Will Anyone Hold Him Back If He Threatens to Quit?

The Middlesex County Council has gone on record for the abolition of titles. The decision was unanimous. While the council is perfectly candid in electing its warden each year according to the political support of aspirants to the office, it is significant that on such a question there was not a voice raised to defend the bestowal of knighthoods and baronetcies, as Sir Robert Borden defended them to the point of threatening to resign at the last session. Liberal and Conservative farmers were a unit in expressing the general aversion of a democratic people to the empty favors of royalty bestowed frequently upon politicians and plutocrats, and seldom given for any service other than monetary or partisan service to a party.

It is doubtful if Canada has ever knighted anyone save a popular politician or a straight materialist. And all the popular politicians are not in the parties. They frequently are found crowding in the limelight in some role that gives them a bubble reputation. The materialists are usually great trust makers or railway builders. Canada also knights its servants in other roles so long as their party service is unimpeachable. It seldom considers Canadian poet or student as worthy of distinction. It does not offer its baubles to a labor man or a farmer or a good man who is doing something quietly but serving mankind rather than his political masters.

Titles are a noisome thing to all worthy of the name of Canadian. One can work into a fine rage about them, but it is not worth the trouble when the county councils are supplying the solid condemnation of the community. The city councils might follow suit and make it plain that the issue cannot be shelved or dodged at Ottawa. If Sir Robert Borden again should threaten to resign because of attacks on titles no one should hold him back. It might be an easy way out for Sir Robert, to resign and to pick out one of the gaudiest outfits in the showcase for himself. He has such a fine pair of calves.

Do Not Take the Easier Way; That Way Is Demoralizing

The police of Dawson City have just ordered a notorious gambler to leave town or spend six months in jail. Leaving Dawson City at this season means a five-hundred-mile hike to the nearest town over a blizzard and wolf-infested mountain and forest trail with a mean temperature of fifty below, yet without hesitation he chose this alternative. Instead of the easier he selected the icier way to expiate his sin. For him the cool of the arctic is more pleasing than an arctic "cooler."

Whatever his rascality may have been there is an attraction in this man. He has high courage, a good measure of dauntlessness. To him freedom out in the "big freeze" is preferable to the humiliating and cramping, if safe, cell. For him dangerous strenuousness rather than enervating idleness, action rather than stagnation, although he would probably express the feeling simply as a desire to keep out of jail. This is the sort of stuff of which V. C. men are made, and the others who drive through terrifying obstacles to success.

With most of us the reason for non-success is that we select the easier way. We dodge and evade the harsh task or duty, taking the sheltered and comfortable path. Our comings and goings and doings generally are under the direction of others just as in the case of the jailed. We lose the fine freedom of those who strike out for themselves, taking a chance of perishing in the adventure, but at least having a glorious experience. Shock troops are as necessary to the armies of peace as to the armies of war. They break the way. The feather-bed brigades are never called upon for that job. Thus many of us miss large-sized slices of glory as well as other more material gain. Theodore Roosevelt loved a combat for its own sake. When he couldn't pull off a fight with some boss or other pernicious influence he would pit himself against the most savage forms of nature. He went looking for trouble not because he was quarrelsome, but because he early discovered that only the truest, most enjoyable living was to be had in ceaseless activity that would not flinch at or sidestep the most daunting obstacle.

Mister Gambler's decision would have appealed powerfully to the great Rough Rider. We hope he wins through and if he does will Mr. Robert Service please write a poem about it? It would furnish fine reading for Young Canada.

Workers of United Kingdom Are Not Strong For the Reds

Alarming as are the strike disturbances in Belfast and Glasgow there are some reassuring and encouraging features. Whatever may be the further development up to date there has not been much for our red flag friends to cheer over.

As an instance of this take the great Belfast walkout. If the Bolsheviks have had a hand in this affair it has not worked out according to their usual schedule. Bolshevism if in control would have forcibly taken over all financial and industrial concerns, systematically looted and dis-franchised the middle classes, and deliberately precipitated civil conflict with the object of furnishing an excuse for their killings.

Instead of the bloody chaos they had hoped for we have a committee of the strikers taking control of Belfast and rigidly enforcing an orderly carrying on of the strike. Windows have been smashed and there have been some isolated looting and vandalism, but these are accompaniments of all strikes on a large scale.

At Glasgow, too, the Bolsheviks have been disappointed. The union leaders and the great majority of the rank and file have had nothing to do with the turbulence of the last week, and without their support Bolshevism can make little permanent headway. The agents of Russian anarchy and their deluded disciples in the United Kingdom have reckoned without the British passion for a decent, orderly securing of reform.

The British laboring classes are determined that they shall hereafter share more equally the advantages that have been largely the exclusive lot of privilege, but they propose to secure it by legitimate means, by co-operating with all other classes, not by seeking their destruction. That was the meaning of the recent electoral vote, when less than ten per cent of the candidates elected were of the extreme socialist element. At the polls it was made clear that parliamentary progression towards better conditions is the popular method of the Britisher, and that he wants nothing of the physical force doctrine of Lenin and Trotzky.

An American correspondent cabling of the Glasgow and Belfast rioting announces that the great social revolution of the British Empire has commenced. If he had been familiar with British political history in the slightest degree he would know that the social revolution of the United Kingdom has been progressing for years in the gradual but certain passing of power to the hands of the people and the steady betterment of conditions which follows.

The Britisher as he compares this orderly advance with the misery that has followed Bolshevik revolution cannot but decide that his way is the better one. The present exasperating troubles may spread to some extent, but it will not reach the stage of civil strife which would ensue were an attempt made to wipe out the present social structure by violent, illegal methods.

Public Should Not Be Given Merely Hole in the Doughnut

The Ottawa Journal, apropos of nothing but an ill-tempered mood, refers to The London Advertiser as "an uncompromising enemy of public ownership." We suppose The Advertiser knows as much about the matter as anyone else, and that some categorical statements will be necessary to refute such a claim. Here are the statements:

1. The Advertiser is neither an "uncompromising enemy" nor an enemy of any sort of the principle of public ownership.
2. The Advertiser believes that all natural monopolies should be controlled by the people. Street railway and telephone systems, lighting and gas and water supply companies might well be regarded as in this class.
3. The Advertiser believes that public ownership should be subject to the closest scrutiny and that financial and political control should be rendered impossible.
4. The Advertiser believes that the people should not be saddled with "enterprises" which failed under private ownership and made to give enormous sums to those who exploited the country and finally made the country pay the Bill—and the Dan, too.
5. The Advertiser believes, with the United Farmers, that when the country is offered a system it should see that it is paying for the doughnut and not for the hole.
6. The Advertiser believes that British or other capital invested in railway enterprises should be entitled to fair treatment and not be confiscated by the country.
7. The Advertiser believes that the country should not engage itself in the business of ruining institutions which have been built up in good faith and by honest methods.
8. The Advertiser believes that the great danger in public ownership lies in the creation of a political machine and the sinking of vast amounts of money in order to make an appearance of success which does not legitimately exist.
9. The Advertiser believes that such enterprises as the railways may be saddled on the country and prove to be ruinous unless the greatest skill of management and financing, removed from political influence, is practiced.
10. The Advertiser believes that apart from the natural monopolies there are other greater monopolies, by means of which prices are controlled, which are greater evils than the public service corporations. "Public ownership" may not be possible with these industries, but public control is highly necessary.

There are many other points which might be enumerated. London, for instance, in a short time will come to consider questions of public ownership. It should commence with those natural monopolies which provide service or commodities of the same order as streets and water and the various other institutions such as schools or hospitals.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A lot of scum is coming to the surface of the world's melting pot.

Nat Goodwin's fame will rest on a fifty-fifty basis, fifty for his matrimonial record and fifty for the merriment his genius invoked.

Twenty thousand dollars has just been paid for a painting. Such incidents tend to further inflame the desires of the turbulent to paint the world red.

Bernstorff says he agrees with many of the peace conference's proposals. That being the case it might be well for the delegates to go all over them again.

An American admiral calls the Versailles meeting a sewing circle. Well, you cannot beat a sewing circle for complete and thorough discussion of a subject.

Arnold Bennett says he cannot imagine any plainer speaking than has taken place at the Paris peace table. That shows he knows nothing of General Sam Hughes.

THE STORY LADY. By Claude Holden.

"Where did we leave off last time?
Oh, yes; well, Weenie Weenie saw the old witch coming, and hid in the trunk of the giant oak." A buzz sounded and Loretta had to break in on her story to give someone a connection, but she started in again almost immediately.

It was an odd thing to be telling stories to a little boy who had never even known, but Loretta did not let that interfere with her telling powers. She was a switchboard operator in the Robert's Big Stores. About five Saturday nights, before she had heard a little voice over the wire say:

"Please tell me a story, Miss Telephone Girl. There is nobody to tell Sonny Boy stories on Saturday nights when daddy isn't here."

It was the appeal in the little voice that got around Loretta's heart strings, so she started in telling him the stories she had told her own brother when he was that small—the brother that was now overseas fighting for his country. Interruptions were many, but Sonny Boy did not seem to mind them.

"Please tell me more," he would say when she finished one story, so soon Loretta had to resort to her imagination to find stories to tell him. It was by accident that he got her connection the first night, but she arranged with the central operators to put him on her line when he asked for the Story Lady. That was the name she told him to call her.

Once when her voice had grown tired Loretta asked Sonny Boy something about himself.

"I live with my daddy," he answered to her request for his father's name. "We're lonely, daddy and me. I haven't a mamma now. Daddy tells me stories every night, but Saturday nights, then he's away, but I like your stories, too."

"But your daddy doesn't know anything about me," Loretta had said in panic.

"Oh, yes, he does; I've told him about your stories. He knows the story of the Princess and the Roses, the bestest story. He tells it to me sometimes, too. He's going to find you and bring you to be my mamma. Where do you live, Story Lady, and why can't you talk to me other nights but Saturdays?"

"I am only here Saturday nights," she had answered.

"That's the nights daddy's away,"

TOMBOY TAYLOR — By Fontaine Fox

(Copyright, 1918.)

Mother discovered Tomboy Taylor actually playing with a doll.

he'll never find you." There had been a little pitiful note in the child's tone when he said this that touched Loretta. It dwelt with her and she thought of it often. She wondered if Sonny Boy's father would ever find her. Of course, she could find out who he was through the central operator, but she preferred to leave him remain a mystery. Somehow she felt like the princess who would not seek a prince, but love would bring the right one to her some day who would carry her off to the Land of Roses. She had waited so long for just such a prince herself, it seemed he would never come.

During the week Loretta planned new stories for Sonny Boy's Saturday night. She was too conscientious to neglect her work, but Forbes, the head floorwalker, took special note of the faraway look on her face, and remembered that he had a daughter at home who could do switchboard work, with the result that one pay day a note was inclosed in Loretta's envelope informing her that her services were dispensed with. She realized that Forbes was to blame for it, but was too proud to ask for an explanation.

To lose her position just at that season, when everything was dull, was particularly trying, but Loretta had a few dollars laid aside and tried to look upon the cheerful side of it. It meant that her stories to Sonny Boy would have to cease, the dream of his big broad-shouldered father and the home that needed a loving hand would have to fade forever. The thought of that was hardest of all to bear.

"Positions were few and far between," she found, but at last one came her way and a recommendation was asked the superintendent at Robert's for one, but remembered Mr. Roberts just in time. She had never spoken to him personally, but he had always been very nice over the wire. His voice had told her that he was a kind man and would treat her fairly. He had had experience with her in a business way to be able to recommend her for this other position, too. It was Saturday night—he would be in his office.

Loretta dodged past Forbes as she went through the store and up the stairs that led to the office. Mr. Forbes was in his private office. The waiting-room was brilliantly lighted. Coming out of a dark corridor into it Loretta felt for the time being, as if she had stepped into a new world.

There was a little boy of about five years huddled in the corner—a lonely looking little fellow just like Sonny Boy.

"Mam's came before he finished the story of the Princess and the Roses," a little voice sobbed. It was Sonny Boy. Loretta recognized his voice. She forgot everything else but the yearning that had been in her heart for months, as she took the little fellow in her arms. "Where did he leave off?" she asked as she brushed aside the tears.

Sonny Boy knew her at once. "Just where the prince was climbing the tower," he answered, after he had kissed her in delight. Loretta picked up the thread of the story and went on. Her voice raised just a trifle as she neared the end. "And the prince said, 'Now, I have found you!'" She paused a moment for breath.

"And will take you to the Land of Roses," finished a strange voice. Unseen, the private office door had opened and Mr. Roberts had entered. Loretta realized it for the first time. He was Sonny Boy's daddy.

"This is my Story Lady," Sonny Boy said in pride. "Isn't she pretty, daddy?"

No wonder Loretta stammered over the reason for her visit.

"I won't recommend you for that position," Mr. Roberts said when she had finished, and then when he saw her face fall, added, with a smile: "Because I have a much better one to offer you. What would you say to being Story Lady in the department I am going to open for the care of the children who come with their mothers who shop here? You will have complete charge of it all."

Sonny Boy looked on while she expressed her thanks for the kind offer and vowed the willingness to accept the position. "I thought you were going to bring my Story Lady home for my mamma," he interrupted.

"Hush!" his father said, in confusion, while Loretta tried to blush. Just as she was leaving, her face radiant with the prospect before her, she heard his father whisper, "Not now, Sonny, be patient for just a while."

"Just a while," she repeated to herself. "Dreams do come true, sometimes."

And so hers did.

Overcoming a Belt Difficulty with Extra Power

Price is not always the measure of a belt's ability. Several times we have prescribed Goodyear Extra Power Belting for drives where the highest-priced belts have failed—and Extra Power has made good.

The machine illustrated here is in the plant of the Pacific Coast Pipe Company, of Vancouver. The overhead belt is an 8 inch x 5 ply, Extra Power. The middle belt is a 4 inch x 4 ply, Extra Power. The end belt is an 8 inch x 5 ply, Extra Power.

"We are highly gratified over the success we have attained in the service given by your Extra Power.

"Our special machinery is so constructed that certain belt lives present an annoying problem. We could not get reasonable service from the belting referred to, due to slippage, and the consequent heat and belt destruction.

"That we are satisfied with Extra Power is evident in the fact that, since it has solved our difficulty, our entire plant is equipped with this very satisfactory form of transmission."

You will be interested in the reasons that have induced many plants to standardize on Goodyear Extra Power. You will be interested in the difficult drives Goodyear Extra Power has conquered. A belting man trained by Goodyear will bring you these facts, and he will offer his advice on your own drives. No obligation. Phone, wire or write the nearest branch.

THE BEAUTY OF BEADS

How Fashion Is Imitating the Indians in Ornaments That Harmonize With Prevailing Colors.

(By Madame Francis, Famous Creator of Fashions, New York City).

The Indians loved beads. This fact is evidenced in all the stories of the Indians with whom the early explorers and traders came in contact. The Indian frequently traded his most cherished possessions, including valuable lands, for these jewel-like spheres of color that to his people beauty.

We may not all be descended from some beautiful Pocahontas, but we do love beads, whether our ancestors came over in the early days or whether they crossed the "Big Water" in less ancient days, somewhere between the landing of the Mayflower and the late Kaiser period.

Beads are in as great demand as when Indian maidens, clad in beautifully beaded buckskin, roamed the woods of the forest primeval.

Street dresses of bronze and navy charm designed for spring wear show charming bits of embroidery in bronze and steel beads, while evening gowns are trimmed in lovely crystal beads of every hue. Frequently this jewel-like trimming is worked in with other imitation stones, such as turquoise or darker blue, suggesting lapis lazuli.

Rose Gowns With Coral. Rose gowns are trimmed in imitation coral beads with lovely effect. Silver and gold beads are also combined beautifully with rose or with black net.

Pale mauve and orchid are trimmed with amethyst crystals, or sometimes with the vivid blue of turquoise. All shades of green, from the verdant of the flag of the Emerald Isle to palest Nile are trimmed with emerald beads. Shades of old gold and sulphur are exquisite with the beads of topaz color or with those of gold. Black is strikingly trimmed with jet beads of every description. Occasionally this jet is varied with touches of vivid lapis lazuli blue. Pale pink is exquisitely fringed or embroidered with pinkish crystal, while many white gowns, particularly those of georgette crepe designed for winter resorts, are embroidered in dull white beads or sometimes combined with black. This combination is very striking.

Beaded tassels are much used. Sometimes they weight a sleeve drapery or hold the folds of a skirt at just the right angle.

Wooden beads are also used with charming effect on daylight dresses designed for spring and summer. These wooden beads come in beautiful colors, reseda green, Copenhagen blue, Pompeian red and royal purple. Wool cords run through these beads make pic-

The Fashion Forecast

Georgette crepe in Pekin stripes of rose and white, ochre and blue, yellow and pink, lavender and purple and blue and white will be made into effective afternoon gowns for wear with big hats accenting one of the stripes. These gowns will make picturesque spots in the landscape of winter beaches.

Crystal beads look their loveliest at night, reflecting as they do from each little prism a thousand points of light.

An especially beautiful evening gown of sea green velvet and chiffon is trimmed with emerald beads. It is difficult to say whether the lines or the coloring of this beautiful model contribute more to its success, certainly the combination of loveliness is unexcelled.

With Cloth of Silver. The underbody of this gown is of cloth of silver, with a suggestion of green in its weave that makes it look like the inner side of the crest of a wave about to curl over and break in the sun.

The sea green velvet of this gown is cut princess in line, with a deeply rounded bodice, which gives narrow shoulder straps. Under these straps run sea green net, which forms unusually graceful sleeves. This net runs squarely across the chest, but drops below the curve of the arm, showing the lovely lines of the shoulder, and then extends to the wrist. A line of emerald beads accents this very novel treatment of the décolleté and sleeves.

A tassel of emerald beads weighs this sleeve, or it may be permitted to swing in graceful swirls with the motion of the wearer.

A charming feature of this gown is found in the facing of silver cloth that joins the front and back of the dress.

With Rose Colored Beads. Another picture dress is trimmed with gold and rose colored beads. Rose and gold brocade form the perfect lines of this dress, modeled with a strong suggestion of a princess. The material is carried softly around the body, with slight fullness, but is snug enough to outline the curve of the waist and hips. One side runs lower than the other, giving a bias line to provide for the tunic of gold lace, which is held by a string of gold beads. The line of this tunic is fascinating in its loveliness. The long skirt clings to the body below this tunic and falls in the back in a long train. This train is set on separately beneath the tunic, but is draped to merge with the folds of the skirt, which is cut on the bias of the material.

This gown is sleeveless. There is a strong tendency toward sleeveless gowns, though the straight shoulder strap is not always becoming. The shoulder straps of this gown, however, are one of its loveliest features. A strap of gold beads extends over the shoulders, and passing under the arms toward the back is thrown over the arm, where it hangs pendant, and is weighted with a heavy tassel of gold and rose crystal beads. This string of beads gives a beautiful line to well modeled arms and shoulders. The gown is a triumph of picturesque loveliness. It could be beautifully duplicated in black charmeuse, with a tunic of black lace, threaded in silver. The shoulder straps could then be black jet, with heavy jet tassels.

A charming example of amethyst bead trimming is shown on a restaurant dinner gown of mauve velvet. This gown is delightfully simple and yet every detail is beautiful. There is a plain bodice cut low and rounded back and front. There is also a straight narrow skirt. The individuality of the dress appears in two panels that turn over at the waist in a pleated finish. These panels are held by a girde of amethyst beads. One panel is longer than the other and both are fringed with amethyst beads of varying depth, to even the panels with the line of the round length skirt which covers the ankles. These panels are faced with a deeper shade of mauve charmeuse and swing from the skirt as the wearer walks.

The Sleeveless Vogue. This is another sleeveless gown, unless you dignify the strings of amethyst beads that fall over the arms, by calling them sleeves. These beads are attached to the narrow shoulder straps of velvet.

A charmingly youthful hat is worn with this gown. A broad mushroom shape of black lisse straw is faced with black satin. Its trimming consists only of a band of black square jet beads—beads again, you see. This costume is so comfortable, from the sweep of the board hat to the tip of the narrow skirt.

This gown reproduces well in rose, pale pink or orchid. It may also be effectively made up in black velvet, or on occasion, with jet trimming. Its simplicity of line makes it possible of development in any of the lovely evening shades of charmeuse. These colors it will make an exquisite gown to be worn at dinner under tropical palms, with softly shaded lights and soft string music as necessary accessories, of course.

A gown of pale violet is trimmed with turquoise beads. The bodice of orchid velvet is simple and straight, with a cincture of turquoise beads, suggesting an antique belt worn by a feudal monarch. Two narrow panels faced with turquoise charmeuse fall at the back of the gown, and are held together from the shoulders like scarfs and are outlined with turquoise beads.

After attending the theatre the party went to the Potters tea room, where a dainty luncheon was served, after which a social hour was spent in the drawing room and a small token extended to the hostess.

Wants To Know How. "English Ginger" has been forwarded the instructions for making the tasty yoke of pattern, and as she was instructed to return them, would you please send them to me, as I received a yoke for Christmas and cannot find the instructions? And please, Miss Grey, would you send me the story and pattern if you have one handy? Thanking you, I am as I used to be called at school.

P.S.—Here is a good cake recipe. It is called "Tip Top Cake" and is quite easy to make. 1 cup sugar, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 cup oil, 1 cup soda. Mix sugar and flour, add baking powder and eggs, then milk and oil, and finally soda. Bake in a greased pan at 350° for 30 minutes.

Try Gasoline. I have a muslin dress that I am afraid to wash, for fear the colors will fade. Can you tell me any way to clean it, or could it be cleaned satisfactorily at a dry cleaners? The dress is quite discolored from the heat and perspiration.

Ann—Judging by the sample inclosed, your dress should clean nicely with gasoline. Wash it in clean gasoline, giving a second bath in clean gasoline if necessary, and hang upon the line, using a clothes-hanger. Be absolutely sure no open fire or flame is in the room when using the gasoline. When quite dry, put through clear steam, roll up in cotton for an hour, and press. I hope this will make your dainty dress presentable.

A Sore Lip. Dear Miss Grey, I have read so many of the letters that are sent to you, and I wonder how you can answer them all. I feel sorry for you, but at the same time I am writing once more to ask you to please send me the sticking plaster pattern. I was wondering if anyone knew that for a sore on the lip if they would dip their finger in vinegar and press it on the sore a few times the sore would go away. I will close, by signing myself a FORESTER.

And Yet Another. Dear Miss Grey, Do you think any of the readers of the Mail-Box could apply me, with the song "The Whimsical" and "The Answer." Also, Miss Grey, will you please send me a SCOTCH LASSIE PLAIN PEARL.

Lovely When Warm. Dear Miss Grey,—The last time I came I asked for correspondents, and have two nice ones. I will give a recipe for a good ginger cake which is really very warm. Take a cup of molasses and stir in a tablespoon of butter, then add a cup of milk, with a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in water. Bake in a greased pan at 350° for 30 minutes.

First Tea Dance at the Tecumseh Was Most Popular One

Many London Society Women Present on Saturday Afternoon.

The first of a number of tea dances to be given on Saturday afternoons at the Tecumseh House took place on Saturday afternoon, when almost every table in the big Tecumseh dining-room was occupied. A space at one end had been left vacant for dancing, and excellent music was furnished throughout the afternoon.

These tea dances are an entirely new departure in the city of London, although they have been most popular for some years in larger cities. The enthusiasm with which the first one was received is evidence of their future popularity.

ALVINSTON RED CROSS. The Alvinston branch of the Red Cross Society have packed and shipped two large shipments. One shipment of relief supplies for the refugees, addressed to Toronto, while the other, consisting of knitted sweaters, was shipped to the Soldiers' Comfort Committee, Halifax.

Although the demand for some of the articles furnished by the Red Cross has stopped, this branch at least is not taking advantage of the fact, but is continuing energetically to make refugee garments and sailors comforts.

The shipment to the Refugees' Committee, Toronto, consisted of: 31 flannellette petticoats, 60 small chemises, 52 large chemises, 34 children's dresses, 24 drawers, 24 men's socks, 100 children's socks.

The shipment to the Soldiers' Comfort Committee, Halifax, consisted of: 21 knitted caps, 2 knitted sweaters, 8 knitted scarfs, and 42 knitted socks. These are remarkably large shipments.

WATERFORD PAT. LEAGUE. Some people think now the war is over that the Patriotic League is dead or dying. But at league headquarters it is very much alive. There are piles and piles of snow, and the snow is being cleared away into dressings, and 72 dozen surgical pads were shipped to Whiting Military Hospital, where hundreds of our brave soldiers are ill, still needing care. Two boxes were also packed and shipped to Belgium.

Box Headquarters in Toronto, including dear little suits cut in the fashion that little three and four-year-olds wear, for the boys of the league, have worn (styles seldom change there). These had been made by the Women's League of Waterford, and the league sent in the following splendid contribution: Four boys' suits, 3 girls' dresses, 2 underwaists, 2 pairs girls' drawers, 4 girls' petticoats, 4 women's underwaists, 3 women's bloomers, 4 women's petticoats.

The boxes shipped also contained the following: Four quilts, 18 flannel shirts, 24 pairs socks, 2 dozen towels, 12 dozen sheets, 3 women's coats.

The league has supplied a large quantity of material to the Boston and Wiltshire W. C. T. U., and the members are busy at work on another lot of clothing for Belgium, which is to be finished if possible by February 8.

Anyone wishing to help with the work will be supplied with material by the league. Clothing and shoes in good condition will be gladly received anytime at headquarters.

Received last week from Tyrrell Institute: Six towels and from Vahnesa Ladies' Aid, 19 pairs of socks. Previously acknowledged .....$8,833.73 Prize money ..... 3.00 For wool ..... 25 Making a total of .....$8,836.98

UNIFORM LESSON FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1919. ONE GOLDEN TEXT SUGGESTION. By Rev. T. S. Lincoff, D. D. Jethro's wife, Moses' wife, he was also a priest of a clan. Why would you say that God, in those days, communicated with men who were not of Abraham's descent, the same as he did with those who were?

2. These two sons of Moses seem to have been kindly men; to what cause would you attribute this?

3. Why do you suppose that Moses had sent back his wife, Zipporah, and left her to go to his father-in-law at Midian, and why did Jethro now bring them to Moses again?

Golden Text—Bless ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ.

BURDENS SHOULD BE SHARED. Our lesson for today contains some very practical lessons for all of us, and one of them is that we should learn how to share the burdens of life. One man to attempt to do all the work, and it is also wisdom to let others share their share in the solution of the problems of life. Moses was acting as mediator, judge, general of the army, and hearing every responsible position in connection with the government of the children of Israel; he was attempting more than he could effectively accomplish and Jethro, his father-in-law, whom Moses was visiting, showed him his unwisdom. A mother should share the burden of her children, a father should teach his sons to bear some of the responsibilities of life, and a nation should share its burden with the world.

The recital at Conservatory Hall was given last Saturday afternoon by the following pupils: Ruth Barbour, Edna Harbour, Mona Nash, Willie Shearman, Helen Holmes, Lizzie Dunn, Mrs. Wilson, Muriel Westland, Jean Williams, Velma McLandress and Rosella Hamilton.

A. B. Archer of the Archer Electric Company, is in Portland on important business. He will visit his brother, F. L. Archer, in Calgary.

The many friends of J. Douglas Omond, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Omond of 25 Oxford Street, this city, will be interested in hearing of his recent marriage to Miss Helen G. Brethorst of the teaching staff of the girls' boarding school, Jububore, India. The wedding took place on December 4, 1918, at the Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Brethorst, who is an American, has been in India as missionary teacher for three and a half years, and Mr. Omond is general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Jububore.

An enjoyable evening was spent by the young ladies of the staff of McDonough College, when a delightful theatre party given in honor of one of their fellow workers, Miss Moss, who is to leave shortly to take up her new work in Niagara Falls, N.Y. After attending the theatre the party went to the Potters tea room, where a dainty luncheon was served, after which a social hour was spent in the drawing room and a small token extended to the hostess.

MICHIGAN CITIES TO BE VISITED BY LEE

Brantford Man and "Knotty" Lee To Organize Michigan-Ontario League.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 2.—Thomas J. Nason, Brantford baseball club, and "Knotty" Lee of Toronto, left Saturday night on a trip to the prospective Michigan cities to the reorganized Canadian League. Lansing, Flint and Bay City being visited. Lee will remain on the ground for a week or ten days and will report back here when it is expected a general meeting will be called to organize the circuit. The Brantford men are confident that the only proposition for the reorganization of the Canadian League which can be entertained here, is one to include three Michigan cities.

CANADIENS HAND BLUE SHIRTS A WHITEWASH

MONTREAL, Feb. 2.—Canadiens made a show of Toronto in an N. H. A. fixture last night, defeating them by a score of 10 to 0. Canadiens always had the edge on the visitors and used every man on their club, starting the game with five substitutes and two regulars. The play was too one-sided to be interesting. Toronto playing like a lot of schoolboys against seniors.

The line-up: Canadiens (10): Toronto (0): Vein, Courcy, Gaud, Munnery, Courcy, Delancey, Randall, O. Cleghorn, Munnery, Munnery, Pite, Wing, Danenay, Malone, Sub, Skinner, McDonald, Sub, Ritchie, Carls, Sub, Crawford.

CLAIMS OF ALLIED NATIONS PRESENTED AT PEACE CONGRESS

France and Belgium Demand
Huge Sums as Indemnities.

BRITAIN PREFERS POOL

Italy, Rumania and Greece Desire Large Territorial Annexations.

[By Associated Press.]

PARIS, Feb. 2.—The delegates of the five great powers are now in a position to compare clearly their own aspirations and those of their allied friends, and to see the difference between the maximum of hopes, often overlapping, has been laid freely, and it remains to be seen whether the peace conference will be able to adjust them into a co-ordinated whole.

The delegates of the five powers who will straighten out this tangle of rival claims are obliged also to take into consideration the passionate national claims as well as the history of Europe for centuries.

The desires of the several countries as presented may be compressed thus:

FRANCE—France wants, first of all, Alsace-Lorraine unconditionally, and the right to discuss and ultimately to fix the French frontiers in their relation to the Rhine, the Meuse, the Moselle, the creation of buffer states. One of these would be the Palatinate and another the Moselle. France desires also to annex the basin of the Saar River, which might be called a "republic" and France will insist so far as the left bank of the Rhine further to the north is concerned.

France should forbid military works of any kind—barracks, bridges, forts and fortifications—in the zone, the zone being the area in which the French desire to be free to decide for themselves whether they wish to join France, or remain an independent state, or return to Germany.

The French bill for reparations is not yet complete, but it has been announced in the Chamber of Deputies that it will be about sixty-six billion francs, and that the French Government does not ask for a protectorate in Syria in the ordinary sense, but for a mandate over the population there is too advanced to make a protectorate necessary, but France on the other hand, in that country, feels that she should be called upon to exercise some Syria should be fully able to govern herself.

GREAT BRITAIN—Great Britain's delegation believes that a society of nations is desirable and obtainable, and that it must be established by the present peace conference. She advances no continental purposes other than those of a peace conference, and that there shall be no international freedom of commerce in goods and waterways, which is Great Britain's general definition of freedom of commerce in times of peace.

Great Britain will enter a pool with the other Allies in the matter of indemnities, especially reparations for aid damage and shipping losses.

ITALY—Italy asks for the Trentino as far as the Brenner Pass, and the whole of the Southern Tyrol, Trieste, Istria, Fiume, Zara, Soudria, the larger part of the Dalmatian islands, and the province of the Adriatic.

ROMANIA—Territorial concessions in the Balkans are complicated, and present difficult problems. Rumania desires to retain possession of the Bessarabia, and the province of the Danube, and the province of the Danube, and the province of the Danube.

YUGOSLAVIA—The territorial aspirations of the three Scandinavian powers are considered modest. Denmark wishes to retain the islands of Northern Schleswig, inhabited predominantly by Danes, but has not asked to retain possession of the islands of Schleswig and Holstein taken from Denmark by Prussia in the war of 1864 or to extend her territory southward to the Kattegat.

SWITZERLAND—Switzerland has certain aspirations to Spitzbergen or a part of it, but is not pressing these claims energetically. Sweden desires the union with Sweden of the island of Aland, which is regarded by the Swedes as an integral part of Sweden. Swedish interests in this island have been in conflict with those of Finland since the fall of the Russian empire.

FINLAND—Finland desires the return of the islands of Aland, which were taken from Finland by Sweden in the war of 1809, and which are now in the hands of the Russian government.

ESTONIA—Estonia desires the return of the islands of Aland, which were taken from Finland by Sweden in the war of 1809, and which are now in the hands of the Russian government.

Secrets of Health and Happiness Hives Not a Disease, But a Symptom of Other Troubles

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG,
A. B. M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University.)

Not every one chased by bees has the hives. There are hives and hives, and those that are not chased by bees have hives.

Hives are called by other names and are just as bad. "Urticaria" is the name bestowed upon them by the language of medicine.

Hives of the sort which rise upon the skin of some persons when they are rubbed or scratched are named facic.
