removal of the racial bar. The South African Indian should have the right to enter the Cape Province and the right of domicile should be restored. The £3 tax should be abolished, Indian marriages in South Africa recognized, and the South African laws sympathetically administered." The seconder of the resolution was equally emphatic. "They were only demanding citizenship of the empire. The question was whether they were entitled to it or not. If Indians were not granted citizenship, he would call upon those who assumed the guardtanship of India to be true to their Otherwise Indians would charge them with a criminal breach

All the other speakers took similar to realize that their demand for free admission and equal citizenship was an interference with the powers of those self-governing dominions that and imperfect line; and we will not have seen fit to pass laws restricting Asiatic immigration, whether from a agreed on. We will operate it, if you British possession or elsewhere. These like, but we will not pay rent. Or powers none of them can surrender without ceasing to be self-governing and reverting to the status of a very bad blunder. By its change of crown colony. The idea of a common citizenship wherever the British flag flies sounds well in theory. But in practice it will not work. Social and industrial conditions vary in these widely scattered dominions, and the terms of citizenship must vary to meet the line at its own cost. And because this seems to be the only system that our fellow subjects in India seem intensified when the proposition to to understand we fear their dream of becoming a self-governing dominion is a long way from realization.

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL BLUNDERING.

The Courier pays a tribute to the HE report of the special comspending millions more than was necessary on the construction of the line. The Advertiser has already pointed out that the expenditures which the commission says were unnecessary were the natural conse quence of the policy adopted in undertaking the enterprise—the policy of building a good road instead of a cheap one-a policy formally announced, approved by Parliament, and indorsed by the people at the general election following. There was no blundering in carrying out the pressed will of the people. But there has been blundering since the new Government took over the management of affairs. They have adopted a policy of cheap construction. It may be said that it is a matter of opinion which policy is in the interest of the country. That may be true. But the reversal of the late Govern. ment's policy was a serious blunder in that it was a violation of the contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific people, and thus leaves the way open for them to repudiate such parts of contract as they may think burdensome. It has been generally admitted that the part of the completed line which will be owned by the Government, but rented to the G. T. P. at a yearly charge of three per cent of the cost of construction, will be the most unprofitable part to operate. And it has been declared by Conservative papers that the company will never take over this part of the line, but will leave it on the hands of the Government. Such a course has never been hinted at by the railway people themselves. But it can easily be understood that they would not object to getting out of this or any other unprofitable part of their bargain. And if they do so desire, the policy of the Conservative Government provides the opportunity. The G. T. P. can very justly say: 'It is true we agreed to take over your part of the road and pay three per cent of the cost yearly as a rental. But then you were to build a good road, not a cheap one. You were to make it first-class; and our engineers were to watch the work and see that it was properly done. It started all right: you commenced to build a good road: and our engineers approved of ground. Evidently they were unable all the expenditure, even though the heavy cost would increase our rental. But now you have changed the good road policy; you are building a cheap take it over on the terms originally you can operate it yourself."

CLEAN SEED.

[Brussels Post.] No farmer can get anyone to take the same pains in grading his seed that he would himself. Some farmers claim that it does not pay to clean grain.

All grain crops can be improved by grading the seed, so that only good, plump, healthy grains, free from all foul weed seeds may be sown. The fanning mill judiciously used will do much to increase the yield of every small grain crop and assist in keeping our fields free from noxious weeds. It will take cockle out of wheat, buckthorn, plantain out of clover, in fact, it can be adjusted so as to handle all kinds of weed seeds.

The fact that a certain picture is a so-called masterpiece, or is much talked of for some adventitious reason, as the Mona Lisa, for instance, is no proof that it has any value whatever for schoolroom decoration. Bacon's essays and Browning's poems are masterpieces in literature, but no one of any judgment would put them in a library for public school pupils. r public school pupils. Some pictures are of value to adult art

Some pictures are of value to adult art students, or adult cultivated persons in general who are interested in the history of the advancement of art, and yet these pictures may not have the slightest value for public school children. A similar remark might be made of many land-scapes, and portraits, and architectural and historical pieces.

Unless the pictures directly appeal to the feelings of the children or can readily be made to appeal to them by a slight interpretative effort on the part of the teacher the money spent on them is as good as wasted.

There are plenty of good pictures to be had for children, but it takes time and care to select them. It is to be hoped that the committee that has this matter in charge in regard to any of the city public schools will not be in too great a hurry to make their purchases, and will not feel obliged to purchase only such pictures as one single enterprising firm may bring to their notice. With the reducing of the heel came apparently the introduction of many different colors to the uppers of these shoes, especially the shoe for dressy affairs. Grays and tans are particularly attractive, and so are the darker shades of red. The smartness of all these colors is greatly added to when one insists on the tops fastened with black buttons. The same shade button as the upper is not so modish nor so striking.

The Woman On the Farm

The woman on the average farm has hard life at the best. Loyal and true as the helpmate of her oftentimes unappreciative husband, and self-sacricing as the mother of her children, she drudges faithfully along year in and year out. Little occurs to the dull monotony of her life. Holidays and trips are not for her. In the house she goes without utensils and conveniences that would lift a load from her money to buy a plow or add to the barn. She stands back if new clothes have to be bought. Her old clothes can be brushed up or mended to last a little longer, for does she not stay at home most of the time? She denies herself little comforts and femininities that cost money in order that something more needful may be bought, or what reward? True, as a rule, she gets plenty of food, and she has a lot of fresh air exercise. But is not one of the chief needs of agricultural life nowadays a larger consideration for the fact that the farmer's wife is a well. the fact that the farmer's wife is a wo-

LEVINSKY IS THE ONLY SCRAPPER IN PUGDOM WHO MEETS ALL COMERS

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Just as we get all set and decide that the "good old days" are gone; that the time is past when a fighter would meet all comers, without regard to weight, size or previous condition of servitude, along comes Battling Levinski.

Don't like the name? Well, it's orthodox—and all Levinski bars is battling on Saturday night. He didn't like the name at first himself. At least he grabbed an Irish name, because Dan Morgan thought that baxing fans liked Irish fighters. It took Levinski and his managers some time to discover that there is "neither east nor west, border nor breed nor birth" when two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth."

One day he made an open revolt against fighting as an Irishman. His advisors told him he was crazy; that under the name of Levinski he could not get matches. He insisted.

That was the start of the most spectacular ring career of any fighter in recent years. Levinski wanted to fight. There were no squabbles over weight, purses, conditions, anything else. He was wanted to battle him. He fought Tueswanted to battle him. He fought Tuesday in Hoboken, Wednesday in New York, Thursday in Philadelphia, Friday lost white hope has been found.

[By S. T. Coleridge.]
Alas! they had been friends in youth; But whispering tongues can poison truth; And constantly lives in realms above; And constantly lives in realms above;
And life is thorny; and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we leve
Doth work like madness in the brain.
And thus it chanced, as I divine,
With Roland and Sir Leoline,
Each spake words of high disdain
And insult to his heart's best brother;
They parted ne'er—to meet again!
But never either found another
To free the hollow heart from paining—
They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
A dreary sea now flows between— A dreary sea now flows between— But neither heat nor frost nor thunder Shall wholly do away, I ween, The marks of that which once hath been.

Club.

Petrolea, Feb. 20.—A fast game of hockey was played tonight between the Wagon Works and Athletic Clubs teams, resulting in a victory for the latter. The game was fast and fairly clean and no recommendation of the scores in the games in the Church League at Simcoe rink last night. A larger crowd than usual witnessed the contests, which were in all cases hard fought.

Dundas Centre Won.
Dundas Centre defeated the King Street Presbyterians in the first game, notching two goals in the first half while their opponest were unable to find the nets. In two goals in the winning rampage, however, and the second stanza both teams scored a goal. The contest closed with a 3 to 1 score and Dundas Centre to the good.

Askin Streets Beat Adelaide.

Four goals against one was the total of counters piled up by the fast Askin Juniors against Adelaide Street in the first half of a game that smacked of the scrappy variety. The Adelaides came back strong in the second part and scored two "game-getters." They were a little slow in starting on the winning rampage, however, and the game ended 5 to 2 in favor of Askin Street.

ever, and the game ended 5 to 2 in lavor of Askin Street.

Askin Seniors Also Won.

With the win of "their kid brothers" as a stimulus, the Askin Seniors put it over the Adelaide Street "big boy" aggregation to the tune of 6 to 1. Half time ended 3 to 1 with the preference in the camp of the Askins. This lead they held, winnig easily. winnig easily.

Refere: Dick Penny handled the game to the satisfaction of all.

HARRISTON WON FROM GRAND VALLEY 9 TO 5

[Special to The Advertiser.] Harriston, Ont., Feb. 20.—An exhibition game was played here tonight between Valley, winners of the Ontario Central League, and the Harriston Bronc's. Kitt, of Harriston, received a nasty cut on the lip which needed several stitches. The game ended by Harriston winning by a score of 9 to 6. MONTREAL CLUB BUSY SIGNING UP PLAYERS

Montreal, Feb. 20.-Manager Bransfield has obtained the contract signatures of Pitcher Ritcher, formerly of the Louisville Club, and Catcher Mike Murphy. Pitcher McGraynor, after having his salary more than doubled, has come into the fold. Bransfield is going on to St. Louis to put up a big fight to sign Pitcher Jean Dale, the hoodoo of the Leafs, who is said to have jumped to the Federals. The Royals' manager failed to land "Runt" Walsh, who was handed over with Howley and Miller in the Eddie Burns deal.

BRITONS GROWING WEALTHIER

It is quite a mistake to take too seriously all the reports that come to us regarding the financial condition of Great Britain.

Much has been written in England concerning the relief which will be afforded to the money market when the savings of the French middle classes and peasantry are attracted by the French loan which is shortly to be floated. Britons are apt, how ever, to overlook the growth of thrift in their own country and in their col-

of Himself. [Canadian Press.] PICTURE OF JOHN JAY MCDEVITT INSET IN ONE OF STATUE HE WISH-ES TO PRESENT TO AMERICAN PEO. Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 20 .- John Jay McDevitt, who became a "millionaire-fora-day" and went broke when he parted with $2,500 in trying to brighten old Broadway, once more has money in his jeans! John Jay, who also answers to the name of "Butch," has $3,000, and most of this money he is to spend in hiring a special train to take him to Washington for the purpose of offering to congress, and the nation a statue of himself.

A band of 50 pieces has been hired to escort John Jay to the train and four special detectives will go along to guard the statue, which cost John Jay $700. The engineer will throw open the throttle, and the fireman will burn up every pound of coal necessary in making the trip in record breaking time.

With all the pomp and grandeur of a foreign ambassador, McDevitt will enter Washington. He has hired the United States marine band to meet him at the station, and when all is in readiness he will march behind the famous organization to one of the leading hotels. When the private detectives of "Butch" have carefully guarded his statue and taken it to a place of safety, John Jay will send a committee of his friends to Speaker Champ Clark of the house to ask congress to accept his statue. "Butch" believes that if he is permitted to talk with the speaker or a committee of congress he will be able to convince them of his greatness, and he declares that he believes that he will be able to show that the deeds of McDevitt rank with those of Lincoln, Grant and Washington. But he modestly refuses to turn the bright light of publicity on the a lane from Adelaide street, the firemen were able to reach the fire from two sides. The building was similar to a "T" in formation, with three wings running from a centre, and it was here that the blaze originated, and where the fight centred. Five lines of hose were brought into play here. Barrels and barrels of water were poured through the windows, which dropped through the windows, which to the ground in a deluge, covering the floor to a depth of several feet, gradually began to have an effect. Within ally began to have an effect. three-quarters of an hour the blaze was under control, although it continued to burn stubbornly in the loft, defying all efforts to extinguish it. The supply of fodder in the loft had been renewed only that day with many tons of hay and 32 bags of oats, and it was here that the fire gained fresh impetus. Hard fighting until 3 o'clock rewarded the firemen. The flames no longer shot through the roof, although heavy smoke and vapor tinued to rise from the debris.

What These Pests Did to Stock of Edibles May Cause Bankruptcy.

[WRITTEN BY OUR OWN JIM.] The story of the Pied Piper of Hammelin was vividly recalled to a number of people in the downtown district last night by a sight in the window of a downtown grocery store.

A burly policeman was passing along the street, when he chanced to glance into the well-lighted window, and there saw a number of thieves calmly helping themselves to whatever suited their different appetites, and as he stood and stared so long, a crowd soon gathered in the hopes of seeing an arrest made, but the thieves were only rats, and as there is no law concerning them, the officer and crowd could only stand and enjoy the spectacle which the rodents were all unconsciously affording at the shopkeeper's expense.

Some Stayed. Some soon grew tired and proceeded on their way, the policeman being among the few, but others who were more curious, or were bent on no particular errand, stayed to watch the

Despite the fact that the early closing bylaw was repealed by the city council a number of the grocers who are in favor of closing their stores early Saturday night will shut up shop at 7 o'clock to night as they were forced to do when the bylaw was in force.

Tonight will be the first Saturday night that grocery store owners will be allowed to keep open after 7 o'clock, and those in favor of the early closing state tha the people have become accustomed to doing their shopping early in the day, and that business now will not be worth keeping open for after 7 o'clock, and as a result they will close at 7 now as before. During the past week there has been some talk of the grocers getting up another petition asking the council to pass a bylaw for early closing, but as yet the proposition has not been gone ahead with.

John S. Draper, Formerly of London, Never Had an Accident.

Joseph S. Draper, who was a conductor of the Grand Trunk Railroad, running from Toronto to Detroit, for 45 years, and resigned from service over 25 years ago, died at his residence in Toronto yesterday in his 93rd year. Joseph S. Draper was well known by the travelling men of this city, having run through London on the midnight limited for over 25 years. He was during his time one of the most popular conductors on the Grand Trunk System. The late Mr. Draper was conductor on No. 6 on its return trip from Detroit to

Toronto, and on the Limited to the City of the Straits. During his service on the Grand Trunk railway men estimate Mr. Draper tray elled over a million miles. This is a record seldom achieved by railway men. He never was in a serious accident nor on a train that killed a person in all his

TWO APPLICATIONS A MEEKTA HIGH CONS.

Question of Payment of Moneys to Guardian of Infants and Will Construction.

Mr. Justice Latchford presided at this morning's sitting of the weekly high court. Only two applications were made

The first, in the matter of the estate of Robert Lloyd, an application was made on behalf of the mother, who resides in Texas, and who is the guardian of the children, for payment over to her of moneys now in the hands of the administrators, the London and Western Trusts Company. The late Robert Lloyd was a resident of Ontario, and the moneys being here are under the control of the Ontario courts. Justice Latchford reserved judgmen in the case. E. W. Scatcherd appeared for the motion; C. G. Jarvis for the London and Western Trust Company, and Thomas Colerick for the infants.

The second motion was an application for construction in the will of James Buchanan. In the will certain words were used by the testator purporting to limit the power of a beneficiary under the will, so that he could not movigage or otherwise dispose of his estate. The court, under the authorities, held that the words conveying this limitation were null and void, and that the estate is free J. B. Shaw, of Rodney, appeared for the

"Few people realize," said Mr. Philip to The Advertiser today, "what a big thing one of these conventions really is. One of the Ottawa papers, where the hardware convention was held this year, dealing with this subject, points out that the 1.500 delegates and 175 exhibitors spent a large sum of money during the six days of the convention. At a very conservative estimate each delegate spends $7 a day, and the total expense of each exhibitor for the week is $100. Figuring this up on the basis of 1,500 delegates for six days at $7 per day each, you would have $63,000, plus 175 exhibitors at $100 each, $17,500, and neidental expenses of $2,000, bringing the total spent in the city during the week to $82,500.

MARKET COMMENT

[Special to J. M. Young, Broker.]
New York, Feb. 20.—Tomorrow will probably see another day of traders' market tactics in the general list, the two-day holiday having a quieting effect. On reactions we believe that buying opportunities in the best issues should be sought. The railway list seems to be waiting assurance of greater revenue, but stocks like Reading, Union Pacific, Norfolk, St. Paul and L. and N., that do not need higher revenues to maintain a safe margin over dividends, are well bought.

Steel is reported taken for important accounts also. The best copper and equipment stocks are understood to be bought almost daily when reactionary for inside interests. Specialties may be taken by traders for turns when made active.

Quebec Railway and Ames-Holden Common Were in Favor Among Low Priced Issues.

New York, Feb. 20.—The only semblance of life in the stock market today was derived from the movements of shares with a small speculative following which ordinarily play an unimportant part in the dealings. One-third of the loss of $12,000,000 net for 1912 of the entire system resulted from the western floods on the Big oFur, which is controlled through the Lake Shore, and the latter has not received any dividends from Big Four since 1910, so that very little atention need be paid to it or the Lake Shore loss. The Lake Shore is in good shape. "Unprofitable improvements" are mentioned as a possible cause for the reent selling of American Copper Metal consumers are declared in expert quarters to be "skating on thin ice," they are buying so closely from hand to mouth that a wild upward movement in the price of the metal would ensue in event of a sudden demand for the metal. The copper shares would par-ticipate in such a movement. Foreign buying is steadily absorbing a good stock

Big Western wire institutions are sanguine as to the outlook for a broad, actice and optimistic stock market, and they are taking the stand that the February reaction provides an exceptional opportunity to buy good stocks. The action of the market in the last few days is alled entirely satisfactory on the whole and indicative of only a moderate dis-

Elevator Companies. Chicago, Feb. 20.—Revival of export demand had a strengthening influence today on wheat. Except for an occasional slight on wheat. Except for an occasional slight lapse, the market was higher throughout the day and closed steady with a net gain of a shade. Corn finished ½c and %c to %c up, and oats at an advance of %c and %c to ¼c, but provisions were off 2½c and 5c to 7½c.

Bullish cables made holders of wheat confident from the outset that foreign buying would be in order. The belief was soon justified by announcement that some business for Europe was being done in the Southwest from interior points by way of the Gulf. Later the fact developed that liberal sales had been brought about here to exporters for shipment from the Atlantic seaboard. the Atlantic seaboard.

the Atlantic seaboard.

Domestic weather and crop conditions almost without blemish formed the chief obstacle to a more decided upturn. The contrast in this respect with other countries was quite unusual, Russia and France reporting winter killing; India rains, which spoiled the harvest, and Australia forebodings of trouble from drought.

Corn developed independent firmness on account of better shipping demand, although the improvement was only slight. There was one instance, however, in which the buyer asked to have shipments rushed. Owners called attention to the diminishing of receipts here, to the scantiness of the eastern supply and to the continued absence of any generous

THE HOLLOW OF HER HAND

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

"Didn't want to disturb you, Brandy," cried, cheerily. "Besides, Sara wouldn't me." He then passed on to Hetty, who had lagged behind. Bending low over her hand, he said something com-monplace in a very low tone, at the same time looking slyly out of the cor-ner of his eye to see if Booth was taking t all in. Finding that his friend was garding him rather fixedly, he obeyed a sudden impulse and raised the girl's slim hand to his lips. As suddenly he eleased her fingers and straightened up with a look of surprise in his eyes—head distinctly heard the agitated catel her throat. She was staring at her and in a stupefied sort of way, holding rigid before her eyes for a moment fore thrusting it behind her back as f it were a thing to be shielded from

Now he was curiously conscious of having overstepped the bounds, and the first time to be shown his place rirl. This to him, who had no about boundary lines!

All through luncheon he was volatile and gay. There was a bright spot in his cheek, however, that betrayed him to Sara, who already suspected the temper of his thoughts. He talked aeroplaning without cessation, directing most of his conversation to Booth, yet thrilled with easure each time Hetty laughed at his He was beginning to feel like a half-baked schoolboy in her presence. most deplorable state of affairs, he

"If you hate the trains so much, and our automobile is out of whack, why on't you try volplaning down from the Metropolitan tower?" demanded response to his lugubrious wail against the beastly luck of having to go about in railway coaches with a lot of red-eyed, nose-blowing people who hadn't got used to their spring underwear as yet.

"Sinister suggestion, I must say," he claimed. "You must be eager to see

'Oh, I love the danger there is in it,"

"Oh, I love the danger there is in it," said Wrandall carelessly. "That's what gives zest to the sport."
"I love it, too," said Hetty, her eyes a-gleam. "The glorious feel of the wind as you rush through it! And yet one seems to be standing still in the air when one is half a mile high and going fifty miles an hour. Oh, it is wonderful, Mr. Wrandall."
"I'll take you out in a week or two."

"I'll take you out in a week or two.

'I will go," she announced promptly. Booth frowned. "Better wait a bit," he counselled. "Risky business, Miss Castleton, flying about with fledglings."

"I was merely suggesting she'd better wait till you've got used to your wings."
"Jimmy Van Wickle took his wife with him the third time up," said Leslie, as if that were the last word in aeroplaning.

"It's common report that she keeps Jimmy level, no matter where she's got him," retorted Booth.

"I daresay Miss Castleton can hold me said Leslie, with a profound bow to her. "Can't you. Miss Castleton?" "Oh, as for that, Mr. She smiled. Wrandall, I think we can all trust you to cling to your own level." "Rather ambiguous, that," he remarked dubiously. "She means you never get below it eslie," said Booth, enjoying himself.

"That's the one great principle in areo planing." said Wrandall, quick to recover "Vivian says I'll break my neck some day but admits it will be a heroic way of do ing it. Much nobler than pitching out of an automobile or catapulting over a horse's head in Central Park." He paused for effect before venturing his next con clusion. "It must be ineffably sublime, getting squashed—or it is squashed?—after a drop of a mile or two, isn't it?"
He looked to see Miss Castleton wince, and was somewhat abashed to find that she was looking out of the window, quite oblivious to the peril he was in figuratively for her special consideration.

Booth was acutely reminded that the term "prig" as applied to Leslie was a misnomer; he hated the thought of the other word, which reflectively he rhymed with "pad." It occurred to him early in the course of this rather one-sided discussion that their hostess was making no effort to take part in it, whether from lack of inor because of its frivolous nature he of course, unable to determine. was, of course, unable to determine. Later he was struck by the curious pallor of her face, and the lack-lustre expression of her eyes. She seldom removed her gaze from Wrandall's face, and yet there persisted in the observer's mind the rather uncanny impression that she did not hear a word her brother-in-law was saying. He, in turn, took to watching her covertly. At no time did her expres-sion change. For reasons of his own, he my life blood scattered all over creation.

But, speaking of volplaning, I've had three lessons this week. Next week Bronson says I'll be flying like a gull. Gad, it's wonderful. I've had two tumbles, that's all—little ones, of course—net result, a barked knee and a peeled close in the put it down to fancy on his part. He tried to screw up his courage to the point of asking her why he shouldn't kiss her hand, which might have opened the to more profound interrogations, but somehow he felt unable to cope with the serenity that confronted him. Moreover, he had a horrible conviction that the chauffeur was a brute with abnormally long ears and a correspondingly short sense of humor. No, it was not the time or the place for love-making. He would have to be content to bide his time some of its disadvantages. There was a most engaging nook, he remembered, in the corner of the garden facing the Sound, where the shadows were deep; where sentiment could thrive on its own ecstasy; where no confounded menial dared to show his face—although he had to admit

"Oh, it is quite warm," he said quickly.

"You won't need a wrap," he added, and in spite of himself his voice trembled. Of course she wouldn't need a wrap!

"I have a few notes to write," salu Sara, rising. She deliberately avoided the look in Hetty's eyes. "You will find me in the library."

he saw in hers an expression of actual concern, if not alarm.

Leslie was in the middle of a sentence when Sara laughed aloud, without excuse or reason. The next instant she was looking from one to the other in a dazed sort of way, as if coming out of a dream.

Wrandall turned scarlet. There had been nothing in his remarks to call for a laugh, he was quite sure of that. Flushing slightly, she murnured something about having thought of an amusing story, and legged him to go on, she wouldn't be rude again.

He had little zest for continuing the subject, and sullenly disposed of it in a word or two.

"What the devil was there to laugh at, Brandy?" he demanded of his friend after the women had left them together on the porch a few minutes later. Hetty had gone upstairs with Mrs. Wrandall, her arm clasped tightly about the older woman's lasped tightly about the older woman's

"I daresay she was thinking about you falling a mile or two," said Booth, pleasantly.

But he was perplexed.

CHAPTER XI.

Man Proposes.

The young men cooled their heels for an hour before word was brought down to them that Mrs. Wrandall begged to be excused for the afternoon on account of a severe headache. Miss Castleton was with her, but would be down later on. Meanwhile they were to make themselves excused for the afternoon on account of a severe headache. Miss Castleton was with her, but would be down later on. Meanwhile they were to make themselves at home, and so on and so forth.

Booth took his departure, leaving Leslie in sole possession of the porch. He was restless, nervous, excited; half afraid to stay there and face Hetty with the proposal he was determined to make, and wholly afraid to forsake the porch and run the risk of missing her altogether if she came down as signified. Several things disturbed him. One was Hetty's deplorable failure to hang on his words as he had fondly expected her to do; and then there was that very disquieting laugh of Sara's. A hundred times over he repeated to himseif that sickening question: "What the devil was there to laugh at?" and no answer suggested itself. He was decidedly cross about it.

Another hour pased. His freels were quite cool by this time, but his blood was boiling. This was a deuce of a way to treat a fellow who had gone to the trouble to come all the way out in a stuffy train, by Jove it was! With considerable asperity he rang for a servant and commanded him to fetch a time table, and to be quick about it, as there might be a train leaving before he could get back if it took him as long to find it as it took other people to remember their obligations! His sarcasm failed to impress Murray, who said he thought there was a schedule in Mrs. Wrandall's room, and he'd get it as soon as the way was clear, if Mr. Wrandall didn't mind waiting." "If I minded waiting," snapped Leslie, "I wouldn't be here now."

"It's the thing most people object to in the country, sir," said Murray consolingly, "waiting for trains, sir."

"And the sunset," added Mr. Wrandall pointedly, with a westward glare.

"We don't mind that, sir. We rather look forward to it. It means one day less of waiting for the trains." It was rather cryptic, but Leslie was too deeply absorbed in self-pity to take account of the pathos in Murray's philosophy.

They returned at seven. Dinner was unusually merry. Sara appeared to have smile. He took it to be an omen of good fortune, and was immeasurably confident. The soft, cool breezes of the star-lit night blew visions of impending happiness across his lively imagination; fanned his impatience with gentle ardor, filled him with suppressed sighs of contentment, and made him willing to forego the de-light of conquest that he might live the longer in serene anticipation of its thrills.

The hens should be provided a con stant lunch counter of rolled oats, which they could get any time of the day. It should be constantly on tap. An acid digestive agency was also necessary, and for this, buttermilk would be found the best. A good quantity of sand should also be available, the hens seeming to prefer this rather than the commercial products of gri or oyster shell. Hard coal ashes would also be appreciated by the chicks. river, yesterday, the "first," the one nearer the city, was put to use.

Before any ice can be cut, the snow must be cleaned from the surface, which is one of the important parts of ice-making. This is done with a "planer," a snowplough with sharp teeth, instead of a straight edge, drawn by horses. Next, the ice is marked in squares, as guides for the ploughman, who cuts the ice. If the ice were not cut in perfect squares, it would cause a great deal of trouble in storing, and would not lie evenly. The ice is cut with a knife plough, in two-foot squares about two-thirds of the way through, along the lines of the marker. This is broken up into rafts, floated down a channel to the shed at the end of the cove. Here, the rafts are broken by steel forks into the separate squares, which are cove. the doors. The slides are raised as the shed is filled.

The endless chain is run by a 35 horse-power gasoline automobile engine, and holds about a ton of ice when full. Each square of ice weighs about 180 pounds, and the ice house has a capacity of 4,500 tons. Men keep the squares sliding along the chutes, and a dozen or so men with steel pointed pikes, pack them evenly in the shed. Each layer is "floored" or smoothed off with forks so that the ice packs slowly. The ice cut within the last few days is particularly good, Mr. Steele said. The weather has been ideal, and he has cut about 500 tons daily. It is solid, and as clear as glass, and is eleven inches thick.

Mr. Steele has filled one shed and almost filled a large board enclosure about 20 feet high, and will start on his two other sheds at the "second" cove Monday. Mr. Steele says that he will cut about 9,000 tons this year, about half the ice used in the city during the year, and is enthusiastic over the fine crop.

SPEAKS AT KING STREET

Easier to Prevent Formation of Slums Than to Eradicate Them, Is His Advice.

Rev. Dr. Shearer, of Toronto, chairman of the committee on evangelism and moral reform of the Presbyterian Church, addressed a large gathering in the basement of the King Street Presbyterian Church Thursday evening. His subject was "Christianity Applied," and was illustrated by a large number of splendid lantern slides depicting the work undertaken by the social service department of the church. These included pictures taken in many cities in Canada, and showed actual conditions which the department is trying to eliminate

Canada's Slums Disgrace. Slum conditions such as existed in some of the cities were a national disgrace in view of the fact that Canada was still a young country, he said. It was a great deal easier to prevent the formation of these slums than to eradicate them after they were formed, and by looking after the incoming immigrants, and seeing to it that they found proper housing accommodation, and so on, a great work could be done in raising the standard of Canadian

This work, said the speaker, was be ing accomplished amid great difficulties, by consecrated men and women who are devoting their lives to social service, in an effort to care for the poor and downtrodden.

Conditions in London. Dr. Shearer's address was preceded y a short illustrated address by H. W. Lyons, secretary of the Men's Federaion, in which he placed before the audience some of the facts regarding London, which were borught out by the recent social survey, and contained in the reports recently published. Rev. W. R. McIntosh, pastor of church, presided, and a solo by Mr. Beebee was greatly appreciated.

CHICAGO WORKER SPEAKS

Sunday School Embraces 30, 000,000 - Sprung From a Little Band of Women.

Successful sessions of the annual institute of the London Sunday School Association were held yesterday afternoon and evening in the Talbot Street Baptist Church, when addresses were given by W. C. Pearce, of Chicago associate general secretary of the International Sunday School Association, and E. W. Halpenny, of Toronto, general secretary for Ontario.

In the evening, Mr. Halpenny spoke on "The Hirelings and the Shepherd," and emphasized the sympathy and intimate relations which should exist between teachers and pupils in the Sunday school. The 1,500,000 Sunday school teachers in the world, he said, were the mightiest force for good morals that the world had. Large sacrifices that the world did not realize, was, demanded of them.

Extension of the Work. Mr. Pearce dwelt upon the growth and extension of Sunday school work the world over. People were coming to appreciate the quiet, constructive force of Christianity instead of the spectacular. he said. The Sunday school, embracing 30,000,000 persons throughout the world. world power because it was big, and extensive because of its leadership. It had once been a little company of women in Gloucester, England. Today there vere 5,000,000 men in the Sunday school

n the United States and Canada. The Sunday school, he said, was an agency of the dhurch that touched life at all its stages, from the cradle roll to the adult class. Mr. Penny emphasized the interdenominational work of the Sunday school, the breadth of the Sunday school platform, and the missionary work of the International Association in the West Indies, in old Mexico and among the negroes of the South.

R. I. Watson presided. During the afternoon and evening a number of excellent piano selections were rendered by Prof. Alvin W. Roper, of Winona Lake, Indiana.

The following officers of the London City Association were elected at the evening session, all but Messrs. Lovell, Hunt, Pearce and Rev. Mr. Whitmore beng re-elected: The audience was larger than that of Thursday night, and the Thespians were loudly applauded. Jas. Fowler tions, charitable and otherwise, there is none that appeals more to the pride of citizens than Victoria Hospital, which through years of steady growth and expansion has become in quality, if not altogether in size, one of the foremost institutions of its kind in the Dominion, or for that matter, anywhere else. From the comparatively small beginning it has expanded to the point where almost every ill that man is heir to can be coped with and generally with success. Nowadays a hospital moves with all the smoothness and precision of a great manufacturing concern or departmental store, and as a consequence we are, perhaps, inclined to lose sight of the more sentimental side. A great city hospital we take for granted just as we do any other systematized institution of daily life, a cog in the machinery of the community, playing its part effectively, but it would be interesting could one know-boil down to figures-just how much of health and its there has been installed a new signalling running mate happiness, had come to city and country from the wards of Victoria

Great Land Problem For Scotland Lloyd George Promises Bright Times and Scores the Duke of Sutherland

"I can assure you," the chancellor went on, "it was no fault of mine. We had some very important business to transact in London, and we had to be here. I have read the explanations of why I did not turn up, as you realize, the Tory papers have question on the spot—("Hear, hear," all of them authentic-(laughter)-for Proceeding to deal in detail with the Scottish land problem, Mr. Lloyd George observed that, personally, he wished they could settle this great and a voice, "Give us home rule")-by of Scotsmen themselves. That would be the most satisfactory solution of all, but for the moment they had to discuss the land question as a great British question. "There are substantial differences in some respects," the chancellor proceeded, "between the agrarian conditions of Scotland and those of the south, but, still, there is one great, deep, underlying principle of all sound, just, and beneficent land laws in every land -that the land in all countries was created by Providence for the benefit of all those who dwell therein— (cheers)—and that any privileges, rights, or interests, attaching for the time being, whatever their origin may be, to the ownership of land that are inconsistent with this great purpose (Laughter and cheers.) of that reserve. (Cheers.)

"The national life draws largely upon this fund of peasantry. There is no part of Britain, there is no part of the Empire, there is no country in Europe, which draws as largely upon these resources as Scotland does. (Cheers.) The reason why it is, is that you have fewer class barriers in Scotland than we have in the south. Your education is and always has been more demo-cratic, so that the children of the peasant and of the laborer find their way to the foremost positions in your life. (Cheers.)

"It is more difficult in the south for the peasant to break away from the lot into which he was born. In the south you have got snobbishness in many parts of it like a steaming haze oppressing the people, paralyzing activity, progress, and energy. In many of our schools it is taught as part of our education. You are taught-I was taught—that my business was to be humble, to lower my head humbly to all my betters, and it was explaine carefully to me that my betters were the parish squire and the parson. This is the story of how to doubletrack a baby with a two-a-day vaudeville eengagement. It can be done for a very charming and intelligent woman is doing it. To Broadway she will always be known as Blanche Bates, but as the baby's mother and the wife of the baby's father, her name is Mrs. George Creel. Little Miss rrances Virginia Creels only three monns old let six days in the week, afternon and evening, her mother takes a leading part in the grim sarrie playlet, "half-an-Hour," Is Frances Virginia a neglected cond? She is not bally she waxes in bulk and bloom and Daily she waxes in bulk and bloom, and f Blanche Bates Creel isn t a ravenously Only, she does not believe that the duty of a mother is to be a turn-She does not rel that she must keep a literal eye on her daughter every hour of the twenty-four. She does not consider that it devolves upon her to preside personally over the few simple and methodical physical processes which satisfy Frances Virginia's needs at the present time. She knows that Frances Virginia is fed and bathed and clothed properly, and she thinks that is the really important feature of the case. And isn't t?-whatever our individual views about maternal duty.

"T believe in the special zation of industry," Miss Bates informed me, with that smile of hers which is a fifty-fifty combination of brilliance and shrewdness." "Home industries have as much right to be specialized as any others. Why should a married woman be expected to give up the art or profession which has been her specialty, her lifework, and become, literally, a 'general' servant—cook, housemaid nurse? When each of these positions is filled by a woman, specially trained for the special duties, the standard of home efficiency is bound to be roised. And the mistress of the home can indulge in both art and babies.

"I don't wake up when the baby does, for her first waking is at 6 o'clock. Does any woman stir at 6, unless she must? My daughter usually shows her good sense by going to sleep again.

"But at 10 in the morning, when my eyes are really open, she is brought into my bed for an hour's cuddle, or until she falls asleep once more. She wears her sleeping robe, a long, soft flannel blanket gathered at the throat and below the feet. Belonging to my family, she has already shown great talent in gesticulation, and of course her arms and hands must be kept warm. After she has fallen asleep in my bed I wrap her up in heavier blanred cheeks. Sometimes she wakes up in the afternoon for another cuddle, but more often she just rouses enough to absorb I understand that by about the go in for my good-night look, after I return from the theatre."

Poorhouse as Prison. A novel proposal was laid before the secretary for Scotland in Edinburgh this week when representatives of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and Dundee laid before him their plans for dealing with habitual criminals and young near other institutions, and young persons to Borstal institutions. There is no doubt a wide feeling that imprisonment in no way fits man or woman to improve themselves but rather is a permanent brand of criminality. The secretary for Scotland was not very sure as to whether it was a good plan to segregate habitual criminals with industrious honest paupers and doubted whether the House of Commons would listen to such a proposal. But the Czar's Government still possesses a power similar to that of the Bourbons in old times, exercised by "letters de cachet," and its "executive decree" is sufficient to consign a political offender, and even a suspect, to prison without trial and without appeal.

Such has been the experience of Marie Sucloff, who has been discovered in New York, and who says she is tracked by Russian spies. Every nook and corner of Russia was probed to capture, dead or alive, the frail, apparently helpless girl, who dared to pit her woman's strength and wit against the political system of her native land. EDITOR'S NOTE .- It would be hard to match in fiction this thrilling true story of a night spent in the India jungle. Captain Quinton tells what happened when he and his fellow hunters climbed the trees by the bank of the Mutla River, 25 miles southeast of Calcutta, and waited there in the darkness while the jungle beasts came to the water to drink. I was watching the ground near our tree when I noticed the faint outline of some large animal moving toward the stream as noiselessly as a shadow. I touched my companion, and a moment later we saw a tiger steal across a streak of moonlight which streamed between the trees. I took hurried aim and pulled the trigger.

The tiger emitted a furious, angry cry and sprang directly up the trunk of the tree where we were perched, and almost touched my leg. My partner immediately fired straight down

But in doing so his rifle fell to the ground, and the man sprang farther out on the branch, drew his revolver and began firing backwards, just as his companion, on a branch higher up, fired and mortally wounded the beast.

A little later my companion reached out his hand to pick up his rifle, which he had laid across a couple of branches. He screamed as his hand came down on something cold and clammy, and a loud hiss warned us of a serpent.

I handed my rifle to my partner and struck some matches. The light revealed the body of a large snake slowly ascending the trunk of the venture. Seeing what they supposed on the branch on which my partner

In the long measure of progress which has been accomplished is largely attributable to that Burns had done more for democracy by one of his songs-"A Man's the wicked cease from troubling, and a Man for a' That"-than all the writers of leading articles in the newspapers. It is equally true that his poetry of the land has done more to promote the social status of the smallholders and farm-workers than all the acts of parliament so far placed on the statute book for a like purpose.

William Burness. William Burness-subsequently contracted to "Burns"—the poet's father, was a typical small farmer of the second half of the eighteenth century. By trade he was originally a gardener. On purpose to keep his children at home, he ventured upon a small farm of Mount Oliphant, which belonged to the "generous master" whom he had served for many years in the humbler capacity of gardener. After some years of severe struggle to make ends meet and pay rent, the "generous "The farm," says master" died. Burns, "proved a ruinous bargain; and to clench the curse, we fell into the hands of a factor, who sat for the picture I have drawn of one in my tale of 'The Twa Dogs.'"

"Twa Dogs." In that masterpiece of dialogue in vernacular rhyme, Burns makes 'Caesar,' the rich man's dog, describe the factor or estate agent, thus:

I've notic'd on our laird's court-day. An' mony a time my heart's been wae Poor tenant bodies, scant o' cash, How they maun thole a factor's

He'll stamp and threaten, curse an swear. He'll apprehend them, pound their gear:

While they maun stan', wi' aspect humble An' hear it a', and fear an' tremble.

"Luorth," the poor man's dog, magnifies in detail the pleasures, allowed to the workers on the land in the scheme of universal compensation, of pression: which the genius of Burns had a philosopher's insight; and yet agrees in denouncing the rack-renting factor:

There's mony a credible stock O' decent, honest, fawsont folk, Are riven out baith root and branch, Some rascal's pridefu' greed to quench.

His Father's Struggles.
"My father struggled on," wrote

Burns to Dr. Moore, "till he reached a freedom in his lease, when he entered on a larger farm about ten miles farther in the country." This was the farm of Lochlea, in the parish of Tarbolton. Burns was the eldest of seven children, and his father, who married late in life, was then prema-

The dauntless heart that fear'd no human pride; The friend of man, to vice alone a foe; For ev'n his failings lean'd to virtue's side.

A Dirge. Soon after Burns had witnessed his father's sore tribulation, he composed the most melancholy of all his poems, a dirge, entitled, "Man was Made to Mourn." It was November, the month of the year that found the ploughman in his garret through the long evenings, and with time on his hand for Heartbreaking must have been the strugefforts and experiments in verse. The old man of the poem is, obviously, a reminiscence of his father, who had seen the sun overhanging the moors:

Where hundreds labour to support A haughty lordling's pride.

The years had but brought to the old man "added proofs that man was made to mourn." Fate had a few favorites, who were caressed in pleasure's lap; but even the affectionate poor man, the lover of his fellow mortals, unselfish, generous to a fault, discovered, while the smiles of love adorned his "heaven-erected face," that:

Man's inhumanity to man Makes countless thousands mourn.

Looking around him upon the servile state into which he and his class of farm-workers had been born, Burns poured his great heart of sympathy and passion into this glowing protest against industrial tyranny and yonder poor, o'erlabour'd wight, So abject, mean and vile, Who begs a brother of the earth To give him leave to toil; And see his lordly fellow-worm The poor petition spurn, Unmindful, tho' a weeping wife

And helpless offspring mourn. As for his distressed father, so for all the down-trodden poor, death was "the dearest friend," their recompense and comfort, and "a blest relief." "Rapacious Hell-Hounds." The grave had given relief and rest to the oppressed and rack-rented small farmer. His sons were obliged to make shift for a maintenance in the interest of the family. "When my father died," says Burns, "his all went among the rapacious hell-hounds that growl in the kennel of justice; but we made a shift to scrape a little money in the family amongst us, with which -to keep us together-my brother and took a neighbouring farm." Mossgiel was the farm, a limited holding near of Mauchline. The farmthe villhouse has been rebuilt since Burns' day. It was an inadequately small dwelling-house for a family small dwelling-house for a raminy when the poet and his brothers and sisters migrated to it with the widowed mother, hardly any, larger or more commodious than the birth cottage which survives as reserved for the public at Alloway. At Mossgiel the genius of Burns arrived at fruition between his twenty-seanson of winter thus;

There, lonely, by the ingle-cheek, sat and ey'd the spewing reek That filled wi' hoast-provoking smeek, The auld clay biggin'; heard the restless rattons squeek About the riggin'.

Imagine this scene! A little low cottage with roof of thatch and walls of clay, where the rats played at high jinks in the roof, with the chimney and fireplace so imperfectly constructed that the smoke returned upon the apartmentwas the home in which was born "The Vision," "The Cottar's Saturday Night," "The Holy Fair," and man of Burns' most thrilling satires, includ-ing the masterpiece of "Holy Will The two brothers elected to ct rather as hired plowman than as partners in the farm, and fixed their wages at the then market rate of $7, to be paid at each half-yearly term. Fo clothes, boots, drams, expenses incurred at market and kirk, books, holidays, priv ate benevolence, Burns, in common the typical plowman of his time, only five shillings and fourpence halfpenny per week! The farm was an economic failure. How could it be otherwise in the circumstances? The land was almost starved for want of regular investments of manure. The two struggling brothers had no money to invest in live gle to produce the landlord's rent against the day appointed for the "rent-court."

Joyless Winter Days.
Young Burns, when martyred on th Mossgiel, was mirthful and melancholy by turns. He was inimitably rollicking and mirth-provoking in "The Jolly Beggars." in "The Holy Fair," in "Hallowe'en," in the song "Green Grow the Rushes," and in the "Epistle to John Rankine." But his melancholy was great er than his mirth, as the sullen roar of the cataract counts for more than the low bickering of the shallows The "joyless winter day" was more dear to his crushed mind than "all the pride of May." He wept in melodious verse over the erstwhile unsung heroism of the farm-worker, whose solace was the approach of the day of weekly rest:

A Great Legacy.
His condition on the small farm of despondency. After his temporary triumphs in Edinburgh, where glory, as Lowell sang to him, could not wean the poet from humble smalles and tears, he returned to the land on the small and un-profitable farm of Ellisland, on the banks of the River Nith. Economic conditions overcame his temperament there, and he retreated in the capacity of an exciseman to the town of Dumfries, where in a few years he died in poverty and distress, ing an inexhaustible and ever-ripening legacy of good cheer for workers or the land in those reflective poems, those satires, those lyrics of love and labor, which have he'ped, with the silent force as of sunshine thawing a glacier through the ages, to abolish rack-renting and general serfdom on the land in two The universal insistence upon urther reforms, in this industrial sphere, proclaims anew in our time the far-flung nfluence of Burns, whose undying protest against "man's inhumanity to man" con-tinuously unfolds for us the deep truth expressed in the epigram of Fletcher of Saltoun—"Let me make the songs of a a people, and who wills may make their obviously big job of running the little Kingdom of Albania. When Prince Wilhelm of Wied was at the court of his aunt, Carmen Sylva, in Bucharest, dressed in the white of the Potsdam Garde du Corps, admirers called him Lohengrin. A fine martial figure, over six feet in his stockings, whose favorite trick as a young soldier was to hoist a fair-sized comrade high in the air with one hand, the new ruler is said to be a Lohengrin in more than externals. A personal sketch of both the King and the Queen was recently written for the London Daily Mail by Frederick William Wile, its Berlin correspondent. He says of them:

His burning desire to face the ominous uncertainties of the new kingdom shows him to be endowed with the indomitable courage of Wagner's silvered knight. He is ready to beard a world of dangers unseen. And his wife is a woman of h's own fiber. A princess born on the wild prairies of Moldavia is the last person in the world to listen to the Kaiser's admonitions to beware of the pitfalls of Albania. Prince and Princess William of Wied may fail in statecraft at Durazzo. But they will never be found lacking in pluck. They are going into the "Albanian adventure," as their friends and kinsmen call it, with their eyes wide open and their hearts steeled. The warlike tribesmen who are to be their subjects are said to idolie bravery. If that is so, Prince William and his spirited consort have an ideal claim to loyalty and affection.

In a material age it is hard for a prince who volunteers for a throne to convince his fellowmen of the sincerity of his motives when he pleads sense of duty as his guiding purpose. That is what Prince William adduces in proof of his desire to rule Albania. He goes so far as to consider himself "the agent of civilization." Nobody who knows the rugged candor of his character, or his predilection for silence inherited from a great ancestor, William of Orange, doubts the genuineness of his protestations. Comrades and relatives have been trying for weeks to dissuade Prince and Princess William from their "mad" project. Into their ears have been dinned the attractions of irresponsible dolce far niente in placid Potsdam, the German Windsor. The prince has been adjured to take heed of his very prom-Mossgiel grew worse and worse. The partnership was dissolved. Hungry ruin thad the poet in the wind. ultramodern Lohengrin and Elsa return a resolute "No." Durazzo to them spells Duty. They are going. The prince and princess are, of course German, but their association and en vironment have been largely Roumanian. Their training for the throne was given them by King Charles and Queen Carmen Sylva, who in recent years have been something of father and mother to As for his consort, a born princess of Schonburg-Waldenburg, she spent her entire youth and character-forming perfod in the valleys of Roumania on the estates of her maternal ancestors, the Cantacuzenes, the renowned family which once ruled the Byzantine empire. Ask his friends what Prince William's outstanding traits are and they will tell you at once a passion for soldiering and an omnivorous love of books. A brilliant undergraduate at Jena, where he studied philosophy at the feet of Haeckel, he stood out from among his comrades because he preferred reading to drinking and the Mensur (duel). His giant physique inclined him naturally to gymnastics and athletics, and when not absorbed in books he was occupied in something capable of developing muscle. The prince became famous as the strongest man in the university, and his achievements are still a tradition at Jena. The ame determination to get ahead which had characterized him as a student marked his military career, on which he entered as a lieutenant in the elite reg!ment of the German army, the Life Guards of Potsdam, that superb blackhorsed troop of silver-breasted and eagle-helmeted giants in whose uniform the Kaiser most looks the part of supreme war lord. It was not 'ong before Lieutenant Prince William received the coveted call to the War Academy at Berin, the distinction which only talented subalterns achieve, for it is the training ground for the general staff, the blue libbon of the army. Prince William's industry, talent, and zea' made him a certainty for staff honors. When people would suggest that a Prince of Wied was sure of advancement because of exalted connections, which are of potency even in the German army, his comrades at the academy replied that Prince William would attain the staff even if he were named Muller, Schulze, or Meyer. After another year with his regiment he received his merited staff captaincy. In that post, too, he shone, even among a wealth of talent, and he leaves the department where Moltke implanted the art of "organizing victory" with the rank of major. Undoubtedly greater honors still were in store for him if he had prefered soldiering to ruling "The Wieds," as Prince and Princess William are known to their friends, have the energy and enthusiasm of youth. The prince will be thirty-eight in June, his wife twenty-nine in Many. They have two children, a girl of five and a baby "crown prince." Prince William is more "royal" than any non-reigning German prince. He is connected by direct blood ties with the ruling houses of Germany, Russia, the Netherlands, and all three Scandinavian kingdoms. The prince is quiet and distinctly thoughtful of mien. In conversation he reveals power of intellect and will. His words are few and always to the point. He is obviously a man of action. His stature, suggesting leonine strength, and a face denoting determination and cool-headedness are sure to impress. The Princess Sophia is as little as possible like the haughty royal lady of imagination. At once you know her to be a woman of restless aspiration, not easily dissuaded from a esolve firmly taken. The democratic intrammeled atmosphere of her girlhood xplains her vivacity and unaffected bearing. She had the unconventional education of a shaple peasant child in the Moldavian hills, under the supervision

Since returning from Germany, I | Norway, United States, Canada and have often been asked the question even Australia, mostly students who why do students go to Europe and particularly to Germany to study music, and what are the advantages of studying there. I arrived in Leipsic on the 20th of September, 1911, a stranger in a strange land, surrounded by a people with whom I had no means of conversation, having absolutely no knowledge of the language. Therefore I say to anyone contemplating studying in Germany, spend a short time before you go in learning something of the language, that you may not have a feeling of helpless-ness when you get there. Fortunately, my sense of strangeness was of short duration. As I could not speak the language of the country, I set out to find someone that could speak mine, which was not very difficult. Leipsic is a city of students, hundreds and hundreds of students from all parts of the world are coming and going continually. The third day after my arrival in Leipsic, I had met all the people one could wish to meet, some from England, Scotland, Russia,

One thing in studying Bach that often makes me wonder is, why do so many students dread it? In a great many cases the fault lies with the teacher, who does not take the trouble to point out the beauty of the music, the marvelous ingenuity of its form, and the benefit of studying it. My teacher once said to me that were he isolated from the world with no worldly effects but his piano, he would take for his comsame cellist is now touring the United panions the compositions of Bach and States, and is looked upon as a big Beethoven.

An advanced student in Germany studying a composition for the first time, will sit down away from the piano and study it, analyze it, dissect it, pull it to pieces, picking out the hard parts, and the easy parts, before he ever plays a note of it. And what does this indicate? It simply illustrates that the entire course of study hinges on that one thing, "thoroughness," being drilled into the student, in countless different ways, till it becomes a part of his nature. So far I have dwelt on the actual study of music only. I have said nothing of the environment and the glorious life of the student, the neverending supply of music in every form, the advantage of hearing great artists, the constant associations and exchanging of ideas and criticisms with other students, which form such a necessary part of the training. There you have, an incentive to work, your interest never croops, you are living in music, breathing it, and wallowing in it, working at it by day and dreaming of it by night. Is it any wonder people are musical in Germany?

What It Costs. Here is the comparison I wish to make: Where else can you get this training? One may ask, have we no good teachers in America? We have a few good teachers, but they are in the minority, and even so, where did they get their training? Seventy-five family of four. I shall always feel per cent of them have, at some time, studied in Europe. Supposing the technic you do not play. The method student is fortunate in having a good teacher, will he get the same environment, will he live in the same musical atmosphere? No, because in America the conditions do not exist. It is not the nature of the people. Nowhere outside of Germany will you find a nation so imbued with the spirit of music, so saturated with it that the names of Bach, Beethoven, Wagner, Mendelssohn, Chopin, and a score of other great masters are bywords in every household, and the lowest rag-a-muffin on the street familiar with the leading operas.

I set but not least, what is the cost Nowhere outside of Germany will you score of other great masters are by-words in every household, and the lowest rag-a-muffin on the street familiar with the leading operas.

Haunts of Mushroom Growers.

Next to the inspectors and their workmen of the curious old Subterranean Guild, those who know most about the catacombs of Paris, are the mushroom growers. Ask for grilled mushrooms in mushroom-loving Paris, dering, unseen, awful wagon dashing down there through the black and hollow ways, that chills the hearts of mushroom growers with blind dread!

Far off there was some thing coming up the black ways, not like a train, but a noise of jarring, bumping shocks like wood on stone; and mingling with it, echoing in the darkness, hollow clacking of rude footsteps! Gideon's blood chilled with an unknown horror. He ran for the stairway-just in time, because the rumbling grew to be a roar, the roar deafening uproar, and there thundered past him a black shape amid a veritable pandemonium of nameless noises. The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucous dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

It was rather late in the long winter afternoon, when the old man limped slowly down the street. The sidewalks were icy, and his cramped limbs shook under him. He passed the window with scarcely a glance, and then the violets from their corner saw him turn and retrace his steps. He peered in at the flowers, noted the tall, dignified roses, the brilliant carnations and the myriads of bloom, but when his eyes rested on the shrinking violets they lingered. Perhaps they suggested something, but who can tell? Maybe t was some dim memory that caused him to enter the store. The busy clerk came forward. Well, it is a good bill, it has been accepted as it stands by Ireland, by the House of Commons and by Great Britain; we desire it to pass exactly as it stands. (Hear, hear.) I have seen no change suggested by our opponents or our critics which is not in itself a bad change. If any change be made it must be not to enable it to pass, that is un, necessary, but to buy the goodwill our opponents in the north of Ireland, and I must say to you frankly that at present I see no prospect whatever that goodwill being purchased by any concession or at any price whatever. (A "We are as well without them.") No, we are not as well without them. :It is a fallacy and almost a blasphemy to say that, for Ireland can afford to lose no single son. (Cheers.) goodwill is worth purchasing, and at a oig pree. I have always sad so. Long before the home rule bill was introduced, seven years ago, I used words: "Over these men I want no party triumph. I want to influence their intelligence. I want to dissipate their suspicions, and I want to soften their hearts. And, therefore, so long as it is possible for me to do so, even against

SUCCESSFUL MASQUERADE.

Some three hundred guests were present at the masquerade held in the Normal School on Wednesday night under the auspices of the Literary Society, and the masquerade proved a success from every standpoint. The entrance hall and classrooms were prettily decorated with the school colors, red and yellow festoons being suspended from the chandeliers, where the lights were shaded with the same festive colors. At 11 o'clock refreshments were served in the gymnasium in buffet style.

Among the many pretty and unique costumes were noted the following: Cour- Green. tier, W. M. Galloway; footman, Russell Woods; Japanese girl, Miss Maude Thompson; Uncle Sam, John Battin, jester, Vance Stratton; woodsprite, Miss Dunstan; night, Miss Daniels; Mephistopheles, Mr. McGee; clown, Mr. Parsons; apanese girl, Miss Smith; night, Miss Marion Thompson; Chinese costume, Peter McCallum; Uncle Sam, Emerson Shrier; Jester, Percy McCallum; Turkish lady, Miss Mary Gillon; Nurse Cecilia, Miss Pillsworth; page, Mr. Reg. Young; clown, Mr. Aiken; charlatan, Mr. Robert

The success of the affair is owing largely to the efforts of the executive committee, who had the arrangements in hand. Following are the officers: President. Mr. Robert Riddell; vice-president. Mr. R. S. Young; secretary, Miss Hicks; treasurer, Miss E. Cameron; executive, Miss Schmidt Mr Russell Woods, Mr Peter McCallum, Miss Edgar, and Miss Graves. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Topping sisters.

Policy of New Zealand" appears in country, a circumstance which indi-the Colonial Journal, based on H. "New Zealand has led the way in mentioned money advanced for build-democracy, and its numerous economing houses, old age pensions, indusical innovations have been carefully watched and largely imitated. Today the community is represented by its admirers as the first one that has ventured to deny the conclusions and disregard the teachings of commercialism Its main object is to secure that every member of the society shall obtain a fair and full share of the profits arising from his exertions. "The well-being of a nation, Mr Lusk writes, demands wages sufficient to support a man with a family in reasonable comfort, and to leave a Kennedy, of Winnipeg, son of David margin beyond this sufficient to en-Kennedy, of Wick Scotland. The able him by self-denial and economy marriage Is to take place March 12. to improve his position, and provide for the future. If in any trade essentials cannot be provided, the supreme law of well-being demands that it shall cease to be carried on in the country.

A Challenge to the Social System. "It is obvious that this standard of individual welfare raises a challenge to the usual social system. It conflicts with the commercial spirit, the methods of individualism, and laissez faire policy generally. In the present work it is claimed that it has been no visionary ideal; not only is the program one reflecting a high moral standard, but 'it has resulted in an increase of individual well-being for the that is wholly unprecedented in the

How It Came About.

"It was not, however, the study of the higher morality or for the matter of that any abstract ideas that led the well-known economic measures of New Zealand. That would be too much to expect from any Anglo-Saxon community. The original cause of the process was simply debt. "The necessity for offering induce There was only one way of doing this, and that was to open up land more freely. A large part the available land was owned large estates, and held up for speculareally worth? There has never been such a case since the days of Ananias and companies, which were prepared to wait leisurely for results. pedients were adopted to force such land into the market. "The first was a sliding scale of taxation, under which holdings over five hundred acres paid a land tax which increased gradually until it reached a total of five per cent on the market value of land in estates of more than fifty thousand acres.

"Secondly, there was a surtax where the owners had their headquarters outside the colony. "These taxes benefited the revenue, but as it turned out they did not have the anticipated effect of bringing the estates into the market. The owners held out in the belief that the value of land would go up. The next step taken to break up the large estates was to introduce a system of compulsory purchase. What the Government Did.

"In New Zealand the best part of he country was largely taken up with oig properties occupied only by a manager and a few shepherds. The Govrnment in 1892 took steps to purchase large estates for subdivision into farms. There are under the act as amended two modes of acquisition. An owner may make an offer to sell, and if the property is considered suitable a board proceeds to consider the price which should be given. Or land can be taken compulsorily, the sum payable being that given in the valuation roll on which the owner has been paying rates, plus 10 per cent of the total value up to £50,000, and 5 per cent on all amounts above. The improve ments are also paid for and are separately assessed, and another 2 per cent is added on the purchase price as compensation for the compulsory takng. In allotting such lands preference is given to married people, and all applicants have to satisfy the land board that they have means to stock and cultivate and erect buildings on the land applied for. The tenure granted is that of perpetual lease, at a rent of 41/2 per cent on the cost to the government, subject to a revaluation at the end of each 33 years. Some Important Results. "The result has been to place or the land as farmers a large number of men who would not have ventured into remote and unbroken country, but who were willing and had the means to develop lands near their old homes. The difficulty of obtaining adequate labor, which no doubt increases the multiplication of the small holdings, has induced many owners to come forward with offers to sell. By the end of March, 1912, the Government had acquired under these powers 1,296,942 acres, and after payment of all expenses, including niterest, there was a credit balance of £66,040. "The number of 'selectors' provided for was 5.060, or with their families nearly 17.000. The improvements made by these tenants by the end of 1910 were valued at over £2.000,000, an important asset in the wealth of the important asset in the wealth of the country. ### Back to the Land.

"The result of these and other measures has certainly been to bring about that modern desideratum—the engagement of a larger proportion of the population in country pursuits. In twenty years after 1890 the number of farms was doubled, and the agricultural population increased by one-half. In this period the population of the country theresed by one third seemed to the population of the country theresed by one third seemed to the population of the country theresed by one third seemed to the population of the country theresed by one third seemed to the population of the country theresed by one third seemed to the population of the population in the population of the population in the popul country increased by one-third, so that there was a clear gain to agriculture notwithstanding the influences which are steadily in most places throwing men into the towns. "In the face of all the prophecies of evil the price of land in New Zealand steadily goes up. The causes of this rise have nothing to do with politics; they are largely mechanical, viz., the freezing-chamber and the milking machine, but they have fitted most conveniently into the scheme of closer settlement. Formerly sheep were only wanted for their wool and tallow, and this industry could only be carried on profitably with large flocks on large areas: the sheep were left to get what they could out of the grass and little agriculture was practiced. freezer has altered all that. farmers keep breeding ewes and impeople and of wealth for the nation prove the feed with roots. Similarly the dairy industry has gone up by leaps and bounds now that the small holder can embark upon it, and the high cultivation which he can give Industrial Protection. "Women were granted the franchise in 1893, and their influence can no doubt be traced in numerous provisions which have for their object the protection of working women, girls and boys. One result is that not a girl under 18 nor a boy under 16 is anywhere at work, and there is a sentiment in favor of raising these limits. No boys are allowed on the streets selling papers or acting as messengers after 6 p.m. An eight-and-a-quarterhour day and forty-five-hour-week, with restricted overtime, is laid down for women and boys-this being less than that fixed in the case of men. ** that might be defended on grounds of benevolence, or even of an overstrained and somewhat sentimental desire to give opportunity to the class that had hitherto had the least opportunity of advancement twenty years ago. The result that was not anticipated, either by the supporters or opponents of the policy in New Zealand or elsewhere, was the one that is the most apparent of all-the policy has paid, to an extent that can be claimed for no other national policy ever adopted by any country. "The last twenty years has been a period of great events in the commercial world. Business has increased as it never did before in many of the countries of the civilized world: nowhere has it increased in anything like the proportion that it has increased as in New Zealand. Wealth has poured into several countries as it never did before, so that America, England, and Germany, as the great commercial countries of the time, congratulate themselves on an unprecedented increase in the amount of their wealth; none of them have increased in riches -in the amount of goods exported, or the amount of riches gained-in proportion to the numbers of their people. one-half as rapidly as New Zealand and its people during the period. "These are the facts; it can hardly be questioned that they demand consideration from the nations whose policy has been that of the market place, and whose success has been so greatly exceeded by a country that has abandoned the policy of the market for that of human brotherhood."
