

HOLY WAR ON IN MOROCCO; CHRISTIANS BEING MASSACRED

Musulman Fanatics Attack the European Population of Casablanca, Near Tangier.

FRENCH WARSHIPS ARE RUSHING TO THE SCENE

Tangier, Aug. 1.—Dr. Merle, who arrived here last night on the German ship, which brought a number of Jews and other refugees from Casablanca, was the bearer of a report to the French charge d'affaires here, showing that the slaughter of Europeans in Casablanca was an outcome of a holy war preached by the Arabs for the extermination of Europeans.

On Monday a number of Arab chiefs entered Casablanca and demanded that the harbor improvement works cease. The Pasha of Casablanca pointed out that this work was being done with the sanction of the Sultan, whereupon the chiefs replied that the Sultan was no longer their ruler, as he obeyed the Christians. They then began to incite the natives to exterminate all Jews and Europeans in the town.

On Tuesday morning the natives began their attack by stoning a European, and when this man tried to flee he was surrounded and hacked to death. This was the signal for a general attack, and soon as the danger became known the French and Spanish residents rushed to their respective consulates for protection. During this flight at least eight were murdered.

M. de Euville, the French consul, demanded that the pasha provide an escort for the recovery of the bodies. The pasha pleaded at first that he had no cartridges, but upon further representations he finally supplied an escort. When this rescue party, however, reached the scene of the attacks it was charged by a number of Arab cavaliers, and forced into flight.

In the meantime while the Jews and Christians were taking refuge on board the German ship, the Musulmans began to attack the laborers employed upon the harbor works. They fired on the shore boats, and killed several men, whose bodies subsequently were burned. One woman who tried to swim off to a ship was shot in the water.

There was one German, and one French steamer in the harbor at Casablanca when the German steamer pulled out.

It is feared that Casablanca will be invaded by twenty thousand Arabs today.

The French cruiser Galilee, which left here last night for Casablanca should arrive there today.

Pasha Will Lose His Head.

Paris, Aug. 1.—The Pasha of Casablanca will answer with his head to the French Government for the general security of the city. This is the ultimatum which the French cruiser Galilee, due to reach Casablanca today, is conveying. The French cruiser Forbin, now at the Azores, also has been expected to proceed to Casablanca immediately. Action by the French Government will not for the moment go any further than this. The Galilee has been ordered to take on board all Europeans desiring refuge.

The French newspapers generally demand that the Government will give a lesson to the Sultan. They declare (Continued on Page Nine.)

Ottaway Ave. Sewer Costs $4 a Foot

It is understood that it has cost Contractor Dill somewhere in the neighborhood of $4 a foot to construct the Ottaway avenue main sewer as far as he has gone.

Mr. Dill began at the corner of Maitland street on May 1. He is now at William street, a distance of about 700 feet, in three months.

His expenses have already probably been $2,500, so that, as stated, he has paid nearly $4 for every foot of tile laid.

Quicksands and shoals of water have been at the bottom of his troubles, and contrary to expectations, the quicksand has been encountered almost every foot of the block between Maitland and William streets, East of William It is hoped to strike better ground.

North End Sewer.

Chairman Matthews, of the board of works, stated today that the Bruce street sewer is practically completed. Mr. Chris. Leathorne had the contract for this work.

Blight & Fielder still refuse to go on with the north end sewer, which they tendered for, and the contract for which was awarded to them.

They claim that they are too busy to do the work now, but Mr. Fielder has informed the city that if there is no hurry his firm will be pleased to carry out its contract in the fall, when men will be more plentiful.

Mr. Fielder says he would expect the same price as he put in his tender when the job was given him.

Around the City in Autos; London Pleased Journalists

What They Think of the Country—Are Grateful for Cordial Welcome.

The visiting British journalists were the guests of the city this morning for an exhilarating auto drive about the city.

The party were in five cars, and were piloted by City Engineer Graydon and Mr. Fred Mitchell. They were accompanied by Mayor Judd, several of the aldermen, Senator Coffey, and a number of local newspapermen.

The start was made from the Teacumseh House, and from thence over to South London, visiting Victoria Hospital and other places on the way back. The asylum was also visited, and then a jaunt north to London's fine residential district was also made. The trip was made in record time, and the visitors expressed themselves as highly delighted with the beauty and comfort of London homes. The city, they thought, was one of the prettiest they had ever seen, and was one of which the citizens might well be proud. The journey was made in an hour and a half.

At the completion of the trip, Ald.

Gilleen called out the fire brigade for an exhibition run. The firemen made a record performance, and the comments were favorable and enthusiastic. Chief Clark's driver was especially commended.

May Live in Canada.

"I am seriously contemplating coming to this country to reside," said Mr. H. J. Elliott, who is the London Times' Washington correspondent. "I have been in Washington now for some time, but I have a special fondness for the Canadians. They are British through and through and I like them immensely. This country is undoubtedly the land of opportunity. I have been greatly impressed by its resources and its people, and I shall come here, I think. I am just considering where it would be best to locate. This visit will be a great thing for us, and it will eventually be a good thing for the country."

An Old Parliamentary Hand.

One of the most interesting characters in the party was Mr. W. Longstaff, who has been correspondent for the Newcastle Chronicle in the British Parliament for a quarter of a century. During that time he has marked

No Emancipation Day Celebration

This is emancipation day. All over the British dominions the colored race will disport itself today, for it was on the first of August, 1833, that Britain gave to the slaves in her dominions their freedom.

There is no celebration in London, but many colored residents of the Forest City left today for Windsor, where they intend having a grand time.

There was a time when emancipation day was royally celebrated in London, but for some reason or other it did not always prove a financial success.

On one occasion there were several thousand colored people here from all over the western district, and a big time was put on in Queen's Park. Now, however, the celebrations are usually held in Chatham or Windsor, where the colored population is larger than here.

London Man Honored.

Prior to its celebration of emancipation day today the grand lodge of the Forest City of Ontario held its annual meeting at the colored Oddfellows' Hall in Windsor.

The officers chosen for the year are: District grand master, J. C. Parker, Windsor; district deputy, Moses Robinson, Chatham; secretary, G. E. O. F. for Ontario held its annual meeting at the colored Oddfellows' Hall in Windsor.

280,000 Immigrants for Canada; This Year's Estimate of Department

Mr. W. J. White, Immigration Inspector in the U. S., Gives Interesting Figures.

Mr. W. J. White, the Inspector of the United States agencies of the Canadian immigration department, is accompanying the party of British Journalists who were here today.

Mr. White is enthusiastic over the immigration outlook. "During the last calendar year," he said to The Advertiser, "250,000 homeseekers entered Canada. For the year ending Dec. 31, next, we estimate the arrivals at 280,000, of whom between 200,000 and 200,000 will come from Great Britain. Ontario Not Overlooked.

"The department is not overlooking Ontario. We have 200 agents scattered throughout the Province, who are in touch with the farmers. These agents ascertain where farm laborers may be placed immediately upon arrival. By this system there is a chain between the man in the old country seeking to emigrate, and the Ontario farmer who wants his services. All immigrants who come out directly under the auspices of the immigration department, with a promise of employment, are provided with it."

Egerton St. Child Drank Boiling Lard From Tin

Was Terribly Burned, But Her Physician Hopes She Will Recover.

The 14-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jolly, of Egerton street, is lying in a precarious condition as the result of a terrible mishap which befell her Tuesday.

The little girl was playing around the room, while her mother was baking, and the latter did not pay much attention to her.

Mrs. Jolly had placed a couple of pounds of lard in a tin vessel on top of the stove to melt, intending to use it in her baking.

When it began to boil she took it off the stove and put it on a table in the pantry, to allow it to cool a little.

The baby girl saw the tin, and, child-like, wanted to taste the contents.

Drank Boiling Lard.

She picked it up, and before the mother knew what was going on, she turned the vessel on her head in attempting to taste the boiling lard.

Her shrieks brought her mother to her assistance, and she found the child terribly burned.

A physician was at once summoned, but for a time the life of the child was despaired of.

The little girl's mouth, throat, nose, chin, breast and arms were terribly burned. She is a strong child, however, and her physician holds out hope that she will recover, though she is still in a dangerous condition.

About a year ago, Mrs. Jolly, the mother, narrowly escaped being burned to death through the explosion of a gasoline stove. At the time she was terribly injured, but she recovered completely.

July Cooler Than Same Month of 1906

The following table shows the minimum and maximum temperatures of each day during the month of July, 1907, and also of the corresponding month of the year 1906.

The figures show that July of this year was very warm at times, but on the whole the minimum temperatures were much lower than in 1906. The rainfall recorded for July, 1907, was 3.46 inches, which was much heavier than the same month the year previous, the registration then being 2.88 inches.

The highest temperature during the month was 87 degrees, on the 17th of July, while the lowest was 35.5, on the 3rd of July.

MAYOR WILL CUT OUT THE JAUNTS

May Put Himself in Hole If He Names Deputations for Long Trips.

"I don't think I will appoint the committees to take the trips to Port Arthur or Toronto," said Mayor Judd this morning. "I do not see why the onus of the whole business should be placed on me. If they want deputations to go to these places they will have to rescind the motion passed at the last meeting of the council, as I will not appoint them. Let them agree among themselves about that matter. I should not be the one to settle such differences."

There has been much speculation as to the personnel of these deputations, and considerable difficulty has been experienced in getting the members of the council to agree among themselves as to who should go. Many aldermen want the Port Arthur trip, and it is said that a merry fight will be put up for places.

BIG STRIKE LOOMS IN COAL DISTRICT

Fourteen Thousand Men May Walk Out Within a Few Hours.

Pittsburg, July 31.—The executive board of district No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, which embraces the Pittsburg district, tonight authorized President Patrick Feehan to call a strike immediately of the miners in this district, alleging that the Pittsburg Coal Company has been violating the wage agreement repeatedly.

President Feehan has announced he will give the Pittsburg Coal Company a few hours in which to adjust matters.

Over 14,000 miners will be affected in the event of a strike.

LIBERALS CAPTURE UNIONIST STRONGHOLD

Visitors in a Staffordshire Division by Big Majority.

London, Aug. 1.—The by-election of a member of Parliament for the north-west division of Staffordshire, has resulted in the return of Albert Stanley, Liberal candidate, with the substantial majority of 2,349 over the Unionist candidate. The seat was made vacant by the death of Sir Alfred Bullson.

The result indicates that the Unionists have little prospects of success at the polls except in constituencies where special conditions have caused a split in the Liberal Labor elements.

Toronto, July 31-3 p.m.—The weather has been cool and showery today in Eastern Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Elsewhere in Canada it has been warm, with some local thunderstorms in the lake region, Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan.

HELP SUFFERERS: ATTEND CONCERT

Citizens' Band Will Play in Victoria Park Tonight in Aid of Crystal Hall Fund.

Tonight the Citizens' Band will play in Victoria Park in aid of those who are in financial straits as the result of the falling in of Reid's Crystal Hall.

Those who took up the collection at the gates last Friday night are requested to perform the same duty again tonight.

Bandmaster Dawson, of the Citizens' Band, promises a first-class programme of music, and a splendid time is assured all who go to the park tonight.

No matter how small the donation it will be gladly received by the committee.

Many of the wreck sufferers are badly in need of money, and all citizens are urgently requested to put their shoulders to the wheel and bring up the subscription amount to $1,200. It is now $900, so that another $300 should be made up at once.

KILLED A SQUAW TO PRESERVE GAME

Sick Indian Woman Executed to Balk the Evil Spirits.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 1.—Tribal custom and Canadian justice have clashed in the wilds of Keewatin, and Joseph and Jack Fidler, the chief and the medicine man of the Sandy Lake Creek, are under arrest at Norway House. They will be tried for the murder of a squaw. The woman, who is of the same name and blood as the two prisoners, fell sick in the spring, and became delirious. The Indians of this district believe that when a sick person becomes delirious, an evil spirit of Wendigo has entered them. They believe that if the person dies naturally the Wendigo escape, to the woods, pursues and frightens away the game, and famine follows. Therefore the band assembled, and according to custom, appointed their chief and medicine man to the high honor of choking the sick squaw, that the spirit might not escape with the passing of breath, but remain imprisoned in the dead body.

In the presence of the whole band the chief and the medicine man carried out the instructions. A piece of canvas was placed around the squaw's neck and then the noose of a rope, this being tightened by the leaders of the band, the ravings of the woman were stopped, and the evil spirit was imprisoned, and the game preserved. This piece of barbarism was executed within 200 miles of Kenora. Word of it reached the authorities, and the arrests followed. The Fidders asked the officials not to be too severe with them as they had no idea that they were doing wrong. They were merely doing their duty by the band, and following the custom of their fathers. The execution of this duty was a high honor and, according to custom, the executioners were handsomely fed by the parents of the victim. The justice department is to decide whether it will be better to send a judge to Norway House to try the case or bring the prisoners and witnesses to Edmonton for trial.

HORSE SHIED AND FELL ON RIDER

Dr. Palmer Smith Suffered Serious Injury on Richmond Street Today.

Dr. Palmer Smith, the well-known local dentist, was severely injured while riding his horse on Richmond street north this morning.

It is the doctor's custom to enjoy a ride every day, and this morning he was proceeding slowly up Richmond street, when at the C. P. R. depot his horse took fright at a street car. The pavement was wet and slippery at that point, and as the animal shied to one side it slipped and fell.

Dr. Smith was pinned between the pavement and the struggling horse, and before he could extricate himself, his right knee was badly fractured. His escape from more serious injury is a matter for congratulation, as those who witnessed the accident thought he would be killed.

DISASTER AT HONG KONG

The Old Section of the Hong Kong Hotel Has Collapsed.

Hong Kong, Aug. 1.—The old part of the Hong Kong Hotel collapsed today. It is believed that there were some casualties, but nothing definite on this point has yet been learned.

The Hong Kong Hotel is situated on the Bund and is the principal hotel here. It is frequented by tourists.

Floors of Reid's Crystal Hall Were Not Overloaded, Say Witnesses

Stock Was Only One-Third of Amount Usually Carried—Another Adjournment.

The inquest into the death of Willie Tambling, who was killed through the wreck of Reid's Crystal Hall, in Brewster's store, on July 16, was resumed at the courthouse last night before Coroner MacLaren.

The principal witnesses examined were Mr. Frank Reid, son of the proprietor of the Crystal Hall, and several of the employees of the firm, nearly all of whom had been in the building at the time of the wreck.

All were positive that the upper floors of the Reid building had not been overloaded, some stating that the stock carried when the wreck occurred was not over one-third the amount usually carried at that time of the year by the Crystal Hall.

As at the previous sessions, there were a large number of lawyers present, each representing somebody who suffered through the wreck.

The inquest will be continued this evening.

Architect Murray Again.

Mr. W. G. Murray, the architect, was recalled.

Q.—What was the width of Hamilton & Long's store?

A.—Twenty feet.

Q.—What was the width of the Reid store?

A.—Twenty-six feet.

Q.—What was the size of the iron pillars about the center of the Reid store?

A.—Five-inch, 3/4-inch iron.

Q.—Were they sufficiently strong in your opinion?

A.—Yes.

Mr. Frank Reid.

Mr. Frank Reid was then called. He was not a member of the firm, merely employed there.

Q.—The building was leased to whom?

A.—Peter Smerles.

Q.—What part did Hamilton & Long lease?

A.—The east part, ground and first floor.

Q.—Certain improvements were being made to the building?

A.—Yes, by Peter Smerles.

Q.—When did you give over the lease?

A.—Yes.

Trades and Labor Council Indorses The Strike of the Barbers of London

Looks as Though There Is To Be a Fight to a Finish in This City.

With both sides equally confident of ultimate success, the barbers' strike is still in full swing. The latest development is that the Trades and Labor Council of this city has pledged itself to support the strikers.

Labor Behind Strike.

A meeting of the council was held last night, at which the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, that whereas during the past few months the master barbers of London have enormously increased their list of prices, namely, face and neck shaving from 15 to 15 cents, hair-cutting from 15 to 25 cents, face massage from 15 to 25 cents, making charges for incidentals formerly supplied free, an all-round increase in the neighborhood of nearly 50 per cent; and whereas the London Trades and Labor Council was led to believe the journeymen barbers would receive a portion of the increase, and have paid the new charges without protest, we feel that the stand at present taken by the journeymen barbers is exceedingly fair and moderate.

Divide Profits With Men.

"And whereas the increased prices of profits now being enjoyed by the master barbers of London comes directly out of the pockets of the trades unionists and citizens of London generally, we, the people who pay the profits, will insist upon the right of the journeymen to receive the very small percentage of it which they have asked. That we hereby pledge the support of the Trades and Labor Council and organized labor to the journeymen barbers in the present struggle, and that this council co-operate with and assist them by every means in its power, and ask all citizens who believe in fair play to patronize those establishments that display the union shop card and are paying a living wage to their fellow-citizens."

Barbers Meet.

An important meeting of the journeymen barbers was held last night, at which great enthusiasm was manifested.

All expressed themselves as confident that they are to meet with victory. It

LONDON, THURSDAY, AUG. 1.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

The city of Victoria, B. C., has a water problem on its hands much the same as London's.

The existing supply in Victoria will not furnish a pressure adequate for fire protection in the business district, and the Colonist advocates an independent system for this purpose. The recent fire which threatened the whole city with destruction renders immediate action necessary.

"Except in the business part of the city, the question of fire protection is not very serious," says the Colonist.
The residential district is as a rule a locality of spacious detached. Nearly all the dwellings are separated from each other, and if there is water available two or three engines can furnish all the protection likely to be required.

This is precisely the situation in London. This is a city of detached houses and spacious lawns and gardens. It would be almost impossible for a fire to spread in the residential district, and even a lower water pressure than exists at present, supplemented by fire engines, would be ample security.

"The weak point of the city," continues the Colonist, "is the business district, say, from Work street to the Causeway, and back as far as Vancouver street. A fire anywhere within this area may easily become so serious as to endanger property worth millions of money, besides sending broadcast over the residential parts of the city showers of cinders, which may do very great damage. This is the part of the city which calls for immediate attention, and here action ought to be taken, no matter what is done in the way of redistribution of the ordinary service mains or the securing of a new source of supply. We believe the way to furnish ample protection for this district is to make use of the ex-haustless supply of water lying close at hand in the ocean."

Substitute the River Thames for the Pacific Ocean, and the Colonist's argument fits London's case exactly.
The construction of an independent system, affording the maximum of efficiency in fire protection and minimum insurance rates, is so desirable, in the special circumstances of this city,
that it would be worthy of consideration even if there were no question of a shortage of water for other purposes.

"No possible scheme of fire protection that can be devised in connection with a domestic service," says the Colonist,
"could be in any way equal to this (an independent system)." This is what the advocates of the independent scheme in this city have all along argued.
Neither the Komoka nor the river filtration plan satisfactorily solves the problem of fire protection. The water pressure under these schemes would be too low in the business district and too high for the plumbing fixtures in the residential district. The independent high-pressure system is the scientific and up-to-date solution.

THE REACTION IN RUSSIA.

The cable dispatches from Russia indicate that the Czar is oscillating again toward the reactionists. The influential court party are opposed to reforms of any kind, their main desire being to strengthen the Government's means of suppressing the peasantry and stamping out the widespread revolutionary movement. It is felt that the third Duma will be as unsatisfactory to the Emperor and his advisers as its predecessors, as, even with the restrictions which have been placed upon the elective franchise, there is no reason to expect that the next set of delegates will be under the thumb of the Government. Constructive work has no place in the policy of the autocratic class, the amelioration of the economic and moral ills from which the people are suffering is no concern of theirs. They appear wedded to the idea of government by force, and the mere mention of the word "reform" en-rages them. It seems to be the present understanding that if the third Duma shows a tendency to proceed with the reform propaganda, as no doubt it will, dissolution upon some pretext will promptly follow, and then will come the formal announcement that the Czar, owing to the irreconcilable attitude of the people, has found it impossible to grant representative government. Thus will end the farce of carrying out the Czar's rescript.

Wholesale arrests of agitators and conspirators are daily reported, and if the dispatches are to be believed, the whole empire must be honeycombed with revolutionary intrigue. The dismissal of the second Duma has served to feed the flames. Nothing less than extermination would stay the hand of the reactionists. As it is, the revolu-tionist executed leaves a group of relatives and friends determined to wreak vengeance on those responsible for their loss. It is difficult for people living under popular government to imagine the strength of purpose or the spirit of self-sacrifice inspiring these agitators. The third Duma may precipitate the fate of the empire.

EUROPEAN PLOTTERS IN AMERICA.

The recent murder in New York of the Armenian merchant, Tavshanjian, has, it is said, led to the disclosure of the existence among persons of that nationality of an organization with ramifications on two continents, called the Hunchakist Society, to which a number of such crimes are charged.
According to some of the New York newspapers, the object of the association is to hunt its victims, and the whole Armenian population of Gotham is shaking with terror. This particular crime, if not the deed of an irresponsible fanatic, was the work of an agent of criminals working under the guise of patriotic agitation.

The Hunchakists are said to be a branch of an organization which has been active in Russia and Turkey in defense of the Armenian cause. This incident furnishes an illustration of the extent to which the neighboring republic is becoming a plotting place for oppressed peoples of Europe. Bulgarians and Russian revolutionaries are said to be constantly sending young men to Armenia to raise money, by selling fruits, flowers, etc., for the relief of Macedonia or the overthrow of the Russian autocracy. Even Japanese have been plotting in the United States against the Mikado's Government. The effect of all this has been to arouse the American people to the danger of their country being made a dumping place for so undesirable a class and to demand more stringent immigration laws. Meantime, if there is such an organization as the Hunchakists known to the Armenians in New York, and they make bold to give to the police the information they have,
it should be no difficult matter to drive the plotters from their hiding places. If, on the other hand, information is withheld, as in the case of the Mafia and Black Hand, the police will be well-nigh powerless.

A visit to the north branch of the Thames during a rain storm, or immediately afterward, will cure anyone who is disposed to believe the statement that only spring water runs there.

This is emancipation day. The celebrations used to be on a larger scale, but the number of colored people in Ontario is steadily declining. Thousands of them sought refuge on the free soil of Canada before the American civil war, but climatic influences probably account for the drift back to the United States.

The British journalists have been entertained in a manner creditable to the city council. They have impressed those who have met them as sensible and observant men, who will do justice to what they have seen. As one of them remarked, they are the eyes and ears of the British public.
Their visit cannot fail to be instructive to their readers and profitable to Canada.

CANADA SOLVES PROBLEM.

[The World Today, New York.]
The eternal transportation problem is thus met by the Canadian Government.
First comes the transportation commission, a board of experts whose task it is to lay down abroad and comprehensive policy for the future, after a careful study of all the water and rail routes, sea and lake port possibilities, and similar data.
The more thorny task of controlling the existing roads is entrusted to a board of railway commissioners, which consists of three highly salaried members appointed for ten years. The board at present consists of Mr. Justice Killam, formerly of the supreme court, Professor Mills, of the Ontario Agricultural College, and the Hon.
M. E. Bernier, formerly minister of inland revenue. The board has its headquarters in Ottawa, but holds sessions throughout the whole country to hear complaints and give judgment.

The powers of the commission are wide.
It controls construction, rates and operation. The location and construction of new lines and stations, bridges and tunnels must meet with its approval. All freight schedules are filed with the commission, and it has power to change any rate on proof of discrimination in favor of large shippers or between different localities.
The classification of commodities is also subject to its control. As to operation, it may regulate speed and control the allotment of cars to different districts. The commission is given practically a free hand, and so far and common sense have been its decisions that it has not been necessary for any litigant to invoke the appeal to the Privy Council provided as a last resort.
Thanks to a constitution which does not make a fetish of the separation of judicial, executive and legislative powers on a basis of equality, the commission is little troubled by fear of "judicial review."

LOVE LETTER AFTER 32 YEARS.

[Chippewa Falls correspondence St. Paul Pioneer Press.]
Bohdon's dream of love has been vividly renewed to the Hagenes, of Ramsey, by the receipt of a letter from a girl whom he admitted when he was a boy in Norway.
and who returned his affection. Since the letter was written, however, Mr. Hagenes has married and reared a family, and its great pleasure now must wait with nothing more than a response of memory.
The letter was written to Mr. Hagenes at Winnifield, Minnesota, where the address was given when he was 18 years old. It is dated March, Norway, Nov. 18, 1858. Since the letter was mailed, Mr. Hagenes has visited Europe several times, and has been in the United States for the last ten years. The letter had been in the Hagenes family until recently, when it was sent back to Norway, and from there forwarded to Mr. Hagenes at his present address.

RELIEF.

[New York Sun.]
Mrs. Knicker—It is hard to get in a waist that buttons down the back.
Knicker—Why not have side doors?

WHERE SHE SLEEPS.

[S. E. Kiser.]
Upon a grassy slope she sleeps,
Beneath a spreading tree.
And there, at dawn, above the deeps,
The leaves stir lazily.

She does not care how sedily I Pursue my lonely way;
She does not even wonder why
My heart is seldom gay.

Upon a grassy slope she lies Far from the city's roar,
And over her are azure skies,
And cool waves wash her shore.

Across the hills the twilight creeps,
A star glows in the east,
And on her ankles, while she sleeps,
Mosquitoes bittely feast.

ALL NATURE FAKES.

[Indianapolis News.]
After a careful and impartial consideration of all the evidence bearing on the subject, the investigating committee reports that, notwithstanding their long life and apparent respectability, the following are undoubtedly nature fakes:

The bull in the china shop.
The wolf in the sheep's clothing.
The fly in the ointment.
The dog in the manger.
The fish out of water.
The bee in the bonnet.
The flea in the ear.
The rat that was smelted.
The chorus girl's lobster.
Pigs in clover.
Horse and horse.
Time flies.
The Welsh rabbit.
The man on a lark.

AN ABANDONED BIRD.

[New York Sun.]
Dealer—This parrot doesn't use bad language.
Miss Bawstin—Perfectly awful! Why, I heard him spit an infinitive.

THEN AND NOW.

[Life.]
It used to be bread and cheese and kisses.
Now it is champagne, duck and divorces.

THE BACHELOR'S STATUS.

[Cleveland Leader.]
The Girl—A bachelor is a self-conscious fool.
The Man—How do you make that out?
The Girl—His state proclaims that he is either afraid to ask a girl to marry him, or not smart enough to take care of her if he gets one.

REMEMBERED THE MAN.

[Monetary Times.]
The welcome accorded Sir Wilfrid Laurier upon his return from England is gratifying to all. Canada forgot politics and remembered the man. Parties and issues may come—they may go. But Sir Wilfrid Laurier's record has won for him for all time the admiration of the country.

A MOTHER'S DEVOTION.

[Brookville Times.]
A wonderful example of heroism and maternal love was that recent incident of the woman at New Liskeard who, in order to save her little child from death, thrust her arm beneath the wheels of the freight train and prevented the child from raising its head. Ordinary cases of heroic deeds performed under the stress of great excitement seem tame to this act of motherly devotion.

THE CRY IN THE NIGHT.

[Toronto Telegram.]
How often in the summer nights the cry of "HELP!" comes through the darkness from the occupants of crows, skiffs, steam launches and sailing craft.

How often have these cries been answered by people who have hurried to the recue of agitated distress only to be greeted by shouts of "STUNG!" and other forms of mirth from the practical jokers who send up these cries in the night.

It must be a pleasant thought for the miscreants who have foolishly cried for help that they did not need to realize that their folly caused fellowmen to cry in vain for help that they did need.

The constable who heard cries through the storm on Sunday morning, and who asserts that he had been victimized time and time again by bogus shouts for help. His statement is borne out by the experience of almost everybody within earshot of the waters navigated by pleasure craft around Toronto. The pity is that the wretches who thus make sport of human life could not be put in jail, or horsewhipped, or both.

THEY'LL LEARN NOW.

[Montreal Herald.]
If this English journalist inflexibly continues, it will soon be hard to find an old country paper that does not know that Medicine Hat is warm in summer and that there are no bears on the streets of Hamilton, Ont.

DRY OR WET?

[New York Sun.]
Knicker—I'm undecided whether to get an auto or a motor boat.
Booker—Do you prefer walking or swimming?

SURE OF ONE.

[Kansas City Journal.]
In the course of his Sunday morning announcements a Wabash County mis-taker said: "Brethren, the janitor and I will hold our weekly prayer meeting next Wednesday evening as usual."

BIG MISSOURI TOMATO PATCH.

[Canton News.]
The biggest tomato patch in the United States, if not in the world, is located in Clark County, Mo., just south of the Des Moines River. Canadiana railway men say it is the largest in the world.

In this patch there are 170 acres of tomatoes, and it is exactly a mile in length and about one-third of a mile in width.
The rows, if stretched out in a straight line, would extend for almost 100 miles.

SCORCHING AT MEALS.

[Philadelphia Bulletin.]
Lawrence Mott, author and automobilist, condemned scorching at a dinner.
"If I condemn it," he said, "it's 'c'n't be the scorcher, but I don't condemn the scorcher unheard. I don't condemn the scorcher man hastily. Most condemnation is always a mistake."
"Once on a Canadian railway I got off the train for a five-minute luncheon at a railway eating bar."
"There was a man beside me gobbling away, and when he finished, I heard him say bitterly as he took out his purse:
"Call that a ham sandwich! It's the worst ham sandwich I ever ate. No more taste than seaweed, and so small you could hardly see it!"
"It is a great trick," said the waiter.
"This here's per ham sandwich!"

THE EXPENSES ARE ENORMOUS

Connected With Running of Amateur Sports, Colleges Spend Much.

New York, July 31.—From statistics recently gathered it would appear that the expenses attending sports of all kinds in this country are enormous. Every baseball or football game, every rowing or sailing race, and every other phase of physical achievement represents the outlay of sums which totaled would go a long way toward paying the national debt.
Winning baseball teams, racing stables and football elevens are great money-getters, but there are other branches of sport where it's "all a-goin' out and nothin' comin' in."

It is not the professional sports that cost. The colleges expend thousands of dollars each year in order that some chosen rival may be downed in football, baseball or on the water.
The early games of the season are really for the purpose of getting the men in trim for the final struggle such as the Yale-Harvard football game, the Princeton-Yale meeting, on the diamond, or the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, and each of these preliminary workouts adds to the list on the debit side of the ledger. There is some return, it is true, but only rarely does these returns balance the expense. The big athletic clubs, too, such as the New York
A. C. and the Irish-American A. C., which maintain amateur athletes,
providing athletic grounds, training tables and trainers for the men, bring up the sum of moneys expended upon athletics.

For the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson alone, the cost of sending three crews, "freshman," "varsity" and "varsity four" together with the substitutes and boatkeeper, averages about $2,000 for the crews coming from the colleges near by. In the case of a crew coming from a long distance, the cost is correspondingly greater, and this is but an item in the yearly expense of the department of athletics. The average annual cost of maintenance is $12,000, of which the principal items are coaching, equipment, training table and transportation. A minimum estimate of a coach's salary is $2,000, although this varies. The equipment means coaching launches and new shells, and as several new shells are bought each year it entails considerable outlay, which is nowhere nearly met by the sale of the old shells. The returns from this sport are but small. As an example, the report of the graduate treasurer of athletics at Harvard shows receipts of the University Boat Club as nearly $3,000, whereas the expenditures amounted to $11,266.61.
And so it runs in all the rowing colleges.

As for football and baseball, there is first of all the expense of securing and maintaining a proper field to be considered. Cornell has recently provided for the next largest field, which when compared with represent an outlay of $350,000. Syracuse has an immense stadium nearly finished, and the other big colleges have their fields and stadiums which must be kept in condition year in and year out.
Coaching in these sports, as in running, is the next largest entry, and there are generally the services of at least four trainers and coaches to be paid during the short season from September to November for football and from February to June for baseball. The receipts from the football game, as a general thing, the biggest figure among the receipts, but one million dollars annually would not pay the expenses entailed by the athletic sports of the United States.

SUSPEND DRIVER HOPKINS

Judge Declares He Wasn't Trying to Win at Erie.

Erie, Pa., July 31.—Collingwood
Rooker, 40 to 1 shot, won the 2:12 pace, the opening event of today's races. The favorite, Raoul W., won the first heat, but was distanced in the second. All records for the number of heats were broken in this race, it being necessary to cover the distance eight times before a winner could be decided upon. The favorite, Cash Jun., won the second heat, it being the only event of the day which the talent won. The free-for-all, the last race of the day, proved a puzzler and the result hit the fraternity hard. Darkey Hal was looked upon a sure winner, but second was the best she could make in any of the five heats, while Allenwood captured the race. All bets were declared off in this race, the judge deciding that Hopkins, the driver of Gallagher, who had two heats to his credit, did not drive to win in the fifth and final heat. Hopkins was suspended for 30 days. Summary:

2:12 Pace, purse $500—Collingwood Rooker took the second, seventh and eighth heats and race; Charley Hal, second; Flying Jim, third. Best time, 2:13.7.
2:15 Trot, purse $500—Cash Jun.
took the second, third and fourth heats and race; Bow Catcher, second, third and fourth, money divided between Red Jacket and Lady Pearlina
C. Best time, 2:13.
Free-for-all pace, purse $500.—Al-lenwood took the first, second and fifth heats and race; Gallagher, second; Darkey Hal, third. Best time, 2:12.4.

Ants are really very long lived, considering their minuteness. A naturalist has two greens under observation for ten years and one of Sir John Lubbock's ants lived into his fiftieth year. Ants are very tenacious of life after severe injury.
Following loss of the entire abdomen they sometimes live two weeks, and in one case a headless ant, carefully decapitated by a scientist, lived for 41 years. A carpenter ant after being amputated eight days in distilled water came to life upon being dried, so that they are practically proof against drowning. They can live long periods without food; in one case the ant lasted nearly nine months.

THE HORSE WORLD

first of the season's trotting classics, was last in the first heat, and drawn thereafter. He did not even start in the consolation race, for the horses that failed to get money in the M. and
M. that event went to the much-laudered Claty Latus in time fast enough to have won every M. and M. but two, and Claty Latus is evidently good enough to be the crack green trotter in a year that has no Sonoma Girl or Highball. Johnny is a good horse, even if he is not as fast as the real cracks, and should do some winning in the slower and less valuable stakes.
The season on the Grand Circuit so far has shown nothing to disprove the wisdom of the old horsemen's saying that unless you have a 2:10 trotter or a 2:05 pacer, keep away from the big ring.

At the Cleveland races that will be decided before this appears in print,
the Canadian contingent has in Lady May a pacer that has a license to move as fast as anybody's horse.
Whether Mr. Chantler's mare is ready for a bruising race is another story.
Quintell, the Hamilton trotter pacer, did well in the first heat of his Detroit race, finishing second, and he may do some good at the Glenview track. He appears to be short of work and will probably come to hand later.

Every turf and agricultural paper, and every horsedealer, is increasingly impressed with the scarcity of good horses, and unless there is some concerted movement to supply the deficiency, it is likely to become more and more serious, for the tendency of the age is to limit the horse output, good and bad. The settlers are pushing forward, and the death knell of the great ranches has been sounded. The other day announcement was made of the disposal of the H. T. herd in North Dakota. Twelve hundred horses were disposed of, mostly Percherons and Percheron grades, the results of an enterprise that began in 1873.

The depression of fifteen years or so and the three important wars since that time are jointly responsible for the lessening of the equine population. In the hard times, many a "dreaded good horse" were marketed as many mouths, human and brute, to feed. It was not their wish that the good ones should go and the wasters remain in the stalls. That was the doings of the buyers. They had the pick, for those were the days when a handful of dollar bills looked as big as a roll of wallpaper. That is why the country permitted its choicest mares to be swept across the line or sent abroad. The years had a more beneficial effect, for they used up the culls, and thereby improved the demand, local and foreign, for better horses. But after all, what is the use of having the demand and no horses to fill it?

One of the reasons horse-breeding is so risky is that the man who goes into it has to look at least four or five years ahead. Suppose you start in tomorrow buying brood mares and breeding them, it will be the fall of 1912 before you have any well-grown 4-year-olds to market. In the meantime it will be a case of all going out and nothing coming in. This is the hazard that is likely to prevent any great rushing into the business by the general public, and this makes one of the best guarantees to the man who is already established that competition will not crowd him out.

One advantage which the Canadian west is supposed to have over the Canadian east as a horse-breeding center is the absence of heaves among western horses. Whether this satisfactory condition is merely the result of insufficient observation of western horses, or whether it is a fact due to a different atmosphere, must be left for some frank western man to decide. At any rate it is an accepted view in the east, where they say that before a heavy horse has got as far as Winnipeg, he quits coughing and dedicates his abdomen to other functions besides breathing.

dian Industrial Exhibition of 1907 is

FOOD FOR FANS

One of the largest crowds in the history of the game saw Chicago defeat the Athletics last Saturday.
A double-kicking by the crippled Naps and Kid Elberted kicked out of the game is a pretty good record for one day up on the hill.

While the scouting season is on it is not at all unlikely that some enterprising manager will pick up this fellow Dave Cross, who is leading the Southern League in batting.

They have it that Birmingham Cleveland made a 319-foot throw in a game in St. Louis, which caught Wallace at the rubber.

Hughes, Joss and Dygert are the only American League pitchers with one-hit games to their credit this year.

The Detroit Club, through Scout Lowe, has secured an option on Outfielder Beals Becker of the Wichita Club, of the Western Association.

Second Baseman Mullen of Newark, and First Baseman Clancy had their noses broken last week—the first in a collision, the latter by a foul tip.

Pitcher Brockett, transferred by New York to Montreal, is being played in the outfield for his hitting and sprinting ability. He says he is done with pitching.

President Potter, of the Buffalo Club, says that he would not swap
First Baseman McConnell for a dozen Grimsbaws. McConnell looks like a sure enough major leaguer next season.

Robert Lincoln Lowe, who is now doing scouting duty for the Detroit Club, was about to put in an application for the management of the Boston Club just as he learned that Jim McGuire had been selected.

My Lady Cinderella

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of "My Friend the Chauffeur," "Lady Betty Across the Water," Etc., Etc.

"I'm not quite sure," I answered, rather tremulously, as she stepped aside to let me in, for I had gone through a great deal in the past seven or eight hours.

"Does Mrs. Leatherby-Smith know you're here?"

The whole history of Anne's relations with her employer were in the anxious tone of her voice, the worried look in her eyes.

"Yes. She sent her maid up with me. Oh, Anne, I have so much—such extraordinary things to tell you."

"Sh! she whispered. 'Let me peep first and see if Therese is listening at the keyhole.'"

I did not sleep much that night, and neither did Anne. After I had told her the story of my adventures since our parting, we did not talk a great deal; but there were certain of her comments on my story which made a deep impression on my mind. As for my experience with Mr. Wynnstay, her practical common sense scored my sentimental imaginings. Of course it was nonsense about his having been disguised as a clergyman all those years, or the clergyman being disguised at present Mr. Wynnstay—if I liked to put it so.

Plenty of people had eyes that did not match in color. Anne's mother had once had a German waiter in the Bloomsbury boarding house like that. Besides, she herself had seen a woman in the street not long ago with a blue eye and a brown eye. It was uncommon, but not so wonderfully rare as I seemed to think. No doubt all that business of the mirror had been a sort of nightmare while I was fainting. I had glanced up just as I was about to slip off into unconsciousness, seen Mr. Wynnstay coming with the eau de cologne, as he had afterwards suggested, and then imagined everything else.

All this part of my tale, however, Anne seemed to dismiss as of comparatively little importance. Oddly enough, it appeared to me, she was far more struck by my second meeting with Sir George Seaforth, and the fact that he should be Sir George Seaforth at all.

"It looks as if Fate had a hand in it," she said with a sigh—her face pale and weary in the bright moonlight that streamed through the uncurtained window, for we were talking in bed. "First we hear of him at that Lady Sophie de Gretton's"—Anne was fond of prefacing a name she did not fancy with a disdainful "that"—"then we meet him in the street, and he saves you from being run over, without our knowing who he is. Again, the same night, he comes to your rescue, when you fancy yourself in danger (not that I think you really were), and you find out that he is the very man Lady Sophie de Gretton wanted to keep you from meeting."

"We don't know that it was so at all," I retorted, defending the absent.

But Anne did not seem to hear. "I wonder why some women should have everything," she murmured, "and others—nothing?"

"What do you mean, dear?" I questioned.

She did not answer, and I could see her eyes staring in the moonlight, oblivious of me. It was these last words of Anne's which did as much as anything else to keep me waking that night.

CHAPTER IX.

The Benefit of the Doubt.

In the morning she was more like herself, and only laughed when I proposed telegraphing to ask Lady Sophie de Gretton if I might go to her that day instead of the next.

"I'll lend you the money gladly, Con," said Anne dryly—for without this favor I should not have been able to send a wire—"but I don't believe for a moment that Lady Sophie meant a word she said. I know a lot about her—things I've had to read 'round in the society papers since I've been with Mrs. Leatherby-Smith; and then the vulgar, pushing set that come here are always chattering about the aristocracy, pretending they're intimate friends among those whose secrets they're acquainted with. I've often heard Lady Sophie de Gretton's name, and though some of the things may have been gossip, others must have been true."

"What have you heard that makes you think she didn't mean me to take her invitation seriously?" I persisted, trying to look indifferent, though my heart was heavy and afraid.

I had burned my boats behind me when I left Peckham, and without Lady Sophie's hand to help me out of the water, it seemed to my inexperience that I must surely drown.

"Well, you may have guessed that when she first spoke to us in the park I didn't believe that she told the truth in announcing herself as Lady Sophie de Gretton. I thought the woman was an impostor, who had borrowed a well-known name to deceive us, for some horrid reason or other. But you would go home with her. I couldn't let you two march off alone, and when I saw the house and heard the servants calling her 'my lady,' I knew she couldn't have been lying. She was Lady Sophie de Gretton, and being Lady Sophie de Gretton it seemed all the more sure that she wouldn't want to be bothered with a long visit from a poor girl like you."

"She—she explained," I put in shyly.

For to remember that flattering explanation made me appear conceited.

"Yes. No doubt she did admire you, and think she would like to see how you would look dressed up in smart clothes. Then she got talking on, till she'd committed herself rather farther than she intended, hoping you'd have sense enough to take it as a joke. But you didn't, and you saw at the last how she was in a furious hurry to get rid of us. I'll bet you never have so much as an answer to your telegram."

"Surely, for her own sake, she wouldn't—" I had begun desperately to protest, when Anne cut me short.

"Wait, my child. Let me tell you something about Lady Sophie de Gretton. She's the daughter of an earl—Lord Sandley, who was always going in for theatrical speculations on a tremendous scale. At last he was ruined, and went bankrupt, or something, so that Lady Sophie, who was a girl then, found her chances of marrying well in danger of being spoiled. She hung on for a long time, and didn't 'go off'—these are the words of one of Mrs. Leatherby-Smith's friends—till at last, rather than be an old maid, she took a Mr. de Gretton, who came of a good family, but had very little money. When he died, about ten or a dozen years ago, she was left poorly off, and was at her wits' ends to know how she could retain her position in society. She had a house, and that was about all—nothing to keep it up with. However, she got on—and do you want to know how?"

"Yes," I returned feebly.

"Well, she began to be famous for presenting heiresses from America or the provinces, and introducing them to her set. Generally they made good marriages, and those 'in the know'—as Mrs. Leatherby-Smith says when she forgets not to be vulgar—are certain that she got at least a thousand pounds a season for every girl she presented. Sometimes a lot more. Most, if that's her meller, does it stand to reason that she would hamper herself by taking you about, and paying for every dress and pair of shoes you had to your back?"

"I don't wear shoes on my back," I retorted with some asperity, which cloaked dismay. "Very likely there is not a word of truth in all this gossip; and, anyway, why didn't you tell me yesterday?"

"Because you wouldn't give me a chance, my dear child. Don't you think I saw that you were determined not to talk of her? You didn't want to be discouraged, and you were afraid I'd try to set you against her. I did not suppose then that you'd go home and break off with Mrs. East. I thought that by the time you got to Peckham you'd begin to look on Lady Sophie's wild proposition as a romantic but impossible dream. Of course, if she were a very rich and philanthropic woman she might really be contemplating the idea of adopting you simply because she saw you were so beautiful as to be worthy of better things. But I'm not mistaken in the main facts about Lady Sophie de Gretton, and, anyway, believe me, she's not the woman to be capable of a purely unselfish and altruistic act."

I was silent, and, I'm afraid, a little sulky; for Anne's words had buried me under a mountain of depression.

"I don't want you to think I'm just nasty and jealous," Anne went on. (I would never have dreamed of fancying her so; it seemed odd to me that she should suggest such an idea.) "But I must be honest for your own good, and say that if you expect anything from that little adventure of ours in the park yesterday, you'll be laying up disappointment for yourself. Wire Lady Sophie if you like; but I advise you to write at the same time to Mrs. East, and hint that, if she cares to let bygones be bygones, you might be willing to go back."

"Whatever happens, I won't do that," I exclaimed emphatically. "I only stayed there so long out of habit, I think—a habit of repression. She was my one living relative, though a distant one; and as I went to her house when I was only 14, I have stupidly grown up taking it for granted that I must remain there. Of course, I'm not well-educated, according to conventional ideas of a girl's education, but dear mother taught me faithfully, splendidly, till she died, and I have read all I could whenever I could get a book, or buy a book worth reading since, so that I might at least hope to get a situation as nursery governess. I can sing, too. You know what a glorious voice mother had, and what pains she took with me. Even though I've had little enough chance to practice, I might get taken on in the chorus of light opera."

"Whatever you do, don't try the stage, Con," said Anne. "You're young, too lonely, too pretty, and too poor for that."

"Well," I cried despairingly, "for the present I won't trouble. I mean to give Lady Sophie de Gretton the benefit of the doubt."

"H'm! the benefit of the doubt," incredulously echoed Anne.

Before breakfast Anne and I went out together, walking almost in silence to the nearest telegraph office, where Anne's shilling paid for my long message to Lady Sophie de Gretton.

I dreaded the meeting with Mrs. Leatherby-Smith, even though I might hope for countenance from my self-appointed advocate, Miss Smith. But Anne expressed the opinion that it would be unwise for me to absent myself from the breakfast table.

"Mrs. Leatherby-Smith will want to ask questions," she said, "and if you're not there to answer them she'll think there's something wrong. For my sake, if not for your own, you'd better face the music."

Before the meal was over Mrs. Leatherby-Smith knew all that I knew about my future prospects with Lady Sophie de Gretton, how her drawing-room was furnished, what she had worn, and what she had given us the adventure on coming home, not being encouraged to private confidences by her employer; nevertheless, Mrs. Leatherby-Smith chose to resent her secretary's tactfulness on this occasion. It was very secretive of Anne to have kept such a matter to herself.

Of course, there was little chance that Lady Sophie would really answer my telegram or take any further notice of me now that yesterday's mood had had time to pass.

In fact, though Mrs. Leatherby-Smith refrained from giving such a reason, the truth was that she was pricked to curiosity. She desired me to remain that she might know without delay whether I were to be discarded or taken up by so important a personage as Lady Sophie de Gretton. Though she, Mrs. Leatherby-Smith, might have been able to buy and sell the earl's daughter—who had only married a commoner, after all—within her small soul she knew that the set in which Lady Sophie moved, by right of birth and breeding and long association, was as far beyond her reach as the Mountains of the Moon.

I was only 19, and far from being a woman of the world, but I was shrewd enough to guess that Mrs. Leatherby-Smith was holding me in her hand as in a balance. Down I would go till I was worth my weight in gold if Lady Sophie telegraphed that I was to repair at once to her house, anticipating our arrangement. But, on the contrary, were Anne's and her own gloomy prophecies fulfilled by silence on Lady Sophie's part, I would fly up, a mere feather weight in Mrs. Leatherby-Smith's estimation—a pitiful feather, to be blown out of doors, whither mattered less than nothing.

As for Miss Smith, she was in a different mood this morning: thoughtful, non-talkative, willing to listen, but inclined to say little. Breakfast ought not to be a conversational meal, she considered. Afterwards, however, while Mrs. Leatherby-Smith and Anne were busy with letter writing, she asked me to hold the yarn for her knitting as she wound it; and during the progress of the task, in which she did not hurry, I thought she endeavored to help me forget my anxieties by chatting about her home in Dorsetshire, her cats, her dogs, and her Brazilian monkey.

It was half-past eight when I had sent my telegram, and in my mind, as the hours passed on, there was a constant undercurrent of calculation. Suppose it had been delivered in Park Lane at nine, Lady Sophie might still have been sleeping; but surely she would be awake by ten. If she sent an answer off at once, I ought have it before eleven.

But eleven came and went, and though I had started many times, thrilling all over at the sound of the doorbell, there was no message for me at two. Mrs. Leatherby-Smith came into the library, where her sister-in-law and I were sitting, to insist upon Miss Smith accompanying her on a shopping expedition.

"You haven't heard from Lady Sophie yet, I see," she remarked to me with a little sneer. "Oh, well, you can stop till after luncheon. I should say that if 3 o'clock passed without your hearing, you might as well give up hope. By the way, Mr. Wynnstay, from Holland Park Mansions, has been in to inquire after your health. I understood from Miss Bryden that you had been there by mistake, and he had brought you to my house, supposing I was away for the night. I don't know how he came to fancy that from what I said when I happened to meet him yesterday afternoon; however, that's not the question now. Why was I not told that you were taken ill and fainted at the Mansions?"

"I thought it of so little consequence to you," I excused myself.

"It was rather peculiar. It ought to have been mentioned. Mr. Wynnstay's account of the matter quite took me by surprise. He is an extremely able man—some friends have lately recommended me to employ him as my solicitor—and most benevolent as well. He requested particularly that I should let him know how you got on, and I would have told him of your hopes from Lady Sophie de Gretton had it not occurred to me that it would be rather premature to do that. He might laugh in his sleeve at me tomorrow if I had served to believe for a moment that she would keep her word. Solicitors know the world so well!"

"If Lady Sophie should send for me, please don't tell Mr. Wynnstay," I pleaded. "You see, she might not like the circumstances discussed, and would be displeased with any gossip about me."

"You may be sure I would do nothing which could possibly offend Lady Sophie if you should go to her," said Mrs. Leatherby-Smith, visibly bristling; "though it's too late for there to be much chance of that now."

Breakfast was the only meal which Anne Bryden ate with her employer. Her luncheon was served in the room where she and Mrs. Leatherby-Smith attended to the latter's correspondence, and we shared it today. There was but a single supply for two healthy young women; fortunately for my throat prevented me from eating.

It was half-past one, and there was still no word from Lady Sophie de Gretton. Hope died hard in my heart, but it was dying now.

DESIGNED BY MARTHA DEAN.

A TRIM GOWN FOR GENERAL WEAR—6933, 6934.

Particular women appreciate the trimness of a costume perhaps more than any other feature. It is the effect of the whole which counts in one's appearance, and the artist in dress recognizes good taste here before anything else. The gown shown is especially attractive for afternoon or morning wear, for paying calls or wearing to church. The waist has its tucks becomingly placed in front and back and sleeve. A chemise of lace or contrasting material lends a pretty touch at the neck while the long collar outlining the V neck effect may introduce a dark silk or velvet. The skirt (6933) is a nine-gored, one laid in tuck-pleats and very graceful. It is not difficult to make and is suitable to cloth, voile, chiffon cloth, taffetas, pongee or another seasonable fabric. For the medium size 7-3-4 yards 44 inches wide are needed.

Two patterns—6934, 6 sizes, 32 to 42 inches, bust measure; 6933, 7 sizes, 20 to 32 inches waist.

The price of these patterns is 20 cents, but either will be sent upon receipt of 10 cents.

FLOORS OF REID'S CRYSTAL HALL

A—I could not tell without producing the lease.

Q—Did you continue to sell goods?

A—Until July 10. We started to pack up after that until the disaster.

Q—When did the improvements commence?

A—In early June.

Q—Did you remove any of W. J. Reid's stock?

A—Yes; we removed it at the convenience of the contractors.

Q—On June 1 was the ordinary amount of stock on hand?

A—We began to reduce it some time before.

Q—The stock carried generally would be very heavy?

A—Not at this time of the year.

Q—On July 16 there was very little stock on the ground floor?

A—Yes; it was packed up.

Q—Was there any stock on the first floor?

A—Nothing at all.

Q—The wall was removed?

A—Yes. Mr. Hammett's men had removed it. A brick partition was also removed at the rear.

Q—Where was stock taken to from the ground floor?

A—It was sold at the auction sale.

Q—What became of the stock on the first floor?

A—It was sold.

Q—Was any of the stock on the first floor taken to the upper floors?

A—Some, I guess.

Q—In cases?

A—No, merely loose stock.

Q—Were any new goods taken on the ground or first floor?

A—No. Some were placed at the back part.

Q—You have a statement prepared of all goods received from and after June 28?

A—Yes.

Q—Give total weight of goods received from June 28 to July 16.

A—Eighteen tons, six hundred and thirty pounds.

Q—Could you tell the number of lorry loads received?

A—I could not say.

Goods Placed in Store.

Q—Could you give any idea of the number of lorry loads?

A—I could not give any idea.

Q—What did the goods consist of?

A—One carload of stoneware, which was placed in the cellar. There were cases and barrels of goods received besides.

Q—What did the crates weigh?

A—From 400 to 1,000 pounds.

Q—What would the hogsheads weigh?

A—About 400 pounds.

Q—You were contemplating removal to Clarence street?

A—Yes.

Q—You kept the goods in the cases for removal?

A—Not at all. We opened them all.

Q—How much did you send out?

A—About 147,455 pounds—over 73 tons.

Q—These were goods shipped out of town?

A—Yes.

Q—You received other goods from the city?

A—Yes. They were sent to our warehouses.

Q—Did not some of these goods go out from the other warehouses?

A—I am not sure. I would have to check it off to find out.

Upper Floors Used.

Q—The upper floors were used for storing goods?

A—Yes.

Q—Were any goods put on these floors after the lease was given to Mr. Smerles?

A—Not at all.

Q—Was the usual stock on these floors?

A—At the time of the accident only one-third the usual stock was carried.

Q—Had you removed any of the goods from the ground floor to the second and third floors?

A—None at all.

Q—Were any removed from the first floor to the upper floors?

A—Yes; not much, though.

Q—Then a large part of the eighteen tons was moved up to the upper floors?

A—Yes, quite a lot of it.

Q—Were there large crates on the second floor?

A—Yes.

Q—Were there any crates over Hamilton & Long's?

A—No crates. There were shelves with goods on them.

Q—Were there any goods in cases?

A—Yes. There were barrels and cases, but the stock was much reduced.

Q—Where were the heavy goods?

A—They were carried near the west wall, close to The Advertiser building.

Q—There were some heavy crates there?

A—Yes.

Q—When did they come in?

A—Perhaps two weeks before the accident.

Q—These would be the crates referred to by the witnesses Tuesday night? They said they were too heavy to move.

A—They might be. They are heavy and clumsy to the inexperienced man.

Q—Where were you at the time of the accident?

A—On the ground floor.

Q—Have you any idea what gave way first?

A—I have no idea.

Q—The list of stock received is correct?

A—Yes.

Q—The stock was being reduced all the time?

A—Yes, we were getting rid of it as fast as we could.

Apprehended No Danger.

Q—Did you apprehend any danger?

A—I did not.

Q—Did you ever tell any person that there was danger?

A—I did not. I may have made some remarks when I was excited at the time of the accident, but not before that I am aware of.

Q—You never told the contractors nor Mr. Smerles, that you were afraid of the building?

A—I did not.

Q—What was the method of communication between the two buildings?

A—Two or three arches.

Q—They were filled in?

A—Yes, when Mr. Richard Brown leased the store. He had the ground and first floor, which was later occupied by Hamilton, Long & Co.

Q—They were delivered over to Hamilton & Long in the same condition?

A—Yes.

Q—The arches were never removed?

A—No.

Q—When you give the figures of goods received—18 tons, 630 pounds—where did you get them?

A—We struck an average. Some crates weigh heavier than others, from 700 to 1,000 pounds, and we struck an average, 300 pounds, and multiplied by the number of crates. We kept the record in our receiving book.

Q—Where was the book kept?

A—At our warehouse. The goods were recorded as soon as received.

Q—On Wednesday and Thursday, prior to the accident, July 10 and 11, did you receive a much larger quantity of goods than usual?

A—None on July 11, but we received crates on July 12 and 23 cases on July 2.

Q—How much did they weigh?

A—They were light cases.

Cases Received.

Q—Now, how many cases were received July 10.

A—Twenty-five packages of mixed goods.

Q—How much did they weigh?

A—I have no idea.

Q—I am informed that on the dates mentioned, July 10 and 11, a large number of lorries were unloaded. Have you any record of that in your book?

A—No.

Q—Have you no record of it?

A—No.

Q—How many lorry loads were received?

A—I have no idea. A carload of stoneware came in. It was placed immediately over the office or in the basement. This carload would fill many lorries.

Q—Were any of these in the front part of the building?

A—Yes; three cases of the 39 went down.

Q—A large number of cases were seen in the wreckage. Could you estimate how much went down?

A—We have no idea.

Q—You rescued 36 cases?

A—Yes; they are in our warehouse now.

Q—When was this building erected?

A—I don't know.

Q—When was the fire?

The Fire.

A—About six years ago.

Q—Where was the fire?

A—On the second floor.

Q—Did the fire extend into the part of the building that collapsed?

A—Not that I remember.

Q—Did it extend over into Hamilton & Long's store?

A—No, that was protected from the fire.

Mr. Kerwin, solicitor for Mr. Smerles, wanted to know something about the number of lorry loads received.

Mr. George C. Gibbons, K. C., for Mr. Reid, declared that the books were open to inspection, and they were willing to give the fullest information.

"I would prefer to hear the witness' testimony," Mr. Kerwin replied.

Mr. Reid again explained that the heaviest goods were placed near The Advertiser building on the west side. There was no reason for so doing, as no danger was anticipated.

Mr. Allan McLean.

Mr. Allan McLean, W. J. Reid's bookkeeper, was then sworn.

He was questioned about the cause of the accident, but knew nothing of it.

Q—Do you know whether any goods were removed from the ground floor to the second and third floors before the accident?

A—No.

Q—At the time of the disaster you were at the Dundas street warehouse?

A—No, I was away altogether.

Q—Did Mr. Foley come to you on the Thursday previous to the disaster, and complain that W. J. Reid & Co. were moving in instead of out?

A—No.

Q—Did you have anything to do with the checking of the goods received into the warehouse?

A—No.

Mr. John Dromgole.

Mr. John Dromgole, a traveler for W. J. Reid & Co., was then called.

Q—Do you know anything about the moving of any goods in the warehouse previous to accident?

A—No.

Q—Do you know anything about what goods are carried on the second and third floors?

A—Goods were carried on all these floors.

Q—Was there a very large quantity up there?

A—The usual quantity was carried.

Q—Were you there when the sales were going on several days before the disaster?

A—No.

Q—Were you on the third floor on the day of the disaster?

A—Yes, I went up there and checked two barrels of goods for shipping out.

Q—What quantity of goods did you see up there?

Stock Was Small.

A—There did not appear to be over quarter of the usual quantity. There were shelves not quite half filled and bins on the east side also about half full.

Q—What class of goods were on the east side, over Hamilton & Long's store?

A—Stained glass ware.

Q—What goods were on the second floor?

A—There were different kinds of light stuff.

Q—What openings were there to allow big crates to be moved into this second floor?

A—There were openings, but no heavy crates were ever put there.

Q—On the ground floor there were what goods?

A—Not a great deal; less than usual.

Q—Was the business so great this year that it had decreased the quantity of stock?

A—No, it was not, but for the last month or six weeks prior to the accident the men were instructed not to open any unnecessary cases.

Q—Where were the crates which were brought in left?

A—They were kept at the freight sheds and on floors in the back warehouse.

Q—What goods were on the floors over Hamilton & Long's store?

A—On the top floor I think that two tons of goods would be carried over Hamilton & Long's store.

Q—How much over the front part of Reid's?

A—I do not know.

Q—What would be the whole weight carried there at any time?

The Entire Weight.

A—Thirty to forty or fifty tons on the third floor.

Q—Why did you once carry heavy goods over Hamilton & Long's store and not at this time?

A—I do not know.

Q—Where were the heavy goods taken to from over Hamilton & Long's store when they were moved?

A—They were taken back over the office and rear of the building.

Value of Stock.

Mr. McLean was then called.

Q—What was the value of stock usually carried by W. J. Reid & Co.?

A—It fluctuated from $25,000 to $40,000 worth, but we only took stock in January of each year.

Q—Where would this stock be distributed in the Dundas street house?

A—All over.

Q—The other warehouse also contained some during the past couple of years?

A—The Ann street warehouse was full at the time of the disaster.

Q—Was there another warehouse?

A—Yes, the London Drug Company's warehouse.

Q—What goods were there?

A—Crates.

Q—What was the total value of the stock on hand at the time of the disaster?

A—I do not know.

Q—The stock in the Ann street warehouse had been increased lately, had it?

A—Yes, it had.

Mr. Gilbert Glass.

Mr. Gilbert Glass, who was an employee of W. J. Reid & Co., was the next witness. He did not know anything of the disposal of the goods on the ground and first floors. He did not know whether any goods were taken from these floors to the upper floors. He was employed in the retail department. The store was burnt once since he has been in the employ of Mr. Reid—in 1897. The fire was confined to the second floor, and burned the roof off. It did not affect the Hamilton & Long part at all. The store was built 34 years ago. He was of the opinion that only about one-third the usual stock was carried at the time of the disaster.

Mr. William Lanahan.

Mr. William Lanahan was also an employee of W. J. Reid & Co., having been in charge of the top floor. He was on the top flat at the second pillar, about 28 feet from Dundas street, and near the east side, when the disaster occurred. The opening was to the rear and south of him.

Q—What did you notice first?

A—I heard a rumbling noise over Hamilton & Long's store.

Q—What did you do?

A—I was with Loney, and called on him to run, as the wall was falling in.

Q—What next?

A—I ran, and noticed the floor caving under me as I ran. The whole building seemed to be moving to the east.

Q—The rumbling noise was in Hamilton & Long's store.

A—Yes; I thought it was.

Q—Did you receive any new goods on that floor?

A—Nothing except one barrel two weeks before the accident.

Q—Were goods shipped out?

A—Yes, constantly.

Mr. Edward Pinel.

Mr. Edward Pinel was order clerk for W. J. Reid & Co. He was accustomed to go all through the building, and was of the opinion that only about one-third of the usual stock was carried. He was on the second floor, on a ladder, above Hamilton & Long's, against the west wall, when the crash occurred. He just heard some dishes fall. He noticed the jugs on the shelves leaning toward the east. He hurried along the west wall, and had to hold on to prevent himself going down with the floor. The east wall and floor were moving east. He did not know what timbers gave way first.

Mr. Herbert Collamore.

Mr. Herbert Collamore was a traveler for W. J. Reid & Co. He visited the store on the Saturday before the disaster. He was up on the second and third floors, and was of the opinion that the stock was only about one-third the usual amount.

Mr. William Brett, a farmer of London Township, was in Gurd's store at the time of the accident, and saw the building fall over into the street.

Mr. Alex. Skelton was in front of The Advertiser building just before the accident. He heard a rumbling noise, and looking up, saw the Reid building bulge out above the ground floor and crash into the street.

Other Witnesses.

Mr. Archibald Sharpe was opposite Reid's store when the crash happened. He heard the rumbling noise, and looking up saw the whole building crash eastward. He did not know the cause of it.

Mr. Samuel Logan was in Hamilton & Long's store just prior to the accident, and was talking to Mr. Long. He went across the street. When in front of Brock's store, he heard a noise, and turning round, saw the front wall above the first story bulge out, and the top fall in. He did not see the east wall.

Employee of Hamilton, Long & Co.

Mr. Alfred Gifford, an employee of Hamilton & Long's, was at work at the time of the disaster.

Q—What did you hear first?

A—I heard a grinding noise at the west wall.

Q—Where were you?

A—About fifteen feet from the end, and about seven feet from the west wall.

Q—What did you see first?

A—A brick fell out some distance north of where I was standing in the west wall.

Q—How far north?

A—About 6 or 7 feet farther north; about 21 feet from the south wall.

Q—Where did it come out?

A—Out near the ceiling.

Q—There used to be a stairway there. It was taken out by Mr. Smerles by arrangements with Mr. Hamilton. Did the brick come out near that stairway?

A—I really could not say.

Q—What did you next see?

A—Two bricks fell out, and then the whole wall started to fall.

Q—What did you do next?

A—I turned to run, but was struck on the head, and remembered no more.

Saw the Crash.

Mr. W. J. McLeod, of East London, was opposite the Reid building, and 50 feet west, when the disaster happened.

He heard a noise, and looking up, saw the roof cave in before the front wall came out.

Q—Did you see the roof fall in?

A—Yes.

Q—Did you see the back part of the roof fall in?

A—Yes, I did; just as plain as day. It fell in.

Mr. McKillop—I must say, I cannot imagine how a man could see a roof on a four-story building fall in.

Q—Well, I saw it all right. The center wall fell to the east, and the front wall crashed down. The east wall went down nearly the same time as the center wall, but appeared much stronger. The roof fell in first. This concluded the evidence until tonight.

What a Pity

That ambitious people, through hard work, invariably neglect health—it is pitiful to look into their pale, tired faces and see plainly written there the evidence of transgressed law.

The penalties of overwork are as easily seen as they are hard to bear—sleepless nights—tired mind and body—heart that flutters and cause all sorts of uncomfortable feelings.

Happily, if these symptoms have not been so long established as to be chronic, "Ferro-China" will cure them.

Its mode of action is very simple. Its curative power, very great. It makes people eat more because it creates the wholesome feeling of hunger.

If you want strength and endurance, use Ferro-China—it will give it to you. No other tonic is so full of nutriment and strength-making properties. Given one 5c box will prove its enormous merits. Try Ferro-China.

In a Dangerous Place.

A—I was about 10 or 15 feet from the floor which went down on the third floor in the crate room, back over the offices.

Q—What did you see happen first?

A—The first I noticed was a part of the front of a bin breaking away about the middle of the third floor.

Q—How far back were you?

A—I was about 15 feet in the rear of the Hamilton & Long store, and in about the center of the Reid store.

Q—Again, what was it that you saw fall first?

A—What I saw fall first was a loose piece of the facing of a bin.

Q—Then what happened?

A—That attracted my attention, and then there was nothing moved for 3 or 4 seconds. Then everything seemed to go to the east.

Q—Which part went down first?

A—I could not tell that.

Q—Could you see all over the front part of the store?

BRITT OUTFIGHTS BATTLING NELSON; DANE ALMOST OUT IN TWENTIETH

Fast and Pretty Contest, in Which 'Frisco Boy Shines.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—Jimmy Britt, of San Francisco, last night gained the decision over Battling Nelson, of Hegewisch, Ill., at the end of twenty rounds of as fast and pretty fighting as has been seen in San Francisco in many years. At no time was either man in danger of a knockout until near the end of the last round, when Britt's right and left swings, and uppercuts, which he landed one after another at will on Nelson's face, all but put the Dane down and out.

Nelson did the greater part of the leading from start to finish, but he was outdone by Britt in cleverness, ring generalship, and everything but game sense and ability to take punishment.

Referee Welch, after announcing his decision, gave Nelson only two rounds out of the twenty, the second and the seventh.

By his game fight Britt wiped out finally the aspersions that some former battles had placed upon him. He showed that keeping away from his adversary is the chief part of his generalship. His defense showed up better than ever before, and he found his man almost at will, and from the top of the opening gong to the end of the last round, there was no lack of steers in his blows. If anything, he showed up stronger in the last five rounds than in the first fifteen, while in the last half of the fight, Nelson's hitting powers obviously diminished.

While Britt took no foolish chances, he gave Nelson plenty of close quarter opportunities to put him out, if the Battler had been able to land. Nelson disappointed many of his admirers by his wildness. In the last eight or ten rounds, he swung with right and left for the face, scores of times, and missed by a small margin.

Britt made the following statement after the fight:

"I have not been going around two years claiming that I was Nelson's master, and not making any cry as is the custom of defeated fighters. I bided my time, and the results you see. I never drew a long breath. I am willing to meet any 133-pound man in the world."

Nelson was seen in his dressing-room. He said:

"I have no excuses. Britt fought a good fight, but, at that, I think he won in the last round. I think I ate too much supper. They can't say I went the pace and lost. I did my best."

SONOMA GIRL IN HOLLOW STYLE

Highball Gone Lame—Mare Wins the 2:15 Trot at Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., July 31.—The contest set for today between Sonoma Girl and Highball in the 2:15 trotting event, which promised a breaking of records, drew to the grand circuit meet the largest crowd that has witnessed the light harness trotting at the Glenville oval in many years.

Unfortunately Highball was lame and had to be drawn out. As a result Sonoma Girl obtained a hollow victory; there being no other starters which could force her to her usual speed, much less a better record. She jogged around the track, and was first under the wire in three straight heats. Her best time was 2:06½. Gentle H., a Buffalo entry, secured second money, and Clary Latus third.

Thornway was the only favorite of the day to lose. Alice Pointer, the second choice, won the first race of the day, the 2:11 pace. She turned the trick in straight heats, winning easily. Second money went to Thornway. The best time, 2:05½, is a new record for Alice Pointer.

Ed. Geers, who drew the distance flag three times Tuesday, won the third race, the 2:05 pace, today, with Ardelle, the Memphis pacer, which won the Chamber of Commerce stake in 1906. The mare won handily.

In the 2:08 trot the feature was the reappearance of John Spaul, the veteran reinsman, on the grand circuit. He drove Bisford, which finished fifth in each heat. The track was in excellent condition.

There will be five races Thursday, the stake race for 3-year-old trotters being the feature. Summary:

THE C. A. A. U. DEAD, SAYS FEDERATION

Latter and American Union Unite to Control Athletics in America.

Montreal, July 31.—The Star today has the following in regard to the Canadian amateur athletic war: The Canadian Amateur Athletic Union is dead. The Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada is at present the reigning athletic body of Canada.

This was arranged at a meeting held at Jamestown, Virginia, on Friday last. The arrangement was confirmed at a meeting held in New York last night. The only real Canadian athletic championships will be held in Montreal on the M. A. A. grounds, on Sept. 21 next. They will be held under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada.

All the prominent athletes belonging to the American Amateur Athletic Union of the United States have acknowledged the Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada as the governing body in Canadian athletics. The Amateur Athletic Union of the United States has solemnly broken its alliance with the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union and does not recognize it any longer as a governing body in athletics.

The M. A. A. A. has sent its entries for the American athletic championships at Jamestown to take place Sept. 6 and 7, and they have been accepted. The Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada, as becometh a victorious power, will act generously with clubs who have not thus far joined them and will not continue the dog-in-the-manger policy of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union.

Any athlete who can prove that he is an amateur, whether he belongs to a federation club of a C. A. A. U. club will be permitted to enter for the Canadian championships.

WILSON IS FINED

For the Pulling Up of Aileen Wilson in 2:10 Pace.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 31.—With a crowd of over 5,000 in attendance at the second day's meeting of the Short Ship Circuit, the interest was even greater than on the opening day. The betting was heavy, one man winning $1,000 on the favorite in the first race, all the favorites were winners. Allen Wilson taking the 2:10 pace; Lady Hilda winning the 2:17 pace, and Just Trot running first in the 2:17 trot. While the finishes were all good the result was never in doubt in the last two races.

In the 2:10 pace, Wilson, the driver of Aileen Wilson, was fined $100 for pulling his horse in the third heat of the 2:10 pace. In the fourth heat of the same race, Robert Kernan collided with Ruth Wildman, his sulky catching the shaft on Ruth's sulky. Ruth Wildman had to quit at the first quarter, throwing her driver, Harrison, out of the sulky. However, Ruth was given third place and came in for part of the money. The summary:

First race, 2:10 pace; purse $2,000.
Allen Wilson (Wilson)..... 1 1 1
Hal R. (Hedricks)..... 2 2 2
Ruth Wildman (Harrison)..... 3 3 3
Pure Gold (Jones)..... 4 4 4
Time: 2:08½, 2:09½, 2:07½, 2:10, 2:11½.

Second race, 2:17 pace; purse $500.
Lady Hilda (Roche)..... 1 1 1
Nell Ball (Boone)..... 2 2 2
Royal Line (Jones)..... 3 3 3
Minkfort Boy (Johnson)..... 4 4 4
Time: 2:13½, 2:10½, 2:12½.

Just Trot, 2:17 trot; purse $500.
Just The Thing (Pathan)..... 1 1 1
Bussy (Hood)..... 2 2 2
Glen H. (Colby)..... 3 3 3
Athel (Burns)..... 4 4 4
Time: 2:16½, 2:14½, 2:15½.

New York, July 31.—Winners today at Brighton Beach were Zienap, Buckham, Racine, He Knows, Wartime and Beardsall.

Tom Longboat's shoes and money were stolen in Ottawa. Being simple-pure amateur the loss of the shoes would be the more serious.

The Shamrocks are sore on Toronto because they were not officially welcomed to that fair city, and also sent away with a band. Well, the Tecumsehs are much sorer, and can explain it easily. Look at the cracked ribs.

Dr. Jack, the fast little pacer, driven by Dr. D. C. Tennant, at the matinee races, was sold yesterday to Dr. Henry for a good figure. He will be sent to the races probably starting in the 2:50 class, at Toronto next month. This colt is a good one, with a fine turn of speed and good manners. He ought to take down some money. In Dr. Henry's hands he ought to do well, as he is a capable horseman.

The Toronto ball team will play at the Island next year. Hope they do not shoot the chutes when they hit that place.

The Montreal papers are emitting weird wails because of the alleged discourtesy of Tecumsehs to Shamrocks on Saturday. It appears, the Indians did not send a case of ginger ale to the Irish dressing room after the game. But then how could they when that dressing room was surrounded by thousands of cheering Irishmen, through which it would have taken heavy artillery to clear a passage. Then again, it is charged that the Shamrock players were refused admission to the dock for a time and compelled to stand out among the crowd. This is true, but it was the Shamrock followers and not the men in charge of the gates, who were to blame. The latter were willing to admit the players, but refused to take in the hundreds of Irishmen behind them. At that the first Tecumseh official who came along arranged for their admission by a side gate, but even then the camp-followers came along and rushed the gate.—Toronto Telegram.

TIGERS LOSE A VERY CLOSE GAME

Detroit's Are Now Tied for Second Place With Cleveland.

New York, July 31.—Gigantic George Mullin's efforts to lead the Tigers to another victory today over the New Yorks went to waste, because of a slight let-down and lack of aim in the fourth inning, when as committed two of his three pitching breaks and allowed two of the three hits made off him, the resultant combination bringing the locals two runs.

Eustace Newton, receiving valuable and errorless aid from seven of his eight supporters, twisted a knot in the tail of the Tigers and almost shut out the fast travelers from Michigan.

His work was just a mite better than Mullin's, though the hits were even. But the Highlanders got two of their safeties in a round where Mullin issued a pass and made a wild pitch, while the Detroiters could not hit together, and only once were able to lump a gift of Newton's with one of their drives and an error of the left-hander's support.

But the Tigers finished strongly and the game was not decided until O'Leary flung to Rickey in the ninth for the 27th put-out, leaving Schaefer, who ran for Rossmann, on third.

Until Newton, with two down in the third, came to bat, Mullin appeared to be the job of the beating Cy Young's stunt of pitching a hitless game, and allowing no one to reach first. He had two strikes and three balls on the returned prodigal, who once vowed he would never pitch again for Griffith, who retailed again by saying he would not get another chance, and Payne tallied a third foul strike. This may have unsettled Bill Taff No. 2, for he passed Newton and began the fourth round by walking Conroy.

These were the only hits given by Mullin during the day, and though the first one was non-productive, the second turned out to be a fatal presentation. Chase singled to right, the first swing off Mullin, and George, in trying to fan Williams, made a wild pitch. Jimmy then grounded to short, and Conroy scored. Laporte doubled to left and Chase tallied the run that was destined to beat the Tigers.

The third and last swing off Mullin came in the eighth, a single to center by Thomas, and though Ira was sacrificed to second by Newton, Mullin caught him napping at the midway station. Outside of the third, fourth and eighth, not a local saw base, but it was not necessary, considering the happenings in the fourth episode.

Except in the fourth, fifth and eighth, the Detroiters got men on in every session, four innings being piled open by the first batter reaching first. But the Tigers went scoreless until the seventh, Payne, second baseman, being hit. O'Leary singled and Mullin, trying to pull out his own game, rapped into what should have been a double play. The throw from Williams to Conroy forced O'Leary, but trying for a dual execution, Wild fired over Chase's head, and Payne reached in. Not one of Detroit's left-handed batters was able to place the ball safely. Donovan will pitch tomorrow, and Jennings is sure of taking the rubber contest.

FANS ROASTING POOR GRIFFITH

Say He Had Good Chance to Get Cobb and Didn't.

New York, July 31.—It is evident from yesterday's game that the Yankees do not like southpaws. For that reason Mr. Slever will be called upon to officiate in one of the remaining games. Cobb's great work has the fans here going. They yelled at Griffith yesterday, reminding him that he might have had this young man on his team. But though Griffith tried hard he never had a chance to capture the lad last spring. The New York manager would give about half his team for Cobb and Mullin, but he knows it is useless to try for them.

For a losing team, the Yankees certainly draw the crowds. Six thousand persons saw them whipped yesterday. Davy Jones is hitting in hard luck again. Laporte's capture of his long drive to right was an accident, pure and simple, and Davy was so disgusted that he could only squeak.

Jennings has reserved a box seat for each of the games. He works out with his men until the game time, and then slips away to the clubhouse and dresses. The particular box that he occupies is so close to the Detroit bench that Hughes can converse with each of his players, and they all walk close to him as they go to the bat to hear his words of advice. Jennings coaches in a mild way from this point of vantage.

British Journalists London's Guests; City Dines Distinguished Party

The Visiting Newspapermen Entertained at the London Club.

Piccadilly! Pall Mall! Oxford! St. James! Grosvenor! Cheapside! When these streets were announced as the car-borne British journalists whizzed through the city last night, a smile of content could be noticed on their faces, as they settled comfortably back, feeling at last perfectly at home in a strange country.

The party, representing the leading provincial papers of England, Ireland and Scotland, arrived in the city on the 6:30 p.m. Grand Trunk train. They were at once taken in hand by the reception committee of the city council, and driven to the London Club, for luncheon. The delegation consisted of:

Mr. David L. Crompt, Dundee Advertiser, etc.; Mr. W. Longstaff, Newcastle Chronicle; Mr. M. Attenborough, Manchester Guardian; Mr. W. Rowley Ellison, East Anglian Daily Times (Ipswich); Mr. W. Redwood, Western Daily Press (Bristol); Mr. J. T. Dunford, Bridgewater Mercury; Mr. A. H. Powell, Evening Dispatch (Birmingham); Mr. C. W. Starmer, Northern Echo (Darlington); Mr. B. McKenney, Belfast Telegraph; Mr. H. J. Elliott, of the London Times Washington staff; Mr. Jos. Cooke, Sheffield Independent.

Harry Charlton, advertising agent of the Grand Trunk, W. J. White, inspector of the United States agencies for the Dominion Government, and Cy Warman, the author, were also of the party.

At 8:30 o'clock the visitors sat down to the banquet with about 40 citizens, including the members of the city council reception committee, Mr. Samuel Stevely, president of the board of trade, former President Arthur White, and a number of local journalists.

The Mayor Welcomes.

Mayor Judd, acting as toastmaster, started that part of the evening.

In proposing the toast to "The Press," he extended warm welcome to the visitors on behalf of the citizens. The only thing he personally regretted was that they were unable to remain longer in the city. Senator Coffey first responded as follows:

Until recent years we were all firm believers in the truth of the familiar saying, "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." My fellow-countryman, Mr. Dooley, has made a change in this, which more truly accords with present conditions. He said one day to his friend Hennessy: "The hand that rocks the fountain pen is the hand that rules the world."

I heartily concur in the words of welcome extended our distinguished visitors by his worship the mayor. Indeed, speaking for the members of the press of this city, I may claim that our words of greeting are all the warmer, because we recognize in our guests, men engaged in a profession similar to our own—men connected with the highest type of journalism—men whose work counts for much in the molding of thought which will be for the betterment of mankind. It is always a source of gratification to Canadians to meet the visitors from the old land and to compare notes. Beyond the ocean you have tight little islands with a teeming population. On this side we have a well-nigh boundless territory with large spaces between man and man. You are rich in the storied past, we are rich in the glories of the future, holds out for us. You are rich in garnered wealth—we are rich in nature's bounty. We may not have reciprocity in matters commercial, but we may have reciprocity in good fellowship and the freest intercourse. While you may send us your men of greatest minds and your most noted statesmen, we will send our Lauriers and Fieldings and Strathconas and Tupper to return the call.

The Canadian visiting the old land will take pleasure in tracing the footsteps of the men who have made English history; and in holiday-time may revel in spots made famous by a Pickwick, a David Copperfield, a Little Nell or a Little Dorrit—twin angels of Dickens' glorious thoughts.

When you come to see us we will take you over the ground made sacred by the blood of the Jesuit missionaries who blazed a pathway for Christianity centuries ago in an unbroken wilderness, and we will introduce you to the habitations of a noble people, more French than the French of old France, and judging by their attachment and loyalty to England, as British as the man from the Strand, and about whom

HAPPY BEACHERS AT PORT

Idlewild Cottage Entertains Hard-Timers With Music and Dance.

Port Stanley, July 31.—Idlewild Cottage, Orchard Beach, that occupied by Miss A. Byrne, of Hamilton, was in festive array last evening, when lights glowed from every window and Japanese lanterns, adorned the piazza, casting a fairylike glow over a happy throng of seventy or more young folks. Miss Edna Pulver was the happy young hostess, the occasion being that of a "hard-time" and fancy dress party. On the arrival of the evening train a large procession of hard-timers formed at the depot and started to march for Orchard Beach. En route the parade made several pauses before the various cottages and gave brief concerts. When at last Idlewild Cottage was reached, the fun was at its height and remained so until the wee hours of the morning. On the wide veranda, a buffet luncheon was served between the dances. A July moon, the soft breeze off Lake Erie, and inviting music within, made the evening one to be remembered by the beachers of Port Stanley.

Among those noticed from neighboring towns were: Messrs. King, Court-right, Hutchison, Bell, Jennings, Messrs. Adkins, Smith and Green, St. Thomas; Messrs. E. Banks, Dr. Walsh, C. Fraser and Misses Ward, Clarke, Turnbull, and Belton, of London; Messrs. Stratton, McMurray, McKee, of Misses Clappison and McKee, of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Black, New York; Misses Torry, Brantford; Misses Hayde and O'Connor, of Rochester, N. Y.

During the evening Teddy Banks, as "Donald MacDonald," and Roy Walsh, as "Wee Macgregor," favored the company with a sword dance.

The steamer Gordon Brown ran a well-attended excursion to Port Burwell yesterday.

Miss Winnie Woodward, of London, is the guest of Dr. Wyckoff's mother at Terrace Cottage, Erie Rest.

The dance at Hill Crest tonight was well attended, especially by Londoners. Robert Linke, the very capable manager of the hill, says advertising pays, for since he started using The Advertiser as a means of communication with the public his hops have been most successful.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL INDORSES

was decided to open union shops at several points throughout the city to accommodate those who wish to throw their lot in with the strikers.

A list of the strikers was made out, and each assigned to work in a certain shop. The men state that they will have an abundance of chairs and will be able to put on a splendid service to meet the rush on Saturday.

Several of the master barbers who have signed the agreement will have extra chairs put in their shops, and they will be manned by the strikers. Several of the strikers spoke at last night's meeting, and commended the gentlemen in which the strike was being carried on. They exhorted the men to keep up the struggle.

Master Barbers Firm.

On the other hand the master barbers are quite certain that the men cannot win. They say that they cannot pay the men any more money than they have been paying them. If the men agree to their terms they will take some of them back—that is, if their places have not been filled by outsiders, whom they are bringing in from other places.

There is one thing, however, which they will refuse to do, they say, and that is recognize the union in the future.

Some of the barbers have stated that they will never allow a union card to be hung up in their shops, again.

Says Strike Is Over.

While speaking with an Advertiser reporter this morning one of the most prominent master barbers said:

"So far as we are concerned, the strike ended on Saturday night last, and we purpose to go on as if nothing had happened."

Several of the employers have sent to other places for men to take the chairs, and we expect that by Saturday all the chairs in the city will be manned, by competent journeymen barbers, and that we will be able to meet the demands of the public."

The Union Shops.

Speaking of the shops which were now exhibiting the union card, the same barber said:

"The shops in which the union card is flying are very much to be commended, and, in my opinion, they are conducted either by men who have perhaps a helper or apprentice working under them, or by two men who are in partnership. I think that I can safely say that not one of the shops in the city with the union sign in the window, hires a man. So far as trade goes, we are getting all we want, and are confident that we will always be in that happy position."

CAUGHT IN A MACHINE

Mr. Thomas Walsh, of York Street, Is Able To Be at Work Again.

Mr. Thomas Walsh, a cooper, employed by the London and Petroleum Barrel Works, has returned to work after having been off a week through an accident which fractured a couple of his ribs.

Mr. Walsh while at work was caught in a machine which whirled him around several times, until the apron he wore gave way and freed him.

ed the passing of not a few great Englishmen among them Gladstone, Randolph Churchill and Lord Salisbury. He has listened to and reported on the great debates of the past years, and the debates on the South African war, and other history-making struggles.

He was asked about Mr. Chamberlain.

"I am afraid that Chamberlain's day has passed," he answered. "He seems afflicted with some sort of paralysis, the nature of which no one seems to know. From time to time come reports that he is getting better, and that he would return to the House of Commons shortly, but he has not yet done so. For his own sake it may be better that he should never come back. They have come back, many of the great men of the age, but the last days were not their best days. Some of the most pitiable sights I have witnessed in my time have been those of great men who have tried, too late, to take their places in the moving events of the time these exhibitions have been pitiable, I have said. I hope to see Chamberlain spared that. He is an old man now and his day has passed."

"How are the Canadians doing in the British House of Commons?" was asked.

"They are doing well. Canadian subjects are discussed with much more intelligence than formerly, and we are indebted to them for that information. We have several men in the House who have been in Canada several times, and they are also well acquainted with our country. Hamar Greenwood, Sir Gilbert Parker and the Hon. Edward Blake are strong men. I hope that Mr. Blake is anxious to retire. He has been in rather poor health of late, but his constituents would not allow him to retire."

British Tourists Will Come.

"There will be a great number of tourists come to Canada shortly," declared Mr. Dunford, of the Bridge-water Mercury. "The wealthier class of British will prefer to come here rather than go to the continent, as they do now, when they leave of the splendid facilities in this country for sight-seeing. What little we have seen is magnificent, and I am anticipating with a great deal of pleasure our trip through the Rockies. Travelers have told me that the scenery there is grander even than that of the Alps. Then there is the Muskoka region and other holiday places. As soon as the wealthy Britisher realizes the beauty of this country, I fancy he will come here for his holidays. The trip across the ocean only takes a few days now, and it would be enjoyable also. I see a great future for Canada in this particular."

Wants to See Cobalt.

"I am anxious to see Cobalt," said another member of the party. "We have heard a very great deal of the mines in that region, and some of our people have invested quite heavily in them. They cannot understand why the stocks have fallen so low, if the wealth claimed to be there really exists. I want to assure myself of the existence of the wealth. There should be some way of preventing the stock jobbing that has been done in connection with Cobalt stocks."

"In some ways we are ahead of you," said A. H. Powell, of Birmingham, Evening Dispatch, "but in other respects you are vastly superior to us. Your cities are better than ours, and our country towns are much superior. It is more respectable, I might say, idyllic. Your people lack that repose. You have not had time for that yet, you are busy making a nation. That will come later. When

It does come Canada will be a wonderful nation."

"When I go through this country, or any other of the British colonies, I wonder at our little nation," said a member of the party. "England and Ireland and Scotland could be dropped into Lake Superior and lost completely. Yet the people of that little isle have colonized Canada and Australia, given India a Government, established peace and prosperity in South Africa, and retained its position as the greatest power on earth. It is a refreshing thought."

Pleased With London.

Mr. Elliston, of the Ipswich, Eng. Times, is not only a journalist, but a barrister, a member of the city council and a militia officer. "I have been struck by the type of workingmen's homes here," he said. "It is delightful to see them with their lawns and gardens instead of rows of tenements."

Mr. Dunford, of the Bridgewater, Eng. Mercury, was delighted to meet so many Devonshire men on his trip. He had a long chat with Ald. Gerry about the famous county which gave them birth.

Scotchmen Look to Canada.

Mr. Crompt, of the Dundee Advertiser, and People's Journal, which has a circulation of 250,000, says that Canada is very much in the public eye in Scotland. "I don't know about your immigrants from other countries, but you are getting the very best that Scotland can give. Of course, the loss of population is regretted in many quarters, but the migration to Canada can no more be stopped than a tidal wave."

All the correspondents say their welcome has been most cordial wherever they have been in Canada. They cannot praise too highly the courtesy of the Grand Trunk officials, and expressed surprise at seeing so much of the Grand Trunk system in Canada double-tracked.

The party left at 11:30 a.m. on the Grand Trunk for Detroit. They will be entertained in Windsor this afternoon, going for a ride up the Detroit River in the evening. A large party, including Senator Coffey, Mayor Judah, Ald. Stevely, Ald. Gillespie, Ald. Cooper, City Engineer Graydon, Chief Clerk, T. H. Purdon, K. C., and others were present and gave them rousing cheers as their train pulled out.

PERSONAL MENTION

Miss Alma Grigg, of Bruce street, is visiting in Toronto.

Mr. C. J. Allen leaves today on an extended trip to the Pacific coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ching, of Boulder, Colo., are visiting in this city.

Mr. W. A. Finch, of 33 Becher street, city, is on a visit to his brother, H. N. Finch, Carman, Man.

Miss Sarah Dixon, of Toronto, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. E. Osborne, 78 Albion street, West London.

Mr. Jack Winter, of West London, and Miss Ella Lewis, of Hyde Park, paid a flying visit to West Lorne last week.

Mr. Henry Mann, of Lambeth, has returned home from Walton, N. Y., where he was attending the funeral of his sister.

Miss Frances Tremaine is convalescent after her recent illness, at St. Joseph's Hospital. She is at present touring the great lakes.

Miss Sarah Clark, of Cleveland, O., is holidaying with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. D. Andrews, 12 Alexander street, West London.

Miss Annie Lamond and Miss Maggie Fraleigh have just returned home, after visiting friends in Toronto and Hamilton, and spent a most enjoyable holiday.

BIG INCREASE

Customs Returns for July $33,659 72
Greater Than for July, 1906.

Customs returns for the month of July show a big increase over the same month last year.

This year $102,361 13 was received, while in 1906 only $68,701 41 passed through the customs house.

The increase amounts to $33,659 72.

FIERCE FIGHTING IN LODZ STREETS

Troops and Strikers Clash, and Scores of the Latter Are Shot Down.

Lodz, Aug. 1.—This city is again the scene of a strike movement, accompanied by violence, disorder and death. The troops have encountered the strikers in the center of the town, and some thirty men have been killed or wounded in this fight alone. Business is at a standstill, and fears are entertained of what the day may bring forth. The trouble came to a head here in spite of the aggressive stand taken by the authorities. The disorders are recommending early this morning, as this dispatch is filed.

Struck by Stone.

A young son of Mr. Barker, of the Hamilton road, near Rectory street, was struck on the head by a stone thrown by a 14-year-old boy on Tuesday, and had his scalp split. He is recovering rapidly.

BOWLING AT AYLMER

LONDON AND DISTRICT

—Rev. W. J. Clark, of Westmount, Que., former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, this city, is spending his vacation in London. His family will move to Montreal in September.

—The gentlemen who were good enough to take up the subscriptions at the Victoria Park gates at last Friday evening's band concert, are requested to officiate in the same capacity this evening.

—Mr. Eddie Johnston, of the Toronto office, C. P. R., has been transferred from Toronto back to the city ticket office of the C. P. R. His many friends will be glad to see him at his old post under Mr. Fulton.

—About 300 florists, including their families and friends, picnicked at Springbank yesterday afternoon. A good outing was enjoyed, and a programme of games and sports added greatly to the pleasant nature of the affair. Baseball was among the features.

—Many West Nissourians held a picnic at Springbank yesterday afternoon and spent a most enjoyable time. Such a success was the outing that it has been decided to organize under a committee and hold a picnic each year. Regular programmes will be prepared.

Likes London.
Mr. A. D. Weller, of New York City, is spending a few days in London with his old friend and teacher, Mr. W. Francis Firth. Mr. Weller's name now appears as one of the directors of the Cottonwood Cane Company, a corporation formed for the purpose of handling the immense ores on one of the richest properties in the west. He expresses himself as being delighted with the city.

Flowers in Park.
The flower-beds in Victoria Park are making a brave display just now, and are well worthy of a visit and inspection. A particularly fine showing is a bed of tuberous begonias, just east of the greenhouse, of which Commissioner Pearce is justly proud. A star-shaped bed of the new Doyle geranium is also most conspicuous, while over near the Princess avenue gate a planting of hydrangea paniculata will be sure to add additional beauty to the many attractions of the park. Then there are the water-lilies in the pond. Every horticultural lover of aquatics praises Mr. John Paine, on every visit to the pond, for his efforts in having those beauties planted there. On the whole, Victoria Park never looked more attractive and pleasing than it does at present.

A Former Londoner.
Mr. George Summers, of Bloor street, Toronto, who lived in this city about 28 years ago, died at his residence on Monday last. The body was brought to this city on the 11 o'clock G. T. R. train yesterday morning, and was interred in Woodland Cemetery. Rev. W. L. Rutledge conducted the services.

Ended the Sport.
A certain young man hired a horse and rig from a local liveryman yesterday morning and began to visit the several thirt emporiums. After that he commenced to outdo John Gilpin in his merry ride. The liveryman heard of his doings and pursued the chap. He captured the young fellow on King street near Clarence and handed him a few jolts for fun, after which he took the rig away from him.

Another Stove Explosion.
Mrs. Left, wife of Samuel Left, who runs a grocery store on the corner of Matland and Nelson streets, was thinking of the evening meal yesterday afternoon at 3:30, and she ignited the gasoline stove.
At the same time, she also caused an explosion, for the stove went up in the air, and did a Highland fling around the room.

The firemen were summoned, and they arrived in time to prevent a serious fire. The loss will be about $25.

FRENCH LIFE IN LONDON PALACE
Scheme of M. Ernest Gerard's Syndicate Is Finally Accepted.

London, July 31. — Paris in London is to be realized after all. It is just about three years ago that the interest of London was aroused by the announcement which a powerful syndicate, at the head of which was M. Ernest Gerard, a French architect, had been formed to take a long lease of the greater portion of the island site at the south end of Kingsway thoroughfare, connecting the Strand with Holborn.

It was to be known as Paris in London, and was to consist of a magnificent palatial building containing Parisian shops, a Parisian cafe restaurant and a Parisian theatre.

London was delighted. Here was something which would help to wipe out the old London up and wipe out the charge of dullness and slowness which foreign visitors leveled against the old city. But it was not to be. The London county council was then mainly composed of a body of narrow-minded, so-called progressives, which is another name, and a very misleading name, for radicals.

"Paris in London! The horror of it!" cried the so-called progressives. And the scheme was thrown down and London was mightily disgusted.

Big Rental Offered.
Though soaked in some millions of debt, to pay interest on which ratepayers were being taxed more heavily year by year, those so-called progressives rejected the offer of an annual rental of more than $250,000 because they felt convinced, without even asking any questions at all as to how Paris in London was to be conducted, that highly moral London would be converted into a den of iniquity.

But the last election saw the so-called progressives overwhelmed by the indignant ratepayers, angry at the huge debt which has been piled up by a body of men who knew not how to handle money.

The council now consists of more competent and less narrow-minded men, and after standing idle nearly three years, a huge neglected garden of unsightly weeds, the crescent-shaped island site in the Strand, is to be built upon. The county council has accepted the offer of M. Gerard's syndicate, which is to pay an annual rental of $275,000 on a 99-year lease.

Building to Begin Soon.
Work of building Paris in London will be begun very soon, and in eighteen months to two years it is expected it will be in full swing. The palace will have a frontage of 650 feet on Aldwych. It will be surmounted by a dome, will be built of French stone, and the center of the building in particular will be two magnificent entrances.

There will be two main entrances, one off Aldwych, another off the Strand, the latter standing back from the street and being approached by a carriage way. The central building will be almost encircled by typical French shops, which will include that of the real Parisian retailer, who will sell those delicious cheap cakes which only French cooks can make.

The western wing will be occupied by a French theatre where only French plays and light operas will be performed all the year round. The feature of the ground floor and first floor will be a suite of rooms and galleries where a permanent exhibition of French arts and industries will be held.

On the top floor it is proposed to establish a club for the French colony in London. The other portion of the island site is to be occupied in a similar way by Canadian and other British colonial buildings, and all the buildings, taken together, are estimated to represent a property value exceeding $7,500,000.

A COWARD DEGRADED
New York Policeman Fled From Murderer With a Revolver.

New York, July 31.—A remarkable scene closely paralleling that memorable one in Paris when Captain Alfred Dreyfus was publicly degraded before the French army, was enacted in the trial room at police headquarters. For the first time in more than 30 years a patrolman had been adjudged guilty of cowardice. He is Stephen S. Walsh, who, according to the charge made against him last week, fled from an armed man who had shot and killed a woman.

The keen interest with which the unusual case was followed rose to a point of dramatic intensity when Police Commissioner Bingham, who had presided personally at the trial, announced in a voice choked with emotion that the charge against the unfortunate man had been proven. The commissioner turned to Inspector Richard Walsh, in whose district Stephen Walsh was a patrolman, but who is no relative of the dismissed man, and directed the inspector to strip Walsh of his shield and uniform buttons, so that he might not leave the trial room with the emblems of his former position as a policeman in good standing.

ing Stephen Walsh maintained his composure. Stephen Walsh was one of the two men against whom a charge of cowardice was made last week, when Frank Warner was permitted to escape after killing Walter Norling in Forty-second street. Before Warner was captured he shot and mortally wounded John C. Wilson and terrorized hundreds of persons. Patrolman Roosa, the officer whose name was coupled with that of Walsh in the cowardice charge, was exonerated after a full hearing before the commissioner. Walsh, when confronted with the man carrying the revolver, fled.

A CURE FOR FEVER AND AGUE.—Parma's Vegetable Pills are recommended for use in any climate, and they will be found to preserve their powers in any latitude. In fever and ague they act upon the secretions and neutralize the poison which has found its way into the blood. They correct the impurities which find entrance into the system through drinking water or food, and if used as a preventive fever is avoided.

The total consumption of tin in the United States for 1906 was 42,800 tons, with 2,132 tons in stock at the close of the year. The shipments from Bolivia show an increase of 3,000 tons, from Cornwall an increase of from 700 to 1,000 tons, and from Australia an increase of 1,000 tons, making the total European and American supply for the year about 33,550 tons.

CHOLERA MORBUS, cramps and kindred complaints annually make their appearance at the same time as the hot weather. Green fruits, cucumbers, melons, etc., and many persons are debilitated from eating these tempting things, but they need not abstain if they have Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial and take a few drops in water. It cures the cramps and cholera in a remarkable manner, and is sure to check every disturbance of the bowels. To the word "bore," when used to tell the gauge of shotguns, there attaches an interesting bit of history. In the days when rifle balls were spherical and long, cylindrical, conical headed bullets and rifled barrels were undreamed of, the gunsmith adopted a curious but convenient method of designating the gauge or diameter of the bore. He expressed it by stating how many bullets of the size that would fit a particular musket would go to make a pound. Thus a 10-bore musket would be one of such a bore that ten of its bullets would go to make a pound, weight; a 16-bore gun would be one whose bullets would run sixteen to a pound, and so on. Hence, the anomaly that the larger denomination musket has the smaller bore. Primary colors are the colors into which white light is separated by the dispersion of a prism. Those named by Newton are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. Artists reduce these to three—red, yellow and blue. Scientists generally hold red, green and blue to represent the primary color sensations, and in one theory there are supposed to be three sets of nerves in the retina which can respond to these three colors. The idea of three primary colors is that from the combination of these three all hues may be produced which are to be found in white light.
